185th Convocation at Bishop's University

Over 500 degrees to be conferred

By Josh Quirion

"As its name suggests, Convocation is the calling together of the members of the University, a reminder that the University is not bricks and mortar but people. A man or a woman does not cease to be a member of the University upon completion of a course of studies; rather, those who have completed the requirements to be admitted to a degree are received into the next stage of membership in the Bishop's community at Convocation." (Bishop's University)

Bishop's University's 185th convocation ceremony will be held in Centennial Theatre today and tomorrow. Convocation is comprised of three events: The Chancellor's dinner on Friday; the Ceremony during which degrees are conferred and Honorands give their addresses; and the mid-day reception on Saturday.

On Friday night, presiding Chancellor Brian Levitt invites students and their families to The Gait for a congratulatory dinner. The three-course meal will be complemented by cocktails and live entertainment.

On Saturday, 570 degrees will be conferred to BU graduates from around the globe. In addition to these degrees, honorary doctorates will be extended to four notable individuals in recognition of their outstanding professional achievement and service to society.

Renelle Anctil (BU Class of '87), co-owner of the Groupe Anctil, and General Manager of the Sherbrooke and Magog Rona l'Entrepôt stores; Eastern Townships resident, Louise Penny, C.M., bestselling author of a series of mystery stories set in Quebec; The Honourable Bob Rae, P.C., O.C., O.O., Q.C., Premier of Ontario from 1990 to 1995 and Interim

Grant Taylor, World War II veteran and last surviving charter member of the ANAF (the Hut), celebrated his 93rd birthday on Wednesday.

On Sunday, he will read the poem In Flanders Fields at the cenotaph in Lennoxville, to commemorate the 70th anniversary of D-Day. 5,500 Canadian men and women lost their lives during the liberation of Europe.

Taylor was born in Cookshire in 1921. He was given up for adoption, and was raised by his adoptive family in Birchton.

He joined the military in 1942, at 21 years old, and was stationed in Yorkshire for the duration of the war. He was close to York, a major railway centre, and popular target for the German forces. "We could see the bombing from

Magog Police to shred evidence this weekend

SHERBROOKE

Memphremagog Police are reminding the public that its first shredding day takes place Saturday, June 7 from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. in the Galeries Orford parking lot in Magog... The event offers the opportunity for individuals and businesses to destroy sensitive documents safely as a defence against identity fraud.

Shredding documents effectively reduces the risk of a malicious person getting their hands on such a document and use the information to commit fraud against the victim or worse, to steal his or her identity. This crime is increasingly common and can cause considerable harm to the victim.

"Any unnecessary document should be shredded effectively if it contains your name, address, telephone number, date of birth, social insurance number, medical insurance, credit card or debit card numbers, or the details of online transactions," says Memphremagog Police spokesperson Paul Tear.

"Documents that are still needed should be kept in a safe place."

where we were."

"I was a heavy transport driver," he said. "My truck number was 99285," an impressive detail to remember at 93 years old.

Taylor said his job was to transport bombs and artillery.

"We used to deliver 250 pound bombs. At the end, we got 4,000 pounders," he said.

"My specialty was picking up downed aircraft," Taylor said. He explained that often, planes would go down on their way back to base because of damages. On some occasions, he said, he was sent out to recover planes in close proximity to German forces.

"You save whatever you can from it," he said, adding that a team would accompany him and take apart the downed planes, and load the remains on the truck manually. "We didn't have all that big stuff back then. We would save whatever we could, unless there was a fire, then it was no good."

"Sometimes the bodies would be there," Taylor said, adding that in most cases, the medic team would have dealt with that before he arrived.

"Three or four months before D-Day, we knew something was gonna happen, because of all the bombing going on." Taylor said the heavy fire was referred to as 'a softening up exercise' to make it easier for the ground forces to move in.

Two weeks before the allied invasion, all leaves were cancelled. "We knew it wouldn't be long then."

On the day of the offensive, word travelled quickly. "We heard about it within a very short time."

Taylor said his squadron was called out to the parade square by their commanding officer, Captain Kerr, and asked to bow their heads in prayer.

"All hell broke loose."

"There was a change. It was all different, more hectic," Taylor said.

Grant Taylor, stationed in York during the second world war, worked as a heavy transport driver. He is seen here driving incendiary covers, used to light up a target. Photos courtesy Taylor family.

Grant Taylor, seen here at 21-years-old, newly enlisted in the army in 1942. Today, he is the last surviving charter member of the ANAF (the Hut) in Lennoxville.

"Those who were bombing had to be more precise. Because of advances, Canadians were bombed two or three times," he said.

According to Taylor, the invasion of Normandy was scheduled for June 5, but because the channel was too choppy, it was postponed for a day. Apparently, the water was also bad on June 6, but Taylor said Commander in Chief Dwight D. Eisenhower used five famous words, now part of D-Day history. "Let's get it over with!"

Over the following months, the offensive continued, and the Germans lost ground and eventually surrendered.

When asked about what it was like on the day of surrender, Taylor replied, "you mean VE (victory in Europe) Day?" he asked. "Well, the beer came out!" he laughed.

German forces surrendered on May 5, 1945. VE day was celebrated three days later on May 8.

Taylor was back in the Townships by July, 1945. On his second night back, he went to a dance at Batley's pond near Sawyerville, and met Mayotta Winslow. They married in March of 1946, and have been together ever since. They had one son who passed away 17 years ago.

When Taylor was discharged from the military, he was paid roughly $400. "You were paid so much per day for time served," he said. He and Mayotta used the money for a bedroom set and some furniture for their home.

When asked about the treatment of veterans and modern veterans today, Taylor said, "It was good, and then it was bad, and now, well...Harper has not been the best to us," adding that overall the past few years haven't been too bad.

"The big mistake the government makes is giving vets a lump sum. They buy a house and a car, and then the money is gone, and the stress sets in."

When Taylor returned from the war, he peddled milk and bread for Hunting's Dairy, and also worked at Allat's bakery in Sherbrooke. "I only made $32 per week, but groceries and meat only cost $10," Taylor said, explaining that a modern vet has a lot of stress factors to consider.

"There are so few of us left," Taylor said.

Years ago, while singing in the choir at the United Church in Lennoxville, where he and Mayotta have been members since they were married there in 1946, Taylor turned to his choir mate Esther Basset. "Remember when veterans used to take up half the church for the service on Remembrance Day?"

Former Sherbrooke resident seeking missing son

GORDON LAMBIE

Suzan Evans is looking for her son, Robbie Audet, whom she describes as 6'2" with a slender build, blue-green eyes and dark brown hair.

"I have not seen or heard from Robbie in two years and am deeply worried and concerned," said Evans, who is now living in Joliette. "There is not a day that goes by that I do not think about my son, worry about him and wonder where he is."

