Establish order first Levesque refuses Inuit parlay

FORT CHIMO, Que. (CP) — Premier Rene Levesque has apparently refused to come to this Ungava Bay settlement to discuss Inuit complaints about the new language law until the situation here returns to normal.

Michael McGoldrick, a spokesman for the Northern Quebec Inuit Association (NQIA), said Thursday that the premier's executive assistant, Claude Mallette, told him in a telephone conversation Levesque would only consider flying to Fort Chimo if the community council backs down on its demands that government civil servants and Quebec provincial police leave town.

McGoldrick said the premier is apparently insisting that the community council resume water and garbage collection services to homes and buildings occupied by police and civil servants, which were cut off by the Inuit last week.

But McGoldrick said the Inuit plan to stand firm until all the public servants are expelled from the community, 1,000 miles north of Montreal.

Charlie Watt, president of the NQIA, said Levesque's stance was expected. But he added that one of the main reasons a return to normal is impossible is Quebec's continued refusal to remove the 16 provincial police officers who are supplementing the town's usual contingent of three men.

The 16-man detachment was flown in recently to replace the 25-man squad originally sent here from Baie Comeau, Que. when the trouble started.

Some 40 representatives from 13 Ungava Bay settlements have been meeting here all week to discuss the situation.

McGoldrick says they are discussing firmer ways of contending with the government's refusal to send home the "unwanted" civil servants and police.

"IRREVERSIBLE" "The NQIA feels that the situation here is irreversible and the main reason is the continued presence of so many police," McGoldrick said.

In other developments here Thursday, David Payne, executive assistant to Cultural Development Minister Camille Laurin, and Michel Sparer, who helped draft the language charter, have said that their "mission is accomplished."

They intend to return to Quebec City within a day or two, they told reporters.

Payne and Sparer said their mandate—to explain the exemptions granted the native peoples from certain provisions of the charter—has been fulfilled.

"Dr. Laurin feels that this mission has accomplished its objectives. . . . This we've done with rather astounding success in Ivoungnituk, Saglouc and Puvungiv," Payne said.

Manuel said Inuktitut—the native language—was in "grave danger of dying out" and being replaced by English until community leaders made a concerted effort to preserve it.

"Now, just as Inuit leaders are beginning to convince their people of the value of retaining their language, Levesque comes and tries to impose yet another foreign language on them."

"Is it in the nature of mankind that once a minority gets into power it turns around and represses other minorities?"

"In spite of ourselves, when such things are done we feel hatred."

Cuba's U.S. embassy coming to life

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cuba's old embassy, for 16 years occupied only by a caretaker staff that sometimes hung its laundry from a rooftop flag pole, is slowly coming to life.

As ceremonies at the Czechoslovakian embassy several miles away opened the new low-level Cuban diplomatic mission Thursday, workmen at the Cuban embassy were pouring concrete in the backyard and making repairs inside.

The work is being carried out under the watchful eye of the U.S. Secret Service.

At least three patrolmen from the Executive Protective Service, an arm of the Secret Service, guarded the building Thursday. One patrolled the front, another the back, while a third was posted across the street in front of a small building that was once the Cuban military and naval mission.

Cuban Counselor Ramon Sanchez-Parodi said his nation's security forces are not being assigned to the building.

The security, heavier than most embassies have here, is expected to increase when the Cubans re-open the building.

"I imagine it will be as tight as for any of those embassies who are possible targets for terrorists," said one official.

In 1963, three Cuban exiles threw Molotov cocktails at Havana's former embassy.

1978 plate setup shuts local shops

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec's new no-fault automobile insurance plan covering personal injury will be available Jan. 1 when 1978 car licence plates go on sale at 600 credit unions throughout the province.

Transport Minister Lucien Lessard said today an agreement had been signed with the Federation des caisses populaires du Quebec to distribute the new plates together with the obligatory insurance.

He said the new plan would eliminate private distributors "who too often owe their operating permit to their political affiliation."

The credit unions will be paid $1 for each plate sold, plus two per cent of the sales tax collected on the transfer of used vehicles.

Motorists will still be able to purchase plates through the mail or at 54 government licence bureaus throughout the province. About 280 private outlets will be closed in April, 1978.

Under the plan, the price of licences could increase by about $15 while registration costs would go up about $95. Permits currently cost $6 a year and registration a minimum of $21.

UN appeal ahead, native leader says

MONTREAL (CP) — The president of the World Council of Indigenous People says his organization may take international action to support the northern Quebec Inuit in their fight to obtain exemption from the province's French Language Charter.

George Manuel told a news conference Thursday that unless the Parti Quebecois meets Inuit demands the dilemma may be deposited on the doorstep of the United Nations.

The council, which represents native peoples in 23 countries, passed a resolution supporting the Inuit in their fight for exemption from the language law during a recent general assembly in Sweden.

Manuel said Premier Rene Levesque's decision to send riot police to Fort Chimo was "an act of intimidation no different than Pierre Trudeau sending army troops to occupy Montreal in 1970."

Rhodesian PM raps 'crazy' peace plan

SALISBURY (CP) — Prime Minister Ian Smith described as crazy and disastrous today key proposals put to him by British-American negotiators, but said he was not rejecting their peace plan for Rhodesia.

He told a news conference his government has set up a special committee to study the proposals in detail. When the committee produced its analysis, it would be given careful consideration, he said, adding that this process might take weeks.

Andrew Young, U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations, and British Foreign Secretary David Owen presented to Smith here Thursday what the U.S. state department called "last chance" proposals for a peaceful transition to black majority rule.

The proposals called for Smith's resignation and demanded that black nationalist guerrillas form the basis of a new army for the state of Zimbabwe—the nationalist name for Rhodesia—to take over from the present white-led Rhodesian security forces.

Smith said two elements of the plan primarily concerned him.

"It does seem to be as though we are being asked to dissolve ourselves in Rhodesia—in fact I have found the word surrender in the document—before knowing what the new constitution will be," he said. "It seems to me it is almost a crazy situation."

"The other very serious concern is the question of the security forces."

Smith it was almost "a standing joke" in Rhodesia that it should be suggested that the guerrilla forces should be incorporated in the Rhodesian army they are fighting.

"I would have thought it was a crazy suggestion. So it seems to be that the plan is not only ill-conceived but rushed," he added.

Insulation program opens in Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Homeowners wishing to take advantage of federal government grants to insulate their houses can write or telephone program headquarters in Montreal and ask for an information kit, Urban Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet announced today.

The mailing address for program information is P.O. Box 700, St. Laurent Postal Station, Montreal, Que., H4L 5A8.

Collect phone calls can be made to (514) 341-1511 where, about 25 full-time bilingual staffers will handle questions.

The telephones will be manned long enough each day to enable those in all time zones in Canada to call between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. local time. The office is prepared to handle up to 10,000 calls a week.

A public information program will begin with newspaper advertisements Sept. 10, and the ads will include a coupon to be used by people eligible to ask for detailed information.

The grant for insulation materials is taxable, being considered as part of gross income on the recipient's income tax return. The spouse with the greater income must claim the grant.

Cree take Quebec's side

QUEBEC (CP) — The battle lines over the James Bay land-claims agreement were drawn more firmly Thursday as the province's Cree joined the Quebec government in an attack on the Inuit and the federal government.

At a joint news conference with the Grand Council, of the Cree, Natural Resources Minister Yves Berube threatened unilateral proclamation of the agreement by Quebec if the federal government refuses to proclaim it.

Albert Diamond, treasurer of the Grand Council, said the Inuit contention that Bill 101, the new language law violates the agreement was simply "another smokescreen by the federal government to delay proclamation of the agreement."

The Northern Quebec Inuit Association is protesting the language bill, saying it limits their language and cultural rights. Quebec government officials and riot police have been asked by Ungava and Hudson Bay Inuit communities to leave the region immediately.

Inuit have held demonstrations in northern communities and cut water and garbage collection services to government offices. However, they have promised there will be no violence in the dispute.

The contentious land-claims agreement—a settlement with native people in northwestern Quebec to make way for the giant James Bay hydro project—is under federal jurisdiction.

The agreement has not yet received royal assent. The final ceremony to make the agreement law has been tentatively scheduled for Nov. 11.

Indian Affairs Minister Warren Allmand has threatened to delay royal proclamation until the Inuit language dispute is settled.

"The Crees are not ready to share the tactics and actions taken by the Inuit," Diamond told the news conference Thursday.

"We had what we asked for in Bill 101," he said, adding that the 6,600 Cree of northwestern Quebec already are adapting to increased use of French in their communities.

Canaries go cold turkey while chickens play games

VANCOUVER (CP) — RCMP tests revealed Thursday that some canaries have been getting an extra lift from their birdseed's marijuana content.

Inspector Richard Dickens of the RCMP drug squad said botanical tests showed cannabis, also known as hemp or marijuana seeds, was mixed with certain packages of Sing-Song birdseed.

Three-quarter-ounce packages of the birdseed were available in most Vancouver-area pet stores until Thursday morning when the RCMP released their findings and told the outlets to stop selling the product.

Dickens said the distributor agreed to turn all stocks of the seed over to the RCMP which would pick it up and later destroy it. He said police do not plan to check out every store selling the birdseed because it would be too large a task.

Chemical analysis showed none of the active ingredient—tetrahydrocannabinol THC—which induces the high. However, marijuana seeds do not usually reveal THC in chemical analysis because it is only produced by a mature plant, Dickens said. When there is THC found with the seeds it is usually because the resin has rubbed off the plant.

Meanwhile, there is some question as to whether the Sing-song marijuana seeds will develop into a mature plant. The seeds are coated with vitamins and honey which might make them sterile.

Dickens said some hemp seeds found in the birdseed bought in Vancouver by RCMP officials have been planted to see if they will germinate.

George Baker, executive director of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws, said seeds from Sing-Song have produced healthy marijuana sprouts within a few days.

While the importation, distribution, sale and possession of cannabis is illegal in Canada, no charges were expected to be laid. Dickens said the importer said he was unaware of the presence of the illegal seed in the product and officials believe him.

Hemp seed normally is mixed in with some birdseed mixtures and is imported legally into the United States and Europe. Dickens said the birdseed's Canadian importer, Rolf C. Hagen Ltd. of Richmond, B.C., asked Vitakraft, the West German pet food producer of the seed, to substitute radish seeds for the hemp seeds when shipments were made here but there was a mixup and at least one shipment contained the hemp seeds.

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (Reuter) — A new amusement parlor game of playing Tic Tac Toe against a chicken has started to catch on across the United States the game's manufacturer said Wednesday.

The game consists of an electronic tic tac toe board with a glass booth alongside containing a middle-aged Rhode Island Red or Leghorn hen.

When the player presses a button in one of the squares, the hen, trained to respond like Pavlov's dogs to a light coming on in his booth, rushes to peck the light.

But the manufacturer, Stan Allan of Money Making Machines of San Diego said the moves are really being made for the bird by a computer inside the box.

"No one gets mad at being beat by a chicken", Allan said in an interview Wednesday. The cost of each game is 50 cents.

Allan said in the game where the machine starts first the customer has no chance of winning although he might play the chicken to a draw.

In an alternative game, where the customer plays first, the customer has a 30 per-cent chance of winning.

Allan said it took four to six weeks to train the hens to respond automatically to the lights. Hens are chosen over the age of 18 months because they are less likely to lay eggs.

