LOCAL NEWS

Bristol's Big Bazaar, featuring Meals, Music, and Merriment, will be held in the hall of St. Edward the Confessor's parish on the afternoons and evenings of Tues., Wed. and Thurs.—Oct. 2, 3 and 4.

With religious meetings on Sunday, at which Rev. Mr. Conn officiated, a social gathering on Monday night and a big "hoe-it-down" on Thursday night, the new Community Hall at Murrell's has been brought conspicuously before public notice.

The past week's weather put a complete stop to harvesting operations in this section. While some farmers luckily succeeded in getting threshed out last week, others just ready to stook thresh got caught with the rain. Too bad!

The Church of St. Edward, the Confessor, was struck by lightning during a storm on Saturday but little damage was done. Mr. Wm. Rey was in the basement at the time and escaped injury, although rather severely shocked. A lamp hanging on a post where the bolt descended was shattered to pieces.

To BE DEDICATED ON OCT. 18—Rev. Mr. Temple announced on Sunday that the date set for the dedication of the tower and Naylor Memorial Clock at St. Paul's would take place on Thursday, Oct. 18, (St. Luke's Day) which was the earliest date that Bishop Farthing would be free to perform the ceremony.

Grievances in Bristol

Whilst the Summer dwellers of Norway Bay are hot foot after the Bristol Council to make a better road between the Highway and that popular and fast growing resort, the people of Bristol Corners, for a good many years, have been submitting to a gross inconvenience in the matter of mail service—especially between the Corners and the city of Ottawa, which could be easily remedied if a mail service were inaugurated on the C. N. R. Another absurd anomaly, pointed out by an old subscriber, is that a letter mailed at Bristol for Norway Bay (2 miles distant) travels 210 miles before it reaches its destination and consumes nearly three days in the operation. Other instances of inexcusable delay in the carriage of mails to near-distant points are not lacking. A service over the C. N. R. would alter all this, and remove the grievance. What has the P. O. Department to say by way of extenuation? Hon. Mr. Venoit should ease up a little in his zest for dismissing Tory postmasters and devote some attention to this and like matters of greater import.

Stop at Intersections Of Highway

Do motorists generally know that traffic on the Hull-to-Chapeau Highway has the right-of-way over that on all intersecting roads, and that it is the motorists' duty on approaching the Highway from any intersection to stop, unless the visibility is good on both sides, and he is absolutely certain no collision with a Highway car is possible? Personal observation has led us to believe that such knowledge of the traffic laws is not general, or if it is, that in many cases it is notoriously ignored. Right here in Shawville infractions of the law are of frequent occurrence and very fortunately—in fact providentially—result without accident. But there is always a danger, and some time, sooner or later, a bad spill is bound to occur at the Bank corner of Main Street, unless greater precaution is observed. If motorists will just get it into their noodles that Main Street is now a part of the Highway, under control of the Roads Department, and that all traffic thereon has the right of way, they will hardly run the risk of fouling a car on the Highway at an intersection, as in such case the onus of the accident would be entirely thrown upon their shoulders, and consequent liability for any damage occurring. "Stop, look and listen," should be the watchword of all cross-section motorists—on the Highway as well as at railway crossings.

Pretty Wedding At Campbells Bay

Campbell's Bay, Que., Sept. 13.—The Holiness Movement Church was the scene of a pretty wedding this afternoon when Erma, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. Allen Smith, became the bride of Mr. Allan Carey, son of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Carey, of Clarendon.

Rev. E. J. Wilson officiated. The church was tastefully decorated with floral baskets and bouquets of gladioli. The bride entered the church to the strains of Lohengren's Wedding March played by Miss Carrie Smith, and was preceded up the aisle by little Misses Margaret Knipe, Margaret Smith and L. Smith, as flower girls.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride looked charming in a gown of ivory silk georgette and her white tulle veil was arranged cap effect with a bandeau of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of pink roses and lilies-of-the-valley.

Following the ceremony a wedding dinner was served to the immediate relatives at the home of the bride's parents.

Later the happy couple left on an extended motor trip to Ottawa, Toronto and Niagara Falls. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Carey will reside in Campbell's Bay.

Miss Helen Gertrude Hudson, R.N., Weds Cecil E. Meredith

Chelsea United Church was prettily decorated with ferns and flowers for the wedding of Helen G. Hudson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. S. E. Hudson, to Cecil Ernest Meredith, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Meredith, of Ottawa, which took place at 2:30 o'clock, Sept. 5th, Rev. G. C. Wood and Rev. T. J. Vickery officiated.

Miss Gladys Bearman, cousin of the bride, presided at the organ and during the signing of the Register, "A Perfect Love" was very sweetly rendered by Miss B. Smith and Miss A. Hutchison. The bride was given in marriage

OTTAWA, ONT.

No School in Canada offers a better training, or ensures a more successful future. Henry's leads all others, and ranks among employers as "The School of HIGHER EFFICIENCY"—a fact borne out by more than 600 pupils who have, since January, 1913, left other Ottawa schools to come to it.

Therefore, it is not surprising that business men, in advertising for stenographers, should specifically say, "Graduates of Henry's School preferred."

Farm Notes

The Use of the Swather

The most noteworthy development of recent years in western agriculture is the use of the swather. The report of the Superintendent of the Swift Current, Experiment Station explains its use and points out that the principal object of the swather is to eliminate a portion of the waiting period between binder harvesting and combine harvesting and thus avoid the possibilities of loss due to unfavorable weather. The crop is cut and laid in swaths, each of which contains the straw and heads of a strip 16 to 24 feet wide, depending on the cutting mechanism. The cutting mechanism may be either the combine knife and a table or one or more headers. Swathing can be done at the time binder harvesting commences. If the weather is favorable the swaths can be threshed four to six days later. Threshing is performed by means of the combine equipped with a special pickup device.

When crops are slow to ripen to the degree where the combine can be safely used, or where ripening is uneven, the swather is an undoubted advantage. A crop that contains a quantity of green weeds, and where it is impossible to get all the crop without cutting a portion of the green weeds, could be better harvested by the swather than by the straight combine. When harvested by the straight combine the broken portions of weed stems, green seeds and pulp from the plants may cause tough or damp grain. The green plants have an opportunity to dry in the swath and therefore cause no further trouble, as the most of them would then be light enough to separate from the grain, but would cause no trouble even if separation did not take place. A crop in which sawfly damage is likely to be serious could be swathed before the damage reached dangerous proportions. In areas where frost is common the swather could be used to advantage, thus extending the area wherein combines can be used.

The two apparent disadvantages of the swather are first that the two operations of swathing and threshing are more expensive than straight combining, although not nearly so expensive as binder and separator harvesting, and secondly that in the case of swaths lying out during a prolonged period of warm, wet weather there would likely be a serious loss by sprouting.

Copies of this report may be had on application to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Storing Canned Products

A cool, dark, dry place is ideal for the storage of canned products. Heat favors the growth of bacteria; light causes fading; while dampness further the growth of moulds and may even cause rust on the metal fastenings of jars.

Do not allow canned goods to lie about under uncertain conditions. Wash the jars and label neatly with name of product and date when canned. If dark storage is not available wrap all jars in paper to exclude the light. If a damp atmosphere is positively unavoidable examine the rubbers on the jars from time to time, as mould may attack them, making possible the admission of air and bacteria to the contents of the jar.

A container for canned goods should be of a size to suit the needs of the household; not so large that its contents cannot be consumed shortly after opening, or deterioration and spoilage will occur.

It is a wise precaution to boil canned vegetable products for a few minutes after they are removed from the jar. This does not imply that they must be eaten hot. When the vegetables are required for salads, etc., they may be set aside after boiling and chilled before use. These and other phases of canning fruit and vegetables in the home are described in Bulletin No. 77 "Preserving Fruits and Vegetables in the Home," obtained from the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

The Food Value of Ice-Cream

One of the important factors in the increased use of ice-cream has been the wide publicity given to recent findings of nutritional authorities regarding the food value of dairy products as a whole. The results of these investigations undoubtedly have brought about a change in the viewpoint of the consuming public, with the result that ice-cream is considered no longer as a luxury, but a very desirable and healthful food. Thus, it is accorded a regular place in the dietary of public dining rooms, restaurants, hospitals, and many homes.

Bulletin No. 102—"The Manufacture of Ice-Cream" may be had on application to the Publications Branch, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. All the different phases of manufacture are fully explained.

Ice-cream is a true dairy product which contains the four essential food substances naturally found in milk, namely, fat, proteins, carbohydrates, and mineral matter, and in addition supplies the important protective and auxiliary food substances known as vitamins. Milk fat is one of our very best foods, containing, as it does the very valuable "Fat Soluble A" vitamin. Milk proteins are of the highest quality and contain the important "Water Soluble B" vitamin and small quantities of "Water Soluble C" vitamin. The carbohydrates in ice-cream are plentifully supplied by the milk sugar and added cane sugar, while mineral salts, especially calcium, are found in adequate quantities for normal growth and health.