Evans, raised in Sherbrooke, explained that she lived in the region for 38 years. Her son was born here and attended school at Alexander Galt Regional High School. Audet would now be 35 years old, though his mother says she can't even be sure he is still alive.

"He's destroyed his life with drugs." Evans explained, adding that he was last seen two years ago near a food bank on Wellington street, "that's the long and the short of it."

Audet's mother explained that she suspects that if her son is still alive he is homeless, and possibly living in either Sherbrooke or Bury. She said that all her efforts to find him through the police and private investigators have been fruitless.

COURTESY PHOTO

Robbie Audet.

"I called the police in Sherbrooke, and they said that it had been too long," Evans said. "As a mother, I just want to know where my son is."

Martin Carrier of the Sherbrooke Police explained that the police approach to disappearances varies greatly depending on the age of the person and the nature of the events involved. He pointed out that adult disappearances are generally given more idle time than those of children. He emphasized the need for immediacy in the case of minors, given their greater vulnerability, but said that in many cases when a adult is reported missing to the police, they turn up on their own within 24-48 hours

If after that window there is still no sign, then the police will assign an investigator and connect with missing persons networks across the country. If such things exist, that investigator will start looking into phone and credit card records to try to narrow down where the missing person might be.

He added that matters of life and death or mental illness are also factors in an investigation that would increase the urgency with which the police would address the concern, but said that the autonomy of adults can also complicate matters.

"With adults there are always a lot of things to verify, starting with relationships and whether or not there was a conflict," Carrier explained. "We've certainly seen it before, for example, that the son was upset at the daughter, or didn't want to talk to his parents anymore and so just dropped off the face of the planet."

The communications agent clarified that if an adult voluntarily cuts off contact, there's nothing much the police can do about it.

Despite the position of the police and the lack of results from other investigations, however, Evans has not given up hope.

"If anyone knows anything at all, or has seen or had any contact with him, please find it in your heart to let me know." She said, appealing to the general population on the slight possibility her son might still be in the Sherbrooke area, "Robbie if by some miracle you read this article please let me know that you are okay."

Evans has expressed that she can be reached by phone at 450-752-0465 or by email at sevans@nexicom.net, and added that she will respect the wishes of anyone who wishes to share information anonymously.

SQ ups ante on off-road trails and waterways

Record Staff
SHERBROOKE

Excessive speed, distractions, and intoxication all take their toll on the roads, but as the recent annual report from the Sûreté du Québec Estrie Division's Annual Report reveals, the presence of animals on the road is the main cause of road accidents in the region representing a quarter of all accidents.

Of the 5,052 accidents on the roads in the Estrie, speed and reckless driving come in as the second cause of accidents with 13 per cent.

The report, released Wednesday, says that 23 deaths occurred on local roads, one less than the average for the previous two years, which recorded 28 deaths in 2012, and 19 last year.

Although the SQ reported an increase of 14.9 per cent in police interventions, a jump of 8.7 per cent is seen in accidents with injuries and of 7 per cent in accidents with damage.

The SQ also moved aggressively in terms of highway work-site safety, issuing 643 statements of offence for speeding and 44 for various other offences. In spite of this, a fatal crash, four with injuries, and ten total accidents occurred on such work areas.

Police operations involving recreational vehicles also increased dramatically over the last year in the Eastern Townships jumping from an average of 58, to 159 last year. The number of tickets issued rose from 46 on ATV and snowmobile trails and 18 on the water, to 170 and 70 respectively.

"By combining interventions on ATVs and snowmobiles, the district saw an increase of 490 per cent compared to the average of the previous two years, while interventions on the water show an increase of 518 per cent," the report says of the region's 3,000 km. of trails and 23 waterways.

Windsor man faces host of child porn, luring charges

Record Staff
Sherbrooke

A 24-year old Windsor man was arrested and faces various criminal charges related to child pornography.

Maxime Bérard-Nault was first arrested on Feb. 25 and this latest arrest follows from an ongoing Sûreté du Québec investigation and relate to events prior to that date.

Bérard-Nault faces 80 counts related to child pornography, including luring, extortion, invitation to sexual touching, and the production of child pornography

"The investigation, initiated several months ago, demonstrates that the suspect initiated the first contact with his victims - boys aged between 11 and 13 - using different female pseudonyms. He created fake profiles on social networks such as Facebook and instant video services such as Skype," the SQ says.

By using these fictitious girls profiles, he subsequently coerced the victims to send him photos or videos that constitute child pornography. To get more, the suspect threatened to distribute or publish the photos and videos obtained on instant messaging sites."

Victims come from different regions of Quebec, such as Montérégie, Estrie, Quebec, and Montreal. Police are asking anyone who has information related to this case to contact the Criminal Intelligence Central of the Sûreté du Québec at 1 800 659-4264,

Waterville sweetening the pot for families

By Gordon Lambie

GORDON LAMBIE

Waterville town councillor Karl Hunting and Mayor Nathalie Dupuis.

The Town of Waterville is looking to the future with a hope to attract young families to the area. To encourage that dream, the town council has instituted a policy offering financial incentives for new residential construction projects or for moving into a new home. Dubbed the "property access program," the policy is retroactive to the beginning of January 2014.

The financial aid offered in the new plan varies depending on the type of building being built or moved into. For the purchase or construction of a new single-family dwelling, bi-generational home, or duplex, Waterville is offering an incentive of $2,000, whereas incentives for the purchase or construction of condominiums range between $1,000 for a space with three and a half rooms, to $1,500 for four and a halfs and larger.

"I know that there are none in Waterville," Mayor Nathalie Dupuis said, referring to condos, "but we have to look to the future and to potential development as well."

Waterville's Mayor proceeded to explain that the project also offers funds for promoters building apartment complexes. $500 per unit is being offered for three and a halfs, going up to $750 per unit for apartments of four and a half rooms or more. Support for promoters caps off at $4,500 per building, or roughly six to nine apartments.

"I have the firm conviction that this property access program comes at a critical time in the history of our municipality," Dupuis said. "The imminent arrival of the 410 puts Waterville in an advantageous position."

Asked about what funds have been dedicated to this new incentives program, Dupuis said that the project has not been assigned a solid budget, as the town prefers the idea of seeing how well it attracts new families first. Similarly she said that the program does not have a set numerical objective in terms of new permanent residents.

"For the first year it was not budgeted in a firm way. Once we have numbers we'll budget accordingly," the mayor said. "Over the last few years we've had six or seven new construction projects in the town; we would like to see more than that."