"That way we get less time out and interruption of the games," he said.

He said that life expectancy of the playing hens was about five to seven years, veterinarians say.

Allan said his company has about 40 machines out already and is swamped with orders. He can produce only two games a week.

When the chicken finishes there is a loud "ping" inside its booth and it rushes to a feed bin to get its reward, a tiny speck of food.

"The chickens play for six to eight hours and if they get too much food after each game, they would be so fat they couldn't stand," he said.

New act protects cultural heritage

OTTAWA — In order to better ensure the preservation in Canada of the best examples of our cultural, historic and scientific heritage, the federal government is moving to prevent the uncontrolled export of cultural property in the national treasure category.

The Cultural Property Export and Import Act (Bill C-33), which will regulate the import and export of such property and provide special tax incentives to encourage Canadians to dispose of their national treasures to their local institutions, will come into force, as fixed by proclamation, on the sixth day of September, 1977.

The Act contains the following features:

The export of cultural property will be regulated by reference to a control list establishing categories and age and value limits. The departure from Canada of an object falling within the control list can be postponed if, as the result of an appeal by a person to whom an export permit has been refused, an independent Review Board judges that a reasonable delay period should be created. This will enable interested public authorities and custodial institutions in Canada to purchase it at a fair market price. If the object is not purchased within the time limits of the delay period, an export permit will be granted.

The system will be administered across the country by Canada Customs, acting on the advice of locally designated expert examiners.

A Canadian Cultural Property Export Review

Bogard has been appointed by the Governor in Council. Other than the Chairman and two members representing the public interest, the balance represents in equal proportions public collecting institutions on the one hand and private collectors and dealers on the other. The Board will be responsible for reviewing appeals from applicants who have been refused export permits for permanent export by expert examiners. If the Board denies an appeal, it may establish a reasonable delay period during which Canadian institutions can purchase the object concerned. If a fair offer is not forthcoming, the Board must instruct the permit officer to issue an export permit.

Air Canada reaches accord

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada and its 3,000 flight attendants reached a tentative contract settlement Wednesday after a federal conciliation commissioner succeeded in clearing away some of the contentious issues which had blocked an agreement for four months.

Commissioner Murray Dubinsky of Winnipeg declined to divulge any details of the contract until the Canadian Air Line Flight Attendants Association has informed its Air Canada members of the terms.

The union asked last week for an 11-per-cent wage increase in a one-year contract retroactive to last June 30, while the company offered increases ranging from 5.5 to six per cent. The average annual wage for cabin personnel is $14,000, the union said.

The flight attendants had also been demanding significant improvements in working conditions and other benefits, including a 14-hour maximum duty period, a dental plan as well as improved differentials for employees working nights, days off and holidays.

The contract, if ratified, would be the third major agreement to be negotiated by the airline without a strike. Earlier, the carrier signed agreements with the more than 7,000 mechanics, ground-service employees and ramp and baggage attendants who belong to the International Association of Machinists.

Air Canada also signed a new contract in July with the Canadian Air Line Pilots Association for the airline's 1,500 flight officers.

The method of export control has been designed to ensure the cooperation of dealers and collectors in Canada. Funds will be voted by Parliament annually so that Canadian institutions throughout the country can be assisted in purchasing national treasures threatened by export and for which the Review Board has created a delay period. These funds will also be used to repatriate cultural property related to the Canadian heritage which appears on the international market.

The legislation also provides for the establishment of a Canadian Heritage Preservation Endowment Account to encourage contributions from the private sector to be used towards the purchase of national treasures to supplement the funds the government makes available. Donations will be fully tax deductible.

Amendments to the Income Tax Act will exempt from capital gains tax national treasures disposed of to designated institutions or public authorities in Canada (ie. found to be technically equipped and responsible bodies) and will make gifts of national treasures to designated institutions and public authorities deductible from taxable income on the same basis as if they were gifts to the Crown; that is, on a 100 per cent basis.

The tax exemptions will not be restricted to cases where owners are attempting to export national treasures. When cultural property is being disposed of by owners to their local institutions, whether by sale or gift, if the disposition is referred to the Review Board and results in the cultural property being certified as a national treasure, the owners can benefit from the tax exemptions if the institution was designated at the time of the disposition.

The Act contains provisions prohibiting the import to Canada of cultural property illegally exported from other countries. The Attorney-General will institute the legal proceedings necessary and Canadian courts will decide what compensation is to be paid to a bona fide Canadian purchaser by a state which has signed a bilateral or multilateral cultural property agreement with Canada when an object is to be returned to that state. Canada will ratify the 1970 UNESCO Convention on the Means of Prohibiting and Preventing the Illicit Import, Export and Transfer of Ownership of Cultural Property once the legislation has been proclaimed into force.

A detailed interpretive document on this Act will be available shortly. Those who are interested are requested to write to the following address:

Secretary of State Department, "Interpretive Document", Movable Cultural Property, Ottawa, Ontario K1A 0M5, or phone Ottawa (613) 992-6243.

Success story stuns India

BOMBAY, India (CP) — A humble hotel receptionist in India's capital city has become rich in just 18 months.

Indian newspapers are full of stories about the "meteoric" rise of the man whose identity has not been disclosed for legal reasons. "He is so rich he can engage the best of lawyers and ruin any newspaper which names him," said a senior journalist on the staff of Hindustan Times, New Delhi's biggest newspaper.

When democratic rights were suspended by former prime minister Indira Gandhi, the hotel receptionist was earning less than $125 a month. Now he is said to be worth at least $500,000.

Becoming general manager of one of the top luxury hotels in New Delhi, he entertained lavishly. Said one senior report: "I have never seen anything like this in 30 years of reporting in the capital. One day the former hotel receptionist publicly boasted that he is so rich and influential that he is planning to start a chain of luxury hotels in Europe."

It is said that he managed to marry a second wife through his first wife is living—an offence for which he can be sentenced to five years in prison. But his friends in the then administration told him to go ahead reports, he made his fortune by—to quote one account—"looking after the comforts of influential politicians and government officials."

and not to worry. Western diplomats in New Delhi were regularly invited to his lavish cocktail parties.

A junior British diplomat confessed that he was simply amazed at the magnificence of one of the parties he attended. "Twelve-year-old Scotch whisky flowed like water," he said. "Some of the capital's most beautiful women were there—besides the most influential politicians of the day."

The Central Bureau of Investigation (CBI) has started investigating the man's wealth and political connections. Meanwhile, his passport has been confiscated to prevent him fleeing to Switzerland where he is said to have a secret account.

Friday's column by Terry Scott

Many people have bellowed over the bureaucracy of the Unemployment Insurance Commission when faced with an abnormal delay in obtaining benefits to which they are rightfully entitled. They may be a mite harsh on the UIC staff - the chief culprit in the withholding of payments could have been a stubborn computer.

A friend of mine who stopped work June 3 to undergo surgery is still waiting to collect the first penny of compensation. The cause of such tardiness would be enough to send one back to a hospital bed if one didn't collapse from hunger first.

In this claimant's case, a doctor's certificate was issued to the UIC attesting to the disablement. The commission wrote back several days later to request yet another confirmation of illness. The new certificate was due August 13 but the physician treating the claimant was out of town until August 17. A call to the regional UIC office in Granby brought assurances that no complications would arise as a result of the brief delay in presenting the document.

The following week, still without a cheque in the mail, the frustrated claimant placed another call to the Granby bureau and listened in consternation as an employee explained the cause of the non-payment.

It seems that despite promises to the contrary, a stop payment had been issued once the requested medical certificate failed to show up Aug. 13. In the terminology of the government worker, this is a TR 5 situation, causing the computer to suspend payment. According to the employee a cheque cannot be issued manually and the computer can only begin to reprocess the claim after a minimum two week delay.

In the meantime, a claimant may wait more than two months before receiving retroactive payment, despite having furnished two copies of a required document. To some it may be merely an irritable inconvenience, but to others it could present a struggle just to put daily bread on the table.

They say this is the age of the computer. Surely there must be a more efficient emergency system than to tell someone they've been TR-5'd.

If you own a motor vehicle that looks like a remnant from guerrilla warfare the time may have arrived to mercifully retire it to the scrapyard.

No one is actually saying so, but inspection of rattling fenders and corroded frames is likely to become a frequent practice among police forces now that the provincial government has partially nationalized the automobile insurance program. Since bodily injury will now be compensated by the state (oops, province) it is logical the PQ government will attempt to eliminate blatant hazards which might drain the scheme's kitty.

Coincidentally, or perhaps by design, the Quebec Provincial Force in Brome-Missisquoi began a crackdown on vehicles they believed were not roadworthy as early as last spring, at approximately the same time plans for Autopac were divulged. The stricter surveillance met with a fair degree of success, as dozens of cars which offered a potential hazard to road safety were hauled off the pavement until repairs were conducted.

More recently, police have announced that existing seat belt regulations will be enforced.

The timing of such an enforcement campaign should not be overlooked. Statistics have proven, of course, that tucking your stomach under a seat belt will reduce traffic fatalities, but the motivation is even greater now that a life saved is cash in the coffers.

Motorists who had hoped to coax an extra year out of their dilapidated roadsters may regard tighter police control as an harassment tactic, but upon closer analysis such a campaign can only improve a road safety record which is not the most enviable in the land.

Somewhere, amid the groans and grumbles at the expense required to finance the scheme, all of us might take solace in the fact a watch dog has emerged to prevent many of the needless accidents from occurring. After all, the police are not going to let down the people who issue their paycheques.

I would be remiss if I closed off this week's column without mentioning the arrival of Brome Fair for its annual Labor Day weekend stint.

A trip to Brome Fair is a habit that you acquire as a tyke in knee-socks, and though there is a common tendency to shrug off the event as the years rob a piece of your youth, you find yourself drawn to the grounds as if by magnetic force. The carousel and the cotton candy no longer hold their special charm, but the renewal of acquaintance and the upholding of tradition are simply too powerful to resist.

The thing that is so special about this year's edition of Brome Fair - particularly in the wake of Bill 101 - is the spirit of camaraderie which exists on these few acres of ground - a mingling not only of French and English, but the merry multitude of races which compose the Eastern Townships.

If we may plug our own product just once, the fair is also one of prime importance to The Record. With Bill 101 now an official piece of legislation, the survival of The Record as a servant to the anglophone community depends entirely upon its acceptance by that segment of the population. Without your support our very future is jeopardized.

The Record will have its familiar booth at this year's fair, and if you're strolling in the area you might bear in mind that a subscription provides the greatest show of strength. It will enable us to pursue our endeavors through the most challenging period in this newspaper's history.

Two women attacked

Sherbrooke municipal police are conducting an investigation after two women were attacked by purse-snatchers here last night. In the first case the theft was aborted, but the second was successful.

A 42-year-old woman was walking home on Kennedy Street at 8:15 when she was approached by two young men. When she would not hand over her purse, she was pushed to the ground, hitting her head on the sidewalk twice. The attackers left, and the woman was later treated at Hotel Dieu for head and back injuries.

Three hours later, a woman was violently attacked and robbed on Belvedere St. S. She was grabbed by the neck and dragged into a hedge off the street. The woman did not fight her assailant, handed him the purse, and later called the police.

Police searched the Belvedere Street area and found the purse missing only cash.

