By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — NBC's small village back on its economic feet. Aided by a native interpreter—David Wayne in a marvelous makeup — and a geisha (Miyoshi Umeki) presented to him by a friendly village, Forsythe does the job. The plot revolves around the desire of the townfolk to build a teahouse rather than the school the Americans insist the town needs.

As a hit Broadway play nine years ago, it was a leisurely, charming story. But in order to accommodate the tyrannical clock of television, a full-length play had to be chopped down to a little more than an hour—40 minutes in misleading because it includes commercials, station breaks, opening and closing credits.

And what got chopped were the characterizations. We didn't get to know the principals well enough to really care what happened to them. But it sure was handsome to look at.

And handsome, but in a different way, was the River Nile, down which we travelled Sunday night. It was filmed in glowing color, given a narration that often read like poetry and was accompanied by a sensitive and sometime with musical score. The journey started at the source, in mountains of black Africa where the mighty river is a clear little stream, and ended 4,000 miles later in Alexandria, where the river meets the sea. At every point along the way, the descriptions of flora and fauna were beautiful and interesting.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Rex Harrison is all set to repeat as Professor Higgins in the film version of My Fair Lady and it seems in retrospect inane to have considered anyone else. Richard Burton was mentioned. But Higgins is supposed to be a woman-hater and even Burton's considerable talent could not effect that characterization.

With Harrison and Audrey Hepburn as stars, it now appears possible that Stanley Holloway will recreate his original role as Doittle.

Frank Sinatra is building a 250-room addition to his Cal-Neva Lodge at Lake Tahoe. "We'll go from a four-month to a nine-month operation," said the crooner — turned — tycoon. "There is too much overhead to operate only in the summer. Now we can draw from the skiing crowd at Squaw Valley."

Hugh O'Brian is back from his travels briefly and is doing an Alfred Hitchcock hour. He reports that the film he made in Europe has a new title; it has gone from Champagne Flight to the Friendliest Girls in the World to Come Fly with Me. He says the film is a winner, despite the flighty title.

Sam Benedict is the latest of the television hours to plan a two-parter, aimed at release overseas as a feature. . . Stunt man Bob Morgan plans a suit over the How the West was Won train accident that cost him a leg. . . Good news on the local production scene: Shooting starts this week on The Greatest Story Ever Told.

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

EXPERT DEFENSE NEEDED SIGNALS

John Crawford and Tobias Stone are among the pairs likely to come through the Phoenix trials as a member of the 1963 American Bridge Team.

In today's hand Tobias, sitting West, did the work. Johnny, sitting East, made one bid, then co-operated with signals that helped his partner find the winning defense.

North's jump to four spades was designed to put pressure on his vulnerable opponents. Johnny, sitting East, had no problem, and Stony doubled he four-spade contract.

Stony opened the king of diamonds and Johnny played the ace. This discouraged a further diamond lead and Stony shifted to ace and another heart.

South ruffed in dummy, cashed dummy's king of trumps, led a club to his queen.

Stony won with the king. He had to lead, and all leads looked bad. But he came up with the only winning play when he led a low diamond. Dummy's jack held and South discarded a club, but he still had to take another club finesse and Stony's jack set the contract.

CARD SENSE
Q—The bidding has been:
East South West North
1 Dmd. Double Pass 1 Spade
Pass 2 Spades Pass 2 N.T.
Pass ?
You, South, hold:
Spades A-Q-10-8, Hearts A-J-8-7, Diamonds 2, Clubs K-4-3-2.
What do you do?
A—Bid four spades. You had almost enough strength to jump to three spades the time before.

TODAY'S QUESTION
Instead of bidding one spade your partner bids one no-trump over your double. What do you do?

N. Ward referendum postponed

The referendum scheduled to be held on November 21 among residents of the North Ward in Sherbrooke concerning the zoning laws within the area will be postponed so that residents in an adjoining area can participate in the vote.

