PRICE—TWO CENTS

F. C. Whitaker's Witty Farewell Delights Rotary

Retiring President Reviews Work of Committees and Pays Tribute to Fellow Members

The ideas put forth in the valedictory of F. C. Whitaker—one of Rotary's most popular presidents—made a great impression on the members of the Westmount Club at the luncheon held yesterday in Victoria Hall.

Modesty and wit characterized the speech all through and not the least interesting part of it all was the description given by Mr. Whitaker of the effect on his own character and outlook gained by the experience of holding office and working with his fellow members.

Following is Mr. Whitaker's speech:

"It scarcely seems possible that a year has passed since I said to the members of this club that during my term of office, 'I shall neither give nor ask for quarter.' That remark was made with the hope that the light-hearted spirit of my predecessor and his whole eminently successful policy might be continued for still another year. It would be nice if the retiring board of directors could think that the club's greatest 'ill-wisher' would not deny that we have enjoyed some measure of success in this hope. Proceeding, as we have, light-heartedly upon our way, it has been encouraging indeed to see this club's enviable record added to as the month's have passed. The reports of club chairmen which have just been presented show accomplishments of which every member has reason to be proud. Our ever-present hope has been that we might lend enhancement to the already good name of this Rotary Club of Westmount. A lofty hope that would be, and greatly desirable, for all Christian peoples agree that 'A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches.'

Talk On Pigeons At War Given To Rotarians

"Pigeons in War Work" was the subject of an interesting talk given to Rotary last week by E. P. Jeffrey.

The vital part these birds play in getting messages through when all other means of communication fail was described vividly by the speaker.

The almost incredible fact that the birds—specimens of which Mr. Jeffrey brought with him—fly from 500 to 600 miles a day impressed the audience.

But—stated Mr. Jeffrey—"Only by a ruthless breeding policy of killing the weak and those that fail was this advancement possible."

CONGRATULATIONS

The Hon. James Arthur Mathewson, B.A., B.C.L., K.C., LL.D., M.L.A., who was 53 last Saturday. And also to John Caverhill Newman who was 65 the same day.

Cheerful Christianity Important

"The sceptics among you will be tempted to say, 'What does he mean, this fellow, by dwelling at such length upon lightness of heart and good spirit?'"

"Let me answer that question. 'During the past year we have indulged at times in some banter and even sniping, and on the majority of these occasions I have had the worst of it. I have quite enjoyed seeing how much satisfaction it has given you to view my discomfiture. This occasional method of carrying on may have seemed somewhat superficial to you, but has it turned us aside from Rotary ideals and objectives? Not by one iota.

"Look at this rather formidable list of goodly things that have been laid to our account by the generous action and work of our members, by the money we have raised, earned and given away.

Providing of prizes at the annual closing of the Boys' Farm at Shawbridge.

"At each luncheon throughout the year, the Club's custom of playing host to two boy students of Westmount has been continued.

"The chairman of the carnival committee's report shows that in spite of the weather's inclemency last September, the gross proceeds reached a most encouraging figure. The Club now has an inventory of over $1800.00 covering equipment and merchandise, all of which was written off last year. With good weather this year, it would not be too much to expect a net revenue of at least $10,000.00 this coming September, when our next carnival is to be held from September 7th to 11th, inclusive.

"Our work with crippled children has been of a high order this year and of a somewhat different character than in previous years. (See F. C. WHITAKER'S, P. 3)

P-O Robert J. Leet Receives Medal From King George

Westmount Boy Recently Decorated With Medal Won When A Sergeant

News came through some months ago that Sgt. Robert Leet, wireless air gunner, had been awarded the Distinguished Flying Medal.

Now—as P.O. Leet—he has received that medal from King George in London.

The award was made, so came the official statement for "Courage and coolness in the face of danger."

Leet was born in 1915 and is the son of Mrs. Leet and the late L. L. Leet of 420 Grosvenor ave.

After leaving West Hill High School, he took a job with the Elmhurst Dairy. He enlisted in July, 1940, and received his wireless training in Winnipeg and gunnery at Mossbank where he also received his wing. He went overseas in October, 1941. His brother, G. W. Leet, is a veteran of the last war and his brother-in-law, D. M. Aird is now with the Veterans' Guard at Lethbridge, Alta.

The official statement read as follows: "Sgt. Leet has displayed the greatest determination and devotion to his duty. On one occasion, when crossing the Alps to attack Turin, he replaced the tail-gunner whose oxygen had failed, keeping himself alert by the ingenious use of the portable oxygen gear. He was largely responsible for the success of the mission. At all times his courage and coolness in the face of danger have had an inspiring effect on his comrades."

GETS HIS "SPARKS"

R. D. Walsh of Westmount was among wireless operators who recently graduated from No. 2 Wireless school.

He has received his "sparks"—the insignia of graduation.

'Y' Vacation Club Annual Elections To Be Held July 5

The Westmount Y.M.C.A.'s Vacation Club got off to a good start Monday morning with many new members taking part in the program. These new boys were given a warm welcome by the camp director and later were shown around the building by the leaders.

The vacationers spent a very interesting afternoon at the Guaranteed Pure Milk Company where they toured the building and learned much about the pasteurization of milk. A question period was held after the trip and many interesting questions were asked by the boys which were ably answered by the plant's chemist.

Tuesday morning many boys successfully passed their swimming tests in the pool and a Learn-to-Swim class began which will continue till all the non-swimmers can swim. After the general swimming period the boys heard a very interesting talk by P. O. John Harvie, a former member of the Hi-Y Grads.

A highlight of next week's program will take place next Monday morning when the Vacation Club will hold its annual elections. Positions to be filled will be: The Mayor, Chief of Police, Judge, Chairman of the Junior Council of leaders, and four Junior leaders.

Down at Staynor, playground supervisor, Mrs. Brennan, is busy lining up the children for the summer program which will include handicraft, paperwork, raffles, sports and picnics. Andy McGillis, the playground supervisor for the boys, has a varied program with no less than three teams in the various sections of the municipal softball leagues.

Birth Of A Nation Subject Of Sermon By Rev. G. W. Goth

Canadians Challenged to Use Great Heritage Aright and Respect Faith of Forefathers

F-O H. E. Holbrook Heroic Airman Believed Killed

Another Westmount High School boy is "Missing believed killed," according to word received by his parents.

He is FO. Herbert Edward Holbrook, R.C.A.F., only son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Holbrook, 475 Grosvenor Avenue.

FO. Holbrook was on an operational flight over enemy territory and failed to return.

Only last month news of his bravery came over the radio when the Air Ministry in London announced that he and L. W. Powell of Pickardville, Alberta, had at-

In a special "Dominion Day" sermon, the Rev. G. W. Goth of Westmount Park United church called Canadians to remember their heritage.

"No one can tell definitely when a nation is born," said Mr. Goth in opening. "Who, for example, knows when the Anglo-Saxons first became conscious of themselves as a people?"

"Canada, in comparison with other nations is still a child. Yet Canada has a history significant and noble. The names of Cartier, Montcalm, Wolfe and Brock have been added to our roll of honour. Canada celebrates her 76th birthday on July 1, but in a more profound sense Canada was not born on July 1, 1867. What about those fearless missionaries of the Cross who came to Montreal in 1642. Surely they, too, are part of our nation's birth.

"Let no one, then, despise his birthright. We have a godly one in Canada. Our resources, both in materials and ideals are strong. The real question, however, is not in the plenitude of our possessions, but rather how have we used them.

