Quebec to mediate Butters row

By JAMES DUFF

QUEBEC — The Social Affairs Ministry will attempt to mediate a dispute between Magog city council and the Butters Centre, which threatens to force the city's second-largest industry to move most of its jobs out of the region, a spokesman for the Ministry said yesterday.

The month-long fight is over the location of a group home on Adelard St. on the edge of Magog, where up to a dozen residents of the Butters Centre in Austin would benefit from a relatively recent concept in the treatment of the mentally handicapped. The group-home concept — backed by the Ministry of Social Affairs — calls for the eventual decentralization of large-scale 'babysitting' operations such as that at Butters, breaking them into smaller treatment units in various environments which attempt to develop mentally-retarded individuals to their full social potential.

The Adelard St. home would be the second such group home in the Townships; the first is the highly-successful Champagne House experiment at Knowlton Landing.

Planning for the establishment of a Magog group home was completed in February, 1978. The regional council for health and social services (CRSSS) gave its blessing to the project, although the Ministry of Social Affairs felt the money would be better spent in Region 6-C, which stretches from the western shore of Lake Memphrémagog to the Montreal south shore; Magog itself is in Region 5.

However Mayor Maurice Theroux and all five councillors — backed by 27 residents of the neighborhood around Adelard Street — have appealed to the Social Affairs Minister Denis Lazure to halt the proposed group home.

At their August 3 council meeting, the city fathers passed a motion to draft the appeal, arguing that they weren't consulted, that the Butters Centre was setting itself up outside its own administrative region and that the proposed group home was not in keeping with the current residential character of the Adelard St. neighborhood.

Butters Director-General Marcellin Dal-laire says the city was consulted as early as May 25 of this year, when Butters authorities met with Magog city clerk Jean-Paul Lange to ask whether the city had space available for a workshop for the mentally handicapped. They also told the city of their space problems, since their main Here's a cast-iron pirate, complete with the nose ring...

...Lennoxville greets new faces

By PAT TRACY

LENNOXVILLE — Four new faces have been added to the Lennoxville scenery to amuse tourists and delight locals. The faces, carefully painted on selected fire hydrants, are the work of Scott McLeod, a former employee of the town who was commissioned by the local parks and recreation department.

Ranging from a scowling pirate-type with long eye-lashes and a ring through his nose to a googly-eyed lad with luscious red lips, the hydrants are placed at various points around Lennoxville.

The painting of the fire hydrants is a part of an overall plan to beautify Lennoxville. According to Duncan Bruce, town alderman and chairman of the parks and recreation committee, the project is an experiment. They plan to see how the townspeople react to the funny-faced fire fighters before they proceed with any further work.

The idea is not original, said Mr. Bruce, as he displayed magazine photos of painted hydrants from other cities. Each municipality incorporates their own faces and other designs into the hydrants.

Lennoxville residents walking home at night who think they are being stared at from the bushes may indeed be — by little cast-iron people.

Pilots' strike set for tomorrow

Last-ditch talks underway

Last ditch talks aimed at averting a national strike by Air Canada's 1,500 pilots are set for Ottawa today between Labor Minister John Munro and representatives of the airline and the Canadian Airline Pilots Association (CALPA).

The eleventh hour meeting was arranged Tuesday by Munro as the strike deadline of 3 a.m. EDT Thursday approached with no sign of a settlement in sight.

Captain Norman Foster, the pilots' chief negotiator, consented to the meeting but said the pilots would not move from their position on the only outstanding issue—the merging of the seniority lists of Air Canada and Nordair.

Claude Taylor, president of the government-owned airline, will attend the 9 a.m.

EDT meeting to set forth management's position in the dispute.

Meanwhile, thousands of passengers booked on Air Canada flights were scrambling to make alternative travel arrangements in the wake of the pilots' announcement Monday of plans for a strike.

The Crown-owned airline was granted permission in July by the Canadian transport commission to take over Nordair, a Montreal-based airline, on the condition that the two airlines operate separately.

NOT ACQUIRED YET

Air Canada has not yet officially acquired Nordair and Taylor has said that that means the pilots' demand cannot be negotiated as part of the new contract.

Foster has countered that the seniority list issue is important to his members' future. Air Canada pilots and the airline could agree in a new contract that the lists would be merged when, and if, Air Canada takes over Nordair.

The union would not agree to delay the proposal until the next contract because the takeover would be completed by then and Air Canada would be in a stronger position to resist merging the lists, Foster said.

If seniority lists of the two airlines are not merged, Air Canada pilots likely would miss advancement opportunities into the lucrative charter business.

"I still expect a strike but who knows what will happen in Ottawa," Foster said Tuesday.

Lalonde resists pressure

Royal letter stays secret

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal-Provincial Relations Minister Marc Lalonde refused Tuesday, despite pressure from MPs and senators, to make public a letter in which the Queen assured Prime Minister Trudeau she approves of the federal government's proposed changes in the constitution.

Lalonde told angry members of a joint Senate-Commons committee on the constitution it would be improper to release a private communication between the Queen and a minister of the Crown.

The existence of the royal letter was first made known last week when Lalonde released to committee members and the media a prepared statement in which he said: "The Prime Minister received from the Queen, dated June 20th, a letter indicating that Her Majesty was content with proposed change in the royal style and titles and was satisfied that the (constitutional) proposals would not alter the essential relationship of the Crown to Canada."

The letter followed a meeting June 15 between then justice minister Ron Basford and the Queen at Buckingham Palace, during which Basford explained the aims of the proposed constitutional reforms.

"The Queen obviously decided to send a letter to the prime minister expressing her views on the subject and her appreciation of Mr. Basford's visit," Lalonde said.

Lalonde refused not only to table the letter before the committee, but also to offer any interpretation of its significance.

"I will not say what the Queen's personal views are. You'll have to ask the Queen why she wrote it," he told the committee.

Liberals to study trade report

MONT-GABRIEL, Que.

(CP) — A recent report by the Economic Council of Canada advocating free trade will be a key point of discussion today, as Quebec Liberal MPs continue a three-day strategy and policy session at this resort 65 kilometres north of Montreal.

Marcel Prud'homme, chairman of the Quebec Liberal caucus, said Tuesday some caucus members are unhappy with the report's recommendations, which could lead to a gradual phasing-out of soft industries such as clothing, with the eventual loss of up to 129,000 jobs, many of them in Quebec.

Prud'homme said Prime Minister Trudeau and 20 new candidates who are seeking Commons seats in the next general election will arrive today to join about 50 Liberal MPs, who met Tuesday evening to begin the session with a discussion of Quebec's general economic situation.

He said other topics on the agenda are agriculture, care of the elderly, the constitution, and party finances and strategy.

The sessions are being held behind closed doors, and few public statements are expected until the end of the conference Thursday.

JORON BLASTS LAPRADE CUT

QUEBEC (CP) — Energy Minister Guy Joron blasted Ottawa Tuesday for its proposal to halt construction of a heavy water plant in Laprade, Que., and reminded the federal government that it has signed a contract promising to proceed with the project.

"We're not going to trade Quebec jobs for Liberal votes in Ontario," Joron told reporters, noting that the construction site across the St. Lawrence River from Trois-Rivières employs 1,500. Last week Robert Andras, president of the federal treasury board, announced the government's intention to axe the Laprade plant as part of a $1.5-billion package of federal spending cuts.

But Joron said Quebec has a contract with Ottawa, whereby the province has agreed to build a third nuclear reactor at Gentilly, near Laprade, if Ottawa goes ahead with the heavy water plant.

"For us the contract is signed," the minister said. "There is no question of renegotiating it."

Aware that Canada is rapidly developing surplus capacity for production of heavy water, the federal government discussed the possibility of closing down Laprade, which is to come into production in 1982, last year.

At that time, Joron said, Ottawa asked Quebec to build three nuclear reactors to assure sales of Laprade heavy water.

Dief continues assault on PM

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — John Diefenbaker continued Tuesday his attack on the Trudeau government's handling of the economy and national unity but he fell short of committing himself to Conservative Leader Joe Clark as a man who could do any better.

"I have confidence in my party," he said in an interview here when asked twice about his confidence in Clark.

"Do you have confidence in the leader of the Progressive Conservative party?" Diefenbaker was asked again.

"I have confidence in my party," he repeated. "It did not bring about these conditions.

"It's the strangest thing that he (Trudeau) who has actually disparaged the unity that existed in this country during his period of office now says, having done that, 'I am the only one that can save the nation.'"

"God help Canada if that be the case."

Earlier in the day Diefenbaker said the Trudeau government has left Canada in the worst condition he has seen in his 82-year lifetime.

"I've never seen such a total lack of government," the former Progressive Conservative prime minister said during a visit.

"The highest taxation, a million unemployed. Altogether the country has never been at any time in my lifetime, including the days of war, in the serious situation it is today."

He shrugged his shoulders when asked if the budget reductions announced by the Liberal government last week would bolster the faltering economy.

"It's meaningless action," he said. After Canadians paid the highest taxes ever last year, the government still had a deficit of $13 billion.

"That was the deficit, most of which was borrowed and costs from half a million to a million dollars a day in interest. You and I have to pay for it."

"If you and I were in the same position propo-tionately, we'd have long since declared bankruptcy."

Diefenbaker predicted that this year's federal deficit would amount to between $17 and $18 billion.

Diefenbaker charged that the results of a constitutional study by the Canadian Bar Association were leaked to the media during Queen Elizabeth's visit as an attempt to embarrass her. The study recommended that Canada abolish the monarch as head of state.

THE WEATHER

A weak cold front will cross southern Quebec today giving cloudy periods over most of our regions and a few showers over the lower St. Lawrence. A rapid clearing trend will follow the passage of the front. A low pressure system from the Great Lakes area will give cloud and showers over western Quebec Thursday. The rest of the province may enjoy mainly clear skies. Temperatures will be little cooler both days.

Outlook for Friday, Saturday and Sunday: Variable cloudiness with showers Friday and Saturday. Variable cloudiness Sunday. Temperatures slightly below normal through the period. Normal high 21 to 25. Normal low 10 to 14.

Oppose free trade

Textile industry proposes common market

MONTREAL (CP) — Having established its credentials as a tenacious opponent of free trade in Canada, the Canadian textile industry now proposes a common market in textiles and clothing with the United States.

"I think it would be of benefit to Canada," says Frank Brady, senior vice-president of Dominion Textile Ltd., a major Canadian producer which also operates in the U.S. through its DHJ Industries Inc. subsidiary.

Speaking for the Canadian Textiles Institute, Brady first broached the idea of an arrangement similar to the Canada-U.S. auto agreement as the industry unveiled proposals recently to save itself and the 180,000 jobs—cutters, sewers, weavers, knitters and carders—it provides in Canada.

The report is one of 23 sectorial studies the federal government requested from major industries last February during a first ministers' conference.

In a later interview, Brady acknowledged it would be difficult to sell the Americans on the free-trade deal and guarantee Canadians a share of the U.S. market.

Despite all the talk about cheap textile imports from Asia, the United States is the largest single source for Canada of textile and clothing imports, accounting for $700 million of Canada's $1.6 billion annual trade deficit in textiles.

While there may be little incentive for Americans to guarantee Canadians a share of their market, Brady thinks it would be worth while to try persuading them to go along because free trade would have the long-term effect of maintaining textile production in Canada.

LIKE AUTO PACT
Such an agreement would be along the same lines as the Canada-U.S. auto agreement of 1965, which allows new cars made in either country to cross the border duty-free.

That agreement allowed the automobile industry to consolidate operations, assembling a limited number of lines in Canada for the whole North American market.

Previously Canadian plants produced a wider range of cars, but short production runs made this set-up costly.

The textile industry in Canada is also plagued with short runs and, as with car production, such large firms as Dominion Textiles, Du Pont of Canada Ltd. and Celanese Canada Ltd. operate in both countries.

A senior aide to Jack Horner, federal minister of industry, trade and commerce, said that textile officials have already brought up the free-trade proposal but it still is at the discussion stage.

NEEDS LOOK
Bernard Landry, Quebec's economic development minister, said the free-trade arrangement would have to be looked at, adding: "I'd rather trade with Woonsocket (Rhode Island) than with Hong Kong."

The New England textile industry has wage rates and production costs similar to those in Canada and both are threatened by low-cost imports from places such as Hong Kong where wages are low.

But a free-trade area with the United States would also mean access to Canadian markets for cheap clothing from the southern United States where "right-to-work" laws hinder unionization and make wages significantly lower than in New England or Canada.

The textile industry exists in Canada because of tariff protection from imports. The industry is not ready to give up that protection and has convinced the federal government to impose quotas to cut imports further.

Since the beginning of the 1970s, imported clothing has increased its share of the Canadian market to about 45 per cent in 1976 from less than 30 per cent. It was in 1976 that the federal government took the drastic measure of freezing imports.

CBC to trim budget $71 million

OTTAWA (CP) — CBC president Al Johnson said Monday that because of the government's budget the broadcasting corporation will have to slow down its development of more Canadian programs.

"This cut in the CBC's budget, I am sad to say, seems to represent a willingness on the part of the government—conscious or otherwise—to accept what amounts to a continuing drift toward cultural colonialism in Canadian broadcasting," Johnson said in a statement.

The statement was issued after the board of directors met to decide how the CBC can trim $71 million out of its planned budget for the fiscal year starting next April 1.

The CBC's appropriation for the current fiscal year from Parliament is $522 million, and it was expected to go up $71 million next year under a five-year budgeting plan. Robert Andras, treasury board president, announced last week the increase would not be made.

Johnson said the consequences of the cut on coverage plans and programs are "bound to be severe."

PROJECTS CANNED
He said there now is no possibility of realizing the CBC's ambitions for 1979 in carrying more Canadian programs on its English network, in broadening the French TV service, in expanding regional production, or in making further progress in broadcasting drama and arts shows on CBC radio.

Johnson said the government has cut more than $45 million from what the CBC needs to meet price and wage increases in 1979-80. To meet these increases, the corporation will have to reduce its coverage and programming plans.

"We're not talking about simply postponing what we'd like to do," Johnson said. "We're faced with the necessity of deep surgery in the CBC's services."

The CBC president, in the most strongly worded statement he has yet issued in protesting government policy, said expenditures on equipment and other hardware must be cut more deeply than expenditures on programming.

Ancillary activities, such as Radio Canada International, the voice of Canada abroad, will be subject to rigorous re-examination, and administrative expenditures will be cut to rock bottom.

SERIOUS SETBACK
Johnson said the budget cuts represent a serious setback in CBC efforts to increase the amount and quality of Canadian programs.

"For years now, there has been a creeping Americanization of the Canadian broadcasting system as the amount of U.S. programming has risen through cable and private TV stations, and as the proportion of time spent by Canadians in viewing U.S. programs has consequently risen," Johnson said.

"Only the CBC has been combating this trend with more and better programs—programs which Canadians are watching in large numbers."

He said the board has decided that efforts should be made to avoid substituting American shows for Canadian programs, and to distribute cuts fairly between local and regional production, and production for the networks.

He also said the board decided that under no circumstances should the over-all effect of the cuts in programming diminish the CBC's reflection of Canada's two linguistic communities, or its reflection of regional and ethnic identities.

"It will continue to be the CBC's objective in making the budget cuts to maintain a balanced service of information, enlightenment and entertainment, directed to both the CBC's more general and more specialized audiences."

Tuna to furniture, Green salvages almost everything

TORONTO (CP) — When a ship's cargo is damaged by sea water or a store is hit by fire, Sam Green will likely benefit from it.

Green is the amiable, 68-year-old president of Continental Salvage Co. Ltd. of Toronto, one of Canada's best known firms of insurance salvors.

His firm buys the damaged goods that become the property of insurance companies when claims have been settled.

"We'll buy almost anything, except automobiles, from the insurers," said Green. His warehouse on Front St. on the waterfront is jammed with goods ranging from canned tuna to clothing, furniture and appliances.

Continental's inventory averages about $750,000. Recently, the inventory included a large stock of books which the company bought after a truck carrying them turned over on a Toronto highway.

"We retail at half of the legitimate retail price," said Green. "We don't fool around with the prices. In fact, most goods still carry the original labels and price tags."

HONOR FOR VETERAN
Green, recently honored for 50 years of service with the privately-owned salvage company, said the key to success is knowing where the goods can be sold at a specific time and at what price.

