THE STRONG MAN OF BRITAIN; A WORLD WIDE EMPIRE POLICY; A TURNING POINT IN HISTORY.

How the Empire Will Receive the New Apostle of a United Britain—The Melting Pot of British Politics —Attitude of Rosebery Anxiously Looked For.

(See also Page 13.)

London, May 16.—The Right Hon. Jos. Chamberlain has burnt his boats. He steps out alone and makes a vigorous, impassioned appeal to the British people to knit the Empire into a partnership, beginning with a policy of preferential tariff. This, he expressly says, must be Britain's reply to Canada's preferential policy, supported as that policy is by South Africa and Australasia.

Only on such lines can the Empire go on its way towards a gradually ripening of the partnership. This is his reply to Germany's attempt to dictate to Canada and Britain as to how they shall conduct their family affairs.

Premier Balfour would wait for the slow development of Imperial tendencies. Mr. Chamberlain says the next election must decide.

So far as the press shows to-day, Mr. Chamberlain will have a strong support from all parties, for the Empire is still the dominate note of British politics. The London Times says Mr. Balfour's speech is unsatisfactory, while Mr. Chamberlains' speech is a tonic.

The London Standard, the traditional organ of moderate conservatism, applauds Imperialism vaguely, and thinks Mr. Chamberlain conjures up unreal terrors in his talk of dis-union of the Empire. The Standard recalls that Canada, the inspirer of Mr. Chamberlain's attitude, is herself the least liberal of the colonies as regards contribution for Imperial defence.

The Morning Post, the organ of high Toryism, says Mr. Chamberlain offers a policy which regards the nation as more than a parish, and the Empire as more than the United Kingdom. It says the spirit he displays is the right one, and will not lack followers so long as Mr. Chamberlain leads.

The Daily Mail warmly supports Mr. Chamberlain, while the Daily News, the Chronicle and the other Liberal organs oppose his utterances in varying degrees of hostility.

The Manchester Guardian says that parts of the speech are almost hysterical, thoroughly vicious, and very dangerous.

WINDERMERE.

THE NEXT ELECTION TO BE FOUGHT ON ISSUES LAID DOWN IN SPEECH.

The Colonial Secretary expressly puts this before the nation as his policy for the next election, whenever that may come. He represents the future unity of the Empire as dependent upon this reply by Great Britain to Canada's enlarged tariff preference, to South Africa's promised perference of 25 per cent., and to Australia's acceptance of the same principle.

An Empire in partnership, is, in a word, Mr. Chamberlain's publicly enunciated programme, and the whole circumstances of its enunciation suggest that if Mr. Balfour, Mr. Ritchie, and other ministers do not accept it before the general election, Mr. Chamberlain will quit Toryism, and make his own campaign, come what may.

Three questions arise: What will the rest of the Ministry do? What line will the Liberals take? What will the electorate say?

It looks as if Mr. Ritchie and Mr. Chamberlain headed opposing sections of the Cabinet. One is a hard headed Scottish man of business, whose first thought is Great Britain's enormous interests, and as world-wide trader, as compared with the small trading interests with the colonies. The other is an astute politician, whose last days of a long and stormy public life are fired by an ambition to knit the Empire into a working partnership, even at some economic and even some trading sacrifice.

Mr. Balfour's speech showed that he is ready to leave the issue to the man in the street, but will not commit himself or his party without an overwhelming national mandate. He has thus left the position he formerly held beside Lord Salisbury, who resisted Chamberlainism because he feared its effect upon his policy of Anglo-Americanism.

Every official Liberal utterance is against the new Chamberlainism. The Liberals who opposed the war will fight it to the death, on strict free trade lines.

The doubtful factor is Lord Rosebery. He remains an ardent Imperialist, standing aloof from the anti-Imperial Liberals. But how far does Chamberlainism comply with his essential formula of an Imperialism, sane, tolerant and unaggressive?

Another doubtful factor are the young Tory malcontents. Their insistent cry is for an economy such as Mr. Balfour's ministry does not practice; an efficiency such as Lord Rosebery preaches and Mr. Chamberlain himself practices in the administration of the Colonial Office.

Out of these elements anything may issue. Chamberlain-Rosebery Imperialist combination is quite possible. What is quite certain is that Mr. Chamberlain's speech throws the British political parties still further into the melting pot. P. A. H.

THE STRONG MAN OF BRITAIN BURNS HIS BOATS BEHIND HIM.

London, May 16. — At last the long expected has happened. Mr. Chamberlain has nailed his own flag to his own mast in the face of the world. From his own Birmingham citadel he proclaimed in the tone of the supreme leadership the new policy of Imperialism.

It is this development of the Chamberlainism of five years ago which in all the five years no single ministerial colleague has publicly accepted, though several, including Sir Michael Hicks-Beach and the Duke of Devonshire, have repudiated it.

The Colonial Secretary even assumes the task of a Prime Minister and defines the issue for the next election, and strikes his own camp, leaving the camp door open that he who will may enter.

Every one is asking "What next?" The circumstances of the new departure are most significant. Yesterday afternoon Mr. Balfour, as Prime Minister, addressing a deputation comprising Mr. Chaplin, an ex-colleague in the Cabinet, and the Duke of Rutland, the flower of the old English nobility, and many influential supporters, took his stand as a free trader. He stoutly, almost angrily, declined to continue the bread tax or to introduce protection silently, as if by accident, by such expedients as a cereal duty beyond the needs of revenue. He would welcome with unfeigned pleasure a fiscal union of the Empire were that only feasible. A trifling duty upon food imports might then be adopted, but if the fiscal system were to be changed the movement must come not from any one particular industry or class, but from the heart, conscience and intellect of the great mass of the people.

Thus Mr. Balfour hesitated in the afternoon, while three hours later Mr. Chamberlain, addressing his own faithful people in Birmingham, assembled to welcome him home after his South African tour, hesitated not. Mr. Balfour's imperial fiscal unity, hidden in the clouds of the indefinite future, became in Mr. Chamberlain's hands a definite issue for the next general election.

For himself, he said, as Colonial Secretary, he would have gladly accepted the colonial suggestions for the exception of colonial products from such taxes as the cereals duty. "You must," he continued, "act as Imperialists, work to make the Empire self-sustaining, and self-sufficient, admitting colonial produce to tariff preference in the British market in return for the tariff preferences which the colonies now offer to the British manufacturers, retaining a free interchange of trade with the rest of the world, but only so far as is consistent with a policy of the Empire, first, an Empire one and indivisible."

TARTE SAYS HE DID NOT CHALLENGE LAURIER.

A Newspaper Incident That Calls Forth a Significant Letter From the Ex-Minister.

Ottawa, Ont., May 16.—The Ottawa Citizen, in a leading editorial yesterday, based on the discussion in the House of Commons over Mr. Prefontaine's position in the Government, represented Mr. Tarte as challenging the Premier to a conflict in Quebec. The editorial was flattering to Mr. Tarte, but the hon. gentleman evidently didn't think the effect in Quebec would be as desired, and last night published the following letter:

"Editor Citizen,—Surely you do not think that I am such a fool as to believe or to have ever said that I hold the province of Quebec in the hollow of my hand. No public man has ever had such a great influence in our province. Lafontaine, Dorion, Cartier, Chapleau, Mercier were powerful factors. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has a large influence; but, again, no public man ever had or has to-day absolute control in Quebec. I do not claim any other influence than the ordinary influence of a man who tries to do his duty. Kindly read my speech of the 13th. I did not throw a challenge to Sir Wilfrid Laurier. I simply said that any public man, Mr. Monk or myself, even, will be heard in Quebec without prejudice, and if they are right Sir Wilfrid Laurier's name will not be strong enough to defeat them.

"My candid opinion is that the fiscal policy of the Government to-day does not meet with the approval of the majority of the Dominion, and of the province of Quebec in particular.

"Truly yours,
"J. ISRAEL TARTE."

MR. ANDREW CARNEGIE'S VIEWS ON CANADA.

To the Editor of the Montreal Star:

Sir,—After the novelty and astonishment has somewhat cooled at Mr. Carnegie's unique bid for lasting fame in esta.....ing libraries, it must be evident to the ordinary mortal that in spite of his Scotch origin, he has got what is known as "swelled head," and we can scarcely wonder at the fact, when we consider that his praises have been in every country, and the adulation and incense of the populace combined with the crowning glory of being elected president of the great British Steel Corporation have completely overwhelmed his common sense.

That Mr. Carnegie should have spent his life within a few hundred miles of Canada and know almost nothing about it, is not flattering to his fund of knowledge or general intelligence. He speaks of Canada as having one million people, and what they could do as against 80 millions in the United States as "ridiculous." All Canada's plans and schemes were utopian, and a "mirage," yet he has no desire to underrate Canada's efforts; nor does he wish to offend his friends, nor would he hurt the feelings of the people of Nova Scotia; yet he talks of their efforts to make steel as a "mirage" and that it was ridiculous for a million of people to compare with the achievements of the great Yankee, who was making more steel than the rest of the world! Such language must give one a poor conception of this Croesus of modern times. Mark how he "damns with faint praise" with "his warmest feelings for Canada," and that "the best he knows of Canada is that it is mostly Scotch." It is scarcely credible, yet he apparently knows no better than that the population of Canada is only a million "mostly Scotch." It is pitiable to know that a man who has the "ear" of the world should show such ignorance and prejudice—verily he has had his day—and reached the climax of his popularity, and although he may give his millions away few individuals I fear will praise his name and call him blessed.

An Unequal Race.

Take two men of equal capacity and ability, in similar positions in life, select the one which sleeps the best, which has the most comfortable sleeping arrangements and you easily pick the winner in the race.

Philip D. Armour, in his lifetime the greatest provision dealer in the world, ascribed great importance to good sleep. It was a rare occasion when he was not in bed before ten, and he carried this rule to the extent of bidding adieux to his guests while his residence was en fete, leaving his wife and family to entertain while he himself went to bed.

Sleep is too important a matter to be made the subject of a hard, unwieldy mass of metal masquerading under the title of "spring bed" or either of a baggy, sloppy kind of sling, which hurts the back, has a tendency to make the sleeper round-shouldered and causes distressing dreams.

Hercules Spring Beds (No. 0 and No. 1) are now the accepted standard of a delightfully soft, yet very strong spring bed. The possessors of them are better men, better morally, mentally, physically, for having them in their use.

Another New Western Connection.

St. Paul, Minn., April 16.—It has been learned that the Minneapolis, Superior, St. Paul and Winnipeg Railway has been successfully financed. The capital is $12,500,000. As projected the road will run from St. Paul to Duluth. A few miles above Anoka, a northern line will connect with the Canadian Northern on the Canadian line at Beaudette.

Traffic arrangements have been made with the Canadian Northern, and in order to maintain an independent position a line of great lake steamers will be instituted.

Books of the Week Reviewed; "A Woman's Hardy Garden" and Other New Books

By George Murray, B. A., Oxon., F. R. S. C.

"It was a great time for Masquerades. They were held at Ranelagh, at the Pantheon, at Vauxhall, at Marylebone Gardens, and at Court. The Master of the Revels to George II was a Swiss, named Heidegger. This remarkable man was the son of a country clergyman at Zurich; he left his country in consequence of some amour; he became a servant to gentlemen; in this capacity he visited the chief cities of Europe, and acquired a taste for refinement, with a knowledge of good living. He came to England either as a servant, or as a humble dependant on some nobleman. How he got out of the ranks of servitude to be received by people of fashion one knows not; but he did. He became acknowledged as a critic in the opera and the theatre; he improved the decorations of the stage, and by patronage of the King, George II, he became manager of the Opera House. At the same time he vastly improved the Masquerades; he managed the King's Theatre, and he was appointed Master of the Revels. He became so much the fashion that all assemblies given by the nobility were submitted to his correction and advice. He made an income of £6,000, which he literally devoured—for nearly all went in eating and drinking. He died at the age of 90 in the year 1749.

"'His foibles,' said a contemporary, 'if they deserve so harsh a name, were completely covered by his charity, which was boundless.' 'You know objects of distress better than I do,' he would observe. 'Be so kind as to distribute this money for me.' After a successful masquerade, he had been known to give away several hundred pounds at a time. So says the worthy John Nichols. His masquerades were censured by the satirists (Pope, Fielding and Hogarth), although the fault was with the great world which supported them." "London in the 18th Century." By Sir Walter Besant.

A Woman's Hardy Garden. By Helena R. Ely. Illustrated by Prof. Chandler. (New York: The Macmillan Co. Toronto: G. N. Morang. Price $1.75.)

The American lady who has written this delightful and serviceable book dates it from Meadowburn Farm, and at p. 58 she incidentally informs us that her "hardy garden" is some seventy miles from New York. From childhood she had been more than ordinarily interested in gardening, and while still very young knew more than an older person of practical garden work. As she lives more than six months of each year in the country, she considered with Chancellor Bacon that "a garden is the purest of human pleasures and the greatest refreshment to the spirit of man," and it is therefore, no wonder that with sufficient land and means at hand, she determined to enjoy to the utmost "the purest of human pleasures." But she was not content merely with this, and felt an eager desire that others should share with her the "love of flowers and all things green and growing," which she rightly regards as "a sort of primal instinct." Hence this volume gradually took form, and the proof that it has successfully fulfilled the author's purpose is the fact that it is now in its third edition. Mrs. Ely has no glass on her place, not even a cold frame or hot-bed. Everything is raised in the open ground, except a few bedding plants, whose roots are stored through the winter. The garden may, therefore, be strictly called a hardy one, and the happy owner assures us that it is the only one she knows at all approaching it in size and quantity of flowers raised, where similar conditions exist. Mrs. Ely tells how and when to sow, plant and transplant, and what are the conditions best suited to each variety of flowers and shrubs. Full lists are given of annuals, perennials, roses, lilies and spring-flowering bulbs. Due attention is, of course, paid to the fitting preparation of the soil, and to the laying out of a garden and borders around a house. This skilful garden-keeper has a mind of her own, and though (as the reader will find at p. 84) she will adopt a practical hint even from so fanciful a book as "Elizabeth's Garden," she at once rejected with scorn an English book on flowers from which she had expected enjoyment and profit, because the author said: "I sold that a flower cut from its plant and placed in a vase is as a scalp on the walls of a wigwam." This was rank heresy in the eyes of Mrs. Ely, who tells us with great satisfaction of a woman "in a small country town who for six months in the year has always in the house a dozen vases of flowers, and plenty to give away besides supplying flowers for the church." At p. 155 she also writes: "From April 15 to May 15 I receive in town, twice a week, great boxes of spring flowers from my garden, enough each time to fill 16 to 20 vases; yet my orders to the men are to cut always so that the flowers cannot be missed from the garden." The following quotation from the final page of the volume is well worth the attention of many women: "If the rich and fashionable women of this country took more interest and spent more time in their gardens and less in frivolity, fewer would suffer from nervous prostration, and the necessity for the multitude of sanitariums would be avoided." Mrs. Ely adds from personal knowledge of the English people: "Nearly every great lady in England takes a personal interest in her gardens and conservatories, and knows all about the plants and flowers." At p. 140 she is generous enough to write: "English gardens will always fill American gardeners with despair." There are about 50 exquisite illustrations from photographs taken in the author's garden by Professor C. F. Chandler, and these possess more than ordinary value from the fact that they are dated as to the month and day.

In "The Southerners," the Rev. Cyrus Brady, who was formerly Archdeacon of Kansas, and Chaplain to a Pennsylvania Infantry Regiment during the Spanish-American war, has chosen a situation of peculiar interest, which at once wins for the hero of the book the sympathy of all readers. Boyd Peyton, an officer in the U. S. Navy, was at home in Alabama on leave of absence, when the secession of South Caroline made the choice between State and Nation inevitable and imperative. All earthly desires, every personal influence, especially that of the winsome Mary Annan, induced him to offer his allegiance to Alabama. Moved by the strongest emotions, in response to Mary's toast—"I give you the South"—Boyd drained his glass, and virtually pledged his adherence to the cause. Stronger, however, than all else was the "still small voice" of honour, and braving the scorn and even the hatred of those whom he held dear, the young ensign asserted his determination to be loyal to the Flag under which he was serving, and, accordingly, was driven from his father's house as a traitor, amid the execrations of his boyhood's friends. The scenes of the story are all laid around Mobile under Admiral Farragut, and Boyd returns to his duties to take part in the siege and capture of Fort Morgan, which—such are the chances of war—was commanded by the hero's father, General Peyton. There is a brilliant description of the battle of Mobile Bay, with an admirable sketch of the redoubtable naval commander, Farragut. Sorrow has softened and developed the character of the brilliant Mary Annan, and in the end a reconciliation takes place between the long-parted lovers. The charm and picturesqueness of life on Southern plantations have not led the author into that diffuseness which often hinders the march of events in the stories of the South, and the result is an exciting plot, while the action is confined to a limited area, and the story concerns itself with only a few strongly marked characters. Some readers will be pleased to find that there is no negro dialect, while the tinted illustrations of Mr. George Wright are a pleasure to the eye.

"The tragedy is that we are getting away from simple laughter and whole-hearted merriment. So far as this is the case, what laughter survives may be expected to take on the tone of a forced utterance, with something of a sigh of weariness behind it. It is as though men had no time to laugh. Even at a social entertainment you will find men and women who meet your playful challenge only with a niggardly giggle, which they instantly suppress; poor, distracted souls, unable for a moment to free themselves from the chaos of social claims which haunts them. A yet more sinister characteristic of this later social laughter, reflected more or less clearly even in much of what passes for comedy, is its cynicism. By this is meant more than the hollowness of the laughter of the world-weary; it implies a readiness to laugh at a new sort of thing, or, at least, at the old sorts, in a new way. Thus we may hear the unscrupulous member of a profession laughing at some 'amusing bit of conscientiousness' in another."

"An Essay on Laughter: Its Forms, Causes, etc., by James Sully.

"You have taught me many things, Mrs. Wiggs," said Lucy Olcott impulsively; "you are one of the best and happiest women I know."

"Well, I guess I ain't the best by a long sight, replied Mrs. Wiggs, 'but I may be the happiest. An' I got cause to be; four of the smartest children that ever lived—a nice house—fair to middlin' health when I ain't got the rheumatiz—and folks always goin' clean out of the way to be good to me! Ain't that 'nough to make a person happy? I'll be fifty years old on the Fourth of July, but I hold there ain't no use in dyin' 'fore yer time. Lots of folks is walkin' 'round yes' as dead as they'll ever be. I believe in gittin' as much good outen life as you kin—not that I ever set out to look for happiness; seems like the folk that does that never finds it. I jes' do the best I kin where I am, and it looks like I got a happy feelin' in me most all the time."—From "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." By Alice C. Hegan.

Around the World Through Japan. By Walter Del Mar. (New York: The Macmillan Co. Toronto: G. N. Morang. Price $3.00.)

In recent times so much chromolithographic rhetoric has been lavished on almost everything connected with Japan, "The Land of the Morning Sun—its climate, scenery, pictorial and ornamental arts, religion, mythology, and folklore, music, dancing, drama, poetry, romance, and women—that the present volume seems like a thunderbolt falling from a clear sky. It is avowedly intended as a cold douche of reaction after the somewhat indiscriminating eulogy into which enthusiasts have been led by the urbane, artistic, and engaging character of the better class of Japanese. Mr. Walter Del Mar, a Californian gentleman, long resident in England, who has been a great traveller, spent fourteen weeks in Japan during his journey "Around the World," and has devoted nineteen chapters of his book to Japan alone. The author travelled through Ceylon, Java, and the Chinese ports, and then Japan. He writes of the religion of the Japanese, the scenery and customs of Western Japan, the island of Shikoku, and the Inland Sea, East and West Kyushu and Satsuma, of the art treasures of the country, manufactures and social customs, wrestling matches, athletics, theatres, politics, and particularly women. Professor Bryce in his "American Commonwealth," writes: "It has been well said that the position which women hold in a country is, if not a complete test, yet one of the best tests of the progress it has made in civilization." Mr. Del Mar is of decided opinion that judged by such a standard, Japan has not advanced very far, and that she is not likely to advance very fast in the future. "Western ideas on the subject of women," he says, "have obtained some slight foothold in a limited official circle, but, on the other hand, there have been notable exceptions to the Japanese view and mode of life.' Two well known writers, full of poetical imagination, viz., Lafcardio Hearn, the author of some charming literature about Japan, and Sir Edwin Arnold, have been happy in marrying Japanese ladies. The present writer had the pleasure of breakfasting and dining on the same day with Sir Edwin and his wife at the Windsor Hotel, when they were paying a flying visit to Montreal. Mr. Del Mar is well acquainted with all that his travelling predecessors have written about Japan and its people. He has a great respect for the two gentlemen mentioned above, and also for travellers like Professor Chamberlain, Henry Norman, and Mortimer Menpes. He quotes the opinions of Mrs. Hugh Fraser from her book, "A Diplomatist's Wife in Japan," and (at p. 355) prints the ecstatic eulogies penned by Miss Scidamore and Mr. Knapp. A few sentences may here be cited. The lady writes: "Japan is a dream of Paradise, beautiful from the first green island to the last picturesque hill-top. . . . Autumnal Japan is the typical earthly Paradise." Mr. Knapp, as the American traveller says: "sees and goes one better." "Japan is the land of dream and enchantment. . . . A country so strangely beautiful that nature becomes an object of worship. . . . The smaller isles are of the visions of romantic beauty, beyond the dreams of fairyland." All this Mr. Del Mar emphatically repudiates, and he asserts that "there is no exaggeration in saying that more natural beauties can be seen in a fortnight on the continent of Europe, than can be seen in Japan in three months, and more in three months than can be seen in the whole Japanese Empire in a lifetime. After crossing the Inland Sea more than half a dozen times I failed to discover anything superlative about it. Most people would find more beauty on the St. Lawrence River or the west coast of Scotland." Some readers will be apt to say, Mr. Del Mar is evidently non-emotional, and lacking in poetical enthusiasm. He is like Sir Charles Coldstream, and would look down into the crater of Vesuvius and say, "there is nothing in it." That is not the case. Mr. Del Mar is a keen-eyed, observant, widely travelled American, and, if he happens to be also practical and level-headed, so much better for his readers, many of whom desire facts, not spasms. If they want rhapsodical adjectives, they will be able to gorge themselves with them by referring to p. 134, where Mr. Del Mar quotes them "ad nauseam" from Murray's "Handbook for Travellers in Japan." Here are a few of them, "beautiful, lovely, exquisite, superb, glorious, magnificent, splendid, charming, picturesque, entrancing, delicious, romantic, incomparable, a perfect dream of beauty, a glory of art, gorgeous, a dream of golden beauty, a magnificent golden symphony." Mr. Del Mar rightly deprecates this over-enthusiasm, and in his 31st chapter quotes the final impressions of his fellow-travellers, who unanimously agreed that "Japan had been fearfully over-written, and was a most over-rated country." There are 50 excellent illustrations from photographs.

"Lovey Mary," left alone, shed bitter tears on her clean gingham dress. Thirteen years ought to reconcile a person even to gingham dresses, with white china buttons down the back, and round straw hats bought at wholesale. But time only served to increase Lovey Mary's rebellion of spirit. Something deep and mysterious was fermenting in her soul—something that made her long passionately for the beautiful things of life, for love and sympathy and happiness. Something that made her want to be good, yet tempted her constantly to rebel against her environs. It was just the world-old spirit that makes the veriest little weed struggle through a chink in the rock, and reach upward toward the sun."

The Woman Who Toils. By Mrs. John Van Vorst and Marie Van Vorst. Illustrated. (Toronto: George N. Morang. Price $1.50.)

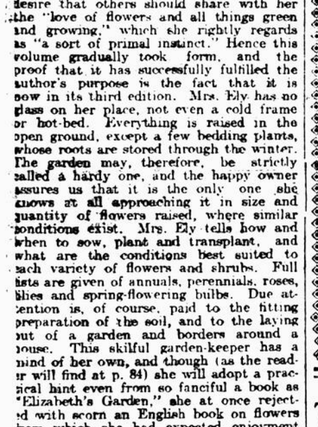
This volume, which contains the veritable experiences of two gentlewomen as factory girls, is dedicated "to Mark Twain, in loving tribute to his genius, and to his human sympathy." There is a prefatory letter from President Theodore Roosevelt, which will, of course, push the circulation of the book, and is written on a most vital question. At p. 80, in chapter III., Mrs. Van Vorst thus expresses some of her views, which are worthy of consideration by others than Americans, male and female: "The American woman is restless, dissatisfied, society, whether among the highest or the lowest classes, has driven her towards a destiny which is not normal. The factories are full of old maids; the colleges are full of old maids; the ballrooms in the worldly centres are full of old maids. For natural obligations are substituted the fictitious duties of clubs, meetings, committees, organizations, professions and a thousand unwomanly occupations." Further on, Mrs. Van Vorst writes: "Among the American-born women the sterility is greater, and the fecundity less, than those of any other nation in the world, unless it be France. * * * * The original cause of this increasing sterility are moral and not physical." * * * Among the enemies to fecundity there are two which act potently in the lower as in the upper classes; the triumph of individualism, and the love of luxury. * * * The American-born girl is an egoist. Her whole effort (and she makes one even in the life of mill drudgery), is for herself. She works for luxury, until the day when a proper husband presents himself. Then she stops working, and lets him toil for both, with the hope that the budget shall not be diminished by increasing family demands. When she continues to work after marriage, she invariably chooses an occupation inconsistent with child-bearing. * * * There were a number of married couples at the knitting factory at Perry, a New York mill town. * * * I never saw a baby, nor heard of a baby, while I was in the town." This "vital question," as we before called it, of "race suicide," is ably handled in the President's letter, which ends as follows: "There is no physical trouble among us Americans. The trouble with the situation you set forth is one of character, and, therefore, we can conquer it, if we only will." To revert, to the general object of the volume. Two New York ladies, brought up in affluence, gave up voluntarily for a time all their social advantages, and assumed humble positions in the workships of Pittsburg, Chicago, Lynn, Mass.; South Carolina, and other working centres. They made clothes and shoes, hauled loads of canned goods, bottled pickles, scrubbed factory floors, and cooked in a factory lunch-house, etc., etc. The result of all this hard work and discomfort, the living in hot, evil-smelling boarding houses, and places of rest for the transient worker, convinced these two ladies that the outlook for the woman toiler in the United States is by no means optimistic. Still, they are convinced, that no earnest effort for their betterment is fruitless, and, in the course of the truthful and interesting volume, many well-considered suggestions are thrown out, which, if adopted generally, would ameliorate the condition of American factory slaves.

Our Northern Shrubs. By Harriet L. Keeler. (New York: Charles Scribners' Sons. Price $2.00.)

This book is a worthy companion to Miss Keeler's popular volume, "Our Native Trees." It includes full descriptions of 175 native, and about 4 naturalized shrubs. There are 25 plates from photographs, and 35 illustrations from drawings, to make the identification of the various shrubs. There are 205 plates from photofound of immense use to all whose special business it is to beautify public parks, boulevards, roadways, school-grounds, railway stations, etc. At the end of the book there is a glossary of botanic terms in addition to one of Latin specific terms. There are also two indexes of the Latin and English names of every shrub described. The numerous illustrations are really works of consummate art.

"My! but it's nice an' cold this mornin'! The thermometer's done fell up to zero!" Mrs. Wiggs made the statement as cheerfully as if her elbows were not sticking out through the boy's coat that she wore, or her teeth chattering in her head like a pair of castanets. But, then, Mrs. Wiggs was a philosopher, and the sum and substance of her philosophy lay in keeping the dust off her rose-colored spectacles. When Mr. Wiggs travelled to eternity by the alcoholic route, she buried his faults with Christian charity, and, for want of better virtues to extol, she always laid stress on the fine hand he wrote. It was the same way when their little country home was burned, and she had to come to the city to seek work. Her one comment was: 'Thank God, it was the pig instid of the baby that was burned!'"—From "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." By Alice C. Hegan.

"IMPOSSIBLE, for you to enjoy the happiness of motherhood," says the doctor. Sometimes he qualifies the statement, and says: "Impossible without an operation." Yet both these "impossibles" have been made possibles by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. Many times the hindrances to motherhood are to be found in womanly diseases or weaknesses, which are perfectly and permanently cured by "Favorite Prescription."



This great medicine for women cures irregularity and dries debilitating drains. It heals inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. It makes weak women strong and sick women well.

"I wish to add my testimony to hundreds of others as to the value of Dr. Pierce's medicines," writes Mrs. Ida M. De Ford, of Latona, Hubbard Co., Minn. "Have doctored with a great many physicians, some specialists; have twice been a hospital for treatment. My case has been regarded as a hopeless one, and they knew not what the trouble was. Heart was bad; stomach ill out of order; lined out; severe pains in all parts of the body; sinking spells, and nearly every ailment a woman could have. I took many a bottle of 'patent medicines' without effect. I began taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and ten months afterward I gave birth to a ten-pound boy. All physicians had stated as a fact that I never could bear a child, but after my baby was strong, and I was able to be around myself were strong, and I was able to be around myself. Thanks to your medicine."

About Whittier's Poem, "At Last."

To the Editor of "Notes and Queries."

In the edition of Whittier's Poems, edited by W. Garrett Horder, and printed by the Oxford Press, in 1898, there is a preface by Whittier quoting part of the previous one in the words you used in the "Star" of April 25. Then he says: "After a lapse of thirty years. . . . I have been requested by my publishers to make preparation for a new and revised edition of my poems. . . . I have endeavoured to affix the dates of composition or publication as far as possible."

This chronological list is very useful and establishes a point left in doubt by your reference to Mr. Higginson's volume, which indicates that Whittier died in 1888, and that the poem "At Last" was written "six" and not "ten" years before his death.

There is abundant evidence that Whittier did not die in 1888, but in 1892, that is ten years after writing "At Last."

He wrote two poems in 1889, eight in 1890, four in 1891, and six in 1892.

There is a poem to Oliver Wendell Holmes on his eightieth birthday, written in 1889, and there is another to the same honoured friend, dated by Whittier himself on the 29th day of August, 1892, or, as he writes it, 8th month, 29th, 1892.

There is a note by the editor accompanying this poem stating that, "This, the last of Mr. Whittier's poems was written but a few weeks before his death."

As regards the poem "At Last," I have received a number of copies of it in print, typewritten and manuscript, since I last acknowledged the kindness of many correspondents. A "Plain" Question.

To the Editor of "Notes and Queries."

Will you kindly let me know which of the following phrases is correct, or, if both are correct, which is preferable?

"She made the dress plainly"; or
"She made the dress plain."

The thought intended to be conveyed by the words is that the dress was plain, and not fancy; and no question of quality of workmanship, or skill in making is at issue.

Your reply to this will settle a little dispute in a home circle and greatly oblige.

Yours very truly,
((Montreal.) C. N.

"She made the dress plain" is, in my opinion, the correct phrase, "plain" being equivalent to "without ornament." At another time I will write more fully on the question in order to justify my opinion.

Hoods, Etc., of the English Universities.

To the Editor of Notes and Queries:

Sir,—Some time ago a lady, friend in the States asked me whether it is possible to find in any published book a description of the various Hoods for the different degrees granted by the English universities.

I knew of no such book, but a little later I certainly saw in one of the year books, a description of the degrees and hoods, under the headings of various universities. I made a note that the book was Hazell's Annual, but on referring to editions as far back as 1897 I could find no mention of the hoods, and to-day I have word from Messrs. Hodder and Stoughton that they find no reference to College Hoods in Hazell's Annual, after looking back to 1887.

In some inexplicable way I have mistaken the book, but am quite sure I saw the information I desired, but the book was at one of the clubs at some place I was visiting, and I must have got mixed on the title.

Can you kindly assist me?
(Montreal.) G. C.

I once had a book on the subject of Oxford hoods, but at present cannot find it. Meanwhile I have sent my correspondent an American magazine that had a short article (illustrated) on the subject. If any correspondent can furnish me with the required information, I shall be greatly obliged.

A Notice of Two Strange Words.

To the Editor of Notes and Queries:

I noticed in the Star, of Saturday, an enquiry in relation to the word "abbateaux." That word is in common use in Nova Scotia, in the counties originally settled by the Acadian French, where the dyked marshes are situated.

It means a sluice, or passage-way through the dyke, so constructed that it will keep out the salt water, but allow the fresh water (drainage) to pass through. It is usually spelt "aboiteau," plural "aboiteaux," but sometimes "aboideau." I do not know the derivation.

There is another word which the Acadians used, and which is still in use in places where they lived, or their descendants now live. The word is "barrasois" (sometimes spelt "barachois"), and is used to designate a pond of fresh or brackish water on the shore, separated from the salt water by a narrow beach or bar of sand or gravel. I have often tried to obtain the derivation but have been unsuccessful hitherto, and I never could find it in a French dictionary. Perhaps you or some of your readers, can supply the information.

In the Common Prayer-Book lately issued it mentions in the Royal Proclamation with Great Britain, etc., the "Town of Berwick-upon-Tweed," which place was not mentioned in Her late Majesty's edition. I find it in George's, 1761. Why was it omitted in Victoria's Proclamation, and now inserted in the present edition?

Translations of Hugo's "Les Miserables."

Is Isabel Hapgood's translation of Victor Hugo's "Les Miserables" as good a translation as there is? I have had it recommended to me by a bookseller, but do not care to take his word for it. The edition is in two volumes and published by Crowell, of New York. Have also had Charles E. Wilbour's translation highly recommended, but have difficulty in getting it in a good binding. Which is the better of the two, or are they both good? If not, is there a better?

A. L.

Hamilton, Ont.

As I never read a translation, when I know the language of the original, I cannot speak as to the value of the different versions of Victor Hugo's works. Shakespeare, in French translation, is very hard reading, and some of Hugo's extravagances would, I fancy, hardly bear reproduction in English. Lately I have been obliged to look at some English versions of Zola and some other French writers. These seemed to me to be eminently unsatisfactory, from their being too literal, and unidiomatic.

A Question Unanswered.

To the Editor of "Notes and Queries."

Recently a friend of mine in France wrote, enquiring whether there exists in Montreal, or even in Canada, what is there known as "Une Ecole Superieure de Commerce, ou Academie de Commerce," and, if so, whether the graduates therefrom have formed an association? Not being personally aware that there are any institutions or associations of that character, I would esteem it a favour if you would enlighten me on these points, or indicate any college, school, etc., where the desired information might be obtained.

To "tattoo" is a Tahitian word, meaning to mark the skin permanently with figures, etc., by pricking in colouring matter. As many sailors are fond of practicing this art, I do not think it will be difficult for my correspondent to find some instructor in this kind of decoration. It is also an Indian practice.

What is the Value of "The New York Albion" From 1833 to 1837 Inclusive?

Editor of "Notes and Queries":

I am in possession of five volumes of the New York Albion, published in the years 1833 to 1837 inclusive. The publication is styled as The Albion, or British, Colonial and Foreign Gazette, a Journal of the News, Politics and Literature of Europe. It was published in New York city by John S. Bartlett.

Vol. 1, No. 1, 1833, appears to be the beginning of a new series of the publication, as by the publisher's announcement it may be seen that the journal was established in 1822.

Besides general news of the day, Parliamentary proceedings of the British House of Commons, as well as of the Canadian provinces are given at length, and many interesting questions and incidents of early Canadian history are exhaustively dealt with. Montreal and Quebec publications being frequently quoted in connection therewith. Perhaps the most interesting volume is that of '37, for besides vividly portraying the Canadian rebellion of that year, detailed reports are given of the death of King William IV. and ascension to the throne of Queen Victoria.

In all, the publication gives ample evidence of having been one of the leading journals of that day, and besides those matters already enumerated, dealt extensively with commercial and financial questions. Montreal is frequently mentioned throughout; and, in fact, some social functions of note are reported in detail.

My object in addressing you is to ascertain if any special value can be placed upon the volumes above described, other than simply relics of a bygone age.

Yours truly,
R. C. W.

THE CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER AND HIS BUDGET

Mr. Ritchie, the Chancellor of the Exchequer has undoubtedly succeeded in producng a popular budget. Fourpence is taken off the Income-tax, while by the remission of the Duty on imported Corn, the pretext disappears for saying that it imposed an unjust burden upon the consuming classes. From the point of view of orthodox finance, the restoration of the provision for the charges of the Public Debt to a fixed annual sum of twenty-seven millions, is a feature that should command approval.

The duty of giving substantial relief to those who have during the war period acutely felt the pressure of direct taxation was rendered easy to the Chancellor of the Exchequer by his good fortune in having a surplus of more than ten millions to dispose of. He might, not unreasonably have devoted the whole of the available margin to the reduction of the Income-tax. The rate still stands very much above the level which, a few years ago, would have been regarded as the proper maximum in a time of peace.

It was further shown by Mr. Ritchie that, on a comparison of the aggregate volume of direct and indirect imposts, the former is far the greater of the two. He has not been able, however—and probably did not expect—to satisfy Sir William Harcourt. That gentleman treated the adjustment in his best vein of withering scorn—"£8,000,000 for the well-to-do, and only £2,000,000 for the working classes!"

Criticism is disarmed by the broadly satisfactory character of the Budget as a whole, and by the easy lucidity with which Mr. Ritchie explained all the details of a singularly interesting position. After a run of years in which a campaign, unprecedented in the severity of the strain placed upon the national resources, the account of affairs as they stand at the opening of the first twelvemonth of calm could not fail to be piquant. Taken altogether the balance-sheet is better than the most sanguine outsider ventured to hope. The expenditure for the fiscal year is estimated at the colossal figure of nearly £144,000,000. But to meet this after the remissions that have been mentioned, and after the strengthening of the Sinking Fund, there will be available a revenue nearly half a million greater. A country which can pass through a period so trying, and come out of it ready to respond to a normal demand of such tremendous bulk, cannot be in a bad way.

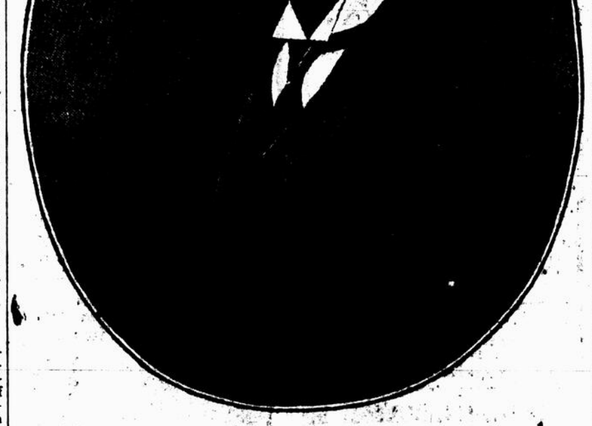
THE CHRONICLE.

In discussing the Budget, the Chronicle said:

Fourpence off the income-tax and the Corn Duty abolished: that is the Budget in Brief, so far as the remission of taxation is concerned. It is a larger remission than was expected, and to that extent the Budget will be popular. But in another sense it is not popular. It is a Budget of a millions of revenue this year alone, and means, further, a timid reversal of policy, of which the faddists will take advantage to the full. One of the main reasons given for the repeal of the duty is that it lends itself very readily to misrepresentation; but if a sane policy is to be reverted at the bidding of misrepresentation the Government will have to withdraw a good many of its schemes. Are we to put a premium on misrepresentation? There are several useful [illegible] to which the two millions sterling thus sacrificed could have been devoted. Failing other purposes, it could have been allocated, say, to the further augmentation of the Sinking Fund, thus disarming a good deal of criticism which is not quite foundationless. The war having cost a hundred and fifty-nine millions every nerve of the nation should be strained to wipe off the debt, and the present low price of consols affords a favourable opportunity for the use, to that end, of any funds which the Government may have at its disposal, such as the couple of millions which it intends to sacrifice. As it is, the Chancellor of the Exchequer proposes to fix the annual charge for sinking fund at £6,600,000, and there are the amounts coming from the Transvaal—four millions out of the new loan immediately—which will return some of our expenditure on the war. The amount to be charged for Sinking Fund is the largest, absolutely and proportionately, that has ever been applied, and it might have satisfied the critics were it not apparent that it might easily have been made larger. At the new rate of loan reduction, twenty-seven million in all for fixed charges, the National Debt may be wiped out in fifty years, the Chancellor of the Exchequer reminds us. This picture of the nation without its consols is fascinating, and even a little disturbing; but somehow or other it surpasses the limits of the imagination.

THE MORNING POST.

The Morning Post says: The one regrettable feature of a Budget otherwise excellent is the proposal to repeal the registration duty on corn from the middle of this year. In such times of formidable expenditure as these the area of taxation should be expanded, not contracted. The maintenance of the corn duty is necessary, if only to prevent the incidence of taxation becoming more inequitable than it already is. The duty was welcomed when it was imposed, only a year ago, because it seemed to show the determination of the Government to abolish glaring inequalities, and to bring about a broader and a wiser apportionment of taxation among all classes of the community. Some fantastic objections, it is true, were raised against the duty, which in the heyday of Free Trade was accepted and continued by such men as Cobden, Bright, and Peel, and defended by Mr. Gladstone. The objections arose from prejudices strong and deep; but they had been overcome and almost forgotten. The trifling burden which the duty imposed has not been felt by the consumer, and he will gain nothing by its repeal. The Chancellor of the Exchequer admits that its yield is inelastic, which means that it has the advantage of being a fixed source of national income readily calculable. Its repeal means a needless sacrifice of a couple of millions of revenue this year alone, and means, further, a timid reversal of policy, of which the faddists will take advantage to the full. One of the main reasons given for the repeal of the duty is that it lends itself very readily to misrepresentation; but if a sane policy is to be reverted at the bidding of misrepresentation the Government will have to withdraw a good many of its schemes. Are we to put a premium on misrepresentation? There are several useful [illegible] to which the two millions sterling



THE AUTHOR OF THE BUDGET.
The Right Hon. C. T. Ritchie, M.P., Chancellor of the Exchequer.

THE DAILY GRAPHIC.

The Daily Graphic says: The abolition of the corn tax is gratifying. When this tax was imposed last year, we protested that it was both a political and a financial blunder. The reasons then given by the Government in its defence were mutually destructive, and they have all been swept away by Mr. Ritchie's uncompromising condemnation of the corn duty as a tax upon the food of our people, and on the raw materials of our industries. What may be the reasons for the Government's change of view, it is unnecessary to consider. Possibly the refusal of the Colonies to look at Mr. Chamberlain's proposal for Free Trade within the Empire may have something to do with the matter. But, whatever may be the cause of the sudden imposition and the equally sudden abolition of the tax, the important point is that, having been tried and abandoned, it will never be tried again. The repeal of the tax will convince the world that England is still true to those Free Trade principles upon which her marvellous prosperity has been built up, and in every country it will strengthen the growing revolt against the corruption and injustice of the Protectionist system. In our own Colonies it will destroy the dangerous delusion that England can be persuaded to impose fresh taxation upon her home people in order to give special favours to Colonial producers.

THE STANDARD.