Lawyer Dewey Zaor, headed a delegation of North Ward property owners which appeared before the city council Monday night, and requested that residents of the area adjoining a zone where zoning in a public referendum on Nov. 21 be given the privilege of the vote.

Said Mr. Zaor "there will be a grave injustice if only those in the one area can vote and not those in the contiguous area."

He further added that "They have let it be known that they want to participate in the vote, and what we would like to know is can they vote?"

Mr. Zaor said "the law says that those in the contiguous area must submit their intention within five days of the publication of the public notice at the referendum" but he added that they were caught unprepared.

Furthermore said Mr. Zaor the same notice announcing the referendum is supposed to be published three days in succession and it was published only once.

Alderman Pinard said "we will investigate this situation thoroughly to find out why only one was published." Pro mayor, Ald. Carl Camirand, also strongly urged an inquiry into why the error had been made.

The council decided on a complete investigation into the matter. Alderman Gervais proposed that the order for the referendum be withdrawn and a new date determined and this time that the three notices be published.

He was seconded by Alderman Everett Nicol.

Hence, the residents of the adjoining area will be able to vote if they so choose. No new date was set for the vote.

Insurance companies are uneasy about doing business with city

Life insurance companies doing business with the city should be given greater assurance that their contracts will be maintained Alderman Amédée Roy told Sherbrooke city council Monday evening.

Said newly-elected Alderman

Roy "It would certainly be in the interests of the city if once insurance was accepted by a company that the city should stay with the company."

"As it is, insurance firms change with changes in office and the companies have an uneasy feeling about insuring the city."

Said Alderman Nicol, "We should stay with one firm unless they come one year with exaggerated premiums."

Alderman Roy agreed that the city would get offers and better ones if they followed the proposed policy.

Alderman Nicol added, "As it is, many don't even bother to offer tenders."

Alderman Nicol said that there was a time when no one wanted to offer tenders until the present system, whereby the insurance companies are guaranteed the contract for three years, was inaugurated.

"Let them know that it won't be necessary a practice to call tenders every three years as at present - only when we decide that there charges are excessive," said Amédée Roy.

Alderman Roy's proposal was seconded by Alderman Nicol.

Street lights will be installed along King West to city limits

Street lights will be installed along King Street West right to the city limits, Sherbrooke city council decided Monday night at a regular meeting.

The cost of the fixtures and installation will be $4,000.

At the present time, King Street West is lined with lighting units only to the Rock Forest Road.

The new installations will be placed along King Street West from Rock Forest Road to the city limits at the Alouette Motel. At the same meeting the council decided that a flasher and a sign to notify motorists to slow down will be installed at the entrance to the city on King Street West.

Council also decided to look into the request made by the owner of the Nanking sign on King Street that they pay him $250 for the removal of the sign.

He contends that the city moved the road to his sign and that he installed it originally within the legal distance from the road.

This is one of the signs that were ordered removed by the city council after it was discovered that they were stationed too close to the road.

Alderman Nicol said that "if we brought the road to his sign—if it was within the legal limit before, then his claim is justified." Council decided to look into the matter.

Lashes out at patronage

Marler says Johnson making 'old promises'

RICHMOND — (Staff) — Speaking before an English-language rally in the Richmond Town Hall Monday night, Hon. Georges Marler, government leader in the Legislative Council and minister without portfolio in the Lesage cabinet, called upon the electors to return the government with an increased majority.

"The best way to assure the progress, the development and the prosperity of the province," he said, "is to elect a strong government directed by a progressive leader who can count upon the support of a sufficient number of deputies who can aid in the guiding of the ship of state without regard to inside or outside influences."

The arrival of Jean Lesage as prime minister in 1960, he continued, marked the turning point in the history of Quebec politics with the result that the province had advanced socially and economically at a pace unknown under the Duplessis regime.

Progress in the field of education and health had been spectacular.

The Union Nationale, said Mr. Marler, wished to replace the present system of hospitalization insurance with a system based on political patronage. Instead of receiving his hospital benefits as a matter of right, the poor man would have to go to the local deputy or patronage agent to have his account paid.