How will we use them? We can abuse this heritage of ours. We can exploit our resources in materials and men. We can squander our talents until God with a sense of justice takes them from us. It is time for Canadians to ask how they have accepted the wonderful heritage which God has bequeathed to them. Again, like the weak man in Jesus' parable, we can become afraid and bury our heritage. We can be "stand-patters," and cry down every progressive thought or idea. We can throttle our prophets so that when the day of reckoning comes we shall be able to return the talents to the owner exactly as they were given to us.

Challenge of Heritage

But, we are challenged on this Dominion Day to cultivate and develop our talents, our birthright; to use our godly heritage to the full. Each one of us is challenged to see to it that our country does not become a mausoleum. It isn't enough to read old prayers; to sing old hymns. We cannot continue to live on the insight of our fathers. Creativity must go on; the new is continually emerging. When we consider the faith of our fathers, we must go much deeper than an appreciation of the hymns they sang and the prayers they read. We want to catch the reality which made them potent. We are not meant to be apes; we are meant to be creators. Then, with the same power as our fathers possessed we shall be able to do for our generation what those giants were able to do for their times.

"What an age! What a world! What a God!

"Nothing is static. All is becoming. Now we see through a glass darkly.

"A nation dies when her people distort or bury their birthright. She is born again when out of one talent they create ten."

WESTMOUNT, THURSDAY, JULY 1, 1943

NAVY LEAGUE APPEAL

THE $65,000 APPEAL of the Navy League of Canada, which opens today, will carry a strong appeal to local residents, for a great number of local lads are in the navy and all of us are proud of the wonderful record our young Canadian sailors have made in this war. The objective is not high, considering the nature of the cause, and we know that this district will more than do its share towards its attainment. William Ewing, a resident of Addington avenue, is president of the Montreal Division of the League, and Guy D. Robinson, Westmount Boulevard, is vice-president. These men are active in the large organization that is assisting in the drive. This is a campaign that every patriotic Canadian will want to support enthusiastically. Let's go 'way over the top.

APPEAL TO WOMEN

THE ANNUAL meeting of the Society of Chartered Accountants of the Province of Quebec is always interesting to local residents because many of them are members. This year's meeting was especially interesting in that the retiring president, Alfred Smibert, made an appeal for many more young women to enter the profession to help meet serious wartime shortages of trained accountants. As Mr. Smibert said, "There is no other profession... which has contributed more toward helping in the war effort." That is quite true. The prosecution of the war, and the elaborate and complicated processes of business back of it, would become chaotic without the trained guidance of the accountant. During the last war, as the Allies swung into their effort, trained accountants were recalled from the trenches to do more useful work in their civilian clothes. Mr. Smibert's appeal will no doubt meet with a willing response, but women will want to be assured that they are not only alleviating a war-time shortage by entering the profession but that their careers will not be brought to an abrupt end as soon as war is over. In other words, they will want equality of opportunity with men in the profession, and there is no good reason why they shouldn't get it.

SCHOOL DAYS ARE OVER

THE END OF JUNE sees practically all our schools closed for the long summer vacation and thousands of children are free from the work and discipline of the schoolroom. Many of the youngsters have already left the city, a few for summer cottages with their parents, many to go to one or other of the well organized camps in the vicinity of Montreal. Some of the older boys and girls will go into work for the summer; some will spend the next two months on farms. The change from the long months in school will be welcomed by the children and will rest and refresh their young minds.

Almost every year, at this time, there is some talk of extending the school term later into the summer, of cutting the holidays down to a month or six weeks. Those who favour this extension argue that the children are better in school than out of it, and that the advantage of more rapid advancement due to increased weeks of study is worth considering. These people who argue in this fashion forget that they themselves were once children. Ten months of pretty consistent attendance, attention, and home work take a lot out of a young mind. They're entitled to two months or more of change and freedom. These people also forget the teachers. While school hours are not long, and there are many holidays throughout the term, teaching is nevertheless one of the most trying of all the professions. At the end of ten months of it, most teachers need a two months' change. And they do much better work in the autumn because of it.

OUR SHORT STORY

A HOUSE IN BARBARY SQUARE

By D. K. FINDLAY

(Reprinted by permission of Collier's and the author)

Synopsis of preceding chapter: Sam Lawrence, attached to an American mission in London, takes a room at No. 44 Barbary Square, in a house tenanted by a queer assortment of people varying in social status. He meets Sylvia Cromer who persuades him to accompany her to a meeting of residents in the block, called to consider methods of dealing with a new type of incendiary bombs, Nazi raiders are dropping on London.

MISS WHITTAKER said that this meeting was in the nature of a warning so that no one should be surprised and indignant if a bomb blew up in his face. The authorities were experimenting and when the new technique was decided upon, they would be instructed. In the meantime, they advised waiting a short period—say four minutes—in order to give the bomb time to explode, before treating it as an ordinary incendiary bomb.

Thereupon Mrs. Hawkrider rose, and as soon as Sam heard her firm carrying voice he recognized in her a sister of all the American clubwomen he had known. She said that Barbary Square knew what happened if you left an incendiary alone, even if the authorities did not. Their attitude was typical of a government whose characteristics were compromise and shilly-shally. To bring the matter to a head, she moved that until they received precise instructions regarding the reception of the new bombs, they continue to deal with incendiaries as they were accustomed to do. Someone in the back row, murmuring, seconded the motion.

"But I say—" protested Miss Whittaker. But the meeting was breaking up into knots of people who began immediately to talk about the latest change in food points, the wonderful Russians and the state of the dahlia beds in the square.

Walking home, Sam thanked Sylvia as for a treat. It was wonderful, he said, to see the English character in its full gaudy bloom. "Haven't they any imagination? Can they guess what it will be like if explosives are dropped with incendiaries? It'll be like the front porch of hell. That Mrs. Pettapiece—she's so cute I'd like to keep her on the mantel for an ornament, but has she any conception of what happens when a bomb goes off?"

Sylvia gave him an odd look. "I expect so," she said. "She was through the blitz. But don't let us talk of bombs. Let's talk of the States."

"Have you been there?"

"No, but I see all the pictures. Where is your home?"

"In Vermont."

"What do they eat there?"

Sam felt hungry at the recollection. "Wheatcakes and maple syrup, turkey with cranberry sauce, pumpkin pies, apple cider."

"Go on," she moaned. "Tell me all the wonderful details."

It was to be a whole week before fire-watching duty came around for them again and it seemed to Sam a long time to wait. He lay in bed one evening and suggested that he might be of more use as a fire watcher if he knew something about it.

"Right," she said. "Our Miss C. will be pleased to show you about."

She took him downstairs to the area where the pumps, the spades and the longhanded snuffers were kept. She showed him how an incendiary could be snuffed out with sand or extinguished by the spray from a stirrup pump. A curious feeling came over Sam. Her skin had a lovely bloom, she was small-waisted and her bosom was deep and young. She was a pretty girl with a clear title to romance and good times, and here she was in a dingy basement room handling rusty tools. It was monstrous that she should be exposed to the bloody violence of bombs.

"Let's go up," he said. "I get the idea."

On the way up she pointed to an old mattress under the stairs. "That's where we used to go when things got too noisy. A stout stairway along a wall is a good shelter."

They went around to the warden's post in the next street. The post was sheltered in the basement walls of a strong old house.

"Hi-ho, Mr. Coverley. This is Mr. Lawrence of Vermont, checking in on Civilian Defense. Just put on a raid for him, will you? He wants action."