"It's not as easy as it might appear," he said. "I've been here since 1928 but if I were to take six months off and go to Florida I'd be no good at it. You've got to keep on top of the markets and know where you can get something before you buy it."

Continental handles goods from about 250-to-300 losses a year "ranging in value from several hundred dollars to several hundred thousand dollars."

Its biggest single allotment of goods came from a $1.7-million inventory of furniture salvaged from an Ottawa store fire.

The company buys some goods outright but about 75 per cent is sold on a commission basis for client insurance companies.

Wholesalers buy most of Continental's inventory which Green said enables the company to place little emphasis on selling to the public.

Green said the company could pursue the retail trade with more vigor. "But we do very well, and I guess it all depends on what your goals are. Who wants to be the richest man in the graveyard?"

Solar power won't alter lifestyle

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Increased use of solar and wind power and other renewable energy forms would be economically practical and would not detract from the quality of life society enjoys today, an energy consultant said Monday.

Amory Lovins, consultant to the Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development, said the increasing capital cost of finding oil and gas might lead to a point where society will not have enough money left to build facilities to use the power.

He told the opening session of the Solar Energy Society of Canada that, by directing itself toward so-called soft energy, mankind can double its energy efficiency by the end of the century and redouble it in the next.

Lovins said subsidies in the form of tax write-offs to traditional energy suppliers are never included in the cost of allegedly low-priced fossil fuels. Such subsidies should be stopped to give an accurate picture of the real cost of non-renewable energy.

Lovins said energy producers such as Ontario Hydro and Quebec Hydro might face serious financial problems within 20 years because as the cost of electricity increases, demand falls and the utilities are left with expensive and under-used power plants.

He called for incentives to reward energy-efficient building design and improved access to capital for investment in renewable energy sources.

The conference continues through Thursday at the University of Western Ontario.

Consumer Chronicle

TENT CAMPING — Consumer and Corporate Affairs Canada has issued a warning to campers that an open flame in or near a tent can create a serious fire hazard. It is possible for a non-flame retarded cotton tent to burn to the ground in as little as 45 seconds.

In fact, any cotton tent that has not been treated with flame retardants will ignite easily and burn rapidly when exposed to an open flame or other ignition source. Similarly, nylon tents can be ignited but will burn much less rapidly than cotton tents.

Even after they are treated with flame retardants at the factory, cotton and nylon tents are not fireproof — the process only makes them more resistant to ignition and ensures they will not burn as readily. Because there still exists a measurable hazard from fire and from smoke, as much care should be exercised with these tents as with untreated ones.

To help ensure that a camping holiday does not become a camping tragedy, Consumer and Corporate Affairs Canada recommends the following precautions be observed when tenting:

- Do not use candles or matches or open flames of any kind in or near a tent.
 - Discourage smoking in tents.
 - Building campfires downwind and several yards away from the tent. Always be sure to fully extinguish camp fires before retiring for the night.
 - Practise extreme caution when using fuel-powered lanterns and heaters inside tents, and use battery-operated equipment wherever possible.
 - Extinguish or turn off all lanterns before going to bed.
 - Never use cook stoves inside the tent.
 - Keep all flammable liquids such as gasoline or kerosene in tightly-capped safety cans, stored out of the reach of children and well away from the tent.
 - Bring along a portable fire extinguisher when camping.
 - Develop an escape plan for getting out of the tent quickly in case of emergency. Keep a knife handy to cut an escape hole in the tent should the exit become blocked.
- Follow these safety measures, and have a safe and happy holiday.
- For more information, please contact Guy Desrosiers, Consumer and Corporate Affairs Canada, 25 Wellington North, Room 500, at 565-4723.

'FORD FAILED' — NADER

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ford Motor Co.'s planned safety corrections "failed badly" in U.S. government crash tests after the company agreed to recall 1.5 million Pintos and 30,000 Mercury Bobcats, the federal safety agency says.

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader told of the failure Monday and the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) later confirmed it.

NHTSA spokesman Hal Parris said that after the failure of the planned corrections the agency forced Ford to go further with its modifications. The latest corrections appear to have remedied the problem of fires when the cars are hit from the rear.

Ford spokesman Chuck Gumushian said he could not say whether the additional corrections, if given final government approval, will delay the recall program.

Ford announced the recall June 9, saying free modifications would begin in September.

The Ford spokesman also said he does not know whether the additional corrections would make the recall more expensive than the company earlier estimated. The company had said the cost would be $20 to $30 a car, or a total of about $40 million if all owners bring in their cars.

AWARD FOR BURNS

The Pinto has been a highly publicized highway safety issue. In one lawsuit, a California jury awarded a severely burned teen-ager $128.5 million in damages because of a fiery explosion of a Pinto gasoline tank when the car was hit from the rear. The amount later was reduced to $6.6 million.

When Ford announced the recall, under pressure from NHTSA, the company said it would replace the fuel-filler pipe and seal with a longer pipe and improved seal, and install a new polyethylene shield across the front of the fuel tank.

But when the cars were tested by NHTSA, the fuel tank still leaked gasoline in a collision. This was the condition that led to the problem of fires NHTSA cited.

In the latest test, conducted Friday, Parris said Ford added a second shield and improved the device that holds the tank.

"There was no leakage," he said. "It looks as though this fix will do the job."

Ford has never admitted a safety problem, but agreed to the recall after NHTSA issued a preliminary finding of a fire risk.

The models affected by the recall announced by Ford are all 1971-76 Pintos and 1975-76 Bobcats, except station wagons.

$3 billion spent on booze

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadians purchased alcoholic beverages valued at $3.688 billion in the year ending March 31, 1977, up 8.2 per cent from the previous year, Statistics Canada reported Monday.

The value of imported spirits, wines and beers sold fell to $164 million from $170 million the previous year but the country sold $257 million abroad, slightly more than a year earlier.

Provincial governments obtained revenues of $1.155 billion through taxes on the sales, up 12.7 per cent over the previous year.

Turkeys die of stupidity

TORONTO (CP) — Turkeys are so stupid they don't know when to get out of the sun and about 35,000 of them proved it when they died in the heat last week, producers say.

"When it gets hot, the turkeys can't sweat so they breathe harder," said turkey producer Richard Visser. "When they can't get enough air they get panicky and start stampeding."

Last week's temperatures of 31 C. in some areas caused many of the bare-headed birds to keel over.

"Their small head dehydrates and it's like a heat stroke," Visser said.

Most of the turkeys were large and almost ready for market.

The losses, one per cent of total Ontario production, will cost turkey farmers more than $500,000, but no turkey shortage or major price increase is expected.

Prosecution concludes case

TORONTO (CP) — The prosecution concluded its case in a dredging-conspiracy trial Monday, almost six months after Crown lawyer Roderick McLeod made his opening address.

The jury has heard 69 days of evidence spread over 83 days since the conspiracy trial began last February. Eleven men and nine companies are charged with defrauding public agencies of $4.73 million between 1969 and 1973 by rigging bids on dredging contracts.

There have been two long adjournments—one last May because of the illness of two of the participants and another this month to let jurors take summer holidays.

Ontario townships retaliate

CUMBERLAND, Ont. (CP) — Quebec contractors have been barred from entering bids on public works projects in Cumberland Township, 16 kilometres east of Ottawa.

Council's decision Monday was a show of support for Ottawa contractors who are inhibited from working in Quebec because of regulations that Ontario workers must register 1,000 hours of labor time in Quebec with the province's labor office to continue working there.

Ontario heavy equipment operators are required to pay special gasoline taxes and to procure working licences to work in Quebec.

Tom Muldoon, president of the Ottawa Heavy Equipment Association, said he hopes other municipalities will follow suit, forcing the Ontario legislature to pass a proposed retaliatory law.

Record deal parlayed into $20 million

CONRAD BLACK: Began with The Record.

VANCOUVER (CP) — David Radler likes profits and hot dogs.

Nine years ago Radler, with partners Conrad Black and Peter White, put together $20,000 to buy a money-losing daily newspaper in Quebec.

This week they sold their newspaper and printing interests to Maclean-Hunter Ltd. of Toronto in a deal which could be worth nearly $20 million.

"The Sherbrooke Daily Record was losing money at the rate of $100,000 a year when we bought it in June, 1969," Radler said in an interview Tuesday after the sale of Sterling Newspapers Ltd. was announced.

"In four months we made a profit and never looked back. And we never put another cent in it. All the purchases in the West were bank loans and the vendor taking paper (promissory notes)."

Radler, 35, who was a business consultant before the Sherbrooke purchase, has agreed to stay on as president of Sterling for six months or longer as Maclean-Hunter moves into the daily and weekly community newspapers field for the first time.

But he also is moving up the corporate ladder as Black, 33, takes control as chairman of the giant Argus Corp. Ltd. holding company.

EXPECT APPOINTMENT

Toronto sources indicate Radler is expected to be appointed to the board and executive committee of Crown Trust Co. of Toronto, which has assets of $1.184 billion under its administration. Black and Sterling bought a major interest in Crown Trust last spring.

In addition, Radler is expected to continue as president of Dominion Malling Ltd., a Winnipeg company with annual revenues of more than $20 million.

"I am now buying my first lunch in 10 years," he said half-seriously in Sterling's office in downtown Vancouver. "I don't own the petty cash any more."

Lunch at the paper-littered desk—only a constantly-used calculator was not buried—was two hot dogs with lemonade and two sandwiches for his visitors, bought by his secretary for less than $5 in Eaton's basement cafeteria.

"We have an affinity for Eaton's," an obvious reference to Black's close business relationship with Fredrik Eaton of Toronto.

The inexpensive hot dog lunch was in keeping with the image painted by some employees. "He's so tight, he squeaks," said an editor.

Maclean-Hunter is already Canada's largest publisher of national periodicals, with revenues of $175,283,000 in 1976, up from $151,678,000 in 1975. As well, it has wide interests in radio, television, cable television and book and periodical distribution.

With the Sterling purchase, the communications giant gains nine daily, nine weekly and two twice-weekly newspapers, close to 400 employees and a payroll of almost $7 million a year.

All the papers and printing facilities are in British Columbia with the exception of the Summerside Journal-Pioneer and two printing plants in Prince Edward Island. The Journal-Pioneer has the largest daily circulation at 11,500 copies and the Kimberley Daily Bulletin has the smallest at 2,000. Circulation of the weeklies ranges from 2,000 to 50,000.

LOOKED AT MOVE

Donald Campbell, chairman of Maclean-Hunter, said Tuesday in Toronto that the newspaper industry "is something we have looked at for years, but haven't been able to get into."

Campbell and Radler said no decision had been made on Sterling's recently-acquired interest in UPI of Canada. Sterling and Toronto Sun Publishing Corp. combined with UPI to set up a new company to provide a new news service with operational headquarters in Toronto.

Radler said the decision to sell Sterling was made eight weeks ago. Inquiries started to come in while control of Argus—the company whose holdings include control of Dominion Stores Ltd. and Massey-Ferguson Ltd.—swung over to Black. He said the investment firm of Green-shields Inc., was hired to co-ordinate offers.

Radler is optimistic about Sterling's future under Maclean-Hunter.

"They will give it more sophisticated management. We were quick and we used vestpocket methods. They will do better than we did."

Last summer Sterling sold the Sherbrooke Record—described by Radler as one of the most profitable papers—to Sherbrooke lawyer George MacLaren.

"I think he is doing as well, if not better, than we did. There is no reason why this can't continue in Sterling."

the townships in focus

"We were never consulted by anyone"

building at Butters has been condemned as a residence for the handicapped by provincial inspectors.

During this time, Butters' associate director Mary Camber, a daughter of founder Lucy Butters, had been searching for quarters suitable for a group home, close to stores, transportation and public sports and recreation services, since the Centre has 51 residents attending school in Magog and an as-yet-unspecified number who will be bused to the Gagnon and Garnier schools in Sherbrooke and to Alexander Galt.

In July, after having unsuccessfully sought to rent facilities, the Butters Foundation made an offer to purchase the Adelard St. duplex owned by Jean-Claude Tetreault. The offer was accepted.

News of the proposed purchase travelled fast; by July 10, 27 residents of the neighborhood around Adelard St. had signed a petition against the proposed Cecil Butters project, including Magog councillor Fernand Roy and well-known astrologer Henri (Le Grand Henri) Brousseau.

According to Michel Pare, who lives next door to the proposed group home, residents had no idea of the project until they heard that the Foundation had offered to buy the building.

"We still have no idea what they'll be doing there and who'll be living there," the four-month resident of Adelard St. told The Record. "All we've heard were rumors."

Yves Bergeron, who is just completing a new home opposite the proposed group home, said the first he'd heard of the home was from councillor Roy, who had told him he'd heard it from a fellow councillor.

"We weren't consulted; it doesn't matter if they don't have to. This home is going to affect our property values and the nature of the neighborhood and as far as I'm concerned, they had an obligation to ask us what we thought."

He said at least one of the signators of the petition was a lawyer and the group would consider a legal challenge of Bill 10 authorizing the setting-up of group homes if the council was unsuccessful in their appeal to the minister.

However, Butters Director-General Dallaire says Bill 10, the law adopted last December 17 which provides for the setting up of group homes, does not require the centre to seek permission from either the city or neighbors.

According to article 115 of the bill, no permit or municipal certificate can be withheld and no action can be taken to prevent the establishment of a group home, treatment centre or foster-family facilities. The article then states that it takes precedence over all other laws.

"...but do we want to move our residents into a hostile neighborhood," Dallaire asks. "We don't want to go to war with them. We have to live here."

But, he added, there is considerable pressure for the Butters Centre to begin moving its facilities to places like Cowansville and Foster, where adequate quarters are already available — and with the blessing of both the Ministry and local authorities.

The planned group home would house up to a dozen residents of the Butters Centre, under 24-hour supervision of a rotating staff. Residents would be carefully screened to exclude any with any hint of antisocial behavior, and every aspect of the group home's establishment would be overseen by a nine-member advisory committee formed from the Centre and the community.

The committee would be chaired by a president, who would be chosen by the committee from those members who do not work for the Centre. It would include a resident of the home, a parent or guardian of a resident, a director of professional services, a member of the Centre's administrative council, a staff member and four members of the community at large.

Another reason they want to stay in the vicinity of Magog is the 170 full or part-time employees of the Butters Centre who now hail from Magog.

While group homes could be established in the country, it is desirable from both rehabilitation and staffing viewpoints to locate in an urban area, Dallaire added.

With 287 employees for 245 residents, the Butters Centre is second in size only to Dominion Textile, and the centre has estimated that it injects $1.5 million in salaries and another $250,000 in purchases into the local economy.

If the centre was forced to move part of its operations deeper into Regions 6-C, many of these employees would not be able to afford the commuting and the city would definitely suffer, say spokesmen for the centre.

They're backed up in their arguments by the 250-member union which has represented Butters workers since 1973.

In a letter last week to Magog city council, union executives Laurent Bertrand and Therese Pelletier demanded to know what employment alternatives would be open to Butters workers from Magog if the Centre was forced to move its group-home operations elsewhere.

"It seems to us incomprehensible that a city council elected to direct and represent the interests of its citizens would come so lightly to such a decision," the letter read.

Without reflecting on the gravity of their decision, the council effectively has quashed any chances of a group home being established in Magog, it continued.

A mentally-handicapped person isn't a fool; he is merely someone who takes longer to learn than the rest of us and he needs the help of others to do so, the union executive wrote.

"Can one condemn these people to never being able to have a role in life out of pure self-interest," the letter demanded.

Union president Laurent Bertrand, a plumber at the Centre for nearly four years told The Record "the most important thing is to keep people working."

"It should be important for the mayor and the councillors as well, jobs should be defended, not thrown into jeopardy."

Judge refuses to protect Marion hideout

SHERBROOKE (AF) — Superior Court Judge Paul Gervais is the third judge in the Marion hearings to refuse a request to preserve the hole where Charles Marion was kept for 82 days last fall.

The request for preservation was previously refused at the preliminary-hearing level by Judge Benoit Turmel and later by Superior Court Judge Thomas Toth. The third request was presented in court by lawyer Jean-Pierre Rancourt on behalf of his client, alleged kidnapper Claude Valence. The hole which sequestered Marion in Canada's longest kidnapping is in danger of collapsing and only photographic evidence would remain.

Valence's second request was for a list indicating the nature and number of objects seized by police in a series of raids on a Notre-Dames des Bois hunting camp, the Valences' Fleurimont residence, their Lac Aylmer boat garage and tent and on a Weedon farm belonging to Benoit Valence.

