Order to move St. Pat's sports material probed

By SANDRA PICKFORD
(Record staff reporter)

An English-speaking member of the Roman Catholic School Commission, William F. Steele told The Record this morning he is carrying out a "thorough investigation" into a resolution adopted November 5 by the Commission recommending that physical education be discontinued at St. Patrick High School and that all the sports equipment be removed from the school.

Mr. Steele said in a telephone interview this morning he was "astonished" that a resolution of this kind should come before the commission.

The resolution, he said, was unanimously adopted at the November 5 weekly meeting of the commission following a discussion by members as to whether the English-speaking school for Catholic boys was using the sports facilities to full advantage.

Boycott beer and car firms

MONTREAL (CP)—A Quebec separatist movement has called for a boycott against a Toronto-owned brewery and another movement is threatening similar action against two French automotive firms.

Le Rassemblement pour l'Indépendance Nationale and le Parti Républicain du Québec announced their positions in separate statements Wednesday.

Both called for intervention by the Quebec government.

Le Rassemblement called for a boycott by French-speaking Canadians against all products of Dow Brewery Limited, controlled by Canadian Breweries Limited of Toronto.

The movement was aroused by the firm's new Kebece brand beer featuring a blue and white label similar in design to Quebec's provincial flag, the fleur-de-lis.

Le Parti Républicain said Quebecers should boycott the Renault and Peugeot cars if the two firms set up plants in Ontario, instead of Quebec.

The two firms were said to be considering establishment of Canadian plants.

Le Rassemblement described the new beer label as "the worst insult ever perpetrated by the Toronto capitalists."

As RC Commissioners meet

School cash is low

MONTREAL (CP)—About 1,500 Roman Catholic school commissioners are meeting in Montreal as difficulties connected with education continue to erupt at different points of Quebec Province.

The commissioners — representing all commissioners in the province with the exception of Montreal and Quebec City bodies which are appointed by government and church authorities — are concentrating on financial problems.

For example, the commissions' deficits increased to $66,000,000 from $32,000,000 in the last year.

Schools in St. Tite-des-Caps and St. Fereol have been closed because their school commissions refuse to increase taxation.

The Montmagny School Commission fired 29 of its 30 high school teachers Wednesday for failing to show up for classes in the morning.

Jean Leduc, president of the Quebec Federation of Roman Catholic School Commissions, said Wednesday night the main problem facing the commissioners at the Montreal convention is financial. He said the increase in money that has to be spent each year to pay for expansion and new services has not been matched by a large enough increase in revenue.

PROPOSE SOLUTIONS

The resolutions the delegates will discuss propose solving the financing problems by such initiatives as a provincial lottery, special provincial subsidies, and a province-wide salary schedule for teachers "to end once and for all this orgy" of their demands.

Paul Gerin-Lajoie, youth minister, was asked in another resolution to announce how his department, in charge of education, intends to settle the big school deficits for the current fiscal year "as soon as possible."

In Quebec City, Mr. Gerin-Lajoie was concerned with closure of the schools 40 miles from the provincial capital which has given about 900 children an enforced holiday.

He told reporters school commissions are obliged to provide instruction of their children by law.

The youth minister has called on the school commissions of St. Tite-des-Caps and St. Fereol to meet with him today.

Mr. Steele said he is now talking with school officials and plans to talk to the boys themselves, he said.

He said he believed that the boys still wanted physical education and were using the school's sports equipment to its full advantage.

His report, he said, will be submitted to the commission. Although no credits are given for physical education, the Catholic school system recommends that physical education facilities be placed at the disposal of students. It is only since 1957 that St. Patrick High School students have had such facilities with a new extension was added to the school.

Since then, Mr. Steele said the commission has given the school more than $3,000 in sports equipment, under a program which the commission has "just started" he said, in providing the Catholic schools with physical education instructors and better equipment.

Mr. Steele was not present at this meeting and he said he didn't know anything about the resolution until it was brought up for final approval at the November 12 meeting.

"I demanded an immediate investigation," he said, "and they told me to go right ahead before final approval was given."

Although Mr. Steele would not mention any names, it is reported that three school officials recommended the sports program for the 430 boys be discontinued and the equipment removed from the school.

School principal Father R. Quenneville was not available for comment this morning.

One-man royal commission

To probe Montreal school board

QUEBEC (CP)—The Quebec government has set up a one-man royal commission inquiry into land purchasing practices of the Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal.

The action was taken two weeks after publication of a government-ordered report which said some land sales had been handled in a "negligent and careless way by inexperienced persons" and had cost taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The royal commission is to be conducted by Mr. Justice Arthur I. Smith of Quebec Superior Court and will cover land transactions during the last 10 years.

The first report, prepared by Montreal lawyer Kenneth MacKay, looked into 49 land sales in the last 10 years and said nine of them involved exorbitant prices, questionable sites "or evidence of negligence or irregularity."

The rest appeared to be normal, he said. FOR FIVE REASONS The royal commission announced Wednesday was ordered for five reasons, Pierre Laporte, municipal affairs minister, told reporters.

He said the MacKay report "leaves questions totally or partially unanswered, particularly about transactions with Michael Hornstein, a Montreal real estate man."

The MacKay report said Mr. Hornstein made exaggerated profits on sales to the Protestant board.

Mr. Laporte said another reason was that the MacKay report "said too much and not enough" about relations between board chairman John Rowat and Edmund Asselin, now a Liberal member of Parliament for Montreal-Notre Dame de Grace.

In a statement issued following announcement of the royal commission, Mr. Rowat said the government's move was welcomed by the Protestant board members.

Deport order is delayed

VANCOUVER (CP)—A former Communist Wednesday was granted 30 days in which to try to convince immigration authorities she is not a security risk.

Just 24 hours before she was to be put on an aircraft bound for Britain, Mrs. Miriam Stevenson was granted a stay of proceedings on a deportation order.

The 53-year-old British-born Mrs. Stevenson says she has been told that she is a security risk because she belonged to the Communist party for a year in Los Angeles during the depression.

She says she was to be deported because of that and because she belongs to a prohibited class of immigrant.

In an interview Wednesday night she said she does not know how she will convince Immigration Minister F. A. A. that she is not a security risk.

She would "swear on a stack of Bibles that I've had nothing to do with the (Communist) party" since the depression.

Mr. Gerin-Lajoie said the province may approve the budgets but only after boards had made a "reasonable financial effort."

Pupils in St. Fereol have been away from classes since Nov. 4 and in St. Tite-des-Caps since Nov. 11.

The school closing in Montmagny, 30 miles east of Quebec City, resulted from a walkout of all the high school teachers but one in protest against what they said were "dictatorial methods" of principal Jean-Marie Demers. They also say their working hours are too long.

The school commission fired the protesters and closed the school in which 600 pupils are taught.

Try refloating

QUEBEC (CP)—Efforts to refloat the Norwegian freighter Marstenen, which went aground at Les Escoumains, Que., 160 miles northeast of here, at the end of last week, began Wednesday. The 6,000-ton vessel went aground during a storm.

AFL-CIO pledges to fight against trusteeship law

NEW YORK (CP)—The AFL-CIO's Maritime Trades Department has pledged to fight for removal of Canadian legislation placing the Seafarers' International Union and four other maritime unions in Canada under control of a three-man board of trustees.

The department, affiliates of which have membership of nearly 1,000,000 in the United States and Canada, adopted as policy Wednesday a statement calling for several specified steps, among them:

Representations to the United Nations and the UN's International Labor Organization, economic actions as seen necessary, and consideration of selective boycotting of Canadian goods and services.

Oct. unemployment is up but said normal

OTTAWA (CP)—Canadian unemployment edged up to 265,000 in mid-October from 250,000 a month earlier, with the increase mainly among men in the 25 to 44 age bracket, the labor department and the bureau of statistics reported today. The increase was described as normal for this time of year. The mid-October figure still was well below the unemployment level of 283,000 at the same time last year.

The overall rise in employment was spread over all regions except the Atlantic provinces, which showed little change from October, 1962. The biggest gain, 5.8 per cent, was in Quebec.

Atom site blast alarms many

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP)—An earth shaking chemical explosion at an Atomic Energy Commission base alarmed hundreds of people Wednesday despite swift assurances it was not a nuclear blast.

Three workmen escaped with minor injuries. They started running at the sight of a flash as they were loading 13 tons of the explosive material in a remote storage igloo.

A huge cloud of smoke rose over the base. The blast occurred at the AEC's Medina base, a secret installation 10 miles southwest of the San Antonio business district.

Official spokesmen said the chemical explosive, similar to TNT, posed no radiation threat although it presumably scattered particles of uranium far and wide.

Budget battle ended

OTTAWA (CP)—The last shots were fired Wednesday in the Commons' epic battle of the budget, five months to the day after Finance Minister Gordon unveiled his first budget.

The third and last bill arising from the June 13 budget and its revisions announced in the July 8 "little budget" was approved over the objections of Conservative MPs.

An amendment to the Income Tax Act, the measure now goes to the Senate.

The bill cleared the last Commons hurdle after the minority Liberal government beat down still another Conservative amendment 112 to 66 with the aid of the three splinter parties.