Mr. Coverley, a comfortable figure buttoned into blue battle dress, said how-do and that he was so molly from doing nothing he wouldn't know what to do, himself. Sylvia played a game of darts with him, going around the clock like a veteran but she was beaten. "You can never win from the warden's," she claimed. "they spend all their time practicing."

THEY strolled back through the soft natural dusk and sat on her balcony. The moon rose, turning the trees in the square into an enchanted forest.

"You know," said Sam, "that's a right pretty moon. They couldn't do better than that in Vermont."

"I expect this means you are getting over the homesickness."

"Haven't been homesick a lick since you walked into my room and shook me till my teeth rattled."

"I'll bet you miss the American girls with their gorgeous figures."

"Not while you're around. You don't need any Lend-Lease in that department."

Her voice took on the rich phony accent of the movies' Southwest.

"Shore is a mighty purty speech, stranger. Durn' if it ain't. Or—do they talk like that in Vermont?"

"Not by a couple of thousand miles. Speaking of figures, Violet knocked me down again. She just brushes into me and over I go. The girl doesn't know her own strength. I wonder why she isn't in one of the services."

"She wants to very much."

"Then why doesn't she? That's one thing about America—the girls don't hang on to their mothers' apron strings after they've grown six feet high."

"And that's another thing about America," said Sylvia crisply. "they must hold the world's record for leaping to conclusions."

SAM's idea of fire watching was that he and Sylvia should spend four hours together. "The rules say nothing about taking two hours apiece. Way I figure it, we can watch out your window a couple hours and then we'll watch out mine a couple of hours."

"Way I figure it," laughed Sylvia. "I'll be in bed two minutes after 'ny two hours are up. In our office we work and slave. It's bad enough staying up to midnight."

She was wearing slacks, an old purple sweater and a scarf around her hair. Her figure met the acid test of slacks with ease. To Sam she looked pretty enough to eat but she looked tired. It occurred to him that most Londoners looked a bit tired.

do. If you like to have a nap, I'll call you at midnight."

He went upstairs to his room and settled down to a heavy book on European history. Some time later he was jerked out of his absorption by a sound. He switched off the light and drew back the blackout curtains. Far away and high up, he could hear the passing of aircraft. The sound was stirring and exciting—and the thought of all that invisible power was somewhat frightening.

"It's all right," said Sylvia. "they're ours."

She must have come out on her balcony, it was so dark he could not see her.

"Hey, you go to sleep."

"All right, I'll hign off now. If there is a warning, call me."

"Do you think there will be?"

"Well, we raided Berlin last night. Good night, Sam."

He remained leaning on his window sill, looking out into the velvety black. Time dragged slowly, waiting. It was a curious business, fire watching. All over the city, in every block and building, warehouse and factory, there was a man, woman or child, sitting up—waiting like himself in a bedroom or up on a roof. Every night, fine or wet or cold, someone was there.

He looked at his watch again. Five minutes to two. In five minutes he would go quietly through the sleeping house and knock on Miss Willoughby's door. Her name was next on the rota. She was a stout, brown woman who did district nursing down near the docks, and every morning at seven she went pumping off on her bicycle which she kept in the front hall. Well, he would give the Willoughbys, every minute that was coming to her, for she was a world's worker.

There was a whisper of sound which sent a prickle through his blood. A banshee cry wailing up from the south, coming nearer. Unmistakable now, the sirens were sounding.

He whirled around, fell over a chair and flew down the stairs.

"Sylvia!"

"Mmmmmmm."

"Sylvia!" He found a silken shoulder and shook it.

"Drat the man!" she groaned. "The bouncer, the beastly cad!"

She stirred. "Hitler, I mean. All right, I'm awake. Go to the post and report. Don't forget your tin hat."

He chased up the stairs again and found his helmet. Outside, the night was tingling to the quivering, chilling snarl of the sirens. That must be a bloody awful sound to hear after a few raids, he thought, as he galloped through the darkness. No one else in London seemed to be awake.

The ray from his dimmed torch found the railing which guarded the steps to the warden's post, and he leaped down them.

"Hello, Mr. Coverley," Sam panted. "Sector 8 alert or whatever you say!"

"Good," said Mr. Coverley. "Just putting on a little show for you, Mr. Lawrence. Hope it won't be too noisy."

As Sam turned away, a short woman in a big slicker with her helmet falling over her eyes came up. "Hell Hitler," she said. "Sector 7 on watch."

Returning, Sam was aware of hurry and movement in the darkness. He heard running footsteps, the clink of equipment, caught the gleam of helmets. Firemen, he guessed. There were more people awake than he had thought. Then a new sound stopped him in his tracks—a sound like a distant waterfall. The guns.

In his own street he nearly ran down a wandering boy.

"It's Mr. Lawrence, isn't it?"

He winked his torch at the other's feet. It was Colonel Tenchley and his bulldog.

"No need to hurry, I fancy." The colonel turned around and walked along with him. "Those guns are some distance off. Probably down the Estuary."

Another figure rose from the dark steps of No. 44. It was Sylvia and in the glimpse he got by torchlight, she looked neat and unexpectedly military. She wore a steel helmet, trench coat and a leather gloves and there was a lanyard around her neck. No one else seemed to be astir. The sound of the barrage increased suddenly. The colonel and interested said, "Ah," and named the locality of the batteries. Sylvia yawned.

"What about the others?" asked Sam nervously. "Shouldn't they be going to a shelter?"

"Bless you," said Sylvia. "they won't go to a shelter. There may be work for them to do. Go in and look if you like. They should be up, some of them."

SAM went in through the front door and stopped in astonishment. There were, sitting on the stairs, looking like caricatures of themselves. Over an assortment of odd garments, they wore old coats and they had gloves and helmets in their laps. They were chatting without any sign of concern. In the hall was a pile of pumps and snuffers. The old ladies of Barbary Square versus the Luftwaffe, thought Sam with a gleam of sardonic pity. There would be a nice mess when the bombs began to fall.

Ferdie, the chinless youth who wore a frightful old sweater with a drooping neck, called out. "I say, old boy, is it raining out there?"

Sam rejoined Sylvia and the colonel in the street. A light grew out of the sky. A string of incandescent globes came floating down.

Sam felt a vibration in the soles of his feet. He heard an uneven rumble that seemed to come from under the earth, and in the south a gout of flame shot up.

"Poor old King's Row," said Ferdie behind them. "It always catches one."

A little car zoomed around the corner and Mr. Coverley dropped from it. "Miss Cromer! Miss Cromer."

"Here."

"We're sending Miss Whittaker to help out at Barham Crescent. Will you take over the block?"

"Right," said Sylvia, and Mr. Coverley went quickly off again through the red haze.

Something struck the earth three solid blows. A whistle blew faintly. The sound leaped from street to street. The leaves of the trees rustled all at once and in the houses the windows shook in their frames. Sylvia pulled at her lanyard. "Oh, dear," she said, and her voice was low and had a quaver, "here we go again." She ran out into the street and blew a blast. Her voice rang out: "Take cover!"

Sam joined her and they trotted the length of the block. There was usually one tin-hatted watcher near each door. She stopped to speak to each one. "Evening, Sylvia."

"Hello, Mr. Thompson. Whittaker has gone to Barham Crescent. The rallying point is the sandbin before 44."

They returned to the sandbin where a shadowy group had gathered. "Ferdie and Violet, will you take the roof?"

"Righto."

The guns had hung a solid curtain of sound against the night. At intervals a larger explosion made the fabric shake and hollow. Sam felt the wind of an explosion he did not hear, then came a curious medley of whistling and hissing. Something bounced and rattled on the roadway and he jumped a foot.