Average commercial ice-cream contains between 34 and 40 per cent. of total solids of the very best quality as regards digestibility and energy-producing value, and compares favorably with any other food in this respect.

In addition to being a highly nutritive food, ice-cream is a delicious confection that is relished by nearly all people and makes a handy ready-to-serve dessert for the busy housewife.

The Yak in Canada

Interesting experiments have been conducted at Buffalo Park, Wainwright, with the yak (Bos grunniens) the ox of the plateaus of Tibet.

Under Experimental Farm direction excellent specimens of crosses between the yak and the buffalo have been secured, also crosses between the yak and domestic cattle.

What may the future development in this breeding work toward the retention or elimination of yak blood will be largely determined by progress in breeding work. However, the work to date has afforded a most interesting study of considerable value in animal breeding, and it is quite possible that in future years there may be developed a herd containing largely the domestic blood of the improved beef breeds, but with an infusion of bison and yak blood sufficient to give that hardness, ability to withstand storms, ability to forage in winter, and the general thrift and vigor, which may be of some commercial value to the colder and northern sections of Western Canada where the beef industry will for all time be one of the important phases of agriculture.—Issued by the Director of Publicity, Dom. Dept. of Agriculture, Ottawa.

Disaster Would Follow Project

Scientists Find Red Sea is Higher Than Mediterranean

Paris—After twenty-seven centuries of study, scientists have definitely concluded that any effort to convert the Suez Canal into a water-level river between the Mediterranean and the Red Sea would result in the disastrous inundation of a large part of Egypt, Greece, Italy, France, and Spain, upset the level of all the oceans, and have a consequent interference with tides and weather conditions.

M. Jean Brunhes, professor at the College of France and a member of the Institute of France, has announced that long study has now definitely established the fact that the Red Sea is nine and a half inches higher than the level of the Mediterranean. Any attempt to link the two directly would cause the emptying of a vast amount of the Indian Ocean into the Mediterranean, sending those waters over its banks.

"Seven centuries before Christ, Herodotus wrote in his book, Necos or Nechos started to dig a canal across the desert to link the Red Sea and the Mediterranean," Professor Brunhes said.

"Sarius, King of the Persians, continued the project but abandoned his work when he discovered that if he pierced the Isthmus, all of Egypt would be swamped, for the Red Sea was at a higher level than much of the land of Egypt.

"More recently, Napoleon became intrigued by the subject and when he led his army into Egypt he assigned his best engineers to study the problem. They reported back that the Red Sea was thirty feet higher than the Mediterranean and Napoleon believed them."

No Chance for Witches Now in Town of Salem

Salem has at last lived down her witchcraft. The day when persons suspected of practicing witchcraft were burned to death is now so far submerged in the mists of legend that its shadow never obtrudes upon the up-and-coming prosperity of the modern Massachusetts town. Belief in witchcraft connotes ignorance; and that ignorance has been effectively banished from the scene must be at once evident to any traveler who rides into Salem railroad station. For the first thing that attracts the eye is a sign, prominently placed, which reads: "Information—Chamber of Commerce," with a firm painted hand pointing the way.

Tasty Recipes

Cheese Souffle

Cut 1 lb. cheddar or stilton cheese in slices; fill a baking dish with cheese and crackers. In alternate layers, cover with one pint milk whipped with yolks of 2 eggs, and ½ cup melted butter. Season with salt and cayenne pepper and bake to light brown.

Potato and Celery Soup

Boil 4 large potatoes, 1 large onion cut small, 1 cup finely chopped celery in sufficient salted water to cover well. When well cooked mash in the water and add 3 tablespoons butter blended with 2 tablespoons flour, 2½ cups milk, salt and pepper to taste.

Strain and serve with salt wafers, toast strips or brown bread.

Gingerbread

Sift together 2½ cups flour, 2 teaspoons soda, ¼ teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons ginger. Beat 1 egg, add ½ cup molasses, ½ cup brown sugar, ½ cup sour milk or buttermilk, 4 tablespoons melted shortening; mix and add slowly to dry ingredients. Beat until smooth. Pour into a greased and floured pan and bake 20 minutes. Have oven hot for first 10 minutes and reduce the heat to finish. Delicious eaten with cream cheese.

Boiled Cod, Haddock or Halibut

Put into boiling, salted water to which a dessertspoon of vinegar has been added and cook 40 minutes. Serve with white sauce to which 3 tablespoons capers and one hard-boiled egg chopped fine. Dust the fish with finely minced parsley, pour the hot sauce over and serve at once. Spinach, cauliflower or chard should be served with this.

Almond Biscuits

Mix ¼ lb. of flour with 1½ oz. of castor sugar, crumble in 2 oz. of butter, and add half a teaspoonful of baking powder. Separate the white from the yolk of an egg, add a few drops of milk to the yolk, also a little almond flavoring, and make into a firm paste. Roll out thinly, cut into rounds, brush with white of egg, and sprinkle with a little sugar and a few chopped almonds previously blanched. The biscuits may be cut into fingers instead of rounds.

Oeufs de Calais

Boil 6 eggs hard. Split them, take out the yolks, and smash them with a fork. Chop the whites roughly. Measure the whites, and take the same bulk of cold cooked ham or tongue, chopped in about the same style. The meat must contain no fat at all. Make ½ pt. good thick white sauce, well seasoned with salt and pepper. Stir in the yolks of the eggs, and, when they are well mixed, add the whites and the meat, and stand the pan at the side of the fire, where it may simmer, but not boil, for 5 min. Meanwhile, fry enough small squares of the white of bread to cover the bottom of your dish. Arrange them. Heap the egg mixture on them, and serve very hot.

Salt fish, well cooked, and broken into neat little pieces, often take the place of ham or tongue.

Banbury Cakes

Make flaky pastry a little richer than usual with ¼ lb. of flour, 3 oz. of butter, a pinch of salt, a teaspoonful of lemon juice, and a very little cold water. Roll out three and a half times, finally into a square, and cut into rounds the size of a teacup. Put 2 oz. of washed currants into a bowl with a grate of lemon, a grate of nutmeg, 1 oz. of sugar, ½ oz. of lemon or citron peel finely chopped, ½ oz. of ratafia biscuits crushed into crumbs, and ½ oz. of melted butter. Put a little mixture on each round of pastry, yet the edges and fold over into a turn-over. Turn up on end, roll out a little and make three slits on top. Brush with egg, sprinkle with sugar, and bake in rather a quick oven for ten minutes. Allow to cool on a wire tray.

He feels it yield—but sings on unafraid,
Knowing he bath his wings.

Selecting the Feeder Steer

(Experimental Farms Note.)

In a very few weeks it will be necessary to purchase the steers that are to be finished for the spring market. The selection of profitable feeders is much more difficult in the Eastern Provinces than in the Western Provinces, due to the fact that a very high percentage of the Eastern steers show evidence of considerable dairy cattle breeding. However, there are many of these steers, even with some dairy blood, that will make very profitable feeders and they are the ones that should be selected for the winter feeding work. The remainder should go to the block as they come from the pastures. Select only such steers as will conform more closely to the real beef-type, that is, straight, low-set, deep, blocky individuals, with a quite temperament. It is that real dairy type of steer, with a nervous temperament, that one wants to avoid in the feed lot. For example, out of twenty-five steers fed at the Nappan Experimental Farm during 1927-28, six of the steers were of the latter type and their average gain in 125 days was only 161 pounds, against 246 pounds as an average for seven steers that were fairly typical beef steers, with some dairy blood mixed in. The former were worth 1½ to 2 cents less on the market in March, besides making 85 pounds less gain. The dairy-type steers never made profitable gains, nor did they look finished at their best.

To feed a bunch of good, thrifty beef steers is a profitable side line, besides being an economical method of marketing cheap roughage grown on the farm, such as hay and roots. In reading the annual report issued from the Experimental Farm, Nappan, it may be noted that a good average market price has been charged for all feeds consumed and, furthermore, that a good average profit over feed cost has been realized over a period of years, in the finishing of a bunch of beef steers. After all, this is the most businesslike method of farming, and the adoption of such a policy will be found a profitable one. There will be more manure available for top-dressing; consequently, less money going out for fertilizer, all of which helps to swell the income from the farm. The main point to bear in mind is the selection of good feeders of the right type, steers that will make reasonably good use of the feeds consumed.

Package From Sky Surprises Ranger

Flier Drops Candy, Magazines, Papers in Ranier Park

Tacoma, Wash.—Like manna from the sky was a package of candy, magazines and newspapers dropped from an airplane at the feet of a lonely outlook stationed in the Rainier National Forest, 4200 feet above sea level.

Bob Gules, a forest ranger, has the duty of detecting and reporting fires in a portion of this park. Hemmed in by the Deschutes and Little Nisqually and Tilton Rivers, he sees only occasional forest rangers who bring him necessary supplies.

The package, dropped from the passing plane, contained a note from a friend who wrote that the airman had offered to carry anything else that the outlook wanted. The name of the flier was not given.