The list was provided by prosecutor Thomas Walsh but Rancourt said the list was incomplete and asked the tribunal for an adjournment in order that the four policemen involved in the raids may be reached and asked to appear in court, swearing to the number and objects inscribed on the list.

Although Judge Gervais and Prosecutor Walsh failed to see the necessity, Walsh agreed himself to the transport of the objects to Sherbrooke from Montreal. The judge also declared himself agreeable to this and next Monday the objects in question, the list and possibly the four policemen will be examined.

Joffre viaduct receives aid

SHERBROOKE (GG) — Federal Transport Minister Otto Lang has promised the city of Sherbrooke an undetermined amount which will include a sum of $1,039,750 for repairs to be effected on the Joffre Bridge viaduct.

However, the city is still awaiting a letter from the Ministry of Transport advising it that it will receive a subsidy of $300,000, for certain works to the bridge.

If the $1,039,750 is added to the $300,000 and the $237,000 that Quebec has already made available, the City of Sherbrooke should receive at least $1,576,750 for the bridge and the Joffre viaduct.

This represents 50 per cent of the cost of the project, estimated at $3 million.

Stolen trailer found

LAVAL — It now appears that $92,000 worth of cigarettes is missing from the trailer stolen from the Sherbrooke yards of Roger Transport last Thursday morning. Detective Camille Vachon of the Sherbrooke criminal investigation bureau, travelled to Laval, where the trailer was abandoned, to verify the contents.

The thieves apparently were uninterested in the tobacco boxes, quantities of tires, candies and other merchandise.

Four or five masked bandits had stolen the trailer in the Leger St. yards after holding eight employees at gunpoint.

Construction to respect environment

QUEBEC (PT) — All road construction projects which fall under the jurisdiction of the Ministry of Transport will also have to be approved by the Environmental Protection Service, it was announced this week.

This directive covers a number of areas including the construction of an overpass of four lanes or wider, the construction of a road 75 km or longer designated to serve the rural areas, and all work which will impose some biophysical danger to the surrounding environment. All work must respect the quality of life by limiting air pollution and noise pollution while attempting to save historic sites.

The government says they will not tolerate any exceptions to these regulations.

Sun shareholders to meet

LENNOXVILLE — A meeting of the shareholders of the Townships Sun will be held on Saturday, August 26 at 1:30 p.m. in Room 161 of McGreer Hall at Champlain College (Bishop's University) in Lennoxville.

Labour board to resume hearing:

The Canada Labour Relations Board will resume its public hearings, adjourned August 15th on the five cases involving Radio-Mutuel stations across the province.

Syndicat des Travailleurs de l'Information de la Mauricie CJRT (CNTU), accredited negotiating agent, and CJTR Radio Trois-Rivieres, Trois-Rivieres, Quebec, employer, third on their list of interventions to be heard will be those concerning the Syndicat des Employes de CJMS (CNTU), accredited negotiating agent, and CJRS Radio Sherbrooke Limitee.

Public hearings will be held as of 10 a.m. this Friday at the Ritz Carlton Hotel's Vice-Regal Room, Montreal, and will be continued during the following weeks, starting Monday, August 28.

Third man arrested in drug probe

SHERBROOKE (AF) — A third man has been arrested in connection with last Friday's dismantling of a mini-factory used for the production of illicit drugs.

A Montreal detachment of the RCMP apprehended Keith Ennes, a 26-year-old Montrealer who was charged with possession of illicit arms and conspiracy to traffic. The case was heard in Montreal following last Friday's arrest of Peter Bradley, 28, and Bradford Nicol, 25, on a dead-end road in the woods near Eastman.

The 20-foot trailer laboratory was well-equipped and protected by three guard dogs and equipment to monitor police radio wavelengths. The hallucinogens seized are estimated to be worth up to $5 million on the street.

It is probable that the trials of the three arrested men be transferred to Granby from Montreal.

Stanstead fund hits $900,000

SHERBROOKE (AD) — So far, Stanstead College has raised $900,000 in its continuing drive to maintain its independence from the Quebec government and Bill 101.

The College has set a $5-million campaign objective. Speaking at a Rotary luncheon yesterday, Stanstead's Headmaster Jeremy Riley said the College "was putting out an upfront appeal across Canada and elsewhere to anyone who supported English education in Quebec."

A $5-million fund is necessary, he added, in order to cover recurring capital costs and to continue broadening a scholarship program to those meriting a superior education.

Stanstead College originally decided to embark on a fund campaign when it decided not to turn away approximately 35 students who were declared ineligible according to Bill 101. This meant the school stood to lose $200,000 in grants from the province.

"In keeping with our philosophy," Riley explained, "we decided to stay independent and continue to keep our doors open to those who consider English education as having value."

Quebec offers artists bursaries

Bursaries and visiting fellowships for artists are being offered by the Quebec government. Registration will take place between September 1 and Nov. 1, 1978. No candidacy will be accepted after the closing date indicated by the postal date. For more information contact Serge Christiaenssens at the Bureau Regional de l'Estrie, 740 Galt Ouest in Sherbrooke. Shades of Bedlam

Just about a month ago, 27 residents of the neighborhood around Adelard Street in Magog signed a petition protesting the establishment of a group home for the mentally handicapped in the area.

They had learned of the Butters Centre's plans to open the home the hard way — by word of mouth, rumor and gossip. They didn't know who was to be included in the home or what the Centre is trying to accomplish through the group home scheme — the only thing they knew was they didn't want one in their area.

We might disagree with their conclusions about the home, but we can't argue with their basic contention, that the Centre should have conferred with them before going ahead with the plan.

But there is no excuse for the actions of the Magog city council. Instead of trying to deal in diplomatic, civilized fashion with the horns of the dilemma, they took on all the trappings of a 19th-century lynch mob as they held what amounted to a kangaroo court for the Butters executives trying to explain what the group-home concept is all about.

In all fairness to the Butters directors, the law empowering the establishment of group homes doesn't even require them to go to the community for permission — Bill 10 overrides all other laws, bylaws and requirements.

What really bothers us about this feud isn't the possible loss of jobs in our area or the damaged relations. Far worse is the resurgence of the age-old belief that the mentally handicapped should be kept penned up like animals, out of the sight of decent folk.

With their shrill accusations that the Centre was 'parachuting' itself into the neighborhood, the councillors have called their own ethics into question. Is their indignation just an act for the upcoming municipal election? Do they remember how the Butters Centre backed their own efforts to keep La Providence a general hospital?

Thank God there are people at Butters who wouldn't accept the long-time arguments that their only task was to keep the residents quiet — any way they saw fit. We visited the Centre and its first group home Saturday, and saw the wonders love and attention can accomplish with people who spent years tied to their beds.

There's nothing sickening or hateful about the mentally retarded. But there is about the ignorance and groundless fears of supposedly responsible municipal authorities.

Lock 'em up

A generation or two ago, just about every boy on the block wanted to be a pilot. It was an age of derring-do and what could have been more swashbuckling than one of those knights of the air?

Now it's different. Almost all commercial airline pilots are airborne bus drivers, work-a-day gents (and now ladies) with all kinds of fail-safes and backup systems for themselves and their machines. Heck, we're safer in the air than on the ground, and the statistics bear it out.

Now they're going out on strike, just in time for one of the biggest travel periods in the Canadian year. Kids are coming home from summer jobs to see their parents, others are heading off to school, while for many others, the beginning of September marks the start of another business year.

Of course we wouldn't expect anyone to be stupid enough to strike at a time when it wouldn't inconvenience the public, but a pilots' strike (or flight attendants' or maintenance crews' strike; they're all looming) means just one more assault on the morale of the Average Canadian.

Forget Ottawa; all those barbs and problems have left those folks with hides like rhinos and unless the government considers it politically expedient, we'd better not hold our breath to see back-to-work legislation.

...so we're to suffer a total communications paralysis with the Air Canada walkout atop a threatened postal strike, all because of an outmoded labor-management concept which should have been dead 10 years ago.

There is a place for unions, sure. There is a place for management. But they should recognize that they share mutual interests; they're not supposed to be at each others' throats.

We'd say they've seen too much television and too many movies. We've said before and we repeat: The only way to deal with strikes in the public sector is to lock the negotiators into a room together until they reach a solution. No weekends, no quiet evenings — and no weapons. We'll bet they'd come to some form of agreement.

Letters

Editor:

It was with interest and annoyance that I read your recent editorial, "Good to be back" (Mon., Aug. 14). My husband I are very interested in increasing public awareness on the extended and indiscriminate use of industrial and agricultural chemicals and this includes the recent issue of roadside spraying with the herbicide 24D. For this reason we applaud the stand you and your paper are taking on this matter.

However, you have been over-exuberant. I'm afraid, in including us in your editorial - i.e., stating that we have 24D in our well and that I am pregnant. Also, did I detect a hint that we were supposed to be in a panic of sorts?

I understand that you wished to make a point and such a tidbit must have been quite a temptation, but my point is that I don't like to be used to make your point without my knowledge. At no time did David or I give you or a Record representative any statement concerning the above. Just because we are involved in the same "cause" doesn't mean you can intrude on our privacy. I have no objection to people knowing the above facts, but I'm objecting on principle.

Your source of information was correct, but I don't feel that it's good policy to publish facts and names on hearsay, without checking first with the people concerned. One reason is that one day your information may not be as reliable, and another reason is that you may miss interesting stories and leads, because people will hold their tongues when around you, never knowing if casual conversation will suddenly appear in print, as was the case this time.

I particularly resent the attributing of emotions to us of which you could not have possibly known since we have never met. Even though all water contamination is a source of concern, we are not more concerned than if I was not pregnant.

There are other points, in my opinion, which are more important. From the day the roadside was sprayed, we have not used our well for drinking or cooking purposes. Our reasoning was to be cautious, as we have a shallow well in an area that is slightly lower than the road, even though it is 300 feet away.

Water tests done 2 weeks later showed traces of 24D in the water. Since the only safe amount is no amount, particularly in pregnancy, we continued to drink water from another source.

What I am concerned about is that the smell was very strong for about five days (you can still detect it) and indeed the first day, the fumes made me quite ill. At that time I was in very early pregnancy and exposure to any chemical fume is undesirable, even if it's only paint.

Another cause for concern is that some people may have water contamination much worse than ours and not being aware of its possible effects, will not take the precautions we did. When the representative from Protection de L'Environnement came to take water samples, we asked if other requests had been made concerning this herbicide. He said that only one other person had at that time done so, out of concern for his orchard. This was two weeks after the spraying.

Also, there are people who may have some medical conditions such as chemical allergies, asthma, emphysema and other lung complaints, as well as very young babies and children, who stand a good chance of being very ill from the irritation of the fumes. Even though no spraying was done near houses, there was a good strong breeze the day of the spraying and for a few days following.

Because our house is not visible from the road, spraying was done straight through without interruption, right in the path of the prevailing wind, which would account for the presence of strong smells at our house, even though it is 500 ft. from the road with a row of trees in between. If it was possible to blow to our house, it could have blown to other houses where the above susceptible people live.

For almost a month, it was unpleasant walking or bicycling on our stretch of the road, which was sprayed almost uninterrupted for about one mile. The spraying was done up to 6 feet high in places, on each side of the road, making a tunnel of strong smell, as the thick brush on each side prevented good air circulation on the road itself.

The road, because of its abundance of shrubs and trees, teems with small animals and birds. There are many berries, including chokecherries, raspberries and gooseberries, as well as some varieties I am unfamiliar with. I once saw a bird eating some dried red berries on a shrub in wintertime. A good part of the food source is now destroyed, as it is often the closest to the roadside.

Another point to raise is the question of the purpose of the spraying. Was it to remove foliage? Well, it's still there, except we now have standing shrivelled brown foliage instead of healthy green. To remove foliage for fire safety? All that dried brush looks suspicious to me.

The road between Massawippi and Hatley was sprayed at the same time as all the other roads. The shrivelled growth was present for several weeks and then was mowed. If it was mowed under government directive, why wasn't it mowed to begin with?

Without our blessing

As well as being an environmental hazard - the stuff's expensive. With all the concern about unemployment and tight budgets, there should be another solution.

Last week I was in the area of Scotstown and Piopolis and along the roadways were crews cutting brush and roadside brush. It makes you wonder how come there wasn't any evidence of herbicides in all that area where houses are few and far between, although they were used extensively in the Massawippi Valley and other densely populated areas within uncomfortable close distance of major water bodies such as Lake Massawippi and Memphremagog. The herbicide will find its way to the lake eventually as anybody who remembers elementary school geography will know. Almost all water in this area eventually drains into Lake Massawippi. Most organic and biodegradable substances are absorbed or purified along the way, but herbicides and insecticides are man-made chemicals and they will be present in the water of the Lake indefinitely once getting there. The amounts will accumulate year after year and the results cannot help but be anything but tragic.

I think the point that should be stressed is not so much the application of the herbicides this year by the government (though it's bad enough), but the irresponsibility of the people involved in the decision. We must also remember that we still have a democratic government, and therefore governments are still susceptible to public pressure - even though you have to persist.

It's impossible that we continue to use chemical products indiscriminately as has been done and is now being done. If this persists, our grandchildren and perhaps our children will inherit phenomenal problems. Already, some crops and insects are becoming resistant to all known chemicals, forcing people to turn to methods that have been successfully used before the advent of the modern chemical.

There are quite a few examples of the use of integrated control which uses a wide variety of techniques to combat a complex problem with minimal or no insecticide and herbicides - Here is one example: California was waging a battle against the grape leaf hopper who after many years, has become resistant to chemicals. Agricultural research showed that the anargous wasp was once a natural enemy of the leaf hopper. The wasp in turn, lived on blackberry vines, which had all been destroyed by weeds. Blackberries are now being re-introduced to vineyards and the wasps are keeping the leaf hoppers well below the problem level.

The philosophy of people and governments should be to at least try other means before reverting to chemicals, and then to at least use some of the less harsh ones and use them responsibly. Ideally it would be better to use none at all, but it could be a start at any rate.

Much research is now being done in the United States to find more natural insect and weed control. They started using chemicals before we did and are now having problems before we do. We should learn from their errors and avoid the same instead of assuming that they'll solve all the problems for us. What if one day they can't?

Having purged myself of my grievance, and having aired some of my thoughts on the matter, I feel we can once more get on with the job and work together if necessary. Keep up the good work.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Energy czar Schlesinger cool on commonsense oil scheme

by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Energy czar Schlesinger cool on commonsense oil scheme

WASHINGTON — Energy Secretary James Schlesinger, who often acts more like a crotchety tycoon than a Cabinet secretary, is trying to scotch a scheme that would reduce U.S. dependence on Arab oil.

The proposal would move West Coast crude from the oil saturated Western states to the oil starved East Coast. President Carter is so intrigued with the idea that he has asked for a detailed study.

But Jimmy Carter's opinions apparently do not carry a lot of weight in James Schlesinger's energy shop. Despite the president's interest, the energy czar and his chief acolyte, John O'Leary, have already proclaimed their displeasure with the plan.

Such an audacious display of defiance is perfectly in keeping with Schlesinger's character. As one of our sources put it, "Whatever he thinks is right is the way it's going to be." The opinions of others — be they presidents, congressmen or taxpayers — are largely immaterial.

Indeed, it was Schlesinger's insistence on marching to his own drummer that provoked former President Gerald Ford into firing him as secretary of defense. On Capitol Hill, he refuses to slap backs and bend elbows in the back rooms. His aloof, even haughty demeanor so irritates some lawmakers that they end up shouting at him. Thus it is not surprising that Schlesinger would come out foursquare against a proposal in which the president himself has expressed great interest.

The idea, originated by the New England Petroleum Company (NEPCO), calls for millions of barrels of West Coast oil to be transported to the Bahamas, where it would be refined and shipped on to dealers in the Eastern United States. But the proposal, if enacted, would apply to other American-owned companies with refineries in the Bahamas.

Experts believe the export-import scheme would shave millions of dollars off the balance of trade deficit and reduce U.S. reliance on foreign oil imports. The president's top domestic adviser, Stuart Eizenstat, saw merit in the plan and asked Carter to sign a memo to Schlesinger requesting an in-depth analysis.

At the Energy Department, in-house experts had previously examined the export-import plan, found it feasible and determined that objections to it were "entirely political." But Schlesinger and O'Leary had already made up their minds they didn't like export-import. Shortly after the Carter memo arrived on Schlesinger's desk, a DOE press release announced the department was "rejecting" the whole idea.

