Tadeusz says natives' behavior insisted on racism

ITEM: Last week in northern Alberta, the Lubicon Cree (claiming 450 members) blocked access to an oil-rich region twice the size of Prince Edward Island and proclaimed itself a sovereign nation independent of Canadian law.

ITEM: Last week, Quebec native leaders launched a publicity campaign protesting federal cuts in education grants. Billboards will show a photograph torn in half of three endearing native children with the caption "Maudits sauvages!"

ITEM: Last week, 250 police officers raided the Akwesasne Indian Reserve on Cornwall Island, arrested seven people and seized a number of restricted weapons, contraband cigarettes, cocaine and marijuana. Members of the Kahnawake warrior society rushed to defend the reserve and customs officers left their posts after Mohawk chief Mike Mitchell declared he could not protect them.

Who's who

By TADEUSZ LETARTE

ITEM: Grand chief Mitchell himself, who'd been fighting drug smugglers and weapons dealers, fled the island with his daughter after somebody shot out the back window of his truck. Unless the Akwesasne nation helps him control the smuggling and violence, he told reporters, he would resign.

ITEM: Last week, Earl Cross, a

Kahnawake spokesman, told reporters he believed all native communities should arm themselves because "14 million Indians in North America have been killed (by whites) in less than 400 years."

ITEM: Last May, Kahnawake Mohawks barricaded the Mercier Bridge to protest a raid on their reserve by 200 police officers. A dozen rifle-toting young men informed reporters they were prepared to kill or be killed (heroically, of course) in defense of Mohawk sovereignty and the traditional native right to sell contraband cigarettes to the white man.

ITEM: Last week, Mike McComber, another Mohawk spokesman, protested to the press that "wanted" posters characterizing ten Kahnawake Mohawks as "armed, dangerous and violent" was racist. It was, he said, "almost like telling police to shoot on sight."

ITEM: Last week, Rita Legault editorialized in the Record that these posters represented "racism at its worst" and concluded; "Let's face it. As far as the police are concerned, the worst thing these men are guilty of is being Indian."

Now, Tadeusz Letarte is as eager as the next guy to root for the underdog and side with the oppressed but he can spot in all this a very cynical manipulation of the media. To treat people differently solely because of their race is racist. To insist on being treated differently solely because of your race is to insist on racism. To then complain of 'racism' is a blatant misleading of sympathetic citizens for your own benefit.

Individualism is a lonely business. We all like to identify ourselves with a group, to huddle with others who share with us a common bond and it doesn't matter much if that bond is religion, nationality, language, sexual preference, the color of our skin or the hue of our politics.

And we all like to feel superior to those outside our group — to claim pride in our ancestry, our country, our race, religion or language, and to enjoy a certain romantic idealism in enduring real or fancied persecution. That serves to bring us still closer together.

UNWASHED
But most of us understand that all these distinctions are meaningless in any real sense and whether you are a United Empire Loyalist, a full-blooded Mohawk, a Daughter of the American Revolution or a Son of the Unwashed Pioneers, that doesn't cover you with angel dust. You can still be an asshole.

Reverting to ancient ways may also be great fun but that doesn't make you cleaner, purer, truer to your nature. In general, our great-grandfathers led short and difficult lives — whether in the manor house of the longhouse — raddled with ignorance, superstition and fear, constantly struggling against war, accident, hunger and disease, suffering tapeworms and body lice and suspicious of all those not of our race, religion, language or nationality.

It was easier then to despise different people because we knew nothing about them. Wars were easier because our great-grandfathers usually died within a few miles of the place where they were born and spent the intervening years surrounded by uncles and aunts and cousins.

Today, most of us live among strangers, renting by the month, knowing nothing of our neighbors.

"I had a best friend when I was little," said Birdsong. "We went everywhere together and talked about everything under the sun. Then she became a Catholic and I became a Protestant and there were some things we couldn't talk about anymore."

"Then the Parti Quebecois came along and she became a French Canadian Catholic and I became an English Canadian Protestant and there was a lot we couldn't talk about. When the Referendum came along, she voted 'Oui' and I voted 'Non' and we haven't spoken since."

"I miss her a lot."

"Heads down," said Chickenfat. "Season's open."

"I look forward to deer season every year," he said. "With considerable anxiety."

"There'll be all this high-powered ammunition flying around, you see — first Jim Lawrence will let rip a salvo at the animal rights people, then Merritt Clifton will snipe back at Lawrence while concerned citizens take potshots at both and tragic Walter Freud's 'In Memoriam' picture will appear again like the Ghost of Season's Past."

"A fella who'd been to school told me once that deer don't really belong in these parts. They're like weeds, foreign weeds. Used to be all thick forest here and deer like open country where they can browse. Snow piles deep and a deer's feet and legs are the worst possible design for getting around in deep snow. The only defense they have against predators is their speed and in winter they're helpless."

DEER ARE GOOD

"So this fella said they were brought in by the pioneers along with ragweed and dandelions, starlings and sparrows and other pests. Makes sense when you think about it."

"But deer are good to see and so much fun to kill that great chunks of money are spent on them every year — for conservation and licenses, boxes of 30-30 and cases of 24, electric socks and nose warmers, 40 ounce bottles of 80 proof."

"It seems to me sometimes that animals are taking over the shop. Used to be simple enough — man was given dominion over them all like it says in the Bible. Man was boss because we were the spitting image of God and beasts were — well — beastly."

"Wild animals were our enemies — lions and tigers, wolves and grizzly bears, snakes and stuff — and the domesticated ones were our slaves to do with just as well liked."

"We figured we had immortal souls, see, and they didn't. We had brains and could figure things out and they couldn't. Homo sapiens, we said. That's us."

"Then Charlie Darwin wrote this book that said we weren't so special after all — all related in the same family, in fact. We didn't care much for that idea. Then he said that animals could figure things out, too, and told about this elephant in the zoo that brought floating peanuts within reach by blowing on the water beyond them."

"We didn't care much for that, either, so we figured out that we could make tools and they couldn't — so there! Then those damn Egyptian vultures were found picking up stones and using them to break open eggs."

MUCH DUMBER

"Aha!", said we, but we're the only ones who can make tools! Then these wild chimpanzees were seen shaping sticks to get at termites — and even showing each other how to do it."

"Either animals were getting a whole lot smarter or we were getting a good deal dumber."

"Then we said we were the only ones who could crack jokes and tell lies but some joker taught gorillas and chimps the American Sign Language and they were cracking jokes and telling lies, too. They cheated, stole, waged war, raped and murdered just like we did. The geneticists figured out a chimpanzee's genes were 99% identical to ours."

"About all we have left these days," said Chickenfat, "is that animals never do anything just for the money."

"Wanna buy a good shotgun?"

Piggery theatre makes no profit but stays hopeful

By Rossana Coriandoli

SHERBROOKE — It's almost impossible to keep a summer theatre afloat, and it makes little difference whether it's an established one or one just starting out.

"I find it hard to believe," said the Piggery's Hope Kent, "but summer theatre is seriously jeopardized."

Kent, who is president of the North Hatley theatre's board of directors, says summer theatres receive very little financial help from the various levels of government and even that is slowly being taken away.

"We get so little help from the government," she said. "The only grant we get is from the Canada Council."

"I don't know why," she added. "They seem to feel we can survive without them."