The income tax legislation had been debated for the main part of 10 days since the session resumed Sept. 30 and three days in the first part of the session last summer. At least five amendments proposed by various Opposition parties were rejected during the protracted fight.

NO FORMALITY The House spent nearly three hours Wednesday on the third and final reading stage, normally a formality carried out without debate.

"For the life of me I cannot understand what all the fuss has been about," said Mr. Gordon, his patience obviously wearing thin.

About Television

By CYNTHIA LOWKY

NEW YORK (AP) — Carol Burnett, who isn't seen often on television these days, more's the pity, romped back into sight Tuesday night in Calamity Jane, a rowdy musical comedy.

The 90-minute CBS special was taped last summer after Carol and the company had played the show a couple of weeks in a summer theatre. Those weeks showed in the smoothness of the finished product, particularly in the song and dance numbers. With television's usual brief rehearsal time, musical production numbers often are ragged.

Calamity Jane was especially adapted to Carol's comedy and singing talents and is derived from a real character of the pioneer West — and an old movie. Some of the songs were new and some were not, but it was nice music.

Carol played Calamity as a rip-snorting, gun-slinging dame in slacks and a Civil War drummer boy's cap, giving the tomboy role a little more enthusiasm than was really necessary.

She took time out from broad comedy and mugging to sing My Secret Love straight and sweetly. One wishes she did that sort of thing more often. She has a nice voice and is rather cute.

Weekly activities at Stanstead College

This is the long weekend, with staff and students leaving the College Nov. 14 at 4 p.m. and returning the following Monday night by 9 p.m. This weekend completes the half term and brings with it the end of soccer and football games until another season.

November 13, the new boys presented a show and this completes their initiation period. Half term exams have been finished and report card sent to the parental homes. The second term will see the practices for hockey and basketball and preparation for Christmas exams and other activities.

The senior and junior football teams were in Quebec the weekend of Nov. 9, and clashed with Quebec High School teams playing on a field about two inches deep in mud after the continuous rain storm. The games were well played but both were defeated by Quebec. Senior score was 26 for Quebec to one for Stanstead.

In the junior game the score was 6 for Quebec and 10 for Stanstead. The junior game was especially good. The junior boys have had a very successful season; they have had wins and losses which is satisfactory to their coaches. The senior football game was for the Dunn trophy in a home and home series and Quebec captured the trophy.

Rev. Cecil Woods will be the coach of the College Midget hockey team, with Rev. D. V. Stirling, coaching the bantam team. Both teams will be in the Border Junior Hockey League. Team players will be picked after the half term break.

The Cadets marched in the Armistice parade with the Boundary veterans. The drum and bugle corps provided the marching music. All the boys and many of the staff attended the Remembrance Day service at the Opera House and afterward all gathered around the Memorial Gates, where wreaths were laid by Jeff Roberts, for the College, and Mrs. Leonard McGilton, for the Stanstead Chapter IOOE. JACOBY ON BRIDGE

SOUTH WANTED BEST TO HAPPEN

North didn't have much of an opening bid, and after West took him off the hook with his one spade overall, North shouldn't have raised to two hearts.

South moved right to the heights. North had to respond to Blackwood and then hope for the best at six hearts.

South won the opening club lead and started to play trumps. East showed out on the first lead, and South stopped for a moment to determine the significance of West's overcall and of East's failure to raise. His conclusion was that West must have the ace of diamonds in addition to the king-queen of clubs and most of the spades.

South ran off five trumps. His discards from dummy were a diamond and a club. East just discarded clubs. West let a spade and a diamond go.

Now South was sure that West had discarded down to ace and a small diamond. He cashed dummy's two spades to discard his ten of clubs, ruffed a club, led a low diamond to dummy's queen, returned a diamond and played low. West had to play his ace and South's king of diamonds and last trump accounted for the remaining two tricks.

East thought that West

Identity unsure, two are cleared of stealing cars

By JAMES DAVIES
(Record staff reporter)

Two Sherbrooke men who faced charges of car theft at their preliminary hearing before Judge Evender Veilleux yesterday were freed when they could not definitely be linked with those implicated in the crime.

Jacques Beaulieu and Russell Parsons, although identified by name as those involved in a car theft in Sherbrooke last September by several witnesses, were not pointed out as the persons involved in Sessions Court yesterday.

Accused is told to find lawyer

An Ayer's Cliff youth facing charges of car theft, escaping the custody of law officers, dangerous driving, and driving while his faculties were impaired by alcohol was told to come back before the court today — only by this time he was to have at least tried to obtain the services of a lawyer to defend him.

Bernard Hoyt, 20, told Judge Evender Veilleux in Sessions Court yesterday that he had learned Monday by letter that his lawyer had abandoned him. The same day he said that he heard, also through the mail, that he was to appear in court. Hoyt allegedly stole a late model car belonging to Jean Marc Routhier of Barre, Vermont, in October and had also allegedly escaped the custody of police officers who had tried to arrest him.

He had been set free on $500 cash or $950 property bail until his trial.

If the accused has obtained no legal counsel by tomorrow, he may be given at least one more chance to locate one.

Governments see Chambers of Commerce as important representatives of public

As an important intermediary body, and one which represents a cross-section of public opinion, the Chamber of Commerce intends to continue its active role in the affairs of the nation, the local chamber president told a dinner audience at the Social Club here last night.

Addressing a gathering in his honor, Gontran Guillemette stressed the increasingly important part that the Chamber is playing because more than ever governments on every level—municipal, provincial, and federal—are using bodies such as the Chamber of Commerce for consultation before proceeding with important legislation.

The Sherbrooke branch of the Chamber is not lagging behind in its efforts to be of use to the community, at a time when the opportunity is available and necessary Mr. Guillemette added.

At the moment the local group has committed the study of bilingualism and biculturalism to a special committee headed by architect Denis Tremblay and another on the Social Welfare situation here to a second committee chaired by Dr. Blaise Drapeau.

In practice, the Sherbrooke Chamber is ahead of other branches of the organization especially in its claim to be a truly two-language organization.

While others may profess bilingualism, it is actually practiced among the Sherbrooke group he told the Club.

"It has furthered this precious special characteristic and is probably the sole Chamber of Commerce in Canada where bilingualism is truly the order of the day and where biculturalism is freely recognized and voluntarily accepted in all its work."

Mayor Armand Nadeau attended the dinner, and telegrams from Paul Desruisseaux and Dr. Richard Gaudet were sent.

With building permits already issued to a value of $6,000,000 more than last year at this time, Sherbrooke city hall is expecting construction in the city not only to set a new record in 1963, but to double last year's record total.

In the first 10 months of 1962, says building inspector Aime Gagnon $12,288,660 worth of permits were issued. Up to October this year, $18,279,490 worth had been issued.

Mr. Gagnon predicted that the total would be $25,000,000 before the year was out.

In both years, residential building accounted for about a third of the total.

"I feel it's a very good proportion," says Mr. Gagnon. "I've always noticed that if big construction goes well, residential will follow."

In the 1962 10-month total, 355 of the 851 permits, and $5,375,800 of the $12,288,660 value were for house building.

In the 10-month figures for this year, housing accounted for 414 of the 1,040 permits and $6,705,400 of the $18,279,490 value.

Another phenomenon noted by Mr. Gagnon was the steady demand for permits — and big ones — late into fall.

Between mid-October and mid-November, he had seen some $1,500,000 in permits go out, he said.

Big projects mentioned by the inspector included schools and centres, notably the North Ward Centre Notre Dame de l'Enfant. "And with the bridges and other public projects, I'm still issuing permits. There's no winter slowdown yet."

Many dangers in steel mill project

Apparent determination of the present Quebec Government to establish a mighty steel-producing complex in this province will present two major problems — that of finding capital to finance the project and of assuring adequate markets to provide the profits needed to meet the interest charges. Either of these problems alone would pose a great threat of further government intervention in the general business life of the province. Combined they are a matter of grave concern.

Required investment in the steel complex will approximate $300,000,000, almost the sum borrowed when Quebec nationalized the power industry of the province. But the circumstances surrounding the borrowing of the money are different in each case. Substantial blocks of the power company stocks were held by institutional investors who were willing to exchange their stock holdings for provincial bonds. Thus the actual cash borrowings were comparatively small.

But the money required for the steel mill will represent new capital, much of which must be obtained from new sources.

Some of this may come from the General Investment Corporation but at present the funds available for this institution are barely five per cent of the estimated final cost of the steel complex.

One serious possibility is that the government may seek to boost GIC's cash reserves by "encouraging" existing firms in many lines to "invest" in stocks and debentures of General Investment. This "encouragement to invest" could take the form of polite but strong hints that future business a firm receives from the provincial government or agencies to which it provides subsidies might be dependent upon its investment in the Investment Corporation.

Another disturbing possibility is that the reserves to be created under the proposed provincial old age pension plan might find their way into the steel plant. Perhaps this may account for the urgency given by the Quebec cabinet to establishing the pensions scheme.

Similarly pressure may be applied to private industry to purchase its steel requirements from the provincially-sponsored steel mill, even if its prices were not strictly competitive.

If the decision to establish a new steel complex is made on economic grounds, the menace to other lines of industry may be slight. But if the decision is basically political, the picture is gloomy indeed.

Some money talks so loud a man marries it.