Stranger Than Fiction

Tragedy Overtakes Noted Mahout in London as Profaned Sacred Elephant Dies in India

London.—A mysterious tragedy, which Oriental tradition links with the demise of the sacred elephant, confronted London police recently.

Coincidentally with the death recently in Calcutta of Pa Wa, a sacred white elephant, Said Ali, a famous Mohammedan Mahout, was found horribly mutilated in his quarters at the London Zoo. At the same time Sandy Wee, a Burmese Christian Mahout, was discovered injured, and now lies in London hospital. He was found under Ali's window.

Even persons least addicted to superstition were pondering the ancient belief of the East that misfortune follows with certain footsteps when a white elephant is taken from its own country. For these animals are supposed to be the reincarnation of Buddha and as such are worshipped by certain sects of Orientals.

Two years ago the famous white elephant, Pa Wa, on which the King of Siam had bestowed a title, was brought to the London Zoo from the East. With him came Sandy Wee. Pa Wa later was taken on a tour of America in 1926 by Sandy Wee and then sent to Calcutta, while Sandy returned to the London Zoo.

Said Ali was called the finest elephant trainer in the world, and he and Sandy Wee lived together in a little room at the zoo. When the tragedy was discovered, a pickaxe and sledge lay beside Ali's body, mute evidence as to how he was killed. Otherwise the affair is shrouded in darkness.

Sandy Wee knew of the legendary curse when he started on his great adventure towards the West, but whether he believed in it perhaps will never be known. It is probable that he and his unfortunate comrade had discussed it many times.

Whether they believed it or not, they knew that many of their countrymen did and that it was being said even the return of Pa Wa to his own land could not wipe out the insult of taking him away.

Said Ali, because of his uncanny control over elephants, was brought from India to handle the bad elephant Indiarana, whose temper baffled zoo authorities. The Moslem won over the huge beast from the moment she saw him. The Mahout used to talk to her in a strange tongue and croon Indian songs to her.

Both men were known to thousands of children and adults from every part of the world, for young visitors are permitted to ride zoo elephants.

The Traffic "Cop"

A despatch from London draws attention to a matter that automobile drivers in Montreal will doubtless appreciate. One offending driver held before the court at Tottenham said of the officer who arrested him: "His gentlemanly manner made my position far less unpleasant than it would otherwise have been." Another offender, also the victim of the same officer's energetic enforcement of the law, addressed him in these uncomplimentary terms: "You are a dirty, rotten . . . I only hope that you will be the first man I run over."

There you are. Two viewpoints as diametrically opposite as the poles. Yet who can doubt but that the first is the more accurate. Our own traffic policemen have a difficult duty to perform, but it can hardly be denied that they discharge it, in the main, with discretion, with tact, and with courtesy. There may be times when their patience is strained to the utmost. Yet the occasions are few and far between when they fail in recognizing that it is their part to make the offender cognizant that he or she is breaking the law, and not to use offensive language towards them.

If anything, Montreal's traffic squad is a little too lenient. Every day and every hour of the day automobiles are driven through the crowded streets of this city at a speed considerably in excess of that laid down by law. Possibly if the police were more exigent there would be less ground for regretting that the law has been broken. It is a very easy matter for a policeman to be exacting. Those who can show discretion and at the same time make the offender understand clearly that they intend to do their duty without fear or favor, are doing the city the best possible service.—Editorial "Montreal Star."

Low Stuff

Provincial police are reported to be on the trail of fake "eye specialists" now operating on the unwary throughout the province. It is to be sincerely hoped that the fakers are caught and properly punished. Of all the reprehensible things one encounters in this life, few are more so than the practice of making money by taking unfair advantages of human suffering. The man who preys on the physical misfortunes of men and women is about as low in the social scale as it is possible to fall. Public opinion always supports swift and effective punishment when people of this kind are brought to book.

A TIRED-OUT FEELING

Is a Sure Sign That the Blood is Thin and Watery

"I am glad to have an opportunity of testifying to the benefits I derived from the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills," writes Mrs. Lawrence Kennedy, St. Joseph, N.B. She further says:—"Some years ago I was working as a stenographer, and became badly run-down. I always had a tired-out feeling, had no appetite and suffered terribly from backache. Almost every month I had to remain from the office for a day or two. I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I have reason to be glad that I followed this advice. Before I had been taking the pills very long I began to feel much better. Continuing their use my strength came back, I regained my appetite and the terrible backache from which I had suffered disappeared. I have been married some years now and have two fine healthy children, a girl and a boy, and am in the best of health. All this I owe to Dr. Williams' famous Pink Pills, and I trust that these few lines may help some other weak, run-down person."

All weak, run-down people who will give this blood-building tonic a fair trial will find through its use new health and strength. You can get the pills from any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Heart of Man

The heart of man resembles a secret chamber wherein stands—like the block of white unheaven marble set in the studio of a sculptor—a veiled figure. Though the man may not so much as life the corner of the veil, yet he forever and in secret work to fashion and form the figure that lies beneath.

And the figure is the soul of the man, and the unveiling thereof is called death; and until the figure be unveiled, the man scarce knoweth what manner of man he is.—Coulson Kernahan.

"Ah! these be cool 'ard times for the workin' man." "What the matter now, another strike coming?" "No sich luck, sir! The bloomin' masters have given in, and we've got to start work again on Monday morning!"

New York Is Paying High to be on Time

Telephone Company Takes in 35 Cents a Minute for Telling the Hour

New York—This city is paying the New York Telephone Company 35 cents a minute in order to find out what time it is.

Several years ago the telephone company discontinued the practice of telling its subscribers the time of day whenever they wanted to set their clocks or watches. But housewives became tired of calling across the air shaft to learn the time from Neighbor Jones and business men found the numerous clocks that line New York's streets did not always agree.

The result was that the telephone company established a special "time telling department." It sells time just like a store sells eggs, shoes or overcoats. The charge is 5 cents. If a subscriber calls up Meridian 1212, and a honey-voiced operator replies, "The time is now 3.51," his telephone is charged with a local call. If someone drops a nickel in a toll-box telephone, it doesn't come back to him as it did in the old days when the operator would tell him the hour.

During the first seven days that Meridian 1212 was in operation, there were 77,160 requests for the time, which means that New York residents spent $3,858 for the knowledge thus retailed. The calls, according to the telephone company's records, reach the peak between the hours of 5 and 6 p.m.

SAVE THE CHILDREN

In Summer When Childhood Ailments Are Most Dangerous.

Mothers who keep a box of Baby's Own Tablets in the house may feel that the lives of their little ones are reasonably safe during the hot weather. Stomach troubles, cholera infantum and diarrhoea carry off thousands of little ones every summer, in most cases because the mother does not have a safe medicine at hand to give promptly. Baby's Own Tablets relieve these troubles, or if given occasionally to the well child they will prevent their coming on. The Tablets are guaranteed to be absolutely harmless even to the new-born babe. They are especially good in summer because they regulate the bowels and keep the stomach sweet and pure. They are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Mr. Lenin's Brain

Scientists are said to have cut the brain of the late Nicolai Lenin, the Russian dictator, into 31,000 slices and particles. For two and a half years the work of dissecting, analyzing and preserving Mr. Lenin's gray matter has been in progress.

The net result, probably, is that they have 31,000 slices and particles. This is usually the way such tasks work out.

Victorious Canadian Athletes Return Home

THE first contingent of the Canadian Olympic Games party received a tremendous welcome when they returned to Canada on the White Star liner Laurentic. They were guests at civic receptions in Montreal and Toronto, while individual cities planned special celebrations in honor of their individual members of the team. The above photographs show, top, the group on board the Laurentic in which can be seen, fourth from the left, standing, Mrs. Joe Wright, and, extreme right, Joe Wright, Sr., parents of Joe Wright, Jr., who won the Diamond Sculls in 1904. Joe Wright is seen in the center of the back row, eighth from the right. Fourth from the right standing is Lou Scholes, winner of the Diamond Sculls in 1904, who went to greet young Joe Wright. Underneath the group, on the left, is Joe Wright, Jr.; on the right is Ethel Catherwood, of Saskatoon and Toronto, winner of the high jump at Amsterdam, where she created a world's record. The four girls are members of the team which won the 400 metres relay event and created a new world record. From left to right they are Myrtle Cook, Jane Bell, Ethel Smith, and F. Rosenfeld. The bottom photograph shows young Joe Wright, displaying his trophies won at Henley to his mother. In his left hand he has the gold cup which is his permanent prize and in his right hand he has the miniature Sculls, which he holds for one year.

Bill in India to Curb Bolshevism

Government to Publish Text of Public Safety Measure

Simla, India.—The Government of India will soon publish the text of the public safety bill dealing with Bolshevik agents other than Indian or British subjects of Indian states. The bill provides for the removal of agents not coming under these classes and is expected to provoke a lively discussion in the Legislative Assembly in September.

Agents will be asked to execute a bond giving security for good behaviour until their removal from India, failing which they will be detained in custody. The breaking of such a bond will render the agent liable to arrest without warrant and to maximum imprisonment of a year in addition to a fine, but the prosecuting authority can only be the Governor-General in Council.