Bridge an historic monument

Capelton protected by government

By JANET COTTON
(Record Reporter)

CAPELTON — The Quebec government has sent a letter to the township of Ascot, reminding civic authorities that the Capelton bridge is to be declared an historic monument. The Record has learned.

The town had planned to open tenders for its demolition at a Sept. 6 meeting.

The Capelton bridge is one of two remaining covered bridges in the Townships. Secretary Treasurer Arthur Drouin refused to divulge the contents of the letter from the Minister of Cultural Affairs until the council meeting Tuesday.

As one of 44 covered bridges declared historic by the government, it is believed the Capelton structure is protected from demolition.

While controversy continues between the ministry of cultural affairs, and the ministry of transport over who has jurisdiction over the bridge, Milt Loomis is stirring up local interest to fight its demolition.

"There are only two covered bridges left in Ascot Townships, and we're going to save this one," he said. "The monetary cost is irrelevant compared to the loss we would suffer if the bridge was destroyed. It's Townships history."

Mr. Loomis is circulating a petition opposing the demolition, which he will present at next week's council meeting.

He has also received assurance that Sherbrooke MP Irene Pelletier will support any request made for a Canada Works Program to repair the bridge.

Mr. Loomis will contact the Mississippi Mining Company to study the possibility of renting or buying the land surrounding the bridge. He hopes to set up a picnic and rest area as was done for the Ayer's Cliff covered bridge.

"I'm optimistic Cultural Affairs will take the matter out of the hands of Ascot Council. I don't want to see a part of our history destroyed. It was only after Alexander Galt's home in Sherbrooke was destroyed that the public realized what an historic monument it was," he added.

Reporter finds solace in peanut butter jar

Fort Chimo is vegetarian's nightmare

FORT CHIMO, Que. (CP) — Health food fanatics say there is no such thing as a violent vegetarian. But after one week in Arctic Quebec, I disagree.

In fact, I vow to crush the toes of the first person back in Montreal who offers me a peanut butter sandwich.

Seven days and countless peanut butter sandwiches after arriving in this Ungava Bay settlement to cover the conflict between Inuit and the Quebec government over the new language law, I have nightmares about lack of protein causing my hair and teeth to suddenly drop out in the middle of a news conference.

Without a doubt, the north is no place for a lettuce lover.

Jimmy Grist, owner of the Arctic Traveller lodge, where reporters and cameramen covering events are staying, finally became curious why I discreetly disappeared to my room at mealtimes.

When I confessed that I don't eat animals—because they don't eat me—Grist, a long-time northerner, said, "We've got a few carrots, you know."

Do not try to explain to an Eskimo, whose people have lived off the land for 4,000 years, that you do not eat meat or fish. Both are staples here and throughout northern Canada.

So, when the others sit down to a meal of salmon, I whimper a little, then head off to my bunk where a trusty jar of peanut butter, a loaf of white bread and a package of process cheese beckon unappetizingly.

Individual meals cost a flat rate of between $7 and $10 dollars at the Arctic Traveller, whether you eat the whole meal or just the peas and instant mashed potatoes.

Since eggs, milk and cheese are not on my un-touchable list (I'm what is known as a lactoovo vegetarian), I do enjoy the occasional omelet or porridge or pancakes for breakfast.

But dinner or lunch? Forget it!

So for the rest of the day, it's tins of apple juice ($1.70 for four), peanut butter ($1.48 a one-pound jar), bread (85 cents a loaf), and when it's available, a quart of milk ($1.80).

Apples are plentiful and not too expensive, about 25 cents each.

There's plenty of tinned food, but as any vegetarian can tell you, monosodium glutamate rots your brain.

Posters of busty Dolly Parton, Paul and Linda McCartney and some cowpoke named Smilin' Johnny, who apparently toured the north some years back, are pasted to the walls of the CHIMO-FM studio where Bill Bill spends most of his evenings as an unpaid deejay.

Bill Bill—he'll tell you his given name is William only after some pressure—is a native of Windhorst, Sask., but after almost 10 years in the Arctic he's become as true a northerner as the Inuit he lives among, the kind of man who wonders what all the fuss is about in "the south."

"Arthur Gordon. Arthur, we've got two calls for you. Would you please phone 2768 and 2422? Hey, you're a popular guy tonight. It must be all those girlfriends."

DJ Bill Bill warms long empty nights on CHIMO FM

FORT CHIMO, Que. (CP) — As evening descends on this little Arctic settlement all but those most deeply involved in the language conflict between the Inuit and the Quebec government have forgotten the day's tensions.

Most of the inhabitants in this Ungava Bay community, 1,000 miles north of Montreal, are at home or at a friend's house, listening to their favorite—and only—local radio station, CHIMO-FM.

Behind the microphone in a little box of a room above the Arctic Traveller hotel is Bill Bill, part-time disc jockey and full-time principal of the federal school here.

Globetrotting woman comes to rest in Townships

One woman show opens in Mansonville

MANSONVILLE (MB) — The little hamlet of Mansonville has been honored by the first one person show of artist Jean Cookson's works in Canada, which opened Saturday evening August 27th, in the Municipality of Mansonville Town Hall which serves Potton Township.

Born in Edinburgh in 1913, Mrs. Cookson has lived in Scotland, France, England, South America, Nassau and Canada.

While in London she attended Hornsey Art School. At first Jean worked mainly in water colors which were sold either privately or through The Loft Art Gallery in Nassau, of which she was co-founder. Her work in the Bahamas evolved from water-color landscapes to the progressively more peopled canvasses of recent years. These works in oil and acrylic are often highly symbolic and surrealistic, while the wood-engravings, silkscreens and linocuts speak of the grace and dignity of the Bahamian people and their landscape.

Prices range from $75 to $600.

A few of her exhibits included pencilled sketches of her daughter Isobel, as a girl, an expressive pair of hands in a vast expanse of obvious blue titled Let Me Live, and a floor to ceiling silk screen predominately deep blue with forest green leaves and large colorful flowers.

Jean Cookson moved to Montreal in 1954 where her three children attended McGill University after which time she moved to the Bahamas for nine years. In 1966 she returned to Canada where she attended The Three Schools in Toronto. She later had a summer camp on Lake Memphremagog and the breathtaking scenery of mountains and greenery caught her imagination and she decided to settle down in the area.

Having purchased the former Lady Inez Peterson home some time ago, she will continue with her variety of artistic talents which must be seen to be fully appreciated. Her exhibit is daily between 10 a.m. and 5 p.m. until September 5th in the Mansonville Town Hall building on the top floor.

The $15,000 question

The revelation that someone in Quebec authorized the payment of $15,000 for a full-length portrait of national assembly Speaker Clement Richard is hard to swallow.

Tradition calls for the commissioning of a portrait of each national assembly Speaker, which when completed joins several score of canvases of mutton-chopped, frock-coated gentlemen hanging in the hallways outside the assembly chamber.

Someone — Quebec won't say exactly who — quietly arranged for Mr. Richard to sit for Jean-Paul Lemieux, one of Quebec's best-known portrait artists shortly after Mr. Richard was named Speaker. We are told the resulting six-by-three-foot canvas is a whimsical rendition of Mr. Richard in a large fur coat, backed by a Quebec winter scene.

On top of this, it appears the artist expected $40,000 for the rendition and the $15,000 fee is a compromise after the fact; surely this demonstrates an abysmal lack of foresight on the part of whoever commissioned the portrait.

We're not out to pass judgment on Mr. Lemieux's work, mainly because nobody's being allowed to see the portrait until some as-yet-undisclosed unveiling ceremony.

But it would seem that in times of unemployment, possible recession and growing pressure on government to cut back on just this sort of extravagance, a $15,000 commission just doesn't make sense.

If the government still felt the necessity of carrying on this tradition, surely it could have been done through an inexpensive oil reproduction of a photograph. The concept of spending $15,000, let alone $40,000 — for an unremarkable painting is a thoughtless move on somebody's part. Let's hear the details.

Election is Trudeau's last weapon

by Terry Hargreaves
Ottawa correspondent

The fall election is off and the cabinet shuffle is coming. The second attack of election fever that struck the close political advisers of the prime minister came in mid-August. The earlier one in July had been spurred by the national polls that showed the prime minister 20 percentage points ahead of Joe Clark and still climbing. Mr. Trudeau in late July fended off the enthusiasm of the back-room boys who wanted to move in for a quick kill and, they thought, a huge liberal majority. Senator Keith Davey was saying at that time that "we'd be crazy not to go with the polls the way they are". The Liberal parliamentary caucus was much less enthusiastic. They believed the polls to a certain extent, but their grassroot connections told them Canadians wouldn't look favorably on a party that appeared to call an earlier election out of pure opportunism. The second effort by the political strategists came in mid-August. Recent forecasts showed the economy might not make the turnaround that had previously been expected in early 1978 — one of the reasons given for waiting until next spring. With that reason eliminated, and the polls still high, the hawks are at it again. But after a weekend of thinking it over, the prime minister called in his close advisers Monday afternoon and told them "no sale". No election this year with one caveat, — unless the situation in Quebec took a surprising new turn and a national mandate seemed to be required. This was also one of the main reasons for holding off from the election. The prime minister argued with his advisers that if he won an election now on a national unity theme and as an answer to Premier Levesque's move on language and education, what would a federal government do in response when events moved even closer to the referendum? Mr. Trudeau preferred to hold the election option as a weapon to be used most carefully and appropriately, because after all, it can't be used very often. The cabinet-making now begins. And changes are not expected to be major. The prime minister will probably stick with adjusting to the departure of Donald Macdonald, the present minister of finance. Mr. Macdonald has made it known for some time that he wished to move on and he's expected to do so. Mr. Trudeau can be expected to promote Jean Chretien to the finance portfolio, the first French-Canadian to hold it. Ottawa sources say the possibilities of Mr. Chretien moving to the provincial field in Quebec are lessening rather than increasing. The other minister who has to be moved is Jack Horner, the former conservative who became a Liberal and a minister without portfolio, all within 24 hours earlier this year. Mr. Horner yearns for a major portfolio like transport but it's more likely he'll have to settle for the wheat board. Mr. Horner, since his move to the government benches, hasn't appeared to be notably happy in his new milieu. Some ministers appointed in the last shuffle haven't performed as well as the prime minister's office would have liked — notably John Roberts, as secretary of state and Tony Abbott in consumer and corporate affairs. But they can be expected to survive the upcoming shuffle. What might happen to them in a post-election cabinet realignment, if the Liberals won, is a much more open question.

Quebec members that might emerge as cabinet ministers in the shuffle include Gilles Lamontagne from Quebec City, who was elected in recent byelections and Rod Blaker from Montreal, who is touted by some as a new Quebec Anglophone spokesman in the cabinet. A new minister from Toronto is likely when Mr. Macdonald leaves. The speculation there centres on Jim Fleming from York West, Norm Cafik from a suburban Toronto area riding, and of late, Bob Kaplan from York Centre. All in all, Mr. Trudeau, who doesn't think cabinet shakeups bring great public enthusiasm or interest, is likely to make the minimum changes necessary to accommodate any departures and give Jack Horner something so it won't look bad in the west. Apart from that, the major shifts would come after an election and the victory the Liberals are so confident of attaining.