During the last season, the Piggery saw both its manpower grant, which helped pay for students and others hired to work behind the scenes, drop from about $7,000 to $5,000. The grant for children's programs, which among other things helped finance the puppet-making workshops, was completely withdrawn by the government.

According to Kent, the government says there are not enough funds for such grants to continue. But other theatres continue to see funds come their way, she said.

"The Centaur (Montreal's only English theatre) gets huge grants," Kent said. "And the French theatre in Toronto also keeps getting grants."

The problem seems to be partially due to the fact these grants go, for the most part, to theatres staging Canadian plays. During the last season, two of the three plays staged by the Piggery were by Canadian playwrights.

"They would like us to do all three Canadian plays, but that is difficult to do," particularly as summer theatre audiences generally prefer established plays — something not often found among Canadian plays, Kent said.

The president said what the government doesn't realize is most theatres can't possibly make profits without help from grants.

"There isn't a theatre in Canada where the box office comes close to paying costs," she said. "Expenses are extremely high. They (theatre workers) are all unionized. We're controlled by equity (which dictates how much actors and actresses are to be paid). After all, we're a fully professional theatre."

Kent said The Piggery's shows are expensive to stage because it tries to bring high quality to each of its productions. "We pride ourselves on our expensive sets. This is so as to keep the quality of productions high."

NO PROFIT

She also said the theatre tries to put on plays which require few performers. "But we still need to have a full staff — stage manager, lighting people, and all the other people working behind the scenes," she said.

"We didn't make a profit last summer," she added. "You're terribly fortunate to even come out even." This summer's season was "the best and the longest" and saw a record number of patrons: 15,000 in total, which Kent says is "very, very good".

She said the usual figure is between 11,000 and 12,000. "With Noises Off we had 14,000 but big productions like that one cost a lot of money."

"No theatre in Canada makes a profit," Kent said. "I feel sorry for the Lac Brome Theatre. Getting started is extremely difficult."

But despite the negative points of Canadian summer theatre, Kent said she doesn't think the situation is completely hopeless.

She said the Piggery is lucky to have people involved with it who can afford to make the time during the summer, namely artistic director Greg Tuck, who is also head of the Bishop's University's Theatre department.

Also important, Kent said, is Joe Martek, the theatre's business manager who works for Montreal's Youth Theatre during the winter.

GOV'T STEPS BACK

Kent also named corporate donations as the Piggery's life line.

"The private sector could be helpful," she said. "They (private businesses) are the ones you have to go to for support. And they have to support the arts because the government is stepping back."

Kent said business must help support the theatre because of what it brings to North Hatley.

"We're a great asset to the community," she said. "Bed and breakfasts make very good business from the Piggery."

Last summer's season at the Piggery was sponsored by Alcan, which Kent said was a big help. But she is now looking for private sponsors for each production.

"We would like $5,000 for each production. We're working at that, but it takes a lot of work. People always think it's someone else's responsibility."

Piggery's roof finally gets financial support

SHERBROOKE (RC) — Most people knew nothing about it, but for those who were worried about the Piggery's roof, will soon be able to sleep at night. The theatre's board of directors finally got some financial support which will make it easier to make the building safe.

When the theatre got its new roof two years ago, the board was told it wouldn't be strong enough to make it through any severe snow storms winter might have in store for the Townships, says president Hope Kent.

Now, with funds raised by the board and a grant from the McConnell Family Foundation, new beams are being placed inside the theatre to support the roof against any abnormal storm.

"The McConnell Family Foundation gave us a one-time grant," Kent said. "They've never helped the Piggery before. But we get so little help from the government."

Kent said the foundation asked the amount of the grant remain secret.

Chabot off to Florida with K900

It was close but there was only one winner in the K900 Scavenger Hunt. Three Sherbrookers, Fatima Linhares, Yolande Chabot and Carolyn Turcotte, came up with all the clues but one name was drawn last Saturday for the Wardair trip for two to Florida and

Five Townships artists get together to sell works

RECORD/SHARON McCULLY

By Sharon McCully

Five Township artists will bring together their artistic talents with their entrepreneurial skills by leasing Galerie Lac Brome, on the tourist beat in Knowlton.

The group of five decided to take over the gallery when a local businessman gave up the lease this fall.

"We wanted the exposure," said artist Rhonda Price. "And of course we want to sell our work."

Scratch the stereotype of artists holed up in a draughty studio apartment practising their craft on an empty stomach.

These five highly successful artists juggle their time around teaching, staging exhibitions, travelling and promoting the arts.

Yet each is astonishingly prolific.

Consequently, Art 5 will provide art lovers with an eclectic collection of works in a variety of mediums from acrylics, oils and watercolours to woodcuts and tapes.

Deceiving in its size, the gallery will feature close to one hundred art works moderately priced between $65 and $800.

"We can sell at a lower price because we don't have to give 60 per cent to the larger galleries," May Kelly explained.

"The larger galleries are also asking artists to pay a portion of the advertising and promotion costs," Rhonda Price added.

din takes advantage of modern technology to create effect.

"I use velcro," she admits, "to hold the woven golden threads to the plywood backing."

So diverse are the works of May Kelly it's hard to believe they are all the creations of the same artist. From her Sutton studio, Kelly spends hours transposing shapes and designs on woodcuts, a painstaking procedure which is as much a technique as an art form. The result: a series of easily discernible anatomical designs.

"That isn't really a buttocks," Kelly joked "It's Mount Sutton."

Kelly also works with a group of Sutton artists to produce numerous acrylics using line models and props.

She says she admires the work of Georgia O'Keefe, an American artist who died six years ago at the age of ninety.

Gordon Ladd is a well known Township artist who brings to canvas a lyrical love for his nature landscape. The rambling lanes and rippling brooks vividly portrayed would make any true Townshippier long for home.

His scenes can easily become anyone's backyard, everyone's favorite spot.

Ladd works from a studio at his home in Knowlton where many of his works are displayed.

Italian born Tizianna Plomteux combines the fresco influence of her grandfather and mentor Giovanni Silvestro with North American influences which have been part of her life since coming to Canada in 1965.

Known mainly as a watercolourist Plomteux has had 13 solo exhibits since 1973 and is currently teaching art.

"Tizianna is the kind of artist who can set up her easel anywhere and produce the most wonderful work," commented one of her colleagues.

Rhonda Price derives her inspiration from the visual environment of Knowlton.

"I love the Victorian architecture with all its fancy 'doodly work' and shadows playing on the design of the buildings," she said.

Her reproductions of local shops and historic buildings are amazingly exact with finely tuned highlights and an eye for detail.

Price has worked primarily with watercolours since she left a career in graphic art in the early 70's.

"I like to try different things for effect," she said, sharing a trade secret. "If you toss ordinary table salt on a wet sky scene, you'll create snow."

Rhonda also brings her love of horses to her work reproducing photographs in vivid watercolours with camera-like precision.

All five artists will operate the gallery on a rotating basis to allow customers to meet the artist or commission works.

Three of the five artists who've gotten together and leased a Knowlton art gallery, Tizianna Plomteux, Denise Beaudin and Rhonda Price.

Birds and open doors hold memories for Bourret

"The greatest travellers are birds. For me they are the symbol of freedom and quick change, the doors and windows are openings we go through on our way to the different places we travel to, they allow us to escape."