The president's request for an intensive briefing on the export-import plan was still pending when O'Leary, a few days later, told a congressional committee that Carter supported their opposition to the proposal.

This bewildered a number of lawmakers who had been told that the White House was "actively considering" the export-import scheme. Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., went so far as to express his dismay over the Schlesinger-O'Leary maneuver to the president.

The White House will answer Cranston and other legislators, presumably, when it receives the DOE analysis, which is finally being prepared — two months after it was requested.

Footnote: We are unable to report why Schlesinger and O'Leary are opposed to the plan because neither DOE nor White House officials have returned our repeated phone calls.

She is remembered in the national capital for her devotion to nuclear energy and to her dogs. Her canine companions — a Scottish elkhound named Gillie and a French poodle called Jock — used to accompany her in stately splendor aboard her black government limousine. Her government aides were also occasionally pressed into service as dog sitters.

There are a few officials who wonder nostalgically what happened to Gillie and Jock. But if they have lost account of Dixy's dogs, they may be relieved to know that her nuclear views are as implacable as ever.

She didn't like a recent congressional subcommittee report, which criticized the escalating costs of nuclear power. So she fired off a private letter to Chairman Leo Ryan, D-Calif., expressing her displeasure.

The congressional study, she wrote, was "biased," "inaccurate" and "highly opinionated." The American people should not be "spoon-fed" information, she added bluntly, "influenced" by "emotional reports" which were "inadequate."

The riled Ryan shot back a reply, informing Dixy that he regretted she was "unaware of the facts." The public, wrote Ryan, is tired of energy decisions dictated by "special, vested interests" and "outdated traditional government policies."

Ten years ago: Shame still remembered

Ten years ago Sunday, Warsaw pact forces marched into Czechoslovakia to crush the "Prague Spring" liberalization drive of the Czech Communist leadership. From Geneva, where he is based, an Associated Press reporter who covered most of the Prague Spring and its aftermath wrote this re-construction based on documents, top-level eyewitness accounts, and his own recollections.

In Czechoslovakia, 10 years ago, the crisis seemed over.

True, there had been jeers at Walter Ulbricht of East Germany, a key opponent of Prague's concept of "socialism with a human face."

But at the end of an all-day summit meeting at Bratislava on Aug. 3, 1968, Leonid Brezhnev had bearhugged Alexander Dubcek, the reformist Czech Communist party chief, as "Dear Comrade Sasha."

And the joint communique spoke no longer of a counter-revolutionary threat in Czechoslovakia. It pledged signers to respect "equality, sovereignty, national independence and territorial integrity."

It also, however, spoke of a "joint international duty" to protect socialist achievements—a phrase not clearly appreciated then.

"You can now calmly leave for Switzerland," Foreign Minister Jiri Hajek told me. He, too, left on a holiday. It ended brutally.

Moscow, as it turned out later, had prepared months before to use force, if necessary, against the Prague reformers whose liberal ideas had struck a responsive chord among the New Left in the West but also threatened to stir new restiveness in the Soviet bloc.

"MANOEUVRES" LONG Logistics had been prepared as early as June by thousands of Russian signal troops and other expert units, who were in Czechoslovakia for Warsaw pact "staff manoeuvres" that went three weeks over schedule.

New Russian "manoeuvres" began on the border Aug. 11, but few Czechs worried. Two days earlier, they had welcomed President Tito of Yugoslavia, the maverick Communist, on a euphoria-filled visit.

On Aug. 17, civilian-clad specialists of the Russian military intelligence arrived in Prague aboard a special Aeroflot airliner to make contact with pro-Moscow Czech agents.

In Moscow, the party central committee had given the order to march. Then, shortly before 11 p.m., Tuesday, Aug. 20, about 200,000 Soviet, East German, Bulgarian, Polish and Hungarian soldiers supported by armor crossed into Czechoslovakia at almost 20 border points.

An Antonov-24 pathfinder plane had landed at Prague's Ruzyně Airport with electronic gear to direct transports. They arrived regularly after midnight, spilling out light armor and elite airborne units.

The Czechoslovak party presidium, meeting with Dubcek in Communist headquarters, received the first word shortly before midnight through a telephone call from Defence Minister Martin Dzur.

After things calmed down somewhat, the leaders drew up a proclamation for broadcast over Prague radio, branding the invasion as incompatible "with the principles of international law."

But, it said, armed resistance was "now impossible."

Meanwhile, the streets had begun to come alive with flagwaving people, and police cars, their sirens shrieking.

Shortly before dawn, red-bereted paratroops of the Red Army's Tamansker elite division drove up in three armored vehicles at party headquarters, surrounded the building and rushed upstairs, guns ready. A black Soviet embassy Volga sedan had shown them the way.

N.S. Premier Regan counting on economy

HALIFAX (CP) — After four years of struggling with high unemployment, inflation and soaring energy costs, Premier Gerald Regan of Nova Scotia is counting on an upsurge in the provincial economy and has chosen to fight the Sept. 19 election campaign on economic issues.

The timing of the election announcement last week coincided with a dramatic jump in the consumer price index and a continuing high level of unemployment. But Regan maintains that national and international economic aberrations aside, Nova Scotia's economic performance has led the way in the Atlantic region and is on the road to recovery.

In the coming weeks the government promises to announce long range programs designed to create new employment and set the course for the province's development over the next 15 years.

"We've had difficult years in relation to the economy but this hasn't been a Nova Scotian problem," admits Regan, whose Liberal government is seeking its third straight term.

"It's been a problem of the country, North America, indeed the free world. Every citizen realizes that it's not the doing of any provincial government."

SELF-CREATED ISSUES

John Buchanan, Conservative and opposition leader, says "there is no doubt" that the economy, inflation and power rates are the essential issues in the campaign. "But they are issues because the provincial government made them issues."

However, Buchanan says he is prepared to wage the campaign on these issues. Regan took some of the steam out of one issue by announcing in early August that his government would cover much of a recent 16-to-18-per-cent power rate increases until two coal fired generators come on stream in 1980.

The premier says new orders for the Sydney Steel Corp. have stabilized employment at that cornerstone industry, the Hawker Siddeley car works in Trenton has long-term orders and coal is "coming on like gangbusters."

But New Democrats argue that economic stability can only be achieved through the formulation of a clear economic blueprint.

With the government choosing the state of the province's economy as its battleground, observers here expect the election will be closely watched by the federal Liberals whose campaign may hinge on the same issue.

Peacekeepers: Patience wears thin

ISMAILIA, Egypt (CP) — Canadian peacekeeping forces patrol the hot and dusty buffer zones between Israel and her Arab neighbors with never-ceasing vigilance.

In temperatures sometimes reaching 40 degrees Celsius, patience occasionally wears thin. Canadian officers of the United Nations Emergency Force approaching Egyptian checkpoints have had guns pointed at them, have been searched at gunpoint and have had guns fired over their heads.

A UN bus was stopped by an Egyptian guard with a menacing sub-machine-gun at a checkpoint leading to the Sinai Desert. A Canadian escort officer jumped out to confer with the guards and was led away.

After an hour's conference, the Canadian returned to the bus, picked up a copy of Playboy magazine and handed it to the guards. The crisis was over. The grinning guards waved the bus on.

UN engineers are kept busy locating unexploded mines which turn up in Egyptian buffer zones. Camp El Gala, the Canadian base outside Cairo, is fairly comfortable but the heat can be all but intolerable and flies pester and bite the servicemen.

TOWN CHAOTIC

The wail of Moslems at prayer resounds through the camp by day and night.

Nearby Ismailia is a chaotic maze of narrow, dirty streets and open shops where visitors can haggle over the price of curries.

Bullocks, sheep and donkeys parade through the streets. Black-clad women walk down the roads balancing bales or large trays on their heads. Turbaned, white-robed men carry umbrellas to ward off the scorching rays of the sun.

In the midst of the heat and turmoil, a woman visitor must keep a shawl or jacket over her sun dress. Bare shoulders are taboo.

Life is lonely for the 125 Canadians posted at the UN peacekeeping post on the Golan Heights, especially when the new allotment of movies is late arriving. During the cool evenings, they busy themselves building patios around the officers' and junior messes, rebuilt from ruins left by the last Israeli-Syrian clash.

POOL REOPENED

This summer, the base's commanding officer, Maj. Al Guard of Vancouver, reopened the swimming pool. It was closed by his predecessor last summer because neighboring Iranian troops were jumping into the water to wash their clothes.

"This year the Iranians are co-operating 100 per cent and I don't foresee any difficulties," Guard said.

A cloud of uneasiness hovers over the camp despite the Canadians' easy banter. They are surrounded by reminders of past battles—walls pockmarked with bullets, shells of buildings and a gravemarker by a white cross half-hidden under the trailing branch of a tree. There is no name on the cross.

Before they were driven off in June, 1967, the Syrians used the heights to shell Israeli villages in the Hula and Jordan valleys and attempted to divert the Jordan River, Israel's main water supply.

Mindful of their strategic importance, Israeli troops on the peak of Mount Hermon, also captured in 1967, keep constant watch on the Canadian camp with high-powered telescopes.

"You feel you're under a microscope with those things focused down here," said a young private. "Sometimes you almost think they can hear everything you say."

Visser-Wallis wed

A pretty summer wedding took place on July 15, 1978 at the Dixville Community Baptist Church, when Mrs. Janet Mulder Visser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Mindert Mulder of Britsum, Holland and widow of the late Klaas Visser, became the bride of Calvin Eric Wallis, son of the late Orson Wallis of Dixville and Mrs. Lottie Wallis of Coaticook, Que.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. James Gibson of Waterville, Que. and Mr. John Neufeld of Dixville. Mr. Billy Visser, youngest son of the bride, sang two solos "The Lord's Prayer" at the beginning of the ceremony and "The Wedding Prayer" during the signing of the register. The organist was Mrs. John Dykstra of Huntingville, Quebec. The guests pews were decorated with sweet peas and blue bells. Vases of shasta daisies also decorated the church.

The bride, given in marriage by her oldest son, Mr. John (Jopie) Visser of Acton, Ont., wore a floor length gown of ivory nylon satin with long sleeves, pleated skirt and a low cut bodice trimmed with rhinestones, with a white wide brimmed hat. Her jewellery was a gold heart shaped necklace centered with a diamond (gift of the groom) and earrings. Her bouquet was yellow carnations and orange roses in the shape of a half moon.

Miss Ruth Nelson of Norton, Vermont, as matron of honour, the bride's only attendant, wore a floor-length gown with long sleeves of peach polyester chiffon over taffeta skirt and trimmed with white lace. Her hat was a peach wide-brimmed hat with yellow flowers. Her bouquet was yellow carnations and orange roses.

The bride's mother, Mrs. Mindert of Britsum, Holland, wore a street length dress of blue flowered rayon silk with black accessories. Her corsage was of pink roses.

Mrs. Jeltze Visser, mother-in-law of the bride, chose a street length dress of blue polyester silk with pleated skirt and corsage of pink roses.

Mrs. Lottie Wallis, mother of the groom, was in a street length dress of peach knitted polyester with matching jacket and brown accessories. Her corsage was of yellow roses.

Mr. Gerald Wallis of Richmond, Que., brother of the groom, acted as best man. The ushers were Mr. Allan Blokzi of Welland, Ont., and Mr. Jerry Wallis of Knowlton, Que. nephew of the groom.

The reception was held at the Legion Hall in Ayer's Cliff where a buffet-style supper was served to a 120 guests by the Legion Auxiliary. The head table was decorated with summer flowers and centered with a three tiered wedding cake.

The master of ceremonies was Mr. Jack Agema of St. Blaise, Que. Dancing was enjoyed in the evening with music by the Jack Agema Family Band and taped music by Mr. John Dykstra of Huntingville.

Before leaving, the bride changed into a sleeveless street dress of white flowered knit polyester and a corsage of red roses.

Among the guests were the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Mindert Mulder, and two brothers, Mr. Dirk Mulder and Mr. Mindert Mulder Jr. of Britsum, Holland. Also Mr. John Visser, brother-in-law of the bride, from Indonesia. Others came from Maine, Vermont in the U.S., Nova Scotia, Welland, Guelph, Dunnville Acton, Bancroft in Ontario and Shawville, Richmond, Stanstead, Rock Island, Way's Mills, St. Blaise, Huntingville, Sherbrooke and the surrounding district of Dixville.

88th Birthday

HUNTINGVILLE (RR) - On Sunday, Aug. 13, about 30 relatives and former neighbours gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Sutor, to wish Melville Brown a happy 88th birthday. A nephew, Mr. Robert Sutor, brought the guest of honor from Lennoxville, after taking him for a drive to familiar places in the vicinity.

As guests arrived, punch was served by Dianne and Nancy Sutor (grandnieces of uncle Mel).

In reminiscing, Mel's thoughts went back to when he farmed on the home farm at Ives Hill.

About 4 o'clock a delicious lunch was served by some of the younger relatives. It included sandwiches, cheese, cookies and squares, ice cream, tea and coffee and of course a birthday cake with candles, made by a grandniece, Nancy Sutor. Inscribed on the cake was "Happy Birthday, Mel."

After lunch he opened his birthday gifts which included a wrist watch from the relatives, and sweets and currency from friends. He read the greetings on the cards (with no glasses) and a little help from a niece.

All gathered on the lawn for pictures and a chat before saying goodbye and wishing Mr. Brown continued good health.

SHERBROOKE, QUE.

Sally Ann wife

"We've come a long way"

LONDON (CP) - Forty years ago, at a Salvation Army meeting in Montreal, a young Canadian girl, partly influenced by the young cadet leading the meeting, decided the Army was for her.

The cadet, Arnold Brown, went on to become territorial commander for Canada and Bermuda and now, general of the three-million-strong mission.

The young girl? She became his wife.

"It was during a meeting he was leading, a few years before we met, that I was led to God. It was rather an interesting thing, and it was only on reflection years later that we realized this," said Jean Brown.

The general has just seen the end of a busy first year in his new post, and his wife, born in Amherst, N.S., has been with him all the way.

"I always support my husband, whatever he does, because I believe that makes for the perfect marriage and that's how the Army works," she said.

The couple has just finished an extensive tour of New Zealand and Australia and seen the close of the international congress, which occurred here, celebrating the 100th anniversary of the Salvation Army, originally known as the Christian Mission.

YEAR HAS BEEN FULL

"It has been a full year, challenging and fulfilling. There were moments when I felt I couldn't do it, and I know in my own strength I never could, but I know that I have been divinely upheld by comrades and friends," said Mrs. Brown, 62.

Speaking of the congress, she said: "It has been exhilarating, really wonderful; worth, I think, all the hard work and the effort that went into it. It was good to meet together and to feel that oneness of spirit."

The next thing lined up for the couple is a visit to Canada in September where they will attend an annual congress at Toronto and Vancouver.

A small, gracious, dedicated woman, Jean Brown was brought up with the Army way of life. Both parents were officers but, she emphasizes, "that does not make me a Salvationist."

"It's a personal decision." Apart from accompanying her husband at meetings, Mrs. Brown, as world president of all the women's organizations, has her own work.

This is totally her responsibility without interference from the general. "Of course, we have our orders and regulations printed by the authority of the general, which I would never work outside of, but otherwise I work on my own," she said.

SHE HAS MANY DUTIES

Her other duties include writing letters to retired officers; writing in magazines, which includes an abbreviated form of the monthly reports she receives from the 82 countries in which the Army operates; responsibility for maintenance of two residences for retired officers in Britain.

"And every time I go on tour with my husband, I conduct a women's rally and try to meet with various groups—the Nurses Fellowship, League of Mercy or Home League."

Speaking of the women's work throughout the Army, Mrs. Brown said: "I think we've come a long, long way. We are advancing. I believe in women pulling their own weight, and the golden opportunities are there although some women are afraid to take them."

But, she added cautiously, "there's always room for improvement." "Beware when you are content."

The general's wife, who has been a full-time officer, housewife and mother of two daughters, now married, said: "I've never had any help. Even now I haven't any. I do all my housework, don't ask me how I do it. I'm dead!"

How, if she has any, does she spend spare time? "I enjoy music very much. I used to enjoy athletics, too, but the years bring their changes. There isn't time for it now."

Ann Landers says

Dull clods will catch on

Dear Ann Landers: I just heard a fascinating program on the radio. Unfortunately, I tuned in too late to catch the identity of the person speaking, but he came up with some interesting facts that I'd like to pass along.