No order for removal can be questioned in any court while the officers acting under the law will be protected against legal proceedings for actions performed in good faith. The Government of India declares evidence recently has accumulated of subversive activities and intentions of the Communist international directed against India.

Fur of New Rabbit Is Like Sable

Two of a new variety of rabbits, called sable rabbits, stated to have great commercial possibilities, have been on view at Minehead, Somerset. Mr. G. A. Drake, secretary of the British Sable Rabbit Club, who was one of the judges, said it was impossible to distinguish their fur from real sable, and the white hairs in their coats defied the dyer's art. "It takes about thirty rabbits to make one sable coat, and I am getting six guineas each for two-month-old sable rabbits. The Prince of Wales is very much interested in these rabbits, and many well-known people are breeding them," states the secretary.

What Will you do

When your Children Cry for It

There is hardly a household that hasn't heard of Castoria! At least five million homes are never without it. If there are children in your family, there's almost daily need of its comfort. And any night may find you very thankful there's a bottle in the house. Just a few drops, and that colic or constipation is relieved; or diarrhoea checked. A vegetable product; a baby remedy meant for young folks. Castoria is about the only thing you have ever heard doctors advise giving to infants. Stronger medicines are dangerous to a tiny baby, however harmless they may be to grown-ups. Good old Castoria! Remember the name, and remember to buy it. It may spare you a sleepless, anxious night. It is always ready, always safe to use; in emergencies, or for everyday ailments. Any hour of the day or night that Baby becomes fretful, or restless. Castoria was never more popular with mothers than it is today. Every druggist has it.

$500 Reward in Hassell Radio Fake

Radio League Committee Acts at Hartford to Learn Who Sent False Signals

Hartford, Conn.—The Executive Committee of the American Radio Relay League, Inc., at a special meeting voted to authorize a reward of $500 for information leading to the apprehension of the person or persons who broadcast the messages signed "Rockford Flyers," which are now believed to have been false.

Officers of the organization are thoroughly aroused over the suggestion that the messages, purported to have been sent by the missing flyers, Bert Hassell and Parker Cramer, may have been broadcast by some licensed amateur operator as a practical joke. "We have committed ourselves to the task of running down the persons who sent the messages," the league's secretary, Kenneth E. Warner, said, "and will go to any lengths to apprehend and punish those responsible. We are broadcasting the announcement of the reward from every amateur station in the league chain, and we hope, in that way to get something definite and concrete to work on."

Mr. Warner also declared that, should the person or persons who sent the fake messages be apprehended, the Radio League will take an active part in the criminal prosecution and will ask that the extreme penalty for the crime be imposed. The maximum penalty for transmitting a false message of distress is five years imprisonment and a fine of $5,000.

Canada Calls Off Its Search

Ottawa—Search in Northern Canadian waters for the missing airplane, Greater Rockford, was called off by the Canadian Government here, after receipt from the Rockford-Stockholm Flight Committee of a telegram stating there was positive proof that the plane had been seen over Greenland last Sunday morning.

"Associated Press reports from Greenland, through Copenhagen," the message read, "absolutely identifies Greater Rockford as plane seen over Flakernaes, Greenland, Sunday morning at 10.30 Greenland Time. Danish Government vouches for veracity of sheriff who sent the report to Copenhagen."

The Canadian Government notified George P. Mackenzie, head of the Arctic expedition aboard the Canadian Government patrol ship Beothic, which is now rounding the southeastern point of Baffin Land on her way to Lake Harbor, that search for the Greater Rockford in those waters could be abandoned.

Desert Chorus

Tall derricks that become lacy spires—through the gray-gold haze, rolling hills that are rose and amethyst, rose-tinted desert sands and shadowy grayish-green clumps of desert sagebrush—this is a California oil field made beautiful by the sunset's afterglow. The vast sweep of plain and horizon had imprisoned the sheaf of colors left in the sky by the sun as he slipped behind the last western rim of hills, and has scattered magic far as the eye can see. A fairy city hangs on the slopes, its round snow-white houses reaching fantastic heights as the desert atmosphere plays pranks with size and proportion—a "tank farm" storing hundreds of thousands of barrels of oil.

Sun-baked hills are transformed by the jeweled shafts of fading daylight; and as they darken and melt away into the night, myriads of twinkling lights spring into view. They are like illuminated Christmas trees, these stately derricks, their topmost lamps gleaming above "crown blocks" tow-stillness is broken by the creaking and groaning of ponderous machinery eighty feet into the sky. The cry, the hissing and rumbling of giant boilers, the musical clink, clink, of huge iron "bits" striking joints of tubing hanging near the "hole," the uncertain rhythm of the gas engine's eternal put-put. Thus goes on the fascinating and endless quest for "black gold," one mighty industrial chorus which ceases neither day nor night.

Two convicts were talking. "You know," said one, "it took John Bunyan all his life to write a story." "Garni!" was the reply. "It took me ten years to do a sentence."

As the Poets Had Said

The road turned suddenly and ascended above the valley. There was a rush of air, and then Nora saw the sea. It was booming against a deep purple cliff lost in green water and pale green spray.

They climbed over one slate ledge. A light mist lay over the cliffs above the sea, which resounded from below. The high grass between the hedgerows was very wet, the foxgloves against the stone walls drooping with their load of dew. As she was mounting the stairway made of flat stones over the second ledge, she heard her first lark. The bird had swooped up, and was singing, singing as he climbed higher and higher. She sat on the flat top of the stile, looking up towards the sky and listening to the warblings, fainter and fainter. Just as the poets had told her, singing as all her life she had dreamed they would sing. The three sisters stood waiting for her to climb over the ledge. While she had been sitting on the stile, the larks had slowly gathered in the sky, one after another, singing together, close to the last yellow light.—Wanda Frajken Neef, in "We Sing Diana."

THE EQUITY.

SHAWVILLE, SEPT. 20, 1928

The wheat yield of the Western Provinces this year, it is now estimated, will exceed 550 million bushels—the largest on record.

Railway grade crossing motor accidents—nearly all taking toll of human life—seem to multiply with shocking regularity as the days go by, despite the ghastly object lesson which each individual tragedy affords. People apparently have grown callous to the fear of the danger that lurketh around the corner, and it looks as if the only way to save motorists from their own foolhardiness is to place gates or stop-signals at all dangerous level crossings, or abolish the latter altogether.

Further search for possible survivors of the Airship Nobile Arctic disaster has been abandoned by the Italian Government, as has also search for the great explorer, Amundsen, who, with five companions, were lost somewhere in the bleak Arctic regions when they set out on an expedition to try and locate the six men who were swept away by the Nobile's big gas bag when the airship was wrecked on the rugged ice field where it fell. Thus thirteen lives were lost in connection with the Nobile's expedition with nothing to show in the way of benefit or scientific value to balance the scales as an offset to this useless sacrifice.

There ARE bargains in Cost per mile

YOU often hear of people getting bargains, but none ever seem to come your way. You wonder why. Sometimes you are tempted to believe that bargains don't exist.

Yet one thing really is a BARGAIN . . . a good used car, properly represented and fairly priced. The Used Cars we offer are bargains in cost-per-mile of easy transportation. The actual first cost of these cars is extraordinarily low. And they offer a tremendous saving in cost per mile that constitutes the bargain.

We represent a car of world-fame—the "Bigger and Better" Chevrolet. We have a large stock of Good Used Cars that are quite definitely BARGAINS. Come round and see them. Then you will know that they offer more miles of dependable, comfortable transportation for every dollar you spend.

DEATHS

JOHN H. HUGHES

There was a large attendance
Sunday afternoon at the funeral of the late John H. Hughes, of Bristol, who passed away on Friday last, survived by an invalid wife and 10 of a family. Mr.
Hughes had been in declining health for several months.

Hilliard Walsh Dies Suddenly

Mr. Hilliard Walsh, well-known dealer and auctioneer, of Campbell's Bay, died very suddenly at his home on Saturday morning.
The cause is attributed to acute indigestion or heart disease. A wife and four children survive.
Funeral at 9.30 Wednesday a. m.
Interment at Upper Eardley cemetery.

The home of Geo. Dickson, of Westmeath, was destroyed by fire on Tuesday night of last week.

George Coffey, well-known farmer of Pembroke township, was almost instantly killed by kicks from a horse on Sept. 7.

Halder McKitcher, of Wakefield, aged 16 years, is dead from injuries received when he was struck by an automobile Sunday night on the Highway one mile south of the village.

Three children of Bernard Watters, and their aunt, Miss Jean Lenihan, lost their lives in Watters' cottage at Britannia, when the latter was burned down on Saturday night.

The big Summer hotel at Murray Bay, Que., one of the most popular resorts on the continent, and the mecca of a large number of wealthy people during the holiday season, was completely destroyed by fire early last Wednesday morning. The loss is placed at half a million dollars.

An auto occupied by William McKain, his two daughters, Margaret and Marie, also Miss Beulah Hannum, of Ottawa, was smashed in a collision with a C. N. R. train at Blind River, on Sunday of last week. All were killed and the bodies of the victims conveyed to Ottawa, where interment took place on Wednesday. Two others also lost their lives in this crash.

