Dancer removes barriers at Café Presse

Audience gets into act in interpretive dance

By Lucas Lallier
SPECIAL TO THE RECORD
SHERBROOKE

Héloïse experimented with space and costumes. It's admirable," commented spectator Josée Vincent, and dancer Manon Favreau, who attended the recent performance Danse en Mille Lieux.

The contemporary dance presentation was showcased by Héloïse Rémy last Saturday at the Café Presse Boutique.

Vincent said Rémy really showed what she's capable of, and her accomplishment required courage.

"There were some parts without music and others when the surrounding sound was very particular," Vincent said.

The soundtrack for the show was made exclusively for the performance.

Favreau, herself a Sherbrooke dancer, was particularly impressed by the closeness of the choreographer to her public.

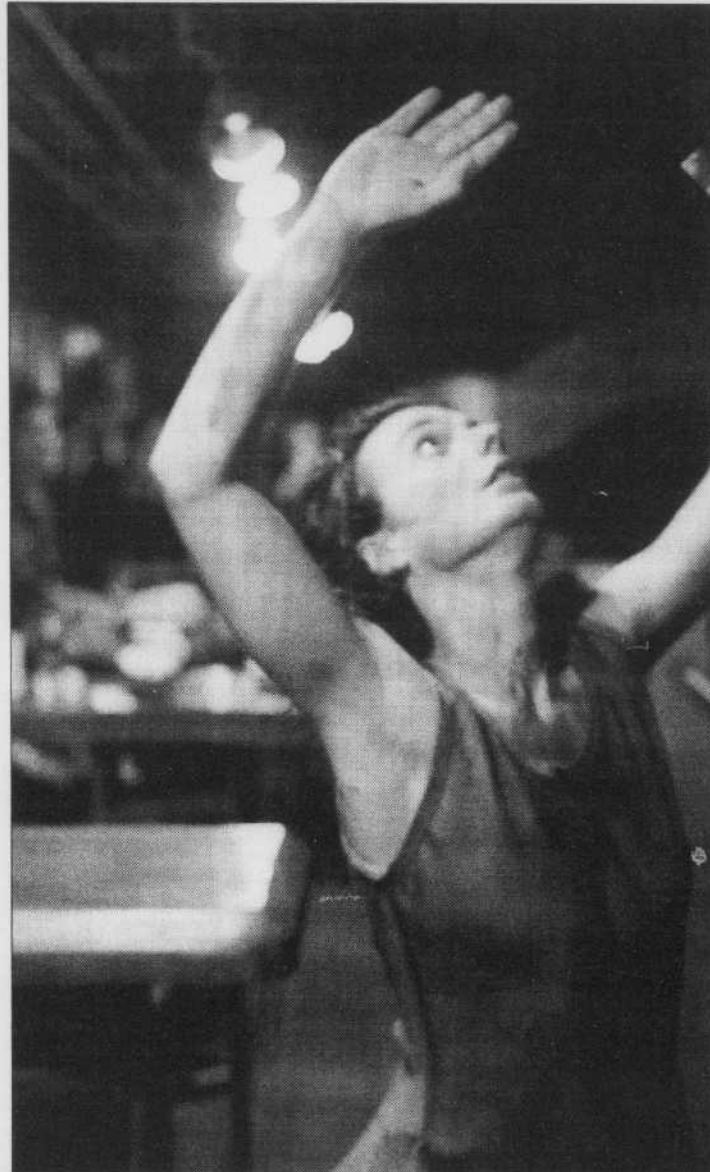

"Usually, spectators and performers are separated, the former in the hall, and the latter on stage. This wasn't the case here," said Favreau who found the concept very interesting.

"People participate because there are no more barriers between them and the artist. It demystifies dancing, it helps to see the dancer is really someone just like us, and not some ideal persona," Favreau added.

"At the technical level, it's quite a prowess," said Favreau. By choosing to do her show at the Café Presse, Rémy had to deal with many physical constraints such as the dancing surface and the proximity to the public. "It was difficult for balance, concentration, and adjustment."

The show included three parts, each of them centred around different locations and suggesting different things.

Impressions were different depending on where one was seated in the Café and where the choreographer was situated at any given moment.

