Reporting on Townships economy Radio-Canada live from North Hatley

By Richard McCallum
RECORD CORRESPONDENT
NORTH HATLEY

Radio-Canada's program Les Affaires et La Vie continues to broadcast live from the Hatley Inn in North Hatley this Saturday from noon to 2 p.m.

The program, which is one of Radio-Canada's oldest and most prestigious, delves into the economic concerns of various regions of Canada. Although the program often interviews economic experts, it also takes great pains to get the views of the average citizen on the economy of the region which they explore.

Producer Jocelyne Capano and host Francine Plourde, along with a team of three investigative journalists and a flock of researchers, have set up shop in North Hatley in an effort to create a current economic report on the Townships.

Their first program was last week, featuring guests such as Alain Larouche from the Townships tourism office, Serge Audet from Sherbrooke's Chamber of Commerce and University of Sherbrooke's rector Pierre Reid offering their take on the region's economy.

This week's broadcast features a look at the impact of the Bombardier company on the economy of the Townships. A third show on the region is being discussed.

Not only does the program look at regional economy issues in Canada but they also are active in dissecting regional economic issues around the world.

"The Eastern Townships is a very rich region in terms of the diversity of the people who live here," said Plourde. "The area has a lot of resources and is close to major markets. The agriculture, timber, minerals are in themselves great riches."

"Also you have an interesting asset in terms of the people of the Townships. They are very original in their thinking and those types of people often become the entrepreneurs of tomorrow," she added.

Plourde said it will be a challenge for the Townships to successfully switch from a "factory economy" to tomorrow's daring information-based economical structure.

"If this area can overcome the 'cottage's mentality,' you may find that this area can become one of our stronger economies," she said. "I think that the trick is to find a solution which offers both, that is, a strong economic base while still preserving the area's natural beauty."

"Here you must try to solve the problem which preserves the interests of two different kinds of people. Many of the people who have come here are already financially solvent and they may oppose development which would normally employ a whole different sector of the economy."

She said an example of this may be found in Milan near Lac Megantic.

"It was a tiny village, just 20 houses. It was surrounded by forest, and the village may have many poor people there. What was remarkable about this village was that a new mill has just opened there which is creating flour and pasta. This mill has clients for its special products all over North America, and so far every six months its business is doubling," she said.

"Also in that village they have just begun a new industry creating prefabricated houses - you can feel the excitement in that village because they are excited about the new opportunities."

Frelighsburg photographer displays works

Kathleen McAuliffe brings The Gem Collection to Echo Art Montreal singer debuts show in Brome

By Diahann Nadeau
RECORD CORRESPONDENT
BROME

Fans of Kathleen McAuliffe will not have to make their way to the Festin du Gouverneur dinner theatre in Montreal this summer to hear her sing. She will be debuting a new show on Thursday, July 2, in Brome.

The Gem Collection will kick off the summer season at the Echo Art Dinner Theatre, and McAuliffe will return with her show on Aug. 27.

Earlier this month, McAuliffe appeared in a non-singing part at Theatre Lac Brome in Knowlton, in A.R. Gurney's tender play Love Letters with Peter Pringle.

The Gem Collection will highlight her singing talents in combination with readings of favorite poems and monologues. This is a new frontier for McAuliffe and she admits to being rather nervous at the prospect.

"I've been waiting to pluck up the courage forever really," McAuliffe said. "People have been begging me for years to do something on my own. I've been wanting to for a long time, but finally I'm committed to do it at Emma (Stevens)'s. I'm a bit panicky now!"

"I'll be doing the same thing I do at parties really. But I've never done a one-woman show. It's not unlike the Festin du Gouverneur though - I call it entertaining in the whites of people's eyes."

The material is entirely of McAuliffe's choosing, including some poems and monologues written by her mother, Mary, who lives in Ireland and who she says "is very funny."

McAuliffe has hand-picked a selection of "absolute favorites. These are all pieces I've performed and adored but never done them together."

The musical choices reflect her preference for meaningful lyrics.