Terminal a symbol of future and a threat to rural life

WEYBURN, Sask. (CP) — An enormous question mark stands over the flat grain farms of southeastern Saskatchewan in the form of the Weyburn Inland Terminal, an extreme of efficiency in the Prairie grain-handling system. The terminal, one of three inland terminals on the Prairies, is seen by some as a symbol of the future and by others as a threat to the social fabric of rural life. Art Mainil, a short, spunky 43-year-old who turned away from a career in civil engineering to take up grain farming near Stoughton, Sask., was one of the founding fathers of the terminal. Mainil recalled in an interview that he helped form the Palliser Wheat Growers Association in the lean years of the 1960s. His research with Palliser led him to the conclusion that there was too much politics in the grain industry and the handling system was storage-oriented. Grain farmers, he said, were doing a good job of producing but failed to put any energy into merchandising their product. The Palliser group looked at the handling system in the United States, with its high-capacity elevator system and protein grading and decided Canada "just wasn't getting the proper push from the marketing end." TALKED OVER PROBLEM Mainil and a few of his neighbors began to talk about the problem and finally decided to do something by building an inland terminal that could take in grain from farmers, process it and quickly load it onto unit trains of grain hopper cars for shipment to export points. With encouragement from Otto Lang, minister responsible for the Canadian wheat board, Mainil and friends signed up 1,100 farmers for $100 each and embarked on a feasibility study of a terminal that could unload dozens of semi-trailers of grain in minutes. By 1974, $1.7 million worth of shares in the proposed terminal, worth $1,000 each, had been sold, the feasibility study completed and construction slated to start in spring of the next year. A loan guarantee from the department of regional economic expansion, a 15-year mortgage and $5.5 million later, the terminal was ready for business. It opened last November. The two other terminals on the Prairies, at Rosetown, Sask., and Elm Creek, Man., are owned by Cargill, an international grain company. AUTOMATION HELPS Paul Richard, who was involved in designing the computer system at the Weyburn terminal, explained that automation has replaced much of the role of the small country-elevator agent. Machinery automatically separates dockage—broken grain, chafe, weeds—from good grain and sets it aside as screenings to be used for animal feeds. While the grain delivered to the terminal still is graded manually by looking at color, smell and the size of the kernels, the terminal's computer system can moisture-test and protein-grade the grain being delivered. Computerized delivery tickets let the farmer know what weight of grain he has delivered, its grade and its value. A control panel and light board in the terminal office shows the full-time staff of 13 what is happening where in the terminal's 54 bins with a total capacity of a million bushels. The bins are 125 feet high. The concrete terminal has the capability to blend and clean grain before loading it onto hopper cars at the rate of one car every 4½ minutes. The grain can also be dried before it is loaded. REDUCES CHARGES Richard said about 2,500 farmers living as far away as 125 miles deliver grain to the terminal in everything from small trucks to massive semitrailers. The terminal, he said, is faster than small elevator points, more accurate because so much of the work is done by computer, reduces cleaning and handling charges and removes the farmer from the mercy of the grain buyer on grades and dockage. The terminal, busiest from July to September, handles mostly red spring and durum wheat, barley, flax and rapeseed. Almost all of the grain is shipped to Thunder Bay in 100-car unit trains. The grain is ready to be loaded aboard ship when it leaves the terminal and the farmer is saved the cost of freight on the dockage. It can take in 200 deliveries a day and hand the grain producer his cash ticket in about 30 seconds. Protein-testing is a major bug-a-boo with Mainil. The Weyburn terminal has a $20,000 device to give a protein grade but most small elevators have not. Canada, he said, is one of the few countries in the world not selling its grain by protein content and he maintains that overseas customers want their grain delivered on the basis of its food value. Mainil is somewhat bitter about the opposition to his terminal from the NDP government in Saskatchewan. The NDP, he said, believes in control and regulation, not the free-enterprising spirit that built the Weyburn terminal. A government proposal that load limits for semi-trailers on many roads in the province be reduced was, in the opinion of some, an attempt to hurt the Weyburn operation. The government maintained it was only trying to prevent massive road-repair costs. Mainil points to the road into the terminal, which is heavily travelled by 18-wheelers, and shrugs off the danger of serious damage to rural roads in the province. He said the terminal road has required only minimal maintenance. He also said the terminal does not pose a threat to small towns because a network of inland terminals would replace the small country elevators in evidence everywhere on the Prairies. The towns, he said, can get along without the small elevators. Mainil said the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool has a right to be concerned about the Weyburn terminal. The terminal poses a threat to the Pool's multi-million-dollar system, which Mainil thinks is nothing more than antique. Mainil said he believes the small country elevators must go and a 100-million-bushel transfer elevator constructed on the West Coast.

Jack Anderson's Washington Merry-Go-Round
Americans claim for booze, pets left to communists

by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — More than three years after the United States pulled out of Indochina, a full accounting has yet to be made of all they left behind. They abandoned military installations, industrial plants, oil depots, piers, docks, warehouses, repair facilities, barracks and hospitals. The warehouses were jammed full of munitions, the docks piled high with equipment. The conquering Communists inherited the finest airports and seaports in all Asia, unintended gifts from the U.S. taxpayers. All over South Vietnam, the Communists found 10,000-foot concrete runways, complete with planes that streaked over the jungle so fast the foliage below looked like a green blur. The departing Americans also left behind personal possessions, ranging from a $1,400 set of crystal dishes to a $1.40 pair of nail clippers. Some fortunate commissar may still be walking the streets of Saigon in a pair of "alligator shoes made to order" for a U.S. official in too big a hurry to pack. And hopefully, a needy Viet Cong wound up with the four bottles of Jean Nate bubble bath abandoned by another official. The lost billions are hidden in secret inventories that may never be dug out. But we have succeeded at least in examining the claims of the foreign aid officials, who tried to collect from the government for their discarded possessions. The lists of lost valuables fortify our impression that many U.S. officials didn't let the war interfere with their high living. One official asked the government to reimburse him, for example, for "three bottles Cognac, four bottles of Bourbon, one bottle Scotch, five bottles various liquors." Another left to the Communists "24 wine glasses, crystal, 18 champagne glasses, crystal, 12 sherry glasses, crystal, 16 brandy snifters, crystal."

Still another official with a taste for culture, left behind 10 oil paintings and a Chinese rug worth $2,000. Nor did he have time to pack his 154 shirts, with 18 sets of cuff links to hold the cuffs together. He also gave up 30 smoking pipes to the Communists. The fellow who lost the fancy alligator shoes also put in a claim for two pairs of "turtle" shoes, one pair of "ostrich hide" shoes and three pairs of common golf shoes. Another sought reimbursement for 18 cans of shoe polish, "assorted colors." Several envoys made a hasty exit without their golf clubs and tennis rackets. One demanded $1,085 from the taxpayers to pay for two sets of abandoned golf clubs, plus another $120 for an "elephant hide" golf bag. He helpfully itemized the missing clubs, including "woods 1-3-4-5 irons 2.9 and PW (pitching wedge)." A tennis buff put in a claim for "26 cans of Wilson tennis balls, four boxes Tretorn balls, six cans Dunlop balls" and three boxes of "all weather" balls. Others asked for compensation for the pets they couldn't bring home, including two German Shepherds valued at $800, a "five-month male" hunting dog worth $200 and 10 gold-fish and tropical fish valued at $50. But the State Dept. ruled sternly "No allowance could be made for the ... dogs or fish." As it happened, the State Dept. provided its personnel in Indochina with housing and furnishings suitable for comfortable living. It cautioned them, therefore, not to take valuable personal possessions into the war zone. Upon their return, the officials were notified that they could claim up to $15,000 for personal possessions left behind. Most of the returning AID personnel abided by the rules, but 86 put in claims exceeding the legal limit. Some claims were made for reimbursements as high as $50,000. In view of the advance warning, no one got more than $15,000. The total reimbursements added up to $2.5 million, slightly more than half of what was claimed. Footnote: A spokesman told our associate Larry Kraftowitz that some officials had accumulated more than the $15,000 limit because they had been overseas for years. "Many of these people were wiped out," he said. For those who lost everything, he added, $15,000 "doesn't go a long way." South African Front: It's against the law for anyone on the U.S. payroll to accept expenses from foreign governments. But the South African Government has found an apparent way to circumvent the law. Six congressional staff members, for example, recently flew off to South Africa for a two-week sojourn. Their expenses will be paid by the Foreign Affairs Assn., a private foundation that appears to be merely a front for the South African Government. According to diplomatic sources, the association is intimately involved with South Africa's foreign affairs department and department of information. It is funded by a handful of mining barons, who are close to the government. The association's affairs in the United States, indeed, are handled quietly by the South African embassy. In the past, the government actually organized the congressional trips and the association merely picked up the travel tab. That's how it was arranged, for example, for five congressmen who visited South Africa in 1975. But a spokesman told us the association initiated the latest trip. The staff members who were invited came from the offices of Reps. Robert McClory, R-Ill., Goodloe Byron, D-Md., Richard White, D-Texas, Richard Nolan, D-Minn., and John Cunningham, R-Wash. Footnote: South African officials handling the association's affairs in the United States insisted there is no link between the group and their government. Those who are taking the trip made the same claim. They will meet with black dissidents as well as government officials, they said.

Le Soleil diverting revenue-strikers
 QUEBEC (CP) — Striking editorial employees at the daily Le Soleil said Thursday the paper's owners are trying to divert advertising revenue from the paper to a weekly advertising publication owned by the daily.
 Jean Garon, president of the Union of Quebec Journalists, said at a news conference 150,000 copies of the Courrier du Consommateur were distributed by paperboys to Le Soleil subscribers Thursday.
 He said the Courier, a year-old weekly that had ceased publication for the summer, originally was meant for people who didn't receive Le Soleil.
 Le Soleil and Edimedia, Inc., the company that owns Le Courier, are subsidiaries of the same company, Unimedia, Inc., Garon said.

Around the world

CIA used electronics on patients
 WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The U.S. Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) used electronic devices on mental patients and normal subjects to change their behavior by remote control, previously secret documents disclosed by the agency said Thursday.
 The documents said the devices were aimed at brain waves of subjects who were placed under "psychological, neurological and induced stress."
 The devices were designed to analyse electrical signals from the brain and from "other systems in the human organism," they said.
 The study, which took place in the early 1960s, also involved what the documents called "activation of human behavior by remote means."
 But the researchers found the devices, described in the papers as "sensors and frequency analysers of brain signals," to be of poor quality and of little help in the CIA mind-control experiments.
 The program, approved in 1960, was part of a CIA drug testing project code-named MKULTRA in which the agency also used mind-bending drugs to alter human behavior.

Anonymous tipster loses reward

VANCOUVER (CP) — A tipster who helped lead police to the man now charged with the murders of four Chilliwack, B.C.-area teen-agers but who didn't leave his own name might have done himself out of part of the $25,000 in reward money.
 Even if the man came forward now to claim part of the reward, police might have a difficult time establishing he was the source of the tip, Inspector Les Holmes said Thursday.

Thousands flee Anita's wrath

TAMPICO, Mexico (AP) — Hurricane Anita turned its 240-kilometre-an-hour winds away from the Texas coast early today and began buffeting the sparsely populated coast of northeastern Mexico.
 The eye of Anita, the first hurricane of the Atlantic storm season, was 30 miles off the northeast Mexican coast, southeast of the small town of San Fernando, about 70 miles south of the border, the U.S. National Weather Service in Brownsville, Tex., said.
 At 2 a.m. EDT, Anita, labelled "extremely dangerous" and pushing tides of 12-15 feet, was bringing its outer winds well within range of the coast. It was slightly more than 100 miles southeast of Brownsville, churning west at 10 m.p.h., the weather service said.
 The leading edge of the storm dumped torrential rains along about 300 miles of the Mexican coast. Water covered some Tampico streets and the highways north of Tampico and Ciudad Victoria were reported to be flooded.
 Anita's projected track would put it inland between San Fernando and Tampico, about 170 miles to the south.