In addition to the building and moving incentives, Waterville is also bolstering its existing policy on families and the elderly by offering $250 per child under 18 to any family that moves to the town, up to a maximum of four children. This new addition joins the town's existing practice of offering a $100 baby bonus for newborns in the community, and the $200 subsidy given to parents for the purchase of cloth diapers.

The new program is in effect until such time as town council decides to discontinue the practice. The Mayor estimated, based on recent numbers, that as much as $30,000 could be spent on it this year.

"That would be a good problem," Dupuis said.

Editorial

I have serious hope that the Conservatives will be out of office when Paris 2015 comes.

François Tanguay

I've had my head in environmental issues for 45 years. That's a long time to worry about any one thing, but having the planet on your mind is something special. I'm not bragging or anything of the sort, far from it. But there comes a time when some profound considerations enter your thought process. It is more demanding than ever to be hopeful about the future. It is often very depressing to take measure of what is not being done by those who have the powers needed to change our sore state.

Case in hand, Stephen Harper who once again made a fool of himself when compared with those who do better than him on climate change, as if this were an issue that the PM really cares about. So when Mr. Harper claims that Canada is doing better than the Americans on the issue of cutting coal based power plant emissions... well, it is too much to take. I have given up on our Prime Minister and what he has done to our country. He's hopeless.

This week, in 48 hours both the American and Chinese governments took strong positions on reducing their Greenhouse Gas Emissions. The Obama administration, through the EPA, implemented tough new rules to cut carbon emissions from coal fired power plants by 30 per cent by 2030. Not to be left out in the cold, Mr. Harper replied, "We have done better."

The so-called reduction plan from Ottawa will begin only in 2016 and will not include all of our coal fired power plants. The plan is full of holes. It also does not include any emission reduction targets for the oil sands either. It's a dud.

The Chinese, who release more CO2 in the atmosphere than any other nation, came out with the intention of not only limiting their emissions, but to actually measure and report on them to the United-Nations, as required within the Kyoto Protocol. Both the US and China are laying ground for the critical Paris Summit on climate in November 2015 that will be the foundation for the next climate Protocol. Fact is, the air in most of China is unbreathable and the environment is a mess. There are no other options, but to act. For the first time China has committed to binding targets and since they consume half the coal on the planet, this matters. As for Mr. Obama, he has finally made the decision to take-on the all powerful and 800,000 strong coal industry.

This is all good news for the next round of talks that begin in Bonn, Germany next week. But Mr. Harper and Canada will not be there. Remember, we opted out.

I have serious hope that the Conservatives will be out of office when Paris 2015 comes. This is the clearly the only solution for this country to be serious in its discussions on the environment on the world stage once more.

Again this week three hundred scientists wrote to Mr. Harper asking him to ignore the report on the Northern Gateway proposed pipeline because it is flawed to the point that it is useless. We all know what the Prime Minister thinks of science and the environment. He will ignore this demand and approve Gateway and also the Enbridge 9B line.

In Quebec we have two pipelines undergoing procedures. It is now a fact that they will bring next to nothing to our economy and leave us with the inevitable environmental consequences. There will be a citizens march to mark this protest and I totally back these courageous people.

Beyond any considerations on if we should or not be preoccupied with the future of oil in our society, what has me baffled is the total arrogance of the companies and the utter disdain of the Harper administration regarding the environment.

We have next to no democratic procedures and we are left with only one reasonable option: To oppose and march!

When life hands you manure, plant something

Steven Black

Manure helps things grow. This was one thing I thought about this week while helping to put in a garden at our church. I found myself happily handling the warm, aromatic stuff knowing it was going to do some good – for the plants. Then I realized that only when I'm gardening do I like to be close to manure. Normally when life hands me manure I run as far away as I can in order to avoid it. I learned that when life hands me manure I should plant something.

Gardening gives a person a lot of opportunity to think about life, growth, health and fruitfulness. And in those moments handling the squishy stuff I realized that the times of my greatest personal growth was when life was dishing out the manure in small doses and planting me in it.

Some of you might be surprised about now that I was gardening. Yes, I was surprised too. I was especially surprised that I was enjoying it - stiffening back and all. Our church has started a program we call, "Growing God's Way." We're learning about gardening using zero tillage and the resources we can find in nature. We are also trying to learning about how gardening can teach us spiritual lessons and also build community in the care of one another, working side by side, exercising stewardship and generosity. Getting into the soil gave me a lot of time to meditate on life. I found myself setting aside worry, anger and other negative emotions and experiencing contentment and hope.

One of the other things I learned was that nothing teaches and gives perspective more than actively putting into practice the theory I'd heard about. For a week I took classes on subjects like the nature of healthy soil, garden pests and how to deal with them, making compost, planning a garden, companion plants and the importance of minimal tillage. It was all very interesting, of course. The instructors were engaging and they exuded enthusiasm for gardening. It wasn't until we were out getting dirty, measuring and preparing beds, laying out rows, planting and mulching, however, that I started to see a little of what they were trying to teach me. Undoubtedly the weeding, thinning and watering we'll have to do in the time ahead will do the same. I was given tangible evidence that lecturing and preaching alone has little impact unless the hearer is given something to do and is helped to do it to put the lesson into practice.

I also learned that short cuts and sloppiness will result in poor health and low yield. Care in planning, preparing and laying out the garden with precision, matters. It takes time but the time is worth it. Saving time with sloppiness will ultimately result in wasted time with poor results. It's the same with life, isn't it?

I learned that stewardship of the earth and working with dirt and manure is spiritual. Before we planted we stopped to thank God for the soil and for the principles of life that we can apply in order to yield food. Every seed and every plant represented promise for the future. Doing our best, we trusted God to provide the sun, rain and natural processes to bring about fresh produce in the fall.

Every seed and seedling planted was planted with care as if that precious thing was special in its own right filled with potential to do what plants do – grow and become fruitful. I thought of every individual person – both made of the earth's elements and infused with spirit from God as something precious and filled with potential deserving nurture and care.

The teamwork involved in gardening reminded me too of how we need each other. A healthy community, like a garden, does best when we share with one another our labour and resources. It is best when we think of our individual lives as things to be shared with others.

The four principles at the heart of "Growing God's Way" are things that can benefit us together if we apply them in every area of life. 1.) We take time seriously by doing things on time and taking every advantage of positive opportunities. 2.) We live our lives with a commitment to doing things with pursuit of excellence and in keeping with God-given standards. 3.) We seek to eliminate wastage in life that robs us of opportunity, energy and health. 4.) We live with joy knowing that we are in God's good care and that he is the one we can trust for a fulfilling and fruitful life.

So, when you're passing through Lennoxville and see some people bent over our garden in the Green Ridge church yard on Queen Street, stop in. They'd love to tell you about manure and stuff. However, be prepared for them to hand you a hoe and join in.