The Standard says in part: Mr. Ritchie has gained the well-earned reward of his decision to frame his Budget with a due regard for the class most severely affected by the weight of taxation. It has had a good effect on the Money Market, and has been well received wherever there was the least chance that any action of a Unionist Ministry would find approval. The satisfaction of the Income-tax payers is as sincere as it is reasonable, and it is certainly not the less hearty because our forecast has been verified and the impost has been reduced below the shilling. * * * The cue supplied by Sir William Harcourt has been dutifully taken, and in quarters where the orthodox party spirit prevails, the Budget is denounced at large. The captious complaint that Mr. Ritchie has unduly favoured the rich is laboriously echoed, and the consecrated phrase about the privileged classes is repeated as common form. We cannot attribute much sincere conviction to these spokesmen of the alleged cause of the people. If indeed they really believe their own declamations, they must be under a most astonishing misapprehension as to the proportion in which the various degrees of income-tax payers contribute to the total raised. * * * Very much the greater part of what the Treasury receives from pennies in the pound has issued from pockets which are far from well lined, and are subject to many calls. The classes we have mentioned, the small shopkeeper, the clerk, the doctor with a modest general practice, and others in similar positions, are overwhelmingly more numerous than the rich, and have to supply no small part of the tax. * * * The Budget which relieves them is not in any intelligible sense "a rich man's Budget." It helps, on the contrary, the very element which is hardest pressed by high taxation. The clamour against the relief afforded is probably meant to please the working class, but we doubt whether they will give it the reception hoped for.

EMIGRATION FROM AUSTRIA.

The Social Economic Committee of the Austrian Reichsrath has presented a report to the Government stating that Austria lost through emigration in the ten years between 1860 and 1870, two thousand persons annually. This number in 1902 had increased to forty-eight thousand. With a view to lessening in some degree the effects of such a drain on the population, the committee suggests that Austria should acquire by treaty territories to which the tide of emigration might be turned. The committee notes that a large proportion of the emigrants who recently left Austria were going to Canada.

FOR AND ABOUT WOMEN

From a Feminine Standpoint.

A Child's Vivid Fancy of Life—The Burdens We Bear Needlessly—And How We Could Lighten Them. . . . . .

"The thoughts of youth are long, long thoughts," and more often than not there is a great deal of wisdom in them.

It's not so very long ago—for the years pass quickly—that a lonely child with more imagination than was good for her, tried to settle great questions to her own satisfaction. And in looking back to some of the conclusions she arrived at I cannot but think that she was wiser than she knew, and that her childish instinct readily solved problems over which the woman she has become, ponders hopelessly and in despair.

Among that child's quaint fancies was the belief that at birth we were equipped, each and all of us, with an invisible sack fastened tightly to our backs. And into it, she imagined, went all our deeds, good and bad, or a record equivalent to them. Whence the idea sprang she never knew, nor can she tell now as she ponders over the matter. Perhaps it was a distorted bit of Biblical knowledge, or a mingling of fancy and truth. Whatever its source the concept grew so strong that she eyed new acquaintances in anxious search for outward evidence of the lives they led. After all she must have been very young, for I still remember the pitying thrill which ran through her when she first saw a poor creature who, afterwards she came to know, had broken his back in a fall from a waggon. To her his misfortune was a visible sign of his wickedness, and she dreaded him far more than most children do the "bogey" used by their nurses to frighten them.

If that child's view of life were accepted with certain modifications by more of us we would live happier lives and do more good. We bear too many burdens—and we bear them needlessly. The gospel of happiness is not preached nearly enough, perhaps because it is so misunderstood. We grope after false ideals and give up striving when they show indications of crumbling at our touch, or that of Time. We need a kindergarten course in happiness before we can be taught to see that though much may be denied us, yet much still remains. Only the very old see clearly. They are beyond worrying over distressing details. To them the pilgrimage so nearly over seems beautiful in retrospection. And if their bags of misdeeds are not too heavy the future beyond the open gates, gives promise of compensation for past sorrows.

We are odd creatures and seldom think alike on vital subjects. It is only too true that what is one person's grief is another person's pleasure. Sorrow and happiness are very often the same thing so altered by circumstances that no trace seems left of any relationship between them. Although commonly accused of curiosity we are prone to accept things at their face value and judge too much by externals.

Most women, and a good many men, either lack the ability to look below the surface, or possessing it, fail to give it exercise. A thing fails to please one, and it is simply set down as unpleasant. We seldom seek causes in effects. If we did so more often we would be rewarded by the discovery that things are not always what they seem at first glance. Calamities and blessings are closely akin and at times they are one and the same. From evil good springs. "All for the best" should be the universal motto.

It is seldom that one hesitates to undergo painful physical treatment when the result promises to justify the course. But it's different in mental matters. We are never ready to try remedies for such ills, no matter how many nostrums we may be willing to take for trouble that is purely physical. The accidents in which our minds are maimed; the bruises which leave lasting marks; the blows which help to distort them—are looked upon as inflictions imposed upon us uselessly and at random. In these days of science, we seek out the germ of physical disease and try to banish it. Yet the canker that causes our unrest and is responsible for our misery of mind, is left undisturbed while we mourn over the ruin it has wrought. Most of us are so accustomed to quarrel with what we deem the inevitable that our capacity for "kicking" becomes chronic long before we are gray-haired.

Resignation isn't always the shortest pathway to contentment; investigation is often much the quicker method. It is far easier to examine the bag that is too heavy a burden for our shoulders, than to just go on trying to carry it as it is. So, often when we search its contents, we can find troubles we can dispense with; cares we can throw away; half forgotten sorrows still occasionally nursed for old association's sake. There are few of us who are not bearing a burden needlessly; who are not tottering beneath an accumulation of ancient griefs, unimportant mistakes and an overworked sense of failure we mistake for conscience. Let us one and all look to the contents of those sacks the child believed in, and the chances are we will discover that what we thought were unadulterated troubles are only blessings if regarded aright.

If we only tried we wouldn't find it so very hard to be happy. Even in the darkest lives there is a small place at least for joy. If we spent less time lamenting over the things we have not, we would have plenty of leisure to enjoy the good that is ours. We have more to be thankful for than we imagine, and it only requires a little effort on our own part to convince us that it's better to regard life through rose-coloured spectacles rather than smoked glasses. To cultivate good nature is infinitely better than to acquire riches, and it has the added virtue of bringing with it for all of us the power to succeed. Disgrace is the only thing in life to be feared—provided we bring it on ourselves. Poverty, unpleasant as it is, is not the worst of evils. Friendship gilds most lives; affection glorifies all. Look at others, and question yourself as the child did. Lighten their burdens if you can. Do not worry over what is in the bags they carry so labouriously on their backs. See instead that your own is free from useless lumber; and keep it so.

A CHARMING CANADIAN IN LONDON.

MRS. HERBERT CHAMBERLAIN.

Mrs. Chamberlain, who is the chairman of the Empire Club in London, is a Canadian, the daughter of Col. Arthur Williams. Her husband, Mr. Herbert Chamberlain, is brother to the Colonial Secretary, and their beautiful house in Ennismore Gardens, London, is the scene of delightful entertainments; for Mrs. Chamberlain, unlike some Colonials who settle in the Mother Country, keeps up the connection with her own. Mrs. Chamberlain has shown admirable qualities as an organizer, her work in sending out comforts to the troops at the front during the first year of the recent South African war being still fresh in the minds of the recipients. Among Mrs. Chamberlain's fellow-workers at the Empire Club are Lady Jersey, and Lady Edward Cecil; and Lord Strathcona and Lord Brassey are among the directors. The Club, formed originally under the auspices of the Victorian League, is one of the social enterprises which started during Coronation year. The function of opening it was, on account of its Imperial character, performed by the Colonial Secretary, and it continues to command the interest of influential Imperialists of all shades of political opinion, who hope to make it a centre where English and Colonial ladies may meet on social terms.

(Special Correspondence of the Montreal Star.)

Paris, Avenue d'Iena, May 7th—Unless all signs fail, this is to be a pongee summer, and if popular taste does not change before June, not a woman will leave for the sea or the mountains without one or more of these serviceable gowns in her trunk. These goods come in white, cloth of gold, che-lu (tan), Jasper (gray), and the natural colour, which is mellow ecru. The imported pongees launder as safely as cotton sheeting. Not for gowns alone, but for coats, hats and parasols are the pongees used. There is hardly a Parisienne who is not planning in her mind a dress, a coat or a hat to be made of this popular fabric. And when it is hat, coat or gown, the pongee used is either the ultra-novelties, the embroidered varieties, or the Lyons dyed pongee, which is most sought for in printed polka dots in bright tints.

Pelerines are as much to the fore as ever. The latest in them shows pelerine and stock collar combined. This can be made of black pleated or tucked satin or muslin, edged or inserted with guipure. The collar consists of transparent folds of muslin or chiffon covered with guipure. A little silk fringe forms a smart finish down the front. Black and white is, of course, the most useful. French women are wearing these with their plain morning blouses and skirts.

The newest fichu is a very old pattern revived. It is extremely picturesque and can be made simply of muslin, edged with an insertion of lace and a guaged frill. This guaged or ruched frill takes a large quantity of muslin. It is equally pretty of chiffon, gauze or any light fabric.

The ideal picture frock, blouse or what you will, is chiefly dependent upon the adjustment of the waistband or sash. The making of the waistband of the hour is by no means a light task. Every line of the individual figure must be taken into grave consideration. A three-quarter coat of the spring gown or one without this coat can be made or marred by extra care or a shght carelessness in the matter of the ceinture.

Picture frocks, I should confide in you, are the former tea-gowns. It is a new name, but the genus remains the same. Any gown, however, that accentuates the best lines of the figure and conceals all angles and bones is the picture frock. With very few exceptions there is no doubt that the picture frock is universally becoming. Chiffon and lace, of course, form the chief elements in the construction of these picturesque toilettes. Without such fabrics they surely never could have existed. We can do anything with chiffon, and what is more, we can use any amount of it. Redfern tells me it is no use to consider chiffon unless one is able to pay a high price to ensure its use not by the dozen yards, but by the hundred. The airy-fairy, cloud-like effects of the perfect gown are only achieved by the use of very large quantities for ruching, accordion-pleating, guagings, folds, etc. Only as a lining to lace is chiffon sparingly used, and the beauty of every kind of lace is enhanced by its use in this way.

Other favourite fabrics after chiffon and lace, which are used for picturesque dinner frocks and the tea gowns of the moment, are the becoming Oriental satins, crepe de chine, and all such clinging yet sumptuous looking materials. Old brocades are being used but sparingly, and these are of softer make, for everything uncompromisingly stiff is more or less eschewed by fashion to-day. Grace is the desideratum. All the soft fabrics of the hour lend themselves admirably to the picturesque. That is the style of the hour—a tall, lithe and graceful type, and this type is the one La Mode has elected to admire.

A charming evening gown in white satin will doubtless gain many admirers at Trouville dinners within a few months. It was cut like an old Romney frock, with a three-inch tucker of chiffon outlining the square decolletage. The simple folds of satin were held in place by a Romney sash of pale blue, soft taffeta ribbon. Over this, just caught on the shoulders, was worn a kind of Coronation cloak of lace, lined with the palest blue chiffon. The skirt, carried no particular date, being simply held at the waist with two or three large pleats on the hips and falling round the feet in graceful folds. This was an ideal dinner frock, simple and picturesque, which could be worn with or without the lace cloak.

An evening frock, to be worn early in the summer at the last function of the Elysee Palace, is chiefly composed of lace and chiffon over a foundation of beautiful Oriental satin. Instead of the gown and train of these stately garments being in direct contrast, they are now nearly all in one colour. Taking all things into consideration, it cannot be said that these elaborate frocks lend themselves naturally to picturesque lines, because certain rules and regulations have to be observed. But now-a-days there is more than a mere suggestion of chiffon and lace employed in their construction, although it is whispered that the stiff bodice is to be revived. True, it will be the Marie Antoinette period, with a draped fichu of lace to relieve its severity.

A good looking and effective, also efficient, head dress for women who motor has been a decided want for a long time. Lately some very good devices have been brought out and of them the "Desiree" is excellent in every way. It is a hood and mask combined, which effectually protects the face and hair from dust, wind and rain, and thus does away with one of the great objections to motoring from the woman's point of view.

NOTES.

In all good shops we see quantities of rough, hand-embroidered linen blouses these are for country and river wear and are made with a high neck band with a turn-over Prussian collar and neat little stock and tie. Some, too, are made of fine batiste, embroidered in different colours, with insertions of hand beadings or veinings; these are very dainty, and practical for washing purposes, and look delightfully fresh.

Very decorative are little bows or choux of black velvet on white or cream crochet. In a blouse of this description there is nothing so pretty as a simple pattern with sufficient frou-frou down the front.

LOUISE PONTIN.

TWO CHARMING EXAMPLES OF THE POPULAR PICTURE FROCK.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Con Amore.—As it would undoubtedly be very hot at the resort you mention during August and September it would be advisable to take the thinnest summer dresses with you. (2) Have an accordion pleating on the silk drop skirt, and to make the pleating stand out well it should be edged with a narrow ruching. In making up the bodice of the crepe de chine you can have a separate silk slip made if you desire to wear it with other bodices, or you might have more than one coloured lining to wear with the crepe waist. Transparent fabrics are usually lined throughout when used for afternoon dresses, but the yoke and sleeves are sometimes left unlined when the gown is designed for dress occasions, and for dinner wear.

A. J.—You will find an elaborate wedding breakfast rather trying. Refreshments served informally will be more in keeping with the wedding plans you have outlined.

Mother.—The art of carving is one that cannot be taught by printed directions. Diagrams and elaborate explanations may be of some service, but you will find the expert carver is one whose knowledge is gained by experience, not hearsay. If you wish your sons to become good carvers, it will probably be necessary for you to sacrifice the family roast in the good cause, and let them work their will on it until they have mastered the gentle art that is a stranger in most households. If, like so many mothers, you can carve well or fairly well yourself, give your sons the benefit of your experience, but be chary of offering advice at the critical moment when they are engaged in the unpleasant task of pursuing a refractory roast or fowl around a platter.

Gracie.—For the ocean voyage provide yourself with a travelling suit of Venetian cloth, serge or cheviot, on no account buy for this purpose loosely woven goods, such as canvas, as it will speedily become shabby when subjected to hard wear. Provide yourself with a number of shirt waists, including one or two smart silk ones. Do not wear white skirts on the voyage, you will find silk or sateen much more satisfactory. A tam o' shanter cap will insure comfort when you are wrapped up in your deck chair, but also provide yourself with a travelling hat of the "ready to wear" variety. If you want only one change in addition to your travelling dress, on the steamer, a prettily made foulard that is soft enough not to crush readily will be of service for dinner wear. You will also need a short walking skirt, and a long wrap or rain coat. (2) Of course you will need a steamer rug, it's a necessity even in warm weather, especially in the evening.

Jane D.—Send the luncheon invitations for half past one or two o'clock. (2) The ladies retain their hats, but remove their wraps. (3) Roses are always pretty for table decorations, but at this time of year there are so many other delightful flowers in season that roses are usually somewhat neglected after their long winter reign.

O. V.—Your fiance should give you a list of the friends he wishes invited to the ceremony, and your mother should see that invitations are sent them.

Countrified.—The address should be engraved on the lower left hand corner of the visiting card. (2) On note paper have the address at the top of the sheet, and in two lines one below the other if you wish, the name of the house and the name of the town both used. In engraving the paper have a number of sheets left plain to use when you wish to continue a letter on a second sheet.

May.—The groom and the two friends who are to attend him enter the church from the vestry and with the clergyman await the arrival of the bride. Let the two flower girls lead the bridal procession, walking side by side, followed by the maid of honour and the bridesmaid. Let the bride come last of all, leaning on the arm of her father, or whoever is to give her away.

Belle.—I cannot give all the recipes you ask for this week, but will do so shortly. The honey sponge cake made according to this recipe is delicious and should please you. To one-half a cupful of sugar, add one-half a pound of strained honey, put into a saucepan and heat slowly. Boil until it will thread, and then pour over the yolks of seven eggs beaten until very light and thick. Continue to beat until the mixture is cold and spongy. Put in carefully one-half a pound of sifted flour, add one tablespoonful of vanilla and the whites of the seven eggs beaten to a stiff froth. Pour the batter into shallow pans lined with buttered paper and bake for about forty minutes in a moderate oven.

Concerning the Best of Berries.

A Variety of Ways in Which the Housekeeper Can Serve the Early Strawberry to Perfection. . . . . .

A Strawberry Omelet, according to a cooking expert, is seasonable only at the beginning of the strawberry season. Later, when the fruit is in its prime, it is claimed, it is little short of a crime to serve it in other than its natural state. For the omelet save out about half a box of strawberries that have been carefully looked over and all that are poor and green rejected. Cut in halves and put in a bowl with two heaping tablespoonfuls of sugar, a piece of orange peel, and two teaspoonfuls of rum, and set in a cool place. Press the remainder of the strawberries through a fine sieve, and sweeten well. Make an omelet of six eggs, and before folding over fill it with the cut-up strawberries, without any of the liquid. Dish the omelet, sprinkle with powdered sugar, and pour around it the juice of the strawberries, to which has been added the liquid from the halved strawberries.

Old Fashioned Shortcake is really a rich biscuit crust, and there is a knack in turning it out flaky, light and palatable. One method that has been proved excellent calls for a quart of sifted flour in an earthen bowl, mixed with half a teaspoonful of salt and two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Add two tablespoonfuls of butter and work it through the flour thoroughly. Pour in enough milk to make a stiff dough; then flour the pastry board and rolling pin; cut the dough in two pieces; put half on the pastry board and roll it to the size of the baking pan; dust the inside of the pan with flour; lay the dough in it; cover the top with melted butter; then roll out the other piece of crust and lay it over the first layer. Place the pan in a quick oven and bake. Turn out on a napkin, and separate the two layers of crust with a knife. Butter the crust, and spread thickly with fruit, sprinkled well with sugar. Lay the other crust on top. Place the berries closely, keeping the finest for the top. Do not sugar the top layer, but serve sugar and cream at the table. If desired, bake the cake in two pans instead of in two layers. The French chefs mix all their pastry on a marble slab, as many amateur cooks prefer to do, but there is some charm in mixing the strawberry shortcake dough in an earthen bowl. The two-layer cake will be more dainty than the many-layered ones of the confectioner, although the latter are more impressive in appearance.

** ** **

A recipe for Raised Shortcake includes three eggs, well beaten, with three tablespoonfuls of sugar and three of butter added to a light bread dough, kneaded with the hands and put by the fire to raise for fifteen minutes before putting in the oven. For those who like very sweet desserts the strawberry, stewed, sweetened and placed upon the ice before serving is excellent.

** ** **

Strawberry Whip is a nice way to serve the fruit when the berries are small and not perfect enough in appearance to serve whole. Chill them thoroughly on ice; then sprinkle with a little orange juice and plenty of sugar and crush them to a pulp and fold in the whipped whites of two or three eggs and serve as soon as mixed.

** ** **

For Strawberry Dumplings, make a nice suet crust, roll out about quarter of an inch thick and cut into four-inch squares. Put small sweetened strawberries in the centre and sprinkle over them a mixture made of fine bread crumbs sweetened, mixed with an egg and flavoured with a little grated lemon peel. Roll up each dumpling and wrap in separate pieces of cheesecloth, tying tightly at each end to prevent escape of the juice, but leaving a little space for dumpling to swell. Steam them three-quarters of an hour and serve as soon as done with strawberry sauce.

** ** **

For the Strawberry Sauce put a quarter of a cup of butter in a bowl and beat it to a cream; then beat in gradually half a cup of powdered sugar. Beat until light and smooth. Crush twelve very ripe strawberries and beat into the sauce a little at a time. If the berries are tart sweeten them with powdered sugar before adding to the sauce. If the sauce begins to curdle beat in more sugar. When done set on ice until needed.

** ** **

For Strawberry Pudding, beat the yolks of four eggs with half a cup of sugar; add one pint of milk and one cup of stale bread crumbs; mix and pour in a baking dish; bake until firm in the centre, about twenty minutes; remove from the oven and cover thickly with sugared berries; beat the whites of the eggs until very light; add to them four tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar; beat and spread over the berries; dust with plenty of powdered sugar and brown in the oven; serve hot or cold.

While strawberries still fall short of their June perfection, Strawberry Flummery is a good way to serve them. One quart of the fruit should serve six persons. Hull the berries and cut each in half. Cook to a syrup one pint of water, one cupful of sugar, and one tablespoonful of lemon juice. As soon as this boils add three level tablespoonfuls of cornstarch dissolved in one-half of a cupful of cold water and stir until thick and smooth. Add the berries, set over boiling water, and cook ten minutes. Turn into a glass dish and serve very cold with cream.

Another recipe for honey cakes requires the following ingredients: One pound of strained honey, one pound of flour, one-quarter of a pound of butter, one-quarter of a pound of finely ground almonds, one-third of a teaspoonful of ground cloves, the grated peel of one lemon and one scant teaspoonful of baking powder. Bring the honey and butter to a boil on the fire, take off and let stand for ten minutes; add the flour, lemon peel, almonds and spice, and lastly the baking powder dissolved in a little warm water. Set aside in a cool place over night; next morning roll out one-half an inch thick, cut into small squares, press one-half of an almond in each corner, and whole one in the centre, and bake until lightly coloured in a moderate oven.

A CANADIAN PIONEER

A Canadian woman is now an attorney and counsellor in the Courts of Record of the State of New York. More than that she is the first woman resident of Dutchess County to obtain this honour. This pioneer is Mrs. Pritchard, wife of Dr. C. A. Pritchard, of Tivoli, N. Y., and daughter of Mr. J. C. Hoover. She was born at Selkirk, Haldimand County, Ont. Mrs. Pritchard, prior to her marriage, taught school at Dubourne, Ont., and while there it is said became a licensed local Methodist preacher, filling appointments in five different churches on the circuit. Mrs. Pritchard has twin daughters who are now ten years of age, and in addition to her career as teacher, minister, matron and lawyer, she has a fair knowledge of medicine. Although fond of home and very domestic in her tastes, Mrs. Pritchard takes great interest in the affairs of the town where she lives, and this interest first roused her ambition to become a lawyer. At present she has no plans made as to the entering of her new profession, but her first appearance in court will probably take place soon.

COLLEGE AND MATRIMONY

About one hundred young women are students at the Colorado State Agricultural College at Boulder. The course of study pursued by them includes sanitary science, home nursing, scientific cooking, chemistry, and biology. The course was designed to fit women for home makers, or to furnish teachers of domestic science, but, "we cannot supply the calls for teachers," says Miss Theodosia Ammons, dean of women at the college, "for our graduates all get married."

WOMEN WHO HOLD OFFICE

At recent municipal elections in Colorado a number of women were chosen as city treasurers and city clerks. Idaho Springs, Manitou, Aspen and Trinidad were among the larger towns where women were elected to office. As there are more men than women in Colorado, it is apparent that when women are placed in public office men want them there.

SHE SELLS NECKWEAR

An up-to-date breadwinner of the gentle sex chooses exclusive neckties for gentlemen too busy to hunt what they want in the shops! Thrown suddenly upon her own resources, with no business specialties at her finger tips, she thought over the situation for two days. Then she visited a wholesale house which makes and imports men's neckties, and bought two dozen of just the most stylish, stunning ties they had. Thus equipped, she put on her best bib and tucker, a simple, but dainty, gown, and started to sell her neckties in offices. They went like hot cakes. Men were delighted to get such neckwear without having to hunt for it. It was gentlemanly, exclusive, and she only asked a fair profit. She has now built up a nice business. She not only sells the neckties she carries, but she takes orders for special kinds, and, if necessary, will make them.

Floss feared his last hour had come! But as luck would have it he turned a sharp corner of the road, which hid him from their sight, and came upon an open gate leading into a stack-yard. In a moment Floss had hidden himself in a straw stack, where he found a convenient hole and plenty of loose straw. There he lay panting and terror-struck. What if they found him out in his hiding-place?

The shouts drew nearer and nearer. But, oh! happiness! they died away in the distance, and Floss was safe. He dared not stir until it grew dark, for his nerves were greatly shaken by so terrible an adventure. He was so tired that he spent the greater part of the day in sleeping, and when he came out of his straw he felt quite famished.

"There is a house very near," he said to himself; "perhaps I can find a bone or something to eat lying about if I go and look."

So he walked across the stack-yard and through an orchard, feeling very stiff and shaky. All at once he felt himself suddenly seized from behind, and his heart almost died within him.

"What are you doing here, prowling about at this time of night?" said a gruff voice in his ears.

"I'm not doing any harm," pleaded poor Floss, looking around and seeing a great mastiff over him. "I am a poor, unfortunate dog in search of my home. I came to look for a bone or something, having had nothing to eat since my breakfast, for a number of horrid people hunted me, thinking I was mad."

No sooner had he uttered the words than the mastiff sprang away from him as if he had been shot.

"Keep your distance!" he barked. "Come near me at your peril! Madness is the most infectious thing going. One of my relatives was bitten with mania, taken from his cousin, and died. How do I know you're not mad?"

"I'm sure I'm not mad any more than you are. I should soon find it out if I were."

"Not you!" replied the mastiff; "no dog ever thinks himself mad. You walk before me straight into that little yard you see. I'll soon find out whether you are mad or not."

Floss obeyed, trembling, wondering what the mastiff was going to do with him.

Floss obeyed cheerfully.

"Ah! I see you're right enough. Nothing frightens me but infectious diseases. You may eat everything you see here." And the mastiff stood looking on with a grand air while Floss made a delicious supper off a plate of broken meat. "You may spend the night in my kennel if you like," said he, evidently wishing to be hospitable. "I guard the house, and never go to bed till its light."

"No, thank you, Mr. Mastiff," said Floss, having quite recovered his spirits. "Other people may think me mad as well as you, if I'm seen here in the day time. You might as well hang a dog as give him a bad name, you know. So I'll be off; and I'm much obliged to you for your kindness."

Floss travelled a great many miles that night, and towards morning went to sleep in a ditch. When he awoke, the sun was shining high up in the heavens, and, wanting his breakfast, Floss made the best of his way into a little town, through which his nose told him his way home lay, thinking he could pick up a breakfast there.

He came into a large square, after skulking through some back streets, and there he found such bustle that he even forgot his hunger. A fair was being held in the market-place, and never having seen a fair he was lost in curiosity. The wonderful stalls, booths, shows, all filled him with astonishment. There was a brass band playing so loudly that it made him howl, so he ran as far away from it as he could. There were plenty of other dogs about, like himself, seeming to have no owners, so Floss forgot to be timid, and began to enjoy himself, finding odds and ends of food about, and drinking some water from the gutter. At one time he would have scouted the idea of eating such trash; but travelling puts one to strange resources, and thankful enough was he to find even a morsel.

All at once his attention was arrested by a marvellous sight. On a platform before a show-van, a dog came out with a gold crown on his head, and a scarlet velvet coat on his back, and walked,—yes, actually walked,—up and down on his hind legs.

Floss gazed, breathless with awe and admiration. The people shouted, and clapped, and laughed, and numbers followed the dog into the show; for after bowing gracefully, he retired inside again.

Here was a new and glorious phase of life! Floss felt dazzled, intoxicated, thrown off his balance entirely. What would he not give to be the centre of admiring crowds, with a scarlet coat and a gold crown on his head? He wondered if walking on upon one's hind legs was a gift of genius, or to be acquired by practice. Oh! if a career so grand could only be his! He forgot Die, he forgot his daughter Puppy, and even his mistress, in his newly-born ambition. For some time he watched the platform; but as the dog made no further appearance, he went towards the van, and walked around it. If he could only catch a glimpse of that wonderful crowned creature and just ask him how he attained so great an eminence! He ventured at last to poke the tip of his nose under an old awning hanging at the back of the van. A very shabby dog with a dissipated countenance was lying up in one corner, gnawing a bone. "Can you tell me whether it is possible to see the crowned dog?" he asked.

"Oh, yes! I'm the crowned dog, and a miserable dog I am. What's your business?"

Floss was so taken aback that he gazed at the dog speechless. Could this be possible? "I came to ask if you could tell me how I could get crowned too," he said, at last, "it seems such a proud position."

"A proud position, indeed!" said the other, with a bitter bark; "it's the most wretched life that a dog can lead. I just go on the platform to cheat the people into thinking they will see something wonderful inside, feeling I'm an imposter all the time, for there's nothing to see but a fat boy, who is stuffed. And then I have to carry a board on my back, and advertise my own deceit. Oh! it's a degrading life,—not fit for a dog!

"But, how clever to walk on your hind legs!" said Floss.

"You wouldn't think it clever if you had to have it beaten into you as I have. I think it makes a dog look like a fool, myself!"

"Then, why do you do it?"

"Because I can't help it. It's better to do that than to be beaten. I think I shall go mad some day, and bit my master!" And the dog looked as if he would enjoy nothing better.

"Why don't you run away?" asked Floss, all his admiration turned to pity.

"When you've been walking on your hind legs for years, running away is not so easy."

Further conversation was prevented by the show dog being fetched to go through his performance again; so Floss, thinking the world was a very unsafe and deceitful place, determined to make the best of his way out of town. He had not gone half way down the principal street before he was conscious of a strange sensation from the tip of his nose to the end of his tail.

"Some one is near me that I know," said he.

So he looked about, and a little way before him was—Oh! Joy unspeakable—his mistress' carriage standing before the door of a shop. There, too, was Die, majestic and serene, on one of the seats. Floss rushed up and jumped in, half wild with delight. Die expressed his astonishment by an energetic wagging of her tail and barked to call her mistress, who came out wondering what could be the matter.

Words could not express her amazement at the sight of Floss, imaging him to be safe in his new home.

So Floss rode back in state by the side of Die, a proud and happy dog. He felt that he had accomplished a great feat, and that he deserved all the praise and petting his mistress bestowed upon him. He was a hero that had seen the world, and was conscious that now he knew better than ever on which side his bread was buttered. His mistress never gave him away again, and Floss, amidst his luxuries, often thinks of his wonderful adventures in search of his home.

SONNET—TO EVENING.

Oh twilight shadows, weave thy purple dim,
Softly around us, till the day's bright glare
Fades from our eyes all wearied with the care
That busy man infests the daylight in.
Oh fragrant breezes send they freshening breath,
To calm our turbid thoughts and hearts grown sere:
Oh golden stars send peace upon us here,
Making these moments calm as after death.
Oh, night we linger while the nightingale,
Making the night more holy and more fair
With sweet sounds echoeing down the shad'wy vale.
Exquisite night, oh darkness soothing sorrow,

AT SUNDOWN.

"Forward; gallop, right wheel!" yelled Colonel Hadley.

The scrambling horses and the voices of the men told that the ascent of the mountain was well-nigh impossible. The soldiers of the garrison town, nearby were out on pursuit of an outlaw named Richard Black; for two weeks Col. Hadley had been close on the track on Dick; aided by the mountaineers, to whom Dick was a living terror. Hadley was pretty well posted in the movements of Dick. Only the night before, one of the guides told the Colonel that Dick Black had been seen near the mountain trail. The place was ransacked, but only a footprint here and there told of the presence of the escaped outlaw. A sharp turn in the rocks brought them to a smooth grassy path. Out of the woods came a boy, he was ragged, and carried a basket under one arm. "Ha," the Col. ejaculated, then to the men behind, "Halt!" He jumped off his horse and took the boy (who was about twelve) by the shoulder:

"Where are you going?"

"To my father."

"And what does you father do?"

"Nothing," answered the boy.

"Nothing, well—hem! what is your name?"

"Dick Black." Hadley raised his eyebrows.

"Dick Black."

"Where is your father now."

"I can't tell sir, he told me not to."

"Oh, come, come! now here is a gold piece for you, if you tell me where your father is," coaxed the Colonel.

"I am not going to tell,—not for all the gold pieces you'd give me! You'll hang father; I know you!" and he made haste to run away.

"Surround him!" commanded Colonel Hadley.

Dick found himself surrounded by soldiers.

"Tut, tut, boy, you will, and must tell!"

"I'm not going to tell!" stoutly answered Dick.

"Do you know what the orders are, when boys like you won't tell?"

"No," said Dick, his eyes wide open.

"Why to shoot them of course; and that is what I am going to do to you if you disobey."

"Oh, please, please let me go to father! Oh, what will Mother do? I—oh,—" the rest of the sentence was lost in sobs.

Not a muscle of Colonel Hadley's face moved; only his lower lips dropped, showing his white teeth; the soldiers saw it, knew, and quaked:

"Now, look here; no nonsense or I'll have you shot dead;—will you tell?"

"No, no; I can't!"

"I will give you three minutes to decide."

Hadley laid his watch on a stone, rested his right hand on the butt of his pistol and studied his prisoner's face. The boy had stopped crying, his hands were deep in his pockets, and he started fixedly at the sky. Slowly the moments passed away, each as the toll of a death bell.

"The three minutes are up; will you tell, or will you not?"

"No, I will not!" bravely answered the lad.

"Bind him!" And the soldiers bound him.

"Now, before it is too late—will you tell?"

"No!" the boy's face grew white, as he gazed down into the valley at a tiny brown hut.

"Attention! Ferrol in position!" called Hadley.

"Ready,—fire!"

There was a crashing volley, a cloud of dense smoke, and a limp little body tied to a tree. The Col. glanced at the child, and frowned.

"To Horse!" he commanded.

The sun sloped quietly down, leaving the mountain in a blaze of red. The clattering of the horses' feet grew faint, and at last died away, leaving the great black forest, the brown hut and the watching figure in dead silence.

MY EXTRAORDINARY DREAM.

(By Joseph H. Nulty, author of "Young Heiress," "Young Adventurers," "Nickey, the Boy Detective."

One night, I was following two burglars that we had had our eye on all day, in a very lonely wood, with my partner, "Shine." We tracked our victims to a railway bridge, a very high one, a hundred feet above a rocky valley. They crossed the bridge and stopped in the centre. "Shine" and I got our handcuffs ready and walked straight for them. They stood still and almost allowed us to put the handcuffs on them, but, as we did so two others came up behind us and gagged and tied us to the railway bridge. There we were, tied to the track and unable to help ourselves. Coming at a very rapid speed was the midnight express! On! on came the thundering engine! It was on the bridge!—it whistled! But we were unable to open our mouths. The glare from the headlight grew stronger and stronger on our eyes. The floundering engine was but a few rods away. It was fast approaching! It was here! - The fatal moment had arrived!

Bang!

I fell on the floor and immediately awoke, bathed in cold perspiration from head to foot.

A SONG OF CANADA.

Sing me the pride of her stately rivers,
Glory of mirth in their tameless glee.
Hark; 'tis the roar of the tumbling rapids,
Deep unto deep through the dead night calls;
Truly, I hear but the voice of Freedom
Shouting her name from her fortress walls!

Sing me the joy of her fertile prairies,
League upon league of the golden grain;
Comfort, housed in the smiling homestead—
Plenty, throned on the lumbering wain;
Law of Contentment, may no strife vex you,
Never war's flag on your plains be unfurled;
Only the blessings of mankind reach you—
Finding the food for a hungry world.

Sing me the charm of her blazing campfires;
Sing me the quiet of her happy homes,
Whether afar 'neath the forest arches,
Or in the shade of the city's domes;
All of a mother her son would mar;
For when a loved one's praise is sounding,
Sweet are the strains to the lover's ear.

Sing me the worth of each Canadian,
Roamer in wilderness, toiler in town—
Search the earth over you'll find none stauncher,
Whether his hands be white or brown;
Best of the world's blood in each vein;
Lords of ourselves, and slaves to no one,
For us or from us, you'll find we're—MEN!

Sing me the song, then; sing it bravely;
Put your soul in the words you sing;
Sing me the praise of this glorious country—
Clear on the ear let the deep notes ring.
Here is no starveling, Heaven-forsaken—
Crouching apart where the nations throng.
Proud as the proudest she moves among them—

JOINING IN THE CRY WITHOUT KNOWING WHY.

There was a disturbance in the kennel; a hound had had a bad dream, or a sudden twinge, and he began to bark; then eyes opened, heads rose, ears pricked up, and the chorus increased till every throat in the pack helped in it, except an old hound that lay at the end. He watched and listened a while, till his neighbour, noticing him, cried in great excitement, "Why don't you bark?"

"What are you barking at?" he asked in reply.

"At—at—I don't know; every one else is barking," said the other.

"Just what I suspected," said the old dog, "Ask up the kennel what it is for, and if you can find out, and it's anything worth barking for, let me know—it will be time enough for me to bark then!"

CORRESPONDENCE.

Papooses All: I have had so many suggestions as to badge, war-cry, president, etc., that I think it's time to find out what we all mean. I know we all want a badge; but won't you tell me what the President is for and what he is to do. A war-cry is always enlivening, of course, and here is one suggested by "Neddy Bray," "Hip de minga hunaga tuck de poodle!" I think; yes, I believe it is "tuck de poodle." Neddy evidently does not object to your tucking de poodle anywhere you like, as he does not mention any place in particular. He says, "to yell as quickly as possible; so practice it thoroughly now, Papooses, in your little beds when you cannot sleep, and you will at least have the satisfaction of knowing that neither can anybody else.—One—two—three!—Hip de minga hunga—tuck de Poo-oo-oo-oo-oodle!!! There you are!

G. T.—Such an accusation would never enter the befeathered head of me. Read Longfellowniously obtained in "World-Wide" for May 2nd, and you will see such things have happened before. R. G. Warman, Moncton, is the address given by our esteemed friend. Lots of fun to you both, is the wish of the Chief. I am deeply flattered by your interest in the crest-feathers of me; still I hardly think you deserve a description of them after that hit about the little "traits"—you don't really mean it, do you? I am on the hunt for a good long serial for you all. If you let me know in time, when and where, next time, the Chief will go to hear you plya, and possibly trill a few variations to the theme.

Neddy Bray: If the war-cry is not given exactly as you meant it to be (at the end), please send a second edition, as the Sneak-Snake has clawed off the end of your letter. I should like a second letter, at any rate, telling us where to "tuck de Poodle." Why do you ask whether Victor is any relation of mine? Is where to "tuck de Poodle" a secret that you are afarid to trust me with, and yet wish some member of the family to know, in case de Poodle goes made when he hears us (poor beast!), and tries to bite? Play fair now, or we may tuck de Poodle and de Neddy up together.

Gertrude: Do you know, I'm almost afraid to send you the picture now. You would always know when I was around. I am going to be quiet for a little while; but I can't promise you forever. Glad to hear you are going to write to Mary C. M. I really cannot say whether C. J. Murray is a boy or a girl. Only the initials were given. I was at the Fraser all Sunday afternoon. Sorry about the exams. coming; I know them; but it does not seem to me that they ever gave you much trouble before. I'll make you out a list of books if you give me some hint as to subject; do you mean stories? I don't blame you for not wanting "girls' books." Have you any definite ideas about our President? I'm asking all the Papooses to tell me what we mean, for I'm sure I don't know. However, I don't object to a Lord High Executioner if it would amuse you all, as that is one object of the Club, and of the Chief too. I know who you would appoint to the latter post, and I know whose head would come off first,—"lo, the poor Indian's," eh?

J. Munro McLean (West Bay, N. S.)—I am sorry that you have had to wait so long for an answer; also that I can give you no information as to the value of the coin. However, if you will write a description of it, it shall be inserted in the T. C. C., and possibly some young collector may be able to answer your questions.

L. L.—I have my suspicions that you are related to the Sneak Snake, and in no distant degree, either. You say very many very nice little things, but what I should like to know is—what signature did you make use of that time before Easter? Cheat fair, now.

J. H. N. (Trenton).—Just as soon as I get my wigwam settled in summer quarters you shall have them. I can't get at them this week. I can only thank "Some One" in this department, as I have no idea who "Some One" is.

only to her gossip Mistress Tod Lowrie, the senior Bailie's wife of Cairn Edward, as she put an extra "cinder" in her tea, "If I had my way, it's her that should hang for it!"

When Adora took her way from the door of the House of Muir it was a typical September day, clear and dry—not warm, but with that grip in the air that wins the corn on the rigs, sets the stocks a-rustling and rejoices the heart of the farmer. Beneath her eye lay the little hard-won gussets of ploughland which Roy had laid into furrows for Sharon to sow, his tall, gaunt figure looking Biblical in its girding of sackcloth, from the cross folds of which he swung the grain abroad in alternate handfuls. Farther yont, Adora's eyes fell on the knoll where Sharon had seen a woman sit as if asleep, being dead.

So, taking her worse-than-dead in her hand, Adora went slowly about the corner of the barn. Certain of the baser sort, the slack-water of the ruffian tide of the morning, jeered at them through the open doorway. And there was no strong Roy now to fell the insulter with a blow, nor a stern Sharon fitly to lay whip-lash where it ought to lie. But Adora, taking her father by the hand, led him a little about so that he might not hear. She herself was not much cast down, for she hugged closer to her heart that eternal right of the down-trodden—the appeal from earthly injustice to the high universal Caesar who sits in the heavens, who cannot do other than judge rightly.

To the eye of sense it was a sad little procession enough—the girl leading the broken-down old man by the hand. For Donald Gracie, suddenly divorced from his life's work, fretted like a child that he was once more compelled to remove from surroundings that suited him so well.

"Adora, I have over and over endeavored to impress upon you," he reiterated complainingly, as they took their way down the hill, "that I refuse to return to the school of Lowran parish, where I was treated with such disrespect. At least Dr. Meiklewham shall apologize to me in the presence of the scholars before I will consent to give a single lesson there! The Presbytery shall apologize! And I cannot help thinking, Adora, that it argues a certain lack of consideration for your father's feelings that you insist upon taking him back to a place of so many painful memories!"

"We are not going to the schoolhouse, father," the girl answered, with some of the apathy which accompanies great sorrow.

LEGAL QUERIES.

G. M. B.—I rented a suite of rooms in a residential flat, and had to put in the electric light fixtures. When giving up the rooms on expiry of lease the landlord declines to make a fair allowance for the fixtures, and, of course, it is open to me to take them away. Can I leave them in position in order to try and sell them to the next tenant, and in case of the latter refusing to take them at what I think a fair price, can I then enter and remove them. Is any notice to the landlord required if I intend to do this? Ans.—You must remove your fixtures on expiry of your lease unless landlord consents.

A. W. K.—The answers to your questions are as follows: 1. The father has never parted with his house, and, therefore, does not "take it back." 2. If the letters contain specific promises as stated, you would be entitled to claim the value of all improvements made by you, and also the value of your services. 3. If the will is not revoked, and is made in proper form, the bequest of the house would be valid. 4. You might try to get your father to give you a deed of the house or acknowledge your claim for money advanced and services.

C. C. A.—Can a young man be sued on a note given nearly four years ago, when only in his eighteenth year, the note being borrowed for mere pleasure? Ans.—No.

Postmistress.—You had better submit your policy to a lawyer. The matter depends on the terms.

Reader.—B is a proprietor. A buys 100 acres of land from B. An agreement is drawn that A will pay so much an acre to B in eight months. When A pays last dollar, B agrees to give A deed. Two years after B dies, and A has never paid nor never received a deed. Forty years go by. A holds, lumbers on it, and cuts wood, but never fenced nor made improvements on it, but paid the taxes all along. A sells the land to C, and gives C a deed. A claims to hold it by possession, and B's heirs claims it is not A's, as he never paid for it. Is the title A gave C good? Ans.—The land is yours by prescription, if during 30 consecutive years no claim was made for it by the lawful heirs.