"Lyrics are very important to me. I've chosen songs from an era when songs were about things - not rubbishy. I will be singing the verses that are rarely sung now."

The verses McAuliffe refers to are like a prologue to the songs; introductions that are almost forgotten these days but actually establish the narrative of the piece.

"Not to do these verses doesn't set up the song right," she said.

There will be Gershwin and Porter and the like, but also some Irish songs, mostly by Percy French, as well as pre-

Tin Pan Alley material. She will also perform songs from Broadway that are lovely yet little known because the shows themselves were not very successful.

McAuliffe admits to a weakness for 'character songs' - songs that are sung by rather eccentric characters, like a piece from last year's New York-Paris show at Theatre Lac Brome called "The Ladies' Auxiliary Song," also known as the 'Lime Jello Song.' "I will be doing lighter, sweeter stuff and comedic songs. I like patter songs too."

She will be accompanied by Ari Snyder who, according to McAuliffe,

"is a lovely guy and looks like he's having a good time. He's definitely part of the whole thing. Anyway, I hope it's the beginning of something new for me. Echo Art is the perfect launching pad!"

McAuliffe will also be appearing in The Underdogs, a political satire at the Just for Laughs festival this summer in Montreal, and she will be doing the English-language narrative for the play From Galway to Grosse-Ile on Sept. 19 and 20 at the Centre Pierre Peladeau in the city. This recounts the story of Irish immigration to Québec during the Irish famine.

The Respectables, "the best rock group in Quebec" is appearing in concert June 26, at 9 p.m., at the Haskell Opera House. Formed in 1991, The Respectables are Sébastien Plante (vocals), Stephan Dussault (bass guitar), Bodean (drums) and Pascal Dufour (guitar). The quartet takes its inspiration from Mick Jagger and Jim Morrison but is also influenced by reggae and Latin beats. Their second album, "Full régalia," launched at the Capitol Theatre in 1995, has spread like wildfire on Quebec's art scene. The Respectables play rock & roll that is never repetitious, always flamboyant and "gooses a crowd" according to Eric Parazelli of Voir in Montreal.

Point Cross
at the Haskell

Point Cross will perform their traditional music with a contemporary flair at the Haskell Opera House, Saturday, June 27, at 8 p.m.

The group, which takes its name from a quaint fishing village in Cape Breton, N.S., Point Cross presents a potpourri of lively music based in traditional folk music styles. A typical program moves easily from Celtic jigs and reels to Acadian French and English ballads, from country and blue grass standards to Appalachian and Cajun tunes. Each is delivered with a personal zest, good natured humor, superior musicianship and characteristic style.

Point Cross performs on an array of traditional instruments including guitar, banjo, autoharp, hammered dulcimer and, of course, the ever present fiddle.

The group is comprised of vocalist/arranger/instrumentalist Lew Alpaugh; lead singer Deborah Foster, violinist/fiddle player Liz Alpaugh and singer/songwriter/instrumentalist John Lionarons, an award winning hammered dulcimer player.

Tickets: $14 CAN., $10 U.S. Seniors and students: $10 CAN., $7 U.S.; available at The Woodknot Bookshop, (802-334-6720), Café Caffuccino (819-868-2225) and The Haskell Opera House (819-876-2020) or at the door the evening of the performance.

GRANT SIMÉON/THEATRE LAC BROME

The right fit... Robin Wilcock as Don and Martin Simms as Sancho Panza in Don Quixote de Lac Brome, the show that opens Theatre Lac Brome's 12th summer season.

Don Quixote de Lac Brome a 'comic phantasmagoria' — Nicholas Pynes

By Amy Tector
KNOWLTON

Theatre Lac Brome updates a classic while throwing in a Townships spin in the first show of its 12th season, Don Quixote de Lac Brome.

Artistic director Nicholas Pynes adapted playwright Eric Overmyer's "comic phantasmagoria on Quixotic themes," making it amusing and relevant for Brome Lake area and other Quebec residents.

"The reason that something becomes a classic is because the ideas are still applicable and relevant to the modern world. Cervantes's Don Quixote is a classic because it still resonates," said Pynes.