Policy gap remains as talks resume

OTTAWA (CP) — Representatives of the Canadian and United States governments resume talks today in hopes of settling the terms under which both will approve construction of a pipeline through the Yukon to move Alaskan natural gas to market.
 Five hours of negotiations Thursday between U.S. Energy Secretary James Schlesinger and Government House Leader Allan MacEachen failed to close the gap between the two governments.
 They instructed their officials to take another look at the positions Thursday night, in hopes, MacEachen says, of finding new leads for the talks between the ministers today.
 Stumbling blocks to an agreement are the route the pipeline will take through the Yukon and proposals that the northern territory should be paid $200 million in compensation for the social and economic impact of a pipeline.

Air Canada wants discounts

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada said Thursday it has applied to the Canadian transport commission to extend the domestic charter-class fare program which grants passengers substantial discounts on certain flights within Canada.
 The airline said in a statement it plans to provide increased capacity for charter-class passengers on regularly scheduled flights, offering round-trip flights at discounts ranging between 32 and 45 per cent for travel between communities 700 miles or more apart.

By Oswald & James Jacoby
 The best that can be said about the way North and South bid to four hearts is that it was frightful. West didn't like the way they bid and decided to double on general principles and his four trumps.
 The defense started with two spade tricks and then West shifted to the seven of diamonds.
 South took his king and led a low trump. West was afraid that South might be leading from the king-queen and played his 10. South won the dummy's ace, led a club, finessed his jack and led a second trump toward dummy. Now West was sure that South was underleading the king and queen. He played his jack only to see his partner win the trick with the king.
 At this point, East could still set the contract by leading a spade to force South to trump in one hand or the other and give his partner a sure trick with the eight of trumps. Or he could play his king of clubs to South's ace and once more there would have been no way to shut out that eight of trumps, but East was so upset by the way the trump play had gone that he led a diamond to dummy's ace. South cashed the nine of trumps, led a club to his ace while picking up the king and 10, drew the last trump and was home.
Ask the Jacobys
 A Kentucky reader wants to know what happens if one player is found to have one card too few during the play of the hand and the missing card is found in the other deck beside the player who is one card short.
 The presumption here is that this player inadvertently mixed the missing card with the other pack. It is restored to his hand, play continues and the player is charged with any revokes that may have been made.
 If the card were found where it apparently had not ever been in offender's hand it is a misdeal.

Ann Landers says Make motorcycle helmets compulsory

Dear Ann Landers: On behalf of motorcycle enthusiasts across the nation, I've come up with a list of things drivers of cars can do to kill more motorcyclists this year:

- (1) Throw things out the window when there is a bike behind you. At 55 mph, cigar ashes can permanently blind a person. A hamburger wrapper thrown out at that speed could startle a biker and cause him to crash.
- (2) Pull out in front of bikers. We are second-class motorists. (Actually bikers have the same rights as the driver of an 18-wheel semi.) Pulling out in front of a motorcycle gives the rider four choices: He can (a) skid, laying the bike down and possibly dying, (b) run into the car ahead (instant death), (c) get clobbered by an oncoming car (also instant death), (d) hit the ditch (20 per cent chance of survival).
- (3) When passing a biker, cut it close, for kicks. They're skinnier than cars, so they don't need a whole lane.

A motorcycle is a lot more fragile than most people think. We CAN'T stop on a dime, dodge flying objects, drive on a two-foot-wide pavement, and hope to survive long enough to see our children grow up.

Please, people, I pay my taxes and respect the law. I try to be considerate on the road. If you treat me badly on the road, I will DIE, it's as simple as that. Thank you for letting me have my say. — J.T.T.

Dear J.T.T.: Now that you've had your say may I ask a question? Why don't you people who want to live support legislation to make helmets mandatory instead of screaming about your constitutional rights?

Dear Ann: This is for "Agony in Connecticut," who wondered if she should stick with her married man.

I spent 13 years of my life (from age 20 to 33) waiting for a man to leave his wife for me and the child we had together. Thirteen years of hearing the standard excuses, "I can't risk the trouble it might cause in the business." "My wife's health isn't good. Let's wait till she's stronger." (Incidentally, they had no children).

Finally I made the break and I have never been happier. I am seeing a fascinating and intelligent man who knows about my past and accepts me on the basis of what I am today. I deserve a kick in the tail for wasting all those good years.

Tell "Agony" to wake up. Six months from now she'll wonder what she ever saw in him. — I Like My New Moccasins

Dear Moc: Did you say 13 years - and a child out of wedlock??? You're lucky, lady.

Dear Ann Landers: I nearly cried when I read the letter from the woman who was upset because her son-in-law called her "Hey You". She's got it pretty good. You ought to hear what my son-in-law calls me.

I've done everything but stand on my head for that big ape and he is completely unresponsive. Any suggestions on how I can get him to be at least civil? — Bella Donna

Dear Donna: The big ape knows he is getting to you and he's enjoying it. Give him the deep six for a few weeks and see what happens.

A no-nonsense approach to how to deal with life's most difficult and most rewarding arrangement. Ann Landers's booklet, "Marriage - What to Expect," will prepare you for better or for worse. Roadside shepherd cheers his flock

"Let me live in my house by the side of the road
And be a friend of man."
— S.W. Foss

GLEN BURNIE, Md. — (NEA) — Some years ago, when Albert J. Hardy retired, he walked out on his porch one morning to watch the rest of the world go to work. When a friend passed, looking beat in the commuter snarl, Hardy waved to cheer him on. And so it began. Al Hardy's post retirement avocation: roadside bonhomie.

Each day, a.m. and p.m., as the traffic lines up on Crain Highway, the 72-year-old Hardy comes out of his curbside home to greet it. Smiling, nodding, he deposits himself in the webbing of a wobbly lawn chair, stuffs his cheek with Red Man chewing tobacco, and waves joy and encouragement to a legion of motorists. "Hi, babe."

Beep.
"Hello, brother."
Honk.

It is an extraordinary ritual, and an altogether inspiring one. Some motorists are startled, others are suspicious, but few are unmoved. During rush hours Hardy will wave to thousands of passers-by, nearly all of whom wave back. "I'm sharing happiness," the old man explains, "when I see someone with no smile I give him one of my own."

Actually, it wouldn't seem that Al Hardy has much to smile about. Born a black man in the cruelties of the Old South, raised as a $2 per day laborer on a sharecropper's farm, he is in the eighth decade of his life "poor as a one feather chicken," and partly crippled from the wretched effects of two rather severe strokes.

Yet, as he sees it, "God don't give us no burden we can't bear." Besides, he adds, a man of his age has no gripe coming. "Look at all these people what died in their 30s, or even in their 20s, brother, if you got a little pain when you're in your 70s, it just reminds you that you're still alive enough to feel it."

That Hardy feels his pain is obvious. He walks with a crutch, has a stiff right leg, and moves about his modest property with measured deliberation. But, no complaints. "If I get too tired, I maybe will fall asleep in the chair. But someone on the road will honk to remind me of my duty. Life is sweet when you ain't alone."

By no means is Hardy alone. In seven years as a roadside bonhomie he has waved to perhaps a half million motorists and personally befriended thousands of them. "If I miss a day, some folks stop by to see if I'm okay." Others, after purchasing new cars, go slow past the Hardy home so that he will continue to recognize them.

Then there are those who bear him gifts. Schoolkids bring the old man donuts, housewives stop off with coffee. Hardy appreciates the sentiment, but does not let it get out of hand. Once when a woman came by with a winter scarf, Hardy saw she did not have one of her own, and wrapped it gently around her shoulders with many thanks.

Not every motorist is considerate. Teenagers have thrown pop bottles at Hardy. Rednecks have made obscene gestures. But the bonhomie turneth away wrath with a toothless smile. "I remember a boy who called me a nigger, and I just waved as usual. I guess he felt ashamed about it, because that night he came to my house to apologize."

Not incidentally, Hardy is a

The highway is a busy one. And therefore so is Hardy. He rises at 6:30 a.m. and waves along the lines thin. Then he catches the afternoon shoppers before bracing himself for the evening rush.

Inclement weather may alter the schedule but for it he is at his post six to seven hours a day, six days a week, the year round.

"I love them all," he says of the motorists, "they are just like family. This one woman, she come by throwing kisses at me, then the next day her husband come by and he threw kisses at me too. I said to myself this is getting good, so I started throwing kisses back. We got an orgy going now, this is the happiest highway in the state."

OVERSEAS STUDENTS SERVICE INC. NEEDS HOST FAMILIES

The Overseas Students Service, Inc., is an organization that endeavours to introduce foreign students, studying in the Sherbrooke and Lennoxville area, to Quebec life and society by pairing them up with host families. This means that a local family would invite the student into their home from time to time or to any other activities that might be mutually interesting. The Service itself also organizes social activities throughout the year for the benefit of families and their students. We are at present looking for English-speaking families who might be interested in participating in this program.

Gendron-Ranger

SUTTON — On Saturday, June 4, 1977, at St. Andre's Church in Sutton, Pauline Louise, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Gendron of Sutton was united in marriage to Serge Andre Ranger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Leo Ranger of Ste. Anne de Bellevue. The Rev. Real Lareau officiated at the double-ring ceremony and Miss Lucille Shanks played the wedding music.

The altar was adorned with arrangements of red and white carnations. Guest pews were marked with large satin bows.

The bride, escorted to the altar by her father, wore a sheer gown over taffeta with empire waistline, high neck and short sleeves ending in a cathedral train and trimmed with French lace. She wore a large straw hat with a waist length veil held in place by the same matching lace. Her bouquet was made up of red and white roses and baby's breath.

The maid of honour, Miss Diane Kirkwood, a friend of the bride, wore a floor-length sheer dress with taffeta lining of pale pink. She carried a bouquet of pink and white roses to harmonize with her dress.

Mr. Marc Richard, a friend of the groom, acted as best man. The ushers were the Messrs. Steven and Richard Gendron, brothers of the bride.

The groom and best man wore navy blue suits. The groom had a boutonniere of red roses while the other men in the wedding party wore white carnations.

The bride's mother chose a blue ensemble of gown and floor-length coat to match with white accessories. Her corsage was blue and white daisies.

The groom's mother wore a pale green gown with white accessories and a corsage of pink and white daisies. She carried a white stole.

The reception was held at The Canadian Legion Hall, Knowlton where 140 guests enjoyed a roast beef dinner catered by the Ladies Auxiliary.

Approaching the receiving line, guests were asked to register in the guest book. Mr. William Sellars played many delightful selections on the piano during the receiving line parade and dinner.

The bridal table was decorated with a large floral centrepiece carried out in the colours of red and white flowers with a double crystal candelabra on either side.

The hall was decorated with wedding bells and streamers with vases of flowers on the piano, guest book table and gift table.

The four-tiered cake was beautifully decorated in red and white iced roses, a "boy and girl in a swing" ornament was placed on top and white doves adorned each corner.