Machine That Talks.

A cigarette machine which automatically "talks" to the purchaser as packets are delivered has been installed in a New York shop. "Cork tips protect the lips," says the machine with one brand of cigarette.
"It's toasted" and "Thank you" are spoken as other brands are delivered.

Khartoum-Pretoria Flight.

Two South African Air Force machines flew recently from Khartoum to Pretoria in four days, a distance of about 3,000 miles. This suggests the possibility of the Cape to Cairo in six days.

OUT OF THE DEEP!

Finds Range From a Mastodon's
Tusk to a Bottle of Beer.

Among the art treasures which have left the Old Country for America is a beautiful solid silver vase—a unique specimen of French fifteenth century work. It was found in the net of a Brixham trawler, and the skipper kept it as a curiosity. A visitor, a trifle wiser, offered him a sovereign for it, and the offer was accepted, much to the subsequent profit of the buyer.

The floor of the sea—the North Sea especially—is littered with thousands of objects, and the trawl nets, as they are dragged slowly along the bottom, gather not only fish, but a motley assortment of rubbish—old anchors, bits of wreckage, bones, lumps of coal, and the like. There is also always the possibility that among the mass of squirming, flopping fish there will be something of value.

Two years ago a small sack was brought up in the net of an east coast trawler. The skipper made remarks when he saw it had torn the net, but when it burst and a thousand half-crowns spilled themselves among the fish he "cussed" no more.
As he and his crew were on sharing terms, the trip was a profitable one for all.

In 1912 a Lowestoft trawler brought up, with difficulty, what turned out to be the tusk of a mastodon. It was purchased by the curator of a museum for £7.

Anchors, unless modern, have only an old iron value, but the Dogger Bank has yielded two small silver ones. They would have been pitched overboard if a lad hadn't had the inspiration to scrape one with his knife and reveal the white metal. Experts think they were once part of the decorative work on the bows of a Spanish ship.

An old fisherman told the writer that, suddenly resolving to smoke no more, he flung his pipe overboard. A year later it came up in the net, and in it was an old fourpenny-bit.

It would seem absurd to ask trawlers to look out for anything lost overboard in such a place as the North Sea, but a Freemason who had dropped overboard an attache-case containing his regalia did so. And it was found!

An appropriate find was when the skipper of a trawler wiped his perspiring forehead and remarked: "I could do with a bottle of beer!"

He was promptly handed one by the mate. It had just tumbled out of the net, as if in answer to his wish.

THE YELLOW SEVEN THE PASSING OF ZARA-KHAN

BY EDMUND SNELL.

ILLUSTRATED BY
R. M. SUTTERFIELD

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Peter Pennington, detective, is engaged to marry Monica Viney, widow of Captain John Hewitt, Commissioner of Police at Jesselton, British North Borneo. Pennington is detailed by the government to capture Chai-Hung, leader of The Yellow Seven, a gang of Chinese bandits. James Varney, who lives at the head of the Tembakut River, receives a threatening message from The Yellow Seven. Varney's dad is having himself tattooed by Zara-Khan, skilled tattooer.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

"Come in here," he shouted. Varney appeared, rubbing his eyes. He blinked wearily round the room, smiled faintly at Pennington and, his faculties returning to him, bent over Chong-Hee.

"Dead!"

"Quite!"

"What on earth's it all mean?"

"I heard him creeping about—and helped him down the partition. He must have fallen on his own knife."

"Good Lord! I heard nothing. Didn't the dog bark?"

"You could hardly expect it to. It knew Chong-Hee."

The hound had crept into the room and was sniffing at the corpse suspiciously.

"What do you advise me to do?" asked Varney.

"Take reasonable precautions—and don't go about unarmed. You'll be in need of a new servant. I'll dig one out for you in the morning—one of my own men. You'll find him perfectly reliable though a trifle unsightly!"

The trader produced a pipe from his dressing-gown and a small bag of Dutch tobacco.

"We'd better get out of this. It'll be healthier on the verandah. What's wrong with your man?"

"Chai-Hung carved his face up a bit when they last encountered one another. He left him with one eye and one ear—and his mouth's a deal wider than it ought to be. But that sort of thing doesn't damp his ardor."

Varney shuddered involuntarily.

"What is he?"

"A half-caste of sorts. Calls himself Rabat-Pilai. Claims to have qualified in some remote quarter of the globe as an apothecary."

"It's mighty good of you."

"Not at all. By the bye, d'you mind leaving the obsequies of the late Chong-Hee to his successor? I want to give him rather an elaborate funeral. He doesn't in the least deserve it, I'll admit, but it's just at this moment occurred to me that an opportunity has arisen to enable me to practice a slight deception upon our friend Chai-Hung. You see he once hoo-winked me muc' in the same manner. Got himself buried—and cremated, of all things! Sent me the ashes into the bargain! The poison he inserted in the knob of the urn would have done credit to a Borgia."

Varney hooked down the lamp.

"You want him to be buried as yourself?"

"Precisely. Select a nice, comfy little spot under the palm-trees—and get one of your skilled men to paint a board with my name. You can borrow Dawson's bugler to blow the Last Post, if you like. It'll cheer poor old Chai-Hung no end! Will you do it?"

"Certainly."

"Good man! Now I'll clear out so's not to spoil the effect, and I fancy I can guarantee that Rabat-Pilai and a few of my things to add to the realism of the affair will be with you inside an hour."

"Zara-Khan," said Varney, removing his singlet, "I've come to the conclusion you'd better finish the job while you're here."

The man in the turban of red and gold bowed.

"Very good, sah. What you want me to do? An elephant with a tiger clinging to the trunk would be good."

"I've got a tiger already," said the trader, surveying his arm.

"A leopard with spots," suggested the prince of tattooers. "It would make a nice picture. I made one like that once for the Rajah."

He broke off suddenly. He was staring at the door which led from the verandah. Varney, following the direction of his gaze, saw the figure of an Oriental of enormous girth framed in the doorway. The newcomer wore a white tunic, buttoned up to the neck, across which stretched the massive links of a gold chain. His legs were encased in baggy trousers of black silk that rustled in the breeze and the third finger of his left hand displayed a ring set with a large green stone.

"I trust I am not intruding, gentlemen!"

The trader observed him coldly.

"Who are you?" he demanded, reaching at the same time for his tunic.

"Chai-Hung," said the other simply.

Rabat-Pilai—who was in the act of entering by the opposite door—dropped the jug of water he had been carrying and fled.

"Chai-Hung?"

"Most certainly! Why not, Mr. Varney. If you are still inclined to doubt my word, Mr. Zara-Khan will enlighten you."

Varney's hand swung round to the back but before his fingers could close on the weapon he sought, he found himself looking down the barrel of Chai-Hung's automatic.

"Pray be seated—both of you. I was afraid you might be—a little nervous at my unexpected arrival—and so took the precaution of bringing this!"

He drew forward a chair and lowered himself into it.

"I understand that you buried Mr. Pennington this morning. A very lamentable affair! I was sorry not to be able to present myself."

Varney moved restlessly.

"I suppose I have to thank you for the loss of my dog," he said.

The Oriental patted the hand that held the pistol with the fingers of the other.

"A double tragedy, if I may say so! I understand the dog is the friend of man—and you, poor fellow, have sustained the loss of two good friends at one and the same time."

"You devil!"

Chai-Hung blinked amiably.

"Thank you, Mr. Varney. May I request Zara-Khan to continue with his work?"

Varney choked.

"Look here, Chai-Hung, or whatever your name is, I'm not in a mood to sit here and be ordered about by you. If you've come here to shoot me—carry on with it. If not, clear out—and be damned to you."

"My dear Mr. Varney!" protested the brigand with well-assumed surprise, "you will, I hope, do me the honor to remember that up to the present I have requested you to do nothing. My suggestion was merely that Zara-Khan should proceed with the work that my unfortunate entry interrupted. It was you who first mentioned shooting, and I believe I am right in saying that you were about to draw on me when I came in. A distinctly unwise move on your part, Mr. Varney, when one remembers that Chai-Hung never travels about alone. If I wanted to kill you, my friend, there are twenty others outside waiting to help me. You received a message from me the other day?"

The trader shrugged his shoulders.

"A yellow card fluttered on the verandah, if that's what you mean."

An ugly light had crept into the Oriental's eyes.

As if by a given signal, two forms slid through the doorway behind Varney and secured his arms.

Chai-Hung rose to his feet.

"Zara-Khan," he said hoarsely, "you will prepare your things and tattoo this Englishman. It will be a little out of your line, I must tell you, for you will not be paid for your work—and the picture will not be quite the same!"

The man in the turban had changed visibly from brown to gray and his teeth chattered. He stared from Chai-Hung to Varney—now roped securely to his chair—and presently his horror-stricken eyes traveled back to the blue barrel.

"I am waiting for you to begin, Zara-Khan."

And Zara-Khan turned with shaking fingers to his tray.