F. W.—On Thursday, February 3rd, the proprietor of the dwelling I occupy came in to see if I was keeping it another year. As I was absent for the week, my wife told him that she would give him an answer on Saturday, the 7th. He agreed to this and said: "I will try and rent my other dwelling, and if I do I will put the sign at your door, but before renting the tenement I will notify you and give you the preference." My daughter was present when he said this. The same night he rented his other dwelling, and the next morning he also rented my tenement, but without giving my wife notice as he had promised. If I take action for damages and expense of moving, will I be able to get something out of him? Ans.—Yes.

In Doubt.—A man takes out an insurance policy on his life, but is unable to keep up his payments. His brother undertakes to do so on condition that the policy is made over to the wife absolutely. This has been done. Has the wife power to will the policy to her children in case of her death taking place before that of her husband, or would it revert to him? Ans.—Your question is answered by Section 55 qr. sub. sec. 2 of the Revised Statutes of Quebec: "The policy reverts to the insured (the husband) when the wife for whose benefit it exists either by the policy appropriation or revocation or by accretion predeceases her husband, with or without issue."

HER FATHER WAS A DRUNKARD

STORY OF HER SUCCESS

"My father had often promised mother to stop drinking, and would do so for a time, but then returned to it stronger than ever. One day, after a terrible spree, he said to us: 'It's no use, I can't stop drinking.' Our hearts seemed to turn to stone, and we decided to try the Tasteless Samaria Prescription, which we had read about in the papers. We gave him the remedy, entirely without his knowledge, in his tea, coffee, or food regularly, according to directions, and he never knew he was taking it. One package removed all his desire for liquor, and he says it is now distasteful to him. His health and appetite are so wonderfully improved, and no one would know him for the same man. It is now fifteen months since we gave it to him, and we feel sure the change is for good. Please send me one of your little books, as I want to give it to a friend."

FREE SAMPLE and pamphlet, giving full particulars, testimonials and price, sent in plain sealed envelope. Correspondence sacredly confidential. Address, enclosing stamp for reply. The Samaria Remedy Company, 23 Jordan street, Toronto, Canada.

Hastily, as if taken in a meanness, Sidney Latimer shrank away into the darkness. He had seen enough and more. Murderer or not, Roy McCulloch was now forever free from any word of his. He could not speak now. If he did he would feel himself worse than Sandy Ewan when he decoyed the old dominie to his fate on the day of the examination.

Sidney Latimer knew the facility of the law of Scotland with regard to marriage, and he did not doubt for a moment that Adora Gracie, situated as she was, burdened with the care of her father, had gone straight to House-of-Muir, where at least she was sure of welcome and an open door. Then, when Roy came back, with whatever of guilt upon his hands, there was no doubt that Adora would marry him were it only out of gratitude. So Latimer reasoned with himself.

The young man stood by his wounded horse in the darkness, stricken also. From the house there came to his ears the sound of laughter. Sidney loosened the rope from the iron ring and moved away quietly, as if ashamed of his mission.

No, there could be no doubt—none. Adora's whole carriage, her assured step, was that of a house mistress. The dominie, her father, was seated by the fire reading his book. Roy, by his side, arranged the lamp with filial solicitude. Adora and Roy had exchanged glances over his head—ah, the inwardness of these glances took Sidney Latimer by the throat!

A sudden wild excess of rage took hold of him. The murdered—the man with the guilt of blood on his hands—to have that for his reward! He, too, would go back and—end it or himself be ended. Fool! What good would that do? He had seen the girl's smile—the first perfectly happy smile he had ever seen on her lips! That she loved the man there was no doubt! Well? Well——?

Yes, he knew. He had it in his power to shatter this new-found happiness as an earthen pitcher is shattered with an iron bar. Between them and that new-found love of theirs he would dangle the hangman's rope.

So out on the ghastly, solitary moor, scaring the wildfowl and the blackfaced sheep, Sidney Latimer raved, his beast whose own trouble had abated, pushing against him at times with moist, anxious nose, warning him to begone from a neighbourhood so dangerous to honest horses. But gradually the meanness of causing a woman to suffer because of his private disappointment worked upon his spirit.

"Who am I," he asked himself, "that I should lay an information against Roy McCulloch! I, who at this very moment, feel my hands a-tremble with desire to kill! I know my own, but do I know Roy McCulloch's provocation? Let me get away—away—never to return!"

So, forgetting everything but the desire to put a great distance between himself and this fatal house, he leaped upon his beast, and the frightened animal, partaking of the feelings of his master, struck through the moor at speed. Soon they were at the Dykes of Barnbarroch. This time there was nothing to be seen. Indeed, there was little time, for they passed like a flash. Sidney pulling the reins away from the turn of the road which led towards Lowran and home. He felt that he could not face his mother's anxious assiduities that night. She would be waiting for him. Of that he had no doubt. She would have a thousand questions to ask. He would ride down toward the sea, find a little coaching inn on the Stranraer road, and there abide the night may, perhaps, longer, till he had thought things over and decided what it was best for him to do.

He struck into the sea road. His beast moved easily, seemingly less tired than before. It was the dark time just before the birth of the dawn. He threw the reins down on the gray's neck, and master and horse plunged blindly into the unknown.

How long they wandered thus, lost to direction, straying anywhither, cannot now be known. The world had come sharply to an end for Sidney Latimer. His mouth was shut. The girl he loved was bound body and soul to a man whom he knew to be a murderer! What mattered anything any more?

The air grew fresher—more salt—upon the lips and in the nostrils. They were descending from the moorlands toward the little ports which dot the shore line of Galloway here and there—the Lake, the Scaur, Balcarie, Port Mary, Portowarren. But Sidney Latimer paid no heed to his going. His heart was too exceedingly bitter within him, and as for his beast, he only hung a weary head and weakly kept four gray feet moving. Suddenly out of the ground, as in a dream, armed shapes rose all about the young man. He was pulled from his saddle to find himself in the thick of a fierce combat. A blow was stricken which stunned him and he was thrown hastily along with several others into the bottom of a boat.

"That does the night's work!" cried a voice; "give way there!"

The next morning what a crying of men there was athwart all the country. The young laird of Lowran had been assassinated by the McCullochs, the poachers of House of Muir. His coat, all bloody and turned inside out, had been found on their property. His footsteps had been found and measured at their very gable-end. His riding whip was lying at their "louping-on-stone." There were signs of a struggle at the Barnbarroch Marshes. His horse, wounded and (some said) dying, had been found straying on the cliffs near the Gate House of Cally. Happily both of the murderers were in custody, after a desperate resistance on the part of the younger, a dangerous character who had been recently released from gaol.

The motive, of course, was jealousy. Young men will be young men. The disgraced dominie's daughter of Lowran was actually at the time in the house of the culprits, and the laird had gone to see her. Hence the quarrel, and the murder to follow. All was rounded, clear, complete. And upon the killing of Sandy Ewan, also, light, lurid and sudden, seemed to break. Dickie Dick and his friend recalled to themselves with curious unanimity and were ready to swear (did in fact so take oath) that the voice which they had heard in their master's room on the night of the murder of Sandy Ewan upon the Glebe road, was none other than that of Roy McCulloch!

Bands of men (so ran the report) were out everywhere searching for the body of the murdered laird—which, strangely enough, had not yet been found. On the other hand, the McCullochs were safe in the gaol of St. Cuthbertstown, under lock and key—and well for them that it was so! For the countryside was up, and they would have had an excellent chance of being torn to pieces. Among other things, the girl—the first cause of all—had gotten her deserts. Ah, she had long been known to sundry good Christian people for what she was! They had always said so! Perhaps some one would listen to them next time!

She and her drunken father had been turned to the door of House of Muir by the officers of the law. It had been asked of her if she could show any proof of a legal right to remain where she was, and when she could not or would not answer, she and her father had found themselves upon the heather. And serve them right! cried these same apocalyptic Christian folk, who are forever pouring out vials and blowing trumpets over their neighbours' misfortunes. If all such were put in prison the country would be the better! And at this point large quotations were made from the early chapters of the Proverbs of Solomon, son of David, king in Israel—who certainly ought to have known what he was talking about.

Thus the House of Muir, which but yesternight had been so bright, filled from end to end with light and life and the joy of seemingly settled happiness, was in a moment left desolate. And down in the Great House of Lowran there were two women who mourned also, both one and also the other of them, as for an only son.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

OUT OF GOOD—EVIL.

When Sidney Latimer left the lighted window of the House-of-Muir he gave up all thought of denouncing Roy McCulloch. This seemed a true and worthy thing to do, yet had he contrived the worst possible against Roy and Adora, the young laird could not have played the devil's game better than by doing as he did. So mysterious is the train of consequences which follows every action, however trivial, that we suffer (and make others suffer) as often and as severely for our well-intentioned as for our evil actions. Doubtless there are compensations, but the fact remains. The philosophy of "be good and you will get a lump of sugar; be bad and you will get nasty medicine" is untrue to the facts of life.

So many-tongued rumour, flying from door to door, lifting the latch and shouting an amended and re-edited tale into every house, spoke more truly than usual when it represented Adora and her father as having been turned out upon the waste after the capture of the McCullochs by the crowd of several hundred men from all parts which suddenly invaded the solitudes of House-of-Muir.

How Adora came to be there at all may be told in a few words. It chanced that Sharon McCulloch, stern, sober-faced old ex-smuggler, whom no Examination Presbyterial could for a moment have drawn a yard from his door, had business in the village of Lowran on the day when Sandy Ewan's trick was being spoken of and even laughed over the bar of Lucky Greenlees's public house.

Sharon was making ready for his homeward ride, and as a last precaution he always tossed over his throat a tass of brandy to the good of the house. He stood tall and erect, fingering the pewter in which his half mutchkin had been served to him. Silently he listened to the tale—how in this very room the dominie had been made to drink till he could not see, Sandy Ewan plying him with liquor skilfully all the while. Then the hanger-on aforesaid, who related the instructive apologue with some humour, told how he had "oxtered" Donald Gracie to his own school door, and there listened till at the proper moment, carefully waited for, Sandy Ewan had pushed him "in amang a' the ministers!"

Sterner and grayer each moment stood Sharon McCulloch, gripping his whip tighter in his hand, till at the climax he astonished the company by reaching over a huge hand for the narrator. Without a word of explanation or apology he dragged him over the table into the open, where he lashed him fierce and long, at last flinging the tale-bearer on the ground, whimpering like the hound he was.

Then the master of House-of-Muir made a little speech to the company and departed—to look for Sandy Ewan. Happily instead he found Adora Gracie. And then, at the sight of the girl's desolation, the stern-faced old law-breaker had melted completely.

"For my boy's sake—for my loneliness sake—come!" he had bidden her. "There is an empty hoose, but a warm, warm welcome up on the muirs!"

Thus it was that while Roy lay fretting in the gaol at St. Cuthbertstown, there had come into his father's house, in all good liking and free will, the one thing he had most despaired of seeing there.

Upon his return Dora had met his triumphant surprise and rejoicing with quiet thankfulness and gratitude. She had never doubted such an ending to his imprisonment. But she found so much that needed doing in the House-of-Muir that even Roy's advent made no great change in her mode of life. Sharon McCulloch, grave and reserved as ever, walked by her side every evening—he or his son, but on the whole most frequently Sharon. Their path always led them toward the high angle of the property, the apex of the triangle near which was a cairn on a little heathery knoll. Sharon did not look that way, but instead gazed absent-mindedly into the sunset. He never spoke of the wife whom he had found there lying dead upon his return from market. But the mere companionship of the young girl by his side somehow softened and warmed Sharon McCulloch so that in coming in Roy would often notice a difference in his father—something softer about his face than he had ever remarked there before, which was doubtles the resurrection of the young man who in a certain old summer walked these hills of heather with another girl as beautiful and as young.

Indeed, it seemed as if at times Sharon himself forgot. For on one occasion, after a long period of silence, he turned upon Adora with the question, "But where have you left the boys so long?"

Then, instantly recollecting himself, he added, sharply for him in these days, "I think we had better go in!"

Upon which, all suddenly, breaking into this life of peace and happiness, there had arrived a howling, furious mob led by Jonathan Grier. Then Adora had seen Roy, an angered Roy, a Roy whom she had never seen, fighting for his life, striking down one after another till at last he was mastered by numbers. Then the house which she had begun to beautify and care for was put to sack—the furniture flung out of the window, the panelled walls of the chambers torn down under guise of search for evidence. After that the officers of the law came, taking a kind of possession, who posed her with horrid questions.

"Would she give evidence of this? Had she been present at that? What was her position in the household? By what right was she there?"

And so, as it was succinctly enough stated in the popular report, she and her drunken father had been turned out upon the heather.

The Lowland Scots—the Scots of Galloway in especial—are a kind-hearted folk. So it has been said and sung of them, and it is true. But students of national manners know that upon occasion such a kind-hearted folk can be more cruel than many a people whom the world holds habit-and-repute for savagery.

The Laird of Lowran was popular. His family had been "weel-likit" for generations before him. Much was expected of the young man when once he had wedded "a suitable person" and emancipated himself throughly from the yoke of his mother, who, in spite of her forty years' residence in Lowran, was still looked upon as an incomer and "nae real Latimer!"

On the other hand, Adora Gracie, save with a limited number of the younger men (and Aline) could hardly be said to be popular. She was too pretty and her tongue was somewhat oversharp. Moreover, she was supposed to hold her head too high for her position. Which is, in Galloway, one of the cardinal sins. Then the sheep-stealing, the killing of Sandy Ewan and the disappearance of the young laird were all, in the "giff-gaff" of old wives' clatter, clearly traceable to the inexplicable attraction which foolish young men have for such "creatures."

As Mistress Girnwood said very indig-

OUR LONDON LETTER

"THE AMERICAN INVASION."

London, May 5.—"Wake up England" is still a favourite text of the English publicist. The Prince of Wales brought the text back with him from his round-the-Empire tour, and he has preached another excellent sermon from it this week in his capacity as president of the Royal Commission of the St. Louis Exhibition.

And it is here interesting to note that Canadian considerations have had something to do with the sudden determination of the British Government to take a prominent part in this great American show. The argument in the official mind has run somewhat as follows: "Canada and Germany have fallen out. Canada buys from Germany something like $7,000,000 worth of goods a year. Under a probable tariff war between the two countries German will cease to supply a good part of this Canadian importation, and it will lie in some measure with British and American exporters to supply the gap. At all events, here is an added inducement for British manufacturers to make a good display in a window which the Canadian buyer will see." And now that the Prince of Wales has put himself at the head of the commission, there is good reason to believe that the British manufacturer will make a good show.

TO THE EMIGRATING ENGLISHMAN.

The "wake up" movement in England touches Canada in another direction. Some little time ago the Fortnightly Review published a somewhat alarmist article on the subject of the American invasion of Canada. The writer had made a visit of a few weeks' duration to Canada, and had brought back to England the belief that although the annexation cry was still so feeble in Canada as to be negligeable, the United States capitalist and farmer are so surely taking to themselves the good things in the way of Canadian resources that unless the British capitalist and farmer bestir themselves to get a share of what is going they will wake up to find Canada in the political as well as the commercial grip of the United States. In the May number of the Monthly Review, Mr. Charles Hanbury-Williams, who writes not as a mere globe-trotter, but as a resident of the North-West, strikes somewhat the same note, and however much Canadians may discount the alarmist tendency of such writings there is no denying that they do good in recalling the Englishman to the possibilities, both in the way of investment and settlement, which lie at his very door within the British Empire.

Mr. Hanbury-Williams put the case of the Canadian North-West as a place of settlement very tersely when he takes the imaginary case of an English farmer going to North America with $10,000 in his pocket: "If he bought 160 acres of improved lands in the United States, he would have to pay, at a very moderate computation, $4,800; nearly one-half of his capital. In Canada he could get 'wild' land of superior fertility for $480. In addition to this he could 'homestead' another 160 acres for a merely nominal fee of $10 by making personal entry at the Land Office for the district; or vicariously on application to the Minister of the Interior or Dominion Land Agent. After this, all that is necessary for obtaining a patent is six months' residence and cultivation in each year for three years, or, as residence, living with his parents on land in the vicinity, or on land owned by himself. By this means the newcomer will be the owner of 320 acres, and will leave himself a surplus of $9,510 wherewith to put up buildings and purchase the stock and agricultural implements necessary to make the requisite improvements."

THE AMERICAN INVASION.

Indeed, it is the very strength of these inducements which the Canadian North-West holds out to the land-hungry and the fact that the American farmer is on the very threshold of this new land that creates uneasiness in the British mind of Mr. Hanbury-Williams. The American flood into Canada is just now, he says, "only trickling over the dam, but if the great American syndicates are to begin, or, rather, to continue, buying land in blocks the size of an English county, and colonizing them wholesale with inhabitants transplanted by the city-full from the United States, it is not difficult to see that the map of Manitoba and the North-West Territories might soon be — figuratively speaking—dotted over with garrisons flying the Stars and Stripes.

"So long as the new settlers arrive individually, or in small clusters, they can settle down among the 450,000 inhabitants who are now occupying that enormous area in the proportion of one human being to five or six square miles. The latter will assimilate them easily enough, and there will be no danger of their leavening the whole lump with disloyalty to the British Empire.

"But if they come over in swarms, and gravitate together on their arrival, they may fulfil the predictions of the New York Sun. They may, quite conceivably, foster their existent patriotism to the land they have left, and insist on teaching their children, in their school handbooks, to dislike and distrust the land of their adoption, till in a few years the annexation of Western Canada may prove to be a 'mere picnic,' that the American jingo claims it is to-day.

"At all events, they will create a new public sentiment out here. Not necessarily a desire for political incorporation with the United States; not even, perhaps, a desire for republican institutions as opposed to monarchical. But a sentiment to which the idea of Imperial unity is, if not actually repugnant, most certainly non-essential." And the editor of the Monthly Review in a foot-note calls attention to the fact that the purchase of Canadian Pacific land which is being so largely indulged in by American settlers and syndicates just now, does not carry with it any requirements of British citizenship.

ENGLAND'S INTEREST IN THE WEST.

Mr. Hanbury-Williams' warning appeal therefore amounts to this: Here in this North-West country is to be found the future granary of the Empire. Canadians themselves have demonstrated their faith in its stability and future prosperity by advancing their capital freely for the last twenty years, till there is to-day under the control of the financial institutions in the city of Winnipeg a sum of $100,000,000 invested in mortgages on real estate and other securities. The Americans have suddenly awakened to the fact that it is worth their while to follow Canada's example, and, with their immensely superior resources in money and population, should have no difficulty in beating Canadians at their own game. Canada is glad enough to have her country opened up; and, if it is not to be done by brethren from over the sea, the next best thing is that it should be done by cousins from over the border. But Canadians prefer the former alternative. "We should like to see our farms occupied by British settlers, and our water-power developed by British capital. We should like to see a population here that could send, when called on for purposes of Imperial defence, not four, but forty contingents of the men bred on the open prairie; of the men who from their childhood have never known the pinch of narrow street life; the men who can ride, and shoot, and meet death smiling when the time comes." It is a strong appeal, and the full ships which are now carrying British settlers to Canada convey a pretty strong impression that it is the kind of appeal to which the Britisher is at the present moment most inclined to listen. In the next number of the Monthly Review, by the way, Mr. Arnold Haultain, of Toronto, is to answer the question, "Who Should Emigrate to Canada." It is, of course, just the question which Mr. Preston, the Canadian Emigration Commissioner here, and Mr. Archer Baker and his Canadian Pacific staffs in London, Liverpool, and elsewhere throughout Europe are daily answering to the evident satisfaction of the enquirers.

MR. DEVLIN'S DEBUT.

Mr. Devlin has made his first appearance in the British House of Commons, and what more fitting than that this appearance should closely concern Canadian interests in the Imperial Assembly? Picking out the two Anglo-Canadian questions of greatest interest at the present moment, Mr. Devlin has this week asked Mr. Austen Chamberlain, as Postmaster-General, to declare himself upon the question of postal rates to Canada, and then turning to Mr. Chamberlain he asked the Colonial Secretary to declare himself on the subject of Canada's attitude towards the Alaskan Boundary Commission. Mr. Austen Chamberlain's answer to the question affecting postal rates to Canada was not at all what one would wish. He meets the request for a British response to Canada's reduction of the newspaper rate to England by the ingenious remark that "our present rates for newspapers and periodicals sent from this country to Canada are (except in the case of registered newspapers) the same as those charged for the transmission of printed matter within the United Kingdom." That little parenthesis "except in the case of registered newspapers" is, of course, a very large part of the Canadian case, for it is in order to secure the wider distribution of British newspapers in Canada that the British friends of the cause of reduction have been most active in this matter. Mr. Austen Chamberlain is good enough to say: "I should have been very glad if I could have adopted the Canadian rates," but he does not tell us in the whole of his answer why the British Post Office should not make the registered newspaper rate to Canada the same as the registered newspaper rate within the United Kingdom. That would be an Imperial move of high importance—a natural sequel to the Imperial Penny Postage concession, the value of which nobody now denies. The direction in which Mr. Austen Chamberlain is moving for some increase in the weight of printed matter now carried for a penny both within and without the United Kingdom. That will not, of course, meet the particular case in mind. What is desired is that an Englishman should be enabled to send his British newspaper to his son or his brother or his friend in Canada at the same rate that he would send it to any one in England. Canada will clearly have to push a little harder before the British Post Office yields this point. She cannot do better than get Mr. Austen Chamberlain to go to Canada to see for himself.

Mr. Devlin's second question on the subject of the Alaskan Boundary Commission conveys little information that has not already been published. It did, however, emphasize the fact already made known in cablegrams to the Star, though apparently not fully appreciated as yet in Canada, that the British Ministry did not feel entitled to convey to Washington the Canadian Government's protest against the selection of American representatives on the Commission. In the view of British Ministers, to have sent that protest to Washington would have been to establish a most awkward precedent. It is true that Canadian objections to the American Commissioners were based upon the claim that the jurists selected by the United States did not come within the description of persons specified in Article I. of the Treaty. But the British Government did not feel justified by the facts in following up the objection on that specific ground, while on the general question they felt the extreme difficulty of attempting to interfere with a foreign government in what was, after all, a domestic affair, namely the selection of their own spokesmen on their own side of an international tribune.

One other question raised in the House of Commons this week is of Canadian importance. We all know how extremely unsatisfactory is the present attitude of the War Office towards Canadian contractors for the supply of meat to the army. The question was raised by Canadian and Australasian Ministers at the Colonial Conference with very doubtful success. Mr. Brodrick and his military advisers will not evidently give way upon the point of including Colonial supplies in the meat contracts to the British army at home, but as regards the supply of meat to the British troops in South Africa they have made one concession. Mr. Brodrick stated in the House of Commons on Thursday that "steps will be taken in future by which it is to be hoped tenders can be called for three months in advance." This will, of course, obviate the recent accidents which practically shut Canadian contractors out of business altogether.

DOON ON THE CARNEGIE GIFTS

(Frae Oor Ain Correspondent.)

Glasgow, May 5.—There's heart-burnin' already ower the comin' o' the King, an' it's maybe as weel for the peace o' mind o' the guid folks o' Edinboro' that there isna a Royal visit wi' ilka new moon. The Toon Cooncillors—some o' them at least—had got their coort dresses specially made, an' noo it turns out that they arena to be asked to meet the King an' Queen except when they'll present an address in a fine silver box. This will be a' richt in its ain way, but what they wanted to get to was the levee, an' their wives thocht they wad get to the Queen's drawin' room, or reception, or whate'er it is ca'ed. But common Cooncilors are but sma' drink at King's levees, an' sae nothin' but Provosts hae been asked. Then at a meetin' o' the Toon Cooncil—after they kent they werna to be invited—they had a squabble o' a discussion aboot the cost o' a bonfire, an' ither signs o' rejoicin'. Ower here in Glasga, the only trouble is that the King is to drive thro' some o' the puirer pairts o' the city, an' the folk o' the swell streets are in an unca temper because they winna see him or hae an excuse for spendin' money on flags an' things. Even a King canna please a'body.

Wi' Sir Robert Menzies, Bart., o' that Ilk, there has passed awa' the only real auld Hielan' chief that was left after auld Cluny Macpherson. Sir Robert was fower score an' six, but to the last he was an active man, wearin' his kilt ilka day, an' stannin' up for his rights as a Hielan' laird against a' comers. He was a great man for the law, was Sir Robert, an' he was aye at ill micht agree wi' somebody ower a boundary, or a road, or the richt to fish in a loch, or somethin'. But he aye lived amang his ain folk up in Perthshire, the finest, baith in character an' in appearance, o' living clan chiefs, an' he is missed baith as a guid laird an' the latest o' a race that hae been famous in Scottish history. The maist I kent o 'Sir Robert was his handwritin'. I got a letter frae him aince, an' it was weeks 'afore I could answer it. I couldna read the name that was at the end o't, neither could onybody I kent, an' sae I had to wait until somethin' turned up—I dinna min' what—that let me ken wha to write to. His writin' was a caution.

There seems to be nae end to the writin' o' books an' articles on Thomas Carlyle an' his wife. A London man has published the "New Letters an' Memorials of Jane Welsh Carlyle," an' the book has made a bit o' a sensation. Ane o' the men wha wrote lives o' Carlyle laid maist o' the blame o' the trouble 'atween him an' his wife at his door, sayin' he was a cantankerous, ill-tempered, ill-mannered, auld Scotsman, that nae woman could put up wi'. That book threw a cloud ower some o' the years after he left this warl', an' exalted his wife into somethin' like a martyr. This new book shows that Mrs. Carlyle was aye encouragin' her man, an' helpin' him in his wark, but it shows as weel that she was pleased wi' her man, an' got nae usage frae him worth complainin' o'. Nae doot, Carlyle was, as his mither said, "gey ill to live wi'," but women wha marry geniuses may reckon on that.

The engineers o' Glasga hae done what seems to me a silly thing, but nae doot they ken their ain business best. Some fower thoosan' o' them are oot on strike because the maisters are reducin' their wages a farthin' an 'oor. The same reduction has been made a' ower the Clyde an' in the big shipbuildin' toons o' the east o' England, but nane o' the men are on strike except them wha wark in Clyde shops aboon Clydebank. Hoo they are to stan' oot against the maisters, especially as trade isna o' the best, naebody kens, but they're to try. They get only eightpence an 'oor as it is, which is less than ony ither trained men get on the Clydeside, an' it's ower bad to reduce them, but the maisters are dour, dour, an' I believe some o' them wad as soon close their doors as gie in to the men. That's why I think the men should tak' the reduction the noo, an' say naethin', but watch for the first chance o' gettin' it back. Only they're on strike already, an' there'll likely be some fun 'afore they're back at their wark.

We seem to be daft on the idea o' gettin' fine water supplies for a' the toons. In the west side o' Fife a lot o' the wee villages hae been at the authorities to gie them water frae some richt places, an' sae let them close up the auld village wells, that micht be guid eneuch 'afore the days o' sanitary inspectors, but winna dae noo. The authorities are thinkin' o' gettin' a common supply for as mony villages as are within a reasonable distance. They will likely get water frae the River Devon, an' it may cost them £60,000. St. Andrews needs as muckle extra water as will dae for 12,000 folk, each o' them usin' forty gallons a day (sic a drink!) an' it is plannin' hoo it's to be got. Crieff opened fine new water warks the ither day. They cost £12,000. The authorities o' the Valley o' Ayr say that the villages o' Coylton, Drongan, Trabboch, Auchbank, Mossblown, Tarbolton an' ithers are a disgrace in the maitter o' water, an' they're plannin' hoo to get somethin' like decent supplies. What wi' new electric licht schemes an' new water schemes, an' ae thing or anither, the wee toons are keepin' themsel's weel to the front.

Principal Story, o' Glasga University, has an awkward habit o' sometimes sayin' oot in that gruff, what-care-I-for-onybody style o' his, exactly what he thinks, an' when he indulges in this habit somebody aye feels as gin he'd got a slap in the lug. This time it's Andrew Carnegie an' his gift to the universities that has been sufferin'. He says that in the session just closed the Carnegie students were in the majority in his university, which wasna a thing to be prood o'. It pointed either to the loss o' that independence that has aye been a pairt o' Scottish life, or to a rush in the direction o' the universities by mere numbers, whether fit or no. It wasna help to the students they wanted, he said, but help to the universities themsel's, sae as to mak' them better able to teach the students that cam' their way. This seems like lookin' a gift horse in the mooth, but there's a guid bit o' truth in it, an' that Principal Story had the pluck to say it shows that we arena just sae daft ower Mr. Carnegie's money as he himsel' may think. In fac', I've noticed lately that twa-three places hae declined straight to tak' a free library on his conditions. They wad raither pay for it themsel's, an' hae it o' their ain.

The Granite City is to be the headquarters o' a new idea for searchin' the Northern Seas in order to fin' oot hoo the fish live an' move an' hae their bein'. The Scottish Fishery Board [illegible] an' discover whether the number o' fish is gettin' less, an' gin that is so, what is the cause, an' they are, forbye, to mak' scientific experiments o' different kinds. They hae fitted up a trawler wi' a' kinds o' instruments, an' put a captain an' 14 o' a crew on board, as weel as learned men to look after the experiments. The Goldseeker, that's the ship's name, is to wark maistly aboot the Shetlands, the Faroe Islands, an' the Hebrides. Gin the Goldseeker can prove that trawlers are spoilin' the fishin' for a' ither boats an' destroyin' lots o' young fish that wad hae been big some day, the line fishermen will be pleased. They blame the trawlers for a' their troubles.

The twa vacant toon clerkships o' Glasga an' Dundee are causin' some talk amang the lawyers. Each o' them is a fine job, an' big men, some Sheriffs, nae less, hae been mentioned as applicants. Dundee's toon clerkship is vacant because o' the death o' Sir Thomas Thornton, an' Glasga's because o' the retiral o' Sir James Marwick. They're worth a guid bit past £1,000 a year, each o' them. It's a pity I didna think on it sooner. I wad hae been a Toon Clerk.

Captain Monro, wha inspects the police ilka noo an' again, thinks the forces o' the country could be improved a lot. He wad hae fewer wee burgh forces o' a dizzen o' men each. Twa-three o' these should, he thinks, be thrown thigither, or they should be joined to the coonties. Which isna a bad idea, but he'll fin' it hard to carry oot. The wee burghs are terrible particular aboot their richts an' their privileges an' their dignities, an' withoot their ain policemen they wad think themsel's naebodies. A bailie o' a place wi' seven bobbies is a far bigger man than the Lord Provost o' Glasga.

The Hielan' Societies' an' the men o' Ross-shire are collectin' money for a memorial to Sir Hector Macdonald, an' at the same time there are columns an' columns o' letters in the papers on the questions o' whether he was sic a great man as we thocht, an' whether or no the Hielan' Brigade hae onything to be prood o' at Magersfontein. Some say that Scottish sentiment made him a bigger man that he should be, an' that the kilties fairly broke doon at Magersfontein; an' ithers say he has ne'er got his due, an' was fechtin' a' his life against the prejudice an' tyranny o' the higher powers; wha didna want a man frae the ranks to come up amang them; an' that as for Magersfontein it was simply anither Flodden, whaur, the generalship—which was English—was deplorable, an' the fechtin' o' the men gran'. This, I think, is nearest the truth, tho' naebody will deny that Scottish sentiment an' enthusiasm sometimes dae carry us a wee bit ower far when we talk o' the doin's o' the Hielan' sodgers. The farther awa' we get frae Magersfontein an' the ither blunders o' the war, the mair the blame seems to be shiftin' on to the Government at hame an' the big Generals on the field. By an' bye, it'll be seen that there was little or naethin' wrang wi' the men wha did the fechtin'.

ANOTHER DREAM OF STEAD'S.

London, May 16.—W. T. Stead's Review of Reviews suggests that King Edward should break all records and visit the United States in 1904. Mr. Stead thinks the St. Louis Exposition would furnish an excellent pretext, if any is wanted. The Review of Reviews adds:

"If King Edward does not take the initiative he may find himself forestalled by the Kaiser, or, incredible though it seem, even the Czar."

POOR DIGESTION.

RENDERS THE LIFE OF THE DYSPEPTIC MISERABLE.

Food Becomes Distasteful and a Feeling of Weariness, Pain and Depression Ensues.

From Le Sorelois, Sorel, Que.

Of the diseases afflicting mankind dyspepsia is one of the worst to endure. Its victims find life almost a burden. Food becomes distasteful; they suffer from severe pains in the stomach; sometimes excessive heart palpitation, and a general feeling of weakness and depression. Though this disease is one of the most distressing, it is one which, if the proper remedy is employed, can be readily cured. Thousands throughout this country bear testimony to the efficacy of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills as a never failing cure. Among them is Mrs. Adolphe A. Latrousse, a well known and highly esteemed lady residing at Sorel, Que. She says: "For two years I was a constant sufferer from bad digestion and its accompanying symptoms. Food became distasteful and I grew very weak. I suffered much from pains in the stomach and head. I could not obtain restful sleep and became unfit for all housework. I tried several medicines without finding the least relief and I continually grew worse until in the end I would vomit everything I ate. I had almost given up hope of ever being well again when one day I read of a case similar to mine cured through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I determined to give these pills a trial, and am happy to-day that I did so, as by the time I had taken eight or nine boxes my strength had returned, the pains which had so long racked me disappeared, my stomach would digest food properly and I had fully regained my old time health, and have not since had any return of the trouble."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a purely tonic medicine, and, unlike all purgatives, do not weaken the system, but give life and energy with every dose. They are a certain cure for anaemia, dizziness, heart troubles, rheumatism, sciatica, indigestion, partial paralysis, St. Vitus dance and the functional ailments that make the lives of so many women an almost constant source of misery. Sold by dealers in medicine, or sent post paid at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing the Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

OUR IRISH LETTER

Irish Banking Statistics Show Country Is More Prosperous.

THE BIG AUTOMOBILE RACE

Every Day the Interest is Increasing—Regulations and Arrangements—The King's Visit.

(From the Special Correspondent of the Montreal Star.)

Dublin, May 4. — Irish banking statistics would go to show that in spite of all that is said of the poverty of rural Ireland, there is plenty of money in the country, and it is increasing, not decreasing. At the end of the year 1901 there was lodged in the joint stock banks of Ireland the sum of £42,923,000 in deposits and cash balances, while at the close of 1902 the sum stood at £44,450,000. In the same way the lodgements in the Irish Post Office savings banks had risen from £8,438,000 in 1901, to £9,048,000 in 1902.

Every day the interest in the Gordon-Bennett motor race is increasing more and more. The great trouble will be that hotelkeepers and others will charge such prices that visitors to view the race will be quite disgusted. Messrs. Spencer Brothers, the well known aeronauts, are making arrangements for sending up a captive balloon, from which a fine view can be had of the contest. This balloon will be 36 feet in diameter, its capacity being over 21,000 cubic feet, and the car will only carry three passengers, so the favoured trio will have to pay pretty smartly for their bird's-eye view of the race.

The O'Conor Don, who is taking such a leading part in the landlord's convention for the discussion of the Land Bill, is one of the few descendants of the old Irish chieftains who have kept hold of their estates, owning over 10,000 acres in Roscommon, besides a large estate in Co. Sligo. The other Irish gentlemen entitled to use the coveted title of "The" are The MacDermot (Prince of Coolavin), The O'Grady, The O'Donoghue of the Glens, The McGillycuddy of the Reeks; The McDermott Roe, The O'Donovan, The O'Morchoe. The last of The O'Gorman Mahons died lately. The heads of the O'Kelly and O'Clery also claim the title of "The."

The Lord-Lieutenant, the Duke of Connaught, and a large number of distinguished visitors were present at Leopardstown races last Saturday. Racing was of a very sensational character, especially in the international steeplechase. Eleven horses started for this event, but only two finished the course, nine falling. The winner was Mr. Hall's H.R.H., but an objection was lodged, seeking that the race should be declared void and run over again, as it was found it had taken place over a two-and-a-half miles course instead of over two-and-a-quarter miles as specified in the articles.

The Moody-Manners Opera Company concluded a very successful engagement at the Theatre Royal, Dublin, on Saturday of last week. At the close of the performance of "Maritana," Mr. Manners announced that his company had offered £250 each for two operas—one by a home composer, and the other by a foreign composer. A number of competitors had sent in compositions, some of them being Irish, showing that Irishmen had not lost their talent for music. Mr. Manners said that it was the intention to produce the two winning operas on the next visit of the company to Dublin, which will take place next Christmas.

A curious incident occurred at Bandon (Co. Cork) lately, and it has caused a lot of discussion and some indignation. In the graveyard attached to Kilbrogan Church a tombstone, in the form of a Celtic cross, was erected over a grave in which a Roman Catholic named Appelbe was buried. The rector and churchwardens objected to this monument, which was placed in the graveyard without their permission or sanction. Last Monday, the vestry of the parish, having consulted a solicitor, had the tombstone removed and placed in a lane close by, where it now lies covered with sacking. It is probable that the lawyers will have some work over the matter.

The Mayor of Clonmel (Alderman Thomas Morrissey) is at loggerheads with the Government in consequence of his refusal to take the judicial oath necessary to qualify him to act as a magistrate. The Mayor objects to do so, as he asserts this would be the surrendering of an ancient privilege of the borough. The Mayors of Clonmel, he holds, were magistrates under charter for some centuries, and when the Municipal Act was passed in 1840 the charter rights were preserved. Since then no Mayor has ever been asked to take the oath, a simple declaration being all that was required. A protest against the action of the Government was passed unanimously.

Strenuous efforts are being made in Limerick to obtain a commutation of the capital sentence passed on Private Roche, of the Leinster Regiment, for shooting a comrade in the recent riot at Pretoria. Roche is a native of Limerick, and his relatives and friends are doing all they can in the matter. The City High Sheriff has got up a petition, which is being largely signed, praying that the death sentence passed by the court-martial may not be carried out.

Evictions in Ireland of late have been very few as compared with bygone times. The number of tenants who were evicted under the Act of 1896, during the quarter ending March 31 last, was only 36. Nine tenants were evicted under other processes of law, and 18 tenants were evicted not at the suit of the landlord. During the quarter mentioned, 580 tenants were converted into caretakers, and 19 other tenancies were also determined.

A meeting of the magistrates of the Athy district, through which a great part of the Gordon-Bennett motor race will be run, was held this week, for the purpose of considering whether it would be advisable to issue occasional licenses for the sale of intoxicating drinks on the day of the race, when the following was resolved: "That it is our unanimous opinion that it would be most dangerous and most undesirable that any occasional licenses should be granted to any parties in this Petty Sessions district for the day of the motor race." A most sensible resolution, as there will be quite enough danger without giving opportunities for more.

The date of the visit of their Majesties the King and Queen to Ireland has not yet been definitely fixed, but the general opinion is that it will be somewhere about the 14th or 15th of July. If a date about mid-July is not found convenient, the Royal visit may probably be postponed until the middle of August, which would bring the Royal visitors here for the best and busiest time of the year in Dublin—Horse Show week.

An appeal has been issued to the Irish people for funds on behalf of the Irish Nationalist members of Parliament. It is in the form of an address from the United Irish League to its branches throughout Ireland and elsewhere, urging them to start at once the collection of a Parliamentary fund for 1903. The appeal points out that in order to ensure a full and regular attendance of members it is necessary, in view of the likelihood that the Irish party may once more control the destinies of whatever Ministry is in power, that generous subscriptions should be made at once.

Captain Donelan, M.P., having asked the Chief Secretary for Ireland if his attention had been directed to the number of emigrants leaving Ireland almost daily for America, and whether in view of this rapid depopulation of the country, and the difficulty of getting labourers, Government would provide some remedy by dealing with it in the Irish Land Bill. Mr. Wyndham, in reply, said that there was lately, a small, but gratifying, decrease in the number of emigrants leaving Ireland. In the first quarter of 1901 the figures were 4,974; in 1902, 4,395, and in 1903, 4,153. The matter would probably be dealt with by the Committee on the Land Bill.

The Journal of the Royal Society of Antiquaries of Ireland for this month has a very interesting article on "Irish Crowns." An ancient gold crown found at the Devil's Bit, County Tipperary, in 1692, is described. It was sold to a Mr. Comerford, of Danganmore, Co. Kilkenny.

During the King's visit to Ireland His Majesty will hold a Chapter of the Knights of St. Patrick at Dublin Castle. It is also said that the King will visit the Lord Lieutenant at Rockingham, the new residence of the Viceroy in the County Roscommon. The Viceregal household are moving into Rockingham in May. Lady Dudley has been busily engaged for some time past purchasing artistic furniture for Rockingham, which is, however, already luxuriously furnished. It is also rumoured that the King may do a lot of motoring during his stay in Ireland.

These hoods are found only on the most expensive instruments. We offer this Glass, not only as the equal of Glasses sold by other dealers at three times our price, but for all ordinary purposes as the best Glass that can be obtained anywhere at any price, and, to prove to you what a great bargain we are offering, we make the following liberal proposition. Fred. Chase, Loch Broom, N.S., said: "I received the Field Glasses to-day and I am highly pleased with them. They are a wonderful bargain at the price, $3.55, and are well worth $10.00." A. W. Hawkins, Mt Lehman, B.C., said: "I received the Field Glasses and am perfectly satisfied with them. I cannot speak too highly of them. They show wonderful value for the price," Andrew Reid, Pinkerton, Ont., said: "I received the Field Glasses in perfect condition. Annual Inspections.

The annual inspections of the Fusiliers, the Scots and the 65th Regiments will probably take place on the Champ de Mars before Lieut.-Col Gordon on Saturday, June 6th.

Veterans to Meet.

There will be a meeting of the South African Veterans' Association held in the Drill Hall, on Wednesday evening, May 20th at 8.15 o'clock. It is hoped all members will be present.

Heirs Wanted.

If the widow or descendants of Pte. W. Duhamel, late of the 2nd R. C. R. I., will call at the office of Col. Gordon, district officer commanding, at the drill hall, she or they will hear something of advantage.

Highland Cadets.

Major Lydon has issued the following orders to the Highland Cadet battalion for next week: Monday, 17th, recruits and special class. Wednesday, 19th, battalion march-out and skirmishing drill; bugle band to attend. Saturday, 22nd, recruit drill and special drill.

New Bugles for the Vics.

Steps are being taken to provide the bugle corps of the Victoria Rifles with bugles similar to those which are in use in the bugle corps of the Queen's Own Rifles, Toronto. It is hoped to have the new instruments on hand by the beginning of next year's drill season.

Vics' Inspection.

The annual inspection of the 3rd Victoria Rifles will take place on the Champ de Mars before Col. Gordon, D. O. C., on Saturday afternoon, May 23rd. At the close of the afternoon's work the regiment will entrain for Brockville, where it will spend the 24th and 25th.

On Pleasure Bent.

On Saturday of next week four of the city's regiments and the Battery leave for outside points to spend the 24th and 25th. The Fusiliers will go to Ogdensburg, N. Y.; the Victoria Rifles to Brockville; the Royal Scots and the Field Battery to Kingston; and the 65th Regiment to St. Hyacinthe. The boys of the different corps have well earned their trips this year, and it is to be hoped that they will be pleasant and enjoyable to all concerned.

Said Good-Bye to No. 3.

A pleasant affair took place in the Victoria Rifles Armoury on Tuesday evening last, when the members of No. 3 company were entertained at dinner by Captain Starke. During the evening Capt. Starke was presented with a bracelet watch by the officers and men of the company. Capt. Hiam presided, and among those present were Capt. Sully (the first captain of No. 3), and Lieut.-Col Starke, who at one time was also in command of the company. The dinner was a nicely gotten up affair, and the programme which followed was of considerable merit.