The show was followed by interactive dancing with the audience. Favreau said the audience responded well and appeared to enjoy participating in the simple dance.

"Héloïse's aim was to make dance accessible and in that sense she made a step forward," Favreau said.

Musical Buffet

The action for guitar lovers from all over the Townships was at the youth centre in St. Francois-Xavier last Saturday as the little town across the river from Windsor played host to luthiers, musicians and listeners. The goal of the 'expo-demo,' organized by Melbourne music teacher Marc Paradis, was to bring an awareness of the region's talented craftsmen to the general public. Well-known performers such as Kate Morrison and Peter Mendiata capably demonstrated the characteristics of the different instruments. Ten mini-concerts took place during the afternoon featuring a variety of musical styles, including rock & roll, jazz, Latin and New Age.

Talk of the Townships

Saturday Serenade

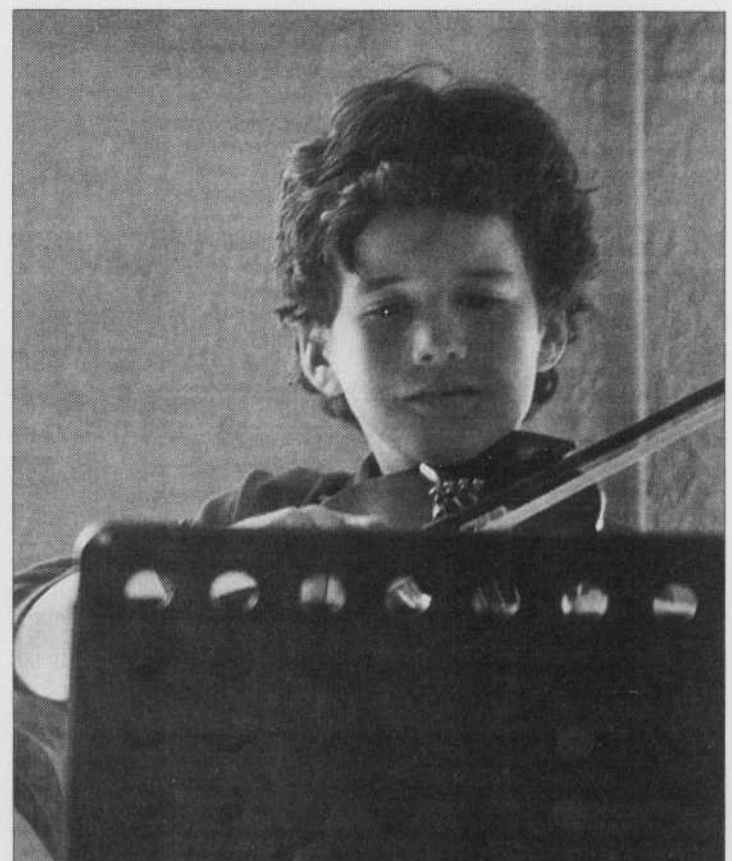

A number of Richmond's promising young musicians brought their talents to the Brunswick Home last Saturday. The main hall of the senior's residence was filled to capacity when three local music teachers had their protégés play works learned during the year for the attentive elders. For the concert's finale, the trio of teachers - Marie Lampron, Isabelle Gosselin and Francine Beaubien - played a delightful piece on recorder, violin and piano. "We do this on a regular basis so the students can bring their talents into their community," said Beaubien.

KNOWLTON

As a young boy, Bill Schnutgen loved to doodle - especially on the pages of his textbooks. As an adult, he has parlayed his love of drawing into a career as a landscape artist.

The Sutton artist held his first exhibition at the Brome County Historical Society during last weekend's Victoria holiday in Knowlton.

"I did it quietly without any vernissage - I wanted to see how it would turn out," said Schnutgen, who was pleased with the response.

Twelve years ago with many hobbies under his belt Schnutgen, a cabinet-maker by trade, knew it was time to concentrate on one pastime.

With that in mind, Schnutgen decided to try his hand at painting. Equipped with supplies bought from the now-deceased painter Otto Ellmaurer, and with gentle encouragement of painter and illustrator Gunter Scherrer, Schnutgen was on his way.