"What was that?"

"Incendiaries," Sylvia told him. "Open the bin, please, Colonel."

She ran out in the street, giving little toots on her whistle. The doors of Number 44 opened and the residents flowed down the steps and into the square. They knew what to do and with a moderate amount of bustle and calling out, they set about doing it.

Sam learned a lot about incendiaries in the next few minutes. These were slim metal cylinders about a foot long and if you did not smother them at once with sand or a fine spray they burst into white glow and gave off an unbearable heat. The square looked like a corner of an amateur hell. The air sizzled. Strange figures, grotesque in the glare, evening service. This is a grand gathering of enthusiastic young people who together constitute a most inspiring fellowship. About half a dozen instrumentalists lead the singing. The crowd really sings. Many young people participate in a variety of ways. The gathering concludes with a Circle of Friendship. All young people and especially those in uniform, are cordially welcomed.

At the morning service, Dr. Johnston will conclude the series of addresses entitled: "Life's Irreducible Minimum of Necessities." Previous addresses will be briefly reviewed leading to the subject of the morning: "The Water of Life." The Communion Service takes place at twelve o'clock noon. The Lord has invited all His Children to be the Guests of God at the Table of the Lord.

AT WESTMOUNT THEATRE

It is not every day that an actor, in a screen role, can literally re-live exciting moments of his past. This experience fell to the lot of Pierre Aumont...

Peters, young actress who scored outstandingly in "Random Harvest" and who gives a fine sympathetic performance. Beautiful Signe Hasso is seductive and sometimes menacing as the Nazi spy...

Aumont, when serving in the French army, won the Croix de Guerre and figured in dozens of desperate battles before he escaped Europe when the Nazis overran France.

Jack Conway's direction is deft and takes advantage of the thrills of the U-boat quest and Commando raid, and Charles Rosher's photography and Lennie Hayton's musical score are effective.

He plays a British secret agent assigned to locate a hiding place of Nazi submarines on the Brittany coast. He assumes the identity of another man, finds his way to that man's home, meets the man's sweetheart, becomes involved with a charmer who proves to be a Nazi secret agent...

Principals include Margaret Wycherly, Reginald Owen, Miles Mander, Sara Padden, John Emery, George Coulouris, Juanita Quigley and many others.

The picture is based on the novel by Helen MacInnes.

At The Snowdon

Making her debut in a blaze of lovely singing, Vera Lynn stars in Columbia's "We'll Meet Again" which starts Saturday at the Snowdon theatre.

Co-starring with Gerardo (Gerald Bright) and his famous London recording orchestra, in the verdant story of a small town girl who makes good, Miss Lynn, with a shy sincerity which marks her as one of the greatest screen discoveries in years, has won her way to the hearts of millions of people, who, hitherto, have known her only as a voice.

The story of "We'll Meet Again" lends itself, singularly well as a starring vehicle for Miss Lynn, for it contains much that has happened to her in real life, away from sound studios and microphones. Remaining quite natural and unspoiled by the truly amazing fame which the public have entrusted to her, she gives a performance, it is reported, worthy of a seasoned actress and sings with that intangible appeal and charm that has carried her along road to success. Patricia Roc, Ronald Ward and Donald Gray give fine performance.

aces and the work of Gerardo and his orchestra is outstanding. But it is the singing of Vera Lynn and her renditions of "When You're Up To Your Neck In Hot Water," "I'm Yours Sincerely," "After The Rain," "All The World Sings A Lullaby," "You Never Knew" and the title-number "We'll Meet Again" that makes the picture a grand piece of entertainment.

The added picture, "Ladies Day," is a fast, clicking picture of baseball and a wacky pitcher who has "curve" trouble on and off the diamond and mostly OFF the diamond with all his feminine fans including the other player's wives, Lupe Velez, the "hot-tamale" is starred with Eddie Albert, Patsy Kelly and Max Baer in support. Latest news events and selected shorts will complete the program.

Beecham Cheered; Lawrence Soloist

By FRANCES GOLTMAN (Monitor Music Critic) Duplicating the success of the first Peoples' Concert with even greater applause, Sir Thomas Beecham again drew a huge audience of music lovers to the Forum last Saturday evening, when Marjorie Lawrence, dramatic soprano, was soloist.

Sir Thomas, who is a master at programme building, chose an assortment of orchestral numbers that appealed to the public in no small measure, the proof being in the demonstrative bursts of applause with cheers from the audience. The concert began with Wagner's Prelude to "Die Meistersingers," which is that composer's only comic opera, and was given an imposing rendition.

Marjorie Lawrence, who sang here recently in "Tristan and Isolde" chose the closing scene, "The Twilight of the Gods" by Wagner as her first offering. Miss Lawrence was in her usual fine voice and the audience insisted on a repetition of her second number, the beautiful aria, "Il est doux, il est bon" from Massenet's opera "Hérodiade" for which she was rewarded with deafening applause.

The orchestra rendered Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony" with much élan. This work is a great favourite. After the intermission, Bizet's "L'Arlesienne Suite" received an ovation, and Sir Thomas made the orchestra arise several times to Walter the honours. The Pantomime Music from "Hansel and Gretel" made a good contrast after this and "Valse Triste" by Schellus was given a sensitive performance, full of grace and sadness. This splendid concert closed with the tuneful and rhythmic Danes Polovtsiennes from the opera "Prince Igor" by Borodin. The next concert will be given on July 10th, when Lady Beecham (Betty Humby) will be soloist in the Saint-Saens G Minor Piano Concerto.

In stellar support of Muni, in addition to the Canadian troops, are Anna Lee, as a young English woman who meets the Norwegian patriot during a vacation while Europe is at "peace"; Lillian Gish, who returns to the screen after a nine-year absence to appear as a Norwegian housewife; Sir Cedric Hardwicke, seen as an English admiral and commander of the forces participating in the Commando raid, and Robert Coote, Hollywood player now in the Canadian Air Force, who was loaned to Columbia for his role of Commando captain.

Lester Cowan produced "Commandos Strike at Dawn," with the co-operation not only of the Canadian, but of the British and American governments, as well.

At York Theatre

If ever there was a picture to make every movie fan happy, it's Paramount's unparalleled musical comedy, "Star Spangled Rhythm," which opened last night at the York United Theatre with just about everything imaginable in the way of entertainment and just about everyone on the Paramount lot. It's without doubt the best and biggest show of shows in Hollywood history — a feast for eyes and ears and heart and funnyness.

No matter who your favorite Paramount star is, you're sure to see him — or her — in "Star Spangled Rhythm," for the studio has turned out en masse to make this the top musical comedy of this or any other movie season. Stupendous is definitely the word for it. There hasn't been anything to equal it since the first movie flicker fascinated audiences.

Any film which utilizes the diversified talents of more than forty stars, giving them all a chance to strut their stuff and making that stuff an integral part of the story, really has something! And that's exactly what "Star Spangled Rhythm" does. Among the forty stars you'll find Bing Crosby, Bob Hope, Fred MacMurray, Franchot Tone, Ray Milland, Victor Moore, Dorothy Lamour, Paulette Goddard, Vera Zorina, Mary Martin, Dick Powell, Betty Hutton, Eddie Bracken, Veronica Lake, Alan Ladd, Rochester, William Bendix, Jerry Colonna, MacDonald Carey, Walter Abel, and more, and more!