Capt. Starke resigned the command of No. 3 a few weeks ago to assume the junior majority in the regiment. After the next Military Gazette has appeared he will be known as Major Starke. He is one of the popular officers in the Vics, and his retirement from No. 3 company will be greatly felt by the officers and men.

With the Fusiliers.

At a recent meeting of No. 8 Company it was decided to form a company association, the men having approved of a suggestion that each member of the company should divert $2 of his annual pay to the support of such an organization. Col.-Sergt. Bales occupied the chair, and Sergt. Richardson acted as secretary.

A Boom in Artillery.

At the present moment artillery matters are very much to the fore in the military world of Canada. A special course of instruction commenced at the Royal School of Artillery, Kingston, on Tuesday last, and continued until and inclusive of yesterday. This course was for officers of the Canadian Field Artillery. The officers who attended the course were lieutenant-colonels of the Field Artillery on the regimental lists, adjutants of brigade divisions and officers commanding field batteries. The syllabus of instruction was both thorough and exceedingly comprehensive. It embraces a course of lectures dealing with the following subjects: Gunnery, fire discipline, observation of fire, map reading and intelligence during route marching. Battery drill and manoeuvres occupied four hours of each day; stables consumed half an hour, and the lectures already referred to an hour and a half—in all six hours' steady work each of the four days allotted to the course.

The Militia and Strikes.

Ottawa Journal: "During the past week there has been considerable just comment on the calling out of militia to do police work during strikes. The comment, needless to say, has been very unfavourable to the practice. The tendency by civic councils and other corporations to appeal for the protection of the militia in event of a little disturbance has so grown of late that it threatens to assume the standard of a common practice. When a man joins the militia he does not do so with the intention of becoming a policeman; he does so for the purpose of securing a course of training which will fit him for that strife which sometimes arises between nations, known as war. He, by the provisions supplied by the country, may secure that course of training without loss of time to himself or to his employer, but he generally devotes the hours of recreation at his disposal to this work, and therefore makes that sacrifice. When a man joins the militia his employer does not understand that he is to be deprived of that man's services at any time some other employer's men may wish to go on strike, and he naturally kicks when the man is carried away per force as it were. The employer who loses the services of a valuable man for a week or so when he can least spare him will not be likely to feel kindly towards the militia nor will he likely allow another empoye on the premises who is liable to be so called away. If he is an unreasonable employer, he will often, unless influence is brought to bear on him, dispense with the services of the militia man, and so this young man, when he returns from doing ordinary police duty, finds himself out of a job. The other employers and the other employes observe, and who is injured? Is it not the militia? Is it not the standing of the country? It certainly is not the city or private corporation whose very howls called these employes away from their employers to lose their jobs. They do not care a whit—their purpose has been served. The long and the short of the whole story is that the militia should never be called upon to do the duty of police. Cities have the power to swear in special constables when they require them, and they should do so.

"There is only one occasion when the militia should be called out, and that is in case of a riot. Then as soon as the riot is quelled, they should be dismissed at once. This idea of having the militia do ordinary patrol duty at the scene of strikes should be sat upon with a thud. It will bring the militia to that position where they will not be able to recruit at all, and then who suffers?

"The new militia bill should reorganize the whole method of aiding the civil power. The right of calling out the citizen soldiery should be rigidly confined to the Federal Government. The principle should be clearly laid down that the employment of the military is to be restricted to tumults far more serious than the ordinary strike riot."

Royal Irish Rifles.

An impressive service was conducted in Down Cathedral recently by Dr. Maguire, Dean of Down, in connection with the dedication of a tablet errected by the officers, non-commissioned officers and men of the Royal South Down Militia in memory of their comrades who died in South Africa. The tablet, which is of brass, mounted on a dark background of polished Belgian marble, is placed on the north-east pier of the vestibule, at the western end of the Cathedral, parallel with the memorial erected in 1891, after the Egyptian campaign. The tablet is bordered with shamrock on a dark crimson ground, in bas-relief. The crest of the regiment surmounts the inscription panels, the apex having the imperial crown. On the lower position is the Egyption sphinx, while the central aspect bears the Irish harp with winged figure. Between the crown and harp the motto, "Quis separabit," is engraved on a scroll. A circled band has the pendant bugle, with "Royal Irish Rifles" in Gothic type. On the dexter side of the crest the words "South Africa" are engraved, and the sinister bears the dates, "1900-1902." The carving is in low relief on a scoriated ground. Marginal lines of coloured enamel enclose the panels, on which appears an inscription.

A Veteran Buried.

Talks With Army Veterans.

Probably the oldest regimental chaplain in Canada at the present time is the Rev. Canon Ellegood, rector of the Church of St. James the Apostle, in this city, and chaplain to the 3rd Regiment Victoria Rifles.

Canon Ellegood became chaplain of the Vics. on the organization of the Victoria Volunteer Rifles in 1862. He has continued in that capacity ever since, preaching at least once annually to the regiment.

The reverend gentleman accompanied the regiment to the front during the Fenian Raids, and participated in the battle of Eccles Hill. Wherever he now appears in regimentals he wears the Fenian Raid medal, which he won in that campaign.

Canon Ellegood is a lovable old man and the boys of the Vics. regard with pride his long and uninterrupted connection with the regiment. That the Canon takes an intense interest in the men of his corps has been frequently evidenced during the past few years, but it was never more clearly shown than on the occasion of the recent 'longshoremen's strike, when, in spite of the dust and heat of the wharves, he visited the different companies daily, cheering the boys on in their disagreeable work, and enlivening the moments with interesting sketches of many important matters connected with the history of the regiment. It was only a few days ago that the venerable priest conducted a service for the Vics. in the Allan sheds at the wharf. It was one of the most notable services he had ever officiated at.

Canon Ellegood comes of an old military and United Empire Loyalist family. His grandfather was a native of Princess County, Virginia. When the American Rebellion broke out he raised a regiment at his own expense and commanded it. He was taken prisoner, but afterwards regained his liberty through exchange. When the war was over and the British or loyalist cause was lost, he emigrated to New Brunswick, where, a few years later, he who afterwards became Canon Ellegood was born.

From his birth until the present moment the latter has always been associated with either the British Army or the Canadian Militia. In the old days when the Imperial troops garrisoned Montreal, many of the officers, including the Duke of Connaught, Lord Wolseley, Gen. Buller, Lord Metcalfe, Lord Russell, Gen. Williams, (of Kars), and others quite as prominent attended the church of which he was and is still rector. The present church of St. James the Apostle, over which he has presided for so many years past, was in fact, built on the old recreation ground on which the British officers used to play cricket.

In one way or another, therefore, Canon Ellegood has always been identified with the Army. No more ardent supporter has the Canadian Militia than he, and no better friend have the Vics. than their venerable chaplain.

He was the first and only chaplain of the Vics. He was present at the meeting which resulted in the organisation of the regiment. He thus describes the steps which led to the formation of the corps:

"The Victoria Rifle Regiment was formed at an exciting period in the history of Canada. The startling declaration that two men, chiefs in the Southern Confederacy, were taken by force from the deck of a British passenger ship with the British flag waving over the deck and cast into a fortress in the United States in direct contravention of international law, startled the whole country and especially the city of Montreal. Within a week after the news has arrived from England to get ready, four hundred of the young men of Montreal paraded in as a regiment, and that evening of that parade witnessed the birth of the Victoria Rifles of Canada. It will be in the recollection of some that placards were posted on the walls of our streets bearing these words: 'Free sale of fools.' The places and homes). These words now form the motto of the regiment. The colours of the regiment were placed two years ago in the Church of St. James the Apostle. They were presented to the regiment by the ladies of Montreal at a notable gathering on the then cricket ground on a portion of which my church now stands. Col. Osborne Smith was in command and the colours were handed to the regiment by General Williams, the hero of Kars, after their consecration by Bishop Fulford. I assisted His Lordship at the ceremony."

Canon Ellegood has always taken a great interest in matters pertaining to the city of Montreal. The following will give some idea of the sterling worth of the man and the difficulties he has had to face. The experiences related are told in his own words:

"My ministerial life in Griffintown and Point St. Charles extended through a period of sixteen years. During that time my experience of the floods which periodically inundated that part of the town was unique. I have a vivid recollection of the angry waters suddenly surrounding our church during the time of evening service. Before we were aware of our position the water was some two or three feet deep and rising rapidly. The service was instantly stopped and the congregation asked to remain till I had time to examine and take in the situation. After doing so I immediately returned and advised them to leave the church as quickly and quietly as possible, carriages having been provided as far as possible to take them to higher parts of the town.

"The late Rev. John Torrance was my co-worker at the time. We waited till all the congregation had left the church and reached places of safety. We then started to wade throught the swelling waters. The night was pitch dark, the wind howling, we were both tall and tolerably strong men. He had his little boy George with him, whom he put on his shoulder. We then walked side by side till we came to Bonevepture street, where we soon reached dry ground. After getting on terra firma we separated, I going to see the mayor to get an order to send the police down to help the people to save their live stock. Afterwards I ran home to and took a hot bath and was none the worse for my adventure. Next day I took a boat and carried bread to some of the people who had taken refuge in the second storey of their houses. I will never forget the cheery way in which they bore their misfortunes and their great kindness to one another. The families in the upper portion of the house supplied accommodations to those in the lower and ministered to their wants as far as they were able."

Canon Ellegood has always been a lover of out-door sports, and played golf, tennis, football, and cricket. He has also been an enthusiastic curler and expert swimmer. In his early life he was considered delicate, and medical men prophesied that he would not live beyond a certain age, yet he outlived all the prophets. Of the clergymen engaged in ministerial work in this city when he began his pastoral work, not one is living to-day. Archbishop Bond began his labours in Montreal after Canon Ellegood. When questioned some years ago as to how he accounted for his then excellent health, he replied:

"By out-door exercise and simplicity of diet. I had been pretty nearly poisoned during my ministration to the immigrants in the ship fever sheds at Point St. Charles, and it was only by the utmost care that I managed to get the germs out of my system. My advice to all young ministers and young men is to take lots of out-door exercise. Engage in out-door games and keep the body in a healthy condition. Remember that the body is the casket which contains the immortal soul and that the soul and body interact one upon another."

A NEW SCHEDULE HAS BEEN PUT INTO FORCE.

It is expected that the interruption in the C.P.R. tracks at Frank, Alberta, will be removed within a fortnight. In the meantime local trains are running from points on either side of that ill-fated town. Each day strenous efforts are made to open up communication along the Crow's Nest line over the recent landslide.

A hastily constructed waggon road has been finished around the fallen rock, and, in order that the transfer may be done in daylight, a temporary new schedule has been put into force and will remain until further notice.

REV. J. R. DOBSON LECTURED LAST NIGHT ON "MERCHANT OF VENICE"

On Thursday a scholarly lecture on "The Merchant of Venice" brought to a close the course of lectures which this year was given under the auspices of the Protestant Teachers' Association, in the auditorium of the High School. The lecture was given by the Rev. J. R. Dobson, B.A., B.D., and in moving a cordial vote of thanks at its close Mr. George Murray read the prologue which he wrote for the "Merchant of Venice," when it was presented in Montreal some years ago. Mr. Kneeland presided, and there was a good attendance. The officers for the coming year were elected.

Mr. Dobson, in his introduction, drew a comparison between Dante and Shakespeare, showing Dante to be the poet of the soul and of the invisible world, and Shakespeare the poet of the mind of man and his feelings and passions. The lecturer then gave a brief sketch of the story of the play, and an analysis of the leading characters, beginning with Antonio, whose strongest characteristics were his melancholy disposition and his capacity for friendship. Of Portia the lecturer said she was remarkable for her sweetness, dignity, intellectual power and regard for religion. Mr. Dobson paid particular attention to the character of Shylock and his hatred of Antonio, pointing out that under different circumstances he might have been a noble man. The lecture ended with an analysis of the trial scene, showing the arguments brought to bear upon Shylock. The Duke of Venice appealed to his avarice, Portia to his love of mercy and covetousness, and Bassanio to his desire to have the law broken.

SIR THOMAS WILL NOT RETURN TO THE CITY UNTIL JUNE.

Sir Thomas Shaughnessy is not expected to return to the city until early in June. After having given evidence before the Royal Commission, which in British Columbia is sifting the facts connected with an alleged land grant scandal, Sir Thomas will spend a couple of weeks inspecting the lines of the Canadian Pacific Railway between Vancouver and Montreal.

A RUSH OF SHIPPING TO PORT OF MONTREAL.

Since the opening of navigation, on April 12, there has been an unprecedented rush of shipping to the port of Montreal. To date the number of boats that have arrived reaches 77. The clearances already total 45.

In past years there was a rush at the beginning of the season. There was nothing, however, like the present influx of vessels. All sorts of ships, from the proud liner to the dilatory tramp, are this year making Montreal a port of call. Appearances point to a continuance of the high pressure.

Mr. Saucier's Concert.

The concert given by Mr. Joseph Saucier and his fellow-artists in the Windsor Hall Thursday was a complete success. The large and distinguished audience present was most appreciative, and each number was encored. Mr. Saucier himself was in excellent voice, his resonant baritone being heard to splendid advantage in his several selections. The last number on the programme, Godard's "Chanson de Juillet," was sung in excellent style, and created quite a furore.

Much praise is due to Mlle Landry, whose method and voice were much appreciated. Messrs. Renaud and Dubois gave much satisfaction also in their instrumental selections.

The Deering plant of the International Harvester Company, Chicago, which has been closed ten days by a strike, will resume operations, an agreement between the employes and the company having been reached.

TWO IMMENSE LOCOMOTIVES FOR THE CANADIAN PACIFIC.

It was intimated at the headquarters of the C. P. R. yesterday that the company was now in possession of two of the most powerful locomotives in the world. They will be used in ore hauling from the Phoenix camp to the Granby smelter on the C. and W. divisions. The engines work on the cog system, so that a train may be let down the steepest grades with the utmost safety.

The engines were built at the Shay Engine Works, Schenectady, N. Y.

The dimensions of these monsters of locomotion may be judged from the fact that on the track the length of the engines is seventy feet over all. On a level track the hauling capacity of each engine is stated to be sufficient to draw a train of loaded cars a mile and a half in length.

The steepest bit of track on the entire system of the C. P. R. is that included in the Phoenix spur from the C. and W. line. The spur leaves the line at Eholt and it was a feat in engineering contortion to get a track up the steep grade of seven or eight miles to the camp away up on the mountain side. But the ores of the Phoenix camp are very valuable, and within a small area several of the biggest producing mines in the province are located. Since the road was built the amount of ore shipped weekly has been steadily increasing and the equipment of the branch with more powerful engines has for some time been before the company. The arrival of these two monsters of the rail has more than doubled the hauling capacity of the branch.

IMPROVEMENTS TO MAIN LINE OF C. P. R.

Word was received at the headquarters of the C.P.R., in this city, yesterday, from Mr. W. Leonard, the assistant general manager, to the effect that he had just completed a tour of inspection on the western division along with Superintendent Brady, of the central division.

A number of improvements in the central division, which had already been determined upon, he intimated would be commenced all over the division at once. Eighteen new sidings are to be built between Winnipeg and Regina. Construction gangs for the laying of the steel and the grading of these sidings will be sent out at once. These sidings will be completed by the time the crop of 1903 will be ready to move and it will greatly facilitate the movement and prevent holding of trains for any great length of time.

Sidings will also be put in between Kirkella and the Elkhorn. The new Kirkella branch, on which steel has been laid towards Saskatoon and Battleford, will thus have relief from any danger of blockading the line at the junction of the main line. Now sidings are also to be built between Brandon and Kemnay for the same purpose, and it is likely that new elevators and loading platforms will be erected there.

Relative to yard improvements, Mr. Leonard says: "All of our yards in the central division are to be enlarged. Work in the Winnipeg yard is to be started at once. Of course we cannot do the work here that we first intended owing to the fact that the agreement with the city has been cancelled. The yards will be greatly enlarged, however, toward the western end. We cannot do any changing where the city streets are in the way, though that work was among our greatest improvements. All our yards over the west are to be enlarged and improved."

Pleaded Not Guilty.

John McGlade, the expressman, pleaded not guilty yesterday when brought before Judge Lafontaine. McGlade is the young man who is charged with breaking into a store on St. Lawrence street and stealing therefrom about $30 worth of goods. He will be tried next Tuesday.

PRESIDENT COMMERCIAL CLUB

OF LOUISIANA, SAYS!

"THERE IS NO FINER MEDICINE THAN PE-RU-NA"

Suffered With Kidney and Liver Trouble for Twelve Years—Pe-ru-na Cured Him —Feels Better Than for Twenty Years.

Hon. William Watson Washburn, president of the Louisiana Commercial Club, and a very well known man of New Orleans, La., writes from 637 Canal street:

"I am satisfied that there is not a finer medicine placed before the public to-day than Peruna. I have been troubled for nearly twelve years with kidney and liver trouble, and at times I have been a pretty sick man, unable to attend to my duties. I had about made up my mind that no medicine could help me, when one of your booklets was brought to my office, which I read in a leisure hour. I then decided to give Peruna a trial, and found that I had at last secured the right medicine for me. For two months I used it faithfully and then felt so well—I was like a young man once more. This was over a year ago and I have not had any trouble since. Although I am in the seventies I feel better and more active than I did thirty years ago."—W. W. WASHBURN.

Tried Other Remedies in Vain.

Mr. E. F. Post, 138 Bleecker street, New York City, writes:

"Catarrh has troubled me for some years past. I read of the cures effected by Peruna in the newspapers and after having tried other remedies in vain, got complete relief from your remedy. I have no hesitation in recommending Peruna to those who suffer from catarrh."—E. F. Post.

Mr. Post was for three years, 1896, 1897 and 1898, a member of the New York Assembly. He is now giving his whole time to the insurance business and holds a responsible position under the John Hancock Insurance Co., of Boston. His office is at 138 Bleecker street, and his residence at 128 W. Thirty-sixth street.

Pe-ru-na of Value in Kidney Trouble.

Mr. H. M. Rice, 801 Elliott Square, Buffalo, N.Y., is secretary of the Pan-American College Students' Association.

"I endorse Peruna because I have found it of value for stomach or kidney troubles.

W. W. WASHBURN
PRESIDENT LOUISIANA COMMERCIAL CLUB

I was cured in fourteen days of a severe case of catarrh of the stomach which had left me weak and nervous.

"I am now as well and strong as any man could wish to be, and enjoy good health, thanks to its daily use.

"Several young men of my acquaintance who have suffered with stomach trouble, liver and kidney disorders, have been cured by Peruna, so I feel convinced of its merits."—H. M. Rice.

Liver Complaint Resulting From a Cold.

Miss Jessie F. Podmore, Saranac Lake, N.Y., is president of the Saranac Woman's Athletic Club. She writes:

"Three years ago I had a severe attack of liver complaint which originated from a neglected cold. My system was clogged up, and finally my liver became affected. I had severe headaches, backaches, and lack of vitality soon told on my nervous system.

"Peruna proved my true friend, and five bottles completely restored my health and former vigour. I was very much surprised and am now a firm friend and strong believer in your medicine.

"Several of my friends who have suffered with stomach derangements and catarrh have also been speedily cured."—Jessie Podmore.

From time immemorial cathartics and diuretics have been used as the proper remedies for liver and kidney diseases. If a man has anything the matter with his liver, give him a cathartic (cholagogue), so the doctors say, and so the people say. If the kidneys do not act properly, give a diuretic; so the doctors say, so most people say. Thus it is the liver and kidneys are prodded and whipped into greater activity every time their functions flag.

Such people do not seem to understand that there is any such disease as catarrh of the liver, and catarrh of the kidneys. Cathartics and diuretics only aggravate catarrh of the liver and kidneys. Peruna is neither a cathartic nor diuretic. Peruna is a catarrh remedy. This explains why it is that Peruna cures a great number of liver and kidney diseases in which the usual remedies fail.

It is worse than useless to prescribe cathartics for catarrh of the liver. It is worse than useless to prescribe diuretics for catarrh of the kidneys. Such remedies only irritate, and make matters worse. Peruna cures such cases promptly and permanently.

Peruna cures catarrh wherever it lurks in the system, whether of the head, nose, throat, lungs, stomach, kidneys, liver or pelvic organs.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case, and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Letters to the Editor

GROWTH OF QUEEN'S.

To the Editor of The Montreal Star:

Sir,—In your columns on Saturday, when referring to certain Canadian universities, you allude to Queen's as "the much smaller institution." Situated, certainly, in one of the smaller and yet restful cities of the Dominion, away from the din of business, Queen's has had few opportunities of its work becoming known to the public, and has, as a consequence, shared in but a very modest degree the financial prosperity which has been the lot of its two sister institutions in Montreal and Toronto. Far from being envious on this account, it is deeply interested in all educational problems, and thus rejoices in this prosperity which McGill and University Colleges are having, and in the great work which is being done at both.

It is right, however, that the public should know what Queen's is doing, and for this reason I mention that during the session just closed there were in all faculties 860 registered students, or, allowing for registration in two faculties, a net number of 853. Of these, there were actually registered in Arts 502.

Although this number may be greater than those in Arts in either McGill or University College, no men are more ready than the authorities of Queen's to recognise that a college must depend for reputation not on the numbers, but on the quality of its students. Therefore, in its spacious new buildings, erected by the Ontario Government and the city of Kingston, and in its new chairs and arrangements of courses, it has been endeavouring, in its own quiet way, to afford to its increasing students, as far as possible, the facilities which modern conditions seem to demand. With its somewhat limited means it has had at times to depend much on the loyalty and self-sacrifice of its professors, and that loyalty and self-sacrifice has been ungrudgingly shown whenever the occasion required.

THE ALIEN LABOUR LAW.

To the Editor of the Montreal Star:

Sir,—Application has recently been made to the Government by some Ontario manufacturers, for a relaxation, or amending of the Alien Labour Law, to allow skilled mechanics to be imported into Canada. My opinion is that the law is sufficiently elastic to allow anybody to be brought into Canada with little fear of prosecution.

Last October I was requested to find out if the Alien Labour Law applied to a case of an individual sent here from the United States to replace a Canadian. I communicated with the Deputy Minister of Labour regarding the matter, and found that while the law is on the statute books there is no provision for enforcing the same, it being left to Canadian citizens discovering violation of the law to do the prosecuting at their own risks. The explanation of the Deputy Minister of Labour—being a little vague to my dull understanding, I wrote the Minister of Justice requesting his interpretation of the law. The Hon. Minister of Justice through his deputy, politely informed me that he could not undertake to advise me upon the interpretation of the law, but that my communication had been referred to Mr. King as the officer having charge of such matters in so far as the Government assumes any responsibility in the administration of the act.

"In reply, I would say that as the law has been so framed as to no longer necessitate the intervention of any department of the Government for its enforcement, the matter of advising in regard to its provisions is, as a consequence, beyond the scope and authority of any department. In this regard the administration of the Alien Labour Law is precisely on the same footing as the administration of the law in regard to larceny, payment of debts or any other criminal or quasi criminal legislation. I enclose herewith a copy of the consolidation of the several Alien Labour acts that you may be informed of the exact provisions of the law."

Now, Mr. Editor, I would like to ask, of what benefit such a law is to the working classes to keep aliens from coming to Canada under contract to work here, or what harm is it to employers more than as a kind of bugaboo? It should either be enforced as the United States law is, or be wiped off the statutes altogether, as at present it is only a fake.

ONTARIO HOUSE RUSHES BUSINESS

Possible That the Legislature Will Adjourn in Two Weeks.

PROTECTION OF CHILDREN

A Bill Which Will Prevent Them Being Imprisoned With Adults.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Toronto, May 16.—There is a possibility that the business of the Legislature may be completed within two weeks. The report of the Gamey commissioners will not be presented to the House for at least ten days, and maybe longer. If the Government took it into its head to rush business through so that there would not be a debate after the finding of the commissioners it might be able to do so. Mr. Johnston, counsel for Mr. Stratton, yesterday accused the prosecuting counsel of trying to delay the investigations with this end in view, but that may have been only a bluff. It scarcely seems possible that Mr. Whitney will allow the House to prorogue without hearing the decision of the judges and having a debate on it. At present, however, business is slipping along with surprising rapidity.

Yesterday the Attorney General's bill to amend the Children's Protection Act was read a second time. One clause provides that where a child, apparently under the age of sixteen years, is brought before a judge charged with any offence the judge may, without making a conviction, order the child to be placed under the care of a probation officer and may require a report to be submitted to him by the officer from time to time concerning the progress and welfare of the child.

"It is hoped," said the Attorney General, "that many a boy and girl will in this way be saved from going to prison and be never heard of again in connection with any criminal offence."

Another clause provides that no child under the age of fourteen years shall be committed to any gaol or police station or lock-up pending trial, nor if so committed shall any sheriff, gaoler or police official receive any child apparently under the age of fourteen years for confinement in any lock-up or gaol commonly used for the detention of adults.

Other clauses provide what shall be done with a child under arrest, "but under no circumstances," said the Attorney General, "does it seem advisable that they should be confined along with adult criminals."

Mr. W. J. McCart, of Stormont, secured a second reading for a bill amending the Municipal Drainage Act, mainly by providing that each municipality shall appoint each year two resident drainage viewers who shall act with the engineer in laying out the drainage scheme and in making the assessment of the cost, as provided under the act as it stands. Mr. McCart said that the feeling in Stormont was that the engineers had altogether too much power under the present act, and that the former should have more say in the matter. The engineer had reported on one drain that he knew of, to the effect that it would cost $79,000. The people were dissatisfied and asked for a provincial engineer, who made an estimate of $12,000 for the same work. His bill also provides that the engineers make their accounts under oath. He would not say that engineers were dishonest, but their fees were mighty high.

The Attorney General and Mr. Whitney spoke favourably of the bill. Mr. Barr, of Dufferin, and Mr. Auld, of Essex, opposed it. It was sent to the Legal Committee.

Mr. McCart sponsored another bill that didn't fare so well. It was intended to allow the Street Railway Company, which operates in Cornwall, to man its cars with only one man each. The company, said Mr. McCart, was having a hard time to make ends meet, and this economy would save them about $2,000 a year. If they were not allowed to take this action he was informed that the company would quit running cars.

The Premier said he was afraid the bill was not a good bill, and they had to provide for the protection of life. The bill went to the Legal Committee—"for burial," said Col. Matheson.

In reply to Dr. Nesbitt, the Attorney General said that no Dominion subsidy has been granted to the Temiskaming Government railway, but there had been several personal interviews on the matter.

Japs Order Canadian Flour.

Ottawa, May 16.—The Department of Agriculture has been asked to purchase in Canada 15,000 tons of flour for the Imperial Government of Japan. This is the result of Commissioner Hutchinson's practical demonstration of the superiority of the Canadian article.

The most notable feature of the report of United States Commissioner of Education Harris is the great increase in the number of college students. There are, he says, 75,472 men in colleges and universities, as against 44,926 ten years ago, and 27,879 women students, as against 10,761. The only decrease noted is in the schools of theology.

THE FINE SPEECH OF RT. HON. MR. BALFOUR.

He Defends the Abolition of the Cereal Tax.

London, May 16.—The Prime Minister, Mr. Balfour in his address yesterday to those favouring retaining the cereal, contended that immediately it became clear that the grain tax divided the two political parties of this country, it also became clear that the tax could not be a permanent part of the fiscal system. He did not intend to say that the present system was necessarily permanent. New conditions had arisen since the old free trade policy was adopted and he could imagine circumstances under which Great Britain, by way of retaliation, would no longer consent to be made a passive target for other countries living under different conditions. He believed in universal free trade, but at present every country except Great Britain was protected.

Mr. Balfour concluded with saying he would welcome a closer fiscal union of the motherland and the colonies. The movement, however, would be extremely difficult to carry out and must come from the heart, conscience and intellect of the great masses of the people.

ANDREW CARNEGIE HAS MADE A SEMI-APOLOGY.

London, May 16.—A despatch received here from Halifax, N. S., quotes Mayor Richardson, of Sydney, Cape Breton, as saying that the town council would return Andrew Carnegie's gift of $15,000 for a library in Sydney because of an interview in London with Mr. Carnegie, in which he is alleged to have said that the iron and steel industry of Cape Breton was a "mirage."

Mr. Carnegie said to-day that he was very sorry if anything he said had hurt the feelings of his Canadian friends. He had no desire to under-rate Canada's efforts, did not remember using the word "mirage," and said it was wholly inapplicable. Mr. Carnegie knew they were making steel, or intended to make finished steel, in Nova Scotia. He had no doubt they would succeed. On the other hand it was ridiculous to compare anything that the five million people could do with what could be achieved by the 80,000,000 in the U. S., which was making more steel than the rest of the world.

Continuing, Mr. Carnegie said he had the warmest feeling for Canada, and added, laughingly: "The best thing I know about Canada is that it is mostly Scotch."

LOW BRITISH BIRTH RATE.

London, May 16. — The annual report of the British Registrar-General, just issued, for the year 1902, shows that the birth rate was by far the lowest ever known by the records. The population of Scotland is given as 4,531,300. During the year there were but a little more than a hundred thousand births and 77,000 deaths, while there was a falling off in marriages of nearly 5 per cent.

DOUGHT IN AUSTRALIA.

The Present Situation is Described as Appalling.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Vancouver, B. C., May 16.— Mail advices received from Australia by the steamship Aoranga, which brought over the largest number of passengers on record, say that H. C. Russell, the Government Astronomer of Australia, claims to have made the discovery that the moon regulates the rain, and that it consequently is the cause of the terrible drought now prevailing in Australia. Astronomers of the different Australian Colonies, it is added, have endorsed Mr. Russell's theory. Mr. Russell says Australia is in for two more years of drought; eight having passed and that in 1905 there will be more rain than Australia wants and it will continue for nine years.

In the meantime the drought situation has become appalling.

ANOTHER DOCK STRIKE OVER.

Quiet Again Reigns at Valparaiso.

Santiago, Chili, May 16.— The damage done at Valparaiso during the rioting of the striking dock labourers is estimated at about one million pesos.

Complete calm prevails at Valparaiso. Arbitrators have been appointed to decide the questions pending between the steamship companies and the dock labourers, who have resumed work. All the banks and business houses at Valparaiso have reopened their doors.

To Enlarge the Chateau.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Quebec, May 16. — Arrangements are about maturing here by which it is hoped that the Chateau Frontenc will acquire possession of the necessary property for enlarging the hotel. It is the intention of the hotel proprietors to expend fully three quarters of a million dollars in the new addition, which will be made on the other side of Des Carrieres street facing St. Anne street, and which will double the capacity of the present building. The new portion of the hotel will be connected with the present building by both an archway and an underground passage.

Manitoba Fires Very Serious.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Winnipeg, May 16.—County residents of Manitoba and the West are becoming alarmed over the serious drought which is accelerating the progress of disastrous prairie fires.

At Fisher yesterday, in the Swan River County, the Swan River Lumber Company's mills, and 5,000,000 feet of lumber with a section of the C. N. R. tracks were destroyed. Bad fires raging to-day at St. Claude and Neepawa Junction.

President Shaughnessy, of the C. P. R., arrived here to-day.

An Eruption in Mexico.

Tuxpam Jalisco, Mexico, May 16.—There has been another violent eruption of Colima volcano, accompanied by deafening subterranean noises, an abundant flow of lava, and a heavy rain of ashes. People on the Haciendas and ranches in the neighbourhood of the volcano have abandoned their pueblos for safer places.

NEW FUEL FOR NAVY TESTED AT HALIFAX.

The British Navy All Over the World May Be Supplied With it.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Halifax, N. S., May 16.—Over two years ago a large quantity of a composition, made from coal tar and pitch, was placed at the dockyard to be kept in the open air by orders from the Admiralty. Much was claimed for the composition for steam purposes and the Admiralty decided to try it. But before supplying the ships with it, it was decided to subject to a severe climatic test by leaving it uncovered for two years during the cold and warm weather.

H. M. S. Indefatigable has been supplied with a quantity of the composition from the dockyard, and it is stated that a test made has given satisfactory results, and that the Admiralty will supply all British coaling stations throughout the Empire with it. Thousands of tons of the composition will be stored at different stations to be kept mainly as a reserve supply.

Bills Amended in Ottawa.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Ottawa, May 16.—The banking and commerce committee amended the consolidated trusts corporation bill, and reported it as amended.

The Mutual Fire Insurance Company, of Montreal, bill was then taken up. This bill changes the name of the company to "The Montreal-Quebec Fire Insurance Company," preserves existing contracts and rights, provides for a capital stock of one million dollars, for the interchange of risks with other companies, and contains the usual provisions for such companies. The bill was amended.

The Dominion Burglary Guarantee Company's bill, to change the name to the "Dominion Guarantee Company, Limited," was amended and reported. The committee then adjourned.

Drowned Near Woodstock, N.B.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Woodstock, N. B., May 16.—The body of a man, identified as Samuel Sharp, was found in the river yesterday. He had boarded at an hotel here and was in poor health. On his person was found a letter giving the address of one Ogden in London, England, who had married his daughter. The jury found that death was accidental.

BABY'S HEALTH.

Mothers all over the Dominion will be spared many an anxious hour if they will keep always at hand a box of Baby's Own Tablets and give them to their little ones as occasion may require. These Tablets have saved thousands of little baby lives, and grateful mothers everywhere acknowledge the good they have done their little ones. Mrs. E. J. McParland, Wylie, Ont., writes: "I cannot praise Baby's Own Tablets enough. When I got them my baby girl was very bad with whooping cough, and cutting her teeth besides. With both these troubles at the same time she was in a bad way and slept but little either day or night. After the second dose of the Tablets I found there was already a change for the better. She slept well through the day and nearly all night, and this was a great relief to me, as I was nearly worn out losing so much rest at night. She cried almost incessantly before I began giving her the Tablets, but in a short time the cough ceased, she cut six teeth, grew cheerful and began to gain wonderfully. In fact, I believe I owe her life to Baby's Own Tablets, as I do not think she would have pulled through had it not been for them. I can recommend the Tablets to any mother who has a cross, fretful, sickly child."

These Tablets will cure all the minor ailments of little ones; they are guaranteed to contain no opiate, and can be given with advantage to the youngest and most delicate child. Sold by all druggists or sent by mail, at 25c a box, by writing to the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE GREAT MEXICAN VOLCANO ERUPTION.

Lava and Ashes Pouring Out and Threatening Towns and Plantations.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Mexico, May 16. — Mount Colima continues in a violent state of eruption. Parties arriving from points close to the volcano say vast volumes of lava have been pouring from the crater for three days, without interruption, and the greatest alarm is felt by the people of Tuxpama, situated 20 miles distant, and of the other villages in that neighbourhood.

The eruption far exceeds in violence that of a few weeks ago. Great clouds of ashes are thrown out and are swept to the east and seaward. It is feared much damage will be done to the coffee plantations. The lava threatens to overrun a large area of the cultivated country adjacent to the western base of the volcano.

There are indications that two new craters are forming. The eruption is accompanied by loud subterranean reports, and earth tremblings.

FUNERAL OF CAPT. PENNEE.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Quebec, May 16.—The Secretary of the Police force, Major J. Barry, Detective S. Carpenter, and Judge Achille Carrier, were amongst the Montrealers here yesterday for the funeral of Capt. Pennee. Thousands of people were in the funeral cortege. It was the largest seen here since that of the late Premier Marchand. Only a small proportion of those in the procession were able to obtain entrance into the Basilica.

The funeral was a mile in length and was under command of Lt.-Col. Pelletier, D. O. C., with Captain Thacher as brigade major. The remains were placed on a gun carriage and six captains representing all the city military corps acted as pall bearers. All the officers of the district were in attendance, with the Cabinet Ministers in town, and the Mayor and City Council. The police force in a body led the procession, while the fire brigade attended.

DEAFNESS AND CATARRH CURED.

BY NO METHOD UNTIL "ACTINA" WAS DISCOVERED.

Ninety-five per cent. of all cases of deafness brought to our attention is the result of chronic catarrh of the throat and middle ear. The air passages become clogged by catarrhal deposits, stopping the action of the vibratory bones. Until these deposits are removed a cure is impossible. The inner ear cannot be reached by probing or spraying, hence the inability of aurists or physicians to cure. Ear drums are worse than useless. That there is a scientific cure for deafness and catarrh is demonstrated every day by the use of Actina. The vapour current generated in the Actina passes through the Eustachian tubes into the middle ear, removing the catarrhal obstructions as it passes through the tubes, and loosens up the bones (hammer, anvil and stirrup) in the inner ear, making them respond to the slightest vibration of sound. Actina has never failed to cure ringing noises in the head. We have known people troubled with this distressing symptom for years to be completely cured in only three weeks' use of Actina. Actina also cures La Grippe, Asthma, Bronchitis, Sore Throat, Weak Lungs, Colds and Headaches; all of which are directly or indirectly due to catarrh. Actina is sent on trial postpaid. Write us about your case. We give advice free, and positive proof of cures. A valuable book—Prof. Wilson's 100-page Dictionary of Disease, free. Locomotives of Fifty Years Ago and Those Which Are in Use To-day

Changes in Types in Last Half Century.

Of all features of a great railway, none, probably, so surprises and interests the average traveller as the mighty locomotives which haul, day in and day out, the "Limiteds," the "Expresses," and the hundred other trains which attend to the traffic of a great railroad.

In its fifty years' existence, the Grand Trunk has, in common with its contemporary lines, seen many changes in ideals and methods, but in none more than its locomotives.

The original prospectus of the Grand Trunk was issued in 1853. Its object was the construction or formation of "a Main Trunk Line of Railway throughout the province," of five feet six inches' gauge, and embracing the lines then completed, or under construction, which included "the Grand Trunk Railway Company, of Canada East; the Quebec and Richmond Railway Company, the St. Lawrence and Atlantic Railway Company, the Grand Junction Railway Company, and the Toronto and Guelph Railway Company," and leasing in perpetuity the Atlantic and St. Lawrence Company from its junction, near the United States' boundary line, to the city of Portland, Maine, a total distance of 1,112 miles, of which 250 miles were at that time open for traffic.

In the year 1860, when the opening of the Victoria Bridge completed the undertaking, the locomotive stock numbered 206 engines, of which 165 were at work in Canada.

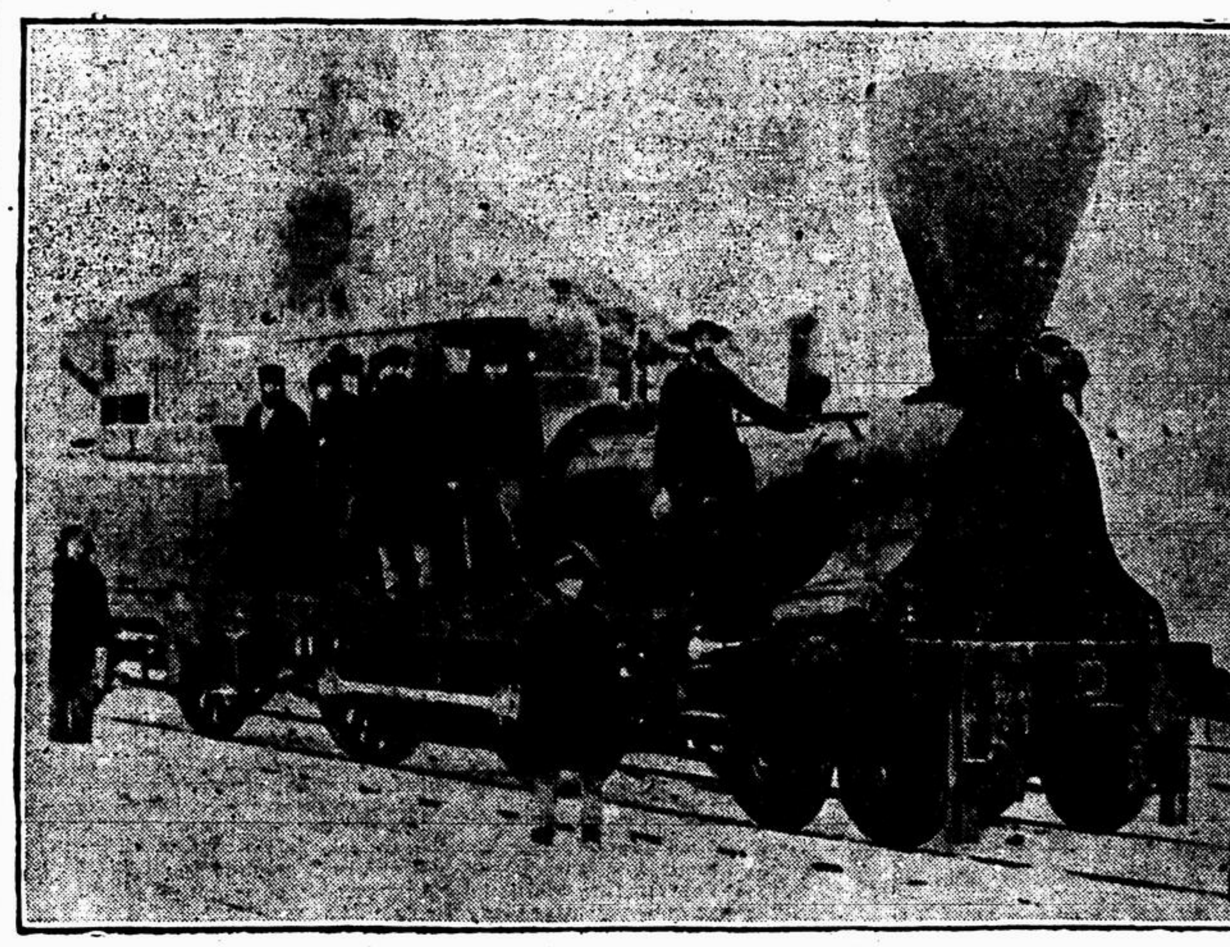
These were constructed as follows:

In the United States	72
In Canada	43
In England	50

The earliest of these was built by the Portland Company in 1848, and weighed 52,640 lbs.

Fifty engines sent from England were constructed on the lines of those in use upon the London and North-Western Railway, by Messrs. Peto, Brassey, Betts and Jackson, the contractors for the undertaking, at the Canada Works, Birkenhead, and delivery was made during the years 1854 to 1858 inclusive. Passengers by the Ottawa River Navigation Company's line in summer may see a unique specimen of these so-called "Birkenheads" (the last of its line), hauling the train which makes the connection between Carillon and Grenville, in good repair, and equal to years of more work at the age of half a century. The old characteristics of the engine still remain, and the railway has the original Grand Trunk gauge of 5 feet 6 inches.

The first locomotive built in the shops of the Grand Trunk Railway Company was No. 209, designed by Mr. F. H. Trevithick, the first locomotive superintendent of the company, and nephew of the talented engineer whose name he bears. This engine was completed May, 1859, and was used for the transportation of freight between Montreal and Toronto. Mr. Trevithick, who, the writer believes, still resides in Cornwall, near the scenes of his great ancestor's original labours, relinquished office in 1859, in favour of his assistant, Mr. W. S. Mackenzie, who was, three years later, succeeded by the late Mr. Richard Eaton, who came from the Great Western Railway of Canada with Mr. C. J. Brydges, 1863.