Centennial project picture murky

A curious situation has developed regarding municipal projects for Canada's centennial in 1967.

There is, on the one hand, the National Centennial Administration which is sending out packages of booster literature at every opportunity.

The administration can provide interested communities with large quantities of details regarding possible projects. It can recommend suitable undertakings. It can distribute copies of a "guideline" paper on Canada's second century published by the Canadian Centennial Council. It can give details of financial arrangements regarding grants for suitable projects.

And its chairman, John Fisher can give speeches about the need to start working now. "All over Canada," he says, "the work should be getting underway."

The advice is sound. On every level, there is much that can be done regarding centennial planning that does not involve government grants. But the planning of fairly large-scale public works requires more than enthusiasm.

A survey carried out by The Record (the results of which were published yesterday) indicates that so far, municipal officials have little more than good advice to go on.

The fault lies chiefly with the provinces. Under the terms of centennial legislation, all public works projects must be approved by the province before being eligible for a federal grant.

The province must be prepared to guarantee that two thirds of the cost of each project will be met jointly by the province and the initiating agency.

So the onus is on the provinces to decide what is a suitable centennial project, and what is not.

To date Quebec has not made this decision. Sherbrooke, for example, is thinking of building a city hall. But there is no way of knowing at the present time whether or not it would be eligible for a centennial grant. There are indications, in fact, that Quebec would turn thumbs down on municipal projects which would be built in any case, centennial or no centennial. But there is nothing sure about this, either.

No wonder Townships mayors are confused.

What is needed — and shortly — is a clear statement from the Quebec government on what a suitable centennial project consists of.

A wife just loves to get things on time except meals.

The retarded, our eternal children

Most of us, as children, have been entertained by the gentle adventures of James Barrie's eternal child, Peter Pan.

Life for the real Peter Pans of Canada is not always as pleasant as it was for Barrie's character. Many people, however, are contributing tirelessly of their time and talents to make things easier for Canada's estimated 450,000 retarded children, and to enable them to realize their limited potential in becoming contributing members of society.

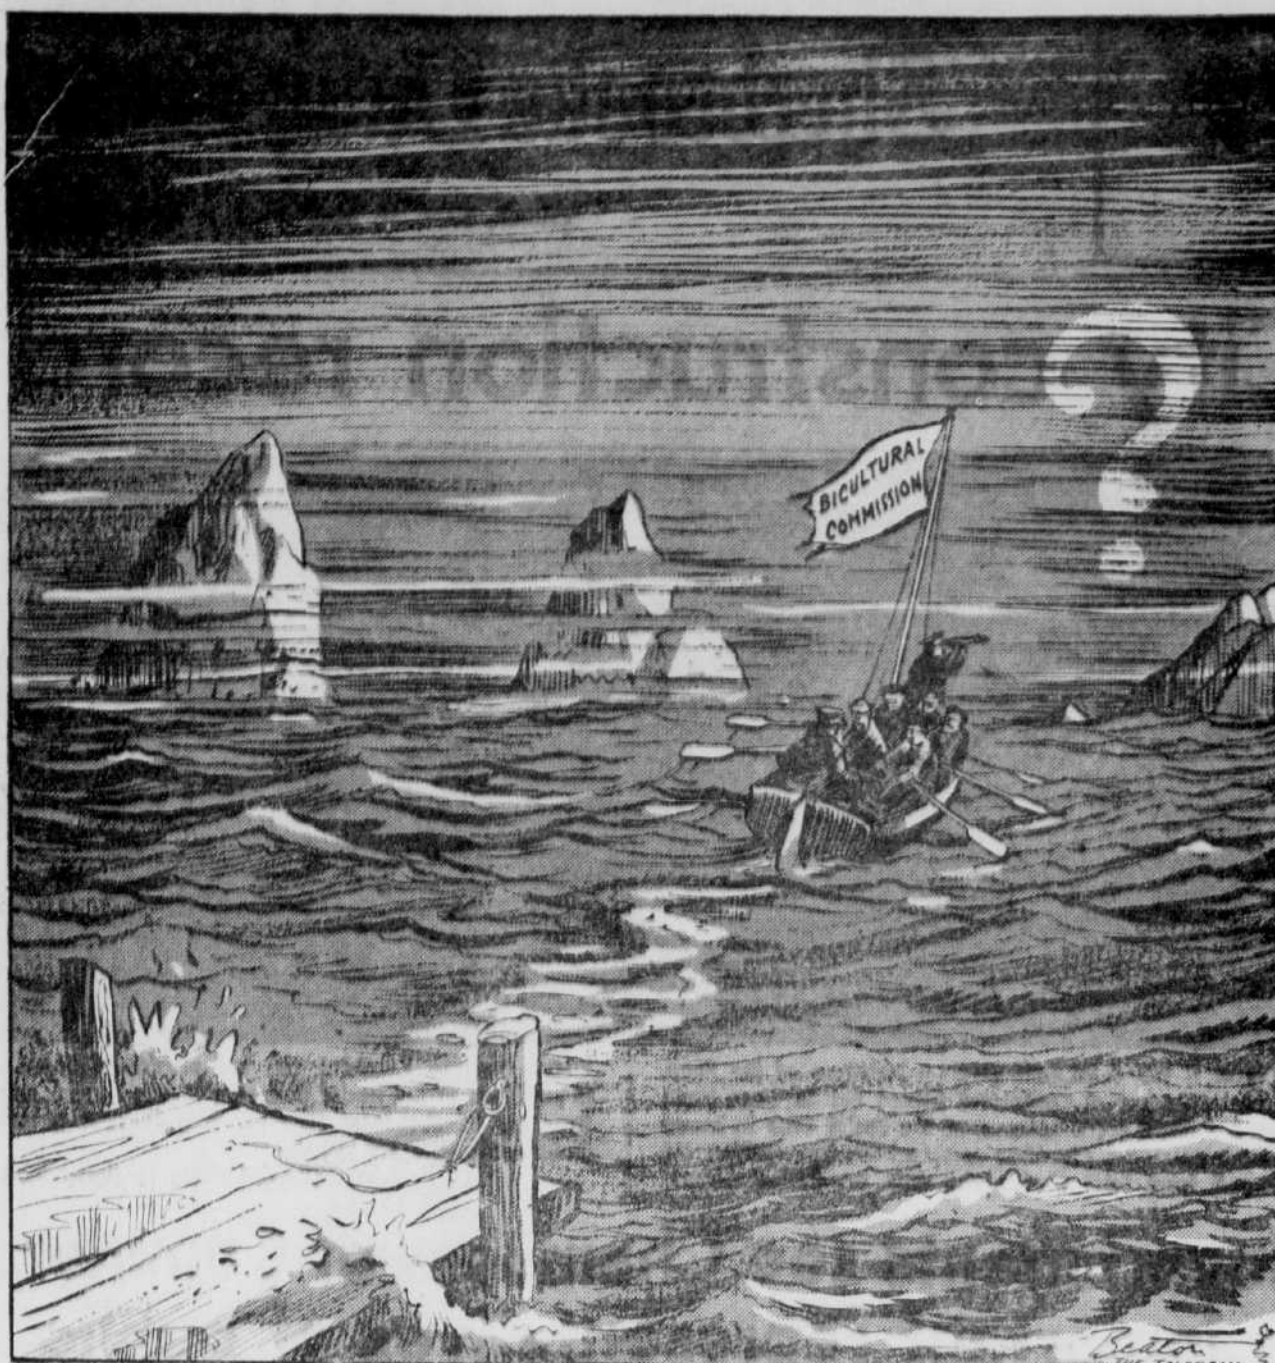

But it all takes money. Retardation can be severe enough that the child must be forever taken care of in an institution, unable to perform the simplest physical tasks for himself, or it can be slight enough that the individual, with training, can eventually go out into the world unrecognizable as retarded except in unusually demanding situations.

In each case, experience has shown that something can be done for these children.

The Association for the Help for Retarded Children, Inc., Sherbrooke Branch, needs money for the continued efficient operation of its school at 273 London Street. It is holding a tag day in Sherbrooke and Lennoxville tomorrow and Saturday.

The word "charity" is often abused. It means simply "love". Contributions towards this school assist activities that are works of love and mercy in the purest sense of the words.

Outdated nationalism is dangerous

Dear Sir:

Allow me to comment on the Ottawa Journal's editorial, "Paul Martin's Brave Futile Dream," which appeared in the Record of November 9, 1963.

In this era of mass nationalism, most attempts to further the concept of internationalism are regarded as "brave, but futile dreams." It is unfortunate that such is the case, because the concept of nationalism has reached the stage in its evolution where it can endanger the future of a great part of the human race. In other words, our views on nationalism must be modified and adapted to cope with the present situation.

The Journal's historical commentary seems rather unrealistic. For at the turn of the nineteenth century, many in Europe were not "talking as Mr. Martin talks now." For the primary aim of the post-Napoleonic Conference System was to preserve tottering regimes against the influence of strong nationalistic liberal sentiment unleashed in France by the Revolution, and spreading rapidly throughout Europe. In short, the four victorious powers were attempting to maintain the status quo and a balance of power situation favourable to themselves.

I agree with Mr. Martin when he stated that "he did not think the concept of a sovereign state could exist in the modern world." Originally, the emerging nation state needed an inner bond to hold it together in unifying its territory and diverse peoples. Nationalism served this need.