Don't get the idea that "Star Spangled Rhythm" is just a revue; it isn't. It tells the story of Victor Moore, Paramount studio gatekeeper, who has deceived his sailor son, Eddie Bracken, into believing that he runs the studio. When Eddie shows up at the studio with a group of friends, something drastic has to be done, and Moore and Betty Hutton, his switchboard operator friend, do it. Before very long, every one of the stars is helping them do it and it all adds up to really hilarious fun.

All the stars — most of them playing themselves — are seen on their home ground, the Paramount studio. They all perform against a background of music, dancing and comedy, making "Star Spangled Rhythm" the greatest entertainment of its kind.

Boys of the 1st Company are counting the days until camp opens, and when the time comes, a large attendance is anticipated. centred about the St. Andrew's boys who this year are organized and will join in the sports programme of the camp. Last year it was not until the last few days that this was achieved but it certainly added much zest to those last few days.

Many of the boys will be at camp for their first time, but there is little danger of homesickness for the tent leaders are well prepared to keep the boys active throughout the whole period. Sgt. Jim Wright, Corp. Bob Eastwood, Sgt. Edwin Goring and L/Cpl. Ian Campbell will be the tent leaders.

Corp. Bob Eastwood will be camp treasurer, handling the bank, and Sgt. Jim Wright the Quartermaster. Sgt. Edwin Goring is acting as Adjutant but will be unable to remain for the full period.

GROVEHILL LADIES SWELL GOLF FUND

The Ladies Branch of the Grovehill Golf and Country Club have once again set a new record for lady golfers to shoot at with regard to its war charities collections.

On Saturday a mixed bridge was held at the clubhouse, which again proved very successful. The whole proceeds which, together with the amount raised during the winter months, will result in a sum of $500 being forwarded to the Quebec Branch of the Canadian Ladies' Golf Union, headed by Mrs. H. W. Soper, for the C.L.G.U. War Service Fund.

A great deal of credit for the success of the Grovehill collection is due to Mrs. A. T. Metcalfe, president, Mrs. P. D. Martin, treasurer, and Miss Eva Lee, vice-president, who acted as convener of the mixed bridge, and the splendid support of their committee.

WEDDINGS

JONES-STEEVES

The marriage of Constance Ellen (Nonnie), daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John T. R. Steeves, of Notre Dame de Grace, to Sgt. Instructor Ralph Leonard Jones, R.C.A.F., son of Capt. the Rev. and Mrs. T. W. Jones, of Westmount, took place Saturday afternoon last at quarter-past five o'clock, in Calvary United Church, Capt. the Rev. T. W. Jones, father of the bridegroom, officiating. Nature's Wonderland

Montreal seems so far away, yet it was only Friday that we pointed out our assorted luggage to a tired old porter and boarded the train. Since that time, we have reached our first goal, which is Banff, Alberta.

Here, we have come to appreciate what "a room with a view" really means. The room is a spacious one with wall-to-wall broadloom, early Colonial maple furniture and ship's wheel lamps. The bedspreads and draperies are of natural homespun, with bandings of rust and there are down Hudson Bay blankets. Two easy chairs have soft, green cushions and the Venetian blinds on the four windows are taped in the same green. The bathroom is a symphony of red, yellow and green stars on mottled black.

That is the room. But the view—framed by the west windows—the broad expanse of Mount Norway thrusts its rugged crown into the drifting clouds. Swinging southward to the gap between Norway and Sulphur mountain lie the snow-clad crests of the main range above Simpson Pass. So near they look that one would think they could be reached in a ten-minute walk, but, actually, they are twenty miles away.

From the south windows can be seen the rolling green slopes of Sulphur mountain and the more rugged Mount Rundle—like a stiff cocked hat with a white feather peak.

Dwarfed in size by the stupendous back-drop, the quaint little shops of the town present a fairy-like appearance, with their bright displays of Indian bead work, unusual carvings and leather goods, etc.

Somehow, through design or accident, there is a harmony between town and setting. The village Bank is in a natural stone one-story building with a wide

Mrs. Gill, mother of the bridegroom, wore a gown of beige shadowed sheer with a navy blue hat and blue accessories and a corsage bouquet of Briarcliffe roses.

The reception was held in the Oak room of Victoria Hall, where Briarcliffe roses and white tapers were used as decorations.

Later A.C. 1 and Mrs. Gill left for North Hatley, Que., the bride travelling in a suit of yellow handkerchief linen trimmed with Havana brown accessories.

WEEKLY TIPS FOR MEAT RATIONING

A new pamphlet, "Meat" has just been issued by the Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. It covers the buying, storing and cooking of meat and includes a number of recipes especially adapted to meat rationing. It may be obtained by writing to the Publicity and Extension Division, Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

The Meat Coupon Value Chart and Cooking Guide which has been mailed to every household in Canada by the Wartime Prices and Trade Board contains much information that will help the housewife with her coupon budgeting and meat buying. Keep your copy in a convenient place for ready reference.

For the Ration Cook Book a recipe from the Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, is given below.

- Victory Meat Balls
 (1 coupon . . . 6 servings)
 2 medium onions, chopped
 3 tablespoons fat
 1 lb. Hamburger
 1/2 cup finely diced, cooked carrots
 1/2 cup cooked peas
 1/2 teaspoon salt
 1-8 teaspoon pepper
 1 egg
 Flour
 2 1/2 cups canned tomatoes
 1 1/2 cups uncooked macaroni, spaghetti or noodles.

Cook onion in hot fat, then skim out and add to meat. Add vegetables, salt, pepper and egg. Form into 12 balls, roll in flour and brown on all sides in remaining fat. Add tomato. Simmer on top of stove for 20 minutes. Serve on cooked macaroni, spaghetti or noodles.

PRECAUTIONS: Make sure radio is not placed with its back flat against wall—leave an inch or so space. If it crackles or makes noises: (1) Check set's electric cord and plug—does it fit properly? (2) Check connections of nearby electrical appliances. (3) Check aerial and ground wires to see if they are broken or rubbing against other wires or metals. (4) See that tubes fit firmly in sockets. (5) Clean dust out every so often with soft brush or vacuum cleaner. (6) If there is outside aerial, make sure it is equipped with lightning arrester. Even "static discharges" may ruin a set unless they are by-passed by the arrester.

FRUITS CANNED WITHOUT SUGAR ARE SUCCESSFUL

Many housewives will receive less sugar than they had hoped to get for canning this season but this need not mean empty shelves and empty sealers at the end of the canning season.

The Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture points out that all fruits can be successfully canned without sugar. So when the supply of fruit outruns the sugar supply don't let the fruit go to waste. Can it the sugarless way, mark the jars plainly,—"no sugar" and use the fruit, sweetened to taste, whenever, during the winter the family ration can best spare the sugar.

In all cases when fruit is canned without sugar, 5 minutes extra sterilization should be allowed.

Strawberries, raspberries, blueberries, cherries, currants, plums and rhubarb can be packed in sterilized sealers and crushed until the juice overflows, then partially sealed and sterilized. An alternative method which is used for peaches, pears and apricots is to pack the fruit in sterilized sealers then fill the sealers with boiling water instead of syrup. A bulletin, "Wartime Canning" has been published by the Consumer Section of the Dominion Department of Agriculture. It contains detailed information on the canning of fruits and vegetables and gives directions as well for making jams and jellies. Experienced canners, as well as women who are new at the job, will find the bulletin invaluable. It may be obtained, free of charge by writing to Publicity and Extension Division, Department of Agriculture, Ottawa.