By Rossana Coriandoli

NORTH HATLEY — In a field that sees more casualties than survivors, Jeannine Bourret is one of the lucky ones. Among the Townships' more successful artists, she is happy to say she has a roof over her head and a fairly comfortable lifestyle thanks to the success her works have encountered.

But the laid-back Drummond native, whose engravings are now on exhibition at the Jeannine Blais art gallery in North Hatley, says her success didn't come on a silver platter.

"I know I'm privileged to be able to do engravings in Quebec. It's rare," Bourret said, explaining the medium isn't as popular in this province as oil painting is, particularly with those who are unfamiliar with it.

"I also had to sacrifice a lot to make it," she added. "I have no children and I don't live beyond my means. You can't create too many obligations for yourself. I built my own home, and I live in Weedon, not in the city."

But despite the sacrifices, Bourret said, as an artist, she doesn't feel she is giving up too much by living far from big centers like Montreal or Toronto.

"If I lived in Montreal, I'd still have to travel," she explained. "Right now I live out of the way, but I go to Montreal, Chicoutimi, Ottawa, and my work is sold in those places too."

ACROSS PROVINCE

Indeed, Bourret's works are recognized in far more places than just those three cities. Collections of her works are on display at the Sherbrooke Museum of Fine Arts, at the Quebec Municipal Library, at Canadian Pacific and many more places across the province.

She has also had exhibitions at a number of galleries in Montreal including at the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts, in Toronto, Sherbrooke, Granby, Trois Rivières, Ottawa and others.

But what is particularly significant is the success she has had in areas other than her exhibitions. She has had a number of corporations and associations commission her works. And one of her engravings was also presented to then Quebec Premier René Lévesque at the Salon du Livre 1986 de Sherbrooke.

"I'm starting to make my place in the art world. But I don't like to think about that," Bourret said tentatively with an almost timid smile. She added that her success is not something she likes to measure in terms of popularity. "But yes, I do make a living with it, and in that way I'm luckier than most artists."

Bourret said although her formal training began in the late 60s, she has always been inclined to become an visual artist. "My mother always painted," she said, and she even managed to support the family on what she sold of her art.

LIFE LED TO ART

"I always just grabbed a pencil and drew when something in my life was bad," she remembered. "I really didn't decide to follow this path. Life just led me that way."

Most of the training she did receive was in Quebec City, where she lived for five years.

"Those were the most important years, from 1967 to 1972, when I met painter Albert Rousseau." She met Rousseau by coincidence when she was just beginning her night school courses in drawing and painting.

They struck up a conversation about art, and he told her she must take an engraving course he was teaching. Rousseau initiated her to the basic art of engravings which she then developed on her own, according to her needs.

Bourret says she never had the opportunity to go to university, and is mostly a self-taught artist. But she said she would have been happy for the chance to actually devote her time to studying art.

"Those students are lucky," she said referring to the University of Trois Rivières art students who go to her for their internships. "They have the chance to learn in three years what it took me ten to learn by myself. It's great, I would have loved to do it."

As for her exhibition in North Hatley, she says although almost all the engravings have some kind of bird in it, they are not the theme of the show.

"The theme is memories of past journeys," she explained. "The greatest travellers are birds. For me they are the symbol of freedom and quick change."

ALLOW TO ESCAPE

The pieces in the exhibition also often include doors and windows facing the birds, or cats in her engravings, sometimes including a transparent figure either next to or over the central figure in the piece.

"The doors and windows are openings we go through on our way to the different places we travel to, they allow us to escape," she explained. "Unconsciously, or maybe consciously, when I did these pieces I had images of my recent trip to Europe. Transparency is very important because they are like the memories we keep of each trip."

Weedon artist Jeannine Bourret is having an exhibition of her works with the theme, "memories of past journeys" at the Jeannine Blais art gallery in North Hatley.

CHARMES wants to organize fête at the lake again

By Rita Legault

SHERBROOKE — The annual Fête du Lac des Nations is guaranteed to take place over the next three years thanks to a commitment made by the environmental management group CHARMES. CHARMES or the Comité d'assainissement des rivières Magog et

St-François has announced that after its first successful organization of the annual festivities this year it is ready to undertake the challenge for the next three years.

This was decided at its annual general meeting held last Tuesday night at which Sherbrooke councillor Ulric Chainé was elected president of the corporation for the next year.

CHARMES ex-president Guy Couture said the corporation is hoping the Fête will be able to be self-financed and even make a profit. This year's event made a small profit of about $3,000.

Couture said the events will remain about the same including free activities like shows and outdoor concerts, to be achieved by expanding the group's network of volunteers and sponsors.

EMPHASIS ON ENVIRONMENT

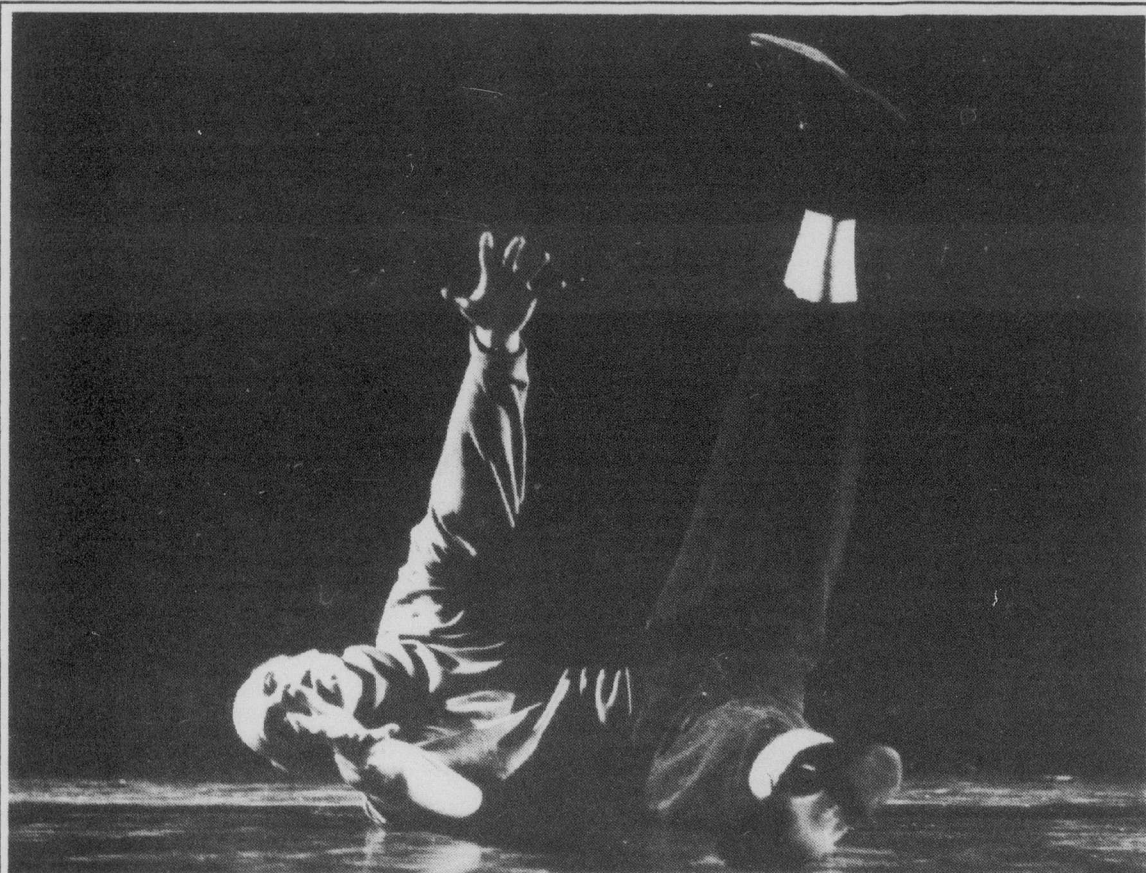

CHARMES will be also be emphasizing on the importance of protecting the environment, Couture said.