"Scherrer and I went out together and painted on-site, he showed me a lot. I would like to be able to paint like him," said Schnutgen, remembering his idol who eventually moved to Ottawa.

"He taught me that drawing well was the foundation for a painter, like building a house - you have to have a good foundation," he added.

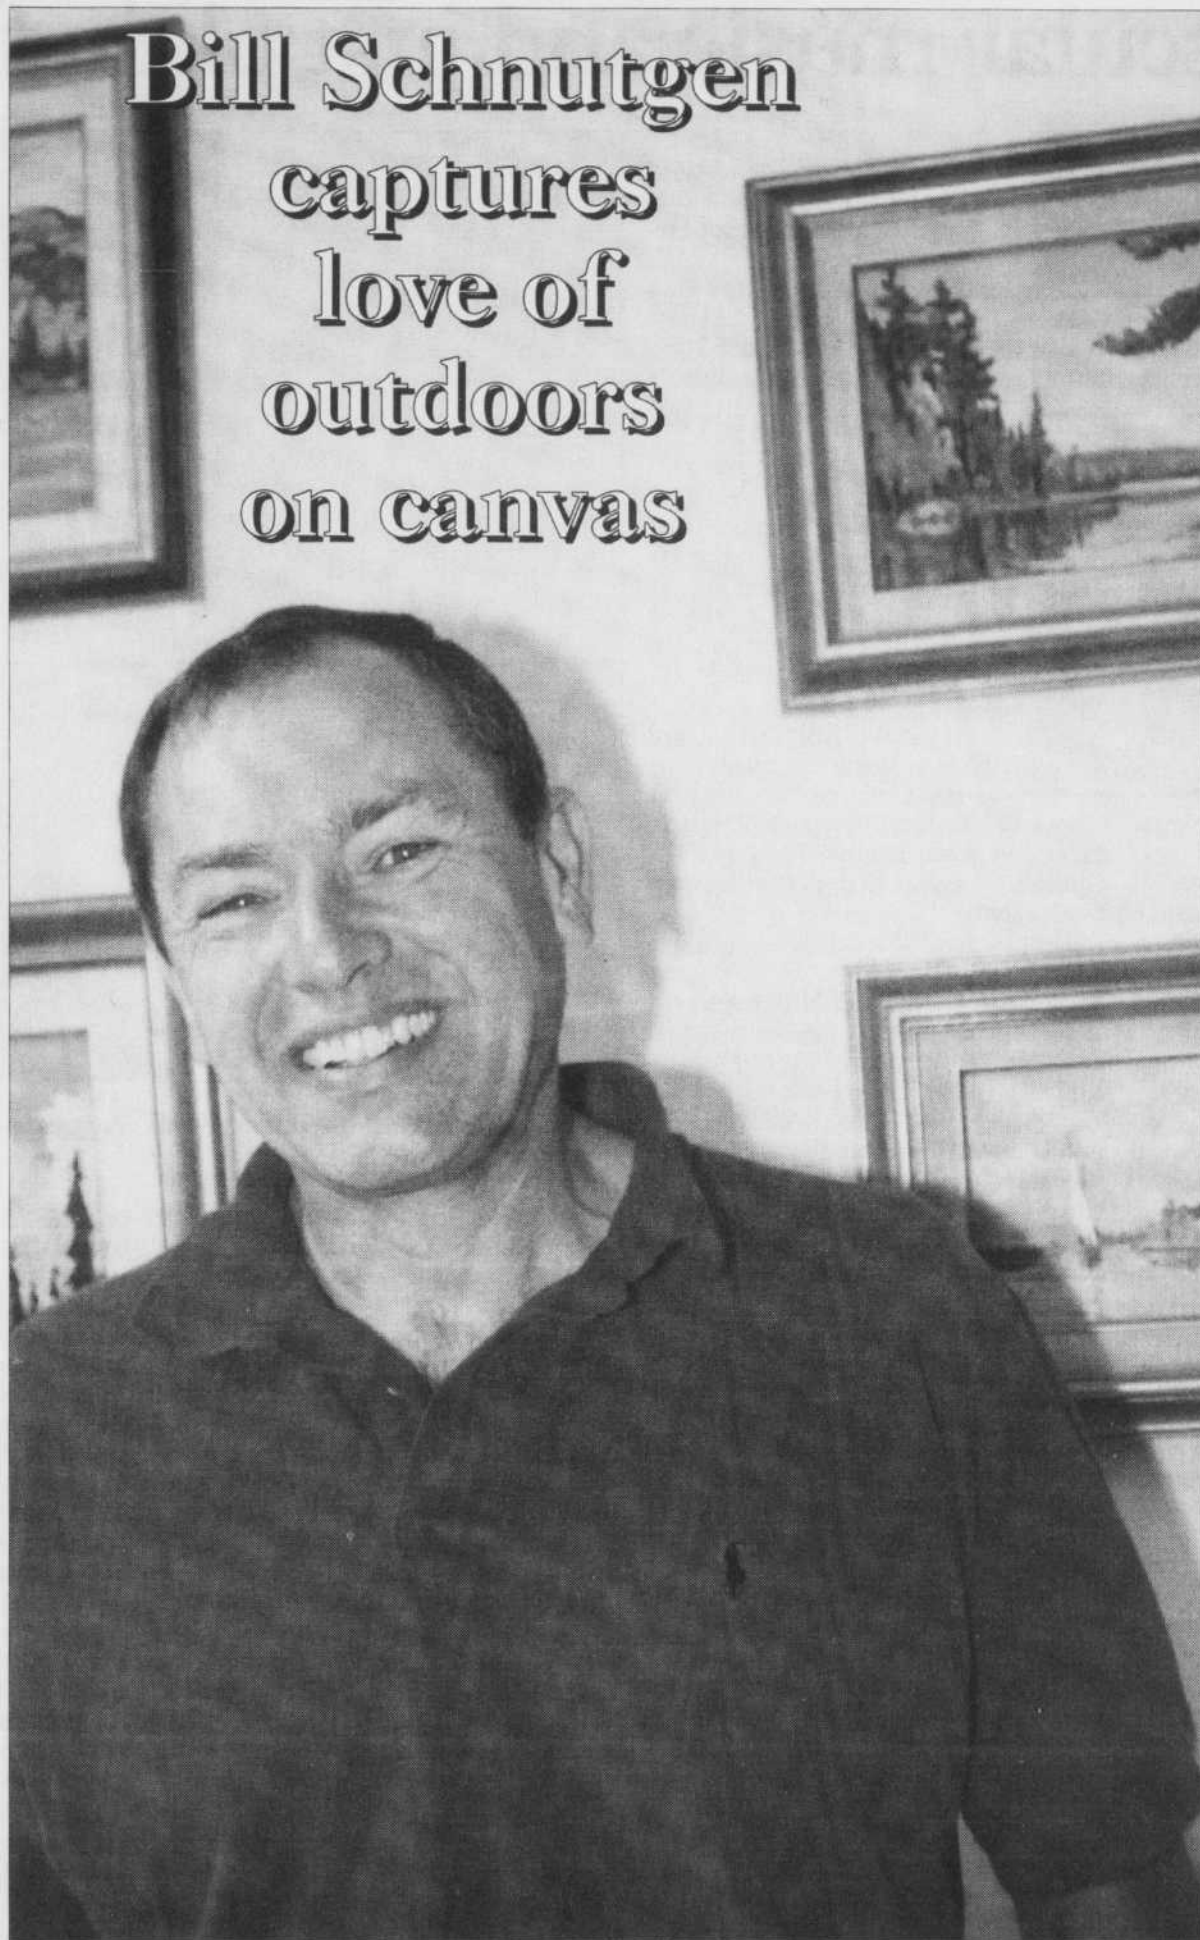

Besides instruction from Scherrer, he took drawing courses offered by Bishop's University's Knowlton Centre which he enjoyed immensely, learning from both teacher and students. He also attended workshops by Rita Briansky and Catherine Bates through Arts Sutton.

"I've also been painting with Mary Martin for many years now," said Schnutgen. "It's good to be around people with experience when you're starting out, that's a good way to learn."