WHERE TO GO VACATION WHAT TO DO

11 Counties Form "Cantons de l'Est"

Vacation Land Area Covers More Than 6,500 Square Miles

The Eastern Townships, besides being wealthy in an agricultural sense, are also rich in vacation possibilities. There are also numerous other holiday haunts, all of which have their patrons, including Richmond, Coaticook, Dixville, Warwick, Danville, Kingsley, Comptonville and Lennoxville.

Situated south of Montreal the Townships have become known to thousands of holiday-makers from Canada and the United States as a "province within a province." They can boast a considerable number of attractions for the taste of every pleasure seeker.

In many respects, the Eastern Townships are distinct from any other section of Quebec. Settled originally by English immigrants from New England and directly from the Old Country, the territory was organized on the old world "township plan" rather than the "parish plan," peculiar to French-Canadian communities, in the province of Quebec.

Eleven counties constitute the Eastern Townships: Sherbrooke, Stanstead, Compton, Richmond, Wolfe, Megantic, Drummond, Athabaska, Brome, Shefford and Missisquoi, covering an area of more than 6,500 miles, with most of the interesting spots situated on the Montreal-Portland line of the Canadian National Railways.

LABOUR PEER
Lard Wedgewood, British labour peer, in his new book, "Testament to Democracy," says of the Boy Scout Movement: "Reflection leads me to the queer conclusion that of all the inventions of my age the three of real utility have been bicycles, Boy Scouts and the cinema. As for Baden-Powell's Boy Scouts, I hope they are still doing their daily good deed. There, too, imagination has its fling as never before for the working class. The discipline and adventure of camping out, the common work and comradeship, did as much to change the youth of Britain as did Hitler's training in brutality and violence to change the youth of Germany."

It will be the end of the line for Hitler if you transfer your idle hands into interest-bearing Victory Bonds.

DESIGN FOR WARTIME HOLIDAY

The accent in 1943 is for shorter holidays closer to home and this is being filled by the St. Lawrence-Saguenay and Great Lakes cruises on the regular schedules of Canada Steamship Lines. These boat trips, ranging in length from a week-end to nine days, give an opportunity to Canadians to enjoy short civilian furloughs and, at the same time, to view some of the most historic and scenic country in the Dominion. Pictured above is a meeting of two C.S.L. pleasure vessels in the deep waters of the Saguenay River. These invigorating trips start from either Toronto or Montreal throughout the summer up until mid-September. C.S.L. Photo ferent nature. At our expense, regular moving picture programmes are put on for the children at the School for Crippled Children, as mentioned in the chairman's report, and tools have been provided for the workshop. This is in addition to the prizes given for general proficiency for the year ending June 1943.

"The work of the War Services Committee, as shown by the chairman's report, has been outstanding and reflects a great deal of credit upon him and his committee.

Work of Committees

Youths' Service	$ 258.00
Community Service	140.00
Crippled Children	315.00
War Services	875.00
Women's Naval Auxiliary	200.00
W.V.R.C.	1,392.00
Grace Day Home Hospital	100.00
St. Justine Hospital	1,000.00
Montreal Children's Hospital	2,000.00
Julius Richardson Convalescent Home	2,000.00

"The grand total of this reaches $7,400.00, a not inconsiderable sum.

"Under the active supervision of the publicity chairman, Rotarian J. C. Nelson, an unrelenting sales campaign of War Savings Stamps has been carried out at each meeting. Since the project was begun, the sales, by legitimate and other methods, have amounted to $1,516.25, an amount which will not be unwelcome to the Minister of Finance.

"The Youths' Service Committee has successfully promoted the following: The annual field day and prize giving at Werdeale summer camp; presentation of prizes at the Westmount Hobby Show; presentation of a proficiency cup to the Westmount Air Cadets; furnishing of sports equipment in Southern Westmount playing fields; and furnishings of the Canadian Women's Army Corps, St. Sulpice Barracks on Atwater Avenue have been made much more homelike due to the money spent by our Committee. Sporting equipment and furniture have been provided at the St. Eugene Camp of the Empire Air Training Plan. Reading, in the form of magazines and newspaper subscriptions have been provided at the Merchant Seamen's Manning Pool and, as you will see from report figures, two donations of $100.00 each were given to the Women's Naval Auxiliary, who provide merchant seamen, the most gallant men in the Empire, with much needed clothes. The war services committee provided a good bit of sports equipment for the ship's company of His Majesty's Canadian Ship "Westmount", as well as 10,000 cigarettes at Christmas-time. The ship's captain, Lieut. F. G. Hutchings, has written to us more than once telling how welcome have been these attentions.

"This is no insignificant amount of money for 46 active members of any club to raise and give away. This amounts to an average of $159.00 per member and illustrates why the Rotary Club of Westmount is held in good esteem.

President's Aides
"You gentlemen have also accomplished something which you may not have observed. You have brought about a change, and a not insignificant one, in him whom you chose as President a year ago. There are some among you who might be tempted to say that any change of that nature must be for the better. I would agree to that, although grudgingly.

"A man who holds such an office for even twelve months learns a new respect for his fellows. He finds that they assume he is all right, until he proves himself unworthy. He is taught that after all he is a man of but little importance. He finds that some of his suggestions, worked out after great thought and study, are voted down, and unanimously, by the board of directors. He learns, day by day, that is a great day in his life, that when things go against him, even momentarily, these, his fellow members, who, with alacrity, sit in judgment upon him, rise quickly to his defence and set about to help him.

"It becomes impressed upon him that the mistakes of the year are laid at his door, and at times quite rightly. Yet, when an effort is successful, it often proved so because it was carried out with loyalty by efficient chairmen and their committees.

"This is no idle statement. "A few weeks ago one of my fellow members — and you may perhaps imagine who that person was — said to me, "There is something to be said for a president who may be of little note himself, but who has the happy faculty of choosing good chairmen."

"Such things may well break the spirit of one of my humility. However, the experience of the past year has strengthened my character to such an extent that I am now able to bear up under such hardships.

"It is quite possible, and it does happen more often than not, that a man may enter upon the high office of president with a complex of inferiority. Let me tell you, however, that with only rare exceptions, they will leave that office immeasurably bettered in that respect. He can be a man who takes offence easily, but twelve months in office help him to outgrow that unfortunate trait of character. Should he be one who seems to give offence himself at times, but without intent, then, after a year in office, his fellows will learn that there is no malice in his heart. It soon becomes impressed upon him while he administers his duties that sincerity and stoutness of heart help to win for him the respect of his associates, than which there is no greater reward in the gift of man.

"These things have I learned, and for teaching them to me, I find myself in your debt to a greater degree than I shall ever repay.

Future of Empire
"Times have changed since we of this board of directors took office. Look back a year, just one year. Our enemies stood before El Alamein in Egypt, but today the unpleasant odour of Germany and Italy is no longer apparent in the continent of Africa. Our enemies have lost the confidence which we have gained, but our confidence is of a higher order. The final punishment of those doers of evil is at hand. I would venture to say there is great promise that this will be accomplished well before yet another president takes office.

"We in this Rotary Club form part of an institution which holds a good name in the world of free people. We also help to form the Empire of British peoples, an Empire which has grown better and better for nearly a thousand years. Now it stands as one of the greatest influences for good known to mankind. Even its enemies admit that in their heart, Haven't we cause to remember with pride that we are of that race which, three years ago today, stood as the only defender of all that is right and good, a people whose habit it has become, not to admit defeat.