Attacking the campaign of the Opposition leader, Mr. Marler continued: "Mr. Johnson is repeating the old promises concerning the reduction of expenses and the 'cutting' of taxes. But it must be known once and for all that there is no limit to the promises Mr. Johnson can make either in an election campaign or in parliament. Last June he declared the credit of Quebec was not good. But the following day the province completed arrangements for a loan of fifty million dollars. One would be lieve after this incident that Mr. Johnson would not speak further along this line in order to hide his incompetence, and would think that he would regain his sense of responsibility and that this outburst would be a lesson. But all the world, knows the answer."

"Again today," Mr. Johnson claims, "the deplorable state of the provincial finances is the reason why Mr. Lesage is coming before the electorate. Mr. Johnson was never farther from the truth. The people and Mr. Johnson himself know that the credit of the province, despite the claims of its detractors, is good and will be as long as Mr. Lesage heads the government."

Mr. Marler also reviewed the electricity issue, claiming nationalization was vital to the best interests of the province.

That big white house high on a hill

That true dedication knows no geographical bounds is demonstrated by the article in yesterday's Record about Indian and Eskimo children who are sent to the Butters Memorial Hospital in Austin.

Some of these helpless youngsters - all hopelessly retarded cases of one kind or another - travel 3,000 miles by air-plane and ambulance to reach the haven of the white frame institution on the hill outside Magog.

They are sent by federal government agencies to the Eastern Townships hospital because in all of Canada, and perhaps in all of North America, there is no other place quite like the Butters Hospital.

It is not only that love and care are lavished on small warped minds and bodies that most others neglect. That is only part of the wonder of the work being done at the hospital.

Even more important is that each child - no matter how physically and mentally deficient it may be - is regarded as an individual human being, and treated as such at all times.

There are over 300 youngsters in the hospital now. Mrs. Lily Butters calls them the "helpless and the hopeless." Yet she, and the devoted members of her staff know every one of the patients by name, though many of the children cannot even respond when it is uttered.

Negro and white children, Jewish, Roman Catholic and Protestant children, children from French-speaking, English-speaking and other families, and now, Indian and Eskimo children - all are lovingly gathered into a snug haven where fear, frustration and neglect do not enter.

That big house on the hill is truly blessed.

That time you may find in your old winter overcoat will be worth about a nickel.

Railway labor conciliation weak

Canadians have been spared the ill-effects of a strike which threatened to tie up one of the nation's major railway systems but the settlement came only after the economic life of the country had been somewhat dislocated by threatened embargoes on freight shipments and a limitation on passenger traffic.

The incident followed the pattern set by so many previous railway labor disputes—extended negotiations which ended with the refusal of the disputing parties to come to an agreement, then last-minute intervention by federal government conciliators which forced a settlement upon the two parties concerned.

Most Canadians are opposed in principle to the idea of compulsory and binding arbitration in labor disputes as being a step towards totalitarianism. But these recurring crises and their consequent disruption of business are bringing many people to the belief that some policy implementing the theory of the greatest good to the greatest number must be invoked in the railway and other key industries.

The present system of arbitration proceedings in public service industries has long become obsolete and must be replaced by some more efficient method of producing early settlements of these disputes.

Unless the opposing interests can find some means of modernizing their collective bargaining procedures, they may find that an outraged public opinion will force government to take some action which will prove decidedly unpalatable.

Too many rubbers in bridge come from somebody peeking over a player's shoulder.

Our Eskimo art must be protected

Some of Canada's finest art, examples of which received popular acclaim almost from the day they were introduced a few years ago, is produced by the Eskimos.

The finely sculptured figures of hunting scenes and the animals and mammals which provide food for the Eskimos were eagerly bought by most of the country's leading museums. In the process, the Eskimo communities which turned out the objects were able with the help and advice of missionaries, to make their artistic venture profitable.