The play is not a straight version of Cervantes's somewhat dense prose, however. Instead, it is a contemporary adaptation of the classic story of an ordinary man who sees himself as a courageous explorer. It touches on the major themes of the Spanish classic while updating the plot.

This play is about three actors trying to put on an absolutely faithful adaptation of Don Quixote. The driving force behind this wish is Don, a character much like Don Quixote; he is an old-guard theatre actor who longs for the glory days before the corruption of film.

It is this quest for the unattainable that characterizes the play and is what appeals to Robin Wilcock who plays Don.

"I think there is a little bit of Don Quixote in everyone. He's just a misguided person trying to dream the impossible dream," he said.

Wilcock, a native of Alberta, has been acting professionally since he graduated from the National Theatre School in Montreal in 1995.

His co-star, Jane Wheeler, should be familiar to Theatre Lac Brome audiences, despite her platinum-blond wig. She has been performing on and off in various productions here since 1991, including Des Beaux Gestes et Beautiful Deeds and Cabaret.

"I love working here. I like the actual physical theatre, I find it very warm and inviting," she said. "The audience has always been very receptive. The plays that are performed here are always a little off the beaten track."

It is the kookiness of Don Quixote de Lac Brome that is so appealing to her.

"It's very entertaining and challenging for the audience, people are going to have to work at it. It's a very intelligent play, but at the same time has mass appeal," she said.

Wheeler relishes her role as the vixenish Dulcinea, a self-absorbed tough cookie intent on making it in Hollywood — if she ever gets there. Wheeler does not think this stereotypical version of the ambitious actor holds much truth, as much fun as it is to play.

"Generally actors have to be very giving. You can't be self-absorbed, you have to focus on what your fellow actor is doing in order to make the scene work. If you want to be famous, then you're going to have to be ambitious, but if you just want to be working, then you need determination more than anything else."

Determination has marked the third member of the cast's professional career. Martin Simms play Sancho Panza; he has been working in film, TV and theatre since 1989. Despite his years of experience, this production posed a particular challenge for him.

"The best part of the show for me is the dancing. I've never done that. Jane and I waltz, meringue, tango and lambada. It was a bit nerve-wracking, because I'm not what we call a 'triple threat,' one of those actors that can sing, act and dance."

Simms is particularly glad to be able to perform in the Townships.

"It's a beautiful area, I've been out to visit before, but it's nice to get the chance to come down and work here," he said.

Despite the fact the actors had only two-and-a-half weeks of rehearsal time, rather than the standard three or four, Pynes is very happy with the way the play has evolved.

"It's great fun and a bit unusual," he said. "It is just a great way to open the season."

Kick your heels up at the Champlain Valley Fair

Randy Travis headlines annual festival

The Champlain Valley Fair is fast approaching and this year they've cooked up a great lineup for the pleasure of country fans.

Randy Travis opens the 1998 edition of the Champlain Valley Fair on Saturday, Aug. 29. The concert begins at 7 p.m. in the Coca Cola Grandstand with special guest Martina McBride.

"The Randy Travis/Martina McBride combo should get us off to a great start," said Fair General Manager, David Grimm. "This will be Randy's first appearance at the Champlain Valley Fair and we're thrilled that it's finally going to happen. McBride appeared in '96' and her career continues to skyrocket," Grimm added.

Travis has been away from country music for a little while as he pursued an acting career, appearing in many movies such as Black Dog with Patrick Swayze.

To Travis' credit we must admit that he also deserved a break. He never stopped since the release of his debut album, Storms of Life, which was the first album in country music history to go Platinum (one million copies sold) within a year of its release.

Randy Travis is often referred to as the singer who revived country music and gave it a fresh style.

Back on the road, Travis is touring in support of his new release You And You Alone, an excellent follow-up to all his previous work.