A TYPE OF THE EARLY LOCOMOTIVE

Mr. Eaton assumed the title of mechanical superintendent, and built his first Grand Trunk locomotive at the Montreal shops, March, 1865. He had, however, previously constructed others at the Great Western works, Hamilton, and was the first to use steel in the construction of locomotive boilers, one of which, made of this material throughout, he built as far back as 1861.

TWENTY YEARS' PROGRESS.

Mr. Eaton's successor was Mr. Herbert Wallis, who took charge of the mechanical department January 1st, 1873. During his continuance in office up to May 1st, 1896, the gauge of the Grand Trunk Railway was changed from 5½ feet to the standard 4 feet 8½ inches, mainly during the autumns of 1873 and 1874. During this change, urgency demanded the importation of some 160 locomotives from the United States, of which the Manchester (N.H.) works contributed 61, the Baldwins (Philadelphia) 45, the Schenectady 20, the Rhode Island 15, and the Portland Company some 20, while in Canada the Kingston works and those of the Grand Trunk Company added their quota of new ones. These engines weighed 70,000 lbs. in working order, and hauled in average weather, at a rate of speed, without allowance for time at stations, of perhaps ten miles per hour, between Brockville and Montreal, freight trains of 500 tons, at an average expenditure in coal of about 1¼ ounces per ton per mile.

It was during the year 1873 that coal began to be extensively used as locomotive fuel, no wood-burning engines having been constructed for use on the Grand Trunk Railway subsequent to 1872.

In the effort to produce results, the eight-wheeled road engines were notoriously over-cylindered for the weight upon the driving wheels, which was greatly restricted by the light nature of the track and bridges. In this category it was impossible, for obvious reasons, to keep pace with the growing requirements of the traffic, which were constantly asserting themselves in calls for heavier trains and higher speed, and to obtain which, side-tracks were lengthened, until nothing but the doubling of the main lines and the strengthening of the road and bridges gave the necessary relief.

THE "MOGULS" ARRIVE.

The introduction of the "Mogul" type of engine, of which ten were imported in 1874, permitted the utilisation of a larger proportion of the total weight for adhesive purposes, and thus reduced the wear and tear of track. The driving weight was distributed over three, instead of two pairs of wheels, and thus it was possible, by the use of larger cylinders and higher steam pressure, to increase the capacity of the machines. Between the years 1874 and 1896, more than 170 of these engines were added to the stock of the Grand Trunk Company, or replaced others of less capacity, and of those some 150 were constructed at the work shops at Montreal. Engine 572, built 1891, was of this type, the advantage of which lay in the fact that at little greater expenditure of fuel per ton-mile unit, trains were increased in weight to the extent of 130 per cent.

In 1895, the Grand Trunk Company built its first compound locomotive, which was adapted to the "Mogul" type. The high pressure cylinder measured 19, and the low, or second expansion, 29 inches in the bore. The stroke of the piston was 26 inches, the initial steam pressure was 190 lbs. per square inch, and the total weight of the engine loaded, that is, in working order, was 118,412 lbs. In very carefully conducted trials between Montreal and Brockville, as between this and the then most recent example of simple "Mogul" type, the compound engine used 35 per cent. less coal per ton-mile unit, and its boiler evaporated 20 per cent. more water for each pound of coal consumed. The average train load (eastward and westward combined), and exclusive of the engine and tender, was equal to 1,109 tons, and this work was performed at an average speed of 21 miles per hour, with a consumption of coal at the rate of little over one ounce per ton per mile.

In the early days of the locomotive the train loads were under 100 tons, and the fuel consumption per ton-mile unit was about two pounds. Wood, in his treatise on railways, 1832, gives an average of 1.6 lbs. as the best English practice, after many experiments. There seems little doubt, however, that trains, hauled in loads of a thousand tons, by compound engines, can be conveyed to-day, per ton, at one-twentieth of the expenditure in coal that was common in the days of Stephenson's famous "Rocket," and this, notwithstanding the additional calls upon the boiler for brake-power, increased speed, car-warming service, and the many little contrivances for the relief of the engine men and firemen.

The high and low pressure cylinders on the Grand Trunk engines of to-day have respective diameters of 22½ and 35 inches. The stroke of the piston and diameter of the driving wheels are the same, but the steam pressure has been increased to 200 lbs. per square inch, and the total weight of engine in working order has risen to 163,704 lbs.

The haulage capacity of these engines between Montreal and Brockville is a train of 1,500 tons going westward, and of 2,000 tons going eastward.

PASSENGER ENGINES.

The Morse passenger engine remains of the single expansion design, but, as in the case of the freight, it is of greatly increased capacity, and an additional pair of driving wheels has been introduced, constituting it what is known as a "ten-wheeler." The essential differences may be seen from the tabulated statement, from which it may be calculated that the increase in power amounts to something over 50 per cent. In the case of the Grand Trunk passenger engines of to-day, and, what is of very great importance, the steaming power of the boilers has been more than proportionately improved by a very liberal increase of heating surface and grate area.

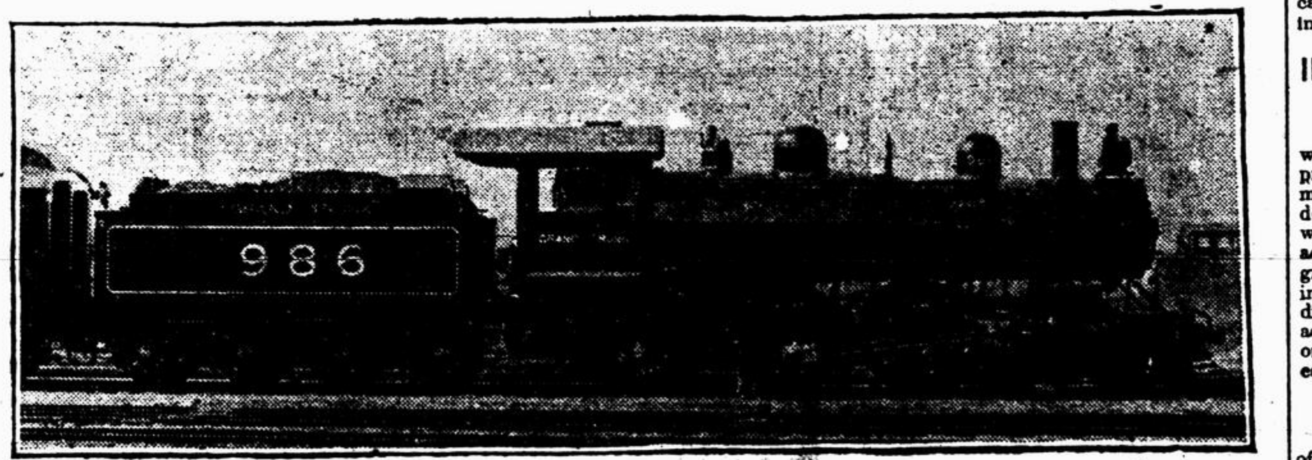
Twenty-five years ago the Grand Trunk Railway Company of Canada owned 434 locomotives, of which 67 were passenger, 359 freight, and 8 shunting. Of these the largest had 18 by 26 inch cylinders, and weighed 160,000 lbs.

At the present time the Grand Trunk Railway System (which comprises the Grand Trunk Railway of Canada, Grand Trunk Western, Detroit, Grand Haven and Milwaukee, Cincinnati, Saginaw and Mackinaw, St. Clair Tunnel, Toledo, Saginaw and Muskegon), possesses 983 engines, 243 passenger, 652 freight, and 88 switching, the heaviest engine and tender being a 20 by 26 inch ten-wheeler, weighing 308,628 lbs.

These engines are fitted with all modern appliances, such as high speed air brake, air signalling, steam heat, and carry a pressure of 200 lbs. per square inch.



ONE OF THE LOCOMOTIVES IN USE TO-DAY.

IMMIGRANTS CONTINUE TO COME TO CANADA.

The Windsor station was filled yesterday with European immigrants. They were a prosperous and healthy lot of people. The men were strong and sturdy, and were evidently accustomed to the hardest kind of work—just such men as will make a useful addition to the industrial classes in the great North-West. Three hundred of these immigrants came from Halifax, where they disembarked from the Carthaginian. An additional 200 were second class passengers on the Sardinian, which reached this city early this morning.

To Preach at Cathedral.

The Venerable Dr. Norton, Archdeacon of Montreal, will preach in Christ Church Cathedral on next Sunday morning.

SUNLIGHT SOAP

With ordinary soap a woman has to work so hard and so long on wash day she has no time for preparing any of the family meals. Wash day is a trial, and the good wife faces each with a sigh of despair.

Sunlight Soap makes all the difference in the world. No toiling—no rubbing—no boiling—less than half the labor with much better results. Most women are all through their wash by twelve o'clock when they wash with Sunlight Soap the Sunlight way. It makes child's play of work.

THE OTTAWA LUMBER PILES MUST GO.

A Strong Resolution Passed at a Meeting of Citizens Last Night.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Ottawa, May 16. — The City Hall was packed to the doors last night on the occasion of the public meeting to consider the advisability of getting rid of the lumber piles from the city.

Mayor Cook presided and threw a chill over the assembly by reading a telegram from Toronto announcing an addition to the fire insurance rates of 50 cents on $100. The Mayor reviewed the local situation and declared that a national trust was imposed upon the citizens and that the circumstances demanded the getting rid of the lumber piles and improvement of the water pressure. A suggestion of the Mayor's that Mr. Booth should remove his lumber to his own farm, about two miles from the city and the city extend the water mains to his property was well received.

Sir Louis Davies, Father Jacques, Rev. P. Garrett and others spoke, after which Mr. Darcy Scott moved, seconded by Mr. Fred Lee, resolved that the citizens of the city of Ottawa, in public meeting, especially called for the purpose of considering the question of the piling of lumber within the said city, are of the opinion that the piling of lumber within the limits of the city of Ottawa should be at once discontinued as being dangerous in causing or promoting fire.

And, resolved that the City Council be and they are hereby called upon to at once introduce and pass a by-law prohibiting the piling of lumber within the limits of the said city.

This was carried unanimously. The meeting then adjourned.

At Broughton, near Brigg, in Lincolnshire, England, some lands are held by the following tenure: Every year on Palm Sunday a person from Broughton enters the church porch at Caister having a green silk purse containing two shillings and a penny, tied up at the end of a cart whip, which he cracks three times in the porch and stays there until the second lesson begins. Then he enters the church and cracks the whip again, finally depositing the purse and contents.

THE REDISTRIBUTION SESSIONS ARE SECRET.

Progress is Being Made — Sessions Will Soon Be Public.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Ottawa, Ont., May 16.—The Redistribution Committee had a private conference yesterday, in which several propositions were made and left over for further consideration. Proposals with regard to the division of Ontario counties are to be exchanged within a day or two, and a conference between the members of the committee representing that province will be held early next week.

It has been suggested that the townships of Clara Maria and Head, in North Renfrew, are to be added to Nipissing, and that the county of Northumberland shall not include the township of South Monoghan, but shall include the town of Trenton.

Toronto is to be divided into five ridings, to be called North, East, South, West and Centre Toronto, but no agreement has been reached as to whether this shall include Toronto as constituted for electoral purposes or Toronto as constituted for municipal purposes.

Proposals were exchanged with regard to the redistribution of British Columbia, and it was found that there is very little difference of opinion as to that province.

It is proposed that the city of Ottawa shall include New Edinburgh, and that the county of Carleton shall not include the township of Gloucester and Osgoode, but that they shall remain as at present, a part of the electoral division of Russell.

At present the meetings are private, but when the controversial points are reached they will be open to the press.

PROHIBITIONISTS THINK THEY ARE BEING HUMBUGGED.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Toronto, May 16. — A well-attended meeting of the Temperance Legislation League was held recently, at which there was some pretty plain speaking over Premier Ross's announcement that there could be no temperance legislation this session, the consensus of opinion seeming to be that the prohibitionists were again being humbugged. The only way out of the difficulty, it was agreed, was to form an organization independent of the two political parties, and to unite to elect representatives to Parliament pledged to prohibition. The feeling of the meeting found expression in a resolution protesting against further trifling with the wishes of the electorate, as expressed in the recent referendum vote, and calling the attention of the people to this fresh evidence of the need of independent political action. It was contended that Mr. Ross did not intend to obey the mandate of the referendum, and that his "next session" meant "next century."

Mr. John A. Nicholls, of Montreal, who is here for the purpose of organizing branches of the Temperance Legislation League, addressed the meeting. He stated that now was the time to organize, and not on the eve of a general election. Committees were appointed to arrange for a public meeting to be addressed by Mr. Nicholls.

There is every reason to believe that the liquor men, as well as the temperance people, are dissatisfied with Mr. Ross's announcement. The liquor men feel that a change in the License Act is imminent, and would prefer to have the matter over with this year, rather than keep the sword dangling over their heads.

Street Gossip and Stock Exchange Echoes.

Star Office, Saturday, May 16.

Trading in the stock market this week was at a very low ebb, the number of shares sold being about half the volume of the first week of the month, but the price changes were important. They show a declining tendency in the majority of cases, ranging from one to four points. Dominion Coal was the heaviest feature on the list, and the circumstance is ascribed to an unsettled feeling regarding the dividend which finds expression from time to time. Dominion Iron common was also heavy, and dropped 3¼ points on small dealings, while there was not a share of the preferred stock sold during the week. Other declines were 2½ in Canadian Pacific, 3½ in Detroit, 1 3-8 in Twin City, 3 in Montreal Street, and 1½ in Montreal Power. Dominion Iron bonds declined four points from 79 to 75 on dealings of $25,000. The stock market is closed to-day. Price changes and sales during the week were:

Bradstreet's Trade Review.

There has been increased activity in Montreal wholesale trade this week as a result of the settlement of the strikes. There is still a great accumulation of freight for export, and warehouses are filled with merchandise for shipment west, but good progress is being made on all sides, and the situation will be greatly relieved by the close of the week. The demand for staple goods is increasing with the warmer weather. The outlook is very promising. Staple manufactures are firmly held. Two large mills have refused to take further orders for cotton goods for delivery after September 1st owing to the advance in raw cotton. Crop reports issued since the first of the month have been decidedly favourable. While the seeding of spring wheat was later this year, the acreage shows a large increase. Money is firm, but is expected to be more abundant and easier after the first of June, when most of the large banks close their books for the year.

At Toronto a few warm days this week have materially improved the demand for seasonable goods. More buyers from the country have been in the market the past few days than for some weeks. They report summer stocks getting fairly well broken into, and as the sorting business has been light so far, activity in that connection is looked for next six weeks. The conditions of trade are healthy. Strikes are being settled. There is a good demand for labour. Country remittances are fair for this season, and crop conditions are all that could be desired. Money is firm, time 5½, call 6, mercantile loans to 6½. N. Y. funds ½.

At Quebec during the past week business in wholesale circles has been as good as this time a year ago, but the cool weather has still a tendency to retard sales in retail circles, especially among dry goods dealers. Travellers are on the road with fall samples, and orders are commencing to come in. The outlook in general is favourable.

The conditions of trade at Pacific Coast centres are very satisfactory. Wholesale business last month in most departments was the best in many years. The importations were larger and the shipments of lumber and other provincial products reached a large volume for the month. There is a good deal of activity in mining centres along the coast, and the demand for supplies in that connection and for the north is quite brisk. The outlook for business is promising.

Trade at Winnipeg has been fairly active the past week. The seeding of spring wheat is practically over, and the fact that the area shows a large increase this season has improved the outlook for the fall trade. Retailers have been buying quite freely for the fall. A little rain now would improve conditions in the country. Railway traffic is still suffering from congestion of freight. The shipments of produce east and of merchandise west are very heavy.

Business at Hamilton is more active. There is a better sorting demand, as a result of more favourable weather. Fall orders, too, are coming forward satisfactorily, travellers' orders and mail orders calling for liberal quantities and being well distributed. Owing to the cool weather, which has been experienced till this week, it is expected that the sorting trade will keep later than usual this year. Values of staple goods are firmly held.

At London there is a fair amount of activity in jobbing circles. Orders from retailers are increasing, especially for seasonable lines, and the next few weeks is expected to show renewed activity in seasonable goods. Country trade for the past few weeks has been rather quiet owing to the fact that farmers were busy putting in the crops, but business should show a steady improvement for the next month.

There has been a good demand in wholesale trade circles at Ottawa this week. The fire, while it has led to considerable distress among a certain class, has also resulted in an increased demand in many departments of trade, which was the natural result of the destruction of so much property. The demand from country traders has been fairly active for this season.

Canadian Bank Clearings.

Bank clearings at leading Canadian cities this week with changes were:—Montreal, $20,033,831, dec. 5.0; Toronto, $14,779,848, dec. 6.4; Winnipeg, $4,533,582, inc. 55.7; Halifax, $1,695,583, dec. 4.6; Ottawa, $1,990,379, inc. 21.7; Vancouver, $1,142,100, inc. 32.6; Quebec, $1,372,745, inc. 7.2; Hamilton, $983,184, inc. 10.3; St. John, N. B., $1,101,962, inc. 21.4; Victoria, $425,313, dec. 31.8; London, Ont., $620,417.

Dun's Bulletin.

Dunn's Bulletin of Saturday, May 16th, says of Montreal trade:

At Montreal strike troubles are still a serious impediment to business, and though the longshoremen are all again at work, the differences between the teamsters and the large transportation companies are still unadjusted, the result being wharves crowded with merchandise, railway sheds and yards in badly congested shape, while the city is losing much trade through the cancellation of orders, or the placing of them elsewhere, owing to the uncertainty of prompt delivery. Even should the strike be shortly settled the effect will be long felt, as it will take some time to clear the docks and railway yards, and catch up with the delayed orders. Trade in the country is reported good generally, and as regards remittances there is little cause of complaint, but the lack of rain during the past four weeks is being seriously felt in some districts, not only owing to the frequency of bush fires, but pastures and meadows are badly in want of moisture, which if much longer delayed will no doubt affect the yield of hay and milk.

For the week only three important district failures are reported.

The very heavy demand for space for condensed classified advertisements in THE STAR renders it absolutely necessary that we should ask our readers to hand in their advertisements as early as possible in the morning, and when practicable the evening before. The pressure on our columns is so great that we cannot guarantee insertion the same day of any classified advertisements not in the office before twelve o'clock. For Saturday's paper we cannot guarantee insertion of any advertisement not handed into the Star Office on Friday evening. 86 tf

MISS ELLEN STONE LECTURED LAST NIGHT IN WINDSOR HALL.

"Of which I have been a great part." These Virginian words were written plainly over the facts of the story told by Miss Ellen M. Stone in the Windsor Hall last evening, but over the method of her telling it was written: "Of which Mrs. Tsilka was a great part." Miss Stone talked of herself much, that was unavoidable; she even used the first personal pronoun with great frequency; but somehow or other the impression she left with her hearers was that in Mrs. Tsilka was centred the chief interest.

The lecture was simple. Miss Stone walked in, unattended, bowing and smiling to the audience in response to their greetings, told her story with no attempt at oratorical eloquence, and retired bowing and smiling with an appeal on her lips for freedom for the people among whom she has been working. The driving out of the Moslems is Miss Stone's remedy, politically at least, for the renovation of that country. To their sway she attributes the prevalence of brigandage from which she suffered.

Miss Stone introduced the audience to the land, in which she worked for a quarter of a century by calling attention to its Biblical associations.

Miss Stone then told of the ample preparations for the journey into Albania, on which they were starting, when she and Mrs. Tsilka were carried off by brigands. There were ten in the party, including both herself and Mrs. Tsilka (whose name, by the way, is pronounced as if written Tseelka), an aged Bible woman and some young men and women workers. All were captured on their first day out, driven up a rocky bluff, where the brigands had lain in ambush. A traveller, who followed too close behind, and who resisted, was driven into the bushes behind them and killed with dagger thrusts. Miss Stone and Mrs. Tsilka were called aside, expecting to meet the fate of the traveller, but instead were dragged up the height further. The others, who had been left behind, they learned after their release, had been kept in terror there all night, but when morning broke the brigands disappeared and they were forced to go back to Bonskov, their starting point.

Then Miss Stone described the march over the mountains, while all the while they were in fear of death. The second night they learned they had been taken for money, and this relieved their anxiety, though at their next halting place, where they were put into a miserable little black apartment and their only protection from the cold were the vermin-infested cloaks and cowls of the brigands, Mrs. Tsilka murmured in terror: "As soon as it is day they will come in and cut off our heads."

But when day came, three of the brigands, fully armed, came in, and after stacking the muskets in a corner, told them that their ransom would be £25,000,000 or $110,000,000, to them a perfectly hopeless sum. It was about this time that they learned why Mrs. Tsilka had been taken. In the brigand's etiquette Miss Stone, as unmarried, needed a chaperon; the only other married woman in the party was an aged Bible woman, who was ill, and so they chose Mrs. Tsilka.

"During these experiences," said Miss Stone, "I learned to sympathize with the Great Unwashed, for we were a part of them."

At the end of eleven days a second letter was dictated, with no abatement of the condition, and still Miss Stone and Mrs. Tsilka lived in fear of daily death. Ten days later, however, they heard the brigands mention diplomats and consuls and felt easier.

Shortly afterwards they spent a Sunday in a sheepfold, and there was a dispute among the brigands as to whether they would wait longer for the money, and at this time and many other times, Miss Stone believes that only the insistence of the chief, who was bent on the money, saved their lives.

Weeks went on in captivity, and at last the brigands, whose faces had grown darker as the ransom was delayed, began to look cheerful. Then came a letter from an old pupil, unsigned, but easily recognized by the writing, and Miss Stone was allowed to write an answer without dictation.

Then in December came a fight with another band of brigands, who wanted to get the captives.

Towards the end of January the brigands made an offer to accept £14,500, or or $65,000, which was the amount finally paid.

Then deliverance came soon afterwards. They were left in the early morning near a village, with $5 for their needs, and told to find their way in, while the brigands scattered to their haunts. A few days later they found their friends and were received with rejoicing and enthusiasm.

Dock Labourers Return to England

Mr. Recorder Weir mounted the bench at 8.30 o'clock to-day, a record opening for this court.

It did not take him long to dispose of the business which had necessitated the early session.

As a result forty-four of the English labourers arrested on Thursday night are now on their way to Liverpool.

Between the hour of adjourning the court yesterday and to-day representatives of the steamship companies had a conference with the men and the result was an agreement by which the men should change their plea of not guilty to one of guilty of refusing to work according to contract. After agreeing to this before Mr. Recorder Weir, His Honour announced that he would suspend sentence; that the men would be taken on board the Ionian immediately and given a free passage to Liverpool; on board the ship they would be given money orders payable in Liverpool for whatever money was due to them, and they would also find all their clothes on board the Ionian. Provided any mistakes had been made in selecting the proper clothes from the several hundred bags of apparel in the boarding-houses where the men lived while in Montreal, the companies would see that the losses were reimbursed.

To this arrangement forty-six of the men agreed. Two were willing to plead guilty and wished to receive the money order, but they wanted to remain in Canada. There was no objection to this.

The forty-seventh man refused to plead guilty. His name is William Phillips. He said he had never refused to work, and he was anxious to keep his contract. His trial lasted but a few minutes. Three witnesses were called, but none of them could swear that Phillips had refused to work. He was, therefore, acquitted, and His Honour said he could return to work immediately.

Shortly after nine o'clock three patrol waggons conveyed the men to the steamer. They were evidently pleased to get the opportunity to return home. Some few of them declared they had intended to remain here, but under the circumstances they now thought they had better get out.

SS. Lake Manitoba arrived at Quebec at 5 a.m. to-day, and is due at Montreal to-morrow.

BELIEVES STRIKES SHOULD BE SETTLED BY CONCILIATION.

The Granite Cutters held an enthusiastic meeting last night in St. Joseph's Hall. The chair was occupied by the vice-president of the Trades and Labour Congress of Canada, who said that one serious cause of friction between employes and employers was the form of ultimatum commonly used by some of the labour unions in their efforts to change existing terms of employment. He was strongly opposed to strikes. He believed there was now a better way of settling trade disputes—namely by conciliation and arbitration. What was wanted was fair dealing on both sides. He hoped the friendly relations which now existed between the employing granite cutters and their employes would continue for many years.

It was decided to form a joint council with the Marble Cutters and the Soft Stone Cutters and a committee was appointed to arrange the details.

A communication was read from Mr. P. M. Draper, of Ottawa, secretary-treasurer of the Congress, announcing that the next annual convention of the Congress would be held at Brockville, during the month of September.

AN INTERPRETER TO BE EMPLOYED.

The Health Committee at a brief meeting yesterday afternoon discussed the selling of ice cream, fruit and candies on the streets by foreigners. There was a general opinion that both ice cream and candies were often not very clean when sold. As those who sold these things were frequently unable to speak English, it was difficult to instruct them with respect to modern ideas of hygiene. It was finally decided to employ an interpreter who will instruct his countrymen how to keep their wares in a more satisfactory condition.

Notes From Lake and Sea Side Where Pleasure-Seekers Gather.

From now until the chill breezes of the autumn drive pleasure-seekers back to the steam-heated comforts of the city, country resort activity will be in full swing and from all available indications this year will be a record one.

Lake St. Louis and the near-by resorts naturally have felt the stirring of pastoral enthusiasm first, but already plans are being laid and arrangements made for the exodus to the more distant abiding places of the summer colonies.

POINTE CLAIRE NEWS.

A whole week of cloudless sky and unlimited sunshine has made every day a holiday for those who have shaken off the city dust and taken to the cool lakeshore. While the change from hot pavements and closed in streets is new, there is so much in the very commonplaces of outdoor existence to claim attention that time and tide are forgotten in the charms of wide views of sky and water, and the new life springing up everywhere. From every tree there comes twittering, rapping, and the round full notes of the mating birds that flash through the fresh foliage in such a variety of brilliant plumage that our eyes are kept constantly on the alert and our admiration challenged at every turn.

Delightful as this weather is every one must sympathize with the poor farmers, who are praying for rain, while we others might do very well with less dust—very much less, on a Sunday when the country people are driving by to church. Besides, there is a haunting fear that this may be a draft on our regular summer and that we shall have to pay up for it by and by.

The sudden change from nipping cold to picnic weather has brought out light and airy raiment, but the winter flannels and overcoats are still kept handy.

These hot days make the lake very tempting. Many are taking their daily dip now, a few will be content to wait until May 24 is out for their first plunge. At its present rate of receding the water at the breakwater will soon be safe for the children.

More cottages were opened up this week by their residents.

Mr. C. Hepburn's family came out this week to one of the Brunet cottages, which they will occupy.

The house down near the toll-gate, known as "Hemsleys" is tenanted this summer by Mr. G. F. Burnett and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Holland have returned this week to their residence here.

Mr. O. L. Henault's family came out on Monday.

The next-door cottage will be occupied later by Mr. Dube, who spent last summer there.

Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Saunderson moved out from town to their cottage this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Napier have returned this week to their summer quarters on Cedar avenue.

Mr. A. R. Magill is settled at Madame Allard's.

Many visitors came out for Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. E. Gray, who held services on Sunday at the school house, was entertained by Mr. O. F. Lilly.

Miss M. Haskell was the guest of her cousins during the week.

Mrs. Lomer entertained several visitors over Sunday, among whom were Mes. srs. H. Mussen, R. Chillas, Currie and Griffen.

Mr. Reg. Meredith, Mr. John Meredith, Mr. Hill and Mr. Adams were the guests of Mrs. Meredith on Sunday.

Mr and Mrs. Geo. Chillas spent Sunday morning at their cottage here.

Mr. Morley Holland came out for a short stay on Sunday. Mr. Holland will change his summer quarters to the St. L. Y. C., Dorval this season.

Mr. Percy Oakes came home on Friday for a much needed rest, after his fatiguing duties with the militia on the wharves.

Messrs. F. Denneny and C. Williamson were among Sunday's visitors.

One of the first yachts to be launched this season is the "Claire," which has been newly painted and rigged. Mr. Gerald Lomer, Jr., her skipper, with a party of friends, took her up the lake for her first cruise on Saturday.

Some very good fishing has been done about the shore, but the largest catch yet was a 9-pound pike, which Miss A. Lemaire took out on Tuesday.

LONGUEUIL.

The annual general meeting of the Longueuil Boating Club was held on Saturday evening, the 9th inst. There was a large attendance of members both from Longueuil and the city. The chair was occupied by Mr. W. S. Walker, B.C.L., the president of the club. The report of last year's work was presented by the secretary, Mr. Ed. Pickard, and adopted. Mr. Gray, the treasurer, then read his report, which was very satisfactory, showing a cash balance of $108.63. Then came the most important feature of the evening's business, the election of officers for the coming season, which resulted as follows: President, Mr. F. J. McClure; vice-president, Mr. W. T. Moffatt; secretary, Mr. R. A. Elliott; captain, G. H. Willson; committee, H. S. Lightbourn, C. Willson, and Syd. Thornton; auditors, C. J. Harrod and James McClure; representatives to the Canadian Canoe Association, Messrs. W. S. Walker, B.C.L., and H. G. Willson. Votes of thanks were passed to the retiring officers and also to the ladies in recognition of their generous gift of $100 towards the reduction of the mortgage on the property of the club. The proposal of several additional "shells" to be purchased by the club was made to the Executive Committee.

All will be delighted to hear that the Boat Club have secured the services of their former pianist, Miss Maye Thomson, for the coming season.

Mr. and Mrs. Osborne and family are occupying one of Mr. Cooper's cottages on Victoria avenue for the coming season.

The first meeting of the new committee of the Boat Club was held Monday evening last, and a most successful one it proved to be. A great deal of important business was transcted, and several motions were proposed and passed.

Later, dancing was indulged in, and light refreshments served, the guests remaining until a late hour, every one deciding that the entertainment, which was the first of the summer galeties, a very jolly one.

Probably by the time this appears negotiations will have been perfected and training will immediately begin.

The Cricket Club has been organized under the presidency of Mr. Herbert Horsfall, and as it is not at all improvable that good material may be discovered among the new arrivals from England, as the old players are all on hand, there ought to be a good showing made by the organization. The old baseball field has been secured by the club for practice purposes. A junior club is in prospect also, though the old game has a stern competitor amongst the lads hereabouts in the royal game of golf.

By dint of a good deal of energy and hard work the courts of the Lawn Tennis Club were opened for a few hours' play last Saturday afternoon. Valley of the Ten Peaks.

"The Valley of the Ten Peaks" is a name which, when attached to a picture, carries with it all the illumination as to the subject which can be be desired. After having spent weeks sketching amid this sublime scenery in British Columbia, Mr. J. Hammond, of Sackville, N. B., returned to Montreal, where he transferred his rough impressions in oil on canvas. This work was done in his studio at the Art Gallery here.

The picture has been purchased for several hundred dollars by the C. P. R., and is now hung at the head of the grand stairway in the new King Edward Hotel, at Toronto. Much larger than the ordinary picture, which this railway purchases, the ranvas is 5 x 10 feet, and the frame, done in metal similar to those used at the Pan-American Exhibition, is 7 x 12 feet.

The Valley of the Ten Peaks, so called from the series of lofty crags which at this point reach upward to pierce the clouds, is only a few miles back of Lagan where are the famed lakes in the clouds.

Plays and Players

The New York Metropolitan Opera House Orchestra has always been associated with the highest ideals of the critic, and the mere announcement that this organization, consisting of 60 artists, supported by Mme. Nordica and M. de Reszke, is to appear in the Arena, has aroused considerable enthusiasm in Montreal. Director Duss, now designated as the millionaire conductor, has gathered about him a company of artists in the literal meaning of the word, and the tremendous audiences which have greeted this exceptional concert company everywhere along the line where they have appeared, may be described in the words of the Memphis Commercial Appeal of last Tuesday. Speaking about the concert of the night before, it says: "Never in the history of the Auditorium has such a brilliant assemblage filled it as that which occupied all of the available seats. From the time the doors opened until the orchestra filled the stage, there was a constant crowding at the door. Women richly gowned, women flushed with the interest of the occasion laughed and quarrelled and clamoured for admission. There were many strangers present. Morning trains brought a number of prominent visitors from near-by towns. The reserve seat order showed that many notable residents of other communities were guests of the occasion. Carriages lined the curb, and the roll of wheels could be heard during the early part of each concert. While no great display of costume was expected the audience was brilliantly gowned. It represented the best citizenship of Memphis; the culture, wealth and brains."

The audience which will gather to hear these artists on Wednesday week in the Arena will be a record one in this city, both as regards numbers and social status. The subscribers and holders of coupons have the privilege of securing their seats on Tuesday morning at the Star uptown branch office, and the general public on the days following.

Mr. E. S. Willard holds that an actor must be versatile, and not rely on an author to fit him with a character suitable only to particular mannerisms. With a highly developed faculty of observation and expression, each character played by him becomes not a mere projection of his own individuality, but a study from the life, or a generalization of many studies from the life. So true in realistic details was he in his characterization of Cyrus Blenkarn in "The Middleman," that the trade journal of the pottery business said the effect was as if an excitable and clever potter had become an actor, not that an actor had for this piece only become a potter. In his representation of the Rev. Judah Llewellyn, in "Judah," the same remarkable attention to detail was shown. London play-goers had here a composite portrait from mental negatives made by the actor of half the Nonconformist clergymen of London. Every profession has little characteristics of manner that are only to be noticed after the closest study. Without a touch of the slightest exaggeration, Mr. Willard had so worked himself "into the skin" of the character that after the play had been given to an audience entirely composed of London clergymen, one prominent member wrote that Mr. Willard conveyed the impression of having been a clergyman for years. Here, indeed, was an illustration of "Ars est celare artem." Mr. Willard opens his engagement at the Academy in his new play, "The Optimist," on Monday evening.

It is, no doubt, a source of surprise to many how the costumes of a great production like Richard Mansfield's "Julius Cæsar," are kept in the perfect condition they reflect when seen across the footlights. There are, in all, 477 costumes and suits of Roman armour in "Julius Ceasar." They were all designed by Sir Alma Tadema, P.A., and were made in London. The duty alone, apart from the cost, to bring them into the United States was $3,000. The care of the costumes devolves principally on the wardrobe mistress. She is responsible for their appearance; not merely to see that they are pressed, cleaned, and separately wrapped in tissue paper before being packed away, but there must be no loose stitches, no buttons or hooks and eyes off; and no falling away from the perfect condition of the first night. Of course, she has assistants. There are three sewing girls who attend to this under their mistress' direction. The armour is all kept in condition by an armourer travelling with the company. Just so, a peruquier is on the staff, and his daily duty is keeping wigs curled and orderly. Mr. Mansfield appears at the Academy on June 12 and 13.

New Yorkers ought to be able to find some amusement in life next winter; there will be sixty-five theatres devoted to drama, musical comedy, vaudeville and burlesque. This includes only theatres that are realities; there are a lot more "on paper" that may materialize later. Then there is the Metropolitan Opera House for Grand Opera, the Madison Square Garden for the Horse Show, circus and other big exhibits and innumerable dime museums and music halls. But Greater New York is a big town.

Mr. Frank Burt has purchased the production of "Tess of the d'Urbervilles" from Harrison Grey Fiske, and he will present it in this city next season, with Miss Rebecca Warren in the title role. At present Miss Warren is playing at Mr. Burt's Lyceum Theatre, Toledo, Ohio.

The Brothers Byrne, the quartette of fun-makers, who have amused so many people by their grotesque acrobatic specialties will appear at the Francais next week, with the usual Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday matinees, in the nautical pantomime comedy, the new "Eight Bells." Almost from the time the curtain rises on the first act until it falls after the last one, the audience is looking and laughing at the Byrne Brothers. Only one of them has anything particular to say. The other brothers carry their part in pantomime. The scenery of "Eight Bells" is constructed especially for these agile brothers, and they go sailing through the windows, jumping headlong through the sides of the houses and tumbling through a trick coach in the most reckless and startling manner. The best scene is said to be in the second act, when the interior of adjoining staterooms on an ocean steamer is shown to the audience. The staterooms are occupied by the Byrne Brothers, and while the ship is rolling in the waves they introduce some of their best acrobatic turns. This act ends with a terrible storm at sea, which rocks the ship so much that she finally turns completely over, and the inhabitants of the two staterooms are whirled about in a way that is most astonishing. There is a large cast of characters in the production of the new "Eight Bells," and many medleys, songs, dances, and imitations. Some pretty and vivacious young women figure in the entertainment.

The Aubrey Stock Company announce the opening of their summer season at the Francais on Monday, May 25, beginning with a special matinee (Victoria Day), when they will present for the first time in Montreal, "Devil's Island," founded on the celebrated Dreyfus case. Mr. Alphonz Ethier, Montreal's favourite actor, and Miss Bertine Robison will play leading roles, assisted by an excellent and well balanced company.

The new Ada Henry burlesquers will be the attraction at the Theatre Royal the week of May 25, when several novelties are promised.

Beginning next Monday afternoon, the latest of all laugh-provokers will begin a week's engagement at the Theatre

Royal. Its title is "Weary Willie Walker." Rube Welch, Kitty Francis, and a company of jolly, good-humored players carry the piece with a high hand, and make everybody happy. The musical numbers are new, bright and catchy, contributing no little to the pleasure of the audience. Specialties are introduced throughout the play, which are good and up-to-date. Tramp characters are usually funny. Rube Welch introduces many things in the part of Weary Willie which make the character really interesting. Oscar Lewis, a well known Swedish dialect comedian, hands the audience many laughs in his quaint way. Miss Kate Coyle, who has a remarkable baritone voice, introduces several charming solos, chief among which, "When Johnny Comes Marching Home," may be first spoken of. The boxing match which Frank and Welch give in the last act is indeed funny, besides being at times scientific.

One of the most noted offerings to local theatre patrons will be the appearance here soon of Effie Elisler, in Julia Marlowe's complete, original $2,000 production, "When Knighthood Was in Flower." The organization is under the direction of Frank L. Perley, and will be presented here with the same careful attention to cast, scenic equipment and historical accuracy which characterized its run of one year at the Criterion Theatre, New York.

Miss Marguerita Sylva has had wonderful success in her short career in America, but she has every requisite for the position she now occupies, being a beautiful woman, and singing with such rare method, in a mild, undulating and soulful way, that never fails to deeply impress her hearers. Her mother was a vocal teacher of some note in Paris, and her father a well known physician. Miss Sylva will appear in "The Strollers," at the Academy of Music.

Ringling Bros.' circus will visit Montreal on Monday and Tuesday, June 1st and 2nd. There always are a number of admirable features connected with this organization, but this year there is one that outshines all the others. This is the dramatic spectacle, "Jerusalem and the Crusades," involving a cast of 1,200 characters, a ballet of 300, and a singing chorus of 200. More than 2,000 costumes, designed and made by Parisian artists of world-wide fame, are worn, and the music, composed especially for this grand production, is rendered by the largest and only portable organ ever made, and a selected band of fifty soloists. The musical embellishment is peculiarly effective and permeates the entire production. The subject portrays life in the ennobling days of chivalry, when loyalty, bravery, justice and gentleness went hand in hand, and courtesy to an enemy and woman was a cheerful duty. The men and women of this age are inspiring pictures of devotion to high ideals, and depict in glorious flower the sentiment of chivalry from which the stirring Crusades sprung. The most exciting of ancient sports, including jousting, tilts, sword combats, spearing exercises, equestrian exploits, athletic competitions and other thrilling pastimes are reproduced. A horse ballet is introduced to illustrate the wonderful equine education of three squadrons of the highest bred animals in the world. The marching pageant, as the Crusaders leave upon their holy mission, is a fine spectacle.

The grand street pageant, the largest, most varied in sensational feature and gorgeously decorative ever organized, and more than twice as long as any other show ever given, will leave the show grounds Monday at 10 o'clock.

It is reported in New York that F. F. Proctor will at the finish of this season disband all his stock companies and devote two of his New York theatres to vaudeville, and play combinations at the third. The information could not be verified, but those who know something of Mr. Proctor's affairs say his Montreal house was a losing venture from the start, and in turning over the lease to Sparrow and Edwards, he still pays a portion of the rent. This, with the fact that the 58th Street house also failed to make any big money with a stock company, has had something to do with Mr. Proctor's change of policy. It is generally admitted that Mr. Proctor makes an enormous sum of money a year on the aggregate.

Daniel Frawley will begin a seven months' contract with J. C. Williamson at Her Majesty's Theatre in Melbourne, Australia, on June 1, and during the period will tour New Zealand and Australia under Mr. Williamson's management. Mr. Frawley's success in Colombo, Calcutta, and other leading cities in the far East has been phenomenal. During his stay in Australia Mr. Frawley will produce some new plays and revive the popular New York successes.

The fact that the American Federation of Musicians is soon to make a determined attack upon the forces of the Musical Mutual Protective Union is shown by the following resolutions which are self-explanatory, and which, though adopted by the convention in Buffalo in May, 1902, claim more importance and attention now that the date of the impending struggle approaches, says the New York Dramatic Mirror:

"Resolved, that on and after the adoption of this resolution no member of the M.M.P.U., of New York City, shall be admitted to membership in the A.F. of M., and no member in the A.F. of M. shall perform in the jurisdiction of Local 41, A.F. of M., with any member or members of the said M.M.P.U.; and be it further

"Resolved, That on and after May 31, 1903, no member of the A.F. of M. shall be allowed to perform with any member of the M.M.P.U., of New York; and be it further

"Resolved, That every Local shall be instructed to forward copies of this resolution to all managers in its jurisdiction, and shall serve notice on all travelling leaders by posting in a conspicuous place a copy of said resolution."

The aim of the A.F. of M., it seems, is to force the amalgamation with it of the M.M.P.U., a proposition which, some time ago, the latter organization refused to consider. However, though the M.M.P.U. has over 3,000 members, while Local 41 of the A.F. of M. has but 2,100, the former is purely a local organization, while the latter is a branch of the American Federation of Labour, and has the backing of that powerful organization to assist it in securing its aims and realising the fulfilment of its project.

The Federation of Musicians claims to control 260 theatrical centres of the United States, and no orchestra of any theatre that it controls will be permitted to play under a leader who belongs to the opposing organization. Thus a company which has an M.M.P.U. leader will find itself in serious straits when undertaking a road tour unless some provision is made to eliminate the difficulties.

In other ways as well does the A.F. of M. declare its power, stating that it can compel any New York manager who has outside houses to instal its members not only in those outside houses, but in the New York theatres as well, since, if the latter order is not obeyed, the union employes of all theatres will be ordered out by the decree of the Federation of Labour. And its authority in these matters the Federation, in order to gain its ends, is prepared, it is stated, to use.

Meanwhile the ukase of the A.F. of M. has been posted throughout the country, and on the first day of June the battle will begin.

The late Stuart Robson left an estate of $35,000, consisting of stocks, bonds and other personal property. Mr. Robson left no will, and last week his widow, May Dougherty Robson (May Waldron) was made by a surrogate's order administratrix of the estate.

Manager Baldwin, of the Baldwin-Melville Stock Company, now appearing at the Teck Theatre, Buffalo, has decided that the city can support another stock company, and will accordingly open another company at the Lyceum, beginning May 25. The first week's bill of the new company will be "Davy Crockett." William Farnum, leading man with "Ben Hur," will shortly join Mr. Baldwin's company at the Teck, opening as D'Artagnan in "The Three Musketeers."