Chinese Pennington—summoned in hot haste by his henchman—arrived at the foot of Varney's steps a bare hundred yards behind Rabat-Pilai. He took the flight at a bound and, pistol in hand, made headlong for the trader's living-room.

As he flung open the door, a scene of utter chaos met his eyes. The door at the far end of the room was wide open. Between this and where he stood a table had been overturned, from behind which trickled a steady, dark stream. The chimney of the swinging lamp was shattered and the atmosphere was thick with smoke and soot. One window had been wrenched clean from its fastenings and the bookcase in the corner had fallen forward—arrested half-way by a chair—and had tipped its contents into a jumbled heap.

He pushed the table back into place and recoiled in horror.

A man in a turban of red and gold lay full on his face. Beneath him, lashed to a chair, lay a second form that kicked and rocked to and fro in impotent fury.

Pennington lifted Zara-Khan to one side.

"Varney!"

"Oh, it's me all right!" growled the other. "Your man arrived just in time to prevent Mr. Chai-Hung making sure his knife settled both of us! For the love of Mike, cut these confounded strings."

"Where's Rabat-Pilai?" asked Pennington, opening his knife.

For the first time Varney smiled.

"Dashed good man that! He got here before Chai-Hung could round on him—and severed his pistol-hand with one blow from a perfectly-ghastly looking weapon."

"Severed Chai-Hung's hand!"

"The one with the ring on it. I suppose he's off after him—trying to get the rest!"

As Pennington stooped to cut the ropes his eye fell upon the trader's bare chest.

Tattooed in the space that Varney had summoned Zara-Khan to fill—was the grim sign of the Yellow Seven.

Canada's Financial Independence

New York Herald-Tribune: Canada has had its financial difficulties in the years since the war, but to-day, from a financial standpoint as well as from an economic standpoint, it stands on the threshold of the greatest prosperity that it has known. . . . To those who have watched the progress of Canada economically in recent years it will come as little surprise that the Minister of Finance is able to report that, while taxation is being steadily reduced on the one hand, the Government is able to discharge its outstanding indebtedness as it matures on the other. . . . Canada, as was in the case with the United States of 1914, while not yet a creditor nation, is in the position of a debtor nation that is reducing its old debts to foreign investors or is making new foreign investments of its own in a volume exceeding its new borrowings from abroad. No clearer indication could be asked than this of the Dominion's approaching financial independence.

Official Rat-Catchers Will Be Named by London

London—Official rat-catchers are to be placed on the payroll of the Port of London authorities in consequence of the findings of the recently held international sanitary convention.

The holders of these posts will be required to know everything necessary to rid a vessel of rats. For instance, he will have to be able to estimate the number of rats in a ship before he begins to fumigate, and that estimate will be checked by the number of rats found.

Motors and National Parks

New York Times: The Canadians have "beat us to it." They have decided to keep automobiles out of Glacier National Park so that the region may not be defiled by dust, noise and gasoline fumes. Even hot-dog stands have been banned. The park is to be a sanctuary for mortals seeking peace and quiet. Had such a plan been projected by our own park service it would have been condemned as undemocratic and un-American. But the idea is sound. . . . Experience in the Yosemite Park has shown that where a small region, like the floor of the valley, is particularly popular it becomes so overrun that it is almost unmanageable. The Canadian experiment deserves the serious consideration of Americans.

Insect Pests

New York Sun: The economic entomologists, whose business is insect control, are confident of victory in the long run, but it is rather disconcerting to learn that the battle is going against them at present. Losses due to insects are said to be increasing; strangely enough, the reason assigned is the advance of civilization. Modern nations import plants and animals and their products from all parts of the world. Along with these come the insects that live upon them. Thus local pests tend to become universal.

Find No Definite Cure for Cancer

Dr. Blackader Returns From Conference Held at Cardiff

"Canada is well equipped, and as far ahead as anyone else in the treatment of cancer and other diseases of this kind," stated Dr. A. Blackader, M.D., who returned from the Old Country, where he attended a medical conference in Cardiff. He said that a great many reports on cancer and consumption were received at the conference, but nothing was definite. The Blair-Bell "lead cure" was discussed, but was found to be only efficacious in certain forms of cancer. Other cures were discovered to be the same.

"It all comes to the same thing. We are really no further ahead now than we have been as far as cancer is concerned. What we are concentrating on at the present time is finding a preventive for the dread disease. England is looking for money for research just the same as we are in Canada, and for that matter, every other country is also seeking funds. We are waiting for some bright young man to come along who has hit on that one infinitesimal and elusive fact that will lead us to the solution. He will come along in time and then we'll be able to go ahead and improve upon what he has done."

Canada is in reality a little further ahead than most other countries in the cure of tuberculosis, but again in this case the real solution of the problem was yet awaiting discovery. The conference in Cardiff had spent much of its time discussing midwifery, a sore point at the present time due to the enormous mortality rate throughout the world. Research in this connection is also being provided for on a large scale. The past year's mortality rate among mothers has aroused the medical profession to action in the matter, and further conferences on this subject will be held.

Dr. Blackader is editor of the Canadian Medical Journal.

Corfu Palace Sought

As Rival Monte Carlo

Athens—The Greek government is considering a plan to convert the famous Achilleion of Corfu into a gambling resort, rivaling Monte Carlo.

The late Empress Elizabeth of Austria built the estate and it was later sold to the chief citizen of Doorn, ex-Kaiser Wilhelm. The Greek government bought it back for $200,000, and having expended this amount, feels that the property should not be idle.

A private corporation has offered to spend $2,000,000 in developing the property in return for gambling rights. The first signs of public sentiment in Greece have indicated opposition to the project. Public gambling has recently been suppressed at two points near Athens.

He Always Looks Pleased

"The slow driver is just as big a menace as the speed fiend, but he doesn't know it," says the Hamilton Spectator. Maybe so, maybe so. But how are we to account for the look of supreme satisfaction that radiates over the visage of the slow driver when he gazes in his rear-view mirror and sees that he is holding up a line of cars a mile long.

Practical Justice

Kansas City Park: Justice takes a practical turn in the decree of a California court admitting a youth to probation for three years on condition that for the period he support two children made fatherless by an automobile accident determined on trial as manslaughter. For the defendant there would be more onus in serving a prison term, but such a course would not relieve conditions that the revised decree ameliorates. One of the marked defects of punitive law is its lack of remedial influence. A defendant found guilty of criminal negligence is assessed a penalty by fine or loss of liberty, but innocent sufferers through his crime usually are without relief except in those rare instances when civil actions are maintained and reparations secured.

British Speed Work On Final Link of World Radio Chain

Wireless Committee Recommends Erection of Plant at Canberra, Australia

London.—To forge the final link in a globe-circling wireless chain the installation of a superpower radio station at Canberra, Australia, has been recommended by the British Imperial Wireless Committee.

The new station would have a transmitting radius of 5,000 miles. The nearest British stations of similar power are at Singapore and Hongkong.

The central station in the empire's network of beam radio stations is at Hillmorton, near Rugby, England. From there circuits are now operated by the government to Bombay, India; Cape Town, South Africa; Montreal, Canada, and Melbourne, Australia. A short time ago beam radio service was established between Montreal and Melbourne.

Direct short-wave service between East Africa and England has just been opened in the colony of Kenya. It is planned to establish similar service to embrace Continental Europe and probably American destinations.

British wireless will also penetrate the jungles of Africa. The British East African Broadcasting Company, which holds the concession on the present service, is working on the problem of developing internal communication in Kenya and Uganda.

Prosperity and Financial Freedom for Canada

So close are the economic ties between us and our Northern neighbor, that recent reports of Canada's present prosperity and coming financial independence arouse nearly as much interest on this side of the Canadian border as on the other. Here we have an expert of our own Department of Commerce predicting that Canada will, "at no very remote future," join the United States as one of the creditor nations of the world. And this is backed up by the announcement of the Canadian Minister of Finance that government loans maturing this fall will be paid off out of the treasury, instead of through borrowing from the American market. At about the same time a Toronto dispatch appears in the New York Evening Post, beginning as follows:

Unprecedented mining and building activity, increased employment, a noteworthy volume of external trade, heavier carloadings, and, most important of all, the prospect of a bumper wheat crop, all contribute to an unusually bright outlook for the second half of the year in all five of Canada's economic areas.

Canada's record of prosperity during the present summer has seldom been equaled in any similar period in the Dominion's history, declares J. C. Royle, in one of his financial dispatches for the Consolidated Press. To a large extent, he explains, "this is due to the production of grain, and the prospect for the remainder of the year is exceedingly bright." Indeed, this authority hears that in the wheat-growing prairie provinces, "employment has reached a peak of 127.3, taking one hundred as the five-year average from 1922 to 1926."

"So far as the future is concerned, Canada is 'sitting pretty,'" writes Charles L. Shaw in Forbes:

"Its most serious problem of all continues to be sparsity of population and the lack of an immigration policy that gets immigrants, but the people now resident in Canada are, by and large, enjoying a moderate but sound prosperity. The exodus from the industrial centres to the United States, which threatened alarming consequences a few years ago, appears to have petered out. Labor conditions are better to-day than they have been in years, the tide of industry is rising fast, and almost every sign worth noting points to a continuance of business betterment with our Northern neighbour.