This artist also learns by visiting and studying good paintings by masters on exhibit at Museums and galleries such as the National Art Gallery in Ottawa.

"Canadian art is unreal, I love it. The Dominion Gallery in Montreal always has Quebec painters from the turn-of-the-century. The paintings of that period really appeal to me," he said.

Bill Schnutgen captures love of outdoors on canvas

TANYA TKACH/CORRESPONDENT

Schnutgen's style is developing on its own. For him, painting outdoors provides relief from work and problems.

"When I'm painting, everything is quiet and all of a sudden chipmunks are running across my feet - that's what it's all about. What is also amazing is how fast time goes by."

For Schnutgen, painting combines his love being outdoors, which he's enjoyed since camping as a boy scout, and traveling. During his travels, especially to Baie Comeau on a fishing expedition, in order to travel lightly he made himself a pochade, a small painting box for his supplies which doubles as a hand-held stand.

"I was unable to take my French easel. I took the design out of an art book and being a cabinet-maker it was easy to make. I've made one also for Martin which she uses."

Through traveling, he enjoys sketching various landscapes which give him a different perspective. He has painted in British Columbia, the Prairies, and in the New England States. He especially enjoys Maine.

"I'm returning there this Wednesday, I just throw my camping and painting stuff in the truck and whenever I see something I like, I just stop and paint it. When you're there and sleeping outside, you get a completely different feel for the area," said Schnutgen.

Before painting a scene, he usually draws three or four thumbnail sketches in charcoal and then picks the one he likes best.

"I haven't got the confidence yet to take my brush the way it should be done, dip it in turpentine and do the outline. I feel safer using charcoal since I can erase it," he said.

Formerly, he painted from his detailed pencil drawings but decided that his paintings lacked a certain freedom.

"It's not the little details that are really important, it's the big, main shapes and the light that makes the difference. It's the impression of what you're seeing. The whole thing about painting is tone, if you're off on the tone of one colour towards the next one, the light and the shadow, the whole painting is off," he explained.

According to Schnutgen, the best time for painting is during the last half hour of daylight where the light changes every five minutes. He paints the scene quickly, then refines it in his studio.

You can never learn enough about painting, he said.

"The only way to paint landscape is to get out and do it. Hopefully in 30 years when I can't walk anymore, I'll be able to remember all the things I saw when I was painting outdoors."

Muscular music and just plain fun

Sometimes fans have to settle for recorded version

Beverly Dubois from Rock Forest asked if there was any chance to see her idol, legend Mickey Gilley in concert in the near future at a venue close enough for her to go. After a quick call to Branson, Missouri and a chat with someone from Gilley's entourage, I have to say it is not likely.

Although you can see him perform at his theatre in Branson, Gilley has stopped touring. But he plays as much as ever - six days a week at the Mickey Gilley Theatre. He also operates two restaurants, has a line of food products and recently oversaw the opening of a new nightclub in Las Vegas.

When the "Room Full of Roses," is done with his Saturday night through Thursday afternoon work week in Branson, he hops in his Beechcraft Baron C55 and flies the two and a half hours home to Pasadena where he lives with his wife of 36 years. The couple's 20-acre property includes a house an office the home of his mother-in-law. His off-stage plans include landscaping the entire 20 acres where there's already a big lake and a pond.

Gilley was one of the first entertainers to recognize the potential of Branson. He opened his theatre in 1990 after realizing his radio days were numbered. Now he's doing what he enjoys most: playing his music and playing golf. And unlike life on the road, the lights and sound are always right, the piano is always in tune and the acoustics superb. No last minute surprises and fans can always see him at his best.

It is too bad for those who love him but can't afford to make the trip. Life on the road for entertainers is not always easy as they're far away from home and their families months at the time. If you plan a trip to Branson you'll get the chance to see many other performers who have established their quarters there.

Sure hope it answers your question, if it's not enough just give me a call back and I'll be delighted to do more research.

Here's my pick of albums for this week:

DWIGHT YOAKAM: Last Chance For a Thousand Years - Dwight Yoakam's Greatest Hits From the 90's (Reprise)

COUNTRY CONNECTION

JESSIE AULIS

Yoakam is a diverse and first-rate songwriter, who goes in the recording studio with a lot of sincerity and it comes across on every album he has ever recorded. This second greatest hits collection is a 14-song anthology which includes three new tracks.