After the meal, dancing was enjoyed throughout the evening to the music of Marc Noisieux's Trio.

The bride's going away outfit consisted of a three piece blue linen weave suit which she had made herself. She wore a silk bow tie blouse and off-white sandals and bag. The groom wore a co-ordinated brown and beige outfit with dark brown accessories.

Serge and Pauline honeymooned in Niagara Falls, Ont., and Cape Cod, Mass. They are now residing in N.D.G. Montreal.

MIRROR MARSH — Slight wisps of clouds and still water hide the shadowy figures of nature as they go about preparing for another long, hard winter.

From the Pens of ET Writers

WHAT WERE YOU DOING?

When I first learned of the tragedy,
I was finishing some homework at school.
And those of the students who weren't there with me
Were taking lessons at a downtown pool.
My brother-in-law heard the news from his wife on that fateful day in November
He speaks of receiving the shock of his life
What were you doing? Or can you remember?

Forty-eight hours later as I talked with my sister
In the home of that same brother-in-law.
We all heard the gunshot, and we watched as he fell.
But none could believe what he saw.
"That was cold-blooded murder!" somebody breathed
As they carried Oswald away
And what about you? Did you witness that killing?
What were you doing that day?

I've heard folks suggest that we leave it alone
And let the President slumber at last.
But it does us all good to reflect now and then
And take counsel from times that have passed.
For 'twas men like ourselves that made this world what it is,
And their errors were many and great.
But perhaps if we're wise we'll learn from their wrongs
And thereby better this terrible state.

RAINBOW'S END

A Summer's day, so warm with heavy showers
Threatening skies, more dark and leaden, by the hour
Lightning flashes, rip through cobalt sky
And rolls of thunder make the heart beat high

We watch the storm rage, in silent awe
Skies brighten, and a secret sigh we draw
Then, through a rainy curtain can be seen
The sun ... with searching rays a gleam.

Look ... yonder in the still - dark sky
A rainbow ... in coloured glory greets the eye
Softly blended colours, delicate yet lush
Impossible to reproduce, by lens or brush

There's none who never heard the story, old
Of rainbow's end ... elusive pot of gold -
Fairy treasure, at its end, they say
But none has ever found it, to this day

Rainbow's End, and hopes of riches grand
Is most unlikely - yet on the other hand -
The sight and pleasure from this thing so fly
In our mind's eye, enriches many a day.

Rainbow's End ... hidden treasures gold a gleam
A myth, of course ... long heard of - never seen
The treasure lies within ourselves in stored delight
From memories of this "oh so lovely" sight.

VALE OF TEARS

Cry not for the dead but the living.
'Tis sadder by far to be here
When those who should care are not giving
The love, that is ever so dear.

The dead, God will judge in his mercy,
The living must pass judgement here
And carry on to end the journey
To be free from this vale of tears.

Gaiters on the field

By BILL ANDERSON

It's early September and already local football fans are buzzing over the potential of this year's version of the Bishop's University Gaiters. This should come as no surprise to those readers who witnessed the '76 Gaiters squad compile such impressive statistics as: most yards rushing, most yards passing, greatest total offense, and so on. Indeed, local armchair quarterbacks are ready to pick their Purple and White as the odds-on favorites to repeat as divisional champions. This Sunday's "Football Festival" hosted by McGill University will undoubtedly go a long way towards substantiating any such claims.

In an unprecedented six team series of "mini-games", the Gaiters will face all but one of their conference rivals, both offensively and defensively, thereby permitting both coaches and players a first-hand view of their respective opposition's strengths and weaknesses. There will never be a substitute for preparation shy of actual game conditions, and this unique format is tailor-made for the true connoisseur of amateur sport. Disregarding the inevitably stock offensive alignments offered by each club, the mere fact of actual competitive atmosphere will produce interesting results.

When queried about his squad's prospects in the upcoming tournament Bishop's mentor, Bruce Coulter would say only that, "I feel honestly that we have a first-rate offensive backfield, where we are hurting the most is that we lack adequate depth at any of these key positions." The Gaiters will operate their offense from two basic formations this year, the wing or power-I, and a split-back setup. Both were originally devised to maximize the potential of last year's outstanding runningback, Jim Pooler. Coulter was quick to say that this year's personnel seemed ready to make up for even such a loss as Pooler. "We have a runningback in camp, Joe DiGiantomasso, who has been an allstar for two years in the Maritime Conference, and continues to show good potential each day," said Coulter. Returning to play alongside Joey "D" is last year's rookie sensation, Bruce Wilkins. Bruce has slimmed down considerably this season but it is very apparent that he has lost none of the aggressiveness which led him to near-All Canadian honors in 1976. Rounding out the trio of ball carriers is yet another outstanding young athlete who has come to Bishop's to play football for Coulter, David Thornhill. "Thorny", as he is known, will contribute in the duel capacity of slot-back and punt returner.

Despite the seemingly tenuous offensive situation, the Gaiter's defense remains practically intact from last year. For one, have always maintained that defense wins football games and see this remodelled unit as Bishop's potential saving grace when the regular season rolls around. Coach Ron Perowne has been shuffling his veterans towards new positions in an attempt to solidify what is already a formidable squad. Kevin Scott has been assigned the unenviable task of replacing last year's All Canadian middle linebacker, Rod Ward, but his quickness combined with a compact 220 lbs. frame need only experience to instill the necessary confidence.

The defensive line, of which all too little is ever said is absolutely awesome in the eyes of this reporter! Returning stars David Allen and Emil Hatz anchor what is undoubtedly the strongest and quickest front four in Bishop's Football history. Newcomer Nick Arakgi, veteran Warren Miller and local talent Steve Davis will combine their abilities to make life uncomfortable for opposing quarterbacks this season.

But, as we are all well aware, even a surplus of raw talent does not win ball games. In the words of Dan Jenkins, noted sports editor and author, "It's easy enough to find 24 guys who want to win, it's when you find 24 guys who think losing is the most detestable feeling that an athlete can have, that you find yourself with a winner." Perhaps this is the spirit which is brewing at the Gaiter's camp, perhaps not, but as Jenkins says, "no one said that the road to the national championship wasn't going to be at least semi-tough!" Maybe we will all be a little wiser after Sunday's scrimmages?

Canadians qualify

MILAN, Italy (CP) — Five Canadians qualified Thursday for the tricks finals in the world water ski championships and two made it into the women's slalom.

Meet "old-stars" in exhibition game tonight

This year's Beavers bigger, faster

By STEVE BELL (Sports Editor) SHERBROOKE — They're all coming back for at least one more game at the Sports Palace, their home as members of the Sherbrooke Beavers. Old favorites like Rick Mulhurn, Curt Walker, Normand Dube, Peter Marsh, "Schmo" Simpson and Jere

Gillis will be lacing on their skates for tonight's exhibition game against this year's edition of the Beavers.

And Beavers' coach Ghislain Delage is predicting another resounding defeat for the former stars as he prepares his new team for the contest. "We'll be looking to make it two in a row Friday night," said Delage.

"We defeated last year's stars convincingly and I think that this year's team can do the same."

YOUNG TEAM "We'll have a younger team this year," the coach added in an interview earlier this week. "First of all we'll have only three nineteen-year-olds at the end of this season, Denis Halle, Mark

Green and Ronnie Carter."

"I think that we'll also have a taller team this season, probably the biggest team in the Beavers' history. This is mainly due to the fine job this year by Roger Roy and his scouts. When we sat down last year after the Memorial Cup I told them that we'd have to go out and get big boys.

"I'm gearing everything towards bringing the Memorial Cup to the Sherbrooke Beavers organization," added the coach.

The '77-78 version of the Beavers will also be faster, said Delage.

"We've improved a lot this year — we were looking for fast skaters and this season we have guys like Ricky Secco and Wayne Groleau and our two defencemen Francois James and Jeff Leverman who will definitely be able to move the puck for us," added Delage.

"I think that all these things, speed and size, are important if you want to win a fourth championship in a row and bring the Memorial Cup to Sherbrooke — that's my dream anyway," he added.

The camp, which started with over sixty players trying out for a spot on the team, has been thinned down to 27 in only three days.

"There has been a surprisingly large increase in the number of really fine players this year," said Delage. "Usually there are only two or three really good players who turn out for the camp, but this year there are four or five new players, rookies, who will be playing steady on my team."

"I'm talking about Ricky Secco, Wayne Groleau, big guys, very intelligent, there's Francois James on defence who is one of the big surprises in this year's camp." "Jeff Leverman from Dartmouth, Nova Scotia and Denis Martin our 6'6" big guy, they're all going to be playing steady as rookies."

There has also been quite a surprise in the search for a goalie to replace Richard Sevigny, in the person of Bernard Olivier from the Quebec City area. "Bernard has to be number one in the net at this time of the training camp." "He's young, I like his attitude, he's got a lot of confidence," added Delage.

"We'll be playing a little more cautiously at the outset of the season, we'll have to watch the rookies," said Delage. "You have to give them confidence and a little bit of time if you want to come away with that fourth championship."

"In the last three years we played over three hundred games a season and that the reason you have to watch the rookies, they get tired mentally and physically." "But I think that this season the rookies are bigger and stronger and I think that they can take it."

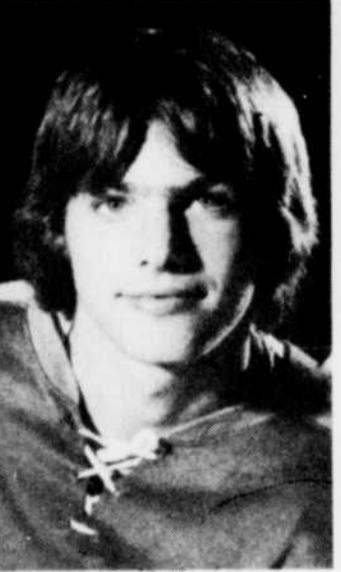

"We'll have a good team to watch this season and Friday's game should be a good indication," added Delage.

Richards states after match

"She's too powerful for me"

FOREST HILLS, N.Y. (AP) — "I hope the zoo-like atmosphere now is ended," sighed Dr. Renee Richards.

The gaunt features showed signs of strain and exhaustion. Her dark hair hung in strings down her long, straight neck. Beads of perspiration cascaded down her flushed cheeks.

Staid old Forest Hills had weathered its circus match, a centre court duel between a 43-year-old transsexual and the reigning Wimbledon titleholder, Britain's Virginia Wade, and the eagles atop the famous concrete horseshoe didn't come tumbling down.

It was historic. It was largely uneventful. It was sad.

The aggressive, hard-hitting Wade won as expected over the tall former New York ophthalmologist 6-1, 6-4. In doing so, she only proved she could beat almost any 43-year-old man or woman of sub-professional level.

Richards, who once played tennis as a man named Richard Raskind, proved to be a personality of endless patience and grace under the most trying circumstances.

The centre court crowd of 12,021 at the second day of the U.S. Open tennis championships behaved admirably, displaying a charitable sentiment for the broad-shouldered six-foot-two transsexual, but dividing its applause evenly on applaudable shots.

Still, there was something depressing about what should have been a pleasant sports frolic in the sun.

Before the match, the curiosity seekers jammed the clubhouse veranda outside the women's dressing room just for a chance to gawk at a human being still struggling with an identity.