But today, this nationalistic concept is outmoded, and, along with it, the concept of the sovereign state, which depends upon nationalism to a great extent for its continued existence. Nationalism served its original purpose of freeing individuals from reactionary regimes in European states in the first half of the nineteenth century. It gave each individual a sense of belonging to a powerful unit composed of members like himself. The development of nationalism was a major step towards procuring representation in a government by the individuals who comprised that nation state. There is no question that nationalism served what seemed to be an urgent need at the time. However, with the approach of World War One, it seems that the meaning of nationalism was changed by the development and perfection of both effective news media and propaganda devices, which were necessary to gain support for the war effort.

The existence of the concept of nationalism has been one of the most devastating factors in twentieth-century history. Currents of nationalism are strongly entrenched in the roots of two wars, in which thirty million human beings have been systematically murdered.

Although once a tool for ensuring a more effective form of government, it now resembles a powerful political weapon which distorts truth, exaggerates differences in ideology, and adds fuel to the fires of racism. In wartime, the public is inoculated with xenophobia, a disease of the mind which produces a fear of things foreign. Some schools embark upon a policy of systematic instillation of patriotic ideas in the minds of children.

I sometimes wonder whether such a thing as "healthy patriotism" can exist, which, when perverted to its logical conclusion, especially in times of crisis, can breed international hate and selfish national interests in extremely large quantities.

If we must believe in something, why can it not be a sense of belonging to something universal? This time-worn, and yet still idealistic concept known as the brotherhood of man is a doctrine inherent in most of the world's great religions, including Christianity. By doing so, we would be lifting ourselves from the plane of squabbling nationalities to one infinitely superior by its definition. This would involve a shifting of emphasis from the role played by the individual in the nation state, to that played by the individual in a larger world order.

It has been said that we study history to acquire a balanced judgment. Furthermore, we can't really assess our present situation unless we are aware of the way we arrived here. Although we can't predict the future by studying history, the results of our studies may place us in a better position to guess the consequences of certain historical developments. Therefore, anyone who is willing to spend some time tracing nationalism from its origins to the present day will perhaps see that we are not too far from the day when either nationalism or a larger part of the human race will have to go.

Yours truly,
Peter Storen

Australia buys American

Bomber deal hurts pride, pocket

By JOSEPH MACSWEEN

LONDON (CP)—It's hard to judge whether Britain was hurt more in its pride or in its purse by the Australian decision to buy the American TFX bomber.

Australia's choice of a United States plane that does not yet exist over the British TSR-2—expected to fly early next year—was a staggering blow whose repercussions will be debated in the new parliamentary session, opening Nov. 12.

So astronomical is the cost involved and so sophisticated the planes that ordinary folk are able to form only foggy ideas about the rights or wrongs of the case.

But the British are asking themselves whether the decision means that Australia, section in the workings of rockets and missiles and of space flights wealth, is drawing closer to the will be given to Canada's air U.S. and away from the mother cadets. Ivan B. Quinn of Vancouver, Canada already uses cover, president of the Air U.S. Super Starfighter planes in Cadet League of Canada, said its NATO strike-reconnaissance program is part of keeping role.

Critics are also asking whether Britain, desperately striving to maintain its independent nuclear deterrent, has actually embarked on a sort of intra-allied arms race with the U.S.—a race it can never win.

"The Australians gave us a kick in the teeth," said one source close to government thinking.

But Prime Minister Douglas-Home, in the midst of his by-election campaign, was more cautious.

"We are naturally disappointed that Australia did not buy this aircraft, but we do not depend on export orders," he told a reporter.

The Americans were apparently able to undersell the British but it may be significant that the controversy coincided with a wave of anger in West Germany over the lobbying tactics of a U.S. plane manufacturer.

Douglas-Home was urged by The London Daily Mail to put "blunt queries" to the Australian government and President Kennedy as to the possibilities of undue pressure in the deal. The newspaper says: "Whether the U.S. is innocent or not in the tactics employed to sell the TFX, it is a fact that the Americans undoubtedly play a very rough game in the aircraft sales field."

An aggravating feature was that the TSR-2 was developed in consultation with the Royal Australian Air Force, seeking a successor for its British-made Canberra bomber.

Like a mother eagle goaded into sudden fury, the air staff unveiled details of the TSR-2 in a burst of superlatives. The choice. This inspired comparisons with locking the stable door after the horse was stolen. Virtually a manned missile in some respects, the TSR-2 embodies such astonishing versatility that one commentator wrote "the RAF now is the envy of the air forces of the world."

One of Britain's foremost test pilots, after news of Australia's purchase of the TFX, likened the selling aircraft in Australia to "casting pearls before swine."

Designed to move at twice the speed of sound, carrying nuclear or conventional weapons, in tactical or strategic operations, the TSR-2 could use a rugby field as a base of attack against tanks or it could hit distant targets with H-bombs, skimming the ground to outwit radar and anti-aircraft missiles.

Since Britain's V-bomber nuclear force now is becoming obsolete, the TSR-2 could fill the gap in the country's much-valued independent deterrent pending the introduction of Polaris missiles in British submarines in the 1970s.

But here's the rub: Each plane costs £2,500,000 and estimates put the over-all cost at £500,000,000 ($1,500,000,000). Some estimates go as high as $3,000,000,000.

As explained by Sir Robert Menzies, Australian prime minister, price—details of which have not been announced—was the key to the U.S. deal.

It was "not pro-British or anti-British but probably the most favorable deal ever made by Australia with another country for something which is vital for defence."

FORTUNE AT STAKE
Menzies, fighting a general election, is under fire in his own country over the affair. Britain, with a general election pending, certainly has not heard the last of the controversy, especially since the Labor party considers the independent deterrent a myth.

"You cannot remain quiet when £400,000,000 or £500,000,000 is at stake," said Fred Lee, shadow aviation minister. "There are bound to be questions over the cost, especially in view of the fact that it does not look as if the export market is going to be as lucrative as we hoped."

The melancholy story of Britain's cancelled defence projects since the Second World War is likely to haunt the government. One newspaper, The Observer, estimates these cost the taxpayers nearly £240,000,000 ($720,000,000). Included were the Blue Streak, Britain's own guided missile, and Skybolt, the air-ground missile project cancelled last December.

The new plane was originally conceived as a tactical strike reconnaissance weapon—hence the initials TSR—but its role was expanded during the years. The long-range capacity was built in because of the government's wish for an airborne nuclear deterrent and also because it was believed such positions, the TSR-2 could use a rugby field as a base of attack against tanks or it could hit

Gerald Waring REPORTING

OTTAWA — Perhaps it is because Robert N. Thompson is himself a New Canadian, born in the US of Norwegian-American parents, that he has unusual insight concerning the great Canadian problem of ethnic relations.

Speaking as a private citizen rather than as social Credit leader, Mr. Thompson warned the Royal Commission on Bilingualism and Biculturalism last week of the danger of "cultural polarization". This is the process by which, as he put it, "Quebec has become progressively more French-Canadian in culture (while) the rest of Canada has, with few exceptions, been losing the influence of French-Canadian culture".

"In the long run," he said, "if this process continues... we will have two nations within Canada, completely lacking in the common outlook which is essential to national unity. Our nation will fall into two pieces for the simple lack of any common purpose binding it together."

Thompson is not an assimilationist. "The cultures, particularly of minority groups, (must) be preserved," he said. "This is particularly true of the position of the English-speaking minority inside Quebec, and of the French-speaking minorities outside Quebec, but it applies as well to many other minority groups in many other parts of the country."

All the emphasis in the B & B commission is on the French-Canadian culture: how it can be encouraged to flower outside of Quebec on terms of equality with the English-Canadian culture. Mr. Thompson does well to point out that biculturalism, like trade, is a two-way street, and that the English-Canadian culture must be accorded equality of status and opportunity within Quebec.

This idea is contrary to French-Canadian thinking. The general attitude in Quebec is that other cultures must not intrude further in Quebec, while French-Canadians must be accorded equality of opportunity to transplant themselves, and their language, their customs and their way of life elsewhere in Canada.

The Quebec government demonstrates this attitude in its efforts to seize control of Eskimos affairs in Northern Quebec and to make French rather than English the second language of the aborigines.

The St. Jean Baptiste Society demonstrates this attitude by declaring that immigrants must adhere to either the French or English cultures.

The attitude is apparent in Quebec's intensified hostility to the English language, which is carried to the ridiculous degree of replacing bilingual street signs with new signs in French only.

Mr. Thompson pointed out to the B & B commissioners that the founding fathers' aim was a nation in which all citizens "would enjoy a common citizenship, and that the freedom of every inhabitant to retain his traditional culture and traditional way of life would be most jealously safeguarded."

Moreover, Thompson said, Canada had attracted immigrants partly because under our constitution they would not be compelled by law or public policy to adopt any particular culture or religion.

Equality under the law is the rock upon which our nation is founded. It will be the hard duty of the B & B commission, it seems to me, to tell English-Canadians and French-Canadians that neither shall be more equal than the other, and to tell New Canadians that the freedom they sought here includes the freedom to preserve, if they wish, the culture of their forefathers.