Raw materials furnish the key to Canada's future greatness, we read on, "for there are few countries in the world with access to such a colossal treasure chest of undeveloped resources, we are reminded. It has been estimated that $3,081,000,000 of United States money is now invested in Canada as against British investments of $2,110,000,000. Nearly half a billion dollars of American money went into Canadian investments last year, and, "during the last five years a single New York financial house has marketed Canadian securities in New York worth $1,200,000,000." One American financial group, according to Mr. Shaw, is planning to spend $50,000,000 in what has hitherto been regarded as a barren stretch of wilderness—the so-called Flyn-Flon mining area in northern Manitoba. Much of the Dominion's recent prosperity is due to its mines. In fact, "the value of the country's mine output was $240,000,000 in 1926; it has trebled since 1907." But Canada's mining development makes a long story by itself, and Mr. Shaw goes on to note the extent to which United States dollars are being invested in Canada's pulp and paper industry. An unnamed Canadian business man is quoted as saying:

"We will in a few years be the leading gold-producing country in the world.

We are already the dominant factor in the world wheat market, and supreme in the production of pulp paper and several other commodities of increasing importance to humanity. No wonder Canadian investments are popular in the United States to-day.

Further evidence of Canada's increasing economic importance is set down as follows:

In 1914 Canadian citizens owned no government securities; to-day a large percentage of Dominion and Provincial government bonds are held by the people. Spectacular evidence of the present prosperity of the country is seen in the purchase by Canadians during the past year of 159,000 motor cars, valued at $150,000,000—a fact which in itself demonstrates that Canada, besides being a ready absorber of American investment funds, is a customer of no mean consequence.

A nation's backbone of prosperity is usually to be found in its farm lands, and in this respect Canada runs true to the usual form. For three successive years the farmers of the Canadian West have enjoyed reasonably good harvests and have received fair prices for their produce.

Canada labors under the disadvantage of not having a cheap coal supply near its main industrial zone, but this is offset in part by the great possibilities of water-power, and, besides, "the oil and tar sand deposits of northern Canada are promising as a factor in the country's industrial future." And yet, Mr. Shaw says:

Canada is not booming. Prosperity is based on something sounder and more lasting than a boom. In fact, a boom is the last thing that Canadians want.

Mr. C. E. Neill, late President of the Canadian Bankers' Association, has issued a warning against over-speculation, and is reported as saying:

As yet there is no boom in Canada. The future has not been over-discounted, but let us keep a true perspective, and endeavor to direct the development of our country along sound lines, thus paying the way for permanent stability and good times.

Returning to predictions of Canada's coming financial independence, we find the New York Herald Tribune noticing the announcement of the Canadian Finance Minister, Mr. J. A. Robb, that "instead of refunding some $53,000,000 in maturing loans through borrowing in the American market this fall, the Dominion will pay off these obligations out of the surplus in its treasury; he intimates further that from now on, for the next five years at least, the Dominion will be in a position to take up all of its loans in the same way." On which The Herald Tribune comments:

Canada has had its financial difficulties in the years since the war, but to-day, from a financial standpoint as well as from an economic standpoint, it stands on the threshold of the greatest prosperity that it has known. The present step in its debt-financing is a definite recognition of this fact, signifying as it does, that the Dominion has not only been able to balance its budget without borrowing, but to pay off, as well, a substantial volume of maturing indebtedness.

To those who have watched the progress of Canada economically in recent years it will come as little surprise that the Minister of Finance is able to report that, while taxation is being steadily reduced on the one hand, the Government is thus able to discharge its outstanding indebtedness as it matures, on the other.

The conclusion that Canada has reached the capital-exporting stage is based on the recent statement of Ray Hall of the United States Department of Commerce that Canada's present position "is very similar to that of the United States during the last years prior to the World War"; it is "the position of a so-called debtor nation which is reducing its old debts to foreign investors or is making new foreign investments of its own in an aggregate volume exceeding that of its new borrowings from abroad." As The Herald Tribune remarks, "no clearer indication could be asked of the Dominion's approaching financial independence."—(Literary Digest.)

South African Item of Interest Here

A clipping from a South African paper covering a recent visit to Rustenburg, Transvaal, of the Governor-General of South Africa and Princess Alice includes a paragraph of interest to residents in Vancouver.

The paragraph reads: "Her Royal Highness Princess Alice has accepted a sketch of the Governor-General and Her Royal Highness from Miss Carrie Hicks, daughter of Mr. F. Hicks, formerly a well-known member of the criminal investigation department and now of Rustenburg municipal staff. This gifted girl of 17 has had no instruction in her art, yet, she has already won a London prize."

Miss Hicks has relatives in Canada, an uncle, Mr. Adam Hicks, a well-known pioneer of Vancouver. In a recent letter from his niece, Mr. Hicks received a snapshot of Princess Alice taken while she spoke a few words with her.

Two Interesting Letters Appear in Listowel Standard

The Walter Boys, Members of the Olympic Team, Gave a Personal View of Amsterdam That Throws Much Light on Conditions There

STRANGE CUSTOMS

Knowing that the following letters from Graham and John Walter, members of the Canadian Olympic team, will be greatly enjoyed by the public generally, we are pleased to publish them for the benefit of our readers. We are indebted to the boys for the privilege. (Listowel Standard.)

Amsterdam, Monday, July 28, 1928
Canadian Olympic Team:

What a time we have trying to find time to write letters! We work out twice a day and have to be in bed at 10 o'clock, so with a bit of sightseeing our days are more than full.

Amsterdam is a very interesting place and I've seen more things to wonder at in this place than you can imagine. On Sunday Jack and I took a canal boat through the canals and harbor of the city. We saw the oldest parts where the houses hang perilously over the water and the only approach to the front door is a small boat of some description which they anchor to the door knob. The streets are all very narrow and the mass of humanity that struggles up and down them every night is unbelievable. Every third person, man, woman and child, rides a bike and how they ride!

This is the queerest place with the queerest customs. Imagine seeing a cart on the street with a jar of living, squirming eels in it and on asking the pusher of the cart what the eels are he will swallow it like a raw egg or an oyster. That's what they do over here. Another common sight is to see an old woman in Dutch costume cleaning small fish on the street which she sells to passersby for 10 cents, who eat them raw as we would a chocolate bar.

On my slight acquaintance with the Dutch I would say that his chief pleasures are to be found in beer parlors and in music. Every third place is a saloon and every saloon has its orchestra; that his chief characteristic is inquisitiveness; crowds collect and follow you everywhere; that his favorite pets are dogs (you have to watch your step); that his best food is bread and butter; that the day of the wooden shoe is passing but not gone; that their hospitality is second to none and the warmth of their reception never to be forgotten.

I've been taking pictures at the stadium of Americans, Australians, Turks, Poles, Hungarians, Estonians, Irish, Finns, and a lot of others whose countries I cannot spell, but it is a wonderful sight and the "sign" language is the universal language around here.

Sincerely,
GRAHAM.

Amsterdam, July 28, 1928.

The last time I wrote you a letter I guess we were on the S.S. Albertic. We docked at Southampton and took a train to London, where we put up for the day at the Hotel Cecil, about the finest hotel in London. We saw a great deal of London from the back of a cab. We had a good workout at Stamford Bridge. The trains here are really fast and we got to Harwick in a hurry. There we embarked on the good ship "Archangel" for Rotterdam. It was on this ship that we got our first taste of second-class passage. It seems that we were booked to sail the following evening first-class, but the committee were anxious to land us in Holland as early as possible, and as a result we slept in places over the propeller. A bunk in places with two portholes is plenty hot for me, but no one was any the worse for it.

The trip from Rotterdam to Amsterdam is very interesting with the windmills shooting their great fans like arms up into the sky.

The Dutch people are both very modern and very ancient. Down the narrow shipping streets you see a sheik dressed in the height of fashion followed by a fellow-countryman with a little tight coat and pants at half-mast, or a workman dressed in a leather suit and knee pants and wearing big wooden shoes; and what wooden shoes they are. Some are plain, some are varnished, and some have steel laces riveted into the wood which make them real snappy. They are very curious and follow us around with monotonous regularity. The other night a number of us parked in front of a big theatre and sang some of our team songs. The crowd got so large that when the theatre people began to come out they could not get past the doors. The cops were called and, with their swords, not batons, they managed to clear a passage.

One of the boxers we used to train with in Ottawa "Y" met me in the hall to-day. We were both surprised to see each other so far from Metcalf Street. Don Carrick is a mighty fine chap. We have had a great deal of fun on the square in front of the Queen's palace with a Dutch "artist" who attempted to draw a sketch of Carrick.

I saw the new stadium yesterday, and it is undoubtedly the finest of its kind in the world, although I believe the track is slow.