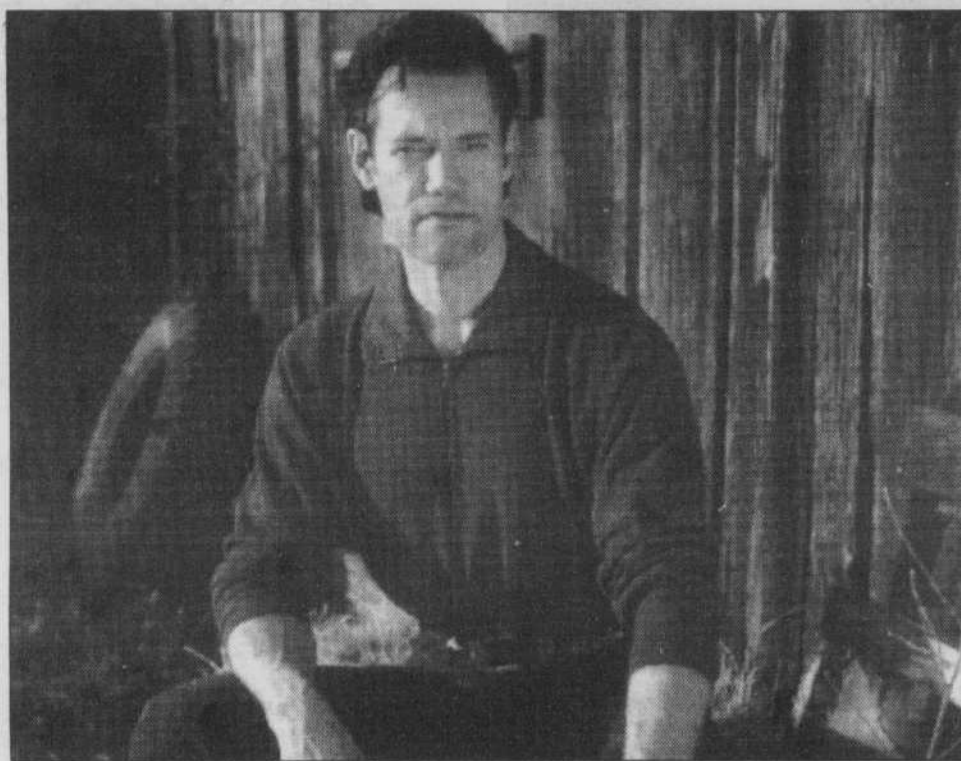

Martina McBride will open the show and those who had the chance to catch her performance back in 1996 will surely want to see her again.

McBride has resumed touring after taking a few months off to recuperate from giving birth to her second child.

COUNTRY CONNECTION

JESSIE AULIS

Randy Travis is going back to his country roots after trying his hand at acting.

Known for her powerful vocal as well as for the quality of the topics she sings about, the tiny lady is among the favorite entertainers in the industry.

The Independence Day singer offers a high-energy show filled with a diversity of emotions and her A Capella rendition of any given song is always a thrill to hear. If we're lucky this time around she might do one in her show.

For the second day of country music entertainment, The Champlain Valley Fair has picked one of the hottest star of the 90s. I swear this show will be sold out. This last sentence should be enough for you to guess who I'm talking about!

Indeed John Michael Montgomery will be in concert at The Champlain Valley Fair on Thursday, Sept. 3, at 7 p.m. We first heard of this Kentucky native as he hit the national music scene in 1992. Two of his hits were covered by pop bands, "I Swear" and "I Love The Way You Love Me."

Five years later, he released his first Greatest Hits collection that includes six songs that hit No.1 including his signature song, the beautiful "I Swear." Montgomery is best known for his ability to sing ballads with enough emotion to make the fans believe that he has lived that song.

A few toe-tappers are also part of his repertoire such as "Sold" and "Be My Baby Tonight." Pretty hard to stand still when you hear songs such as these in a live concert. The highlight of his concert though comes when the whole band leave the stage and Montgomery takes you on a wild ride with his guitar.

On the other hand Kevin Sharp who just got married not too long ago will open the show. Sharp's career has been chronicled many times in the national media because he survived a life threatening battle with a rare form of bone cancer.

The "Nobody Knows" singer is highly focused on his music and he's succeeded pretty well so far. Of course his career is still young but the talent is there and Sharp is more than willing to share it with his numerous fans.