Other papers say:

Women's dreams, husbands' warning

Courageously, if not foolishly, a London newspaper has recently made an effort to pry into the secret ambitions of women of all ages. Its findings to date have been startling, to say the least.

One young Sussex matron, for instance, reveals that it is her fondest dream to drive a tank. Another has the desire to drive a Georgian stage-coach from London to Brighton, while one eighty-five-year-old wants to ride on a camel.

Mrs. Joan Williams wants nothing else quite so much as "to sit in a state of splendid indifference driving an old-fashioned steam roller."

True, one or two ladies have shown somewhat less aggressive tendencies than those already mentioned. One wants the simple pleasure of launching a great ship and watching it slide down the slipway. "I can imagine nothing more exciting than being the person who pressed the button," she says.

However, only one real feminist has apparently shown up so far among the ladies prepared to expose their private dreams to the public. And that is a spinster from Warwickshire who simply wants to play the harp. "Every time I go to an orchestral concert I feel I would give anything to take the harpist's place."

It may or may not be significant that the only peaceful Walter Mitty type ambition expressed by the ladies to date has come from an unmarried woman. Husbands perhaps should take some kind of warning.

How to go on ice and snow

Winter driving conditions don't cause accidents! Drivers who fail to adjust to these conditions do cause them!

Practice smooth driving all year round so you'll have the habit of driving smoothly when streets and roads are slippery.

Keep your car in good mechanical condition and have it "winterized" before the cold weather sets in.

Be prepared for poor traction. Under any circumstances, be sure your tires have good treads. Tests have shown that snow tires provide added traction. And for emergency conditions, be sure you have a set of good tire chains in your trunk.

HOW TO STOP
The best way to stop on ice is to "pump" rapidly on your brake. "Pumping" the brake prevents continuous locking or skidding of the wheels. On slippery roads locked wheels are always dangerous. If the wheels lock, your car is out of control!

Early darkness, cloudy and misty weather, rain, snow, storms, frosted or spattered windshields—all make it difficult to see. When driving, be sure your windows are clean and your windshield wiper blades don't streak.

Also check to be sure your heater and defroster are working properly.

BEFORE STARTING OUT
After a storm clear off all the snow and ice from your windshield and all other windows of your car. It is a good idea to clean off the headlights.

Mansenville

Mrs. Tan Heath was hostess on Nov. 5 for a picnic ware party. The wares were displayed to about 14 ladies, followed by games and refreshments.

NOVEMBER

November days are dull and dark
With little to commend them,
But I've a thousand useful ways
In which I plan to spend them.

The Christmas gifts that I can make,
The cards for early sending,
The picture that I plan to paint,
Then there's that pile of mending.

I'll really organize my days
So when November's ended,
Each plan I've made will be fulfilled,
And every sock be mended.

I'll read those clippings that I've saved,
I'll study French or Spanish,
With all the things that I have planned
The month will simply vanish.

December 1st, — and I admit
Things weren't as I intended,
The kids were down with chicken-pox,
Those socks? They still aren't mended.

D.E.K.

Take it from Kathy

By KATHY PETERSON

Dear Kathy: I've tried everything to make a certain boy notice me but nothing seems to work. Sometimes he pays a little attention, but then he's just as nice to someone else. There are so many pretty girls that I hardly have a chance. I remember the first time I saw him and I've had a crush on him ever since. It's been two years and my feelings haven't changed a bit. I've got to either make him notice me or forget him, but how?

—L. H.
Dear L. H.: There's a difference between noticing and liking! If you've tried everything, you've certainly been noticed but apparently not especially liked. I hope "everything" hasn't included phoning constantly and generally being a pest. If that's the case he's already dodging so hard you'll never catch him. All other boys in the world aren't just objects that clutter up the scenery. They are the answer to forgetting. When you stop letting your feelings for No. 1 show all over the place, chances with other boys will be lots better. DEAR KATHY — Lately grade friends seem to have become ex-friends and I don't know what to do. Whenever they went to a show they invited me or if someone had a party I went—but not any more. I'm beginning to feel like a fifth wheel even at school. What can I do so I won't be just a tag-along?—Mary

Dear Mary: The eighth grade is sort of crossroads. Most girls stop following the crowd in everything and start to become the personalities they'll be as adults. You've seen lots of changes — the gal who suddenly becomes boy crazy, the one who starts beavering at school because college is around the corner, right?

Your gang could be growing apart because they are growing up. As they change interests they'll grow apart physically, too. You have to grow with them or go in new directions with new people who like the things you do. Don't just tag along, wishing for everything to stay the same.

British are batty over Beatles' blue beat

By ALAN HARVEY

LONDON (CP)—Four young men in black, tottering under the weight of shaggy black hairdos, are soaring to fame on a pandemonium of sound.

They are the Beatles, and their story is sensational. In a matter of months, these long-haired Liverpool boys have:

—Created a teen-age cult more frenetic than anything the bobbysoxers dreamed of in the heyday of Frank Sinatra or Johnnie Ray.

—Sold 250,000 copies of a single record in 10 days.

—Turned Liverpool into the musical capital of Britain and set psychologists busily explaining the social nuances of The Mersey Sound.

Four pop idols for the price of one, the boys with the bouffant haircuts, slim-line trousers, lapel-less jackets and Cuban heel boots have knocked show business for a loop.

They make up to £7,000 a week, and they bring the house down every time they appear. Nobody can satisfactorily explain their vast popularity.

SEEM UNTOUCHED

They are aged 20 to 23 and their names—Paul McCartney, Ringo Starr, John Lennon and George Harrison—don't seem to matter. They are well educated and apparently untouched by the mass hysteria that surrounds them.

Strumming electric guitars, pounding bass drums, chanting in a falsetto screech or indulging in random stage-play, they somehow achieve an electric communication with the ecstatic audiences in the smoky cellars.

"It's nothing but sheer excitement," says John Lennon, only married member of the group. "It actually makes you shiver. You can feel it coming back at you."

"There's nothing nasty about it. It's not sexual. The kids can't hear the words, but they know the beat."

The beat is heavy, repetitive, tingling. The spotlight plays on young, innocent faces, crowned by luxuriant masses of hair.

And the crowd goes crazy.

FANS YOUNG AND OLD
"Beatlemania" affects young and old. There are Beatle fans at Oxford's Balliol College, once the stamping ground of Canada's Vincent Massey, and at the Inns of Court where Britain's law lords gather. One re-

ROCK MUSICAL WORLD — These young men with pudding-basin haircuts have soared to fame in England on a pandemonium of "rhythm and blues" sound, creating a teen-age cult more frantic than the bobby-sox crowd luctant husband, so the story goes, drove his Beatle-doting wife all the way from Devon just to gaze at the Liverpool semi-detacheds where the singers live.

Although their brand of "rhythm and blues" came wafting across the Atlantic from American singer Chuck Berry, the Beatles brought something distinctly British to the scene. The Mersey Sound comes from Liverpool, a seaport city noted for a streak of violence, and there are scores of Liverpoolians trying to emulate the Beatles.

There are Billy J. Kramer and the Dakotas, Gerry and the Pacemakers, Rory Storm and the Hurricanes, The Fourmost, The Undertakers.

"It's not just us alone," says that followed Frank Sinatra in the United States. From left, they are: Ringo Starr, George Harrison, John Lennon and Paul McCartney.

the Beatles first won fame in the roistering German docksides of Hamburg, how a rich young man named Brian Epstein went searching for one of their records and found the group only 100 yards from his Liverpool record store; how he spruced them up and boosted them into the big money.

And every young 'un knows their hit records — My Bonnie, Love Me Do, Please, Please Me, She Loves You, Twist and Shout, From Me to You.

FRANTIC FOLLOWERS

Wherever they go, the wide-eyed youngsters follow, screaming and squealing, happy if they can merely touch a Beatle. A magazine once reported, erroneously, that the boys like jelly babies, and the stuff came in carloads.

"We've got two tons of the things now," a Beatle said. "Tell them to send us sports cars or button-down shirts."

Will they last? They're not worrying. They've lived a lifetime already. Out of the drab streets and smoke where the big ships dock a new sound gushes forth, turning the port into a kind of British New Orleans or Nashville and perhaps telling something about the rising generation.

The square old adult world may not dig it, at all. But as somebody said, working yourself into a frenzy over the Beatles makes the girls feel they're getting out of the gym-slip stage. And as somebody else said, better the boys should be singing than hitting old ladies over the heads with bicycle chains.

Victims of violence in New Zealand get state compensation by new act

By J. C. GRAHAM
Canadian Press Correspondent

WELLINGTON (CP) — Victims of violence in New Zealand now can get compensation payments from the state, whether or not the offender has been found.

An act just made law is believed to be the first comprehensive measure of its kind in the world. Governments of numerous countries have sent for copies of the bill and it has aroused such wide interest that it may well form the basis for similar measures elsewhere. A few countries already have partial schemes but nothing along such broad lines as the New Zealand measure.

The act does not cover every kind of crime at present. Broadly, the kinds of violence for which compensation can be claimed are homicide, assaults and sexual crimes.

Within these limits, payments will be made by the state to cover expenses incurred as a result of the victim's injury or death, pecuniary loss through being unable to work, loss to dependents and compensation for pain and suffering.