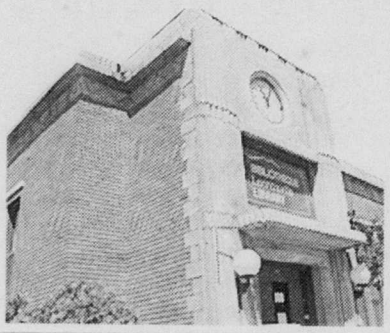
Forensics, bones, and the heat of the American South

Gruesome crime novels make for fun reading



GOOD READS

ELEANOR BROWN

Think "Southern-fried forensics." These are gruesome science-based crime novels that careen at roughneck speed and are set in the hot, hot Southern United States.

Start with Patricia Cornwell.

Her fictional Dr. Kay Scarpetta has become a household name since the inaugural, and multiple award-winning, crime novel Postmortem was published in 1990. The heroine is a forensic pathologist based in Virginia; the author once worked in a chief medical examiner's office, as well as covering the crime beat for a newspaper.

Scarpetta has the usual problems that confront detectiving sorts – a niece who needs mothering and protection (from the bad guys who target her to get at Scarpetta), man troubles, and her own character defects.

In between, there's work, an endless run of corpses that must be identified, the method of murder diagnosed, and the killers brought to justice. The books are well known, so enough said.

Except, that is, for the fifth in the series, The Body Farm (1994), a tale that brought fame to a third party. The Body Farm is a real and grisly place, based out of the University of Tennessee in Knoxville. The Anthropological Research Facility collects up dead bodies (some donated to science) and watches them rot in various odd ways. All for the greater good.

In this novel, an 11-year-old girl is found a week after her disappearance, and the autopsy is botched. Scarpetta and friends are called in, with investigators convinced the culprit is a serial killer who has taunted them before. The plot is filled with lies, confusion, false trails, odd moments and surprising discoveries. Add dollops of jealousy and espionage (and have a brief, bitter laugh at the pre-911 mindset).

Despite the book's title, the farm is not a main character. But Scarpetta calls on a Body Farm scientist, Dr. Thomas Katz, to test out a scenario that could give insight into the child's death.

The real-life Katz is a chap by the name of Bill Bass, who founded the Body Farm some 30 years ago. The notoriety gained from Cornwell's book led Blass to his own populist writing career. He teamed up with journalist Jon Jefferson to write Carved In Bone (2006), which launched its own series of Body Farm crime novels, starring the crime-fighting anthropologist Dr. Bill Brockton. Brockton is the sort of guy who says: "Over there, we've got a decomposition experiment that's comparing cotton clothing with synthetic fabrics."

Brockton has a son who needs fathering, woman troubles, and his own character defects. Hilariously, a scientist who doesn't think twice about boiling up bits of body, scraping off recalcitrant flesh, and grinding up the leftovers in a garburator... gets carsick.

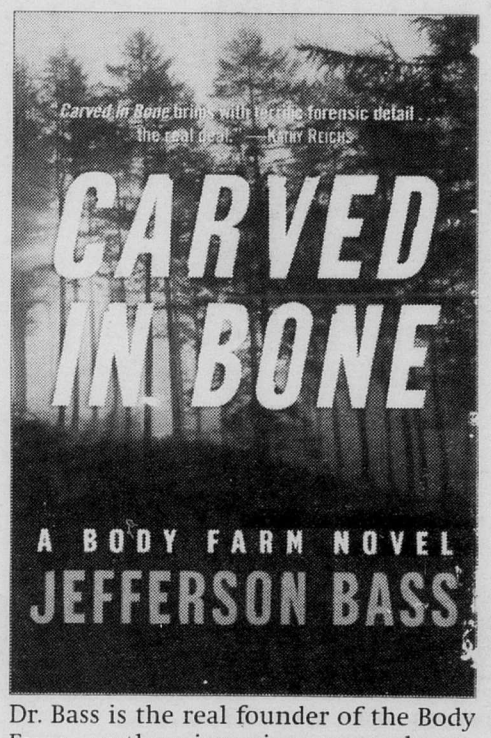
The book is dedicated to Cornwell, "who made [The Body Farm] famous" (and the phrase "Southern-fried forensics" was coined by a critic for Carved In Bone).

A body is found in a cave, so old the features have melted. But it's definitely the victim of murder.

Brockton is called in to consult in the land of the hillbillies, small-county Tennessee, where it's impossible to tell the good guys from the bad. This is an insular world where the economy is based on illegal drugs and cock fighting.

Brockton is from-away; it's hard to get any traction on a case when everyone clams up as soon as you walk up. (Consider Cormac McCarthy's Child Of God as a companion read, a terribly dark and violent 1973 novel set in roughneck Tennessee that is beloved by critics.)

Carved In Bone is a New Arrival; others in the series can be found in the fiction stacks. The Body Farm books are a "must read" recommended by Lennoxville Library volunteer Donna Berwick: "Found a new series for fans of Kathy Reichs and Patricia Cornwell," she notes. "The Body Farm novels written by Jefferson Bass, which is the nom de plume of Dr. Bill Bass and Jon Jefferson.



Dr. Bass is the real founder of the Body Farm... so the science is gruesomely correct."

Ah, Kathy Reichs. Another popular Southern U.S.-based author, she's a forensic anthropologist for the State of North Carolina. Deja Dead (1997) was the first in her series of best-selling crime fiction, introducing readers to Temperance Brennan (who has a daughter who needs mothering and protection, man troubles, and her own character defects).

Brennan also spends her time staring and prodding at bones. Bare Bones (2003), the sixth in the series, has our heroine preparing to go on vacation with a hot hunk, only to careen from one dead body to another. A newborn burnt to a crisp, a plane explosion, buried bags of gore... Brennan misses outbound flight after flight.

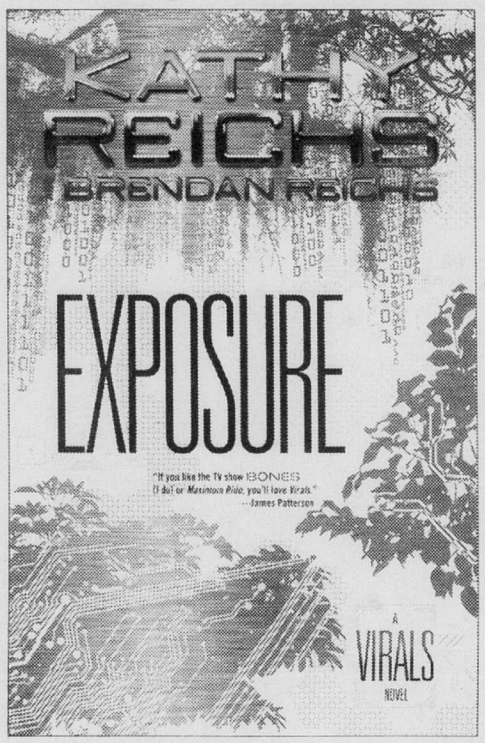
All Reichs' novels are fast, satisfying and a bit gory. This one features a conservation angle that will get animal lovers up in arms.