Couture and Chainé agreed the festivities were an excellent occasion to promote the use of the Magog and St-François river banks and to promote environmental awareness amongst Sherbrookers.

Chainé said that over the next year CHARMES is also going to work at completing its network of biking and hiking paths along the shores of both rivers and getting a service building with public washrooms near the beach at Parc Blanchard.

"We have a lovely natural swimming pool with no service pavillion for the thousands of people using this swimming pool that is the Magog river," Chainé said, adding that the town would never consider building a pool in a municipal park without a service building.

Chainé said he was looking forward to undertaking the challenge of the CHARMES presidency, and added the group is the pride of Sherbrooke and the envy of other cities.

Fortier solo at Centennial

Paul-André Fortier, one of Canada's foremost modern dancers and choreographers, is at Centennial Theatre next Friday. Fortier en Solo, a one-man show, is a collection of vignettes created by six Montreal choreographers including Fortier himself. Described as poignant and provocative, the show promises to challenge minds rather than merely entertain. Fortier's superb stage presence and powerful sense of dramatic tension make Fortier en Solo a must see for all who want to experience the best in Canadian modern dance theatre. Tickets on sale at Centennial's box office or call 563-4966.

Quebec's Cirque du Soleil is back home

MONTREAL (CP)—Pop star Elton John was so impressed with their show that he flew from Hawaii to San Francisco — with 10 friends in tow — to see them perform again.

Movie mogul Francis Coppola was so taken that he invited the entire troupe to a feast at his Napa Valley estate.

Montreal's Cirque du Soleil is, indeed, basking in the glow of the sun and the stars.

After a 20-month tour of North America, the critically acclaimed circus troupe has been embraced by a galaxy of show-biz celebrities — everyone from David Bowie, Jane Fonda and Madonna, to Jack Nicholson, Sylvester Stallone and Barbra Streisand.

This week, the 85-member ensemble of jugglers, acrobats and contortionists returned to its home turf after taking Los Angeles, San Francisco, New York Washington and Toronto by storm. Their trademark blue-and-yellow Big Top now stands in Montreal's Old Port, where performances for hometown audiences will take place through Nov. 20.

The troupe, which has its roots in the Quebec hamlet of Baie-St-Paul on the North Shore of the St. Lawrence River, is not your typical circus because it features no animal acts. Rather, it's high-tech marriage of circus, theatre, modern dance and music.

'REINVENT CIRCUS'

"Some have described us as MTV (rock video network) meets the Ringling Brothers," says Guy Laliberte, the Cirque's 29-year-old founder and president. "Basically, we're trying to reinvent the circus and make people laugh at the same time."

Laliberte, who began his performing career as a teenage fire-eater, put together his first troupe of street performers — "mostly juggling clowns" — in 1979. Five years and several name changes later, the Cirque du Soleil was born.

"We never doubted ourselves," says Laliberte, "we worked hard and we're now reaping what we have sowed." That includes some pretty impressive financial benefits.

Four years ago, the Cirque depended on government subsidies to underwrite its operations. Today, only three per cent of its $17-million budget comes from public coffers.

Currently, Laliberte is negotiating with Hollywood's Columbia Pictures for a big-budget movie on the circus. Steven Spielberg is reportedly interested in directing it.

Other plans include a spring tour of Japan and creation of a Cirque du Soleil offspring, Eclipse, which is scheduled to begin performing next year.

Graham Green has new book to astound readers

The Captain And The Enemy by Graham Greene (LESTER & ORPEN DENNYS): $19.95, 192 pp.

Graham Greene's long and distinguished career as a novelist shows no signs of waning, even as the 84-year-old master releases yet another compelling work of fiction. The Captain And The Enemy is a slender but thoroughly entertaining book which has a Dickensian command of the perspective of a young child operating as its narrative framework.

Narrator Victor Baxter begins his strange story with a captivating, yet familiar, approach to storytelling: "I am now in my twenty-second year and yet the only birthday which I can clearly distinguish among all the rest is my twelfth, for it was on that damp and misty day in September I met the Captain for the first time. I can still remember the wetness of the gravel under my gym shoes in the school quad and how the blown leaves made the cloisters by the chapel slippery as I ran recklessly to escape from my enemies between one class and the next".

Young Baxter is picked up by the man he calls the Captain at his private school, taken to the home of a woman named Liza, and is told that his new guardian won him from the boy's father at backgammon. Taken to see The Daughter of Tarzan at the movies, treated to smoked salmon at a local pub, and introduced to a new world of wonders, the boy prefers the company of the Captain and Liza to his spinster aunt and very distant and often absent real father.

At Liza's he discovers a Victorian mansion with a multitude of strange rooms—"It was like exploring Africa"—and Victor and his foster-mother settle into a routine of wondering when the Captain will be returning.

As Victor tries to make sense of the odd relationship between his father, the Captain, and Liza, the reader is caught up in the mystery about this secretive Captain. The early section of the book, set in England, only manages to convey the uncertainty Liza and the boy feel about the strange comings and goings of their inscrutable benefactor.

GRAHAM GREENE

The Captain and the Enemy

Kaleidoscope

By RICHARD LONEY

More than a decade passes as Greene's narrative develops, and suddenly Victor is called upon to follow the Captain to Panama, where Greene is once again on familiar novelistic territory. Victor, who has been a man named Quigly, who confuses the young man with talk of bodyguards, a certain Colonel Martinez, and a veil of secrecy he throws up around the person he refers to as "Senor Smith".

As it turns out, Senor Smith, the familiar Captain-figure, is as unknown an entity to the boy as he remains to the reader and the other Panamanians who attempt to disclose the man's true game. There is talk of Somoza, the Sandanistas, Nicaraguan arms, Salvador, and the Canal Treaty to be signed by President Carter and General Torrijos, but neither Jim nor the reader ever solve the enigma of the Captain.

Greene's ability to create a constant swirl of mystery around the Captain and his hidden motives is as unfailing as his careful details which bring to life landscapes as remote from one another as the Camden Town basement slum in London and the steaming, tropical heat that envelops the politically naive Panamanians in Central America. Rather than entering his dotage, the grand old man of the novel, Graham Greene, continues to astound the reading world with the scope and mastery of his books.

RECORD REVIEWS

Folkways A Tribute to Woody Guthrie and Leadbelly (COLUMBIA).

Any sort of musical tribute to the memory of the great forties and fifties artists Woody Guthrie and Leadbelly might be expected to attract folksingers such as Bob Dylan, Pete Seeger and Doc Watson. What is surprising about this Guthrie/Leadbelly session is the presence of rockers of the ilk of U2, Little Richard, Brian Wilson and Bruce Springsteen. The only linking theme of this record is the work of Guthrie such as "Hobo's Lullaby", "Goodnight Irene" and "This Land Is Your Land", and of Leadbelly, whose "Bourgeois Blues", "Rock Island Line" and "Sylvie" are represented.