For those who want to reserve their tickets in advance you can do so by calling (802) 863-5966. I strongly suggest a reservation if you want to be sure.

Here's a review for you this week:

MELODIE CRITTENDEN; Melodie Crittenden, (Asylum)

Born in Oklahoma, this new singer already has paid her dues by singing in a Gospel choir during her childhood.

She followed that experience with a stint at a music conservatory in Kansas City in her teens and then moved to Nashville where she got a job singing four times a day at Opryland.

The new album includes three songs she co-wrote and the result is a collection on the bluesy side of country. Her smoky, full-powered delivery works well with songs dominated by emotions in love and relationships.

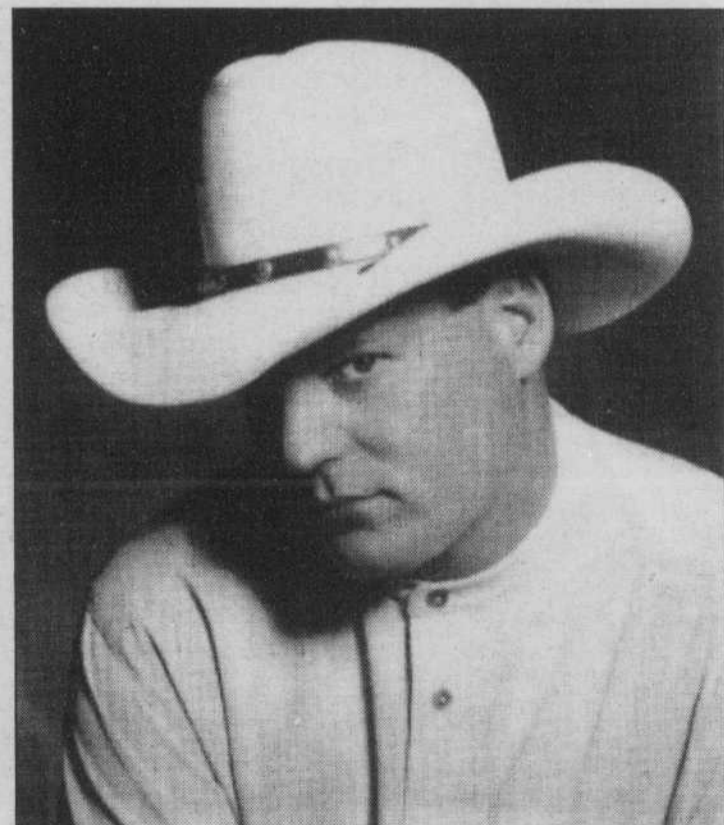

She tackles very serious topics such as escaping a marriage where there's domestic abuse in "Birmingham" while her first single "Broken Road," is about having to go through hard times in life before you can find your something or someone special.

There's "I Should Have Known," in which she seems to have found that special person and the country rock beat of "You Make Me Crazy."

It's not a bad debut album and she surely demonstrates her musical knowledge, the choice of songs is not bad at all. But there's something missing to make it mainstream country.

It is very hard to say if it will come with experience, because for now the magic ain't there. It still worth listening to as Crittenden proves to be a strong and smart woman.

Have a nice week filled with country music and keep your country state of mind!

What gives? Sportsmanship is running rampant in tennis

Hingis looks to repeat as Wimbledon champ

It's getting to the point where athletic ability isn't enough in professional tennis. You have to be even-tempered and friendly, too.

Early in June, Spaniard Arantxa Sanchez Vicario apologized to American Monica Seles after beating her in the French Open.

"I don't think you are the one who deserved to lose," Sanchez Vicario said.

The men's finalists at Roland Garros - winner Carlos Moya of Spain and runner-up Alex Corretja - are countrymen and very close friends.

Last year, Jana Novotna of the Czech Republic praised Wimbledon champion Martina Hingis as "very respectful of the other players" after losing to the Swiss teenager.

This week, we'll see if the camaraderie continues when TSN and CTV air the 111th Lawn Tennis Championships from Wimbledon, England (check local listings).