She accented the feminine touches. Long gold rings dangled from each ear. Her dress was smart white with black trim, a black and red band around the waist. Lace panties peeked from beneath her ballerina skirt. A stylish white hat, with a bow in back, made her look even taller.

The match was predictable. Tournament-toughened Virginia attacked every ball. Repeatedly she dunked across delicate drop shots.

"She was too powerful for me," Richards said after the match. "I couldn't get to her short shots. Maybe I should have tried to press more."

"I am not tournament tough yet," Richards apologized. "But I shall continue playing. I will go to St. Petersburg next. Yes, I will be back next year. I would like to play at Wimbledon."

Why does she subject herself to such abuse?

"It's the burden of a social pioneer," she answered. "I am in a unique position of carrying a torch for all the different people of the world. When you do that you have to accept the suffering and the grief that goes with it."

Canadian Olympic Regatta

Human error eliminates sailing results

KINGSTON, Ont. (CP) — A combination of bad weather and human error have forced organizers to try to run two races today, the last day of the annual Canadian Olympic Regatta, Kingston (CORK).

Dead calm Wednesday forced the abandonment of racing in all nine classes and a mistake by a race committee in placing the finish line on one course Thursday led the protest jury to eliminate the results in three classes, the Laser, Fireball and International 14.

Jury chairman Jack

Cameron said the error resulted from poor communications.

Because the results were washed out, two races were planned today in each class.

Those races will be important in all classes, but especially so in the 470 standings, where two U.S. sailors are locked in a tie. Pete Melvin and Chuck Millican each have won two races and finished second twice, leaving them deadlocked.

The rival duo are oddly matched. Melvin is a 15-year-old Miami high-school student, while Millican is a 31-year-old crutch manufacturer from Sunapee, N.H. Their duel, and their domination of the top of the standings have produced keen interest among their fellow sailors.

The two split a pair of races Thursday.

Tam Matthews of Toronto is in second place in the standings, with Steve Baldwin of West Islip, N.Y., third.

In the Soling class, Peter Hall took a commanding lead by winning his third race in four starts.

Hans Fogh of Toronto is second in the class standings behind Hall, with Sid Dakin of Mississauga, Ont., third.

Brian Palfreeman of Beloeil, Que., held on to first place in the Tornado standings, with Larry Woods of Winona, Ont., second and Ian Jackson of Pointe Claire, Que., third.

Woods and Palfreeman each have won two races, with Woods taking the edge in heavy air and his Montreal rival winning in light breezes.

In the Finn class, Sandy Riley of Winnipeg had his second win of the week to take first place in the standings. Peter Higgins of Toronto dropped to second with Brian Todd of Bedford, N.S., third.

Toronto's Terry McLaughlin held on to first place in the Flying Dutchman class, just ahead of Augie Diaz of Miami, who moved into second with his second win of the week. Norm Freeman of Ithaca, N.Y., is third.

Paul Weitendorf of Owen Sound, Ont., moved into first place in the 505 standings by recording his second-straight win. Steve Taylor of New Haven, Conn., is second and Douglas Mann of Toronto is in third spot.

Canadians to perform as regulars in World Cup

DUESSELDORF (CP) — Two Canadians, who had been scheduled to serve as alternates on the American zone entry in the World Cup of track and field, learned Thursday they will perform as regulars.

Anne Mackie Morelli, a Calgary native who attends University of British Columbia, was chosen over Charlotte Bradley of Mexico to race Saturday in the women's 800 metres, and Bruce Simpson, veteran Toronto pole vaulter, has been selected over Roberto More of Cuba, although More won the pole-vault trials at Guadalajara, Mexico, and followed by defeating Simpson in the World Student Games at Sofia, Bulgaria.

Morelli and Simpson were superior to their opponents in meets at Berlin and Zurich and have better long-term records. More, for example, has a best of 5.10 metres while Simpson's best is 5.30.

Canadian coach Lionel Pugh of Vancouver said the addition of the Canadians probably makes little difference to the chances of the American zone team, "but it's always good to give our people all the international experience possible."

"The choice of Simpson was made even easier when More came up with a minor foot injury."

CHANCES GOOD High jump star Debbie Brill of Haney, B.C., is the only Canadian in today's events who has a good chance of winning a medal. She finished second to Sara Simeoni of Italy in the Student Games and says she can beat the Italian but admits Rosemarie Ackermann of East Germany, the world record holder, is almost certain to take the gold medal.

Penny Werthner of Ottawa will race in the 1,500 metres and Bruno Pauletto of Sept Isles, Que., has qualified for the shot put.

Pugh also learned Thursday that Brian Saunders of Toronto will form part of the 4x400-metre relay team and Marjorie Bailey and Patty Loverock, both of Vancouver, will each run a leg of the women's 4x100-metre event.

"That hasn't been official, but you can take it now as read," said Pugh. "There's no doubt all three will be in."

Cole Douty, a Toronto sprinter, lost his chance to compete here when he went home from Zurich, unable to shake the lingering weariness he picked up in Mexico. Jane Haist of Fenwick, Ont., lost a chance to compete in the discus when Lucette Moreau of Pointe-des-Cascades, Que., maintained her position as shot put and discus competitor.

Innovation promised for new T.V. season

90 Minutes Live starring Peter Gzowski returns for its second season, weeknights at 11:35 on CBC-TV. Audiences will notice some changes in the set and in the format of the program. In addition, ACTRA Award winning broadcaster John Harvard will be joining Peter as News-Current Affairs reporter and interviewer. During its second season 90 Minutes Live will again originate from CBC regions across Canada, as well as from Toronto.

CBC strongest ever says programmer

The 1977-78, 25th Anniversary Season of CBC television is described by Jack Craine, Director of Television Programming, as "the strongest ever, in terms of Canadian programming."

"We're embarking on the second quarter-century of television with a firm commitment to make it truly Canadian," Craine states. Replacing a half-hour of American programming with an additional half-hour of Canadian programming in the prime time schedule this season, CBC-TV's ultimate aim is 80 percent Canadian prime time in the next few years.

Popular Canadian programming is reflected in the '77-78 schedule by such new shows as RENE SIMARD,

a half-hour series starring the young Quebec superstar; CUSTARD PIE, a second CBC-TV situation comedy; and CANADIAN EXPRESS, an hour variety show featuring talent from the main entertainment centres across the country. "a kind of electronic travelling road show."

"TV journalism on CBC this season brings into focus our country's immediate concerns - QUARTERLY REPORTS, 90-minute specials to be scheduled once every three months, will be reports on the state of the nation related to major issues, for telecast on both the English and French networks, and co-produced by both. CONSTITUTIONAL CRISIS: An Opportunity For The Future, a series to start next January, is designed to offer personal perspectives on the Confederation debate. We also have a new resource series - FORTUNES, dealing with the political-economic aspects of energy, food and so on. DOCUMENTARY SPECIALS include one on agricultural land use - THE DISAPPEARING LAND - another on two central figures in the Canadian unity question, TRUDEAU AND LEVESQUE. In January, we will add a regular SUNDAY EVENING NEWS."

Says Knowlton Nash, Director of News and Current Affairs, "CBC television's journalistic programming this season faces its greatest challenge ever, in reflecting the volatile complexities of the debate on whether Canada survives as a whole nation. We stake our national life on a rational dialogue of an informed public, and whether on THE NATIONAL, the FIFTH ESTATE, 90 MINUTES LIVE or other programming, our prime responsibility and challenge for this, the Silver Anniversary year of CBC television journalism."

In the new drama line-up are two short series depicting aspects of Canadian life, yesterday and today. The five-part hour series by Gordon Pinsent titled THE GIFT is about a rural Ontario family at the turn of the century. Lylal Brown's three-part drama, THE ALBERTANS, concerns people coping with the present-day realities of life in the foothills country - a business man, an Indian leader, and a rancher.

Canada's heritage is reflected in some of our outstanding SPECIALS - THE GROUP OF SEVEN, GREENFELL OF LABRADOR, THE CROWN IN CANADA, and the dramas BETHUNE and NELLIE McCLUNG," said Craine.

There are two new week-day series for children in the fall schedule - BONJOUR, Bon Jour - successor to Mon Ami, from Montreal in the mornings - and AFTER FOUR for the pre-teens, in the afternoon. An ongoing project will start later this season, a co-production with the National Film Board - ADVENTURES IN HISTORY, half-hour costume dramas for children to be scheduled as specials on holidays or in early-evening slots, for family viewing. Two or three of these will be seen in '77-78, with others to follow in subsequent seasons.

For the sports fan, HOCKEY NIGHT IN CANADA,

ADRIENNE CLARKSON is co-hostess of the fifth estate DA, WORLD SERIES BASEBALL, CFL FOOTBALL, NFL FOOTBALL, are among the attractions on CBC-TV in '77-78. "These are among our most successful programs," says Craine. 1978 is a big year for sports, building to a climax next summer when CBC is the host-broadcaster for THE COMMONWEALTH GAMES in Edmonton."

Private network coming on strong with films, specials

In an attempt to offer its viewing audience innovative television programming of all genres, the CTV Television Network launches its new fall season with news, specials and entertainment programs.

This programming starts with CTV REPORTS, a news and current affairs program. CTV Reports, to be seen as two separate editions each week, promises to put the "current" back into current affairs programs. It will be seen each week on Sundays at 10:00 p.m. ET, when Peter Trueman will host a 60-minute report analyzing news happenings from around the world. On Thursdays at 9:30 p.m. ET, a half-hour edition of CTV Reports, co-hosted by Peter Trueman and Bruce Phillips, will concentrate on the unfolding Canadian news events.

Regular reports from such seasoned journalists as Quebec broadcaster, Andre Payette; writer-journalist, William Stevenson; journalist-film producer, Jack McGaw; veteran broadcaster, Michael Maclear, and well-known essayist-journalist, Barbara Amiel will complement the tandem of Phillips and Trueman.

CTV has acquired two of the most sought-after television special series of the 1977-78 production year. The topical WASHINGTON: BEHIND CLOSED DOORS, a twelve-hour television novel inspired by John Ehrlichman's bestseller, THE COMPANY, will be aired in prime time viewing hours as a lead into the Network's fall season. WASHINGTON: BEHIND CLOSED DOORS captures the drama of people obsessed with their pursuit of power in the political arena. It stars Jason Robards, Cliff Robertson, Robert Vaughn and Stefanie Powers.

A special nine-hour filmed serialization entitled THE GODFATHER SAGA, will complete the history of the Corleone family. This television chronicle includes film never before released to the public.

The Godfather Saga stars Marlon Brando and Al Pacino in the title roles, with co-stars Robert Duvall, James Caan, Robert De Niro, Diane Keaton and Lee Strasberg. Francis Ford Coppola is the producer-director.

Along with these two major television programming events, the CTV Television Network will feature movie hits including MY FAIR LADY starring Audrey Hepburn and Rex Harrison, THE LONGEST YARD starring Burt Reynolds and Eddie Albert, THE LIFE AND TIMES OF JUDGE ROY BEAN with Paul Newman and Ava Gardner, and the two original movie classics, THE GODFATHER with Marlon Brando, and THE GODFATHER, PART II with Al Pacino.

CTV has also acquired the rights to Frank Sinatra's major long-form drama, CONTRACT ON CHERRY STREET. This three-hour special feature stars Sinatra in one of his rare television dramas as a New York City detective committed to justice in a city committed to crime. Contract on Cherry Street is the television adaptation of Phillip Rosenberg's 1975 bestseller.