Reichs has an added Quebec connection. Both she and her heroine commute here regularly, as consultants with the province's Laboratoire de Sciences Judiciaires et de Medecine Legale. Indeed, Reichs and Brennan share many personal and work traits (although Reichs insists she's not an alcoholic!).



Note that the Temperance Brennan in the Bones TV series is a different character than the one portrayed in the books.

Reichs has also begun a new narrative, this one for Young Adult readers, written with son Brendan Reichs.

The Virals series stars 14-year-old Victoria (Tory) Brennan, the daughter of Temperance's nephew. A group of five teens, boys and girls, are infected by some sort of lab-created supervirus that is rewriting their DNA. They've become connected somehow, turned into a human wolf pack, and can communicate with the family wolf-dog hybrid. They have a secret clubhouse kitted out with high-tech gadgetry, and use their gifts to fight evil.

The fourth novel, Exposure (2014), can be found in New Arrivals. Friends have been kidnapped. In between sniffing out the bad guys, the Virals must deal with high school jealousies and drama, mean girls, and suspicious rivals. Not to mention hiding their glowing eyes from the cops.

Additionally, one of their own, Ben, appears to be spiralling out of control, as do their powers.

No high-level forensics here, but there's some science and lots of action, adventure, and teen angst. Yes, it's set in the American South. So serve with sweet tea, black-eyed peas and okra.

CTV unveils mixed bag fall lineup

By Laura Kane
THE CANADIAN PRESS

CTV unveiled a varied fall lineup Thursday, betting that a mixed bag of comedies, superhero series and dark dramas will capture the broadest audience of Canadians.

"The Millers," starring Beau Bridges and Will Arnett as father and son, will join CTV's Thursday night comedy block with "The Big Bang Theory," "Two and a Half Men" and new series "The McCarthys."

Building on the buzz around comic book series, the Ben McKenzie vehicle "Gotham," "Marvel's Agent Carter," "Forever" and "The Flash" join CTV's already popular "Arrow" and "Marvel's Agents of S.H.I.E.L.D."

Bell Media runs CTV as well as specialty channels The Comedy Network, Bravo and E!. Elizabeth Hurley's British monarchy comedy "The Royals" will join E!, while "Angie Tribeca," a spoof of police procedurals created by Steve Carell and his wife Nancy, was added to The Comedy Network's lineup.

CTV has also ordered a new two-hour "MasterChef Canada" holiday special that will air this winter and has renewed Canadian comedy "Spun Out" for another season.

"Some networks program to women, others to men," said Phil King, president of CTV, Sports and Entertainment, in a statement. "We're not the home of comedy, nor the home of drama. CTV also announced that it is teaming up with the Canadian Marketing Association for the Super Bowl Canadian Ad Challenge, a competition designed to elevate Canadian Super Bowl advertising. The winner will receive advertising time during CTV's broadcast of the Super Bowl.

"It's one of the toughest weeks of the year, the players run for five hours every day – they deserve their rest and relaxation periods!"

Alouettes training camp continues at BU

By Josh Quirion

CEDRIC MONTEIRO

"It's one of the toughest weeks of the year," said head coach Tom Higgins about the Als stay at Bishop's.

The Montreal Alouettes are five days into what newly appointed head coach Tom Higgins describes as an "extremely positive" training camp. In their fifth consecutive training camp at Bishop's University, the Alouettes' 2014 prospective team has benefited from cooperative weather as they prepare for an exhibition game against the Hamilton Tiger-Cats on June 14.

Former University of Sherbrooke Vert et Or (2007-2011) head coach Andre Bolduc returns to Montreal to assume the responsibility of Offensive Assistant and Quality Control Coach to Offensive Coordinator and former CFL quarterback, Rick Worman. Bolduc was a member of the Montreal Alouettes from 1998 to 2001, where he emerged as a leader and was named special teams' captain for two years in 1999 and in 2000.

"The 2014 roster claims talented players at every position," said Bolduc, "that's how Jim Popp (GM) organizes the team, with a strong core of starters, and competitive back-ups to ensure the quality of play."

Bishop's University alumnus Ryan White is evolving in his third season with the team. The Montreal native, OT was drafted by the organization in 2012. This year, White is battling for a spot in the starting lineup.

"It's good to be back at Bishop's, it feels like home," said White. "It's my best camp so far, I'm working hard, and my objective is to do everything I can to help the team get wins."

Combining 12 years of experience in the CFL, and seven with the Alouettes, veteran WR Dave Stala will contribute practiced expertise and acquired knowledge to Montreal's offensive squad.

"We've got an experienced core of receivers who've evolved professionally for multiple years," said Stala. "I'm here to help guys transition from American rules, but most of all, I'm here to play."

Seasoned head coach Tom Higgins begins his first season with the Montreal Alouettes after a long and successful 22-year CFL coaching career in Calgary and Edmonton. With his 72-53 CFL record, the 2003 coach of the year is ready for 2014.

"It's one of the toughest weeks of the year, the players run for five hours every day – they deserve their rest and relaxation periods!" said Higgins, "Wherever I go with a team, I tell the administration that the food is extremely important. If the food is good, people are happy. Bishop's University has done an outstanding job, and they've got something to be proud of," added Higgins.

Rebecca Nazz will perform her song, 'Canada EH' in Toronto July 1

A RUNNER'S MIND

CHRISTINE BLANCHETTE

When you think of Canada Day songs, Gordon Lightfoot's Canadian Railroad Trilogy and Neil Young's Made in Canada come to mind, not to mention our National Anthem. Yet there is another Canada Day song, released in 2012, titled: 'Canada EH,' which continues to receive positive feedback. The song is about what it means to be a Canadian.

Meet Canadian singer/songwriter Rebecca Nazz, the 'Canada EH' author, who will perform the song at the opening ceremony for Ribfest in Toronto, July 1. An unconfirmed report has liberal leader Justin Trudeau making an appearance. Nazz's song is inspirational to a new listener, with lyrics like, "Now you are in Canada. I'm a proud, proud Canadian. So much love for Canada." Nazz is indeed, a proud Canadian and shares it throughout the song. Some of her musical influences have been Alanis Morissette and Jewel.

In a recent phone interview the energetic Torontonian shares her family background, what inspired her to write her Canada song, her upcoming record release and her healthy lifestyle. Nazz began, "I came to Canada during high school. I'm originally from India, (growing) up in Kuwait and India. Feedback has been great for the song, lots of good reviews."