Contracts were signed last week between Charles Felton Pidgin, Robert Drouet and Frank E. Carstarphen, whereby Mr. Drouet and Mr. Carstarphen are to collaborate in writing a play to be founded on Mr. Pidgin's two books, "Blennerhassett" and "The Climax." The scenario has been completed, and has received the approval of the novelist. The play will be ready for production by September 1.

Thomas E. Shea and his company come to Proctor's for a limited engagement of five weeks, commencing on Monday, May 25th, with a matinee, when he will be seen in melodramatic, romantic and sensational productions. One of the hits, which Mr. Shea has made in the large cities, is in the character of Mathias, in the play that made Henry Irving famous, "The Bells." In the Park Theatre, at Philadelphia, last spring, Mr. Shea was recalled nine times after the third act, and the audience became so enthusiastic that they insisted upon a speech, as it was his first appearance at that theatre.

Mrs. Fiske closed her tour in "Mary of Magdala" on May 12. Her season in this drama did not begin until late in October, and covered thirty weeks. "Mary of Magdala" everywhere has met with remarkable approval, and beside its marked favour with the regular theatre-going public, it has attracted remarkable attention from clergymen and church people of all denominations, who have been enthusiastic in its praise.

The Shakespearean play which Miss Viola Allen has selected for presentation next season, as previously announced, is "Twelfth Night," in which, of course, Miss Allen will appear as Viola, a character with which she has long been enamoured, and which she is anxious to give such a presentation as will comport with her ideals.

Mr. Edgar Smith, of New York, is now hard at work upon the new Vesta Tilley play, the outlines of which, at least, will be in readiness for Mr. George C. Tyler to show to the great London favourite upon his arrival in the English capital, toward the middle of June.

"The success of 'The Runaways,' the Casino's new piece," says the New York World, "will depend principally upon its appeal to the eye. The book betrays a depressing paucity of wit; the score

"As an exposition of the fine arts of the modiste and milliner, 'The Runaways' is the Barnum & Bailey of Broadway. Pictorially, the production lays all the other musical pieces of the season in the fading, half-forgotten shadows of yesterday. Sam Shubert and Nixon and Zimmerman have saved and spend their pennies to good effect, and when the smallest of the Shuberts was called before the curtain at the close of last night's performance, one of the true stars of the evening came to view.

"The performance was a perfect riot of colour, though not riotous in the artistic sense, for in every instance the hues were harmonious and the picture perfect. Stars—by courtesy—and show-girls swished in with happy habiliments fairly bewildering in beauty, not once, but often, and each time more resplendent than the first. If you like beauty, go to 'The Runaways' prepared to be satiated."

Commencing with a matinee on Monday, James H. Wallick's melodrama, "The Cattle King," will remain for a week's engagement at Proctor's. In one sense this play is a companion piece to "The Bandit King," but only in title, for there is not a bit of resemblance one to the other in either plot or action. The same company that have been here during the past week in "The Bandit King" will again be seen. The title role will be in the hands of Mr. John J. Farrell. Mr. Jack Webster will appear as Don Pedro, the villain of the play, a character that he has made a great hit in wherever he has appeared. The same particular attention will be given to the staging as was noticeable in the production of this week, everything in connection with it being entirely new. All of the trained horses that have been seen during this week will again be seen. The usual matinees will be given.

America will not have to wait long to find a member of the Grau family filling a large place in the musical field. Maurice Grau has sailed away, but soon will appear his brother, Robert, who, as the manager of the Baroness Cedarstrom, or, in other words, Patti, has started out to do great things, after a fashion made familiar by his brother.

Robert Grau, while not so well known as the impresario who made grand opera successful where others had made it a failure, bids fair to step into the limelight of publicity as a man of daring and originality. His terms with Patti would make most managers tremble, but so great was the demand for seats in the various cities which he had booked for the Diva, that he cabled to her asking for an extension of her engagement. He is said to have offered Mary Anderson Navarro $5,000 a week for a series of readings from the poets, and it is believed that he has other audacious schemes in embryo which will be hatched at a propitious time.

Mr. Grau was born to the managerial purple. His father, Jacob Grau, introduced Rubinstein, Adelaide Ristori, and grand opera in German on a large scale to the United States. He was a successful manager.

THEATRES IN NEW YORK.

Special to the Montreal Star.

New York, May 16.—Mrs. Langtry has had an uncommonly successful season in America, and has sailed for home with an ample supply of cash. She sailed by the American line steamer Philadelphia on Wednesday. Mr. A. H. Hummel, the lawyer, was at the pier, and remained in the company of the celebrated beauty until he was fairly driven ashore by the departure of the craft. His presence resulted in a great deal of comment, particularly as the actress sailed away under the name of Mrs. Langtry, whereas when she arrived here last December in the Cedric, the passenger list of that vessel bore the name of Mrs. De Bath, she being married to an English army officer of that name.

Because of the presence of Mr. Hummel, and the long conference he had with the actress, it was reported around the ship that the English beauty had had another marital difference. Mr. Hummel emphatically denied the report, and Mrs. Langtry said, "Goodness, no; the Major and I are on splendid terms. Mr. Hummel is an old acquaintance, and has come here to consult me about some American property I own."

Continuing, the actress said:

"I have never made quite so much money in America as I did this season, and I am going home for a rest, and, incidentally, to have a good time. But I'll be with you when the snow begins to fly again. I have two new plays planned for next season, but Mr. Frohman has asked me not to give their names to the newspapers, and I do not like to displease him."

"And say, please," chimed in Mr. Hummel, "that Mrs. Langtry is to have a new leading man, and they tell me that he is one of the handsomest men in England."

"How nice of you, Mr. Hummel," said Mrs. Langtry, "but I prefer to talk about horses. I am going over to place some of my earnings on my unbeaten three-year-old Smila, which hasn't a peer in the United Kingdom, and he is going to win the Coronation Plate race at Epsom and the Whitsuntide at Hurst Park.

"I am very anxious to get home to look at my string of race horses. I have three or four so-called 'promising two-year-olds' that Fred. Webb, my trainer, is looking after. They always speak of a two-year-old as promising, but, dear me, one can never tell. Two-year-olds have cost me a swell bit of money, I can tell you. Webb also has a lot of yearlings of mine, and he says at least half a dozen of them will be good.

"Both 'The Crossways' and 'M'lle Mars' did exceptionally well since I opened here January 1. I should like to do them again next season, but Mr. Frohman won't let me. The members of my company, twenty-one in number, are to go home in the Minnehaha on Saturday. My company next season will be much bigger than this, and the leading man, whom Mr. Hummel praises, is truly and really wonderful. That's all I can say about him."

Miss Elsie Leslie, of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" fame, essayed the part of Katherine in an abridged version of "The Taming of the Shrew," at the Manhattan Theatre, Tuesday afternoon. The effort, while experimental, was fairly successful, although Miss Leslie is not naturally suited to the role. However, she disclosed to the public more ability in the histrionic line than she has been hitherto suspected of possessing. Miss Leslie is one of our most charming little actresses, and, if she does not attempt too much, will have a bright future.

Henry E. Dixey is to play the leading part in a farce entitled "Facing the Music," which is to be put on at the Garrick next Thursday evening.

Benefits Congressman Dingley's Son and Cures Others of Quick, Galloping and Fast Consumption in Their Own Home—Remember There Is No Expense or Obligation Attached to the Offer of FREE Trial Treatment.

O. K. BUCKHOUT.
Chairman Kalamazoo Tuberculosis Remedy Co. (Ltd.); Member of British Tuberculosis Congress; Member National Association for the Prevention of Consumption.

Consumptives need not worry about their future any more, as the long-looked-for cure for consumption has at last been found, and a cure is now just as sure as in ordinary disease. To satisfy yourself of this you have only to write for free trial treatment to the Kalamazoo Tuberculosis Remedy Co. (Ltd.) 610 Main st., Kalamazoo, Mich., of which the chairman is Mr. O. K. Buckhout, a noted member of the British Tuberculosis Congress and also of the National Association for the Prevention of Consumption, composed of world-famous men who have made consumption—its cure and prevention—a life study. This cure is something entirely new, and is called "Antidotum Tuberculose," or the Copper Cure, and is the only discovery we know of that absolutely kills all tuberculosis germs which cause consumption, as, unless this is done, the disease cannot be cured. As the name of the remedy tells, its chief ingredient is copper, which metal has at last been found to be the deadly enemy of the consumption germ. "Antidotum Tuberculose" is the original copper cure.

You can tell if you have consumption by the coughing and hawking, by continually spitting, especially in the morning, when you throw yellow and black matter, by bleeding from the lungs, night sweats, flat chest, fever, weak voice, peculiar flushed complexion, pain in chest, wasting away of the flesh, etc. Find out how the Copper Cure kills the germs, then builds up the lungs, strengthens the heart, puts flesh on the body and muscles on the bones until the consumption is all gone and you are again a strong, healthy, robust man or woman.

Don't doubt this, for the very same discovery benefited A. H. Dingley, a son of Congressman Dingley, of Dingley Tariff Bill fame, who went West and South for relief and didn't get it, and came back with death staring him in the face, and was benefited by "Antidotum Tuberculose" after all else had failed.

So don't give up hope, and don't spend your money in travel. Attend to it right away, for consumption spreads to other members of the family. If you have consumption or fear you are predisposed to it write to-night to the Kalamazoo Tuberculosis Remedy Co., (Ltd.), 610 Main st., Kalamazoo, Mich., for the FREE Trial Treatment, and the plain and comprehensive literature which they will gladly send you, all charges prepaid. Remember the trial treatment is absolutely FREE.

IS PATRIOTISM A VIRTUE OR A VICE?

Mr. John C. Havemeyer, in the New York Evening Post, defines "patriotism" as "an exaggerated form of selfishness" and as "one of the devil's most successful devices to deceive and mislead the human race." He declares that there is not in any part of the Bible even a sentence that requires or justifies patriotism; and that ministers of religion have no warrant in reason or scripture for teaching the co-ordinate obligation of religion and patriotism. Mr. Havemeyer makes these sweeping denunciations of one of the most popular virtues in the course of "A Peaceful Challenge to Its (Patriotism's) Advocates." The challenge contains nineteen clauses, ten of which are devoted to the condemnation of war, or the study of the art of war and of the glorification of great soldiers, and another pronounces the salutation of a flag "a form of idolatry."

Without going so far as to adopt Aristotle's theory that all virtues are to be found in the middle state between vices which are related to them in the character of excess or of deficiency, it may be safely affirmed that there are many virtues which by exaggeration are converted into vices. For instance, what is the vice of parsimony but the exaggerated virtue of thrift? What is the vice of prodigality but the exaggerated virtue of liberality? And so the virtue of patriotism, may by exaggeration become the vice of—"Jingoism." We cannot for one moment agree with Mr. Havemeyer that a man's willingness to devote his life to the service of his country, or if need be, to die for his country, is to be egarded as an "exaggerated form of selfishness." To our thinking, a Chinese Gordon is one of the highest types of unselfishness. No doubt much that passes current for patriotism is a form of selfishness; the animating motive for heroic deeds may be nothing higher than personal ambition; but that is a question which obviously must be left between the individual and his Creator. Then much that is genuine patriotism may be mistaken. A man may earnestly desire, work for, and fight for his country's advancement, not for the sake of his own share in the glory or the profit, but because he sincerely believes that the advancement of his country and the extension of its power and influence is for the greatest good of the whole human race. But a man's opinions on this subject are peculiarly liable to be prejudiced by inherited instincts and by environment, and therefore he is apt to make mistakes. That an Englishman should have stronger sympathies with England and Englishmen than with Patagonia and Patagonians is not an indication of any form of selfishness. The first and great commandment of the law is "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind." Yet St. John asks: "He that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?"

We will admit that love of humanity is a greater, as it is a rarer virtue than love of one's country. But the spirit which restricts a man's sympathies within the frontiers of his own country is not the spirit of patriotism, but the spirit of that exaggerated form of patriotism which for want of a better word we have called "Jingoism." The fault with most of our patriotism is that it is uneducated and assumes that one country can only gain at the expense of another.

How any one can affirm that "there is not in any part of the Bible even a sentence that requires or justifies "patriotism," we cannot understand. The Old Testament is made up largely of the history of the grandest Theocracy the world has known and is full of patriotic inspiration. The wail that went up from captive Israel by the waters of Babylon "How can we sing the Lord's song in a strange land?" has found echoes in the hearts of thousands of exiles in later ages. Patriotism was part of the religion of Israel and is part of the religion of most peoples to-day. In our judgment it is not the worst part.

A favourite socialistic idea is that the State should own all the railways, run them in the public interest and treat the employes as part of the civil service. It is a somewhat remarkable fact that the two countries in which railway strikes on the largest scale have lately occurred are two where this idea has been carried into effect, Holland and Australia. Nothing, indeed, so serious in the way of railway strikes has ever occurred in any other country as has lately been witnessed in these two. It is manifest that where the State owns the whole railway system it will have to follow one uniform policy with its employes, and, if this happens not to meet their views, there is apt to be trouble on the widest scale. Under a system of individualistic or corporate ownership, their is a quicker consciousness of local conditions, and trouble breaking out at one point may be remedied before it spreads. It seems a fine idea for the State to grab everything and put everything on an official basis; but there is both more life and more stability in a system under which responsibility is divided and the resources of individual management are more actively called into play. The people of Canada are now being congratulated by the British press on having kept out of the mess into which the Australians have got themselves. Our people will be wise if they continue to be extremely careful how they assign any wider functions to the government than it already possesses. Let this be a free country.

The Paris newspaper, Le Siecle, is one of the few that showed a just and friendly spirit to England during the South African war. The same journal now, discussing England's work in Egypt, says that, while France may regret that England has been alone in that country for twenty years, it has no right to reproach her for it. Her administrative work, it continues, has been good and beneficial and that is her sufficient justification before the civilized world. England may have worked in her own interest, but she has worked for the good of Egypt at the same time. The growing prosperity of that country to-day is the result of her well directed efforts. Her finances have been placed on a sound foundation, and, with lightened taxes, the people have vastly greater advantages. Summing up the Siecle says: "Egypt to-day possesses an army, she is mistress of the Nile almost to its source, she is once more a nation, not strong enough as yet for self-government, but still a nation. Such are the results of British administration in twenty years. Making all reserves as to the conditions in which British occupation came about, it would be unjust not to recognize how profitable it has been in a relatively short time to the country occupied." The bitterness formerly felt in France at the thought of British rule in Egypt must have been greatly mitigated by time and circumstances, or such views would hardly be tendered for the acceptance of French readers.

The negro question in the United States is growing more acute every day. A few days ago in Tennessee, a coloured rural mail carrier, who had obtained his appointment strictly under civil service rules, his name standing on the list of available candidates above that of any white man, was stopped on the road by masked and armed men, who told him that it would not be safe for him to try to hold the job. The Postmaster-General is applying a natural remedy—if such it can be called—to the case. He says that if the people on that route do not want a free delivery they need not have it, but that he certainly will not replace the negro carrier. This time President Roosevelt had nothing to do with the case; he was as innocent as the flowers in the spring; but none the less the incident will add to the already considerable burden he is bearing in connection with the rights and claims of the negro element of the population. The situation is not improving either North or South. What to do with ten millions of unassimilable people is one of the most serious, if not hopeless, problems ever propounded.

President Harper, of Chicago University, in the course of an excellent address on "The Relation of Religion to Higher Life," delivered in Toronto on Wednesday last, quoted with approval the following words of Professor Tiele.

"While science, arts,and morality yield a certain satisfaction, or even a considerable measure of happiness, they never produce that perfect peace of mind, that entire reconciliation with one's self and one's worldly lot, which are the fruits of religion, and have ever characterized the truly pious of all ages. Poetry and art may brighten this earthly life with their lustre, they may mitigate sorrow and soothe the troubled mind; but they can only give true rest to the soul when they serve to bring home to it some great religious truth in a beautiful and striking form. And even the strictly moral man, who can boast of having kept all the commandments from his youth upwards—unless utterly deluded by self-satisfaction—must often feel that he lacks something, the one thing needful."

This is well expressed, but we seem to find the whole substance of it in a single sentence in Walter Savage Landor's "imaginary conversation," between Andrew Marvell and Bishop Parker. It is Marvell who speaks: "A wise man will always be a Christian because the perfection of wisdom is to know where lies tranquility of mind and how to attain it, which Christianity teaches." There is a terseness and compactness in this worthy of the man who wrote as his own epitaph:

"I strove with none, for none was worth my strife;
Nature I loved, and after nature art.
I warmed both hands before the fire of life;

THIS DATE 30 YEARS AGO.

(From the Star fyle of May, 1873.)

A prominent Irish citizen writes respecting the play, "Maum Cre," as "the truest representation of the Irish character in all its varied stages I have ever seen put upon the boards in this city."

THE comedian and character actor in this exciting drama was Mr. Joseph Murphy, who has visited the city on many occasions since then in other charming Irish plays.

A large number of ladies met at Belmont Hall, Sherbrooke street, on Wednesday afternoon, and held an interview with Mr. Lowe, of the Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. A Ladies' Immigration Aid Society was at once organized, Mrs. Moison being elected president, Mrs. A. Allen vice-president, and Mrs. G. Simpson secretary, with a board of directors.

MR. JOHN LOWE was appointed census staff officer in July, 1870, and subsequently became secretary of the Department of Agriculture. He has contributed to the press several statistical and other publications.

On Wednesday, Dr. Howard, assisted by Drs. Craik and Roddick, successfully removed a tumour, weighing 18 pounds, from the side of a woman from the Eastern Townships. During the operation at the General Hospital, which occupied nearly an hour, the patient was under the influence of ether.

THE late Dr. R. P. Howard was one of Montreal's most skilful and successful surgeons and physicians. He was professor of medicine in McGill College and president of the Canada Medical Association. He graduated from McGill in 1848. He also filled at one time the office of president of the College of Physicians of Quebec, and was a governor of the Montreal General Hospital for over a quarter of a century. He contributed papers of very high importance to the medical journals on affections of the lungs, of the heart, and diseases of the chest. In 1876 he read an important paper before the International Medical Congress of Philadelphia on "Pernicious Anaemia," the most elaborate and exhaustive essay on the subject in English heard by the assembly. He passed away in 1890. Dr. Craik a few years ago resigned his office of Dean of the Medical Faculty of McGill, and was succeeded by his able professional colleague, Dr. T. Roddick.

The concert given under the auspices of S. John the Evangelist Church last night in the Synod Hall was very well attended, and on the whole the programme was pleasing and very satisfactory to the audience.

THIS was the usual annual concert of the choir boys of S. John's, and on this occasion the lads were ably assisted by the late Mrs. Thrower and Mr. C. Geddes.

A wonderful exhibition of Pratt's system of educating vicious horses was given last evening at the Equine Academy, Craig street. By attending these exhibitions it is at once known how unnecessary it is to have horses addicted to kicking, biting, striking, halter-pulling or bolting. It is a subject in which all classes of the people are interested, and should be understood by all those owning or driving horses.

PROF. PRAT was another Rarey in the horse-educating business. His system was based on kindness with firmness, giving man the power to control any vicious animal, and to at once break up any and all bad habits, making the horse safe to ride and drive in any emergency. He certainly had wonderful power over the most vicious animals brought to him from all parts of the island and city of Montreal. Kickers, bolters, biters and balkers were all the same to Pratt; he managed to show them the error of their ways. The academy was really a large tent on the corner of Victoria square and Craig street.

WOULD RECOVER BALANCE OF $6,443.

Mederic Laurier, contractor, through his attorneys, Messrs. Renaud & Renaud, has brought action against the Jewish congregation, B'Nai Jacob, to recover a sum of $6,433.68, which he claims as a balance due him on the contract for $12,000 for the construction of the new synagogus on St. Urbain street.

THE PASSING HOUR.

Andrew Carnegie apologized for his attack on Canada as soon as he learned that the Mayor of Sydney, N.S., threatened not to take any of his money. Comic opera Andrew is the only man on earth who can be frightened by a threat not to take his money from him.

That tariff war with Germany will probably begin by sending all the saurkraut to quarantine.

What this climate of ours needs is a balance wheel. It does not run steadily enough.

Parliament is getting to be largely an annex to the Railway Committee.

Wonder if Frank Sullivan would take that $1,200 which Gamey swears he borrowed from him?

Hon. Mr. Fisher comes back "decorated" by the Emperor of Japan, but it is impossible to believe that he can look any sweeter than he always has.

The Gamey case has practically come down to the question whether Stratton bought Gamey for nothing or for $2,000.

Mr. Stratton will be greatly annoyed that these Gamey charges should have resulted in postponing any temperance legislation for another year. This will be almost as painful a blow to him as it will be to learn that there is such a thing as a Liberal campaign fund.

Ottawa should insist that all lumber and blue books be piled outside the corporation limits.

The Pennsylvania politicians have passed a law making the publication of cartoons illegal. Evidently they were "cuts" that cut.

Russian tyranny in Finland is to be stopped by "writing it up." The saying that "the pen is mightier than the sword" is passing into international politics.

It seems a legitimate inference that Hon. Mr. Stratton has either forgotten to remember or else remembered to forget.

If the Weather Bureau will only get back to work, it can wear all the buttons it wants to.

Mr. Stratton's next move will be to say that he was only joking. It is thus the game is played.

Russia has again taken advantage of the dust cloud in Turkey to do a little atrocity work on her own account—keeping her hand in, as it were.

For the second time in six months Mr. Stratton has bumped up hard against honour and decency.

And there are a number of other good people who are not going to "forget about it," Mr. Stratton.

In the future, when the Ross Government wants to be conversational, it will probably confine its activity to the Sullivan family.

Mr. Sifton's absence during the probing of the Treadgold investigation is most unfortunate—except for Mr. Sifton.

"You say his honesty surprised you?"

"Yes," answered Senator Sorghum. "When I overbid the opposition for his vote, he went to the trouble of giving the other fellow his money back."—Washington Star.

"Yes, once," replied the Cheerful Idiot. "Picked the best horse with your eyes shut?"

NEW POLICY FOR THE WHOLE BRITISH EMPIRE OUTLINED BY JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN

One of the Most Far Reaching and Remarkable Political Speeches of the Present Generation—An Opportunity Now That the English Speaking World May Never Have Again—The Colonial Secretary Urges That Britain and the Colonies Shall Form a Trade Alliance by Tariffs, Independent of the Rest of the World—Birmingham Audience Wildly Cheers the Proposal.

Special to the Montreal Star.

London, May 16.—The Rt. Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, Colonial Secretary of Britain, made a speech last night to his constituents in the city of Birmingham. The address is the first he has made in his constituency since his return from South Africa.

All the issues before the British Empire at the present time were dealt with by a master hand.

In beginning, Mr. Chamberlain launched into an earnest appeal for the restoration of cohesion in the Unionist party which the electoral reverses of the past year have shown to be suffering disastrously from indecisive leadership. He declared that the Imperial policy of the next few years depended on whether the British should stand together as one free nation against the world or should fall into separate states selfishly seeking their own interests and losing the advantages which unity alone could give. If separation began with Irish home rule, the Empire would dissolve into its component atoms.

Mr. Chamberlain asked the country to think what it meant to England as a power and an influence among the nations and to the trade and commerce of England if, when the population of the colonies equalled or exceeded that of England, they were still united. The fact that, if England were in danger, the whole resources in men and money of the colonies would be at the disposal of the Mother Country, was something wonderful to have achieved and was worth almost any sacrifice. He thought that South Africa should have done more towards bearing the burden of the war, but it was something to get that principle accepted.

Mr. Chamberlain launched into a remarkable suggestion, advocating a departure from the existing interpretation of free trade. He proposed the establishment of preferential tariffs between the colonies and Great Britain, and was cordially endorsed by his audience.

His main point was that the present position of affairs in this respect was absolutely new and that a new situation must be met by a new policy.

Mr. Chamberlain spoke of Canada, describing it as "the greatest and most prosperous of our self-governing colonies at the present time." Canada, he said, was now in the full swing of extraordinary prosperity, which he hoped and believed would result in a great increase in its population, with strength and importance.

He recalled that Canada in 1898 voluntarily offered Great Britain a preference of twenty-five per cent., which it had since increased to thirty-three and one-third per cent., and he pointed out how British trade with Canada has since grown. Canada, he added, was now willing to go further, especially regarding goods in which the British competed with foreigners, if Great Britain was willing to give her a drawback or tax of a shilling per quarter on grain. The Government had to refuse that offer because the established fiscal policy bound it to keep the British market open for all the world. Even though other nations closed their markets against Great Britain, the latter could not offer any favour to her own children, or make any difference between those who treated her well and those who treated her badly. That was the accepted doctrine of the free traders. He himself was a free trader but he doubted whether the present interpretation of the term was the true one.

CANADA AND COLONIES WILL NOT WAIT FOR EVER, SAYS CHAMBERLAIN.

Continuing, Mr. Chamberlain said: "I am no protectionist, but I want to discover if the true interpretation of free trade is that it is our duty to buy in the cheapest market without regard to whether we can sell. If that is the theory of free trade, and it finds acceptance here and elsewhere, then you will lose the advantage of the further reduction of duty which Canada offers to the manufacturers of this country, and you may lose a great deal more, because the Minister of Finance of Canada told the Canadian Parliament the other day that if they are told definitely that the mother country can do nothing for them in the way of reciprocity they must reconsider the position and reconsider the preference they had already given.

"The policy which prevents us from offering any advantages to our colonies, prevents us from defending them if attacked. We may have supposed that an agreement of this kind by which Canada does a kindness to us was a matter of family agreement concerning nobody else.

"Unfortunately Germany thinks otherwise. Germany insists upon rating Canada as though it were a separate country, and has penalized Canada by additional duties on Canadian goods. German newspapers frankly explain that this is a policy of reprisal, and that it is intended to deter other colonies from giving us the same advantage.

"This policy of interference is justified by the belief that we are so wedded to our fiscal system that we cannot defend our colonies, and that any one of them which attempts to establish special relations with us, will do so at its own risk, and must be left to bear the brunt of foreign hostility.

"That is putting us in rather a humiliating position. If we allow it to prevail, how can we approach the colonies with appeals to aid us in promoting the union of the

RT. HON. JOSEPH CHAMBERLAIN.

Empire or ask them to bear a share of the common burdens. It is better to cultivate the trade of those who rightly enough are our competitors and rivals, that is the new position which the people of this Empire have to consider. I do not want to hasten their decision. They have two alternatives. They may maintain in its severity the artificial and wrong interpretation which has been placed upon the doctrine of free trade by the small remnant of 'Little Englanders,' who profess to be the sole repositories of the doctrines of Cobden and Bright. In that case they will be absolutely precluded either from giving preference or favour to the colonies abroad or from even protecting the colonies when they offer a favour to us.

"The second alternative is that we must insist that we will not be bound by any purely technical definition of free trade; that while we seek a free interchange of trade between ourselves and all nations of the world we will nevertheless resume the power of negotiating, and if necessary, retaliating whenever our interests or our relations with the colonies are threatened by other people."

Mr. Chamberlain concluded by expressing the belief that the subject should be discussed. It was an issue of the greatest consequence and an opportunity had now occurred of deciding it, which the English would never have again.

BRITAIN REGARDS THE SPEECH AS A TRUMPET CALL.

Mr. Chamberlain's speech is regarded as remarkable, not only as a rousing trumpet call for a new policy, but for its flat inconsistency, with an academic speech in which a few hours later Prime Minister Balfour, with characteristic serenity, rejected the appeal of an influential deputation, headed by the Right Hon. Harry Chaplin, formerly president of the Board of Agriculture, and the Duke of Rutland, for the withdrawal of the Government's decision to repeal the corn duty.

"There is a certain refreshment," says the Times, in turning from Mr. Balfour's unsatisfactory reply to Mr. Chamberlain's earnest appeal, which cannot pass unheeded."

The Standard, a ministerial organ, although it does not endorse Mr. Chamberlain's views, declares significantly that the speech will be remembered hereafter as the starting of a new development even in party relations.

The Morning Post (Conservative) says that Mr. Chamberlain has started on a path in which, so long as he leads, he will not lack followers if the spirit in which he leads is the right one.

The Daily Mail predicts that the effect of the speech will be more far-reaching than any of its hearers could at the time realize. It was the word fitly spoken by a statesman whose courage and strength come like a sea breeze after the vacillation and weakness of his colleague.

The Chronicle (Liberal-Unionist) remarks upon the divergence of Mr. Chamberlain's and Mr. Balfour's speeches, and asks why in the name of common sense and consistency does not the Government itself set an example of the policy advocated by the Colonial Secretary by remitting the corn tax in favour of the colonies alone.

Note.—In circles usually well informed it is the opinion that the rising wave of protection in Canada has brought Mr. Chamberlain to see the importance of preferential trade with the colonies. Those amongst English statesmen who were constrained to admit the force of Sir Charles Tupper's contention are now pointing to the correctness of the Tupper idea. At the time the Canadian preference was given to the Mother Country, astute statesmen like Mr. Chamberlain privately admitted that it would be a strange spectacle indeed if the colonists could regard with approval such a one sided preference as the Liberals gave to England. Since Mr. Tarte left the Canadian Cabinet, because he believed in protection and differed from his leader in this regard, the rising wave of protectionist sentiment has been watched by English statesmen who keep themselves fully posted from Ottawa. Mr. Chamberlain's speech at Birmingham last night is fairly regarded as a feather in the cap of the Canadian Conservative party, which first by Sir Charles Tupper and subsequently by various speakers, has practically declared against preferences at the sole cost of the Canadian people.

Mr. Chamberlain's Speech Well Received in Montreal

The speech delivered by the Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, British Colonial Secretary, at Birmingham last night, has excited much interest in this city.

The following are a few of the comments thereon which were heard to-day:

Mr. A. J. Hodgson, president of the Board of Trade, was enthusiastic over the Hon. Joseph Chamberlain's speech.

"It was a magnificent speech," he said, "and the right sentiments are expressed in it. Mr. Chamberlain has to be much admired for having come out so boldly in his remarks on the position of Great Britain and her colonies. His sentiments will be heartily reciprocated by all the colonies, and I hope by the best thinking men in England.

"Mr. Chamberlain evidently grasps the fact that as the colonies grow they are bound to receive a further recognition from England than has been the case in the past, and that such a sentiment is bound to have a beneficial effect, not only in the colonies, but in the Old Country. Any efforts that will result in cementing the colonies and Great Britain is bound to be of mutual benefit. His expressions about Canada are of great interest, and will attract much attention."

FOR STRONGER BONDS.

Major Seath, discussing Mr. Chamberlain's speech, said that the Colonial Secretary was the first British statesman to fully understand the importance and growing needs of the colonies.

"It was a remarkable speech," said the major, "and showed that the honorable gentleman intended to do all in his power to bind the great colonies to the Mother Country with stronger ties."

"This speech of Mr. Chamberlain's," said Mr. I. Suckling, of Toronto, "was a surprise to me. I have long been desirous of seeing a preferential arrangement in the Empire, but did not expect to see it for years. But this shows that it is coming soon. Mr. Chamberlain has been studying this question, and he understands what he is about, and can carry the people with him. I believe that his advocacy of it means that we will see it soon."

WOULD NEED PROTECTION STILL.

Mr. James Crathern, discussing the subject, said:

"In my opinion the proposed changes indicated by Mr. Chamberlain in his speech would bring England and the Colonies together commercially on much the same lines as the various states are united in the American union under a uniform tariff. One thing, however, it appears to me, must be borne in mind. Canada is not in a position to enter into a free trade agreement with England, as the many millions of capital now invested in the various industries of the country must of necessity have a certain amount of protection even in connection with our trade with England."

A NOTABLE DELIVERANCE.

Mr. Robert Meighen, president of the Lake of the Woods Milling Company, said:

"I am of the opinion that there has not been a speech delivered by any British statesman for the past fifty years that has touched, I may say, the crucial point affecting the future welfare of the whole Empire, as the speech delivered by the Hon. Joseph Chamberlain.

"Preferential trade with the colonies, I am of opinion, should be the guiding star for both British and colonial statesmen. I continue to have strong opinions in favour of our present preferential tariff accorded to Great Britain. I may not coincide with the way that preference was given, yet I believe it will eventually bring us a preference in the British market.

"England, by giving the Canadians a preference in her market, will cement the greater part of the North American continent for ever under British flag, and will be the means at no distant date of placing the Empire in the position of being independent of foreign nations for her food supply.

"Permit me to say that it was a lamentable mistake to remove the duty which Great Britain had placed on the imports of wheat and flour, for I hold that the consumer did not contribute towards that duty; it was the producer. However, if we ask for preferential trade with Great Britain, we are not paupers. Let us come forward and do our duty and contribute our fair share towards the defence of the Empire."

STRUCK THE KEYNOTE.

"Chamberlain has struck the keynote this time," said Ald. Ekers, with enthusiasm, "and I sincerely hope the English people will carry out his views in regard to preferential tariff in every particular. The policy urged by Chamberlain will mean the building up of the colonies; I also feel positive that it will immensely benefit Great Britain. I believe the development of Canada would be very rapid under a preferential policy and Canadian statesmen should back up Chamberlain's project with the utmost energy. With a policy such as proposed, the attitude of Germany and the United States towards the Mother Country and the colonies would quickly change. With the product of all her colonies at her disposal the Mother Country would be splendidly situated. Her splendid 'isolation' would then be complete, indeed. Such a policy, too, would lead to a still greater patriotism wherever the British flag floats. By all means let us have preferential tariffs for all Britain's colonies."

A STRIKING SCENE AT THE IONIAN.

Just as the Ionian was preparing to cast off to-day, and the passengers were getting ready for the customary handkerchief waving ceremonies, two police patrol waggons lumbered down St. Peter street to the Allan wharf.

In another moment the dock was dotted with the forty-seven labourers from England who have figured prominently in police annals the past two days.

They were a rough, unkempt lot of men, and bore evidences of their recent gaol experience. Beards of varying length adorned their faces.

They crowded round the stalwart policemen who had acted as guards during their trip to the wharf. Then suddenly they cheered and made a break for the gangway. The third officer standing at the end was brushed aside and the ship was taken by storm.

Members and subscribers are specially invited. The Board of Directors and members of committees will take tea together in the gymnasium at 6.30 the same evening.

Rev. F. S. Weston, pastor of the Westmount Baptist Church, will speak to-morrow afternoon, at 4 o'clock, at the men's meeting. The male quartette will furnish music. THE TEAMSTERS' STRIKE HAS BEEN CALLED OFF

The teamsters' strike has been declared off.

This decision was reached at a meeting held in the Empire Hall to-day.

The men will return to work unconditionally, the officials of the transport companies announce.

The companies do not expect any further friction and they say that the principle of free labour has been maintained.

The men say the strike committee has made arrangements which they consider satisfactory.

Mr. Starke chatted freely about the situation. He said:

"We have 150 teams at work to-day, and nearly 100 of our old teamsters commenced work this morning at 7 o'clock. They are gradually returning, and we expect soon to have a complete staff at work. None of the men we have engaged will be displaced to make room for strikers, and the company will have nothing more to do with peace-makers. We will take care of our own business and engage our own men. We have the work on the wharf well in hand, and we are now handling the city work."

Mr. E. E. Belcourt, of the Shedden Company, made the same remark as Lieut.-Col. Starke. He said the strike was over as far as the company was concerned. There were eighty-five teams on the city work to-day and he expected a full force of men to be on hand by Monday morning.

DEMANDS OF THE TEAMSTERS.

The following demands were made on the various transportation companies:

1.—None but members of Local No. 594, T.D.I.U., or those who are willing to become members after 15 days' employment.

2.—No discrimination shall be made against any man for his membership of the union.

3.—Ten hours shall consist a day's work for two-horse driver. All over ten hours shall be deemed as overtime.

4.—The wages shall be $1.75 per ten hours without fraction of days.

5.—$1.50 a day for ten hours' work shall constitute a single driver's pay.

7.—Time shall be taken from the time the driver leaves the barn until he returns.

10.—A cause for dismissal shall be drunkenness, dishonesty, or use of profane or abusive language to patrons of a company.

11.—No driver or member of the union shall be allowed to lose any unnecessary time.

12.—Any grievances arising between the employer and the employe, such as breakages and so forth shall be submitted to the grievance committee and he to have a fair hearing.

13.—Double time shall be paid for Sundays and all legal holidays from 12 o'clock Saturday night until 12 o'clock Sunday night; it is further agreed it shall not be compulsory on the driver to work on Sundays or holidays.

14.—All transfer drivers shall receive 15 cents an hour from 7 a.m. until 12 p.m.; from 12 p.m. until 7 a.m., double time shall be allowed.

16.—All new transfer drivers shall be given one week to join the union.

17.—The agreement to be in force until May 1, 1904, and shall renew itself for one year, unless 30 days' notice shall be given by either parties.

The large transportation companies were notified by letter that the members of the union would absolutely refuse to handle any of the goods that are at the present time being unloaded from the vessels in the port.

The firms affected by the teamsters' strike and the number of men on strike in the beginning of the struggle were:

Dominion Transport Company	250
Shedden Company	225
Cunningham and Wells	150
Meldrum Brothers	150
Canadian Transfer Company	75
Jos. Quinn	14
Dan. Donnelly	70
	934

The stand taken by the men throughout the trouble was that they could not conscientiously handle goods while 3,000 fellow workers of a sister union closely allied to their own, were striking for a better condition. There were many ups and downs on both sides. All the employers reported that they had a sufficient number of teams on the wharf to handle the necessary work, but the men all along claimed that they were satisfied with the course things were taking. On May 6, the teamsters were making overtures for peace. The previous night three of the employes of the Dominion Transportation Company called on Lieut.-Col. Starke, the manager, and asked him if he would be willing to talk over the matter in the morning, and if he would set an hour for that purpose. To this the latter agreed, and the teamsters started out to confer with their employers. Owing to their insistence on bringing officers of the union with them, their efforts were useless.

Their plan was to go out with quite a number, headed by President Leduc, of the Teamsters' Union, and to send him and three or four of the men—employes of the people they desired to interview—into the latter's office. Then they would go to another office and repeat the same tactics, only changing the men whom they sent into employes of that particular office.

STAND OF THE EMPLOYERS.

"This is the situation in a nutshell: We will treat with our own men, we do not object to their belonging to the union, but we will absolutely refuse to treat with the union as a union, and we will not allow ourselves to be dictated to or to have our business interfered with by Yankees, who have no business here."

Embargo on Freight Now Entirely Removed

The Grand Trunk Railway this morning decided to remove the embargo on freight in its entirety, following up the removal of the embargo on perishable freight announced on Thursday.

Agents are now instructed to accept all freight designed for delivery in this city, and they are, at the same time, informed that the terminals here are not presently unduly crowded.

It is expected that the Canadian Pacific Railway will follow suit this afternoon, and accept all freight without any reservation.

Since the strike of the carters commenced the Canadian Pacific Railway has been accepting freight for delivery in Montreal only subject to delays.

Route of Grand Trunk Pacific.

The map of the proposed route of the Grand Trunk Pacific, which occasioned so much criticism when it was brought before the Railway Committee of the House of Commons, owing to its indistinctness in certain particulars, has been retouched at the head offices in this city. The dark red line which indicated the route between Quebec and Fort Simpson has been made twice as broad, and now stands out in bold relief among the network of railways which, running north and south and east and west, have been chartered but never built. Formerly these nebulous projects were indicated in light yellow; now they are made more pronounced in dark green.

Activity in the Harbour.

There was much activity to-day in the harbour. The Lake Erie pulled out for Liverpool with a full cargo. The "Roman" from Antwerp was being unloaded rapidly. The Manchester Commerce was discharging volumes of merchandise. Teams were flying to and from the docks.

The Arcadian weighed anchor for London. She has a full cargo and many cattle.

Denies This Rumour.

A telegram was received in Montreal to-day, saying that there is a rumour in Sydney, C. B., to the effect that Mr. James Ross will retire from the presidency of the Coal and Steel Companies, to be succeeded by Senator G. A. Cox. Senator Forget was asked about the rumour to-day, and he gave it an unqualified denial.

Railway Officials Return.

Both General Manager Hays, of the G. T. R., and General Manager McNicoll, of the C. P. R., returned to the city this morning from Ottawa, where they had a conference with the Minister of Railways in regard to the Railway bill. Another conference is scheduled for Monday.

The Dock Deport.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Ottawa, May 16.—The Commissioners appointed to enquire into and report upon the most suitable form of dry dock for the Montreal district and the site best adapted for the purpose, have handed in their report. The Commissioners are opposed to a floating dock, and favour a permanent structure, built of concrete and masonry. The cost of this, with approaches, would be $925,000. The suggested site is below the current of the St. Mary's River.

FOUND DEAD IN BED.—Sarah Gagne, wife of Joseph Belleville, 182 Wolfe street, was found dead in bed at her home yesterday morning. Coroner McMahon ordered the body to be removed to the morgue, where a post-mortem examination will be held.

PRESENTATION.—On the occasion of the 25th anniversary of their marriage, Mr. and Mrs. T. Chase-Casgrain were presented on the 15th instant by the members of the Opposition in the House of Commons with some handsome silverplate.

Milwaukee, Wis., May 16.—The International convention of machinists has completed its election of officers. Arthur W. Holmes, Toronto, Ont., was elected a vice-president. J. Douglas, of Birmingham, Ala., was elected as editor of the Official Journal.

A New Booklet.

The Grand Trunk Passenger Department have just turned out a neat little book entitled "Routes and Fares for Summer Tours during Summer Season 1903." The book contains a fund of information in regard to the various pleasure and sporting resorts located at points on and reached via the lines of the Grand Trunk Railway System, rates from the principal points being also included for the information of intending travellers.

A copy of this book will be sent free on application to any of the Company's agents, or to Mr. G. T. Bell, General Passenger and Ticket Agent, Montreal.

Ham and Bernard McEvoy went out to Mount Royal Cemetery to-day to witness the transfer of the body of the late Joseph Radcliffe from the reception vault to its last resting place in the family plot. FINANCIAL.

Stock Market Closed.

The local stock brokers decided to take another Saturday holiday, so that the Exchange is closed to-day.

New York, May 16.—Wall Street—Opening prices varied only ⅛ to ¼ from last night's level, about equally divided between gains and losses. The market was so nearly stagnant as to show no perceptible current either way. A rise of ⅝ in Canadian Pacific was the largest change.

TURKISH EXCESSES ARE INCREASING.

Special to The Montreal Star.

London, May 16.—The Times Sofia correspondent says: In spite of external tranquility, a feeling of exasperation at the Turkish excesses is increasing. It would seem that in some of the more remote districts the armed Mohammedan population, otherwise the Bashibazouks, has been allowed to celebrate a carnival of vengeance and destruction.

A strenuous and timely action on the part of the powers, is declared urgently necessary. Hilmi Pasha, Inspector General, who appears to be allowing the introduction of reforms to slumber, has divided a host im imprisoned Bulgarians into two classes first "Guilty," second "suspected." The guilty will receive sentences commensurate with their crimes and the suspects will be banished to Asia Minor or kept under vigilant police supervision. There is no category of innocent, all Bulgarians being regarded more or less implicated in the revolutionary movement. Villages in the neighbourhood of Gabrovala and Planina are burning and the flames are visible from Barakovo.

It is reported that the Bishop of Nevrokop and all Bulgarian notabilities of the district have been arrested and transported to an unknown destination.

THE "MOAT HOUSE" MYSTERY.

Coroner's Jury Has Returned Verdict of Wilful Murder.