First: It is not true that women are worse drivers than men. Their safety record is better - up until the age of 65. Then they are about even.

Fifty per cent of all fatal traffic accidents are alcohol-related.

The best drivers in the world are the Swedes. The Japanese come in second. Tied for third place are the Americans and the British. The booby prize goes to the Italians. They are the worst. The French are not much better.

In the United States, the poorest drivers are physicians - and among them, psychiatrists have 25 per cent more crackups than surgeons. The best drivers are laborers. Why? Nobody seems to know - I Never Ride If I Can Walk.

Dear Never: Your signature was also good advice.

Walking is not only healthier than riding, it is also safer. And in the same vein, your chances for survival are greater if you travel by air than by car. (That last statement should be especially noted by the white-knuckle crowd.) Thanks for the fill-in.

Dear Ann Landers: May I unload my pet gripe on you? I speak for thousands of secretaries across the land. It's the telephone manners of people who call the boss.

Some of the callers phone several times a day. They start off with, "Is HE there?" or "Where is HE?" "May I talk to HIM?"

Although they know us well they never ask, "How are you?" or call us by name. Of course we get no "Please" or "Thank you."

How do we deal with such people? - Hired Hands

Dear Hands: Nothing accentuates rudeness like courtesy. Put extra honey in your voice and pour it on.

When asked, "Is HE there?" reply, "Good morning, --. Yes, Mr. J is here, I'll put you through right away. One moment, please."

Even the dullest clod will catch on - eventually.

Dear Ann Landers: This letter is for "Frothing In Fesno," who objected to cards that include the names of family pets along with the children.

It is apparent that "Frothing" does not have a pet, doesn't like pets, and is envious of people who enjoy them.

Friends frequently send my cat, Minerva, cards and gifts on her birthday and on holidays. Relatives always inquire about her and extend greetings when they phone.

Minerva received a letter from the daughter of a former President of the United States, a note from the secretary of a U.S. Senator written on behalf of his own cat, and many cards from people of high station. Some days Minerva gets more mail than I do.

I hope "Frothing's" friends quit sending cards and letters. She doesn't deserve a word. - Minerva's Gramma

Dear Gramma: I hope Frothing sees your letter and is properly chastened. She's got some nerve knocking a family pet. Take that and that and that, you old meanie!

Zucchini and Tomatoes are in Season

Include some tomatoes in your menu planning. They're in season and priced to fit your budget. Add zucchini to the tomatoes, and you've got a great combination.

Zucchini, with their dark green colour and slim shape, do not require peeling. Therefore, since all the vitamins and minerals are concentrated in the peel, you don't throw away any of the benefits. And there is very little loss in the preparation of zucchini, making them very economical.

Prepare some zucchini slices with garlic, or minced onion and diced tomato. For a change, add yogurt, and serve it cold or heat at a low setting. They're also delicious dressed with bechamel sauce. For a real treat, cut the zucchini lengthwise, spread margarine on each half, sprinkle with spices and parmesan cheese, and broil until golden brown.

No matter how you choose to serve zucchini, they make a delicious change of pace for any meal. How about a zucchini omelet?

Simply fry 4 to 5 zucchini slices in oil, beat 4 eggs, and pour the eggs over the squash. Then, cook at low heat, sprinkle with cheese, and broil.

Alternate layers of zucchini with meat, tomato sauce, and slices of cheese. Cook in the oven.

Bernier crew's two-year voyage far from over

OFF ALASKA — Ice conditions delayed the start of the third phase of Arctic Expedition 74 degrees North, but since July 21, when the sailboat "J.E. Bernier II" left Tuk in the Mackenzie Delta, everything has been going smoothly. The latest news from the expedition's leader, Captain Real Bouvier, shows that the

35-footer, smallest vessel in history to have crossed the Northwest Passage, is now located at the top of Prudoe Bay, Alaska, and is heading to Point Barrow, the state's most northern point. There are only 500 miles to navigate from Tuk to Point Barrow, but the Bernier is encountering heavy ice conditions in the last phase of the expedition. This year's thaw came 15 days later than normally expected, and ice conditions are not as good as last year.

The sailboat's five-man crew experienced varied types of ice conditions in the Beaufort Sea, but was able to sail 90 miles from Tuk to film oil rigs and to take water samples, as a part of the expedition's initial scientific program.

Some 3,000 miles will remain, after Point Barrow, before the Bernier reaches Vancouver. The bad ice conditions will have disappeared, but the crew is bracing itself for a few big storms, lots of rain and fog as the North Pacific in September is rarely calm.

Up until now, everything has been running smoothly aboard the vessel. Spirits are high and the boat itself seems to have weathered well. It has been completely repainted and new instruments have been installed. These are: a RDF (Radio Direction Finder), a wind indicator and a ship's log.

Upon arrival in Vancouver, the "J.E. Bernier II" will have navigated some 8,500 miles since it left Lachine in the summer of 1976. When it docked alongside a small quay at Tuktoyatuk, on September 12, 1977, it became the 15th sailboat in history to have crossed the Northwest Passage.

Of greater significance, the crew of four returned from this Arctic expedition with more than 40,000 feet of 16mm film, 6,000 photographs, interesting scientific data for researchers at McGill University, Université du Québec and of the Oceanographic Institute of Bedford, Nova Scotia, and further published some 30 articles concerning northern development and the voyage itself.

It may be recalled that the first objective of the expedition was to improve the public awareness of the development of the Arctic or, at least, to make these inaccessible and relatively unknown regions more familiar to the public. The members of the expedition are hoping to fulfil these aims with the help of films, photographs and the publication of articles in addition to one or two books. It should be mentioned that, by naming their sailboat J.E. Bernier II, the organizers of the expedition wanted to honor that famous Quebec seafarer, Joseph-Elzéar Bernier, the first Canadian navigator of Arctic waters, who established Canada's sovereignty over this part of its territory.

After spending her first season exploring the coast of Greenland and her second one sailing 2,000 miles through the Northwest Passage, the J.E. Bernier II will tackle Alaska this summer. In the Beaufort Sea, the crew's objective among others, will be to observe the oil explorations and study their effects on the native peoples.

Marie-Eve Thibault and Jacques Pettigrew, who were part of the crew of the "J.E. Bernier II" since she left Montreal, have given up their berths on this summer's voyage in order to spend their time working on the film of the expedition.

Marie-Eve says a preliminary film has already been produced in conjunction with the Institut de cinema du Québec. In its final version, the film will be reduced to one hour. Sequences now being filmed by the crew will complete the production.

The members of the crew are: Real Bouvier, 32, journalist and captain of the boat since the beginning of her voyage. This native of Longueuil also conceived the expedition.

Marc Paquette, 33, is an architect and sailor. He has a vast experience in ocean sailing and will be the ship's first mate. He is from Quebec City.

Pierre Bedard, 30, has a degree in geology and in environmental sciences. He is also a keen botanist. It will be his second summer as chief scientist for the expedition. Pierre will also be responsible for the photography this summer. He is from Lachute.

James Gray, 29, is a professional film producer. He will replace Jacques Pettigrew as cameraman. He is a keen sailor and navigator and has even built a sailboat himself. Of Irish stock, he was born in Lachine.

Lee Brock, 31, is a biologist and a medical doctor. He has just completed a specialized degree in ophthalmology. He will be assistant to Pierre Bedard and will concentrate especially on the health problems of the native populations. Lee was born in New York and has lived in Quebec for the past five years. He has practiced medicine in Central Africa, Kenya and Botswana, and in Frobisher Bay, in the Northwest Territories.

The composition of the crew, as may be realized, was aimed more at bringing back documents and significant data for availability to the general public than merely for the sake of adventure.

Prior to this voyage, Gray, Bedard and Brock travelled on a tug between Great Slave Lake and Tuk. They then travelled 1,200 miles on the Mackenzie River taking films and photographs.

This third phase of the Expedition 74 degrees North has been made possible by the financial assistance of the National Film Board; of Direct Film, which this year again has supplied the 35mm rolls of film and will be responsible for their processing; of Dome Petroleum of Calgary, which will take care of the transportation of part of the crew from Edmonton to Tuk; of the Societe des transports du Nord Ltee, which has made it possible for the sailboat to spend the winter in Tuk; of the Peintures International; of Wood's Clothing, and of Gutta-Percha, of Farnham, a rubber goods manufacturer.

Upon arriving in Vancouver October 15 next, the decision will be made concerning the fourth phase of the trip: The return to Montreal. It may be recalled that the "J.E. Bernier II" was built near Montreal. She was designed by Robert Dufour, of Laval. The expedition has been organized under the auspices of the Arctic Institute of North America.

Four of the five-man crew of the J.E. Bernier II are photographed in Montreal just prior to leaving for the high Arctic and Phase III of Expedition of 74-Degrees North. Left to right are Real Bouvier, captain of the J.E. Bernier II; Lee Brock, biologist and medical doctor;

James Gray, cameraman; and Marc Paquette, first mate. Missing from the photograph is Pierre Bedard, photographer and ecologist. The route taken by the J.E. Bernier II to date is the solid line; the projected circumnavigation is shown by the broken line.

MELBOURNE
Mrs. John Wilkins
826-2130

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. H.W. Dapp were Mr. D.J. MacSweyn and Miss Mindy MacSweyn of Bathurst, N.B.
Mrs. Fred Fleck, Mr. and Mrs. H.W. Dapp and Mr. and Mrs. John Wilkins attended a picnic for a number of relatives from Barre, Vt., on the lawn of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Wilkins at Melbourne Ridge on Saturday, August 19. Mrs. Lyall Parisseau of Lennoxville and Mrs. Byron Thorneo and daughter Karen of Cookshire were also present. The relatives from Vermont were Mr. and Mrs. Dean Hill, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Hill and sons Raymond and Michale. A most pleasant afternoon was spent.
Mr. Douglas McGee of Sherbrooke and Mr. and Mrs. John Cobb and daughter Christine of Woodsville, N.B., were weekend guests of Mrs. W.J. Fleming.

Experts: New pope by Monday

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Experts estimate that the conclave of Roman Catholic cardinals will elect a successor to Pope Paul VI by Monday, the third day of balloting.

"We look for a peaceable conclave," said Msgr. George Leonard, an aide to Cardinal Basil Hume of Britain. "There are no vibrations of tensions or feelings boiling up. It should be over by lunchtime Monday."

Although the 11 conclaves held in the last 150 years averaged about 11 days, the six previous ones in the 20th century averaged only three days of balloting. The shortest was in 1939, when Pius XII was elected in one day, but he went into the conclave the big favorite. No one is in that position this time.

Msgr. Leonard spoke at a news conference along with Rev. Paul Boyle, superior general of the Passionist Fathers, and two Jesuits, Revs. Vincent O'Keefe and Donal Campion.

SEES NO STRUGGLE

"With no sign of struggle and without the likelihood of the cardinals getting into a situation in which small swing votes become controlling, I would also guess it would be over by noon Monday," said Father Campion.

The cardinals will be locked into the conclave area of the Apostolic Palace after a prayer service and procession Friday afternoon. Voting four times a day will begin Saturday.

There had been some speculation earlier that the voting would be prolonged, due to the widely expanded international representation among the cardinals, the lack of an outstanding favorite and the controversy among the church membership over such issues as the ban on artificial contraception, priestly celibacy and modernization of the church ritual.

But comments from several cardinals indicated a general middle-ground accord among them, an agreement on firm adherence to doctrine but with latitude in methods of applying it.

COST SECRET

Although the Vatican Curia guards its figures on the cost of the conclave as zealously as it guards the Vatican's budget, some experts estimate it will cost about $5,500 a day after the doors are locked. This will include food for the 111 cardinals and about 80 aides and overtime pay for the lay employees among them. Setting up the conclave cost thousands more for materials and about 100 union workers who collected a lot of overtime.

The Vatican is expected to make it all back and a handsome profit as well from special issues of postage stamps, medals and coins inscribed in Latin "Sede Vacante" for the "vacant see" between popes. They are collectors' items.

In 1963, after the death of Pope John XXIII, $600,000 was realized from the sale of sede vacante stamps.

The Vatican announced Tuesday that a 500-lire silver coin to mark the "sede vacante" will go on sale in September—after the sede is no longer vacant — at a price of 5,000 lire, or about $5.95. It will have a dove, the symbol of the Holy Spirit, on one side and the coat of arms of Jean Cardinal Villot of France, the acting head of the Vatican between popes, on the other.

Guerrillas storm Nicaraguan palace

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — About 20 Left-wing guerrillas seized the Nicaraguan National Palace after a gun battle with guards Tuesday and took scores of officials and legislators hostage, including a nephew and cousin of President Anastasio Somoza, a presidential spokesman reported.

Archibaldo Arostegui, a presidential spokesman, said he had reports that four persons were killed in a two-hour shootout between the guerrillas and government troops in this Central American city.

The guerrillas issued a statement to news media saying they demanded release of all political prisoners in the country, safe-conduct passes out of Nicaragua for the political prisoners and the attackers, and $10 million in cash.

The presidential spokesman identified the Somoza son inside the building as Jose Somoza Abrego, 32, a legislator in the Chamber of Deputies.

A Red Cross spokesman reported one hostage telephoned and said at least 15 persons were wounded when the guerrillas burst into the palace firing at guards, and in the gun battle that followed with national guardsmen. The spokesmen expressed fear that several persons had been killed.

A presidential source said a number of aides were urging Somoza to take a tough stance against the guerrillas.

The four dead were believed to be soldiers.

Sadat rules out partial accord

CAIRO (Reuters) — President Anwar Sadat, preparing for his summit meeting with the leaders of Israel and the United States, ruled out partial agreements Tuesday and repeated that there will be no permanent peace in the Middle East until the Palestinian problem is solved.

Sadat spoke at a party meeting in his home town, Talaa, in the Nile Delta.

Sadat said that when he meets President Carter and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin at Camp David, Md., on Sept. 5 he will strive for permanent peace, based on justice.

Sadat ruled out any prospect of a unilateral agreement with Israel—a suggestion already voiced by Begin.

"There is no room whatsoever for partial solutions, unilateral settlements or a third disengagement," Sadat said.

English lack cost job

HULL, Que. (CP) — A local woman, who says she lost her job as a security guard at a federal government building because she could not speak English, has complained to the Quebec labor department that her firing violated Bill 101, the province's Charter of the French Language.

Helene Saumure said in her petition heard Monday by Maurice Vassard, a labor department investigator, that she was dismissed by her employer, General Protection, an Ottawa-based security agency which provides services at five buildings in Hull under a sub-contract to the federal government.

Mrs. Saumure worked at the Centre Asticou, which among other things houses the headquarters of the federal civil service language school.

Young hostage-taker shot

TORONTO (CP) — The police shooting Tuesday of a youth who held a 15-year-old girl at knife-point for seven hours marked the third such death involving the Metropolitan Toronto force this month.

A police spokesman said Supt. Frank Barbetta shot and killed Patrick Reid, 16, an escapee from the Pine Ridge Training School in Bowmanville, Ont., after negotiations failed to convince Reid to surrender.

Police said Reid's erratic actions in the last hour of the hostage-taking led to the decision that the incident must be brought to an end.

Supt. Barbetta was able to distract the youth, allowing the girl to move out of the way, and then caught Reid with two shots from a .38-calibre revolver.

Jetliner tangles with protesters

NARITA, Japan (Reuters) — An airliner landed safely Tuesday after tangling with a rope holding a balloon launched by opponents of Tokyo's new international airport here, police said.

A Japan Asia Airways jet flight from Taipei, Taiwan, carrying 197 passengers and crew, struck the rope and landed with part of the rope dangling from its right wing. Police said it was the latest sabotage attempt by radicals who support local farmers opposed to the airport.

The radicals, determined to close the $2.6-billion airport, have erected kites and balloons at the end of the runway in an attempt to obstruct landings and takeoffs.

Soviet sub having problems

LONDON (AP) — A crippled Russian nuclear submarine off northern Scotland is in more trouble, with its tow line snapped and gales expected, the Royal Navy reported today.

The Echo II-class sub surfaced Saturday night after sending distress calls to other Soviet fleet units. It seems to have suffered a breakdown in its nuclear propulsion system.

After apparently making some headway of its own Monday, probably under diesel power, the sub was taken under tow again by a Soviet rescue tug. Then early today the tow line broke.