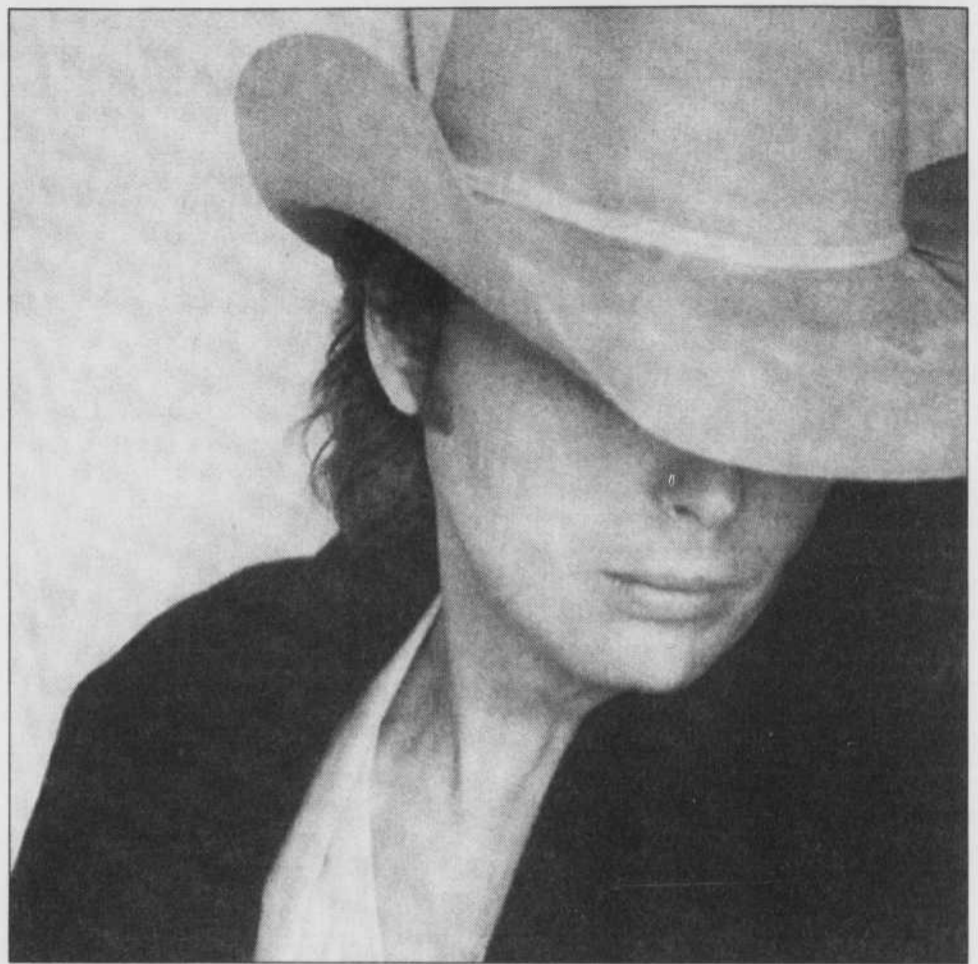

His style is different and this is probably the reason why he has remained so popular after over a decade of charting hit after hits. The material included on this album are perfect examples of his particular style.

There's the fiddle-drenched twang-along "It Only Hurts When I Cry," a song he co-wrote with Roger Miller, and his 1990 Top 15, "Turn It On, Turn It Up, Turn Me Loose." Other highlights include the 1993 Grammy-winning "Ain't That Lonely Yet," along with the self-penned "A Thousand Miles From Nowhere," with the special guitar work. There's also the obvious homage to Roy Orbison on the up-tempo "Fast As You" and the soulful ballad "Nothing" from his brilliant 1995 album Gone.

Listening to Dwight Yoakam always conjures up a lot of images such as honky-tonks, rockabilly bars and rock 'n' roll roadhouses. It's hard to define his music - it's easier to call it musical hybrid. His vocals are expressive and intelligent and beautifully capture the occasional teardrop or appropriate emotion.