Springsteen sounds authentically like his acoustic album Nebraska on "I Ain't Got No Home" and "Vigilante Man", and Little Richard infuses a shot of rhythm and blues into "Rock Island Line", harnessing his raucous style only a little on the tune that fueled Britain's skiffle craze for Lonnie Donegan.

U2's humdrum interpretation of "Jesus Christ" is blown out of the water by John Cougar Mellencamp's "Do-Re-Mi" or even Arlo Guthrie's heartfelt rendition of his father's song "East Texas Red". It's no surprise that Willie Nelson is able to mold his accent around "Philadelphia Lawyer", but the eldest Beach Boy's treatment of "Irene Goodnight" was obviously recorded at the same time that Wilson was laying down the tracks for this superb solo album—the Leadbelly track has the same sound and the same instrumentation, it appears, as the Brian Wilson elpee contained.

Huddie Ledbetter, who became known as Leadbelly, and Woody Guthrie, whose ballads about riding the rails and migrant workers inspired folkies like Dylan, the Weavers and the Kingston Trio, were original cornerstones of the Folkways Record label, when it began in 1947. Hearing how easy artists as diverse as Mellencamp, Springsteen and Wilson can adapt their styles to this music is proof positive that the education of a great many popular artists in later folk, and its illegitimate child, rock n/roll.

Buster Soundtrack (ATLANTIC-WEA)

There are no indications just yet as to what kind of a picture the British collaboration between rock singer Phil Collins and actress Julie Walters (Educating Rita) will bring, as far as the dramatic angle is concerned.

The music from Buster, however, once again opens the rich treasure trove of Sixties' artists' songs to include at least three solid oldies and one remake of a former hit for Wayne Fontana & The Mindbenders, whose "Groovy Kind Of Love" made it to number 2 in April of 1966. Collins himself appears to have a giant hit on his hands with the Fontana tune (actually written by Carole Bayer/Toni Wine), but it won't hurt to hear the Hollies once again warbling out "Just One Look", or Gerry Marsden crooning "How Do You Do It?" with his Merseyside Pacemakers, or the Searchers doing "Sweets For My Sweet".

The execrable "I Got You Babe" by Sonny & Cher shouldn't escape this album's confines, nor should the boring theme music such as Anne Dudley's "The Robbery" or "And I Love Her", which is decidedly not the Beatles tune of the same title. Throw in bonus tracks from the Spencer Davis Group, "Keep On Running", and a Dusty Springfield song, "I Just Don't Know What To Do With Myself", and it figures that the soundtrack to Buster may do more business than the film will.

mance by actor Michael Keaton, certainly deserves our attention. Director Tim Burton, whose only real contribution to serious film, if it could be called that, was Pee Wee's Big Adventure, has hit upon a winning formula that turns spooks, apparitions and ghoulish goings on into genuine comedy.

Keaton (Mr. Mom) plays a devilish, manic Betelgeuse who is galvanized into action by the unfortunate dilemma of a Connecticut pair of young marrieds named the Maitlands. As the Maitlands, Alec Baldwin and Geena Davis, play a couple whose untimely death by drowning plunges them into a warped world of extra-sensory dimensions, one of whose properties is that they come back to life in their own home.

Once returned to their spectacular dwelling, the Maitlands are horrified by the intrusion into their domain by a group of New York City trendies who threaten to turn the house into a exercise designed for the pages of Architectural Digest. When the Maitlands, with a bit of help from one of the new tenants' daughter, call upon the rakish and wired Betelgeuse to scare away the obnoxious yuppies, this movie really comes to life.

Keaton is a delight with his mugging, stirring up all manner of slapstick and mayhem, cavorting through the stupendous special effects with glee. Beetlejuice may be contrived nonsense but the atmosphere of the film is so infectiously comic that viewers, even those who were repelled by the Addams Family, will give Burton's movie a thumbs up. Movies

The Carrefour de l'Estrie is presenting the latest David Cronenberg film, Dead Ringers. The Canadian director who has come to be known as the king of horror films has brought us a movie that is more frightening than his previous one, The Fly, because it is so close to reality. Jeremy Irons is wonderful as twin gynocologists who share everything in their lives, including women.

Showtimes are Friday at 7 and 9:20, Saturday and Sunday at 2, 4:30, 7 and 9:20.

The movie Off Limits is playing this week at the Cinema Princess in Cowansville. The showtime is 7:15.

Also at the Princess is a science fiction flic called Alien Nation starring James Caan. Really a funny concept for a movie, it's about some aliens who come to live on earth with humans. Caan plays a cop who has to team up with one of the aliens to solve a murder mystery...Really...The showtime is 8:55.

As for across the border at Merrill's Showplace in Newport, you can see the latest A Nightmare on Elm Street. Another sequel I think was made just to torture me more, it's one more of those horror movies with little imagination, intended to scare the socks off teenagers with nothing better to do than watch it.

Showtimes are Friday, Saturday and Sunday at 7:20 with Saturday and Sunday matinées at 2:05, and at 9:25 from Monday through Thursday at 7:35.

Also at Merrill's is Alien Nation. Showtimes are Friday, Saturday and Sunday at 9:20 with Saturday and Sunday matinées at 1:55, and from Monday to Thursday at 7:25.

Finally, the movie Sweetheart Dance is also at Merrill's. Showtimes are Friday, Saturday and Sunday at 7 and 9:15 with Saturday and Sunday matinées at 1:45, and Monday to Thursday at 7:15.

By the way, this Sunday at Merrill's the box office will be accepting Canadian money at par.

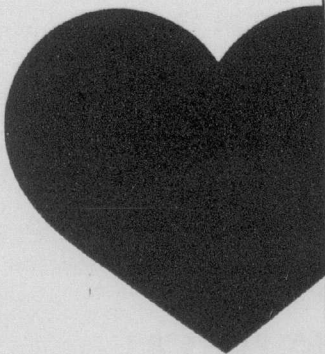

Louise Pelland, photographer is exhibiting her works at the art gallery of the Caisse Populaire de Sherbrooke-Est. For more information read the Events section.

Jeremy Irons stars in the latest Cronenberg movie, Dead Ringers playing in the area. For more information read the Movies section.

North Hatley: Cross-country mixed with haute cuisine

By Kelly Watt

NORTH HATLEY, Que. — There's an unspoken rule among some athletic puritans which says that real cross-country skiing is arduous — "No pain, no gain," is their motto.

And then there are those who don't seem the harm in a little pampering after a hard day on the trails.

It's for this latter group that three Quebec hoteliers have joined forces to create an inn-to-inn ski week — known as Skiippi Adventure — that unashamedly rewards skiers with haute cuisine.

The three inns, Hatley Inn, Hovey Manor and Ripplecove Inn, front Lake Massawippi in Quebec's Eastern Townships — or Estrie, as it's known in French — an area a little over an hour's drive southeast of Montreal.

The participating inns all have a Four-Fork designation — the highest restaurant rating awarded by the Quebec government.

BREAK UP VISIT

Ski guests spend two nights at each hotel — the order of the visits is rotated, Manor Hovey, for example, first one week, last another. The days are alternated between conquering the 35-kilometre network of trails with stops to sample wild boar pate before the fire.