Nazz has been writing since she was a teenager, then started taking guitar lessons and never stopped. Her music has western/Indian influences and her hit single "Indian Boy" received a lot of attention of world-renowned reggae artist, Apache Indian, known for his hits 'Boom Shack-A-Lak' and 'Chok There,' which was featured on the track on her record, "Intimate".

Her inspiration for 'Canada EH' happened while talking to her sister one day. Nazz said, "As soon as I talked to her I started writing the song that weekend. Many people were glad to finally see a product that represents the new diverse Canada.

Canadian singer/songwriter Rebecca Nazz.

My inspiration was my immigrant story and journey. To see the struggles my parents went through and how it paid off. There is a lot of security and safety that Canada offers and a land of opportunity where you can still maintain your cultural communities. There is no pressure to become the standard and everyone is respected for their individuality. It was a need to celebrate the immigrant journey and the cultural diversity Canada offers that led me to write the song."

Nazz will release a new collection of soul pop music on her EP "Soldier," and additional videos while working on global market releases for the "Indian Boy" music video. I asked her what her favourite song is and she said, "This Soldier." It is really about overcoming obstacles and never giving up. It is a song about empowerment."

Nazz has been profiled on OMNI TV with Bollywood Boulevard and CBC radio. To maintain a healthy lifestyle, Nazz does Hatha and Hot yoga 3-4 times per week. "I've been doing it for four years now. It gives me that balanced energy."

When it comes to eating, she notes that working long hours in the recording studio (or anywhere else) can affect healthy eating habits. There is often pizza and pop. Nazz said, "I think they may think I'm a geek because I bring with me 4-5 containers that have sandwiches, fruit and nuts. This is what I do to eat healthy."

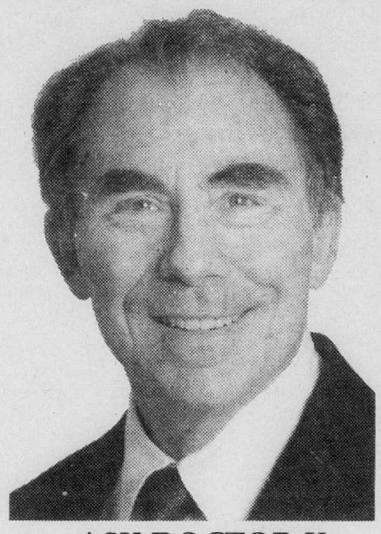
Breast-feeding helps protect babies from illness



ASK DOCTOR K
by Anthony L. Komaroff, M.D.

DEAR DOCTOR K: What are the benefits of breast-feeding? And if I do decide to breast-feed, how will I know if my baby is getting enough milk?

DEAR READER: Breast milk provides all the calories and nutrients that a baby needs for the first six months of life. It also helps protect babies from illnesses such as ear infections, lung infections, vomiting and diarrhea. That's because for the first months of life, a baby's immune system is not fully developed. Breast milk contains antibodies that the mother has made, plus several other infection-fighting substances and cells.

There is some evidence that breast milk may also help protect against sudden infant death syndrome, although why that might be so is not clear.

Babies of mothers who breast-feed are somewhat less likely to develop obesity, cancer, heart disease and Type 1 diabetes when they become adults.

Please don't misunderstand: I'm not saying that babies who bottle-feed will get these diseases, just that breast-feeding may slightly reduce the risk that babies will develop these diseases when they become adults.

Breast milk is easier for babies to digest than formula. Exclusively breast-feeding for the first six months may help prevent food allergies. Breast-feeding also may help with brain development and learning.

There are also practical advantages to breast-feeding. It's convenient, costs less than formula and does not need to be prepared.

That being said, some women choose not to breast-feed for medical or personal reasons. Infant formula does contain all the nutrients a baby needs for normal growth. Millions of perfectly healthy babies have been raised on bottled infant formula.

If you do decide to breast-feed, it can be hard to judge how much milk your baby takes in at each feeding. But there are several signs that your baby is getting enough milk:

— Wet diapers. Your baby should have at least one to two wet diapers for the first two days. After that, your baby should have four to six wet diapers per day.

— Stools. During the first week, your baby should have two or more stools per day. After that, the number of stools should increase to four or more per day.

— Milk supply. Two to four days after delivery, your milk should "come in." Your breasts will feel larger, firmer and warmer as they fill with milk before each feeding. They'll get smaller and softer after your baby has nursed.

— Feedings. Your baby should feed at least eight times every 24 hours. Most newborns nurse every one and a half to three hours. After feeding, your baby should seem satisfied and will probably fall asleep.

— Weight. After the first week of life, your newborn should steadily gain weight.

If one of more of these signs indicate that your baby might not be getting enough milk, talk to your pediatrician.

Anger can damage your relationships and your health

ASK DOCTOR K
by Anthony L. Komaroff, M.D.

DEAR DOCTOR K: My husband and I both have quick tempers. Before we know it, a simple observation turns into an argument. Any advice for keeping our conversations civil?

DEAR READER: Everyone gets angry from time to time, but anger comes more easily to some people. Two married friends, call them Kevin and Jane, recently recounted the following exchange to me:

As Kevin was finishing up a hectic day at work, Jane rang and asked him to pick up milk for the kids on the way home. "I'll do my best," he told her. But the store was closed by the time Kevin got there and he arrived home empty-handed. His wife, who also had a hectic day at work, became upset and responded, "But you said you would get it." "No, I said I'd try," said Kevin apologetically.

The outcome of this exchange could have gone badly. You can imagine tempers rising and a vicious spat to follow.

In fact, Jane replied, "We're both exhausted. The kids won't starve. Let's have dinner." With those few words she communicated to her husband that nothing mattered more than the harmony between them.

Interactions like this happen every day. With each interaction comes an opportunity to minimize anger and create a positive outcome. The key is to convey information peacefully and respectfully.

Remember that how we say something is as important as what we say. If you speak with anger or contempt, a simple disagreement can turn into a huge argument. Instead, try talking calmly and respectfully.

Taking a "time-out" when things start to get heated is really important. Even if you are justified in being angry, there's a real chance that anger will cause you to do something you regret and hurt someone you love. Taking a time-out tells your partner that you are interested in his or her point of view, and that you value and respect them. And it also signals that they should consider why you got angry, and whether there was any basis for it that could have been avoided.

Think back to Kevin and Jane's exchange over the milk. Fortunately, Jane stopped, looked and listened. She recognized her own anger, but also Kevin's effort. She observed that he felt bad, and she quickly backed down from anger. An incident that could have escalated into a full-blown argument ended instead with a peaceful family dinner.