However, there are some people who, realizing the output of Eskimo art was not large enough to meet demands, started selling cheaper imitations. This of course, has had serious effects on the sale of the authentic pieces.

But there was encouraging news from Toronto this week where a trading stamp company has agreed to withdraw imitations of Eskimo carvings it has been distributing as premiums. The moves followed a request of Northern Affairs Minister Dinsdale whose department supervises Eskimo affairs. He is concerned about the value of the art.

Canada is spending millions in grants and bursaries to foster the arts. It is logical that government authorities should attempt to see that its efforts and money are not wasted.

US policies responsible for crisis

Dear Sir:
I was amazed on Tuesday night last, to hear the CBC newscaster report that, in the present Cuban crisis, that T. C. Douglas was the only dissenting voice among the parliamentarians. This accusation was made on the basis that Mr. Douglas had been reported as saying "that we must remember that the Soviet Union has for years been surrounded by American missiles." How on earth can this be regarded as a dissenting voice? — surely it is the voice of sanity and objectivity. Mr. Douglas was stating fact.

Perhaps if a few more of us would come out of our comfortable cocoons of complacency and would peruse such books as "The Ugly American" and "A Nation of Sheep" (both stinging indictments of American foreign policy), we might realize that the world is not divided into black and white, virtuous and immoral. ("Our side being the virtuous side, of course).

We might also realize that the fruit that the U.S. is now reaping was planted years ago under various "status quo" policies. A thinking person will realize that the original blame for the present Cuban crisis lies in the hands of the former rulers of the U.S. had not supported a dictator (Batista) then the present circumstances would certainly not be the same.

This does not, however, exempt the present administration from any responsibility. The question that must now be asked (provided we do not obliterate ourselves in the meantime) is, what about the dictators that the U.S. is at present supporting (Trujillo in Dominican Republic — Santos in Nicaragua — Chiang Kai Chek in Formosa)? Do we have more Cubas before we wake up?

Yours sincerely,
David J. Weston

Might prove embarrassing for some

Ontario big - time crime report could become major best seller

By JOHN LEBLANC

TORONTO (CP) — A mixed waiting list of politicians, public officials, policemen, businessmen, gamblers, bookies, assorted crooks and ordinary citizens will be lining up to make a governmental best seller out of a report that should be coming out a few months from now.

There will be embarrassment for some and vindication for others in Mr. Justice Wilfrid D. Roach's one-man royal commission report on Ontario crime. For still others, there could be trouble.

For the general public, the distillation of some 4,000,000 words of evidence and 297 exhibits will provide an eye-opening case history of the operations of big-time crookdom seen in fragmentary and often unconnected flashes during 68 days of public sittings.

For the Ontario government, it may point the way towards cutting down on the lush pickings of organized gambling and betting and tightening up law enforcement generally.

For politicians, there will be potential TNT in the report. It could detonate in various directions.

The political chips, in fact, are falling already. Veteran Attorney-General Kelso Roberts, the province's chief law enforcement officer for seven years and main focus of opposition gunnery over crime, was shifted to the comparatively bombproof portfolio of lands and forests right after the commission ended public hearings Oct. 23.

Any political sparks from the report itself can be expected to fly indiscriminately. For the controversial inquiry, the Progressive Conservative government chose a 71-year-old jurist who is a former Liberal party constituency president and member of the Ontario Court of Appeal for 18 years. Mr. Justice Roach has trumped on all attempts to make political hay before him.

The parade passing under his eye has included present and past political figures, offbeat underworld characters, solid businessmen, fast-money boys of various kinds, girl friends, police, civil servants, lawyers, stooges and the chief justice of Ontario.

Witnesses have been loquacious, taciturn, sullen, belligerent, unremembering, mathematically exact or dreamily vague.

When the evidence of all 128 is sorted out and patched together, it forms a picture of past police and crook associations in connection with gambling and of some government officials having been none too fast in getting off the mark against gamblers and bookmakers using the laws to protect their enterprises.