On one recent trip, the was at Hatley Inn, where guests nibbled freshly baked muffins and sipped cafe au lait, a symbolic mixture of the unusual symbiosis of French and English cultures in the Eastern Townships.

The proprietor, Robert Gagnon, told skiers bits of local history: how the village of North Hatley was populated by United Empire Loyalists, who brought with them their weakness for stately colonial mansions, and a slew of anglicisms.

The Skiippi ski trail can be challenging, real cross-country skiing. From Hatley Inn to Hovey Manor the majority of trails are intermediate, with a constant change of scenery and very few flat stretches.

The experienced ski to a nearby children's camp at Katevale, which has a public cafeteria with a spectacular view of the lake.

If beginners find the trail too difficult, they can try the Katevale trails, which are gentler and link with the Skiippi network.

At Manor Hovey, innkeeper Steve Stafford warmed away the winter chill by offering skiers a glass of one of his favorite wines — the inn has an excellent wine cellar.

It also has six chefs. On a typical day, there are eight choices of starters, and eight main courses, along with an extensive and separate dessert menu.

Guests struggle to choose between filets of Dover sole and scampi with saffron butter, or Barbary duckling with juniper berries.

The last stop, Ripplecove Inn, sits on Lake Massawippi's more secluded north end. It is owned by Stafford's brother, Jeffery, and the food is no less tasty. Gourmet meals are prepared by an award-winning chef, who combines classical and French nouvelle cuisine.

The price for the week is $525 per person, double occupancy, which includes six nights' accommodations, six gourmet dinners and six full breakfasts, as well as transportation — your car and luggage are taken to the next inn for you.

The cross-country season runs from roughly mid-December to the first week of April, depending on the weather conditions.

For more information, contact Ripplecove Inn, Box 246, Ayer's Cliff, Que. J0B 1C0; (819) 838-4296; Hovey Manor, Box 60, North Hatley, Que. J0B 2C0; (819) 842-2421; or Hatley Inn, Box 330, North Hatley, Que. J0B 2C0; (819) 842-2451.

Tremblant runs command respect

MONT-TREMBLANT-VILLAGE, Que. — A mid-morning break at the top of Mont-Tremblant, the highest ski hill in Quebec's Laurentians, serves to confirm the mountain's deserved reputation as an experience a skier shouldn't miss.

Step outside the chalet with your coffee or hot chocolate and you'll be impressed by the mountains. In less-than-perfect weather, the winds can howl, and a bank of cloud below your feet obscures the view — typical weather on a real mountain, conditions that must be treated with respect.

On a clear day, you can see that you're at the peak of eastern Canadian skiing. In the distance, there is an endless line of hills, tall enough to be impressive, but obviously smaller than Tremblant, one of the pioneer ski areas of North America.

The mountaintop chalet itself is unique. Unlike the sterile cafeteria-style chalets you find at most resorts, this multi-sided building is dominated by wood. Wooden beams support the roof, and skiers hang their packsacks and hats on pegs while they sit around a huge central firepit, warming themselves before heading back out to the slopes.

The chalet is reminiscent of the accommodation of the days before motorized ski lifts — a mountain station where skiers would stop to change clothes and rewax skis after walking up the hill. It's a little of Tremblant's history.

APTLY NAMED

There are runs on both the north and south sides of the mountain, varying in difficulty from novice to expert. Beauchemin — literally, "the good road" — lives up to its name; even inexperienced skiers can handle it.

Expo is another run with a meaningful name: in both official languages, Expo is a place to show off. The run has moguls that look like a thousand Volkswagen Beetles buried in snow, and a lift parallels the slope. People sitting on the lift chairs watch the expert skiers, admiring their prowess and snickering at their pratfalls.

The mountain has 41 runs and a vertical drop of 650 metres. In the last few years, lift capacity and snowmaking have increased to rival those of smaller resorts. This year, Tremblant has added a high-speed, detachable quadruple chair that runs from bottom to top on the south side.

Nora Joyce: The woman who inspired a genius

By Rod Currie
The Canadian Press

One of the few true things ever said about Nora Joyce was that she was the self-exiled James Joyce's "portable Ireland" — his inspiration.

But Joyce contemporaries mostly thought about Nora, the lusty chambermaid from Galway. In their view she was a slovenly near-illiterate who couldn't cook, learn the language of any of the many countries they lived in, or encourage Joyce.

Worse, they said, she never read Ulysses. This is true — a fault she shares with most of the human race, left floundering by the master's free-flowing, sometimes incomprehensible style.

Nora, the wife of a literary giant, didn't give a damn for the printed word.

"Jim should have stuck to singing," she said.

But those who really knew her knew that in performing her duty as she saw it — looking after James Joyce — she was flawless.

BOLD AND LOYAL

Now the record has been put straight in Nora: A Biography of Nora Joyce. It's by Brenda Maddox who paints an engaging portrait of an uninhibited woman living in socially repressive times — she's bold, full of humor and, most of all, loyal.

Ulysses, Maddox says flatly, would not exist without her.

Nora Barnacle, tall and with magnificent auburn hair, was 20 and penniless when on the foggy night of Oct. 18, 1904, she strode on to a Dublin ferry for England without telling her family or her Finn's Hotel employer that she was running away with Jim Joyce, the young, self-proclaimed genius.

Nora never — through 47 years of an irresolute, often poverty-stricken nomadic life in Europe — thought of Joyce as a genius.

Joyce never doubted it, and believed that the world owed him a living because of it. Nora supported him simply because writing was what he wanted to do.

Atheist Joyce, Maddox writes, asked Nora to "believe in him instead of God."

She did, up to a point. But it was a fact that no matter where she lived — Trieste, Zurich, Paris, Nice or Rome — she never lost her Irishness, her pungent way of talking and thinking, or her roots in the rough-and-ready life of western Ireland.

For Joyce, she was his living Ireland and he used her shamelessly, without giving her credit as his model for the full-blooded Molly Bloom in Ulysses and in countless other instances. He even copied her style of writing — which infuriated him — of running all her thoughts together, without punctuation or capitals.

He did this most particularly in Molly's famous soliloquy and in the incredibly tangled Finnegans Wake. When Nora did it, it was called stupid; when Joyce did it, it was revered as his brilliant new stream-of-consciousness technique.

SHE'S UPSTAGED

But even in this biography, as in life, Joyce upstages Nora, although Maddox has made a valiant effort to keep the focus on Nora, whose wit and intelligence sustained the ill-fated family.

Their son, Giorgio, who inherited his father's magnificent voice, was a misfit who ended up an alcoholic. Their troubled daughter, Lucia, spent most of her adult life in mental institutions, a victim of the constant shift from country to country, language to language.

Joyce, who waited interminable years for literary recognition of his books, relied mainly on the handouts of others. Principal among these was the ever-loyal Harriet Weaver, a London feminist and free-thinker who settled an enormous amount on him. Edith McCormick, a daughter of John D. Rockefeller, eventually cut off her allowance to Joyce when she discovered her money was sponsoring his carousing and riotous drinking.

The more Nora and Joyce had, the more they spent. They loved clothes — Nora was always the tip of fashion — dining out, entertaining and travelling, and they never seemed to worry where their next penny was coming from.