To learn many more strategies for recognizing and controlling anger, read "Outsmarting Anger" by Harvard Medical School's Dr. Joe Shrand, with Leigh M. Devine. (You can learn more about this book at AskDoctorK.com.)

Besides the damage that anger can do to relationships, there's growing evidence that anger is just plain bad for your health. You've probably heard about people who get heart attacks from having "Type A personalities" — from being hard-driving and perfectionistic. There's a measure of truth to that, but anger is even more of a factor in bringing on a heart attack.

This woman falls off the face of the Earth until she needs something

FRIDAY, JUNE 6, 2014

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: My adult stepdaughter doesn't want to work. Her main goal in life is to drink, smoke pot and pass out naked on the beach. She inherited two family homes and essentially threw them away by not paying the mortgages and having parties with the money she collected as rent.

This woman falls off the face of the Earth until she needs something. Her father and I are just getting our finances back on track after a series of layoffs. She had no idea we had moved out of state for new jobs. My husband is retired now, and we absolutely cannot afford to house a 43-year-old woman.

This girl needs some serious help. When my grandmother became too drunk to manage her own affairs, we put her in a rest home. Could we do this with my stepdaughter? — No Drama, Please

Dear Drama: Not without her consent or a court order saying she is incompetent. We doubt you'd get either. We assume this woman doesn't have a job, but she is still your husband's daughter. Is he willing to cut her off financially?

Would she listen to him if he offered advice or suggested job counseling? We don't recommend you let this woman land on your doorstep. She has to understand that there are consequences to her irresponsible behavior. Still, you cannot do much without Dad's backing. And if Dad enables her profligate behavior in any way, it only prolongs the end result.

Dear Annie: Everyone at our YMCA is friendly. We smile and say hello, even if we are not well-acquainted.

The exception is a young man who started coming a few months ago. He always has a scowl on his face. Whenever anyone says "hello," he turns away without responding. Maybe he just wants to be left alone. But he has had an arm amputated, so we wonder whether there is something more we should do to reach out to him. He might be a war veteran — but we don't know, because he won't talk to us.

What should we do? We're happy to give him his space and stop trying to be friendly if that's what is best for him. — Just Trying To Be Friendly

Dear Just: You sound very kind, but some people need more space — and more time to adjust. Please don't suddenly ignore this man, however. It doesn't require much additional effort to continue to say hello, without expecting a response. We think, in time, this man will realize that you aren't being overly inquisitive, and he will acknowledge your greeting, even if it is with only a nod or a grunt. Be patient.

Dear Annie: I read the letter from "Confused Employee," the 18-year-old woman whose husband-and-wife bosses want them to take photographs of themselves every day to compete for a $100 gift certificate for "best dressed."

You dropped the ball on this one. I don't think this has anything to do with a dress code. It's just creepy. If the bosses want the staff to dress better, they should have a meeting and say so. It sounds more like the bosses want lots of pictures of pretty girls to look at. What is he going to do with those photographs? Will they appear online? Are they going to be Photoshopped with a girl's head on someone else's naked body?

If I were a parent and my daughter told me that the boss was requiring daily photos, I'd be down at that coffee shop so fast it'd make his head spin. Once those pictures are taken, anything can happen to them. — Creeped-Out Mom

Dear Mom: Dozens of readers were also "creeped out" that this husband and wife wanted photos of these young women. This is a questionable and worrisome request, even if the motives are simply to see who is best dressed. There are better ways to achieve that.

Annie's Mailbox is written by Kathy Mitchell and Marcy Sugar, longtime editors of the Ann Landers column.

A crazy deal for trump control

by Phillip Alder

A.J. Kitt, who used to be a top downhill skier, said, "You have no control over what the other guy does. You only have control over what you do."

That is usually true at the bridge table, but sometimes you can control your opponent by leaving him with no winning option — as in this deal.

South is in seven spades. West leads the club ace. South ruffs and cashes the spade ace, expecting to claim one nanosecond later. But when East discards a club, suddenly West seems to have a certain trump trick. Is there any chance?

North's rebid was a double negative, showing a very bad hand, either the traditional two no-trump or the modern three clubs, according to partnership preference. Then South, confident that North could not have an ace, jumped to seven hearts to offer a choice of grand slams. North gave preference to spades, never having expected to make three bids in the auction.

The only way to bring home the contract is to lead side-suit winners through West. When he ruffs one, dummy overruffs, and declarer draws trumps, then having the same number of spades (three) as West.

However, West will only ruff if he has no alternative. He will discard as often as possible. Here, if South immediately runs his hearts, West will pitch his diamond and later ruff the diamond ace.

As declarer can throw only four of dummy's five diamonds on the hearts, he must cash one diamond trick first. Then he plays his hearts. Eventually, West will concede.

Your Birthday

FRIDAY, JUNE 6, 2014

Some hard choices will have to be made this year. You will encounter resistance at first, but once others take note of your direction, you will win them over. Your confidence will increase as your talents blossom. You will be victorious if you are determined to outmatch your competition.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — If you have been lazy about performing your household chores, you will hear about it. Do your part without complaint and avoid squabbles. A little romance will go a long way.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Show off your sociable nature. Surround yourself with friends and family, and share your positive attitude. An informal get-together will lift everyone's spirits. Share your memories.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Strike a better balance between home and work issues. Let others do their share without criticizing their efforts. You can't do it all, but you also can't expect others to do things your way.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — You have been on edge lately, losing sleep over past mistakes and mishaps. Avoid depression by making a clear plan for the future. Your anxiety is holding you back.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — Be careful who you confide in. You may have inadvertently revealed information that can be used against you. Minor setbacks must be overcome swiftly. Put your best interest first.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — A creative activity will generate an interesting proposal. Be proud of your talents, and new doors will open for you. Let everyone know what you have to offer.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — Have faith in your own judgment. It's important to stay in control. Take advice from experts, but ultimately make your decisions based on what works best for you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Find out more about what's going on in your community. Look into projects and developments that you can contribute to. Valuable connections can be made close to home.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — You need to better organize your life. If you find that you're spending too much time looking for everyday items, set aside a few hours to put everything in place today. Your frustration level will decrease as a result.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — Be extra cautious. A small injury will turn into a problem. Use your tools carefully. It's how you interact with others that will determine your success.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Shake off the blues. Find people who have the same passions, and plan a joint project. Have some fun, lighten up and have a laugh or two.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — It would be wise to study wealth management and investment techniques. Spending your time thusly will bring you long-lasting benefits and ensure that you will be less likely to be conned by a self-proclaimed expert.