SOAP, 30 minutes of outrageous adult soap opera - comedy, leads CTV's fall line-up of comedy. Soap pokes fun at all human frailties while racing through the complex personal lives of two families, the Tates and the Campbells. Outlandish dialogue, scandalous personal trysts, and mind boggling plots promise to make SOAP one of the most innovative programs of the comedy line-up.

Included in the comedy schedule is CARTER COUNTRY, a carbonated comedy mimicking life in a small town in the deep, deep American South. When a black, New York City police inspector joins the staff of a precinct in a small, predominately white town in Georgia, he finds that his piece of the "Big Apple" doesn't mix well with southern fried chicken.

OPERATION PETTICOAT, a series based on the hilarious movie, makes its debut on CTV this fall. Take one pink submarine, a straight-forward captain, one riotous crew and add the basic ingredient of "women" and you have Operation Petticoat.

After a successful entry into the Network's schedule this past spring, ex-detective FISH and his adopted family of lovable delinquents return, this season to add their unique brand of humour to the line-up of entertainment viewing.

SEARCH AND RESCUE, a new Canadian adventure series leads the CTV line-up of top Canadian productions. Search and Rescue is an action-packed series based on the adventures of a team of animals highly trained to search out and rescue endangered people. The animal rescue teams have been trained to utilize what they naturally do best. Air, water and land animals will use their special skills to help men in danger. It is shot almost exclusively in Canada.

After a run this past season in a two hour movie format, ROSETTI AND RYAN premieres this fall as a new series. Tony Roberts and Squire Fridell star as Joseph Rosetti and Frank Ryan, a pair of irreverent but successful criminal lawyers whose flamboyant courtroom behaviour often gets them into hot water.

MAN FROM ATLANTIS, which premiered in four, two-hour formats this season will now be seen as a regular hour-long weekly series. This science-fiction program is based on the adventures of the only surviving member of the lost civilization of Atlantis. Man from Atlantis stars Patrick Duffy Flanked by Tim Conway (left), her new leading man Dick Van Dyke and Vicki Lawrence, comedy superstar Carol Burnett starts her new season on CBC-TV.

Thursdays at 8 p.m.

The Carol Burnett Show is hardest perennial of all the current U.S. variety shows (it's going into its 11th season).

Newcomers specials explore original Canadian settlers

THE NEWCOMERS, a seven part drama documentary series about the experiences of inhabiting a new land - Canada - makes its debut on CBC television in November.

The first four hour-long episodes have been filmed, including the Prologue, which was done in May, 1976, on location at Hazelton, B.C. The Prologue deals with the original inhabitants of Canada, the Indians and Inuit, in this case typified by the west coast Isimshiam Tribe, one of the last native groups to come in contact with the white man.

In describing The Newcomers, Blaik Kirby of the Toronto Globe and Mail, after visiting a film location near Mirabel, Quebec, said:

"They are part of our history we seldom consider: almost all of us, or our fathers, are immigrants. French, Italian, Ukrainian or whatever, we all pulled up roots elsewhere to come to a new land and make a new life."

The Newcomers... inhabiting a new land, was commissioned by Imperial Oil Limited to mark its centenary in Canada in 1980. Production is by Nielsen-Ferns Inc., of Toronto. The series will be telecast on both English and French TV networks of the CBC.

Many of Canada's finest writers, directors and performers, not to mention technical staff, are taking part in the series. Writers include Alice Munro, Timothy Findley, Guy Fournier, Al Purdy, George Ryga and Charles Israel. Directors so far are Eric Till, John McGreevy and Claude Fournier.

Strict adherence to historical authenticity has been the watchword with the series. Before production began, a board of 11 of our country's most respected historians was asked to advise on scripts and other filming aspects.

Episodes two and three, also to be seen this season, are simply titled "1740" and "1827".

The second episode, 1740, tells the story of a young French soldier, Nicholas de Lugny, who dislikes the new land's harsh climate and people, but changes his mind and stays. The cast features Michel Cote as de Lugny, with Donald Pilon, Jean Gascon, Louise Lambert and Jacques Godin.

The third episode, 1827, tells of Scottish immigrant John Symons, a radical, and his wife, Margaret, who settle in Upper Canada. Symons encounters poor land, back-breaking work for which he is ill-prepared, isolation, harsh winters and disease. Through his perseverance and unconventional character, he succeeds. Principal cast includes Kenneth Welsh, Donald Davis and Susan Hogan.

The Newcomers as a complete series is planned for telecast in seven consecutive episodes in 1980, on CBC-TV.

Following initial telecasts, prints of the films will be made available to educational institutions, together with complementary written material for classrooms.

Cameras everywhere for current affairs

New head of CBC-TV Current Affairs department, Robin Taylor wants to see CBC cameras and reporters getting into areas of investigation that television has traditionally left alone. He feels this type of programming is what the public wants and is worth the legal problems that may result. (At presstime, 5 legal actions had been initiated following the department's two Specials on organized crime in Canada last June.)

"We will not be reckless... but we have to be prepared to walk into hot water. CONNECTIONS, and original investigations by the fifth estate into dioxin and the Vancouver Stock Exchange, show that television is uniquely equipped to report such stories," Taylor says.

Formerly senior producer for the fifth estate and a newspaper reporter for many years in England and Canada, Taylor wants to create programs that will stir up public debate, but insists that reporting must be backed by very solid research. There could even be another CONNECTIONS, but the investigative role will certainly be continued by the fifth estate and several of the department's 8 Documentary Specials. Both these series will continue also to present stories that shed light on the human condition and deal with the joys, sufferings, failures and accomplishments of contemporary life.

Taylor expects the coming season to see heightened debate on the issues of Confederation. He himself has first-hand knowledge of the diversity of Canada. Before coming to the fifth estate in Toronto two years ago, Taylor spent extended periods of time in virtually every corner of Canada - Edmonton, Winnipeg, Vancouver and St. John's, Newfoundland. "I feel I know this country very well. We have to accept that Canada is a diversified country... that gives it individuality and strength, but makes for problems. Conflicts of various sorts are going to be with us for a long time," he says.

Current Affairs plans to treat the continuing Confederation debate in several different ways this season. French and English television networks will work in close association on a series of parallel programs. The first of these four Quarterly Report documentaries will focus entirely on Quebec. Starting January, a new series on Confederation (working title Constitutional Crisis - An Opportunity For The Future) begins to personalize the issues by asking 12 prominent and not-so-prominent Canadians to find out for themselves what separates Canadians and what they can share.

Agriculture and resources research

Hard hitting programming planned

Last year was a remarkable one for CBC-TV's Agriculture and Resources, says Area Head, Don Baron.

"We demonstrated, to ourselves and to the public, that resources television does work. This is serious television journalism dealing with gut issues facing Canadians - how to maintain our high standard of living, for one.

"We've achieved two important things with our programming; we attracted big audiences, and we provoked public discussion on the real issues that the public wanted to look at and talk about. Programs like You Won't Starve Here - which drew 1,400,000 viewers - and What Breadbasket? generated a great deal of national interest and discussion.

"In the past we've been handicapped by the old concept of 'Farms and Fisheries', implying a narrow focus, but what we're doing now is programming for people - and they're shows that farmers want to watch.

Agriculture is probably the most dynamic, lively, and important industry in Canada; and petropower and agripower are two of the main issues facing Canadian society today. Agribusiness is not only the biggest, most important industry in the country, but also the most fascinating."

Besides the return of such long-established and popular programs as COUNTRY CANADA and THIS LAND, and the more recent series THE MONEYMAKERS this department's contribution to the '77-78 schedule includes a new half-hour resource series FORTUNES, and three one-hour specials: THE DISAPPEARING LAND, Larry Gosnell's investigative report on land-use; ATLANTIC CANADA: To have or To have not,

Garth Price's story of food-production in Atlantic Canada; and THE ELEVENTH PROVINCE, Doug Lower's examination of the close trading ties between Western Canada and Japan.

DISAPPEARING LAND - More and more prime agricultural land is disappearing under concrete as factories, highways, housing developments and supermarkets take over.

In a one-hour special entitled The Disappearing Land (Monday October 17 at 10 p.m.) award-winning producer Larry Gosnell investigates current legislation on land-use and examines the politics of this controversial issue.

Hard-working pioneers have left us many remembrances of their labor. They have bestowed on us a nation... founded on physical and mental work. They tamed a wilderness... farmed virgin soil... laid the foundations of our great cities. Like us, they had chosen vocations, and like us, they had set goals. Monday as we celebrate Labor Day, let's remember how essential each one of us is in the further development of our country. Through our love, dedication and toil, we have maintained its greatness. Let's work together with a sense of achievement.

LABOR DAY

September 5

"Blessed is he who has found his work; let him ask no other blessedness. His is the greatest of all."

—THOMAS CARLYLE

Labor, said a wise man, preserves us from three great evils... weariness, vice and want. It also serves as an excellent measure of strength and prosperity ...especially when a nation's people are independent and proud of earning a fair day's wage for a fair day's work. Monday, we take time from our daily jobs to pay our grateful tribute to the Canadian ethic that dignifies honest labor and knows that work is love made visible.

A number from here attended the annual reunion service in the Anglican Holy Trinity Church in Maple Grove on Sunday, Aug. 14, to mingle with a large congregation of around one-hundred-and-twenty-five persons, many of whom had come from a considerable distance to worship once more with their friends and former neighbors. The service was conducted by the Ven. Archdeacon Guy Marston.

This church was erected in 1900, and is maintained in perfect condition in which many memorial plaques abound. It is located on the original Craig's Road, a short distance from St. Ferdinand d'Halifax on a steep hill overlooking the waters of nearby Lake William. To visit there leaves an impression of beauty, in its highest form, in the minds of those, who, especially in the autumn, with the many-colored leaves on the trees surrounding the lake and the River Thames view a picture which cannot be excelled nor forgotten.

Mrs. Florence Bennett of Stoneham, has been the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Hubert Cook, Mr. Cook, and family for several days. Her friends still residing here, took advantage of the opportunity to visit her there, and while Mrs. Bennett has been a victim of arthritis for many years we were delighted to see her obviously improved in health, and blessed with a memory which a high school graduate of 1977, might well be envious. Please keep well, Florence, visits with you are simply great.

Mr. and Mrs. George Purdon once more provided a real treat to their senior citizens friends, as well as a few visiting guests, by entertaining them on Saturday afternoon in their lovely home and on their large well-manicured lawn. Various games were enjoyed, and a small-calibre rifle competition staged in which Mr. Arthur Bilodeau won by a hair, with Weston Graham and Gordon Patterson right on his heels. Then, as a fitting close to a delightful afternoon, generous helpings of Kentucky Fried Chicken were served, and it was the unanimous decision that the slogan "finger-licking good" is both true and apt.

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Carroll were Mr. Desmond Daird of Sherbrooke, Miss Alma Honda, Montreal, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Carroll, Roger and Monica, of Brampton, Ont., Mr. Murray Westover returning with them, Miss Sharron Raycraft, Asquith, Sask., Miss Heather Reid of Leeds Village, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Longmoore of Inverness, Mr. and Mrs. John Patterson, Ann, Laura, and David, of Dundas, Ont., have been guests at the Patterson home at Rectory Hill for several days, from which point they called on other friends and relatives in the vicinity. Good news to hear, Edna.