As Ernest Hemingway reported, the whole "Celtic crew" of Joyces ate several times a day at a Paris restaurant where Hemingway and his bride could only afford to eat once a week.

A FINE COOK

However, despite what detractors said, Nora was a splendid cook and an entertaining hostess, and she took naturally to languages. She loved music and opera and read to Joyce and took dictation as his sight failed into blindness, but she rejected his various programs for her self-improvement.

The greatest victim of Joyce's selfishness was his brother Stanislaus, who adored Nora and sacrificed his own life — putting off marriage until middle-age — to support Joyce's family. In the end, Joyce never said as much as a thank you, indulging his talent for exploiting everyone around him while convinced that he was being persecuted.

For all his self-absorption, Joyce, who died at 59, always knew that Nora was his life force and his inspiration, the headstrong Celtic woman who trusted her intuition and her passion. She died in 1951 at age 67.

Luba:

Ukrainian with incredible voice

TORONTO (CP) — The title of her television special says she's Between the Earth and Sky, but Canadian pop singer Luba has her feet planted firmly on the ground.

Onstage she's a raunchy rocker in leather and lace who caresses microphone stands and tosses back her sweat-soaked blonde tresses.

When the show lights are turned off she becomes shy, apple-cheeked Luba Kowalchuk, a nice Ukrainian girl from Montreal who wouldn't dream of making a spectacle of herself.

She's so low-key and down-to-earth that the producers of her show — airing Sunday, Oct. 30 at 8 p.m. EDT on CBC — thought the singer might not be dramatic enough to sustain an hour-long musical profile.

"With Luba, there's this incredible soul and incredible voice but because she's so shy it's tough getting things out of her," says Don Allan, who directed the show for Toronto-based Cambium Film and Video Productions Ltd.

"She's just a really, really sweet and nice person."

So what do you do when your film subject is so modest and unprepossessing that she risks being boring?

You marvel at how such an unspecial person can create such special music.

"A big part of (Luba's) attraction to fans is that she's just an ordinary girl," says Bruce Grawson, co-producer of the show with Arnie Zupursky. "They're really pretty thrilled someone that nice and that genuine can be so successful."

October 30 through November 5

SCORPIO

(October 23 - November 21)

Take a gamble on uncharted adventures. Mediocre attempts at reunions are met with cool response. A sheepish attitude reflects poorly on you.

SAGITTARIUS

(November 22 - December 21)

It is best to wait before divulging an underdeveloped plan. A potential jackpot lurks on the horizon. Premonitions, hunches are out of kilter.

CAPRICORN

(December 22 - January 19)

Orchestrate a get-together with good friends. Mood swings from formal to casual. Flippancy could spell trouble. Patience is hard to come by.

AQUARIUS

(January 20 - February 18)

Concentrate on keeping temper under control when plans change. A poker face will keep you out of the line of fire. Settle a disagreement.

PISCES

(February 19 - March 20)

A viable solution to tight finances presents itself in an unexpected way. Harmony at home is resumed. Guilty feelings are unwarranted.

ARIES

(March 21 - April 19)

Flattery comes from unusual source, lifting spirits. Avoid idle time by tending to organizational tasks. Good job prospects pick up.

TAURUS

(April 20 - May 20)

Break the cycle of procrastination. Muster the motivation to achieve mundane tasks. Allow time for exercise or health regimen.

GEMINI

(May 21 - June 20)

You deal effectively with an embarrassing situation, and leave an imprint on an influential person. Respect comes your way.

CANCER

(June 21 - July 22)

Habits are hard to break, but stick to intentions. Forgotten treasures surface at an opportune time. Others take your serious ideas lightly.

LEO

(July 23 - August 22)

Experience takes a nasty turn and proves to be a liability. A slump in productivity should not be cause for alarm. Make inquiries.

VIRGO

(August 23 - September 22)

Others around you try to stifle creativity by pushing primitive concepts. Newly established terms are of little significance.

LIBRA

(September 23 - October 22)

Voluntary acts net you respect from peers. Pressure is on to keep money matters in control.

'Dadah Is Death' tackles controversial issue of drugs

Julie Christie takes rare television role

By Anne Wheeler

Academy Award-winning actress Julie Christie has always been afforded the luxury of picking her roles carefully. Rising to fame 25 years ago in such feature films as Darling (her Oscar-winning film) and Dr. Zhivago, Christie makes a rare television appearance this week in a role she finds particularly important.

Christie stars as the very determined mother of a young man sentenced to hang for drug trafficking in Malaysia in Dadah Is Death, airing Sunday and Monday, Oct. 30 and 31, on CBS.

Dadah Is Death is based on the true story of Kevin Barlow (John Polson), a working class youth whose mishaps lead him to a fatal error in judgment. Frustrated, desperate and unable to find work when he is injured in an accident, he meets Geoffrey Chambers (Hugo Weaving), a young man whose affluent lifestyle and seeming success are the result of his involvement in drug trafficking.

Barlow agrees to act as a drug courier for Chambers, but their attempt to smuggle heroin out of Malaysia fails, and the two are arrested, tried and sentenced to hang under the country's new mandatory death penalty for drug trafficking.

While her son sits in a hellish prison cell, Barbara Barlow, Kevin's mother, desperately fights to save her son from the gallows. The family's limited finances lead her to Karpal Singh (Victor Banerjee), a Malaysian lawyer whose own conscience and disdain for the death penalty require him to plead Kevin's case in the courts without compensation.

When their attempts to work within the Malaysian system prove fruitless, Barbara draws on inner strength, as she pursues the case in the court of world opinion, mounting an impassioned campaign to stop the court from proceeding with its judgment.

Christie was intrigued by the role of Kevin's mother for the strength of the character, a rare find, she said, in television movies. She was fascinated by the way Barbara Barlow dealt so readily with public attention, having never been exposed to that kind of pressure before. But her interest in the message goes even further into the actress' personal efforts.

"I'm on the board of an organization in Britain called Welfare of Prisoners Overseas," she said. "It's not a very popular issue. It's a difficult issue to get people involved in, and yet it is important, I think, that people involved overseas should not feel abandoned."

"I think it's important for foreign prisoners in our country to be supported by some group or other in their own country, so that they have proper interpreters and visits and contact in some way or another with what they understand," she explained.

Christie expressed strong views on prisoners held specifically on drug charges.

"I think in most cases, where people are prosecuted for drugs, the people who are captured are those who are the least involved, who stand to gain the least, and who are doing the least damage, who are pawns," she said.

TBS, Lakers and Mavericks gear up for NBA season opener

By Jerry Jorgensen

TBS begins its fifth year of exclusive national cable carriage of the National Basketball Association Friday, Nov. 4.

What's that, you say? Basketball? Already?

Though it hardly seems possible—what with baseball season just barely over and the football season just swinging into its second half—it's already time for basketball again. As noted above, TBS will begin televising games this Friday. CBS will begin its weekend schedule soon after, on Nov. 26, to be exact.

When last we left the sport, you might remember (and what the heck, it was only four months ago), the Los Angeles Lakers had just been crowned World Champions after defeating the stubborn Detroit Pistons in the finals, four games to three. The Lakers had overcome some tough obstacles on their way to the title. Both the Utah Jazz and Dallas Mavericks had pushed them to seven games in the two series prior to the finals, and many experts believed that the champs were ready to be taken. The Lakers disagreed, however, and in response to a challenge issued by head coach Pat Riley, they gutted it up and won it all.