The 4,800-ton sub was reported tied up alongside the tug just outside Britain's 12-mile territorial limit and east of the Danish-owned Faroe Islands.

Salvation Army protests payoff

LONDON (REUTERS) — The Salvation Army has announced it has suspended its membership in the World Council of Churches (WCC) because the church group decided to donate $85,000 from its Special Fund to Combat Racism to black guerrillas fighting in Rhodesia.

In Geneva, Switzerland, the WCC expressed deep regret at the Salvation Army's move. A WCC official said in a statement the money was intended for humanitarian activities.

Francophone pilots losing out

MONTREAL (CP) — Air Canada is making no effort to hire more francophone pilots in its current recruiting campaign, Marcel Deschamps, director-general of the Association des Gens de l'Air, said Tuesday.

Deschamps said his group, which represents French-speaking aviation workers, has obtained an internal memo by Charles Simpson, Air Canada's vice-president for flight operations, that says the airline will hire about 275 new pilots over the next 18 months.

But it is not increasing the proportion of its francophone pilots to about 25 per cent of the total to reflect Canada's current demographic make-up, he told a news conference.

Only eight per cent of Air Canada's 1,700 pilots are French-speaking and only eight of the 49 new pilots hired in the first five months of this year are francophones, Deschamps said.

"The francophone candidates are there to fill the jobs, but they've made no effort to recruit them," he said.

Cinema death toll now 422

TEHRAN (AP) — Unofficial reports said Tuesday the death toll from the fire-bombing at the Cinema Rex Theatre in Abadan, Iran, has risen to 422 and five persons described as Islamic Marxists have admitted setting off the bombs.

Radio Abadan quoted Brig.-Gen. Rezi Razmi, police chief of that southwestern city, as saying the five were among 10 suspects arrested in the case so far. A government spokesman in Tehran, the capital, declined to comment on the radio report.

The Tehran newspaper Ettelaat said workmen searching through the debris of the burned-out theatre found 45 more bodies from the Saturday night fire. The official government death count remained at 377.

Tanks ring London airport

LONDON (Reuters) — Scores of army tanks and armored cars rolled into London's Heathrow airport Tuesday in a show of strength following Sunday's Arab guerrilla attack on Israeli airline crew outside a hotel in central London.

Troops in full battle dress carrying automatic rifles patrolled the terminal area. More were deployed along the perimeter roads and carried out spot checks on passing cars.

Security in the British capital and at Heathrow has been sharply stepped up after the machine-gun and grenade ambush on an El Al crew bus in which two persons died.

A defence ministry spokesman said the exercise at the airport is part of police counterterrorism precautions. He declined to say whether it had been planned before or after Sunday's shooting.

But it was seen as a show of strength following Israeli accusations that lax British security was in part responsible for the attack.

Meanwhile, London Police Chief David Mcneil and British Home Secretary Merlyn Rees decided to stick to their ban on security guards carrying guns.

Kenya mourns dead president

NAIROBI (Reuters) — Kenya today began a month of national mourning for President Jomo Kenyatta, whose death Tuesday left a vacuum at the top of Kenyan politics and a gap in the ranks of moderate African leaders.

Kenyatta, president for the past 14 years, drew his country's tribes together at independence from Britain and steered his people to an economic prosperity rarely matched in the developing world.

One of the original black nationalists, Kenyatta was an inspiration to Africa's anti-colonial movements after the Second World War.

Killer parents to see shrink

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — A manslaughter charge against religious cultists James and Patricia Nassar, who threw their five-month-old daughter's body into the trash, was dismissed Tuesday.

But Judge Arthur Sherman in Cambridge District Court ordered both parents sent to submit to 20 days of psychiatric examinations after finding them guilty on three lesser counts—willful neglect of the child, illegally disposing of her body and failing to report her death.

Nassar, 24, of Methuen, and his 23-year-old wife face fines and jail sentences of up to 2½ years.

Sherman ruled that Edward Gargiulo, Middlesex County assistant district attorney, did not present sufficient evidence during a two-day hearing to make a case for manslaughter in the February death of Elizabeth Nassar.

Man charged with abduction

TORONTO (CP) — Police say a 35-year-old man has been charged with abducting a 12-year-old mentally retarded girl and with having sexual intercourse with a female under 14.

A spokesman for Metropolitan Toronto police said the case began last February when a man posing as a doctor convinced the girl's mother to let the 12-year-old accompany the man and his family on a trip to Morocco.

Police said the girl's mother, whose name was not released, agreed to the trip after she consulted with the Children's Aid Society and school officials.

Drought means brant ban

OTTAWA (CP) — Migratory bird hunters in many parts of Canada will find their legal quotas down this year after last summer's drought and a rough winter, the environment department announced Tuesday.

The department said in a release duck populations on the Prairies are down drastically. And for the second straight year, there is a total ban on hunting brant geese in central Canada and the Atlantic provinces.

But duck populations in the extreme east and west of the country should be up this fall following good spring weather and higher water levels.

Hunting seasons in the provinces vary from zone to zone and with the type of game. Limits on the number of birds a hunter can possess at one time are twice as much as listed daily limits, unless otherwise stated.

N.S. campaign enters Day 11

HALIFAX (CP) — Conservative Opposition leader John Buchanan said he sensed victory in sight. Liberal Premier Gerald Regan touted his record and a score of candidates were nominated Tuesday as the fight for the Sept. 19 provincial general election entered its 11th day.

Six Tories, five Liberals and an NDP candidate were nominated Tuesday night during a series of conventions in which the first chunk in the Liberal party's solidarity appeared to form.

Ron Wallace, nominated to run again in his Halifax Citadel riding for the governing Liberals, said he thought the only place for references to past performance was on the shelves of an archives.

He later said past increases in property assessments have had a "sledgehammer" effect on Nova Scotians and he promised to work toward a two-year freeze on any further increases and then press for a 10-per-cent annual ceiling on increases after two years.

Parizeau finds returns sensational

QUEBEC (CP) — About 2,000 Quebec taxpayers have sent their $85 federal income tax rebates to the Quebec government, Finance Minister Jacques Parizeau said Tuesday.

"I find it sensational that people have scruples like this," Parizeau told a news conference.

The federal government sent out about 2 million cheques to Quebec taxpayers as a way of rebating $186 million owed the province under proposed sales tax reductions which Quebec rejected.

Parizeau said that he will propose "fiscal measures" to the cabinet later this week to recover the funds. The proposal may be announced next week.

Ruling hints at higher taxes

HULL, Que. (CP) — School taxes in the Outaouais area may double to $1,000 yearly from $500 as a result of a Quebec Superior Court decision Monday.

The court ruled that the Quebec education department acted correctly in withholding grants totalling $25 million from four Roman Catholic school boards—Outaouais-Hull, Aylmer, Gatineau and Champlain.

The grants were withheld for the last five years because Quebec contended that the boards didn't collect the right amount of taxes.

To finance their operations, the boards secured loans, and interest payments are said to be in the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

J-Bay settlement 'a disaster'

FORT GEORGE, Que. (CP) — The James Bay land claims settlement will become a disaster unless the Quebec government provides more money to educate young Cree, Chief Billy Diamond said Tuesday.

Diamond, leading spokesman for Quebec's 6,000 Cree and their senior negotiator in the agreement, said his people are becoming frustrated because the Quebec government refuses to provide adequate funds for the semi-autonomous Cree school board.

He made the statement in an interview moments after introducing Gov.-Gen. Jules Leger to the residents of this isolated village on the east shore of James Bay.

The native-run school board, which is to oversee the education of all Cree children in northern Quebec, has asked for $18 million for this year and so far has received only $2.5 million, Diamond said.

Divers search for pilot's body

LABELLE, Que. (CP) — Police scuba divers scoured the bottom of nearby Lac Chaud Tuesday, looking for the body of a 20-year-old pilot whose airplane crashed into the water the day before.

Witnesses said the single-engine plane nose-dived into the lake at about 5:30 p.m. Monday.

The plane floated for a few moments, allowing the only passenger, 25-year-old Alain Patrie, to escape. He was taken to hospital in Montreal, 100 kilometres southeast of here.

Sugluk mercury levels dangerous

OTTAWA (CP) — Thirty persons in the Arctic Quebec settlement of Sugluk have been found to have dangerously high levels of mercury in their bloodstreams, federal health department figures revealed Tuesday.

Some of the levels are 10 times higher than levels considered normal by health officials.

Sugluk is an Inuit community and the high mercury levels are believed to have resulted from eating mercury-contaminated whales and seals.

Health department figures showed that during May, 58 persons were tested for mercury and all showed readings above normal.

Thirty had readings ranging between 100 and 269 parts per billion (PPB). Seven persons were in the 160-to-269 ppb range.

Card of Thanks

Casper, Crosby awarded

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Billy Casper and the late Bing Crosby head a group of five men who were inducted into the World Golf Hall of Fame Tuesday.

The induction of Casper, Crosby, Clifford Roberts, Harold Hilton and Dorothy Campbell Hurd brought to 35 the number of men and women enshrined since the Hall of Fame was opened in 1974.

Casper, 47, is the only living member of this year's class.

Casper, who will compete in the $250,000 Hall of Fame Classic that begins Thursday, has won 51 American tour titles.

Crosby and Clifford Roberts were selected to the Hall's Distinguished Service category.

Stingers ignore WHA orders

CINCINNATI (AP) — Cincinnati Stingers said Tuesday they will ignore World Hockey Association orders to return the contract of underage player Mike Gartner, 18, of Niagara Falls Flyers.

Bill DeWitt Jr., executive vice-president of the club and a league trustee, said: "I don't see any problem with playing Gartner."

DeWitt cited a United States District Court decision won last year by Ken Linseman, a 19-year-old playing with Birmingham.

Birmingham later sold Linseman to Philadelphia Flyers of the National Hockey League.

Gartner, a highly rated forward, signed a multi-year contract with the Stingers.

WHA president Howard Baldwin said Monday the league rules prohibit the signing of players under 20. He said the league would also reject contracts signed by seven other under-age juniors signed this year by Birmingham.

Umpires strike brewing

NEW YORK (AP) — Lee MacPhail and Chub Feeny, respective presidents of the American and National leagues, sent a joint telegram Tuesday to Philadelphia lawyer Richard Phillips, refusing to reopen negotiations on a contract for baseball umpires.

Phillips, who represents the Umpires Association, had threatened a strike by the 52 major league umpires unless the two leagues agree to their demands for improved benefits and working conditions. He also filed a suit with the National Labor Relations Board on Monday, charging the two leagues with unfair labor practices.

The umpires currently are in the first year of an agreement signed last winter which carries through to the 1981 season. MacPhail and Feeny cited that agreement in their response to Phillips' telegram of last week which listed the umpires' demands.

Both league presidents left the door open to future conversations with the umpires group.

Members of the Umpires Association's executive board were scheduled to confer by telephone Tuesday and Wednesday to decide on a strike action which Phillips had said could come by week's end.

WEST BERLIN (CP) — Cheryl Gibson of Edmonton collected Canada's second medal at the world swimming championships Tuesday, earning the bronze behind winner Linda Jezek of the United States and silver medalist Brigit Treiber of East Germany in the women's 100-metre backstroke final.

Jezek was timed in one minute 2.55 seconds, Treiber clocked 1:03.18 and Gibson 1:03.43.

The Canadian squad of Sawchuk, Graham Smith of Edmonton, Gary MacDonald of Mission City, B.C., and Peter Szmidi of Pointe Claire, Que., were timed in 3:27.14 behind the West Germans in 3:26.65 and Sweden in 3:26.95.

The race was lost for Sawchuk in the first leg when Sawchuk could only go out in 52.76. Smith, MacDonald and Szmidi moved the team from eighth to fourth but were a foot behind the Swedes at the finish.

Haines said the addition of youngsters like Caulkins and Woodhead have made the difference.

"You get a girl like Caulkins and she just pulls everyone else along" the U.S. coach said, noting that the girls are now lifting weights as did the East Germans before Montreal.

Gibson, a major disappointment at the Commonwealth Games in her home town, said she was tired during the Edmonton competition and took some time here last week to rest up.

"When I got here I rested all the time and it was the difference" she said.

The Edmonton swimmer has two more chances for a medal. She goes today in the women's 400-metre individual medley, an event in which she won a silver medal at Montreal.

But that event shapes up as a battle between Caulkins and Ulrike Tauber of East Germany.

On Thursday, Gibson goes in the women's 200-metre backstroke where her medal prospects are a little brighter.

In other competition Tuesday, Canada's water polo team lost 8-3 to Cuba, its fourth loss in four outings, and is fighting to stay out of the basement in the 26-team tournament.

POLLOCK DENIES RESIGNATION

MONTREAL (CP) — When the Montreal-based Molson Breweries of Canada Ltd., announced the purchase of Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League Aug. 4, there was immediate speculation as to the future of key front-office personnel—including that of vice-president and general manager Sam Pollock.

But Morgan McCammon, president of the brewery, said after announcing the sale: "We have no present intention of changing management."

Despite this strong statement, there were reports at that time that Pollock would resign. Pollock denied the reports when the question arose during the news conference and during the days immediately following the news of the sale.

He was still denying them Tuesday.

Earlier this week the reports of Pollock's impending resignation threw touchdown passes to Ken Starch and Peter Dalla Riva while Jim Burrow intercepted a B.C. pass for another, Don Sweet kicked three field goals and converted the three Montreal touchdowns.

Jerry Tagge threw to Jim Young for one British Columbia touchdown while Harry Holt and Larry Key ran for the others. Lou Passaglia kicked one field goal, three singles and converted two of the majors.

The victory was the 11th for Montreal against six losses and one tie with British Columbia since interlocking regular-season play began in 1961.

The Alouettes got some help from the referee with a pass interference call against the Lions in the dying minutes of the game, to the delight of the Olympic Stadium's 65,312 fans.

The Alouettes jumped on the Lions on the first play from scrimmage after Sweet sent the game-opening kickoff to the B.C. four-yard line with Leon Bright returning it to the eight.

On the opening play, Jerry Tagge faded to his goal line and lofted a pass toward Al Charuk at the 15. Just before the ball got to the B.C. receiver, defensive-back Burrow of the Als snatched the pass out of the air and crossed the goal line unopposed. The score came at the 29-second mark.

Sweet converted and kicked off again but, after the Leos made one first down, the Als defence forced British Columbia into a punting situation at the Montreal 51.

Jerry Friesen blocked the attempted punt by Passaglia and Ty Morris recovered for Montreal on the Lions' 36.

On the first play from scrimmage Barnes sent a 25-yard pass to John O'Leary that left the ball on the 11. On the next play, Barnes tossed to Starch and after the Sweet convert, Montreal was ahead 14-0 with the game only 4:26 old.

The Lions moved to within a touchdown of the Alouettes at 10:08 of the first quarter when Young took a 44-yard pass from Tagge for a major. Young, who left from the wide receiver's position on the right side of the line, cut diagonally and took the pass in the middle of the field and ran straight in with Passaglia adding a point on a successful convert attempt.

British Columbia added another three points in the first quarter when Passaglia was successful on a field-goal try from the 16 at 14:30.

The defending Grey Cup champions drew first blood in the second quarter when a Montreal scoring drive fizzled and Sweet kicked his first field goal of the game at 4:24 from the 41-yard line.

Passaglia punted a 53-yard single for British Columbia at 12:41 as Randy Rhyno dropped to one knee to concede, nine yards behind his goal line.

Barnes threw his second touchdown pass of the game in the final minute of the first half as Dalla Riva dove across the goal line to take a 22-yard toss. The touchdown was the first of the season for the veteran tight end, who had not played since the first game of the season against Ottawa Rough Riders when he broke his left hand.

Sweet converted and the Als went to the dressing room with a 24-11 halftime lead.

'I want to play hockey'

TORONTO (CP) — Gail Cummings is less upset than her parents or the Ontario Human Rights Commission by a court decision upholding the right of a sports association to prevent her from playing hockey with the boys.

"I want to play, but whatever the answer is, I'll just have to go along with it," the 12-year-old Huntsville, Ont., girl said Tuesday.

"But when I'm 13, that'll be next year, I'll be able to play with the girls' team, the Huntsville Honies."

The Divisional Court ruling last week ended a bitter two-year struggle waged on behalf of Gail and another girl by the provincial human rights commission.

Gail was 9, and had played four games with the Huntsville All-Stars boys' hockey team, when the Ontario Minor Hockey Association refused to approve her player's certificate.