"Rotarians claim to be international in scope and ideals. We say that with a good deal of pride. These very ideals teach you and me to fulfil, with loyalty, the duties and obligations of our own nationality. That in itself is a lofty purpose. In these stirring days, when British principles shine with a brilliant lustre, it becomes the proud privilege of every Britisher to promote that purpose; to assume his full share in furthering the good repute of a well-loved nation. It would seem to me that the enhanced prestige of our Empire in these latter times has had much to do with the sturdy and upright purpose of our own kind.

King George Quoted
This is well illustrated in the words quoted a year or two ago by a Christian gentleman of England, to whom the good name of his people means so much: "I said to a man who stood at the gate of the year, 'Give me a light that I may tread safely into the unknown,' and he replied, 'Go out into the darkness and put your hand into the hand of God. That shall be to you better than light and safer than the known way.'"

"You and I might well keep this before us as a guiding motive."

A HOUSE

It was about thirty inches long and four inches through. "Hey, Sylvia!" he shouted, "these are different!" Her whistle was shrilling. Her voice was dismayed and urgent: "Take cover. Everybody, please." Something struck with a shower of earth among the flower beds.

"Oh, the poor flowers," cried Mrs. Cherril. She ran toward them, carrying a long-handled spade and began to poke at the thing, trying to roll it out of the bed.

Paralysis descended on the scene in the garden. People stood in frozen attitudes with staring faces. Sam was the first to shake it off. He began to run. He had won the high hurdles at his college, he had a spring and a stride, but now he felt like a slow-motion picture of a man running. He stretched out his arm, he felt Mrs. Cherril's body bent over it with the force of his rush. He slanted away, he felt his heels digging into the turf like the hoofs of a turning horse. Get your legs under you . . . move, move, move . . . get some drive into it . . . He knew the bomb was going off, his mind seemed to turn toward it as his body arched away from it . . .

His room was filled with flowers the next day and people kept dropping in, trying to thank him without actually talking about it. Mrs. Cherril, he learned, was pretty well, some shock but no burns. He himself had headache which wore off, and a burn on one arm where a fragment had nicked it. In the evening, Sylvia came in with a book, some apples and more flowers.

"Thanks, Gosh, Barbary Square certainly goes in for flowers." "Perhaps we feel that you deserve them." She put her face against a fragrant sheaf. "These are lovely."

"Violet brought those. She's a great girl—Violet. I'm strong for her. She and Ferdie must have had a hot time on the roofs last night. Ferdie was telling me about it. One of the new ones—a daisy-buster he calls them—got stuck in the steel netting and they slid down and pushed it into the street. It went off and blew in a garage door.

"I get a big kick out of Ferdie; he's as cool as a cucumber. And do you know something? The Cherrils used to live in a village on the south coast and they were bombed a lot and one day the bombs got the school. Mrs. Cherril can never forget about it and sometimes at night when she can't sleep, it calms her to sit on the stairs. Violet told me all about it—she said she hoped they hadn't disturbed me sitting there one night. She's a great girl—Violet. It's tough on her being tied down here, but the way she figures it, she has to be with her mother at this time, no matter what she wants to do herself."

"What a lot of news!" Sylvia exclaimed. "Was Colonel Tenchley in to see you?" "Sure, he spent the afternoon here. We'll have to go down and smoke a pipe with him some night. Sylvia, the old boy is lonely. He's spent half his life in the Burmese jungle; he's almost forgotten how to get along with white folk."

"People aren't so queer when you know them, are they?" "Queer? These people aren't queer. We've got a great gang here in good old 44 and we're going to have a lot of fun. I like this town. It's an exciting place to live. Gosh, you're beautiful."

She jumped. "Do you always say things like that—bang without any introduction?" "Build-up, we say. Yep, I like this town with its barrage balloons and its gardens and its lovely Miss Sylvia Cromer. A great town for a love affair."

She was going, she gathered up her gloves and purse. She stood upon her shapely, stockingless legs and took one of his flowers for her buttonhole. At the door she stopped and gave him a little salute. She looked young and gay. "I shall observe your progress with the greatest interest."

DODGERS GET THREE MORE WINS; NAVY AND EQUIPMENT GET TWO A PIECE IN LAST WEEK'S PLAY

Dodgers Latest Victories Now Brings Their Score Up to Ten Wins—Garage Men Also Doing Well—RCOC From Longue Pointe Well Ahead

The Dodgers, Navy and No. 12 Equipment Depot all had a very successful week of play in the Westmount Municipal Senior Softball League. The Dodgers copped three more victories to run their string of wins up to ten while the Navy and the Equipment Depot clubs won two victories apiece.

The RCASC(MT) Garage team and the RCOC from Longue Pointe were the other teams to win games during the week. The present league standing shows the Dodgers and the RCASC(MT) Garage team well ahead of the pack with the RCOC from Longue Pointe, Wireless School, No. 3 Training Command, Navy, and the No. 5 Manning Depot bunched up in the second division.

The Dodgers' first win of the week was no mistake as they took the No. 4 Ordnance Corps team to the tune of 24-0 at the Westmount Barracks' diamond. This was not only a no-hit, no-run game for Allan Dyke but it was also a perfect effort, as not one man reached first base in the seven innings, twenty-one men up and twenty-one men down. Dyke fanned fourteen men during the game. The Dodgers bats accounted for twenty-two hits with Dougie Maher increasing his home run total to six with a pair of circuit clouts.

The Dodgers' other wins were over the Provost Corps, whom they beat 8-5 by virtue of a five run rally in the sixth inning and the No. 5 Manning Depot, who were taken into camp 9-1. Donnie Mann led the Dodgers at bat in the Lachine game with three hits, one of them a long home-run in the seventh frame.

The Navy continue to show a marked improvement with the addition of Ronnie Perowne at second base, they downed the RCOC from Longue Pointe 6-1 last Wednesday and then followed up with an 8-1 victory over the No. 3 Training Command on Thursday evening. Perowne banged out three hits in Thursday's game including a home-run.

The No. 12 Equipment Depot got back into winning ways when they clipped the No. 3 Training Command 7-6 in a thrilling ten inning tilt and then continued on to trim the Provost Corps 5-1 over at the barracks. The Equipment Depot took a six run lead in their game with the Training Command, only to lose it by the end of the sixth frame; from then on the teams battled it out without any score till the Montreal East team pushed over a run in the last half of the tenth frame, when LeGrave singled home Cashin with the winning counter. Over at the barracks the Depot team came up with a winning hurler in Smallshaw, which means that Bradley may be able to get a well-earned rest.

The RCASC(MT) Garage team kept a firm hold on the runner-up spot in the league standing when they trimmed the No. 1 Wireless School 7-4, although they were out-hit by the Sparks' batters. Al Rowthorn and McArthur of the Wireless School got to Art Potter for three hits each while Alfie Jewett, the leading batter of the loop, banged out two hits for the garagemen.

The RCOC from Longue Pointe had a difficult time disposing of the No. 4 Ordnance team by a

Charlie Holland Wins First Putting Tourney

Charlie Holland won the first putting tournament of the season on the adult course at King George when he carded an 88 for the thirty-six hole contest, this score was one stroke better than H. B. Thomson's, who captured the runner-up spot.

Another competition will be held tomorrow at the same course and it will get underway around eight o'clock with F. W. Dengate in charge of the event.

SOFTBALL FIELD DAY TO BE HELD

No games will be played in the senior section of the Westmount Municipal Softball League next Monday evening as the schedule left this as an open date but instead of putting on some postponed games it has been decided to run a "Field Day" for the players on the teams in the men's section and also the women's section if they care to come in on it.