The new cuts are Dwight's rockabilly rave-up remake of the rock group Queen's "Crazy Little Thing Called Love," a cover of a 1976 Waylon Jennings song, "I'll Go Back To Her" and "Thinking About Leaving," co-written by Yoakam and Rodney Crowell.

Yoakam is a diverse and first-rate songwriter who goes into the recording studio with a lot of sincerity.

This collection is a lot more than just songs, they're Yoakam's vision of the muscular music he loves to perform.

JOHN CONLEE: Live at Billy Bob's (Live at Billy Bob's Texas)

Billy Bob's is a 1,000,000 - square-foot honky-tonk in Fort Worth, Texas and they have decided to share some of its fun through a new record label that initially will showcase artists in live concerts at the self-proclaimed "largest country bar on earth."

John Conlee fans have a double treat in store here, a new album which is some kind of greatest hits. It's been a long time since the last release. The collection includes Harlan Howard's "Busted" and "I Don't Remember Loving You," then the beautiful Guy Clark's "The Carpenter" and his self-penned 1979 chart-topper, "Backside of Thirty," which features a previously unheard third verse. Other numbers are "Lady Lay Down," "Rose Coloured Glasses," "Lay Around and Love on You," "The Night-life," "Please Help Me Find Someone To Love" and "I'm Only in It For The Love."

This is a great album and a lot of fun to listen to when you consider that you can't hear Conlee on the radio anymore and there's only a slight chance to catch him in concert.

Live at Billy Bob's has many upcoming releases such as Merle Haggard, Roy Clark, Moe Bandy and Joe Stampley and short of being there, those recordings are the next best thing.

Deep Space Nine Says Goodbye

TVDATA

It's the end of an era this week as Star Trek: Deep Space Nine, the most popular program in syndication, comes to a close. Depending on your local station's preference, the final episode, "What You Leave Behind," will air either in two parts or as a two-hour special (check local listings). Why would the creators of the popular space station and its multigalactic inhabitants choose to jettison the series at the height of its popularity? "When I agreed to do Deep Space Nine, they said it would run for seven years, and nothing has changed," executive producer Ira Steven Behr says. The expense of new contracts for the show's internationally known stars wasn't likely to be attractive to the studio, given what such a popular show can make - without any salaries or production costs - in reruns, he adds. Unlike previous Star Trek projects, in which spaceships explore far-flung galaxies, the series takes place on Deep Space Nine, a space station anchored at a coveted "wormhole" - a critical shortcut to another galaxy. The station's mission, to help keep peace in the region and ensure the wormhole remains open to all travelers, is complicated by the inhabitants of the nearby planet Bajor, who believe the wormhole contains their gods, "the prophets." Both Behr and star Rene Auberjonois call the series the "darker, grittier" Star Trek spinoff, the middle child between Star Trek: The Next Generation, which left the air in 1994, and the current Star Trek: Voyager. Pictured are members of the cast - (front) Nana Visitor, Avery Brooks, Nicole deBoer, (centre) Colm Meaney, Rene Auberjonois, Cirroc Lofton, (rear) Armin Shimerman, Michael Dorn and Alexander Siddig.

Sunday

Blitz Buddies

John Thaw (the Inspector Morse mysteries), right, stars with Nick Robinson in Goodnight Mister Tom on Sunday at 9:30 p.m. on PBS' Masterpiece Theatre. Thaw plays an English villager who takes in a London boy named Willie (Robinson) during the Blitz and shows him the first real love he's ever known. Instead of the beatings he's used to, young Willie experiences fishing, friendship and encouragement. But trouble reappears when he's called home.

Port Charles Turns Two

TVDATA

Two years ago, critics said there was no way the General Hospital spinoff, Port Charles, would make it. As it celebrates its second anniversary on Tuesday, June 1, the daytime drama proves it is the little soap that could. The serial has changed a great deal from its early days. "We have come from being a rather stock soap opera, which is traditional in its daytime format, evolving into something that I don't think other shows really do," says leading man Jon Lindstrom (pictured), who plays Kevin. "Our show is different because there is always a bit of a whimsical element ... which makes our stories move a lot faster than most."