Compensation rates are fixed on a par with rates which may be claimed by workmen injured during their employment. For instance, the amount which may be claimed through inability to work is $31 a week for up to six years, plus $3 a week for a dependent wife and $1.50 a week for each child. Widows are entitled to $27 a week for up to six years, plus $1.50 a week for each dependent child. The maximum which may be claimed for pain or suffering, is $1,500.

REVIEW POSSIBLE
The government has said the compensation rates might be reviewed in the light of experience.

The law does not purport to give as much compensation as might be recovered by suing an offender for damages. It does not prevent a victim suing if he thinks such action worthwhile.

However, the government has recognized that in a large number of cases of violence the victim has little real chance of collecting damages since the offender has not sufficient funds to pay.

Where an offender has been apprehended and convicted of the crime, the tribunal may order that compensation be recovered from him, if necessary by stopping payment out of his earnings.

Explaining the government's attitude toward payment of compensation for violence, Attorney-General J. R. Hanan said:

"I want to make it clear that this measure is not based on the premise that the state is financially responsible for failing to prevent crimes. It has long been accepted that employers are responsible for their workers who are injured in the course of their employment, even if the employer has not been negligent. So this law originates in the belief that the state should accept some responsibility for those who are injured by criminal acts."

Morse contract signed

The Robert Morse Corporation yesterday signed in Sherbrooke a labor contract with the International Association of Machinists (I.A.M.) to cover its first two years in its new location in Ville St. Pierre on Montreal Island.

The contracts calls for a reduction of working hours from 45 to 40 a week, with a 12½ per cent wage increase to bring weekly take-home pay to the same level as with the longer hours. In addition, there are hourly increases of from six to 40 cents according to employees' job classifications.

In a press conference following the signing of the contract at the company's present offices on Belvedere Street, a vice-president of the scales-manufacturing firm said that by a non-contract offer the company was paying each worker who moved to the new plant $150 for expenses.

Claude-Marc Robert said that during Dec. 1, date the contract goes into effect, and Dec. 15, operations in Sherbrooke should be completely closed down.

Other provisions of the contract, which Machinists' representative Henri Pariseau described as "good" even for Montreal, are a further five per cent raise all-around on Dec. 1 of next year, a three-day leave for the death of a close relation, and leave for jury duty, with the company paying the difference between jury fees and regular wages.

He gained a personal success at Labor's annual party conference at Blackpool, winning this tribute from veteran political commentator Hugh Massingham in The Sunday Telegraph, a Conservative newspaper:

"This rather frightening little man, a radical to his fingertips, is going to be one of the dominating factors of British politics."

TORIES HOSTILE
Conservative hostility toward Wilson—and possibly an underlying fear—was seen in a remark by Tory MP Nigel Birch, who in a television program dismissed the Socialist leader as a "busy little man on the make."

There were many observers who felt that the "busy little man" might prove too active indeed for Prime Minister Douglas-Home, chosen as Conservative leader after a stirring struggle.

Sloughing off an ancient Scottish earldom, the new premier bounded into the fray with surprising liveliness for a politician formerly regarded as one of the "faceless" Tories. Known to some as Gentle Alec because of his quiet manner, he had been thought of as fawn-like, diffident and retiring.

Anthony Howard of the left-wing New Statesman said that Douglas-Home's appointment seemed to be heading the Tories for the "slaughterhouse." Other Socialists said Wilson would make mincemeat out of him, and there was unrest among Tories that R. A. Butler, now foreign secretary, had been passed over in the race for promotion for the second time in his career.

Henry Fairlie, a right-wing political commentator, thundered on television that Douglas-Home had been foisted on the party by a tiny, top-level minority. There was dark talk of a Tory "cabal."

People who really know Gentle Alec scoff at the idea that he is soft. His playwright brother, William Douglas-Home, said he is as tough as steel under that frail-looking exterior. Viscount Boothby, independent-minded Tory who spent years in the Commons, said he is tough and determined, and spoke of his growing admiration over the last decade for Douglas-Home's debating prowess.

With the general election less than a year away, the elevation of Douglas-Home to Downing Street and the emergence of Wilson as a powerful opposition leader lend a sense of anticipation to the debates ahead.

Neither side shows any sign of lacking public relations sense. Wilson has offered himself freely to the interviewers and both Douglas-Home and his wife have invited selected reporters to Downing Street for interviews.

The prime minister's wife put in a swift plug: "I think people underestimate him at their peril."

"He doesn't look nearly as tough as he really is. He looks polite and calm, but he can lash out. Physically, too, he's tougher than he looks."

Weigh-in for Wilson-Home match: Ice-cold Harold vs. Gentle Alec

By ALAN HARVEY

LONDON (CP) — British politics are exciting again. New men and new policies add spice to the struggle.

Parliamentary ringriders can hardly wait for the first exchanges between Sir Alec Douglas-Home, who showed how to become prime minister without really trying, and opposition critic Harold Wilson, the man who hopes to succeed him at 10 Downing Street before another year is out.

It may be a dazzling clash. Wilson is an ice-cold opportunist with a talent for the telling phrase. In the eight months since he succeeded the late Hugh Gaitskell as Labor party leader, he has won over the waverers within his own ranks.

He gained a personal success at Labor's annual party conference at Blackpool, winning this tribute from veteran political commentator Hugh Massingham in The Sunday Telegraph, a Conservative newspaper:

"This rather frightening little man, a radical to his fingertips, is going to be one of the dominating factors of British politics."

INVITES YOU TO CONSULT HER IN OUR STORE ON WELLINGTON N. (Mezzanine) on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, November 14-15-16th.

Today's recipe

HONEY CAKE

3 eggs
1 cup sugar
1 scant cup salad oil
Salt (about 1 teaspoon)
1 scant teaspoon ground ginger
Ground cloves and cinnamon to taste
1/2 pound solid honey
1 cup hot strong coffee
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
3 cups all-purpose flour
2 rounded teaspoon baking powder
1 package (8 oz.) mixed chopped candied fruits
Raisins (if desired)

Beat eggs well. Add sugar. Add oil, salt and spices and beat well. Mix honey with hot coffee, cool slightly and sprinkle in baking soda. Add to egg mixture and beat thoroughly.

Coat a large angel cake pan with oil. Sift flour and baking powder together and add gradually to the egg mixture, beating after each addition just to blend the mixture until smooth. Coat fruits lightly with a little additional flour and add to the batter. Turn into the prepared angel cake pan.

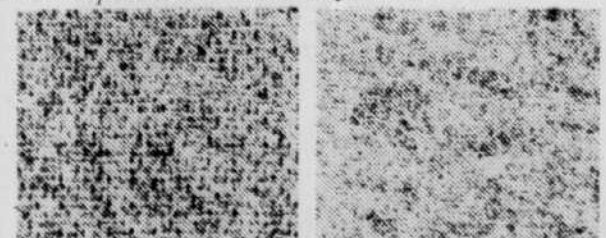

Bake in 325° oven, rather slow, about 2 hours, until a tester inserted in the cake comes out clean.

Use a little more flour, if the batter seems thin.

Facelle Royale 3-ply tissue is much softer than ordinary 2-ply tissues. It's much stronger and more absorbent because it's 77% thicker... Saves you money because one does the work of several ordinary tissues.

FACELLE ROYALE is a three-ply tissue—the only regular size tissue made with three layers instead of two! Each layer is 18% thicker to begin with. And Facelle Royale gives you an extra luxury layer besides! Imagine how wonderfully soft, strong and absorbent such a facial tissue must be. And how economical! One Facelle Royale does the job of several ordinary tissues.

These unretouched pictures show why no other tissue can compare with Facelle Royale...

much softer!

Magnified six times, ordinary tissue reveals its hard, "tweedy" texture.

Facelle Royale is made a different way—free from any hard, stiff pattern. It has the softness of cashmere—so much more gentle to your skin.

Once you try Facelle Royale you'll never use ordinary tissues again!

Polly's pointers

DEAR POLLY — A round-headed tack put in one edge of a spool of thread will stop it from rolling when dropped on the floor. Here's another tip: to keep a tape measure tidy, wrap it on an empty adhesive tape spool. The outside metal container will hold it in place.—MRS. M. D.

DEAR POLLY — To keep the pockets on my heavy sweaters from sagging, I line them with silk the same color as the sweater. A strip of elastic sewed on the upper edge of the pockets will also help keep them in shape.—J. H.

DEAR POLLY — An old table and discarded window shades make a nice playhouse for a little girl or a tent for a small boy. I insert the shades in brackets put on the table. Pull the shades down to make the sides and fasten to a small stake so the sides slope out. A coat or two of paint on both the table and the shades will make them last longer and look prettier too.—MRS. C. O.

DEAR POLLY — Instead of using a tracing wheel to mark darts when I am sewing, I use my sewing machine with the needle unthreaded. While the pattern is still pinned to the fabric, do this "stitching" and when the pattern is removed there will be holes to mark the darts. On printed or dark material, I put tracing paper between the pattern and the fabric before stitching so faint chalk marks are left along the lines for the darts.—MRS. C. B.

DEAR POLLY — My children always left their salad uneaten when I served it with a meal. I started serving each a bowl of salad about 30 minutes before dinnertime while they are watching television. It is a real pleasure and surprise to see every bit of this nourishing food eaten and not a single appetite spoiled.—MRS. H. M.