SATURDAY, JUNE 7, 2014

You will see significant improvements in your business dealings this year. Remarkable opportunities will become available as professionals and people of influence gravitate to you. You have made some noteworthy contributions to your field, and now it's time to reap the rewards. Be gracious.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Make sure your intentions are clear. You will lose valuable allies if you are too vague or wishy-washy. Take a stand and stick to your plans.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — You can make meaningful advances in your career. Feel out the situation and consider asking for a promotion. Make a point to draw attention to your positive work habits.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — You will be faced with a variety of conflicting emotions. Love and romance will be on your mind, but keep both feet on the ground. Your work will suffer if you become distracted.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Keep your priorities straight. Don't let your desire to have fun cause you to become lax in your responsibilities. You don't want your reputation to take a hit.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — Don't allow others to take advantage of your good nature. If you are faced with someone else's personal problem, don't meddle; just suggest that he or she find a qualified counselor.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — A donation or fee may have strings attached. It may be difficult to say no, but you will be disappointed and short of funds if you don't get what you expect in return.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — You'll have a problem separating reality from fantasy. All is not as it seems. Take a closer look at the situation before you make a commitment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — You can't get rid of insecurities by spending on luxury items. Make a list of your good qualities, and you will discover that you have a lot going for you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — You may be missing a vital piece of information. If the answer is not clear, ask questions until you have a better understanding. Don't be tempted to blow your budget with extensive home improvements.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — You'll have second thoughts and will feel growing uncertainty regarding a partnership. Honor the time you've invested and see matters through to the end. It's better to be safe than sorry.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — It's time to tie up loose ends. Finish pending projects and organize your personal papers. You will be satisfied with what you accomplish, leaving you room to take on a new challenge.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Contractual agreements or legal decisions should be put on hold for the moment. Take the time to do your research carefully, or you may put yourself in financial jeopardy.

SUNDAY, JUNE 8, 2014

Your dreams will come true, but not all at once. Continue to learn and absorb all that you can. Remember that slow progress is still progress, and you could miss a valuable opportunity if you try to rush things. Be patient and build a solid future.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Romance is in the air. Share your feelings and your intentions. A chance meeting will give a boost to a current personal situation. Live, love and laugh.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — A partnership may be on shaky ground. Face the facts and consider your options. It's always best not to burn bridges. Calm discussions will help you rectify the problem.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — You'll encounter resistance today. Don't waste your time trying to change the opinions of others. A minimal investment could bring major dividends. Focus on self-improvement in order to gain positive momentum.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — You have the ability to stand out in a crowd, so use it. Your unique talents can take you to the next level if you present what you have to offer to the right people.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — You can be your own worst enemy. A scary change will turn out positively. More benefits will come your way if you keep an open mind.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — Be especially discreet regarding money matters. Someone may be trying to get close to you for all the wrong reasons. Keep your financial and personal information private.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — A romantic relationship is apparent. Don't let uncertainty cause you to make a poor choice. Weigh the pros and cons of a growing situation before you make a move.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Don't get involved in office encounters. It's important to separate your personal and business lives in order to get the most out of both. Be smart and avoid becoming the topic of conversation.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — Keep adding to your skills and attributes. You may feel as if you aren't making headway, but when a new opportunity arises, you will have what it takes to seize it.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — Before reconnecting with someone from your past, remember what led to your parting of ways. Be prepared to move ahead instead of living in yesteryear.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — You will be able to resolve a troubling emotional issue. Your surge in self-confidence will result in increased popularity. An unexpected offer will lead to a lucrative partnership.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — You need to deal with family matters first. Trouble will keep brewing if you ignore what's going on around you. You will get positive results if you share your concerns and solutions.

Weber's Spirit Line tops latest gas grill Ratings

FROM CONSUMER REPORTS®
by the editors of Consumer Reports

In Consumer Reports' recent Ratings of more than 100 gas grills, models from Weber's Spirit line were among the highest scoring.

In Consumer Reports' tests, the top-rated, mid-sized Weber Spirit SP-320, $600, and small-sized Weber Spirit E-220, $450, preheated quickly and evenly, and were superb at high- and low-temperature evenness. And both have electronic igniters and long burner warranties, which are among Consumer Reports' desirable features for gas grills.

In the large grills category, top performers included the KitchenAid 720-0709C, $800, and the Master Forge 3218LTN, $650. The KitchenAid, available at Sam's Club, was quick to preheat and capable once it did, while the Master Forge, available at Lowe's, offered fine performance, mostly stainless-steel styling, a folding prep table and lots of storage at a relatively low price.

FIVE FEATURES THAT COUNT

More grills now have convenient features such as electronic igniters, fuel gauges, illuminated control knobs for nighttime grilling and fold-down shelves for food prep. Here are five gas-grill features to consider when buying:

1. Electronic igniters are usually easier and more reliable than a rotary or push-button starter.

2. Rounded edges are safer than sharp ones, especially if kids are afoot. To test a grill's sturdiness, nudge it in several places and press down on the side shelf to see if it will support a heavy pot.

3. Burner warranties of 10 years or longer are a plus since burners are the most frequently replaced part.

4. Stainless steel or coated cast-iron grates tend to be better for searing, though stainless is more durable.

5. The cooking surface should be big enough to fit enough food to feed a griller's usual crowd. Larger grills usually have bigger cooking areas, but not always. Keep in mind, Consumer Reports doesn't count warming racks and searing burners in its measurements, but manufacturers might.

GREAT GRILLING GADGETS

Consumer Reports also tried out grill gadgets — including veggie, fish and rib cookers and pizza stones. Here's what testers found:

— Master Forge grill wok 25375, $17 (Lowe's). Keeps smaller batches of vegetables or small fish such as shrimp or scallops from going overboard due to its deeper sides and bowllike shape, but a large amount of food might cook unevenly if it's piled up.

— Brinkmann flexible grilling basket 812-9012, $18 (Home Depot). Cooks large quantities of thin fish fillets such as sole or tilapia, or vegetables cut flat. All food must be the same thickness or thinner items may fall out when the 24-by-16-inch basket is flipped over. Its large size also made it awkward to flip, open to remove food and wash.

— Weber original rib and roast holder, $20. Cooks full racks of ribs upright on large grills. Testers cooked a roast, turning it once, and it came out just as well as one cooked on a grill spit. But testers couldn't close medium-sized grill lids when they placed this big holder front-to-back to hold full racks of ribs because it stuck out.

— Weber Style pizza stone 6430, $50. Cooks one large pizza or several personal-sized ones. A handle allows users to easily move the stone from the grill or rotate during cooking to adapt to hotter spots, and a holder elevates the stone so it's not as likely to crack if placed on a wet surface — for example, when removed from the grill. However, the metal holder, like the stone, will be burning hot when moved from the grill, so Consumer Reports recommends using oven mitts and exercising caution.