But the current picture is not clear. Nor has there been much public evidence of any type of crime except gambling, though the commission has had a limited number of private sessions with high police officers for their views on crime in general and means of tackling it more adequately.

By and large, the real inside stuff presented to the commission covers only up to mid-summer of 1960, when a young constable of the Ontario Provincial Police, George Scott, ended a period of infiltration into the top ranks of organized gambling and came up with a story of systematic bribery of police anti-gambling raiders for tipoff protection.

As a result of his disclosures, gambling bosses Joseph McDermott and Vincent Feeley and former OPP Constable Robert J. Wright face 1½ years in prison for conspiracy to obtain police information. Their appeal has gone to the Supreme Court of Canada.

The smooth and soft-talking Feeley and McDermott, on the evidence, shaped up as the kingpins of at least a large segment of Ontario's organized gambling for years, though little light was thrown on their present status.

Though witness after witness pointed at them as having a finger in one operation or another, the pair jointly admitted nothing more illegal than banking illegal crap games (on which the legal books are closed now), while Feeley tossed in a confession that he forged his army discharge papers during the last war, an offence long outlawed by time.

The man supposed to have toted protection money for McDermott and Feeley from one big crap game—bookie Ralph Clarke—disappeared on the eve of his commission appearance.

The craps-shooting impresario, Dominic Simone, said the pair cut themselves in for 40 per cent of his $120,000-a-year profits in return for some bankrolling assistance and police "security" but eventually double-crossed him out of the game and took over his customers in 1953.

Clarke got frozen out, too, according to Simone, and got even by burning down the McDermott - Feeley suburban dice house at Cooksville.

No police protection was alleged for Maxie (The Baker) Bluestein, who was bothered not only by the police but by underworld animosities but who told the commission of coming up with a net worth of $170,000 in the face of vicissitudes such as a savage bludgeoning last year in a nightclub here.

One of those convicted of the slugging was Johnny (The Enforcer) Papalia, a Hamilton strongboy tangled up vaguely (as far as the commission found out) with various gaming enterprises. The commission wanted to have a session with him, but Papalia is in the hands of United States police, held in $250,000 bail on charges of conspiracy in a huge dope-smuggling ring.

Bluestein wouldn't talk about his beating except to say that it left his memory foggy, notably to the extent that he could not remember asking for police protection against the Mafia.

He did remember roughly how much he and a couple of partners turned over in a bookmaking operation behind the facade of a chartered social club up to 1960, and he insisted it was not the $13,000,000 a year calculated by the magistrate who jailed him. It was closer, he said, to $4,000,000.

Misuse of these club charters by gamblers and bookies produced many of the political reverberations before the commission. They are issued by the provincial secretary's department, and Liberal Leader John Wintermeyer charged — in a speech of November, 1961, that led directly to the commission's creation — that they were granted and supervised with a laxity that encouraged their use as unofficial mints.

The customary police reports preceding issuance of a charter were on occasion ignored when they were unfavorable. Sometimes they were not called for at all.

One such police report for a Toronto club in 1949 was highly unfavorable, one of the applicants being described as a front man for gamblers. Provincial Secretary Dana Porter, now chief justice, had Deputy Secretary R. J. Cudney look into it again, and the club got its charter. It was cancelled later after a gaming conviction.

Some of the deputy's own police-based turn-downs were reversed, sometimes with politicians going over his head to his minister.

John Yaremko, present provincial secretary, told of tightening up administration of the club charters, but the commission heard of a few current cases of lack of speed in getting illegally - used establishments closed up. Though charter cancellation proceedings were launched against one Toronto "bridge and social" club in 1959, they had not gone through up until the time the inquiry ended because the club had got tangled up in a couple of lawsuits and the department did not want to gum these up.

In one of these, the club was suing police raiders for trespass.

Gerald Waring REPORTING

OTTAWA — "What do you think would happen," an admiral said to me the other day, "if the captain of one of our Argus marine patrol aircraft sighted a surfaced submarine off our coast with a missile on its launcher ready to be fired?"