We took a trip to Utrecht yesterday, the city where the English and French settled their argument over Canada many years ago. We were in an old church which was built about the time that Old King John (one of my namesakes) signed the Magna Charta. There is a tower in this city built in 1390 and is something like 386 feet high. A bus took us through Zeist to Dorne, where Kaiser Bill lives. We did not see old Bill, but got a picture of his groundsman, and stole a rose from his spacious estate. We were afforded a wonderful opportunity to see the country life of Holland in a drive from Utrecht to Amsterdam. The landscape is dotted with Holstein cattle, and not a single fence separates the many herds. It appears that many of the little sluices or canals are quick sand at the bottom and at the calf age the animal is thrown into the water and given an experience with the treacherous quick sand, a hard lesson but a lasting one. The little canals can hardly be seen, but they are all over the land. Yesterday I saw what was very funny to me. A herd of cattle was grazing on the land at the bottom of a twenty-foot cliff. At the top of the hill all types of ships were moving along the canal. A tree had fallen across the road and it looked like a long delay as the Dutch workers in their wooden shoes proceeded to cut the tree in several sections in order to clear the highway on which the traffic was already piling up. The 30 odd Canadians with pioneer initiative peculiar to the race (that's good) took hold of the tree and dragged it off the road, leaving the Hollanders standing in their wooden shoes with their mouths open, staring at us dumbly as we whisked by in our big bus.

Since the above was written some time has intervened in which yours truly has beheld the greatest spectacle of his young career. The "Parade of Nations" in the Olympic Stadium at Amsterdam was beyond a doubt one of the greatest in the history of athletics. Every seat in the vast stadium was filled and the bleacher section was one huge mass of human ity. The Prince Consort arrived in State and the affair began to move. All the nations lined up on the campus outside the stadium. Then the parade began with the countries filing in in alphabetical order, with the exception of Greece, whose athletes were the first to enter the great stadium in recognition of the fact that they were the sons of the founders of the Olympic games. Canada filed in about third and I think that we looked about as hot, if not hotter, than most of them. The crowds gave us a wonderful reception. There were 47 countries in all represented, and it was most inspiring to us of the British Empire to see our flag appear in so many different forms and carried by so many different races of people: Australia, Rhodesia, Ireland, Scotland, England, India and Canada, all belonging to one great family and all recognizing in each other one great fraternity of nations. Yes, the old Empire will take a stiff breeze to shake it, and wherever the flag flies the sympathy of all and the good wishes of all are centred there.

Walters, yes they have them in Holland, but they are the worst in the world.
Must close now. Best to all.
JACK.

Scots Excavate Picts' Village

Site of New Archaeological Discoveries Is Skail Bay, in Orkneys

Glasgow.—Archeological discoverers of great interest have just been made on the Skara shore of Skail Bay in the Orkneys. A prehistoric village of huts connected by winding subterranean streets has been laid bare.

The Office of Works is conducting the excavation operations on a group of Picts' houses under the direction of Prof. V. Gordon Childe of Edinburgh University, an archeologist familiar with prehistoric Scotland.

The latest find is a new chamber or hut, which is in a better state of preservation than the one examined by Petrie in 1860. For the first time the relics and the construction of one of these wonderful structures have been accurately observed and photographed. Much pottery has been unearthed, including a number of quaintly ornamented sherds never previously seen, but which are expected to help the approximate dating of the site.

The excavations when completed will probably reveal an entire village with streets, passages and galleries.

Industries Increasing in Old Country?

In the course of his presidential address at the annual meeting of the Chamber of Shipping of the United Kingdom at Rugby, Sir William Seager said there were signs that a revival to a state of comparative prosperity might be expected before long. If the heavy industries were moving slowly toward prosperity, they were none the less moving. The expansion of thirty-four new industries, involving the additional employment of 874,000 people, was a most encouraging sign.

The apple crop of Canada for 1928 is estimated at 3,157,360 barrels, an increase over 1927 of about 350,000 barrels.

Crime in London Only 4 Per Cent. of New York Total

Britons, Celebrating Centenary of Scotland Yard, Point to Speed of Justice

"Bobbies" Are Unarmed

Successful Solution of All Murders in 1927 is Cited

London.—The celebration of Scotland Yard's one hundredth birthday has furnished the occasion for an exhaustive analysis of England's victory over crime.

The metropolitan police force was organized a century ago by Sir Robert Peel, whose name is preserved in the popular appellation "bobbies." It has been built up into an institution of such efficiency that England now claims to be the least criminal nation in the world.

How great is the difference in crime between British municipalities and those of other countries may be seen in a comparison between the two largest cities of the world, New York and London.

Cites New York Crime

The total of all crimes in New York, with a population of 6,000,000, during one fiscal year was 333,083. The total for London during the same period was 15,662, out of a population of 7,746,000. In other words, London's weight of criminality was practically 4 per cent. that of New York.

Closely associated with the Londoner's exultation in this low figure is his belief that it is caused by moral rather than armed force. The London policeman does not carry a revolver. His only weapon is a truncheon, or stick, which he uses only when he himself is attacked. The "bobby" is a respected member of the community and usually a magnificent specimen of manhood. He walks unarmed into the most dangerous quarters of the East End of London. He has been known to arrest six men who attempted to attack him merely by wielding his baton assiduously.

Swift Justice in Britain

The Londoner believes that much of the crime in America is caused by the fact that the police are an armed force. Violence, he thinks, breeds violence.

In England the two undoubtedly major factors which conduce to the reduction of crime are the successful detection of crime by Scotland Yard and other police organizations, and the prompt justice meted out to the offenders. In the metropolitan area of London last year not a single murder was left unsolved. In every case the murderer was uncovered and brought before the court.

Criminal justice is far faster in England than in this country. It is no unusual event for a criminal to be tried, convicted and hung within four weeks of the commission of his crime. Such rapid-fire punishment deters prospective criminals from incurring the risk of a like fate.

Great 1500-Mile Trek of 300 Families Across South Africa to Take 12 Months

Barkly West, S. Africa.—Within next few months there will begin what may be regarded as the last of the great treks that have made South African history.

Some 300 families, comprising 1,842 persons, with 340 wagons and 15,000 animals, who for the past two generations have suffered hardship, will make a new beginning. They are the Angola Boers in the Portuguese West African territory, whom the Union Government has graciously allowed to settle in South West Africa.

Only a small number are well off. The greater number are needy. They will receive a loan of £350,000, free of interest. Each family is to get a farm of about 16,000 acres in extent. For the first five years of occupation they will be lessees, and thereafter the purchase may be paid in 30 years.

In cash each family receives £400 to £800 for house, bore-holes, windmill and dam. The cattle advances must be repaid within five years. The few who possess £1,000 or more, are allowed to take up land on the same conditions as any ordinary settler.

Some of the families will have to trek 1,500 miles by wagon before reaching their allotted farms. No farmer may introduce any live stock from Angola, so that when the Kunene River is reached all animals must be disposed of. At the drift the Administration of South Africa will assume the responsibility of the continuance of the trek, a further distance of 700 miles, truly a formidable undertaking, when the desert nature of the territory to be crossed is considered.

The trek will then be continued in batches of three groups of five wagons each, every fortnight. According to the prepared schedule the great trek will occupy about 12 months to complete.

MONTGOMERY—BALHARRIE.

Bell Street United Church, Ottawa, was the scene of a pretty September wedding on Wednesday afternoon last, at 2.30 o'clock, of Eva Clara, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Balharric, of Ottawa, to William Edgar, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Montgomery, also of Ottawa. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. F. R. Meredith.

Sprays of gladioli, quantities of asters and bankings of ferns were used to adorn the church. Mr. Leonard Foss presided at the organ and during the signing of the register Mrs. J. W. Balharric sang sweetly "Bridal Dawn."

The bride was given in marriage by her father, and was attended by her sister, Miss Olive Balharric, as bridesmaid. Mr. Milton Montgomery, brother of the groom, was best man.

A lovely gown of soft white crepe satin was worn by the bride, the skirt falling into a short train at the back. Her veil was arranged from a cap effect with orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of ophelia roses and lily-of-the-valley.

The bridesmaid was daintily dressed in maize and silver lace trimmings and wore a pretty black velvet hat. She carried Columbia roses. Mrs. Balharric, mother of the bride, was in navy blue georgette with a touch of beige and wore a black panne velvet hat and a corsage bouquet of roses.

Mrs. Montgomery, mother of the bridegroom, was charming in black georgette combined with panne velvet and satin with a rhinestone ornament and she wore roses.

Miss Vera Montgomery, sister of the bridegroom, was attractively dressed in cocoa brown satin with a close-fitting brown felt hat and wore a shoulder knot of pink roses.

Mrs. J. R. Montgomery, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, was in pencil blue georgette with trimmings of ecru lace,

Out-of-town guests were: Mr. and Mrs. Hewitt Green, of Ogdensburg; Mr. and Mrs. Jas. T. Brown, Mr. Gordon Brown, Mrs. James Wilson and Miss Elsie Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Dawson Armstrong, all of Clarendon; Mr. W. C. Cross, of Cascades.