Barring injuries and the unforeseen, Hingis and American Pete Sampras will defend their singles titles.

Watch for Canadian Daniel Nestor and his doubles partner, Mark Knowles of the Bahamas, to challenge for the championship. Despite being unseeded, they did quite well in the French Open, losing in the finals to the top-seeded Dutch duo Paul Haarhuis and Jacco Eltingh.

TV WEEK

Weddings airs this week

Life Network walks viewers down the aisle

By David Migicovsky
TVDATA

June has traditionally been the most popular month for weddings, so what better time for the Life Network to premiere its nuptial-knowledge series?

On Sunday, June 28, the network launches Weddings with an all-day look at marriage ceremonies.

The series, which airs Sundays, Tuesdays and Thursdays, highlights a different couple each week and follows the planning of their wedding up to and including the big day. The first episode features the wedding of Daphne and Robert, a couple who have chosen to have a nontraditional ceremony on the same day that their friends are getting married.

While Weddings walks you down the aisle, the hourlong special Blushing Brides stumbles to the altar.

In Blushing Brides, anything that can go wrong does. Whether it's a sick bridegroom, an incontinent horse, a recalcitrant Rolls-Royce or a freak storm, the hapless couples shown in the special make viewers realize that Four Weddings and a Funeral could have been a documentary.

In fact, Blushing Brides is like an all-wedding version of America's Funniest Home Videos, without the sound effects.

Of course, none of these disasters would dare happen during a Martha Stewart wedding. And because most viewers will never get the opportunity to have Stewart plan their ceremonies, Life Network offers the next best thing: wedding-related episodes of Martha Stewart Living, Images With Donna Holgate, A Day in the Country, Sue Warden CraftScapes and B. Smith With Style.

Weddings follows the planning and celebration of a different couple's wedding each week. The new series airs Sundays, Tuesdays and Thursdays on Life Network.

Under-20 troupe is on verge of success

The Comedy Network asks Y B Normal?

By David Migicovsky
TVDATA

For most people, landing their own comedy show takes years of work. They toil at day jobs while honing their craft at nighttime comedy clubs. But the five members of Y B Normal? had to find a different route to success since they have only recently become old enough to get into nightclubs.

Airing Fridays on The Comedy Network, the troupe got its series, Y B Normal?, because it simply devoted all its time to that goal.

"There's two routes of doing it, and one is more conventional than the other, but I think both are just as lengthy," explains member Tom Wieckowski in an interview from Y B Normal? headquarters.

"We've been at it for six years. We may not have been doing it the normal way, but the time, involvement and effort is there just as much."

The hard part, Wieckowski admits, was getting people in the industry to take them seriously when they were only 15 years old.

The troupe's other members are Pierre-Hughes Dallaire, Matthiew Klinck, Ron Langton and Paolo Mancini. They hail from Aylmer, Que., just across the river from Ottawa. However, don't look for political humor on the show. Y B Normal? instead has its own unique humor, including an affinity for martial artists.

"We like ninjas," Wieckowski explains. "We watch kung fu movies and we try to incorporate it into our comedy. We like to hurt the elderly, and if that can involve ninjas in any way, then we're happy."

Y B Normal? does get violent. The troupe draws inspiration from Monty Python, whose humor was often quite bloody. A ninja appearance can lead to a severed head. In one of Dallaire's clay-animation segments, a Pillsbury Doughboy look-alike is poked in the stomach, leading the character to literally spill his guts on television.

Another more recent influence on the troupe is The Kids in the Hall.

"We like to think we take the classical influences from classic comedy troupes from Britain, like Monty Python, (and) the wackiness of Kids in the Hall and mold it in with a real modern twist, with lots of music and much more intense (camera) angles," Wieckowski says.

One area in which Y B Normal? parts company with the other troupes is that women's roles are actually played by women.

Like everything about its approach to show business, the troupe's reasons are pragmatic.

"We want to use the opportunity that we have a show to meet women," Wieckowski quips.

After spending most of their teen-age years writing comedy every day, it's hard to blame them.