WAS DISCRIMINATING The commission ruled that the association was discriminating against the youngster on the grounds of sex. It also ruled in favor of Debbie Baszo of Waterford, Ont., who was denied the right to play on a boy's team in the Ontario Rural Softball Association.

The court ruling against Gail's case rested on the fact that facilities provided by the hockey association were not open to the public, giving the group the right to exclude girls.

A spokesman said Tuesday the commission is concerned by the wide implications of the court interpretation of the section of the Human Rights Code preventing discrimination on the grounds of sex, race, creed, color, marital status or nationality.

"If we go by the kind of argument used with the Cummings case, then it could apply to other groups, involving race, or creed, or color," commission director George Brown said.

The eight commissioners and their lawyers are studying the ruling.

WANTS TO APPEAL Gail's mother, Dorothy Cummings, said Tuesday that she would like to see the ruling appealed but will abide by whatever the commission decides.

"For me, an ordinary person, they still haven't given me any sufficient reason why she can't play."

When Gail heard of the decision, she was flying home to Ontario from Vancouver, where she was the only girl on the Huntsville Pee Wee team, second-place winner in the Canadian National Lacrosse Tournament.

Bruce Prentice of the Ontario Minor Lacrosse Association was surprised to hear Gail was on the team. However, he said any girl good enough can play lacrosse, although eventually boys outstrip girls in physical ability.

Both the Canadian and Ontario minor lacrosse associations allow girls to play on any teams.

"Hockey's problem is that the adults have all got their noses out of joint," Prentice said.

"If she's good enough to play goalkeeper, let her play."

Cape Cod: Feeling like a little kid again

CHATHAM, Mass. — If you check it out on a map, Cape Cod somewhat resembles a flexed arm. We stayed at the elbow.

It took us about 10 hours to drive down to the Cape from Sherbrooke; we arrived tired, hungry — but happy. We could have saved ourselves the hassle by flying must admit I frolicked in those waves like a little kid, body surfing on the waves as they thundered onto the miles of beach.

to us a little about the town and answered some of our queries before we went away to wander about on our own. We discovered a small fresh-fruit and-vegetable market set back and away from the streets just off a parking lot. The boy in charge chatted with us and spoke of his impending motorcycle trip around threatening them with speed and hype. I laughed too when the waitress finally came to admit that the reason my toast had not arrived was because it kept getting eaten in the kitchen.

The beach near Wellfleet, Cahoon, featured a lively bar called The Beachcomber and to think language was a barrier I couldn't help but remember times in distant lands when language was not a common thing but with signs and laughter communication was maintained.

In Provincetown, we were to see a Torontonion who has acquired recent acclaim. He is Craig Russell of 'Outrageous' fame, a movie based on one of Margaret Gilboord Gibson's short, sad, penetrating and semi-autobiographic short stories. One of her stories appeared in movie-form on TV a few years ago and it had been filmed by Claude Jutra and starred Jane Eastman. Craig Russell is a long-time friend of Margaret Gibson's and weaves his way through her book, The Butterfly Ward. He stood on his own and became famous through 'Outrageous' and his impersonations of Tallulah Bankhead, Mae West and other cinema greats. He also demystified singlehandedly the female impersonator and the transvestite. Unfortunately, Russell was called away to Boston and, unknown to us, took Thursday off instead of Wednesday.

Provincetown is a sweet little community on the inside of the curled fingers of the Cape. It is drummed up to be 95 per cent gay. It may be predominantly so, but to my eyes, in summer season it's 95 per cent tourist. The locals either hide out or service the visitors rather surlily. When one shopper admonished another because of her behavior, the reaction was a smug "Oh, gawsh, they don't care, they just wanna make a sale," as she continued in her ornery handling of the salespeople and merchandise. Little wonder that some of the shopkeepers are far from friendly.

Wave after wave of tourists in a hurry sweep the curving streets of Provincetown, interspersed by drag queens with friends dressed in finery only to be seen in this particular little ocean town.

Cat's Cradle the 'Old Reliable Seafood Restaurant' which is a stop on one cat's daily journey in search of food and 'Breakfast at Cookie's' are some of P' town's special spots along with Spiritus Fine Ice Cream. Statues as varied as a white Venus and a silver metallic pig adorn postage stamp lawns.

P'town, I'll come back to see you in September when you're not heaving with ebullient summer guests and I can talk to you when you're relaxed. It will be worth another trip.

We didn't search for accommodation too hard, but we followed our instincts and the Cranberry Inn in Chatham was our choice. For less than $17 a day, hostess Mary Hamilton provided us with a double bedroom, although she only decided on the morrow that she would have us the other three nights. We guessed she wanted to see first how we behaved.

That first night we really treated ourselves; I had shrimp scampi and my friend, scallops. We went to bed with very full stomachs and following a light breakfast, we moseyed along to loll in the sun and stroll along the beach basking in its rays. It has been high unto three years since I had last glimpsed the ocean and I

We were still collecting shells and rocks. We met Bob from Woodstock, temporarily clearing his head from the responsibilities of caring for people under intense mental stress and a mustachioed chap who was back home after 15 years in Oregon. He had a special truck with which he said he led the local law enforcement officers many a merry chase along the dunes at night. We shared some beer and some fresh air and off we were on our way again.

ELIMINATE WINTER TIRE CHANGEOVER

Goodyear Tiempo: The All Season Steel Belted Radial

Now you can buy an all season radial tire that gives you the smooth quiet ride of a summer radial and handles winter like a snow tire. Over 10,000 biting edges give Tempo traction and pull on snow and ice... without studs! How?

The tread rubber retains flexibility and traction at below freezing temperatures. Tempo meets Rubber Manufacturer's Association standards as a snow tire yet on dry pavement the unique centre "whisper" rib design suppresses noise for a quiet ride. Just think, you may never have to go to the expense or trouble of changing over to winter tires again.

WI Meeting

MELBOURNE RIDGE — The August meeting of the M.R.W.I. was held at the church hall with all members as hostesses. The annual picnic was held after the meeting. Each member was to bring a guest.

The meeting opened by repeating the Collect in unison. The motto was: 'To build a better mousetrap isn't good enough, you have to tell the world about it.'

The roll call was to bring a card for cheer committee and was answered by 13 members.

The minutes were read and approved and the treasurer's report also read. There were no convenors' reports.

Cards of get-well cheer were signed for Edna Frank and Charlie Smith.

Final plans were made for the tour to the Missisquoi Historical Society at Stanbridge East, on Sept. 30. All members planning to go will meet at the church at 9 a.m. Dorothy Johnston will write to our forgotten patient this month.

Pennies for friendship were collected. Our county president, Mrs. Eastman will be invited to our next meeting.

It was decided we would have a food sale at the fall Craft Show in Ulverton. This show, 'Country Collections', will be held Oct. 21 evening, and Oct. 22 and 23 at 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

At the Sept. meeting there will be a sale of garden produce, jams, jellies and pickles.

The next meeting will be held on the regular day at the home of Grace Johnston. The meeting was adjourned and a picnic lunch enjoyed by all, with icecream for everyone. After lunch, races were held with the following names as prize-winners.

Age 1-4: 1. Penny Badger; 2. Martin Bean; 3. Jody Delaney; 4. Kelly Badger; Age 5-7: 1. Karen Morrison; 2. Mario Bean; 3. Gary Johnston; 4. Krenda Lancaster; 5. Karen Johnston; Age 9-10: 1. Bonnie Morrison; 2. Jeff Delaney; 3. Stacey Lancaster; Age 10 and over: 1. Judy Nelson; 2. Angie Delaney and Cathy Frank;

Shoe Race Age 1-5: 1. Mario Bean; 2. Karen Johnston; 3. Karen Morrison; 4. Martin Bean;

Age 8-10: 1. Bonnie Morrison; 2. Stacey Lancaster; 3. Jeff Delaney; 4. Krenda Lancaster; 10 and over: 1. Judy Nelson and Angie Delaney; 2. Cathy Frank;

3 legged race Age 1-10: 1. Krenda Lancaster and Karen Morrison; 2. Martin Bean and Marion Bean; 3. Karen Johnston and Penny Badger; 10 and up: 1. Judy Nelson and Jeff Delaney; 2. Angie Delaney and Cathy Frank; 3. Bonnie Morrison and Stacy Lancaster.

Last Market of season

SUTTON (KT) — People who have enjoyed Sutton Saturday Market days during this summer and those who may have planned a visit but have not yet attended, are reminded that this Saturday, August 26 will be the last summer market for 1978, bringing to a close an excellent season.

The preview for the Art Auction is also of note. This has been arranged for Thursday and Friday, August 24 and 25 from 2 to 8 p.m. and on Saturday, August 26, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. at Sutton Town hall. It is suggested while visiting the Market on Saturday to go on to the Preview.

The Auction will take place rain or shine on Sunday, August 27, under the Market roof, commencing at 1 p.m. with Denis Dunn as auctioneer. The paintings and sculpture, in addition to Canadians, are by artists from Chile, Germany, Italy, Belgium, Scotland, U.S.A., Czechoslovakia and Austria, all of whom are now residents of the Sutton area, which has become quite an international community of artists.

There will be the regular Fall Fair on September 16. During Brome Fair, Sutton Valley Council will be running their usual booth in the Main Building, and will be representing various artisans and artists belonging to the organization.

UCW Meeting

DUNHAM — The U.C.W. Unit meeting was held at Mrs. L. Staton's home, Selby Lake, Aug. 15.

After words of welcome by the President, Mrs. Harvey, the Devotional was taken by Miss V. Armstrong reading from the Observer Mountains and God's Country, followed by verses quoted from the hymn, "Unto the Hills."

Twelve members answered the roll call.

The food sale held at Mrs. Drennan's had been very successful, $205.00 being realized.

A gift is to be sent to Miss Pegi Rident, our past summer's student minister, whose marriage took place Aug. 19 in Toronto.

Plans are being made for the annual Bazaar on Sept. 30, opening at 11 a.m. Luncheon will be served from 11:30 - 1:30 at $1.75 per person and afternoon tea from 2 - 5 p.m. at 75 cents each.

The meeting closed by the President reading a poem, "Plenty."

The next meeting will be held Sept. 12 at the church.

For Thursday, Aug. 24

ASTRO-GRAPH Bernice Bede Osol

August 24, 1978
It behooves you this coming year to take an active role in organizations or clubs. Valuable contacts can be made to further your self-interests.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Lady Luck is supportive of you today in activities where you put all your cards out on the table. Play everything face up and reap the benefits. Having trouble selecting a career? Send for your copy of Astro-Graph Letter by mailing 50 cents for each and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Astro-Graph, P.O. Box 489, Radio City Station, N.Y. 10019. Be sure to specify birth sign.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Conditions look very fortunate today, but not solely through your own efforts. A joint venture could prove a big winner.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Important decisions today should be predicated upon their long-range effects. The more far-seeing you are, the greater the future benefits.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) This is a good day to bring to your boss's attention the fine job you've been doing. If your work warrants it, a raise or bonus may be in the cards.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) A social contact could prove very beneficial for you today, provided you let her tell you what she wants to without asking her too many questions.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) You have the necessary staying power today to bring victory in the final analysis. Your luck grows stronger as the clock ticks on.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Others will happily do your bidding today if you first set a good example, rather than issuing direct orders. A picture is worth a thousand words.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) In your financial dealings today, keep the big picture in mind. You may have to spread a little seed money to gain a bountiful harvest.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You will win admiration today by behaving nobly where others are petty. You're big because you think big.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Hasty conclusions could lead you astray today. A condition that might appear unrewarding at first glance will prove to be extremely lucky for you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You're enjoyable to be around today, but you're not likely to be too generous. Bring your whole being into line by giving materially as well.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Unless the stakes are substantial you're not apt to put forth maximum effort today. Where the returns are high, you come through like a champion.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag
The diagrammed hand was played in a semi-final match of the prestigious Spingold Cup. Both sides were straining since a victory could mean a national championship.

East's light preempt had the effect of catapulting North-South into a four-spade contract which required superb defense to defeat.

South won the opening lead with dummy's ace of diamonds and immediately tackled trumps. He led a spade to his king which West ducked, and then the 10 of spades which was also allowed to win. South's next play was a heart to dummy's king. South led another heart from dummy and West won with the jack.

It was decision time for West. He knew declarer had started with six spades, one diamond (because East's preempt promised seven) and probably three hearts and three clubs. Therefore, to defeat the contract, East had to have the queen and nine of clubs. South, because of his overcall, was marked for the ace.

West made the world-class switch to the eight of clubs. He had to establish a club trick for the defense before declarer could set up dummy's 13th heart for a club discard.

West's eight of clubs was won by South's ace. West won the heart return with the ace and led another club which was taken by the king in dummy. The heart in dummy was established, but it was no good to declarer. West could trump low and retain the ace for the setting trick.

West had played his partner for the right clubs and he had led the suit at precisely the correct time. Any delay in leading that low club would have assured declarer's contract. To be a good defender — as West obviously was — it is necessary to think at all times.

Former E.T. resident serves senior citizens

By C.W. McVETTY (Correspondent)

INVERNESS— Your correspondent here has been given a very interesting account of the good work being done by Mr. Homer "Woody" Bailey in a field where his reward comes in bringing contentment and happiness to senior citizens, rather than in the accumulation of riches. Homer, he prefers to be called "Woody", was born in Thetford Mines in 1919, the son of Capt., and Mrs. E.W. Bailey — Mrs. Bailey, Laura, to many of us — is a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Albert Little, of Henderson Vale, and is a sister of Mr. and Mrs. Allan Little, of Inverness with whom she is presently spending her vacation in company with her sister, Mrs. Edythe Leacock, of Goffstown, N.H. When fourteen years of age "Woody" moved with his parents to Faribault, Minnesota, where he worked as one of the staff of the Faribault Daily News. Later, being interested in photography he owned and operated a shop dealing in photographic supplies until duty called him to New Jersey, and finally to Brooklyn, N.Y. Being of a literary turn of mind he has written three books which are on the market now, and is currently engaged in writing another.

In all of his activities and successes he has been encouraged and ably assisted by his mother, who remains young in action despite the fact that she is a senior citizen. Woody's father, an officer in the Salvation Army passed away 6 years ago, after a long period of service. But Laura carries on, plays the piano in the Home for religious meetings, and at the various entertainments staged there. She, also, is in charge of the Gift section of that Institution, serving and accomplishing much of which we, her friends, are proud. So kindly read on and learn more, in detail, of Woody's success in life in the article "Bethany in limelight" as reported in the July 21, 1978 issue of the United Methodist Reporter.

Bethany in Limelight

The small but prestigious Bethany Methodist Home of Brooklyn has found a number of honors coming its way — a 30-minute television airing of its ministry to the aging, the selection of its administrator, H. Woody Bailey, to serve in the state department of social services' division of adult residential care (DARC); and last but not least, full accreditation by the Board of Global Ministries.

As reported by Dr. Richard Francis, the home's president and pastor of the John Street Methodist Church, Mr. Bailey was one of only 16 administrators selected from over 500 adult homes to serve in the DARC committee. It has been meeting in Albany each month at state expense to help formulate the new state rules and regulations for residential care facilities for adults. Bailey is also on a state subcommittee on facility needs for well-aged adults, is a member of the State Coalition of Adult Homes, and serves on the domiciliary care facilities committee of the NY Association of Homes for the Aging.

He also represents Bethany on the conference board of institutional ministries as well as an ad hoc committee of the Federation of Protestant Welfare Agencies division on aging.

The CBS-TV program "Way to Go" featuring the home, was hosted by Dr. Ormond Drake, who interviewed Bailey and Dr. Francis. He cited Bethany's ministry as a "gem of a story," and emphasized its compassionate approach as compared with that of a commercial enterprise. A color motion picture of the program has been made available through a memorial gift, and showings for church groups may be arranged through the home at 604 E. 40th St., Brooklyn 11203.

...History made easy

Hearst, Ont.; Susan Boebel, 12, Rochville, Maryland and Kevin Hall, 11, Newark, Delaware gather vegetables from the garden as part of their daily chores.

By JOHN MCCARTHY
It's difficult to imagine the modern-day youngster enjoying a summer vacation without the conveniences of a refrigerator, television set, transistor radio, a bicycle or at least a skateboard... but it's happening.

Since the introduction of the Visiting Cousins Program at Kings Landing Historical Settlement four years ago about 400 children from throughout Canada and the United States have spent such vacations, and most would like to do it all over again.