Hudson Hope, 375 miles northwest of Edmonton, is a former supply point for the Hudson's Bay Company trading posts. It's 30 winding dirt-road miles from Fort St. John, B.C., a booming city on the Alaska Highway.

A few years ago Hudson Hope had a population of about 50. Today there are 700 persons, mostly living in trailers, and there is talk of the population reaching 2,000.

It is the supply point for married workers who have come here with their families to work on the dam. Banks, clothing stores and other businesses are in trailers, and the $300,000 Peace Glen Hotel, with its beer parlor, is doing a roaring business.

TO IMPROVE ROADS

Twelve miles down new dirt road B.C. Hydro has established a viewing point overlooking the dam site. A little farther, past a muddy air strip, is a community of trailers for unmarried workers.

During the election campaign the premier promised roads to the dam would be made into N.H., is visiting her mother, first-class highways which would carry thousands of tourists and sister-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Angus Smith, and family.

Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Macdonald were in Bury to attend the funeral of Mrs. Robert Mayhew, while they were guests of Mr. Kenneth Wood.

For the immediate future the dam is but a drop in the bucket for the Peace district where agricultural land is being grabbed up almost daily and where oil and natural gas industries are expanding.

Fort St. John expects industry attracted by the cheap power will locate near the dam or at nearby Taylor, starting point for pipelines to the coast and the site of a natural gas refinery.

The city's population has jumped to about 5,000 from 1,000 in 10 years. Reasons include the fact that Fort St. John is the northern terminus of the government-owned Pacific Great Eastern Railway and supplies the petroleum industry and agriculture.

SETTLE LAND

More than 7,000,000 barrels of oil and 77,583,661 million cubic feet of gas were produced during the first half of this year. And it's estimated that 1,000 families have taken up about 2,225,000 acres of Crown land in the region.

Premier Bennett talks optimistically about what the dam will bring over the long term. He sees industry being attracted to the province by cheap power provided by the Peace and Columbia. He accuses those who oppose the Peace River project of lacking imagination.

His reply to those who question the wisdom of spending so much on the Peace is that it can be financed through the issue of parity bonds. These bonds—issued from time to time by the government on behalf of one or another of its agencies—are cashable at par at any time.

When the premier set off the explosion Sept. 14 that blew up a sandstone plug, the river began heading toward the diversion tunnels. At the time men and machines were still working on a 10-foot diversion dam.

By April, before the spring runoff, a second, 130-foot dam—eventually to be part of the main dam—will be completed. A third dam will be built below the main dam site to prevent the river from backing up.

It is expected that $35,000,000 of power will be flowing down transmission lines to the populous lower mainland of B.C. by 1968 from an underground powerhouse. The powerhouse in time will have 10 generating units and as the lake builds up behind the dam more power will become available. The 2,300,000 kilowatts expected by 1970 will almost double the present capacity of B.C. Hydro.

Farnham

Mrs. Earl Reid, of Concord, N.H., is visiting her mother, Mrs. Mary Smith, and brother, Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Macdonald.

A healthy wintertime economy is beneficial to all

This year again, Canada's annual Do It Now Winter Employment Campaign will promote the advantages of having more work done during the winter when men and materials are readily available.

As in previous years the national program supported by some 200 local campaigns, will be directed to consumers of goods and services in industry, business and the home. It will be based on sound business principles recognizing that the profit motive does play an important part in creating more winter work.

There are many ways in which businessmen can help the Do It Now Campaign and at the same time help themselves. Listed below is a checklist of some of the important points that all businessmen might consider in the interest of developing a healthy wintertime economy.

Remember that when everybody works, everybody benefits.

Yemen's finances troubles Nasser

By GEORGE MCARTHUR

SAN'A, Yemen (AP) — The dusty market places of backward Yemen are thriving on civil war. Hundreds of tiny shops in the pungent "souks" are literally bulging with goods.

Along the twisting, narrow alleys you can find almost everything—Japanese transistor radios and cameras, Hong Kong electrical equipment, Czechoslovak shoes, East German razor blades, Red Chinese silks, British shirts and even bottled soft drinks from Saudi Arabia.

But the trade boom has created problems for President Nasser who has sent about 30,000 of his Egyptian troops here to help President Abdullah al Sallal fight rebellious tribesmen loyal to deposed imam or king Mohamed el Badr.

The Egyptians find in Yemen many consumer goods which have all but disappeared from Nasser's socialist state. And they readily spend their monthly 15 silver rials ($15) at low prices in the souks.

Aware of the need to maintain friendship with the Yemenis, Nasser has not pushed for import controls. Instead, he has continued to dip into his country's treasury to help Yemen.

The Yemeni rial, actually the silver Maria Theresa Thaler, is flowing out of the country at an alarming rate to pay for the influx of consumer goods. To balance the demand, Nasser has agreed to mint new rials for Yemen and has advanced about $7,000,000 worth of silver.

EGYPTIAN AID
Altogether it is estimated that Egypt has poured about $10,000,000 to finance Sallal's regime since last year's revolt in addition to doing most of the fighting and attempting to build up Yemen's ill-trained 3,000-man army.

For its part, Sallal's government is of little help. Administration was left in chaos when Mohamed was ousted.

The government really doesn't know where to begin to set its finances in order. There are no statistics and no statisticians. Nonetheless, a few figures are being gathered and by next year Sallal has promised a formal national budget—the country's first.

ISLAND BROOK — The monthly Bible Study was held at Miss Lilla Kerr's home on Nov. 7. Scripture passages, read by the members, were followed by answering the questions from the study book, The Word and the Way.

A federal-provincial-municipal program to increase employment

The federal government will co-operate with the provinces and municipalities in sponsoring this program, which is designed to encourage municipalities and communities to create additional winter work through carrying out needed public works projects which would not be undertaken in the winter time in the absence of the program.

Under the program, the federal government will pay 50% of on-site payroll costs incurred by municipalities, its contractors and sub-contractors on accepted projects carried out during the period November 1, 1963 to April 30, 1964.

In the case of municipalities located within designated areas in which there has been a high level of unemployment and a slow rate of economic growth, the federal share of direct payroll costs will be 60%. These areas will be designated by the federal government.

Gerald Farrow named president of Beebe Juvenile Hockey Association, four sections to be formed again

BEEBE — Gerald Farrow was re-elected as president of the Beebe Juvenile Hockey Association at a meeting held in Beebe Town Hall. Donald Whitehouse was named card secretary and Robert Alger association treasurer. There will be four separate sections, Mosquitoes, Pee Wees, Bantams and Midgets, with players from Ayer's Cliff, North Hatley, Beebe, Rock Island, Stanstead and Stanstead College will enter a Midget and Bantam teams.

Delmar White agreed to be manager of the Mosquitoes with Owen Quillman coach with Robert Alger, manager of the Pee Wees, and Ronald Smith coach. A manager is to be named for the Midget and Bantam teams. It was suggested that

Jack Nichols only Rough Rider to miss Saturday's game with Ticats, others should be set, says Clair

OTTAWA (CP) — Linebacker Jack Nichols is expected to be the only player missing from the lineup of Ottawa Rough Riders Saturday when they take on Hamilton Tiger-Cats in the opener of the two-game, total-points Eastern Football Conference finals.

And Nichols probably would play if the Ottawa coaches felt that Bill Quinter couldn't adequately fill in at the defensive post.

Line coach Bill Smyth said Wednesday the club feels it would be better for Nichols to sit out the Saturday game and then be ready for an all-out performance when the series concludes next week in Hamilton.

Coach Frank Clair is to make a definite announcement on other injured players Friday.

"But at this time of year, all you can do is play your hunches," he said Wednesday. "Everyone else is hurting some, too."

Halfback Ron Stewart, who missed the semi-final game against Montreal Alouettes, has been running well in practice and is considered a sure starter Saturday. That probably means Joe Williams will not be advancing to the Grey Cup game in Vancouver, Saturday, Nov. 30.

Henley, who missed the final game of the regular season, is wearing a special harness to protect his injured ribs and kidney. But he'll be ready, coach Ralph Sazio said Wednesday.

Winner of the Jeff Russell Memorial Trophy as the player best combining sportsmanship and ability in the Eastern Conference, Henley added another honor Wednesday.

He was named the most popular Tiger-Cat of 1963 at a meeting of the Hamilton Quarterback Club. His teammates, aware of his value to the club, would have stuffed the ballot box.

Henley is one of the main cogs in the Ticat machine and will be watched carefully by Ottawa Rough Riders when the teams meet Saturday in Ottawa in the first game of a two-game, total-points EFC final.

The game is scheduled at 1 p.m. EST (2 p.m. AST) and will be carried on the CTV national network. The return game will be the following week in Hamilton, with the winner

There is a possibility I might be slightly biased in favor of curling — I feel it's about the finest game in Canada's galaxy of sports.

In my new weekly column this season I hope to prove my point through instructions, illustrations, highlights and general curling items of interest to beginners and experts alike.

Curling's popularity has swept across the country—especially Eastern Canada—like one of our prairie grass fires, and the increase in new clubs and players is almost getting out of control.