London, May 16.—The coroner's jury which has been investigating the "Moat house" mystery at Saffron Walden, yesterday returned a verdict of wilful murder against Dougal, the man who has been under arrest for some time in connection with the disappearance of Miss Camille Holland. Miss Holland was an aged and wealthy woman, who owned "Moat house." Some years ago Dougal, who was supposed to be her husband, appeared on the scene. It turned out afterwards that he had never been married to her. A Miss Dougal, who was supposed to be the man's sister, took up her residence in the place. Miss Holland suddenly disappeared, and then Dougal sued the woman who was supposed to be his sister, but who was really his wife, for divorce. This created suspicion, and the police began an investigation. Dougal was arrested for cashing a cheque purporting to have been signed by Miss Holland, and while he was in goal on this charge the woman's body was dug up in the grounds of "Moat house."

As to the business at Sydney, he could not speak, as he was not in touch with the details on account of his absence from the country. Mr. Ross left for Sydney last night.

EXCUSABLE HOMICIDE.—An inquest was held to-day into the cause of the death of Phillias Boisvert, who was killed yesterday on the Canadian Pacific Railway tracks near Maisonneuve by the incoming Quebec train. The evidence showed that he was walking on the track to his work at the abattoir. His head was crushed and both arms and legs were broken. The jury returned a verdict of excusable homicide.

CONFERENCE ON THE RAILWAY BILL

SEVERAL RECOMMENDATIONS

Objections to the Non-Inclusion of the I. C. R. System—A Late Session.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Ottawa, May 16.—A conference of no mean importance took place in the old Railway Committee room of the House of Commons Thursday afternoon, when the representatives of the railways and of the Toronto and Hamilton Boards of Trade met Hon. A. G. Blair and Hon. Charles Fitzpatrick and discussed with them the Railway bill, submitted to the House by the Minister of Railways this session. The railways represented were the G. T. R., the C. P. R., the Great Northern, Quebec Central, Quebec and Lake St. John, and the C. A. R. Amongst the railway magnates present were Messrs. Hays, C. Drinkwater, W. Wainwright, E. J. Chamberlain, W. Mackenzie and Grundy. The Toronto and Hamilton Boards of Trade were represented by Messrs. J. D. Allan, vice-president; F. H. Morley, secretary; Kemp, M. P. and A. Campbell, M. P. Mr. G. L. Staunton, K. C., represented the Boards of Trade; Mr. McMullen, the C. P. R.; Mr. Chrysler, K. C., and Hal McGiverin the G. T. R.; Mr. Z. A. Lash, K. C., the Canadian Northern and other lines. Mr. McNicoll was also present for the C. P. R.

Mr. Hays, as chairman of the Railway Companies Committee, opened the proceedings and stated that the gentlemen were present to discuss the bill. Their committee had prepared a document which had been sent to the minister in confidence, and which he supposed they were about to discuss. The committee had serious objections to the non-inclusion of the I. C. R. in the railways that were to be placed under the authority of the proposed commission. Then there were questions of provincial charters, of appeals and other matters that would have to be discussed. They could not help expressing their belief that there never was a measure introduced involving so much, not only to the railways, but also to the commercial interests of the country.

Mr. Blair said the Boards of Trade were also represented, and he thought that they could take their representations first.

SEVERAL RECOMMENDATIONS.

Mr. George L. Staunton, solicitor for the boards of trade, proposed several amendments. He repeated suggestions made by Mr. Maclean in the House that express companies should be brought under the jurisdiction of the commission. The commission should also deal with those electric railways, which are not merely urban, but compete with steam railways, in carrying freight and passengers, as in the Niagara Peninsula. The business was steadily increasing. Law should prevent over-capitalization, which was a fruitful source of excessive rates. Mr. Blair said the last point had been mentioned in Parliament. His mind was not made up, but he would draft a clause and see whether it met the approval of Parliament. Mr. Staunton went on to say there should be no discrimination in favour of shippers of more than one carload. The commission should deal with the question of demurrage. Railways used to allow 72 hours for unloading coarse freight. This had been reduced to 48 hours, and hardship ensued when a large number of carloads were crowded in at once.

Mr. Blair thought this point was provided for, but would look into it.

Mr. Staunton mentioned several other points relating mainly to procedure.

Mr. Blair said he did not want to overload the bill with contentious legal matters. Mr. Staunton smilingly said it was a good bill anyhow, and he would drop all his suggestions rather than lose it. He handed a paper in containing suggestions mentioned and many others.

RAILWAY AND THE LAW.

Now came the turn of the railways. Mr. Z. A. Lash, K.C., began his argument by contending that this bill really amended the charter of every railway company in Canada, and charters were not usually amended unless companies applied.

Mr. Blair—"You cannot expect much sympathy on that ground. This is a public law, and public law must govern the railways."

Mr. Lash said he was only on the threshold of his argument. The bill was full of details and the companies wanted to be present as each detail was dealt with. It would not be merely to make a general declaration, and leave it to be interpreted and carried out with companies not represented. He suggested that the bill be referred to a special committee.

Mr. Blair said it would be impossible at this period in the session to form a large committee having the time to go through the bill section by section and hear arguments of counsel. He suggested that the railway companies should go ahead now and make their protests.

Mr. Lash said it would take the whole sitting to get through one section.

Mr. Blair said that at that rate it would be impossible to get through the bill this session. He was willing that the railways should state their case, but would consent to no procedure that would cause delay, whether designed or not. He was inclined to suspect some manoeuvring to defeat the passage of the bill.

Mr. Lash said there was no such intention, and there was no ground for supposing his suggestion was not made in good faith.

Mr. Blair said he was open to argument, and would give several days of his time to hearing the railways, but the progress of the bill must not be delayed.

THE COMMISSION.

Mr. Hays made some suggestions as to the composition of the commission. He favoured a commission of five, two of whom should be railway men.

Mr. Blair said he favoured rather calling in railway experts to advise the commissioners.

Mr. Hayes thought this plan would not give continuity of action and uniformity of judgment.

Mr. F. H. Chrysler, for the Canada Atlantic, said that the railways should be governed only as to maximum rates, to prevent overcharge, not minimum rates. They might have to cut rates where there was competition by water or with American railroads. Mr. Chrysler also raised the point that some railways would be exempt from regulation, such as Intercolonial and part of the Canadian Pacific.

Mr. Blair said no one need worry about the Intercolonial, which was the people's railway under direct Government control.

The conference lasted till nearly eleven o'clock, when appointments were made for several days ahead. The evening was spent entirely in discussing technical clauses, the only thing of interest being an argument by Mr. Chrysler for more freedom in appeals.

THE AIR NAVIGATION PROBLEM SOLVING.

One of the Most Successful Trips Yet Made Over Paris.

Part of the course was against a brisk wind. A slight accident to the ventilator did not interrupt the success of the trip.

Morocco's Sultan and Russia's Jews; Manchuria and the Balkans.

FOUR UNEASY SPOTS IN EAST

Places Where Civilization and Semi-Barbarism Conflict and Cause Countless Sorrows.

London, May 16. — The Standard has published a letter from Kieff, European Russia, describing the pitiful scenes witnessed there daily, which arise from the operations of the expulsory edict against the Jews. This edict affects 37,000 persons.

The Jews were given six months' grace, but, hoping for a respite, a majority of them remained in Kieff until the end of this time, when they were obliged to sell their property at ruinous prices and depart hurriedly. These Jews will distribute themselves mostly throughout the various centres in Southern Poland. These cities and townships, however, are yearly becoming more and more seriously congested.

Official reports place the number of Christian victims at Monastir and in the surrounding country at seventy-two.

"In spite of the denials of the Porte," cables the Constantinople correspondent of the Daily Mail in London, "the situation at Monastir is alarming. Thirty-eight additional battalions of reserves have been ordered thither from Smyrna."

MOROCCO COMIC OPERA WAR.

Madrid, May 16.—A despatch from Melilla, Morocco, says the Sultan's envoys, who are charged with a pacificatory mission to the rebels, have arrived there with $16,000.

THE SUFFERING IN BULGARIA.

London, May 16.—The correspondent of the Times at Sofia cables as follows: "Bulgaria has called the attention of the representatives of the powers to the severeties practiced by the Turkish authorities in Macedonia, the outrages committed by the armed Mohammedan population, and to the secrecy of the proceedings of the Salonica court martial, which precludes consular intervention.

"Nothing is known here of the alleged Bulgarian note to the powers, but if serious complications are to be avoided these matters must receive the serious attention of the powers.

"A state of terror prevails in the Djuma, Raslog, Melnik and Karatova districts. Many villages are blocked by the Turkish troops and some have been bombarded and burned. The Bashi Bazouks are assisting in the work of destruction. The villagers have been arrested wholesale, and others are fleeing to the mountains."

It is reported from Salonica that the French and Russian consulates there have been discovered to be undermined. Large stores of dynamite have been seized.

RUSSIA GRASPS MANCHURIA.

"In regard to the charges to New Chwang formerly these were 38 cents per word, but since the Russian has occupied as Manchuria charges have been increased to a dollar and ten cents, as they treat Manchuria the same as Russia and Asia."

Shredded Whole Wheat Biscuit is made in the most hygienic and scientific food laboratory in the world. The wheat is spun into light shreds, containing thousands of open pores and is not crushed flat and dense as in the case of other foods. These pores absorb the digestive juices and provide far greater surface for their action than is given by any other food.

The following simple "course before coffee" is much in vogue with club men everywhere. The simplicity of preparation and the little cost, together with the delicious taste of the compotes, make this dessert in rare favor in the home.

USE SEASONABLE FRUIT AND

SHREDDED WHOLE WHEAT BISCUIT

Split and slightly heat the Biscuit, then serve with berries, sliced peaches, bananas or any seasonable fruit. Simple, isn't it? Your verdict will be

"Simply Delicious"

For Shortcake—With sharp knife halve the SHREDDED WHOLE WHEAT BISCUIT lengthwise; prepare pineapple as for sauce (or bananas or mixed fruit) and set aside. When serving, arrange halves in layers covered with fruit and add sugar and whipped cream.

SHREDDED WHOLE WHEAT BISCUIT is sold by all grocers.

HON. MR. ROSS SAYS THAT A DEBT IS NOT TO BE PAID.

But Dominion Government Must Pay Five Per Cent Interest on it for All Time.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Toronto, May 16. — The Finance Minister, Hon. W. Fielding, and Hon. G. W. Ross, of Ontario, are in dispute over the account which exists between the province and the Dominion. Mr. Ross makes public correspondence which indicates the points at issue.

In a letter, dated April 28, 1903, Hon. W. S. Fielding tells the Premier that the Federal Government will pay the province on July 1 interest at the rate of 5 per cent. on the trust funds of Ontario, held by the Dominion, but that after that the rate will be at four per cent, as the Dominion is under no obligation to maintain the rate at five per cent.

Mr. Fielding says: "The position of the accounts between the Dominion and the province at present is that there is a certain sum due by the province to the Dominion, on which you are paying four per cent., and a certain sum, a little larger, on which you have been claiming five per cent. Both these sums stand in the position of ordinary debts, which may be paid off at any time. Pending a mutual arrangement for such payment, I would suggest that the more convenient way to deal with the matter would be to treat these sums as cross entries. There would be a balance in your favour, upon which we would be willing temporarily to allow you four per cent. If this arrangement is not satisfactory, we shall be prepared to pay off the amount of our indebtedness to your Government before the 1st of January next."

In a reply, dated May 8, Hon. Mr. Ross disputes both contentions of the Finance Minister. He concludes: "I have, therefore, respectfully to inform you that the Government of Ontario will not agree to any change by the Dominion in reduction of the five per cent., payable on the trust funds, nor will we acknowledge the right of the Dominion, at its option, to pay off the said trust funds, or any part thereof."

SOUTH AFRICA TENDERS.

Canadians Will Be Given An Opportunity to Compete.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Ottawa, May 16. — Sir Wilfrid Laurier has received a letter from Lieut.-General G. Lyttelton, officer commanding the troops in South Africa, dated Pretoria, April 6, in which the latter says: "I have the honour to inform you that tenders are being called for the supply of bread and forage to the troops for certain stations in the Cape Colony, and for bread, forage and groceries for all stations in the Transvaal and Orange River Colony for a period of six months, commencing on October 1. I enclose ten forms of tender for each Colony, for distribution to any applicants that there may be. Would you kindly send me a list giving the names and addresses of those to whom forms have been issued. General Lyttelton encloses a form of advertisement for insertion in the leading papers, and asks that the account be forwarded to him. Should there not be any tenders in Canada he proposes to send the names and addresses of successful tenderers so that merchants in Canada may have an opportunity of offering their flour to the accepted contractor in South Africa.

CONVINCING EVIDENCE OF CANCER CURES.

No remedy has ever met with such unqualified success as the new constitutional treatment for cancers and tumors. The fact that it acts on the principle of destroying the cancer germs and purifying the blood of cancer poisons, has established it the only rational remedy for cancers, tumors and malignant growths. There are dozens of people in Canada who have been completely cured by this new, painless method of treatment, and if you will send two stamps to Messrs. Stott & Jury, Bowmanville, Ont., full particulars of these cases will be sent to you.

MURDER TRIAL AT BRYSON.

Jules Henri Charged With Killing a Lad Named Gucher.

Ottawa, Ont., May 16. — The Kippewa murder trial, in which Jules Henri, for the second time, is defending himself on a charge of killing young Gucher, is in progress at Bryson, and will likely last all week. The case attracted great interest on the occasion of the first trial, when the jury disagreed, and the evidence this time is very largely the same as given then. The alleged crime was committed on January, 1902. Five witnesses have been examined, the most interesting being that of James Gucher, father of the murdered boy. He told of meeting with the prisoner in November, 1901, when he found him lying in the snow almost perished. Witness and his son were out snowshoeing at the time. They made a fire and gave prisoner refreshments and persuaded him to return to the shanty with them. Some time after Gucher left his son with Henri and went to Ville Marie for provisions. On returning he found everything in disorder, and stumbled over a hole in the floor, where a board had been lifted. It was dark, and on lighting a lamp he made an investigation. The tick was the only thing on the bed, and it was covered with blood. He discovered that the blanket and pillow had been burned in the stove in the adjoining room. He found that a gallon of coal oil had been used in burning the bed clothes. Witness was weak with fear as to the fate of his boy, and went to bed in an adjoining shed under some straw. Next morning he found that the stick of provisions brought home had disappeared. He then started for Ville Marie to notify a constable, when he saw tracks in the snow. He followed them until he came to a raised place, and with a shovel he first uncovered a blanket and in a moment later his boy's body. He then went to Ville Marie for help. Witness swore that he had money buried in the earth under the shanty floor, and that it had been stolen.

DEAR DR. SANDEN:

Enclosed please find price of your Electric Belt, which I have used for 60 days. It has done the work and I am well and happy. Yours sincerely,

Having strong objections to using my patients' names in print, I substitute dash for the signature in the above letter. But at my office I can show you thousands of originals of the same purport. The reason of my success is plain—for 35 years

I have made diseases of men my specialty. The experience I have thus gained is not equalled by any other specialist in my line. I am honestly proud of having made thousands of strong, vigorous, happy men out of poor helpless wrecks. This I am still doing, and more of it than ever. A little over 35 years ago I made the discovery that electricity cured such diseases as Drains, Losses, Impotency, Varicocele, Exhaustion, etc., after all known remedies had failed. I then invented my world-famed Dr. Sanden electric Belt. Every man to-day knows of it, and knows that electricity properly used—but mind, I say properly used—will cure these distressing diseases. So sure am I of what my appliance and advice for use will do, that I ask none to buy, I simply ask that you will allow me to send you my Herculex

LADY RIDERS AT THE HORSESHOW.

Great Interest in That Particular Saddle Class —Polo Ponies Exhibited—Some Fine High Jumping Winds Up the Days Programme.

The largest crowd that has patronized the Horseshow during the week attended last night.

Yesterday afternoon there was a comparatively small crowd, and a great many children, who had the time of their life.

In the evening, the high jumping competition was, no doubt, the great attraction.

In the afternoon the principal feature was the class of ladies' saddle horses.

Mrs. Beck came out at the head of the competitors, but Miss Blair, of Boston, who rode a horse virtually a stranger to her, also did excellently. The other riders showed some very graceful riding.

The results were:

The high jumping competition, the first of the week, was a fine ending to an unexciting evening. Intruder and the great Pearl fell out at the five foot two inch jump. Maringo, the gray, which divided honours with its owner, Mr. Murray, on Thursday, failed at five foot six. Rupert went out at five foot nine, and Coquette at the six foot hurdle. The results were:

Event IV, class 51, high jump, horses not clearing 5 feet ineligible for a prize. Trial will commence at 4 feet 6 inches. Jumps will be raised 4 inches at a time up to 5 feet 6 inches, when they will be raised 3 inches at a time up to 6 feet, which, if reached, shall be the maximum. Only three trials will be allowed to horses at each height. A HORSE SHOW OF HORSES.

The lights were out, the men were out, the women gone! The scene
Had changed, and there were horses where Society had been,—
All panoplied in armour some, as when the lists along,
They crashed in mimic battle before a breathless throng:
And some with streaming mane, and eyes with maneless terror wide,
As when with Pharaoh, the King, they drank the Red Sea's tide;
And some of fire, as if to swing in triumph o'er the stars
The Chariots of Isreal, the Prophet's funeral cars;

Black Agnes brings the Queen of Scots—ill-fated Mary, fair
Here's Bevis, with Lord Marmion up, and here's the charger bore
The Blind King of Bohemia, when he returned no more;
Lo, Bavieca bears the Cid as proudly as of old,
Bucephalus is taking snuff, that he may "snuff afar
The battle," as when Alexander rode him to the war,

Here comes the nag that threw Sir Richard Calmady, atrot,
With Balaam's Ass, and Shank's Mare—as if he'd ne'er been shot!
Black Bess, Dick Turpin's favourite, curvets behind the three,
So, all the horses that have had a name and fame appear
And the very automobiles—unkindest fate of all!

THE CITY COUNCIL AND THE MILITIA

CLAIM CITY IS NOT LIABLE

The City Attorneys are Asked to Give Definite Opinion on City's Liability.

There was another warm debate at the City Council yesterday afternoon over the proposition that the city should pay $5,000 to the militia.

After a long discussion it was decided to ask another opinion from the Law Department as to whether or not the city was liable for the money. Thus the whole matter was deferred until the meeting of the City Council on Monday.

The impression now is that the city will not pay the $5,000, but it will make a demand on the Government to foot the bill.

Discussion on the matter was brought up by the reading of a report from the Finance Committee favouring the payment of the amount under reserve.

The report was based on a species of opinion from the Law Department that the amount could be paid under reserve, and the cash taken out of the reserve fund.

NO DETAILED STATEMENT.

"I should like to know," said Ald. Lebeuf, "if we have received a detailed statement as to the whole amount which may have to be paid to the militia?"

The Mayor said such a statement had not been received.

Ald. Lebeuf then said that if the city paid the $5,000 on account it would have to pay the entire cost of calling out the militia. He held the statutes were such that the city ought not to pay one cent of the amount. It was right that the volunteers should receive their pay, but the money should come from the Government, and not from the corporation. As to the Civic Law Department, he understood the lawyers were divided in opinion as to the city paying the sum. The legal aspect of the case being so uncertain, he said, it would be unfair to spend the city's money in any such way as proposed.

In reply, Ald. Laporte said that while the city might not be legally responsible for the amount, he held it was only fair that the $5,000 should be advanced. In the first place the militia had been called out by the city, and it would be a mean act to refuse the request of Col. Gordon for $5,000 to pay the men. The City Council could rest assured that if the sum in question ought to be paid by the Government, the money would be refunded; this meant the city would run no risk in advancing the amount. Personally, he felt the city was in honour bound to pay the money. He hoped a majority of the City Council would agree with him in this view.

OPPOSES THE PROPOSITION.

Ald. L. A. Lapointe strongly opposed the advancing of the $5,000. The statutes, he said, showed in the plainest way that the pay of the militia rested with the Government. In consequence, he moved the following motion:

"Whereas, the harbour of Montreal is recognized as the national port of Canada; and,

"Whereas, the recent 'longshoremen's strike affected not only the trade and commerce of this city, but also the entire western section of the Dominion; and,

"Whereas, in the year 1900 a strike occurred among the operatives of the cotton factories in the town of Valleyfield and the cost of the services of the militia ($9,000) was paid by the Dominion Government, and the said town of Valleyfield was not held to repay this amount.

"Whereas, in view of this precedent, there is every reason why Montreal should not be discriminated against by the Dominion Government in connection with the paying of the military services requisitioned in aid of the civil authority during the recent 'longshoremen's strike.

"Whereas, there are grave doubts as to the legality of the enactment 62 Vict., ch. 58, secs. 6, whereby the city of Montreal is given jurisdiction to the centre of the River St. Lawrence, opposite the city, it being contended that this provision of the law is ultra vires.

"Whereas, the militia act stipulates that in connection with such an emergency, the pay, etc., of the force requisitioned may be advance out of the consolidated revenue fund of Canada.

"Be it resolved, that the Dominion Government, in view of the above cited circumstances, be humbly requested to pay for the services of the militia requisitioned during the said recent 'longshoremen's strike."

It was proposed by Ald. Ekers that, before a vote was taken on the motion of Ald. Lapointe, another opinion should be obtained from the City Attorneys as to the liability of the city to pay the amount.

Ald. Lapointe consented to Ald. Ekers' request.

Ald. Laporte made an amendment to the motion of Ald. Lapointe to the effect that the city attorneys be asked if, in case the city decided to advance the $5,000, it would place itself in a position to be called upon to pay the whole cost of the militia.

WHAT GOVERNMENT MUST DO.

Ald. Lebeuf said the police were supposed to give citizens' protection, but they were not supposed to be responsible for property belonging to the harbour commissioners and the Government; the protection of such property devolved upon the Government.

Ald. Carter said all the difficulty had arisen over the letter of Col. Gordon asking for the advance of $5,000 to pay the militia. He (Ald. Carter) did not suppose Col. Gordon had given particular thought as to whether or not the city was liable for the amount; he simply desired that the militia should be paid. It was the opinion of Ald. Carter that the city was liable for the amount; he simply desired that number of details and said it was ridiculous to suppose that because certain protection was given the wharves by the city, the corporation was liable to pay the militia when harbour property was threatened. The position of affairs was such that the Harbour Commissioners claimed an absolute right on and to the wharves; if the city then had no right on the wharves neither had it the right to pay out a large sum for protection to the wharves. It had also to be remembered that Col. Gordon and not the Government, had asked the city to pay the militia.

It was the opinion of Ald. Martineau that the entire matter should be referred back to the Finance Committee for further consideration.

Ald. Ekers objected to this; all that was needed was an opinion from the city attorneys as to whether the city was liable or not.

It was then moved by Ald. Lebeuf that the report of the Finance Committee lay on the table until such time as an opinion was received from the Law Department as to the city's liability. This motion was adopted and it was decided to meet again on Monday to get the attorneys' opinion and reach a definite decision.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL STILL ON THE STAND.

The Progress in the British Columbia Land Scandal Case.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Victoria, May 16. — Attorney-General Eberts is still on the rack. Mr. Duff finished with him yesterday, but it is doubtful if McCaul will conclude Saturday forenoon. Yesterday he flatly contradicted statements of Wells, that Taylor wired him from Montreal, suggesting a change in the subsidy of the British Columbia Southern to the Columbia and Western and of his playing "impossible." He also stated that several Ministers, including himself, McInnes and Wells, favoured an appeal to the courts to see if the Canadian Pacific Railway action against some of those who had staked claims on one of the blocks, was justified. His deputy, he said, thought the Canadian Pacific Railway had a strong case. He did not know if this opinion was submitted to the Government caucus, which decided to rush through the repudiation bill.

Mr. McCaul asked Eberts if he would sit in the Cabinet with a blackguard such as he evidently regarded Wells, believing, as he stated, that Wells' statement about being approached in Montreal was false. He asked him why he did not resign, but the committee would not permit the question.

The chairman of the committee, in answer to Hon. Mr. Prior's enquiries, said the committee could not conclude on the date fixed, and, therefore, they decided to notify members of the Legislature it would not convene till May 26.

THREE MEN DROWNED IN FRONT OF DAWSON CITY.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Dawson, Yukon, May 16.—Five men, employes of a new saw mill company, started to cross the northern channel from the island in the Klondike river just above Dawson. The canoe swamped and one man jumped to shore, while the others went down in the swift current. Another man caught in an eddy and reached land. The three others, swimming, passed under the Klondike traffic bridge and disappeared right after. John Frank, of San Juan, was rescued by the brave efforts of Messrs. Simmons and Harrison, but died immediately.

The bodies of Wm. Bailey, of Livermore, California, and Jno. Hegland, of Norway (late of Juneau), were not recovered. The police are searching the river.

Reports of drownings at Indian River have been received, but are not confirmed. The Yukon is pretty clear of ice now, but the jams between Dawson and Selkirk still continue.

TROUBLE FOR TORONTO.

The Street Railway Employes May Strike Again.

Toronto, May 16.—There appears to be little hope now of averting a strike of Street Railway employes. Representatives of the men and the company have been conferring at different times during the week, but without satisfactory results. The main issue is recognition of the union. The men are now paid 18 cents an hour, and 20 cents to all who have served over two years. They ask that these rates be increased to 20 or 21 cents and 23 cents. The company refuses both requests. A mass meeting of the men has been called for to-night. It is expected that they will announce a strike on Victoria Day, May 25, unless a settlement be reached in the meantime.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Brockville, Ont., May 16.—A bad wreck occurred Friday afternoon on the Grand Trunk Railway, near Mallorytown. A westbound freight jumped the track going at full speed, derailing several cars, blocking both lines and tearing up the tracks for a considerable distance. The two express trains for Montreal were caught west of the wreck, and delayed until the Brockville auxiliary righted matters. Fortunately no person was injured. The damage to rolling stock was heavy.

Death of Mrs. Mosgrove.

Ottawa, May 16.—Mrs. Mosgrove, wife of His Honour Judge Mosgrove, died on Friday at the Protestant General Hospital, after a lingering illness. Deceased was a daughter of the late David Moore, a well-known lumberman. She leaves, beside her husband, three sons, Edward and William, who reside at the family home, on the Richmond road, and Robert, an officer in the British army, serving with his regiment in India, who is now on his way home from England.

NEW SEAWANHAKA CUP DEFENDER

It Will Be Launched in a Very Short Time Now.

FOUR IN THE TRIAL RACES

Everything Looks Prosperous and Promises a Most Enjoyable Yachting Season.

The new Seawanhaka Cup defender, the only one that was built this year, will be launched to-day or within a very short time.

Although there is only one boat designed anew, there will be at least four in the trial races, including Trident, Osna, Whitecap, and the new boat as yet unnamed.

Everything looks most promising at the Royal St. Lawrence Yacht Club. The finances are in a very healthy condition. The rooms are all arranged for, the local management promises to be very satisfactory, and the local fleet of club boats has received quite an increase.

LACROSSE

The Pittsburg Team Is Unable to Secure the Necessary Grounds.

DISAPPOINTMENT CAUSED

Great Efforts Will Be Made to Prevent the New Pennsylvania League From Going Up.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Pittsburg, Pa., May 16.—The local lacrosse league is having troubles of its own. The management anticipated trouble when the clubs were organized, but they did not expect to be unable to secure grounds. That is the situation to-day, however. The clubs are without a field even for practice purposes, and failure stares them in the face. It is rumoured that the project will be given up, but Secretary Lambe refuses to confirm this. He would say nothing about the situation when interviewed by the Star's correspondent. Owing to the inability to secure grounds, the game which had been scheduled with the lacrosse team of the Toronto University has been cancelled. This game, which was scheduled to take place later this month, had attracted considerable attention in and about this city and the public was genuinely disappointed when it was called off. They were anxious to see lacrosse played by a team from the real home of the game.

FINE HORSE FOR CANADA.

Fast Pacing Stallion for St. Andrews, P.Q.

There passed through the city yesterday a valuable piece of horse flesh, the stallion William Wallace Scribner, en route to St. Andrew's, Que., where he is to be placed in the stud. Dr. Simpson, of St. Andrew's, is now the owner of the horse, and he is proud of him, for he is not only a beautiful looking animal, but a fast pacer, having a mark of 2.06 1-4 to his credit. He is a Hambletonian-thoroughbred cross, which means that he has excellent blood coursing through his veins. This autumn it is Dr. Simpson's intention of putting him in training and starting him on the local circuits. He has won many races, including the Faber Cup, to waggon, at New York, in 1900, from a field of twelve.

FINE RACE HORSE KILLED WITH DOPE.

New York, May 16.—With the racehorse, Dr. Riddle, dead from an excessive dose of "dope," as the drugs used to stimulate horses to their extreme of speed are designated technically, and the stable connections of the horse in question under suspension pending final action by the stewards of the Jockey Club, the most flagrant scandal in the use of drugs that has been brought to light since racing officials prohibited the employment of dope was brought into notice at the Morris Park race course to-day. Dr. Riddle raced in the name of J. Gardner, and was a starter in the second event of to-day's programme, selling race, at 7 furlongs, over the Withers' mile, in which fourteen horses ran. The horse was ridden by the lightweight jockey, Salling, and was backed for a "killing" by his stable connection, but attracted attention in the paddock by his peculiar actions, as he required two men to handle him when he was saddled, and seemed then to be almost uncontrollable.

The matter was called then to the attention of Starter Fitzgerald, who, after noting the condition of Dr. Riddle at the post, sent word to the stewards and asked for instructions as to whether the horse should be permitted to start. He was advised to let Dr. Riddle break with his field, the rider after that having the stewards' permission to pull up. Salling very pluckily broke away from the post, but at once pulled up the horse, which was reeling under him, and walked to the stretch long after Miss Buttermilk was raced out in front, with Kickshaw all the way, had won the race by a head.

Dr. Riddle could not be got to the paddock, so Salling dismounted and turned the horse over to the grooms, who, after difficulty, got him to his stable at the head of the stretch. The stewards sent a veterinary surgeon to examine him there, and on the report of the surgeon later issued the following ruling:

"The stewards of the meeting order that the entries of J. Gardner and the horse, Dr. Riddle, be refused, and the license of Trainer Wm. Howell be suspended, and the case referred to the stewards of the Jockey Club."

The horse died within two hours after reaching the stable.

Slater Shoe Advertising

Foot Comfort

Short talks by the Slater Shoe ad. man, No. 3.

For years the "Slater Shoe" has been advertised as the shoe of comfort—of foot ease.

If the "Slater Shoe" had not proven to wearers its claims to comfort how long could it have remained on the market, no matter how loudly or skillfully it might have been advertised?

How long could the makers have continued to expend large sums in advertising had the "Slater Shoe" fallen short in any of its advertised claims to comfort, wear and appearance?

Strength Restored!

Now that it is generally conceded that "Electricity is the Basis of Life," you should give some credit to the theory of my teachings:—

It has been demonstrated that Electricity is the most natural of all remedies for the cure of the ailments which afflict the human body. Every physician of modern ideas is an advocate of electrical treatment, and concedes that it stands far above all medical agents, especially when applied to diseases relating to the nervous system. This is a practical admission of the power of electricity over the nerves and vital organs, hence it must be evident to a thinking person that a means of intelligently applying this wonderful agent should be the greatest boon to suffering humanity.

When we consider that our nervous system, which is the fountain of life to the kidneys, liver, stomach, brain and the various organic functions of the body, depends for its sustenance upon the vitalizing element of electricity, and that, without this life it is impossible to keep up a normal condition of health in the body, it is easy to understand that a waste of this life principle will be followed by weakness and disease, and it is also easy to understand why the natural restoration of this electric force in the nervous system will saturate the various vital organs which have become weakened with a new energy which will place every vital part of the body in a state of natural health.

You read in the papers every day of prominent people dying suddenly, and the physicians decide that the cause was "heart failure." Does anybody know what that means? What made the heart fail? The heart never fails without reason. Find that reason and you will find the actual cause of death. I say it is, nine times out of ten, exhaustion of vitality. The heart stops beating because the power which runs it is shut off. That power is vital energy, which is nerve force.

Let us take for example this case—Miss Adamson, of Ottawa, Ont. Suppose she had died suddenly in one of those spells, what would they ascribe her death to? "Heart failure." Not sufficient strength in the nerves to keep up the action of the heart. Read this letter:—

Dr. McLaughlin:

Dear Sir,—A few lines in regard to your Belt. I may say I wore your Belt only one week myself. My sister has been doctoring for close on two years. The doctors claimed that she had no blood. Shewas tired and worn out all the time. At night she would wake up and would be perfectly numb. In the above time she was treated by three doctors. They did not seem to do her any good, and in reading over your book, I came to the conclusion your Belt might help her, so I gave her the Belt to try, and after the third night the numbness left her, and she has not felt it since. So, Doctor, if the belt does me no good I will be well satisfied, for I am sure it is only a matter of a little time till she will be all right. She is gaining every day. I will write you later on. Yours truly, W. G. ADAMSON, 156 Friel Street, Ottawa, Ont., April 11, 1903.

I believe in finding the cause of all such troubles and removing it. If it is in the stomach, I restore the power there; if in the nerve system, I build up the nerve force; in the kidneys, the blood, or the other organs of the system, I find the cause and supply to the body the needed help, and after I have removed the cause Nature will cure the disease.

Too many physicians make the mistake of treating the condition and overlooking the cause. If a heart is weak they stimulate it with drugs, when they ought to devote the treatment to building up the stomach, which is the real cause of heart failure. Every time the heart is stimulated by a drug its vitality is strained, and one day it will simply stop short.

Take Rheumatism; it is found the world over; it does not respect age or sex, rank, condition or occupation. We believe we are justified in saying that no other disease numbers so many subjects; from no disease is the sufferer rendered so helpless, or deserving of pity.

NOTE THE ACTION OF MY METHOD ON THESE CASES:

I have been wearing one of your Belts for about thirty days, and feel more than pleased with it. I do not feel any of the rheumatism now. I am also a great deal stronger.—WM. J. THOMPSON, Omemee, Ont.

I am cured as sound as any man can be, after nearly four years' suffering. I drove the rheumatism out of my leg nearly in one night. What I am telling you is the truth.—GEO. A. MADGETT, 178 Stanley avenue, Hamilton.

No rheumatism nor dizziness now, and the blood's circulation s greatly benefited also. Thanking you for your kindness, I remain, dear doctor, yours truly, JAMES B. POLLARD, CHARLOTTETOWN, P.E.I.

It is now three months since I got your Belt, and I am completely cured of muscular rheumatism and sciatica, from which I was a great sufferer. I doctored for months, but I got no better. I can now walk a mile or so without feeling tired, but when I got the Belt I could not walk across the house in half an hour.—MRS. J. L. HYNDMAN, 138 Lombard St., Winnipeg.

Your Belt is all that you claim it to be. I can recommend it to any one who is suffering from rheumatism. It has cured me of indigestion as well, also helped my kidneys. I used to suffer a good deal from kidney trouble, and I do not feel it at all now.—GEO. S. BROOKS, Shanty Bay, Ont.

I would have written to you sooner, but thought it wise not to halloo till I was out of the bush. I am pleased to tell you that I have not had an attack of rheumatism since last fall, and feel stronger in every way. I have gained 13 pounds. — MATTHEW ROBINSON, Mayfield, Ont.

I wore one of your high-grade Belts. I suffered for two or three years previous to this with rheumatism. I can honestly recommend the Belt to any one, also your method of doing business; the manner in which you treat your patients, and the attention you give them. Your business should certainly prosper.—H. E. MITCHELL, Forrest, Man.

I WILL PAY $1,000

For a case of Nervous Debility, Stomach Trouble, Varicocele, Early Decay, Rheumatism, Lame Back, Sciatica, any case of Kidney Disease that has not gone as far as Bright's Disease, Indigestion, Constipation, or any weakness caused by ignoring the laws of Nature, which I cannot cure with my improved Electric Belt, the marvel of electricians, the most wonderful curative device that has ever been introduced.

READ MY OFFER:

I know how skeptical people are after paying hundreds of dollars to doctors without getting any benefit, and, knowing that any man would willingly pay for a cure when he gets it, I now offer any man a complete restoration to health before he pays a cent. There is no deception about this offer, either in the making of it or carrying it out. All I ask is fair security that I will be paid when the work is done; this any honest man will be glad to give. I take all the chances—you take none. Isn't that fair? Do you want any better evidence of my confidence in my belt? Now, if you suffer, do not lay this aside and say you will try it later. Act upon it to-day—NOW. Tell me what you are suffering from, and I will arrange a Belt with all necessary attachments suitable for your case, and send it to you, and you can

Partizanship of the Western Civil Service

Western Members of the Commons Claim That Dominion Civil Servants Are Taking a Most Active Part in the Approaching Manitoba Provincial Elections—Instances Are Given—Messrs. Roche, McCreary, Scott, Sir William Mulock and the Two Leaders Express Their Views.—The Motion That Was Defeated.

Special Staff Correspondence.

Press Gallery, House of Commons, Ottawa, May 16.—This was distinctly and almost entirely a Manitoba day in the House. The subject which was being aired was the complaint that Dominion office holders in the province are using their position for political purposes, that in fact they hardly pretend to be anything but partizans of most active character, and are bending all their energies to defeat the Roblin Government in the approaching provincial election. Several instances of this kind of things were brought forward.

The case from the Conservative point of view was temperately but clearly stated by Messrs. Roche and Boyd.

The chief defender of the Government was Mr. Wm. McCreary, who did not seriously deny any of the allegations made, but confined himself to maintaining that the other fellows were worse.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir William Mulock both claimed that they still adhere to the high principle that civil servants should not be active partizans. The Prime Minister promised to investigate the conduct of two of the gentlemen to whom reference had been made, and to ask them for an explanation.

RAGGING OF COLONIES.

Mr. John Charlton called attention to a cable of the 12th instant telling of an officer named Willow being subjected to ragging by his brother officers in the 21st Lancers because he is a Colonial ranker. Mr. Charlton pointed out that from time to time reports of this character appear in the press. Among the aristocratic officers of the British Army there was a prejudice not only against a man who had risen from the ranks, but a double prejudice against him for being a colonial. Mr. Charlton thought a protest should be entered against such treatment of our fellow colonials in the British service. The army should be a fighting machine not a social reserve. If Canadians were to be in the British Army they should get fair play, and there should be due recognition of merit.

Sir Frederick Borden referred to Mr. Charlton's declaration during the Home Rule debate in the Canadian Parliament that Canada had enough to do to mind its own business. If that objection were well taken on that occasion, it would be much stronger now in reference to what was purely a matter of military discipline. Sir Frederick admitted that in some regiments there was a strong prejudice against men who had risen from the ranks, but he did not think this prejudice was general, nor was it stronger against Canadians than most other rankers. He instanced many Canadians who occupy distinguished places in the army, as disproving the existence of any general prejudice against Canadians.

COL. SAM. HUGHES' VIEWS.

Col. Sam. Hughes invited the Prime Minister to express his views on the subject, but the Premier declined. "I am satisfied with the answer given by my friend the Minister of Militia," said he.

Mr. Bell thought the matter should not be passed over in such a way as to give the impression that the Canadian people look upon ragging with any favour.

Col. Sam. Hughes said this complaint, as to social ostracism in the army was not confined to colonials, but was made by the best men in the British service. Unfortunately, in the Canadian permanent service, there was something of the same thing and officers were prone to stand upon their social position without having sufficient knowledge of their duties in the field.

Col. Sam. declared that before he saw the British officer it was his ambition that his son should be one, but now he had changed his mind, and was glad the boy had refused a commission.

Mr. Lavill, of Leeds and Grenville, said that the House had often shown itself quite willing to express its opinion on matters not nearly so closely connected with Canadian interests. The subject was then discontinued.

PARTIZAN CIVIL SERVANTS.

Mr. Roche called attention to the participation of Dominion civil servants in the elections in Manitoba. The matter had become a public scandal. He instanced the law laid down as a cardinal principle by members of the cabinet, that a civil servant who is an active partisan must cease to be one or the other. Since this Government came into power, dismissals innumerable had taken place on the ground that civil servants were active participants in political work. He therefore felt entitled to ask that this principle be now enforced and that those officials who were violating the law in Manitoba be dismissed.

Mr. Roche quoted from a speech by Sir Wilfrid Laurier, in which the principle was laid down that an official of the Government might hold whatever views he saw fit and might exercise his franchise in a quiet way, but if he were an active partisan, he took his political life in his hands, and need not complain if he were dismissed. Mr. Roche refused to believe that this was intended to apply to Conservatives alone.

The Premier too, said he was not alone in this declaration. The Minister of Trade and Commerce also used similar language, saying in effect, that to allow such a man to continue in office would be for the Government to fail in the discharge of its duty. Sir Louis Davies also had held the same views and had expressed them in the House.

Mr. Roche was confident that the Government would take action against those of its officials who were now sinning in this respect in Manitoba. In 1899 Mr. Martin Jerome, a forest ranger, was nominated for the local constituency of Carillon. Mr. Roche made enquiry in the House and was informed that Mr. Jerome had been tendered the nomination, but that if he accepted he would cease to be a Government employe. What happened? Mr. Jerome took holidays during the campaign and was elected. Then he was reinstated, if he had ever been dismissed, and afterwards continued in his dual capacity, receiving $100 a month and expenses as forest ranger.

NAMED OFFICE HOLDERS.

In the present election other Liberal office holders in Manitoba were repeating this operation. There was Mr. Jonasson, of Gimli, and there was Mr. Thos. Young, of Gilbert Plains. Both of these men were candidates for the Provincial House, and it was but fair to ask that under such circumstances they should resign their salaried positions under the Government.

There were others in the same position, but he instanced these as examples. Mr. Young had written a letter setting forth that he could not get to work actively campaigning at present, but would do so when his resignation had been accepted. If the Minister desired any evidence of these facts, he could find the lists of Liberal candidates in which these names were prominent. No doubt Mr. Young would hand in his resignation, but he desired to hang out as long as possible and have the place left open for him after election.

Fancy Mr. Young, said Dr. Roche, abstaining from canvassing while going around in discharge of his present duties. It would not be satisfactory unless the Government gave assurance that these gentlemen must cease to be condidates or must resign their positions and not be reappointed to them.

Mr. Roche read from a speech by the Premier of Manitoba charging, among other things, that when farmers had not taken out their patents an endeavour was being made by Federal officials to coerce them.

INTERIOR BUSINESS.

Since 1896 there had been upwards of 150 dismissals in Manitoba and the North-West, chiefly in the Department of the Interior. These dismissals were on political charges. One man lost his place because he had acted as receiving officer. This man's successor, Mr. Ira Stratton, was editor of the Liberal paper and secretary of the Liberal Association. He could give a long list of somewhat similar incidents if desired.

Mr. Roche said he was not one of those who took exception to postmasters drawing $20.00 or $25.00 a year taking part in politics, but when the postmaster of Brandon had been dismissed for partisanship, it was hardly fair that his successor should be unrebuked for attending the Liberal convention to select a candidate. Others who took part in Liberal conventions were Mr. Yeo, Dominion Lands Special Agent, and Chas. Tomlin, Immigration official. The Liberal convention which drew up a platform declaring in favour of the establishment and maintenance of an efficient and non-partisan civil service, was attended by over a dozen civil servants of the Dominion Government. (Laughter.)