Kevin Hall, 11, Newark, Delaware is one of many youngsters who spent a five-day vacation at the settlement this summer and wants to come back. "I think it's real neat," says Kevin. But he does admit he had a few doubts about his summer vacation shortly after his mother filled out the application form for him to become a visiting cousin. He wasn't sure he could easily take to becoming a 19th-century child.

"I thought it would be kind of hard. At first I was apprehensive about coming, but that passed."

Kevin conjured up some unpleasant mental images for any 11-year-old to have to face on summer vacation. "I thought we would be digging ditches and everything like that."

But upon his arrival at Kings Landing Kevin discovered his concerns were unfounded. After donning the period costume of the typical 19th-century lad Kevin became engrossed in a summer adventure not likely to be forgotten.

Kevin, like the other 11 children at the settlement during his stay, quickly began to retrace the footsteps of children who lived in the area over a century ago.

At Kings Landing the riverboat, a working sawmill, a small theatre, along with over 50 other buildings, including a school, store, forge, church and carpenter's shop provide the perfect setting for any youngster to journey back through time.

But a summer vacation at Kings Landing is not just an opportunity for youngsters to run carefree through the lanes and fields, or let their imagination wander.

It's a learning experience and the youngsters are expected to take on their share of responsibilities, such as assisting with the household chores, weeding the gardens, helping with the dishes, or keeping the woodboxes full from piles of firewood chopped by the adult staff.

And then of course there are classes to attend at the settlement school where the children receive instruction in the three R's, sprinkled with a pinch of grammar, spelling, geography and history.

Then during the evening hours the children take part in popular games of the period, join in recreation with the adult staff, view slide presentations or take part in singsongs. Kevin described his vacation at Kings Landing as "a good experience. It is nice to learn how people lived about 130 years ago, or so. 'I'll try to come back again."

"My sister would come, but she is only nine and I don't think she would stand it as well. Besides she isn't as interested in history."

And from the female point of view the assessment of a summer vacation at Kings Landing is much the same. "It's neat. I'd really like to live like this," says Susan Boebel, 12, Rochville, Maryland. "But I didn't think they dressed this way."

Susan said her vacation at the settlement has given her a better understanding of pioneer life. "We have learned how they lived, what they ate, what they worked at and how they built their homes."

She said a summer vacation at Kings Landing has also given her the opportunity to learn more about the crafts of weaving, spinning, and macrame. Susan says she has also enjoyed learning about the pioneer cooking methods and how the 19th century household was operated. When informed by her parents that she was coming to the settlement, Susan said, "I thought it would be nice to come and have a good time, and use a bit more of my French."

And as it worked out Susan got the opportunity when she was introduced to Gigi Lecours, 12, of Hearst, Ont. Gigi is bilingual.

Before arriving for her vacation Gigi said, "I thought we might have to work hard all the time, but we don't. Oh, we have our chores to do and things, but I like it very much."

Gigi said she liked the household chores, school and learning how to hook rugs. "All the things they had to do, we have to do... like working in the garden and all that." She says she would like to spend another summer vacation at the settlement.

"I would like to come again... I'm going to try." This year's Visiting Cousins Program is being supervised by Jim Haley and Claudia Carmichael, both students at the University of New Brunswick education faculty, and Debbie Maccaour, a graduate of the faculty.

They say the program is a valuable learning experience for the children and themselves.

"It is a great way for them to learn... and an opportunity nobody is going to get unless they come," Claudia said. The main objectives of the program are to familiarize the children with the lifestyle of the 19th-century child, his family and community environment.

Jim says that as supervisors they also "try to get the children to see learning can be fun. I am quite impressed by the way they have been able to step into the role."

By the end of this year's program it is expected about 120 children will have taken part in the 1978 program.

WINDSOR
Mrs. C. McCourt
845-3416

Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Watson and family have returned to their home in Lebel-sur-Quevillon after visiting his mother, Mrs. Lorina Watson, and other relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Grant Watson, Cathy and Ricky, have returned from a motor trip which took them as far west as Kicking Horse Pass in B.C. They motored to Wingham, Ont., where they were joined by Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Alden, then continued to Brandon, Man., where they were joined by Mrs. Eileen Wiley and continued on together, visiting points in Sask. and Alberta on their way.

Miss Tracy Watson has returned to her home in New Brunswick after spending several weeks with her grandmother, Mrs. Delbert Watson and family.

Congratulations and best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Paige on the occasion of their golden wedding anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Champagne and Robert, of Manchester, N.H., have been spending their holidays with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Franklin Brock and Mr. and Mrs. P. Champagne. Other guests at the same home have been Mrs. Fran. Bolduc and her mother, Mrs. Bourque, also of Manchester; Mr. and Mrs. Jean Claude Beaumont and Miss Susan Flanagan of Waterloo, and Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Mallette of Melbourne.

Mrs. R. Champagne, accompanied by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. F. Brock, spent a day with Mr. and Mrs. R. Beauregard in Warden, an afternoon and evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Madison in Sawyerville; and were supper and evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. Mallette in Melbourne.

Mr. and Mrs. Chris Hayes of Toronto were guests in town while here to attend the 50th wedding anniversary celebration for Mr. and Mrs. Paige.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton McCourt, Brenda and Donna, spent a few days in New Hampshire and while there, visited Mr. and Mrs. Irving Nichols in Stratham.

CLEVELAND
Mrs. P. Tozer
826-3282

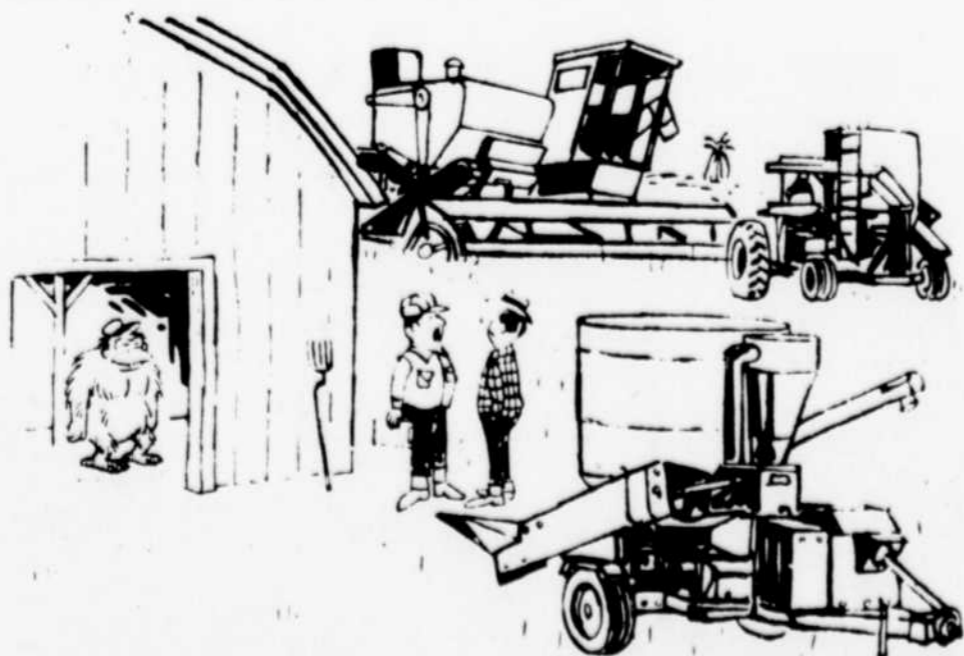

The neighbourhood was shocked to hear of the sudden death of a former resident, Mrs. Gordon Healy of Richmond. Sincere sympathy is extended to her family.

Mr. and Mrs. Frances Healy and Angela spent a few days in Ottawa, guests of Mr. and Mrs. Brian Cowan.

Mrs. Mary Bobo and Mrs. T. Bobo of Toronto are spending a few days with Mrs. Alex Amnotte and Mr. Henri Amnotte.

Miss Elaine Fowler of West Brome and Mr. Stanley Shufelt of Iron Hill were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Fowler and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hughes and family of St. Mary's, Ont., called on Mr. and Mrs. Percy Tozer.

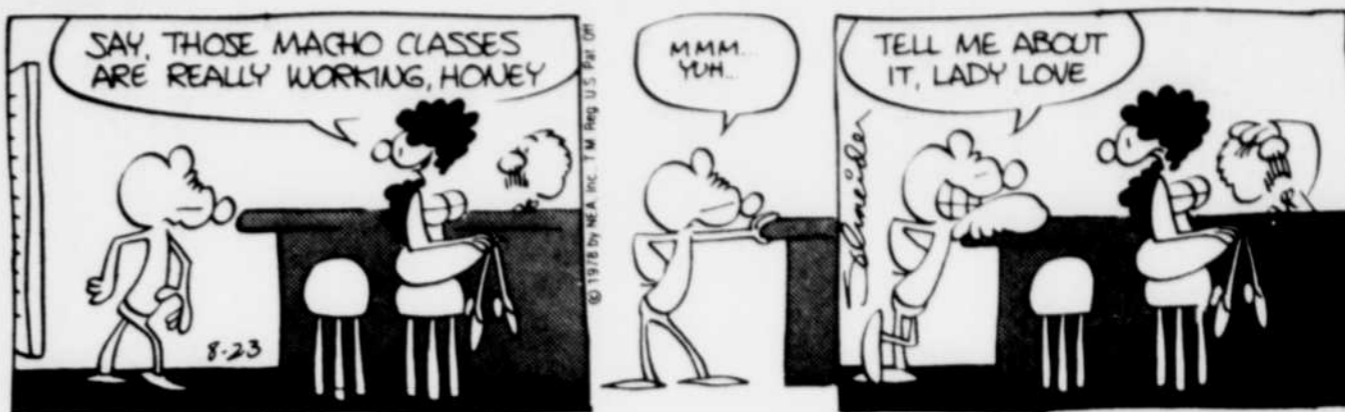

"As a matter of fact, Floggle, No. You're not going to be replaced by a machine."

From the pens of E.T. writers

To Dave and Katie Hillis Scotstown, Quebec
On their 50th Wedding Anniversary

In the year of 1920 they say
There arrived in Gould from Stornoway
Dave Hillis, whose main pursuit at that time
Is the subject of this little rhyme.

Katie MacLennan lived on the North Hill Road
From Gould it is not far
And soon outside John MacLennan's gate
You'd often see Dave's Star.

Donald MacAskill claimed he passed his gate,
Raising the dust at an awful rate,
He's sure to smash his car one day
That fast driver from Stornoway.

Then the races were on around Gould
To see who had the fastest car,
As the Chevvy's, Whippets and Fords
Tried to trim the speeding Star.

The lads from Gould, a bit jealous too
For were they not from there,
And why should a stranger win the hand
Of Katie so sweet and fair.

Yet Katie when she was alone
Her thoughts were never far,
From the dashing lad from Stornoway
Who owned the famous Star.

Divided in her heart, Katie then Looked towards the U.S.A.
Where she would find employment
Like many in her day.

So off to making watches she went
But her heart it was not fooled
Soon letters were travelling thick and fast
From Waltham town and Gould.

Shortly the wedding bells did ring
For the happy groom and lovely bride
And after fifty years together
Dave still has Katie by his side.

Retiring they to Scotstown came
And though they now have a modern car,
They sometimes look back on the good old days
When they owned the famous Star.

They shared their ups and downs together
Fifty years is a long long time,
As we honour them here this evening,
For Auld Lang Syne.

Now to our Dave and Katie
From all of us gathered here,
We wish them all the very best
And many more happy years.

DONALD N. MORRISON

WILBUR'S STORE

In the rolling hills of beauty where the banks slope down to the river shore.
There stands a place of memory known as Wilbur's store.
When you go there to buy something
They greet you with a smile.

He and Doris would be so glad to see you they would ask you to sit and talk a while.
I remember all the things they used to do to help me when I was just a kid.
I go there to their store as many people did.
They were always ready to help every under privileged child.

It did not matter if you had the money or you didn't have a dime.
They would say just buy what you want and pay some other time.
I remember the Christmas candies they used to give away.

I also remember all the food they used to give the sick and never accepted any pay.
They tell you just take this to your mother or whoever might be ill.

This is the way these people were in the little store up on the hill.
There are many kinds of beauty, like the music from the harps.
But their kind of beauty always came from their hearts.
I would not trade the memories I hold so dear.
And I think you would say the same if you ever traded there.

I still hear the sleigh bells in their drive way and hear the laughter of the children as I saw Wilbur give them candy.
And watch their parents smile.
I know times were not easy for these people with great will
To try to help their fellow man from that little store up on the hill.

The veranda caressed with flowers and the beauty of the spring.
Just passed another winter and summer has come again.
You hear the robin sing, the fields are full of flowers.
The snow has gone away.

It seems so very still
Your memories wander back to all
The kindness bestowed upon the people, from the little store upon the hill.

When you look across the valley and you see the smoke coming from the chimney.
As it winds its way up towards the heavens.
Where the skies are ever blue.
It makes me think of these people.
Some of the best I ever knew.
I go there to see them, not as much as I should.
But they will always stay in my memory.
Because they were so good.

Now you look across the beauty of the valley.
And you see the sun sinking low.
Then comes the shadow of the evening.
And you think of the store, the place you used to go.
This little poem is a tribute to you and all your good will.
And thank-you once again for all your kindness from your little store up on the hill.

KNOWLTON (KT) — The Children's Creative Workshop, sponsored annually by The Committee for the Arts was cancelled this summer with the exception of classes for the 5 and 6 year old group. This was due to the lack of interest and low registration.
Since there was no workshop, the Committee for the Arts is now considering one of some kind to be held on Saturday, or possibly on Sunday after the commencement of school.

The Committee would very much like to know the reaction of both parents and children to this idea.
Please write Mrs. Rhoda Northrup, Box 330, Knowlton, Que. JOE IVO or telephone 243-5795.
Suggestions as to the kind of work-shop, time and day will be much appreciated.

YOGA CLASSES
The Committee for the Arts is tentatively planning morning Yoga Classes to commence Wednesday, September 6 at the County Building at 10:00 a.m. and evening classes at Knowlton Academy on Mondays, commencing September 11 at 6:30 p.m.
Those interested please communicate with Mrs. Rhoda Northrup (243-5695).

Young at Heart Club

WATERLOO — On Monday, Aug. 14, a meeting of the Young at Heart Club was held in the Legion Hall with an attendance of 34.

At this time a few new members were welcomed by vice-pres. Ethel Williams. A sympathy card was signed by all to send to Mrs. Myrtle McLellan whose sister had passed away, suddenly, at East Angus.

500 was played at eight tables with prizes going to Mrs. A.L. Rogers, Byron Mizener, Juliette Morin, Albert Nolin, Mrs. D'Arcy, A.L. Rogers, Lennie Benoit, Donald Martin, Irene Jackson and Mrs. Simpson.

The door prize, donated by Mary Emmett, was won by Marjorie Sweet.

Tickets were sold on a white purse with the lucky number being held by Alice Ashton.

Refreshments were served.
The next meeting to be on Aug. 28 at 1:30 p.m.

UCW Meeting

CLEVELAND — The August meeting of the New London U.C.W. was held at the home of Miss Bernice Beattie with ten members and two visitors present.

The president, Miss B. Beattie, opened the meeting by welcoming the visitors and members and then asked Mrs. C. Pease to lead in devotions.

Roll call was answered by reporting 19 Wales Home and 20 local calls had been made.

Donations were received from Mrs. O. Taylor, Mrs. E. Solomon and Mrs. D. Sloane.

A 50th wedding anniversary card is to be sent to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Mason.

It was decided to place two crib quilts in Mrs. Grant Watson's Boutique in Windsor.

This unit will be in charge of devotion for the general meeting on Sept. 6 in the church parlor. Mrs. Orvis Taylor to take charge of the devotions.

Mrs. Gladys Perkins, Miss Bernice Beattie and Mrs. Orvis Taylor will visit the Wales Home in August.

The next meeting will be held with Mrs. O. Taylor on Sept. 12.
Refreshments were served by the hostess.

Kevlar Radial

ER78-14 Whitewall

53⁶³ Each

Two or more after discount*

The formula for a top radial begins with 2 Kevlar belts to produce amazing mileage with a smooth ride. Next, add 2 plies of DuPont 66 Nylon for reinforcement and dependability. Finally, use a computer designed tread to give superior wet and dry traction. Put it all together in a modern 78-series that matches new car equipment and you've got our Safety 99!