That is only one proof that curling is an entertaining, interesting, exacting and highly competitive game requiring skill, accuracy, concentration and as much physical effort as a player wishes to put into the game.

I feel that curling takes every bit as much skill and concentration as golfing, and it has the big advantage of being a team game. This could be why curling is becoming very popular with golfers and players in other sports.

Any team sport brings out co-operation between players and the friendships and sociability not found as often in individual sports. Curling, like any other team sport has rivalry for positions on the team—or rink—and team rivalries develop from the club game level right through to championship bonspiels.

I find that you can get just as much pleasure and competition from a friendly club match as in a championship. I believe, however, that you should always have the desire to win if you expect to get the most enjoyment out of any game.

Another feature of curling is that young and old can play, starting from high school age or earlier to 70 or more, provided they are physically capable. It is not necessary to be strong physically to be a curler because the amount of effort put into the game depends on the individual.

The game may look simple to those who have no knowledge of curling, but it demands proper instructions, study and the desire to improve to become a reasonably good curler. The demands are much more for those who hope to be champions. For members of my rink join me in vouching for that point.

Curling has to be played to be fully enjoyed and to this every curler will agree. You can enjoy watching good games by experienced players, even as work Wednesday after a one-day rest to prepare for the final series—the first club has entered since 1956.

CURLING CAPSULES

There is a possibility I might be slightly biased in favor of curling — I feel it's about the finest game in Canada's galaxy of sports.

In my new weekly column this season I hope to prove my point through instructions, illustrations, highlights and general curling items of interest to beginners and experts alike.

Curling's popularity has swept across the country—especially Eastern Canada—like one of our prairie grass fires, and the increase in new clubs and players is almost getting out of control.

That is only one proof that curling is an entertaining, interesting, exacting and highly competitive game requiring skill, accuracy, concentration and as much physical effort as a player wishes to put into the game.

I feel that curling takes every bit as much skill and concentration as golfing, and it has the big advantage of being a team game. This could be why curling is becoming very popular with golfers and players in other sports.

Any team sport brings out co-operation between players and the friendships and sociability not found as often in individual sports. Curling, like any other team sport has rivalry for positions on the team—or rink—and team rivalries develop from the club game level right through to championship bonspiels.

I find that you can get just as much pleasure and competition from a friendly club match as in a championship. I believe, however, that you should always have the desire to win if you expect to get the most enjoyment out of any game.

Another feature of curling is that young and old can play, starting from high school age or earlier to 70 or more, provided they are physically capable. It is not necessary to be strong physically to be a curler because the amount of effort put into the game depends on the individual.

The game may look simple to those who have no knowledge of curling, but it demands proper instructions, study and the desire to improve to become a reasonably good curler. The demands are much more for those who hope to be champions. For members of my rink join me in vouching for that point.

Curling has to be played to be fully enjoyed and to this every curler will agree. You can enjoy watching good games by experienced players, even as

POOR PLAYING BY WHOLE TEAM IS REASON, LEAFS CAUGHT OFF BALANCE WHEN CANADIENS WERE SHORT-HANDED

Punch Imlach has made it clear more than once that he's something less than satisfied with the performance of his Toronto Maple Leafs so far this National Hockey League season.

Salvaging a 2-2 tie against the Canadiens in Montreal Wednesday night did nothing to soothe his disposition.

He paced about the Toronto dressing room after the game, grumbling at the players quietly undressing.

"Hurry up," he barked. "We've got to catch a train."

Then he pointed an accusing finger at goalie Johnny Bower, the journeyman goalie who had just returned to the club's lineup after sitting out a couple of games with a sore toe.

"He blew it," said coach Imlach, pointedly expressing that he felt Bower's work left something to be desired on the Montreal goals.

They came a minute and nine seconds apart while the Canadiens were short-handed in the second period.

Said Punch: "He played those goals just like this whole team has been playing all season."

WAVES REPORTERS AWAY

Bower meanwhile waved away reporters, remarking that Imlach "told me not to say anything to you guys."

In the league's only other game, Boston Bruins found prosperity fleeting and bowed 6-4 to the high-flying Black Hawks in Chicago.

They beat the Hawks 4-2 in Boston Sunday night, a result that was unquestionably the upset of the season.

But Wednesday night the Chicago big guns were rolling. Bobby Hull collected two goals and two assists. Kenny Wharram scored twice. Stan Mikita and Billy Hay emerged with a goal and an assist each.

In Montreal, before a crowd of 12,845, the Leafs needed Dickie Duff's third-period goal to get the tie. Duff, returning to the lineup after two games on the sidelines with a hand injury, counted at 13:18, his first goal of the campaign.

It was a blistering drive that went between the Montreal defencemen and whipped into the net off the goalpost.

The Canadiens outshot the Leafs 27-16, including a 14-2 edge in the opening period, but they had few first-class scoring chances then.

Bobby Baun put Toronto in front in the second period with a 40-foot shot. Montreal came back and bolted into a 2-1 lead on goals by Red Berenson and defenceman J. C. Tremblay while playing shorthanded because of a major penalty to Dave Balon.

"They get a man advantage and they figure they can take it easy," Imlach remarked later. But there was consolation in the fact it was the ninth consecutive game between the clubs—a stretch covering this season and the latter part of last season—in which Toronto was unbeaten.

In two previous meetings this season, Toronto emerged with a pair of wins.

HAWKS LEAD LEAGUE

In Chicago, before 12,834 fans, the Hawks ran their league-leading point-total to 22, building up a 4-0 lead before the Bruins clicked.

Jerry Toppazzini and Dean Prentice shared in the Bruins' offence with two goals each while Tom Williams collected three assists.

Wharram's second goal arose from a power-play and Hull's No. 2 came with one second left in the game after Boston goalie Eddie Johnston had been lifted for a sixth attacker.

In the schedule's only game tonight, the Rangers are at home to the Maple Leafs.

If we play the same have a good chance—Shaw

REGINA (CP) — "If we play how bad," Shaw said. Safety Dale West, who injured a knee Monday, appeared the only doubtful starter for the finals.

Shaw said of Lancaster: "He's a tremendous competitor and has a lot of desire. He's a little fellow but he's got a lot of confidence and a lot of know-how. If he continues to have a hot hand we'll be a good football club."

"We've got a chance. How remote, it's hard to say. But we have a chance."

Saskatchewan scored a sensational upset Monday to whip Calgary Stampede 39-12 and capture the Western Football Conference two-game, total-point semi-final 48-47.

They meet British Columbia Lions in the opening game of the best-of-three WFC final at home Saturday at 3:30 p.m. EST. The game will be televised on the CBC national network.

The prospect of cold weather and perhaps snow by Saturday doesn't worry Shaw. "It doesn't matter to us whether it's cold or hot out there. But I hope B.C. is worried about the cold. And if they are I hope it goes down to 20 below."

Shaw contemplated his team's future following Monday's victory.

"Now it's just a matter of how far you can go on emotions. I told the boys we started a new season. The first two games were the semi-finals against Calgary."

DEFENSIVE SQUAD PRAISED

Shaw praised his defensive club, which he said technically played its best game of the season Monday, the spirit of his offensive club, the rabid Roughrider fans and quarterback Ron Lancaster, the five-foot-ten, 175-pound star of Monday's game.

If everything works the same way Saturday, "there's not a team in Canada that can beat us."

"We'll probably do more running against B.C. How much more I don't know. I haven't sat down to analyze it yet."

"We're hurting a little bit, but it's a little too early yet to say

Gala program lined up for college duel

EDMONTON (CP) — College hijinks, banners, bands and beauty queens will help provide the off-field excitement for the renewal of the East-West clash of major intercollegiate football teams.

Queen's University Golden Gaels, undefeated in the Senior Intercollegiate League, and University of Alberta Golden Bears, undefeated in the Western Intercollegiate Football Conference, tangle Saturday in the first annual Golden Bowl.

Lieutenant-Governor J. Percy Page will be on hand to present the winner with a new trophy, the Lieutenant-Governor of Alberta Trophy for East-West intercollegiate football. Premier E. C. Manning will attend.

"Kickoff time is 4 p.m. EST. Snow was expected here before the weekend.

More than 10,000 fans are expected at Clarke Stadium for the game between the clubs that compiled identical 6-0 win-loss records in their own conferences. Golden Gaels are favored by two touchdowns.

Chualo ready to meet Jones on big card

TORONTO (CP) — George Chualo's manager Wednesday offered his recipe for saving the public from "another one-round debacle" at the fight between world heavyweight champion Sonny Liston and challenger Cassius Clay.

"We have offered to save the Liston-Clay fight by having Chualo fight Doug Jones on the same card," said Eddie Trotter.

"We have asked for $50,000 for Chualo and 50 Gs for Jones," he said.

The Canadian heavyweight's manager also revealed: "Our big goal is Liston but we want Clay on the way. We don't think Liston deserves Clay because he's too easy."

BULLS FOR EXTRA YARDAGE — Former Calgary Stampeder Ed Buchanan (25) drives for extra yardage despite attempt by Stampeder end Jim Furlong (70) to bring him down. Roughrider guard Ron Brooks (52) throws block on George Hansen (60). Stamps were leading two-game, total point Western Football Conference semi-final 46-42 early in fourth quarter. (CP Wirephoto)