It is fitting, then, that when TBS begins its 50-game regular season schedule this Friday the Lakers will be one of the participants. Their opponents will be the Mavericks.

Each of the 25 NBA teams, including newcomers Charlotte and Miami, will appear at least once on the SuperStation this season. The Atlanta Hawks, Boston Celtics, Chicago Bulls, Detroit Pistons, and L.A. Lakers will be on the most, with each scheduled for 10 telecasts.

Q: Tell us about the handsome, clever MC who hosts Love Connection and Scrabble. He is the best on TV. Is he married? Where does he live? Put his picture in if you have one—he makes my day. —S.L. Byerson, Watertown, S.D.

A: Chuck Woolery is a native of Ashland, Ky. He began his career as a country western singer while at Morehead University. After graduation, he served two years aboard the U.S.S. Enterprise, and when his tour of duty was up, returned to Nashville to form the musical group Avant Garde. After six years he moved to California. He soon found himself in the feature film Jamaica Reef with Cheryl Ladd. He then starred in New Zoo Revue, a children's TV series. Woolery was then approached to host a new game show, The Wheel of Fortune, and stayed for seven years before leaving to pursue other interests. He is currently married to David Nelson's stepdaughter, Teri, and is the father of three children.

Q: I say Mae West said the delicious quote "Beulah, peel me a grape." My challenger says it was Greta Garbo—Never! Please settle this for us. I'll be watching for your answer. —Susan Soucheray, Bayfield, Wisc.

A: Oh Susan, you are so right. All Greta Garbo ever said was, "I want to be let alone."

Q: I say "No," my husband says, "Yes." Please settle the argument. Has Dolly Parton ever had to take voice lessons? Also whatever happened to Bette Davis? Where can I write her? —Theresa Constantineau, Mt. Home, Idaho

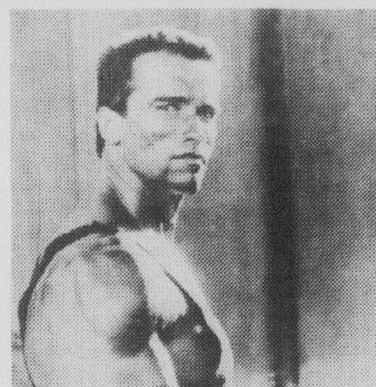

A: Dolly Parton comes from a musical family. She began at an early age singing in church choirs with her mother and sisters. Her uncle, Bill Owens, was also a big influence in her life, but she has never taken formal voice lessons. Write to Bette Davis: c/o Gottlieb, Schiff, Tickin & Harris, 555 5th Ave., New York, N.Y. 10017

Q: I know Tim Hutton's father is deceased but when did he die and what were the circumstances? —E. Kirchner, Beadstown, Ill.

A: Jim Hutton, who was such a hit on The Adventures of Ellery Queen, died on June 2, 1979, of liver cancer. He was 45 years old.

TRIVIA QUIZ

By Steven Alan McGaw

Once again I want you to write this column for a while; I'll just play editor.) Here's the scenario: Greyhound has taken over the space shuttle program and you're all aboard. One catch, though. You can take only five TV series or movies with you. (Cable doesn't run that far, yet!) What will they be? And, more importantly, what five gems would you try to discourage your traveling companions from taking along? Send these to Steve's New List, P.O. Box 17748, Fort Worth, Texas 76102.

Here's what I want to take:

St. Elsewhere: I missed some along the way and I loved every one I saw!

The Andy Griffith Show: This is just the slice of Earth you'd need in outer space.

The Fugitive: One of the best, and one that could occupy my attention, no matter the environment.

Late Night with David Letterman: Every episode! I've missed many (I have to sleep) and where else could I get my fill of Stupid Pet Tricks?

My World and Welcome to It: This Thurber-based series had a tragically short run, but every episode is a gem.

Here's five for a black hole:

The Debbie Reynolds Show: Few remember this stinker, but I do!

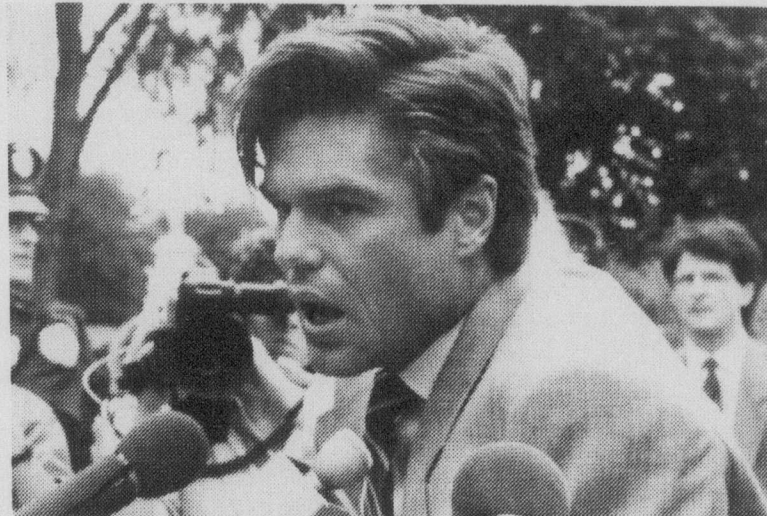

Anything based on a Judith Krantz novel.

Apple's Way: By far, the most sickeningly sweet program ever.

Anything with Michael Landon, besides Bonanza.

Hotel, except for the pilot (and that's only because of Bette Davis).

HARRY HAMLIN plays a charismatic senator who gains national attention when he is wounded in an assassination in Favorite Son, Sunday through Tuesday, Oct. 30 through Nov. 1, on NBC.

Roles give stars different perspectives on politics

'Favorite Son' follows major political coverup

By Mary Ann Townsend

To the three principal performers in Favorite Son, a six-hour political miniseries airing Sunday through Tuesday, Oct. 30 through Nov. 1, their roles brought different revelations about politics.

In Favorite Son, Harry Hamlin stars as a charismatic young senator making an ambitious bid for the White House. Having studied up on John F. Kennedy for the part, Hamlin's role as Senator Terry Fallon dredged up memories of an emotional time in the actor's life.

"The first time I saw an authority figure cry was the day John F. Kennedy was assassinated," Hamlin, whose character is wounded in an assassination, recalled. "There was one teacher at our school who was so tough we were all scared of him. Moments after the news of Kennedy's death came through, I saw him leave the classroom with tears streaming down his face. It was such a shock to me, and it epitomized how tragic that moment was for the country."

Linda Kozlowski, another main actor in Favorite Son, plays Senator Fallon's ambitious press aide, who will stop at nothing to further her boss' career. For Kozlowski, the role was humbling, and gave her an understanding of the intensity of politics.

"As an actress you're around publicists and journalists a lot, so I knew something about the process (of the press)," she said. "But the difference lies in the importance of what's being publicized. Sally (her character), and others like her in Washington, are involved with events that shape the future of the country. Acting is just entertainment," she said.

Robert Loggia, who plays an FBI agent nearing retirement who finds an alarming coverup involving the senator and his aide, found the part delightfully similar to his Oscar nominated role of Sam Ransom in Jagged Edge, and therefore good for his own personal politics.

"I'm a relative late bloomer and I need an identification, like a product on a shelf," he said.