Mr. Greenway, at Brandon, had declared for a non-partisan civil service and had expressed the opinion that no man in the civil service should get himself involved in party politics at all.

ABSENCE OF MR. SIFTON.

Mr. Roche also entered a protest against the almost continuous absence of Hon. Mr. Sifton from the House session after session. The Minister of the Interior ran away when questions of vital importance were to be brought up against his department.

Mr. Roche instanced A. F. Martin, who was engaged in the selection of swamp lands to be handed over to Manitoba, and who was attending conventions and making partisan speeches. He understood, also, that the candidate of North Winnipeg was postmaster for the branch post office on Main street north. He did not wish to enter upon the broad question of dismissals, but merely to specify a few of the more flagrant cases which called for action. He did not think because it was a provincial election, the Dominion Government would take the ground that they could not interfere. A partisan was a partisan and such things should be put a stop to. He would not be satisfied simply to have them drop out on nomination day and have their positons kept open for them. Mr. Roche concluded by moving an amendment to the motion to go into supply, as follows:

THE MOTION OF MR. ROCHE.

That the Prime Minister, speaking in this House on the 1st day of September, A. D. 1896, with respect to political partisanship by officers of the Government, expressed himself as follows: "Now when we find an officer in the civil service, however good a servant he may have been, however faithfully he may have discharged his duties, but who has been an active politician, who has taken part in the election offensively and actively, and before the eyes of the wholee community, that official has beome a scandal in the eyes of the community, and I have no hesitation in saying that he cannot be trusted to render faithful service to this Government. Where there is a Government officer, he may hold his opinions. I do not care what they are, whether Liberal or Conservative; he may go and vote and I will not enquire how he voted. But when he is seen on a public platform, when he takes part in party processions, and is actively and offensively prominent as regards party candidates, that man has taken his life in his hands and no one can have a word to say if he is dismissed from the service."

That the Government, acting upon Commerce on the same day used the following language in speaking on the same subject: "With members of the civil service eating the bread of both parties and deliberately interfering in elections for the purpose of aiding one political party, if they so act they must be considered as taking their political lives in their hands and they must accept the consequences of their own acts, and the good sense of the people of the country and their natural sense of equal justice will not merely justify, but demand at the hands of the Government that they should make an example of them."

That other members of the Government during that session and in subsequent sessions expressed the same views.

That the Government acting upon the principles and rules so laid down, has since dismissed a very large number of officers, on the ground of alleged political partisanship.

That an application of the principles and rules so laid down for the guidance of public officials would result in the dismissal of those officers of the Government who have become "a scandal in the eyes of the community" by taking an active, offensive and partizan part in the election campaign now being carried on in the province of Manitoba, and who while "eating the bread of both parties," are "deliberately interfering in elections for the purpose of aiding one political party."

This House regrets that the Government has not seen fit to deal wtih such officials in accordance with the declaration of principles so made and so often acted upon."

McCREARY AFTER ROCHE.

Mr. McCreary, of Selkirk, would not condone the offence of civil servants taking part in politics, but Mr. Roche was the last man and came from the last province where this matter should be brought up. He was no place where local officials were more active in politics. As to Mr. Martin Jerome, that gentleman was not now actively engaged in politics. He instanced several cases where under the Conservative regime the same kind of thing had occurred, including Hugh John Macdonald, who, although known to be a man above reproach, continued in office as Premier of Manitoba up to within 24 hours of when he became candidate for the Dominion House. Was there anything wrong with that? Mr. Roche had not gone so far as did the Winnipeg Telegram, which concluded that the postmaster drawing twelve dollars a year, and even census enumerators, should be compelled to keep out of politics, but that contention was ridiculous. He agreed, however, that permanent officials with large salaries should not take part in politics, and he had faithfully observed that rule himself when he held a Government office.

Mr. McCreary concluded by admitting that perhaps some Dominion official had gone too far, but he thought it ill became Mr. Roche to bring it up.

BOTH GAVE REASONS.

Mr. Lancaster, of Lincoln and Niagara, said that Mr. Roche and Mr. McCreary had both given excellent reasons why the motion should carry. They both seemed to agree that this interference of officials in public affairs was a scandal that should be stopped.

There was one very good reason why Hugh John Macdonald was above reproach and that was because when he made pledges he kept them. He did not think the Government would go so far as to say the principle was only to be applied to their political opponents. To lay down such principles and then take no notice of them in practice was an evil example to set to citizens and especially to the rising generation.

The Government were mistaken if they thought Ontario was not interested in this matter, merely because it occurred in Manitoba. The Government ought to explain clearly just what their platform meant and whether or not the principles set forth by the Cabinet ministers applied to the cases brought forward by Mr. Roche, and especially to the three men who were members of the local House or candidates therefor. Let the Government stick to their own propositions and not worry about what provincial administrations were doing.

SCOTT OF REGINA.

Mr. Walter Scott, of West Assiniboia, said the platform of Hugh John Macdonald pledged him to keep politics out of the administration of justice, and yet he dismissed over 4,000 J. P.'s. Not a single one of the various 19 planks in that famous platform was ever carried out, not even the promise to give Manitoba a prohibitory liquor law. In the territories, federal politics had not yet been introduced. He understood the Government's position to be merely that federal officials should not interfere in federal politics, and this principle had not been broken. He did not see why federal officials should not vote, and raise their voices, and exert their influence in provincial affairs if they saw fit.

Prior to 1896 the federal civil service of Manitoba and the Territories might have been searched from top to bottom without finding a Liberal. He had analyzed the list of dismissals given by the telegram, and he found that only about 25 per cent. of them had really been dismissed. The others had died, or resigned, or left the country or vacated their office in some other way. Even of the 25 per cent., all those with which he was personally familiar were properly dismissals made after proper enquiry.

Mr. Boyd, of McDonald, spoke on the same general lines as Mr. Roche. He demanded to know what course the Government intended to pursue under the circumstances.

ANOTHER WESTERNER.

Mr. Davis, of Saskatchewan, said that in his own district an Indian agent was dismissed for giving liquor to Indians. The sheriff resigned, rather than face the commission. Not a man in his district was dismissed except for good cause. If the people wanted to nominate officials, it showed that the Government must have appointed respectable men, nevertheless, he hoped that the Government would look into the matter of the conduct of office holders generally.

Mr. Puttee thought that practically there was no party advantage in the spoils system in the long run, and he was sure that the public interest suffered. There were many employes of the Greenway Government who richly deserved to be dismissed, but one case, that of the dismissal of the police magistrate was a mistake and a humiliation to the city. It was an error and a grievance that the justifiable dismissals should be mixed up with those that were purely partisan. If officials, by taking political action, caused irritation between them and the public, then such officials should be required to withdraw from their official position. Such action could be taken purely on the ground of the good of the service.

Mr. Ingram thought the Government had quite sufficient to do in looking after Dominion officials, and if they would frankly promise to do so, that would be as much as could reasonably be asked, but he thought they should at least promise this much.

SIR WILLIAM MULOCK.

Sir Wm. Mulock said that if he had been favoured in advance with some information with regard to the cases mentioned, he would have caused investigation to be made as to complaint of the dismissals. He was sure that no dismissals had taken place except for violation of the principles laid down by the Premier. Out of the names read by Mr. Boyd was that of Mr. Hargreaves, with whose case he, Sir William, was familiar with the circumstances leading to his superannuation Mr. Hargreaves could not have been dismissed for political reasons because he was a Liberal, appointed under the Mackenzie Government; and he and all his people are Liberals.

Sir William Mulock declared that although there had been no departure from the principle laid down by the Premier, yet there must be some discretion in its application. Provincial or municipal contests might involve Dominion politics and arouse partisan feeling, but should the principle, therefore, be applied to municipal affairs, to define the rule closely would not be wise, because that might hamper its application.

Employes must first of all render efficient service to the Government that employed them. A public servant should be persons gratis to the community, and it was unwise for him to take part in conflicts that divided the people, making it more or less unpleasant for some patrons of office to have to deal with him. It would be an unsafe rule that postmasters enjoying only nominal salaries should be left untrammelled in their political conduct. He knew of one postmaster who kept back notices of appeals of voters desiring to be put on the lists, thereby causing them to be thrown out.

Mr. Borden—"That was misconduct."

Sir William replied that of course it was, but he was merely using it as an illustration. The correct principle was that under no circumstances should an official allow the duties of his office to take second place.

Mr. Clancy—"Has the hon. gentleman made no dismissals, except in cases of that kind?" (Laughter.)

THE ABSTRACT CASE.

Sir William—"I am now discussing the abstract question." (Hear, hear.)

Such conduct as had been alleged against some officials in the West was, he agreed, highly censurable, indefensible, inexcusable, and would not be tolerated by the Government. One could hardly conceive a greater interference with the liberty of the voter than to inform him that it might be better or worse for him how he voted, because his vote would affect the conduct of the Crown in reference to his land patent.

The Government would not overlook such things, and if men were shown to have done this they would be dealt with in harmony with the principles laid down in 1897.

Mr. Roche—"I brought the matter to your attention at least two weeks ago by quotations with reference to Mr. Jonasson, Homestead Inspector and candidate, and Mr. Watson, secretary of the Liberal Association, postmaster and candidate for South Brandon.

Sir William Mulock—I never heard a word until now, of these gentlemen being involved in local politics. It never crossed my mind that these men were transgressing any law (laughter) until the hon. gentleman made his speech. I had no knowledge even of the existence of the persons named.

MR. R. L. BORDEN'S SPEECH.

Mr. L. Borden pointed out that the resolution only asked the Government to apply principles they had often laid down. The question was whether the Government meant what they said when they laid down these principles. Officials by the dozen in Manitoba were taking an active part in provincial elections, and if this were permitted it was an absolute departure from the principles the Government had laid down for years.

The Government without doubt knew about these officials in the same way as they knew about the ex-Minister of Public Works. If statements published in the newspapers were enough to justify the dismissal of a Minister of the Crown, how could it pretend to be ignorant of names of men who day after day were acting as these men were in Manitoba. (Hear, hear.)

THE PRIME MINISTER.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier was sorry that the motion was put in the form of a vote of censure. Surely Mr. Roche did not wish to adopt the principle that the Government should have known these things. There were three men as to whom specific complaint was made. Mr. Thomas Young was one. Was the Government to conclude at once that the candidate was a Government employe? If there was reason to complain against officers of the Government, information of that fact should have been given in some other way than as a vote of censure. Mr. Young is in the pay of the Government and should not take part in politics. If he has taken a position in the civil service he should give up participation in politics. "If it should appear that one of our officers has been guilty of dereliction in that respect, it shall be our duty, now that the matter has been brought to our attention, to have an explanation."

Mr. Martin Jerome is not a member of the civil service, said Sir Wilfrid, does not receive regular pay from the Government, but is employed from time to time as a forest ranger. The Government, therefore, has no control over him. Mr. Jonasson is in the same position as Mr. Young.

Sir Wilfrid claimed that there was no province of the Dominion where the political axe had been so active as in Manitoba. So far as the Dominion Government was concerned, neither in Manitoba nor elsewhere had there been a single dismissal except for cause.

The motion offered by Mr. Roche was negatived by 71 to 22. Mr. Puttee, of Winnipeg, voted with the Government.

The House then went into committee of supply, but adjourned after passing one item.

THE MINOR QUESTIONS.

In the hour for private bills the bill to incorporate the Imperial Company was taken in committee, read a third time and passed, the title being changed to "The Imperial Agency." The Algonquin Lumber and Power bill and the Chicoutimi and North Eastern Railway bill were read a second time and referred to committees.

Mr. Madore will move for a return setting forth the quantity of refined sugar imported into Canada during 1902. The quantity of raw sugar imported during the same period, and the name of the country of origin.

Mr. German will introduce a bill to amend the general railway act of 1888. This bill is intended to facilitate the recovery of damages done to crops, farm buildings, etc., through sparks or other burning material thrown from locomotive engines by providing that in cases of fire it shall be sufficient for the farmer to prove that it was caused by sparks or burning material from an engine and shall not be called upon to prove any negligence as under the present law.

Mr. Morrison introduced a bill "respecting the Century Life Insurance Company."

Mr. German introduced a bill "to incorporate the Canadian Transportation and Storage Co."

It was decided that on Monday next public bills and orders, if not reached earlier, will be called as the first order, at 8 p. m.

8 p. m. This is for the purpose of meeting an objection raised by some of the members, who complain that no opportunity is afforded for the discussions of projects which they desire to have embodied in legislation.

When the House adjourns next Wednesday it will stand adjourned until the following Tuesday.

Mr. Talbot complained of language used with reference to him by Mr. Blain, in yesterday's debate. Mr. Talbot disclaimed having used the interruption which was attributed to him and showed that his feeling had been hurt by the somewhat severe retort to which he exposed himself. Mr. Blain, however, declined to add or take from his utterance and the incident closed.

Had a Painful Operation.

An Extreme Case of Nervousness and Female Weakness—Was Pale and Weak and Fainted Often—Doctors Failed to Help Her.

There is scarcely a limit to the sufferings which women endure when their nervous systems become run down and give way beneath the burdens which they are forced to bear. There are ills peculiar to women, which in nine cases out of ten are the result of a low state of vitality and a depletion of nerve force. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food cures women of their ills, irregularities and weaknesses by thoroughly restoring the vigor of the nerves.

Every woman will read with interest the following letter from a lady who has been cured of a serious illness by Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. She says the testimonials she reads are not half strong enough.

Mrs. BENJ. HATFIELD.

Mrs. Benjamin Hatfield, Hillyard street, St. John, N.B., writes:—"For three years I was a sufferer from extreme nervousness and female weakness. I was pale and weak, had no appetite, and would sometimes faint two or three times a day. I underwent a very painful operation, and for seven weeks I was under the doctor's care, but he seemed unable to help me. Despairing of recovery, I took the advice of a friend, who told me that Dr. Chase's Nerve Food would build me up and make me strong and well again. After four months' use of this preparation I found myself greatly improved, but continued the treatment for one year, using in all sixteen boxes. I have been blessed with a young daughter now, and believe that I am as strong and well as ever in my life. As a result, I cannot say too much in favor of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. It has performed a complete and thorough cure in my case, and I am healthier and fleshier than I have been for years. The testimonials I see are not half strong enough. I tell my friends and neighbors about it, and many of them join me in pronouncing Dr. Chase's Nerve Food the most effective restorative obtainable. Desiring that other sufferers may benefit by my happy experience with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I willingly give you permission to use this testimonial."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Is an up-to-date remedy of most extraordinary merit. It has proven itself the most effective nerve restorative of the age. It is certain to benefit anyone who uses it, because it forms new red corpuscles in the blood and creates new nerve force. It is especially efficacious in the cure of female ills and weaknesses.

Ozone--Not Medicine

Will Cure a Germ Disease—A 50c Bottle Free.

Powley's Liquified Ozone is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissues, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison to you, and it cannot be taken internally. All that medicine can do for a germ trouble is to aid nature to destroy the germs, and those results are indirect and uncertain. The results always depend on the patient's condition; and there are some germ diseases which medicine never cures.

Kills Inside Germs

Ozone is simply liquid oxygen—no drugs, no alcohol in it. Oxygen is the vital part of air—the source of all vitality. Ozone gets oxygen in staple form into the blood, and the effects are exhilarating and purifying. It stimulates to the utmost every function of nature.

But germs are vegetables; and an excess of oxygen—the very life of an animal—is deadly to vegetable matter. Ozone is a tonic to you, yet it is a germicide so certain that we advertise an offer of $1,000 for a germ that it cannot kill.

Sold for $100,000

Powley's Liquified Ozone is the discovery of a man who spent 20 years in learning how to liquify oxygen. The result is a product of such enormous value to humanity that we sold for $100,000 the rights to the United States.

The reason is that Ozone is certain destruction to germs—no matter what germs—no matter where they are. It goes wherever the blood goes. And as no germ can escape it, and none can resist it, Ozone destroys always and forever the cause of a germ disease. There is no other way to do it.

Germ Diseases

These are the known germ diseases. No disease in this list can be cured until the germs are destroyed, either by nature or by Ozone.

Ozone is the direct and certain treatment for all these diseases, and the results are inevitable. A germ disease must end—and forever—when the cause is destroyed. The best physicians, and all important hospitals, use Ozone—not medicine—for the diseases in this list:

Asthma	Impure Blood
Anaemia—Abscess	Kidney Diseases
Bronchitis	La Grippe
Blood Poison	Liver Troubles
Bright's Disease	Leucorrhoea
Bowel Troubles	Malaria—Neuralgia
Coughs—Colds	Pneumonia
Consumption	Piles
Colic—Croup	Pleurisy-Quinsy
Constipation	Rheumatism
Catarrh—Cancer	Skin Diseases
Dysentery-Diarrhoea	Scrofula—Syphilis
Dandruff—Dropsy	Stomach Troubles
Dyspepsia	Tuberculosis
Eczema—Erysipelas	Throat Troubles
Fevers—all kinds	Tumors—Ulcers
Gonorrhea—Gleet	Varicocele
Gall Stones—Gout	Women's Diseases
Influenza	Weak Eyes

All diseases that begin with fever—all inflammation—all catarrh in any part of the body—all contagious diseases—all the results of impure or poisoned blood.

The secret of the excellent baking and roasting qualities of the Imperial Oxford oven is found in the diffusive flue — an improvement which no other range possesses.

This flue draws fresh air from the floor, superheats it and delivers it into the top of the oven through perforations which diffuse it evenly to front, sides and back. This gives a uniform heat throughout the oven, resulting in uniformly cooked food.

INCREASED SALES OF REAL ESTATE

ACTIVITY IN THE EAST END

Over three-quarters of a million dollars' worth of property was registered as having changed hands in Montreal and its environs last week. This included the sale of the Temple Building, which was put through some weeks ago, and a purchase on St. Francois Xavier street by the Stock Exchange, agreed upon some time since. It also included some large sales in outlying sections, such as Delorimier Cote St. Paul, Notre Dame de Graces, and St. Henri, the turnover in vacant suburban land being very large of late.

Asked if he found anything of the nature of a boom, he replied:

"I hope we will never see a boom in Montreal again. Booms are only for towns and small cities where things are more or less unstable, and the people suddenly awake to the fact that the place is growing. Who ever heard of a boom in a large, solid city, like say, New York? Montreal must now be classed among the large, solid cities of the continent. Her days of infancy and booming are past, and she has assumed her proper place as the gateway to a vast and rich country. She is increasing in wealth and prosperity and in prestige; but this increase, though rapid, is steady and permanent. It is growth and expansion, if you will, but it is not a 'boom.'"

Mr. U. H. Dandurand, real estate agent, reports great activity in the east end. Rosemount is going off very rapidly, no less than 312 lots, aggregating $40,000, having been disposed of since the middle of April. A number of heads of departments of the C.P.R. shops at Delorimier avenue, are negotiating for a convenient locality, and it is expected that they will carry out a plan for beautifying their surroundings. Alexandra Park is also taking well, 43 lots being now gone.

Mr. Dandurand has also just sold the south-west corner of Papineau avenue and St. Catherine street for the second time within three months. The purchase price was $10,000. The lot measures 57 feet on St. Catherine street and 107 on Papineau avenue.

The excavations for the foundation of the new Renouf block, at the corner of St. Catherine and University streets, have developed some very interesting facts in connection with the nature of the ground in that section. It has long been known that this ground is of a very shifting and unreliable nature. Only a few years ago a building in the vicinity collapsed because of this reason, and in order to provide a substantial foundation for a large building, which was subsequently erected not far away, an extensive system of piling had to be undertaken.

The proposed Renouf building, being a very tall one, it was decided to try and place it upon bed rock, where it would be absolutely safe from the vibrations of city traffic. Soundings were taken, and it was found that bed rock could be reached at practically all points where the foundations would rest at 21 feet below the street level. It was decided that six piers would be sufficient to sustain the foundation upon the east, or University street, side of the building, while on the west side, upon which the greatest strain would come, it was decided to build a solid foundation resting upon bed rock throughout the full length.

The work of excavation is now completed, and the accuracy of the soundings has been verified. The workmen first went through nine feet of filled-in earth, after which they penetrated a layer of loam. Next came one of heavy, sticky, blue clay, and succeeding this was one of shifting quicksand, resting upon bed rock.

On their way down the workmen struck the roots of a massive tree, which may have looked down upon the battles of the aborigines long before Montreal was founded. The roots appeared well preserved at first sight, but a blow from the spade proved sufficient to shear them off.

The quicksand was fully four feet deep at the St. Catherine street end, but towards the south it shallowed rapidly, and at the rear of the building had almost disappeared. The excavations had all to be timbered in order to get to bed rock, owing to the fact that the quicksand ran almost like water.

The undertaking is now almost completed. The excavations have been filled eleven feet deep with concrete, resting on bed rock, and upon this the masonry foundations will be commenced in a few days. Messrs. Peter Lyall and Sons are the contractors for the work.

St. John's Longshoremen.

St. John's, Nfld., May 16.—The strike of the longshoremen of St. John's is still on. The Allan line steamer Siberian was forced to sail for Liverpool last night without having loaded the large cargo which was ready for her. Other steamers are virtually helpless. It is expected that arrangements will be made to-day to bring the strike to an end. Yesterday some of the strikers threatened the men at work. It is believed that the police and the crew of the British cruiser Calypso are able to cope with any trouble likely to arise.

Let the Men Wash

Where is the man who wouldn't want to have the washing made easier.

This hard work that Pearline saves isn't the whole matter; it saves money, too—money that's thrown away in clothes needlessly worn out and rubbed to pieces when you wash by main strength in the old way.

Missionaries for Africa.

The eight missionaries who passed through Montreal last evening on their way to Patagi, Northern Nigeria, West Africa, addressed meetings at the Welcome Hall, 207 St. Antoine street, and at Inspector Street Mission Room. The missionaries are Rev. and Mrs. A. C. Judd, Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Homuth, Miss H. F. Clothier, Mr. H. E. Smedley, Mr. W. D. Spinks, and Mr. Charles Waddell. They were introduced by Rev. R. V. Bingham, superintendent of the Africa Industrial Mission, Toronto; Mr. Wm. Henderson, secretary, and Mr. J. D. Fraser, of the Welcome Hall. They told of the object of their mission and their intentions upon arrival, and asked the meetings for their prayers. The missionaries leave Montreal on the Allan liner Ionian this morning for Liverpool, from whence they will sail for their destination.

New Bank Notes.

The Moisons Bank has just issued two handsome new bank notes of the denominations of five and ten dollars, which mark a new era in bank note design. The intermingling of the black with the two colour printings, one green and brown, the latter containing vignette work as important as that of the black, makes these notes new in conception and execution. The whole work on examination exhibits exquisite detail and finish. The work was produced by The British American Bank Note Co., of Ottawa.

IMPROVEMENTS TO THE C. P. R. FLEET

A Number Will Be Made in the Very Near Future.

NEW STEAMERS TO BE BUILT

The Company Now Has Upwards of Sixty-one Ocean Vessels in Commission.

Very few people are aware that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company has at its command at the present moment a fleet of sixty-one vessels.

Most people have been accustomed to think of the C. P. R. as, nautically speaking, an institution which has possessed for the past decade three ocean going crafts on the Pacific and a few lake boats, more or less pretentious, plying between Collingwood and Port Arthur, and which, more recently, has acquired by purchase a ready made Atlantic fleet from the Elder-Dempster Company.

Mr. Piers was reminded that when he returned recently from Britain he had hinted that the latest acquisitions to the company's ocean-faring property was merely the nucleus of a still greater aggregation of vessels, and he was asked if he could not indicate, even approximately, when that expansion might be expected to commence.

"I can give no definite information on that point," replied Mr. Piers. "Any expansion which takes place will result from natural causes; it will be the outcome of the circumstances that may surround the company at the time. It stands to reason, however, that additions to the Atlantic fleet, as at present constituted must inevitably come. Out of thirteen vessels, although all carry passengers, we have only three which can be considered first-class passenger boats. If, then, we find that the public is anxious to travel by our line, it follows logically that we must give them accommodation equal to, if not superior, to that afforded by any other line doing business in this port. More vessels will then be demanded, and, following the policy of the C. P. R., none but the best will be built. And, indeed, there is no reason why vessels equal to any running out of Liverpool should not be devoted to the St. Lawrence."

"Will the same remarks apply to the Pacific service?" asked the reporter.

"The three Empress steamships are already as fine as any vessels of their class in the world," replied Mr. Piers. "Built in England, they have a speed of 18 knots on the measured mile and 16½ knots on a 400-mile sea trip. But the people demand new vessels every now and then. Though only twelve years old, they are coming to be called 'the old Empresses.' It is more than likely, therefore, that new vessels will soon be demanded on the Pacific."

"Is it true that the Empress boats, when superseded on the Japan route, will be made to ply between Vancouver and Australia?" was asked.

"I scarcely think it likely," responded Mr. Piers. "There would be no money in it. It would be a purely one way route. While plenty of cargo could be obtained for the out-going voyage, there would be nothing to bring back excepting a few bananas. In contradistinction to that we bring just as much back from Japan and China as we take out. Some of the papers in British Columbia have asserted that the Empress vessels would be put on the Australian route, but there is no foundation in fact for these assertions."

"From what you have said, Mr. Piers," suggested the reporter, "it looks as though you would in a few years have under your command one of the largest fleets of ocean vessels anywhere."

"Do you know how many vessels are owned by the C. P. R.?" he asked in reply. "Few people have any idea. All told we have sixty-one. Aside from those on the trans-oceanic routes we have them doing a coasting trade in the Pacific, on all the inland waters of British Columbia, and on the great lakes."

You can get some idea of the severe nature of my illness when I tell you that my one leg was completely crippled before I took Munyon's Rheumatism Cure, but it is now strong and well."—Mr. M. BODY FOUND IN RIVER AFTER FIVE WEEKS.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Brockville, Ont., May 16.—Last evening the body of a man was found floating in the river close to shore, a few miles above Brockville. From the clothing, Edward Cooper, of this town, identified the corpse as that of his brother, David Cooper, of Oakpont, N.Y., about nine miles west of Brockville. Cooper, in a fit of mental derangement, disappeared from home five weeks ago last night, taking an old punt to cross the river in the face of a gale. The punt was found two days later on the American shore opposite Brockville. Cooper evidently perished by his frail craft capsizing.

FARISIAN BREAD, FROM JAMES STRACHAN ONLY. 71tf

NEW MUNICIPAL BODY FOR WESTMOUNT.

At a well-attended meeting of the ratepayers of Westmount last night, it was decided to organize the Westmount Municipal Association to assist the Town Council in their duties.

Mr. Matthew Hutchinson, M.L.A., in opening the meeting, made it clear that no antagonism to the Council was intended, but that the object was merely to educate public sentiment and to give an occasional suggestion in a friendly way to the town fathers. He pointed out that the need for such an association was emphasized by the fact that Westmount was drawing to it as a place of residence not only Montrealers, but Ontarians and Quebeckers outside the city.

The resolution to organize was adopted on the motion of Mr. Edgar Judge, seconded by Mr. Redfern, and the following gentlemen were appointed a committee to frame a constitution: Messrs. J. H. Redfern, convener; Thomas Harling, W. E. Muir, J. C. McCormick, Matthew Hutchinson, Edgar Judge, W. D. Lighthall, James Hutchinson, W. W. Robertson, J. R. Walker, G. M. Webster and D. M. Johnson.

Mr. Riddell acted as secretary of the meeting.

OBSERVED FEAST OF ST. JOHN DE LA SALLE.

Yesterday the six hundred members of the Brothers of the Christian Schools throughout the Province of Quebec celebrated the feast of their founder with becoming religious services. The chief celebration in the city was held at St. Patrick's Church, where solemn high mass was sung at 9 o'clock by Rev. J. B. Oullette, P.S.S. Rev. Martin Callaghan delivered a short discourse on the great work of the founder in the cause of Christian education. The music and singing by the choir boys formed a feature of the service.

At two o'clock musical vespers were sung, followed by solemn benediction. The pupils of the Brothers' schools and their friends filled the sacred edifice.

At Mount St. Louis College, solemn high mass was sung, the music by the orchestra, organ, and the singing by the fine choir lending an additional charm.

At St. Joseph's Church, Rev. Father Belanger, P.P., sang the mass, and preached a short sermon.

The regular rule of the order, which is very strict, was somewhat relaxed yesterday, and after the religious celebrations the Brothers enjoyed extra recreations.

A NEW UNION IN PROCESS OF FORMATION

Efforts are being made to form a central labour body in the city on lines similar to those of the Building Trades Section of the Montreal Trades and Labour Council. The promoters state it is the intention to combine cooks, table waiters, grocery clerks, market gardeners, and all others employed in the manufacture and purveying of food products. A call will be issued for a special meeting, when the plan of organization will be completed. It is expected that the union will be the largest association of its kind ever formed in Canada.

A candy maker, in discussing the matter with the Star to-day, said: "There has been no change in the hours of labour in our business during the past century." He said there always has been and there always will be differences of opinion between employer and employe concerning rates of wages and hours of labour, and he thought that common sense and fair dealing should weigh considerably in the settlement of all differences between the forces of labour and capital.

THE JEWS IN RUSSIA ARE GROWING HOPELESS

(Special by Cable from a Montreal Star Correspondent.)

London, May 16. — Communications received by the Jewish relief societies of England from Kisheneff, Kieff and other cities in South Russia indicate that the movement against the Jews enjoys almost universal support. It is stated that this foct is frequently disguised, but is also sometimes openly avowed.

The police and soldiery are represented as utterly callous to the sufferings even of women and children except where the attention of high officials has been directly called to the outrages. Thousands of Jews are migrating southward often without any definite idea of whither they are bound or of how to obtain food by the way.

Little hope is entertained that the attitude of the Russians will undergo any substantial change with reference to the Jews, unless indeed it should become still harsher. It is believed that powerful influences in St. Petersburg, including M. Von Plehwe, Minister of the Interior, are in favour of the practical extermination of the Hebrew element as a measure of national solidification. The Ultra pan-Slavist newspapers frankly acknowledge this motive and propagate the doctrine that whoever kills a Jew is a good Russian patriot.

No Fighting Near Tetuan.

(By Special Cable from a Correspondent of the Montreal Star.)

Gibraltar, May 16.—Six thousand Imperial troops arrived at Alcazar to-day en route for Tetuan, where the situation has been considerably relieved by the operations of the garrison. Three steamers have also sailed from Tangier with large detachments of cavalry and infantry on board. There is a complete cessation of fighting at present in the neighbourhood of the beleaguered city.

TURKEY'S FINANCES PUZZLE EUROPE.

(By Special Cable from a Correspondent of the Montreal Star.)

Constantinople, May 14, via Plovdiv, May 16.—Turkey's financial expedients, completely puzzle the diplomatic corps. How the Sultan manages to finance the military movements which have been in progress for some time is a mystery. The burden is admitted enormous. At least 100,000 troops are active at various points, and a great many more are held in readiness in Asia. It is believed in some quarters that the financial strain may ultimately cause the collapse of Turkey's attempt to control the situation, both in Macedonia and Albania. At any rate, if the existing conditions should be prolonged, nobody understands how the outlay is to be met. It is suggested that if the powers are determined, let come what will, to bolster up Turkish rule, the time will arrive, sooner or later, when they will be compelled to advance money to keep the Ottoman troops in the field.

Will Contest Muskoka.

Toronto, Ont., May 16.—Dr. Willoughby, the opposition whip, states to-day that the Conservative candidate for Muskoka, rendered vacant by the death of Dr. Bridgeland, would be A. Mahaffy, Barrister, of Toronto. Mr. Mahaffy, was Dr. Bridgeland's opponent at the last election and until recently practised in Bracebridge.

Special Notice.
White Reigns Supreme.

In the Halls of Fashion; in the Departments of the S. Carsley Co. Limited. They scarcely realized what vast assortments were assembled under this one roof until A SPECIAL SALE OF WHITE GOODS was decided upon and contributions were requested from each of the various sections. They were obliged to condense the copy handed in, and be content with printing suggestions, cherishing the hope that if you don't see what you want mentioned in their advertisement you'll credit the statement that it was on sale and call to enquire about it.

BUILD UP CANADA.

WHEN will CANADA be a MANUFACTURING Country for EXPORT?

The United States is to-day the most conspicuous export manufacturing country in the world. Why is this? Because the people and statesmen of the United States realized years ago that a strong Protective Policy would first of all build up home manufactures by securing for Americans the best of the home market, feeling sure all the time that once the manufacturers of the United States grew to the needs of home consumption they would go on building for export trade. And to-day all that was predicted for the manufacturers and workingmen of the United States has come true. Millions upon millions of foreign money, and tens of thousands of foreign workmen are pouring into the States to reap some of the fruits of the great National Protective Policy of the American Union. Can Canada repeat this? Look at the Cotton Mills, Tobacco Factories, Rolling Mills, that were built up in Canada under the National Policy, and we can easily picture what would happen if the Government of Canada would give to Canadians a Canada-for-Canadians policy, looking first to the securing for Canadians the Canadian consumption, and then a share of the markets of India, England, Australia, Japan, Italy, Spain, South Africa, in fact, of the whole world.

THE FRESH AIR FUND.

Now that the advent of the first warm weather has turned thoughts to sea shore and mountain side, it is timely to draw attention to the needs of the thousands on thousands of toilers who, immured in the sweltering tenement houses through the hot days and breathless nights of the summer months, welcome as a gift from Heaven, the boon of pure air and wholesome rest which the Fresh Air Fund holds out to them.

Through its efforts in the past seven years, upwards of thirty-five thousand women and children have tasted the delights of a vacation in the "real" country, where grass and flowers supplant cobble stones and cinder piles, where green trees replace red bricks, and the songs of birds the rattle of electric cars. He would be a bold man who attempted to estimate what this means to the life of the city—not only the feeding of impoverished blood with the fresh air of the meadows and woods, but the nourishing of starving minds with wholesome pleasures, the refreshing of wearied souls with pure thoughts. Only by experience is it possible to learn what summer in the poorer sections of a great city means physically, mentally and morally, and only with this experience is it possible to understand what two weeks of the country may mean in the life of a tenement-dweller.

To adequately deal with the task of assisting as many as is in any way possible, it is necessary that those who are directing the work should know early what funds they may count on, for the work is supported entirely by the voluntary contributions of those to whom it appeals. Their appeal has never been in vain, and year after year the committee have been able to extend the scope of its work as the value of its efforts became more and more appreciated. It is earnestly hoped that this year's gifts will make possible even a larger measure of activity than before and that subscribers will make their gifts doubly effective by making them early in the season.

President Roosevelt and ex-President Cleveland both delivered orations at the opening of the St. Louis Fair. The President in esse was, of course, the lion of the hour, and it is generally acknowledged that he made one of his very best speeches on the occasion; but the favourable impression also produced by the ex-President was o marked that some are already speculating as to whether, in spite of his two previous terms, he may not be a President in posse. So influential a Republican as Senator Hanna is quoted as pronouncing it "very significant." Cleveland is not a man beloved of committees or their managers; but even these high powers have sometimes to consider what the people will accept at their hands. Man for man, Roosevelt is far the more amiable character, and his sentiments towards England are decidedly more friendly than those of Cleveland, whose Venezuelan message will long linger unpleasantly in the minds of all who are British at heart. The troubles that threaten the United States to-day, however, are less of an international than of a domestic character; and if we are not mistaken a feeling is growing that Roosevelt is too emotional a man for the situation. Cleveland is not emotional. He sees things in a hard light and he moves along rigid lines. He might not make a bad pilot for a period of civil storms, if such are impending.

TREADGOLD CONCESSION DEBATED AT DAWSON.

Dawson, Y.T., May 16.—The Treadgold concession held the floor of the Yukon Council meeting this week. There was a heated debate, which resulted in a motion to memorialize the Dominion Government to cancel it. The five elected members voted for the memorial, Commissioner Brook tied the motion by voting against the memorial, giving as a reason that this was not the council's affair.

MR. CHAMBERLAIN'S PLATFORM

The speech delivered at Birmingham last night by Mr. Chamberlain was one of the most important utterances made by a British statesman in recent years. Rather hastily, it has been assumed by the Daily News that the speech marks a revolt by Mr. Chamberlain against the leadership of Mr. Balfour. Mr. Chamberlain's outspoken declarations to his constituents have been contrasted with the Prime Minister's cautious reply to the delegation which waited upon him yesterday to protest against the remission of the corn duties. The statements of both the Ministers were characteristic of the men and of the political elements they represent respectively, but there was no important and essential divergence between them. True, it is that while Mr. Chamberlain declared himself boldly in favour of preferential trade within the Empire and of a considerable modification of the doctrine of free trade, Mr. Balfour gave the delegation not the slightest reason to hope that the corn duties would be maintained and thus give the Government an opportunity to make a practical application of Mr. Chamberlain's theories. But at the same time the Prime Minister was careful to say that he did not intend to convey the impression that the present system was necessarily permanent. He pointed out that new conditions had arisen since the old free trade policy was adopted, and that he could imagine circumstances under which Great Britain by way of rehabilitation would no longer consent to be made a passive target for the countries living under different conditions. He declared himself a believer in universal free trade—which is not by any means the same thing as free trade of the Cobden Club brand. Mr. Balfour finished by saying that he would welcome a closer fiscal union of the Motherland and the Colonies. The principal difference between the two statesmen is that Mr. Balfour is not so "pushful" as the man from Birmingham. Intensely characteristic of the Balfour-Salisbury school of statesmanship was the declaration that if protection is to be introduced in England it must not be silently and as if by accident, but as the result of a broad public endorsement of a change in the national policy, and must come from the heart conscience and intellect of the great masses of the people. One thing is reasonably certain, and that is that imperial preferential trade now becomes a live issue in British politics.

SUPREME COURT VACANCY HAS BEEN FILLED.

The Order in Council Appointing Mr. Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., Was Signed on Friday.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Ottawa, May 16. — His Excellency yesterday signed the order-in-council appointing Mr. Wallace Nesbitt, K.C., to the Supreme Court in the place of the late Justice Mills. The appointment meets with hearty approval, by Conservatives especially, (Every one concedes) that the new judge has had an exceptionally fine professional record, and, although he will be the youngest occupant of the Supreme Court Bench, the public are not disposed to regard that as a drawback; on the contrary, the more frequent appointment to judicial or other offices of men in the prime of life would be very popular. In connection with the Supreme Court Bench there is a growing feeling that the salaries paid to the judges should be increased.

NEXT GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

Report That Lord Northcote Will Come Cannot Be Verified.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Toronto, May 16.—The Government has no information as to the report that Lord Northcote, the Governor of Bombay, is to succeed Lord Minto, whose term as Governor-General of Canada expires this summer. The fact that Lord Northcote is married to a daughter of Lord Mount Stephen connects him in a sense with Canada and gives an air of probability to the report. His Lordship is a son of the late Baron Iddesleigh, better known as Sir Stafford Northcote.

Lived for a Century.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Brockville, May 16.—The death is reported from Westport, of Mrs. Samuel Dick, probably the oldest resident of these counties. She had attained her 100th year. She was born in the county of Armagh, Ireland, where she lived until 1868, she then having come with her husband and family to Canada. For 35 years the deceased has been a permanent resident of Westport.

Prof. Tory is Now Associate Professor of Mathematics in Faculty of Arts.

Professor James Harkness, M.A., was yesterday appointed Redpath professor of mathematics at McGill by the board of governors at their regular meeting.

Mr. James Harkness, (M.A., Cambridge and London) was educated at Derby School and at Cambridge University. In 1882 he was elected to an entrance Major scholarship at Trinity College, and in 1885 he graduated as eighth wrangler in the mathematical tripos. At London University he stood first in mathematics in the honours divisions of the Intermediate Arts (1885), and the B.A. examinations (1887).

In 1888 he was called to a position in mathematics at Bryn Mawr College, Pennsylvania, where he has held a full professorship since 1896.

He is the joint author, with Prof. Frank Morley, of the Johns Hopkins University, of a treatise on the Theory of Functions, and of a work on Analytic Functions. He has been assigned the article on Elliptic Functions in the Encyclopedia of Mathematics, which is being published under the auspices of the Academies of Vienna, Munich and Gottingen, and has been asked by the German firm of Teubner & Co., to publish a treatise on Elliptic Functions. This work he is at present engaged upon.

Mr. Harkness is a member of the council of the American Mathematical Society, and one of the associate editors of the transactions of the American Mathematical Society.

MR. CARNEGIE'S APOLOGY TO CANADA.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Sydney, N.S., May 16.—In connection with the recent statement of Andrew Carnegie, in which he was credited with saying that the iron and steel industry of Cape Breton was a "mirage," Mayor Richardson, who promptly took the matter up at the time and suggested the immediate return to Mr. Carnegie of the fifteen thousand dollars donated by him for the erection of a public library in this town, has received the following cablegram from Mr. Carnegie, which explains itself:—

London, May 15.

Mayor, Sydney.

Very sorry that few detached words should have given offence. Word "mirage" was used in replying to the question whether Sydney's operations menaced United States lead in steel production. I had no reference in my remarks to your patriotic efforts to develop your resources, in which I wish you abundant success.

My wish is to restore the union of North America and Britain, instead of maintaining two separate divisions. We would then rule the world in peace. If you come to Skibo Castle I could convert you, sure. Meanwhile pray accept my expressions of deepest regret at anything offensive that may have arisen.

(Signed) CARNEGIE.

THE MAYOR'S REPLY.

Mayor Richardson's reply was as follows:—

Sydney, N.S., May 15, '03.

Andrew Carnegie,
Skibo Castle.

THE ENGINEER WAS ASLEEP AT HIS POST.

That is the Finding in Connection With the Windsor, N.S., Wreck —The Crew Dismissed.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Ottawa, May 16.—As the result of the inquiry into the disaster upon the Intercolonial near Windsor Junction, N. S., Hon. A. G. Blair has dismissed Conductor Haines, Engineer Copeland and Norman Purcell, the last named being the man who had to call the crew for duty.

The reason for the discharge of Haines and Purcell is that they failed to notify the proper officials that some of the train crew were unfit for duty.

THE GERMAN SURTAX.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Ottawa, May 16. — Mr. J. D. Allen, of Toronto, on behalf of the wholesale dry goods section of the Board of Trade, interviewed the Minister of Customs and the Minister of Finance yesterday in regard to the effect of the surtax upon Canadian orders for goods in Germany placed prior to the surtax going into force. Mr. Allan pointed out that it would be a great hardship to impose an extra duty on the goods so ordered, and he urged that wherever the impossibility of complying with the present regulation as to date of importation and entry could be clearly shown the date should be postponed until September 30. Mr. Allan made out a strong case, and the Ministers seemed to be impressed by his statement.

NAVAL DEFENCE.

Mr. Prefontaine Preparing Bill Dealing With the Matter.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Toronto, May 16.—A Globe's Ottawa special says:

It is rumoured that Sir Frederick Borden will not proceed with his Militia Bill this session, the reason being that another bill to provide for naval defence is being prepared by Hon. Raymond Prefontaine. As the law now stands, the organization of naval militia is under the jurisdiction of the Department of Militia. It is, however, to be taken from this department and placed under the Marine and Fisheries. This will require the authority of Parliament. The reason for assigning naval defence to the Marine Department is because the department has already the nucleus of a fleet under its control, and, moreover, the British Admiralty thought that course would be the better one.