Fungo hitting, base running, throwing for accuracy and other events of a novelty nature will be held. Prizes for the events won by servicemen have been donated by the War Co-ordinating Council.

Many speculations have been made as to who is the longest hitter and who is the fastest base runner and these events should answer all these questions.

"Fungo hitting" is just plain everyday batting the ball with the bat, after tossing it up in the air yourself. The accuracy throw is made from second base to home-plate or from the outfield to home-plate where a barrel is placed. The ball must be thrown into the barrel.

As the full use of the field is needed to stage these events the spectators are asked to co-operate by remaining on the sidelines and watching the events from there.

Memorial Service Held Last Sunday For F-O R. Harvie

Nearly six months ago F. O. Robert Harvie, R.C.A.F., eldest son of Dr. and Mrs. R. Harvie, 355 Metcalfe avenue, met death when in active service over Germany. He was twenty-two years old.

Burial took place at Schleswig Military Cemetery, Germany with full military honours and last Sunday a memorial service was held at St. Andrew's United Church which was largely attended.

In the absence of the Rev. Dr. F. W. Kerr, through illness, the service was taken by the Rev. George Dewey, assisted by Leonard Griffiths.

Physical Fitness Through Exercise And Diet

This is another in a series of health articles by P. M. McFarlane, Physical Director at the Westmount Y.M.C.A.

A great deal has been written about the subject, "Obesity," but I believe that the following article by W. F. Christie, which appeared in the Clinical Journal LXVIII: 3, 196, March 1939, sums up the matter quite adequately.

Once fat is formed within the body, the only way of reducing it seems to be to make the body burn it. There are two methods of doing this: one is to increase metabolism by means of drugs, which is dangerous; the other is to cut down the body's supply of fuel from outside sources, which, if wisely done is safe.

Take first the question of drug treatment. Drugs cannot reduce surplus fat unless they are pushed to the extent of causing illness.

Muscular exercise is not a safe way of reducing those who are overweight. Stout subjects have little cardiac reserve; on slight exertion they become short of breath and develop a rapid pulse rate. To run them up and down tennis courts or make them climb mountains is to court disaster. (It has been estimated that to reduce the body by one pound, not water, one must do the equivalent in exercise of walking 58 miles without stopping.)

Deep massage is another popular "cure". How can it dissipate the pa-

Gottselig Playing Major League Play Fourteen Years

If they ever start hanging up pictures around the corridors of the Stadium in Chicago, pictures of great hockey players who have performed in Chicago uniform, they can start right in with Johnny Gottselig and make no mistake about putting him first on the line.

True, you might get arguments that "Mush" March should not be forced to play second fiddle to Gottselig, Nor Earl Seibert, Nor Paul Thompson. Nor the late Charlie Gardiner.

But we'll go for Johnny Gottselig and let them argue it out. Yes, Johnny not only had a lot of hockey ability but he let it all come out. Never gave up trying at any time. And any time is a long time for Johnny, because he is now playing his fourteenth season in major league hockey. And all with the Chicago Black Hawks.

Johnny Filled The Gap When Paul Thompson ran into player ill a few weeks back, when the Black Hawk machine started to sputter a bit and threatened to blow up in the final drive towards the play-off, the manager did not seek some fancy young dandy for replacement.

He simply looked at his coach, Johnny Gottselig; the coach looked at the manager. There was a mutual agreement right there. Next thing Johnny was in uniform. Next thing he was playing regularly.

A lot of fancy stories have been told about Gottselig, about his birth in Odessa, Russia, how he learned to skate in that country and his coming to Canada. It is true that he was born in Russia. But according to Edwin Johnson in the Chicago Daily News, Gottselig was born in the hamlet of Klosterdorf, of German parents, truly enough in Russia. Turned Pro In Regina His parents moved to Regina, Sask., when Johnny was only two months old and he was considered a Russian. He was 15 years old when he first donned skates. He played with the Regina Pat Juniors, Memorial Cup champions in 1924-25. He turned professional with Regina of the Prairie League in 1926-27 and in 1927-28 joined the Winnipeg Maroons of the Central League. The Chicago team purchased him in 1928-29. His record with the Hawks is a grand one indeed. In his 14 years of play, and several of them like the present, have been rather incomplete seasons, he has tallied 187 goals and 178 assists, for a point total of 345. In 1938-39 he was selected left-winger on the second all-star team. Chicago fans have always admired the play of Gottselig and well they might. For he has given the Hawks grand service over the years. Last season he coached and managed the Kansas City team in the American Association but when the league folded this season Johnny returned to the Hawks as coach and general assistant to Paul Thompson. Yes, Johnny Gottselig has been a credit to the game of hockey for he always gave his best and his best was pretty good. His Scoring Record Here is his scoring record in scheduled play and in play-offs:

Staynor-Dodgers, Royals-Beavers Set For Tomorrow

Doubleheader to be Played At Westmount Park

The Staynor Park team continued their winning ways in the Junior section of the Westmount Municipal Softball League when they won their fourth straight game last Friday night, their victims this time were the Junior Dodgers who took it on the chin by a 16-4 count. In the other half of Friday's twin bill, Rose Miller's Beavers broke into the win column when they swamped the Royals 22-7.

The Staynor team had little difficulty with the offerings of Eward Read, who was on the mound for the Dodgers, especially in the late innings when they scored the most of their runs. Warren Prudhomme and Earle Cannon knocked out home runs for the winners while Solly Kalil obliged for the Dodgers.

Every one of the Beavers participated in the nineteen hit assault on Roy Hellyer, the Royals pitcher, as they banged out a 22-7 decision over the bottom place team. Johnnie Peterson, Doug Heron and Harold Fairhead led the onslaught with three hits apiece while circuit clouts were connected by Fairhead, Eric Swaine and Buddy Cochrane.

Tomorrow night's doubleheader at Westmount Park sees the Staynor team meeting the Dodgers again while the Royals and Beavers hook up on diamond No. 2. On Tuesday night the Beavers will travel down to Staynor for a game down there, while the Dodgers and Royals meet on Westmount Park.

The standing of the league not including games played on Tuesday, June 29th, is as follows:

Team	Won	Lost	Pts.
Staynor	4	0
Dodgers	2	2
Beavers	1	2
Royals	0	3

CWAC To Meet Wireless and City In Girls' Softball

Next Week's Games In City Loop Will Be Hard Fought

The two CWAC teams will have tough sledding in next week's scheduled games in the ladies' section of the Westmount Municipal Softball League as the No. 33 Company squad will hook up against the Wireless School team on diamond No. 1, while the No. 11 Company team meet the Westmount nine on diamond No. 2.

The Westmount team has a much improved squad this year and has impressed with its hitting power. Amongst the girls playing with the team are catcher Pearl Burk, pitcher Marg. Armstrong, first baseman Marg. Forrest, second baseman Peggy Pope, shortstop Gladys Morgan, third baseman Dolly Thompson and outfielders Harriet Brown, Mary Van Tangoron, Gertrude Munro and Beryl Watier.

Many of these girls are playing with teams in other leagues as Peggy Pope and Dolly Thompson line up the Noorduyn club in the major league while Gladys Morgan plays with the champion Royals in the same loop. Pearl Burk plays for Mansfields in the Verdun Junior circuit.

The Westmount team have lost the services of first baseman Marg. Forrest for the rest of the season as she has left for the Y.W.C.A. camp in the Laurentians, so that some sort of a shift will have to be made to fill this position.

Another reason why it is wise to save gasoline and buy Victory Bonds — a 1,000-bomber raid over Germany consumes 3,500 tons of high octane fuel.