"Dip his wings and fly on?" I hazarded. That seemed a logical courtesy—after all, we weren't at war with anybody.

"No, sir!" the admiral exploded. "He'd sink her. That is, if he identified her as Russian. And he'd know if any of ours were in the area," he explained, obviously including American, British or other NATO countries in the "ours".

By now my eyebrows were crawling up towards my hair line.

"Remember," the admiral said, "the aircraft captain has been out on patrol for hours. He knew the international situation was very dicey when he took off. He doesn't know what's happened since. If war had started, it would take a little time for new orders to reach him out over the Atlantic. And below him is this Russian submarine in a hostile posture."

"Couldn't he report her presence to Halifax by radio, and meanwhile keep her under surveillance?"

The admiral shook his head. "What if she suddenly fires her missile — say at Ottawa? He'd attack then, but it would be too late. And we can't afford to be too late."

The point of this disquieting story is that while the political leaders of East and West display their skill at brinkmanship, they alone do not control the fate of the world. Far from executive mansions and national legislatures, far from conclaves of the United Nations and the Organization of American States, men with unknown names are making on-the-spot decisions that could unleash the horror of nuclear war.

One such could be the captain of an RCAF Argus out over the Atlantic, a young man from Saskatoon, perhaps, faced with the need to make a frightening decision in minutes. Or it could be a submarine commander from Omsk, or a destroyer skipper from Milwaukee, or a freighter captain from Vladivostok. Each has his job, each has his orders, but even the most specific orders cannot cover every eventuality.

What would you do if you were that Argus captain? You reason that a Russian submarine would not be in those waters at this time, missile ready to fire, if it were not hostile. You also know, perhaps, that British Foreign Secretary Lord Home said recently that "According to the latest estimates, casualties in the first few days of a nuclear war would total 300,000,000 dead."

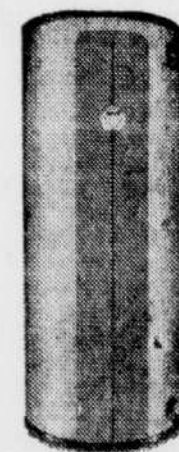

But what about Ivan down there? What will he do? Dare you wait to find out?

In the case of nuclear warheads in foreign lands, the US ensures against inadvertence by the "double key" system of control. With the Strategic Air Command the fail-safe system that turns back bombers unless they receive confirming orders, ensures that if the bombers go for Russia it won't be by mistake. The bombs themselves have a six-pin system to prevent inadvertent explosion.

But in K-K brinkmanship there is no double key. On the high seas today there is no fail-safe. Only guys with jobs to do, come what may.

the time being" but that later on he would favor taking over the forest and mining industries.

He continued that Mr. Levesque's figures indicated the government would make a profit of forty million dollars on its first year of electricity operation.

This was to be used for rate reductions, improvement of service, interest charges and expansion.

"But with his blackboard, his pointer and his pretty charts, the little school teacher has forgotten many things," the Sherbrooke mayor lashed out. "He forgets the tens of millions that will be required each year for debt redemption. He forgets the $13,000,000 revenue the provincial government will lose from taxes paid by the power companies — provincial income taxes, incorporated company taxes, water rights, special educational taxes, etc."

Ontario, he continued, had been held up as a perfect example of the benefits of public ownership but he quoted a statement by the president of a large steel company that rates charged his company for power were higher in Ontario than "those charged by private companies in Quebec or in many parts of Europe."

Substantiating this claim, the Sherbrooke mayor said the Toronto Hydro-Electric Commission was paying $38.44 per horsepower for electricity purchased from Ontario Hydro, while the Sherbrooke municipal system paid only $33.80 for power it obtained from Shawinigan.

Speaking earlier in the evening, Jean Jacques Bertrand, former UN Youth Minister and candidate in Missisquoi, declared the nationalization issue was raised to cover the Liberal record of broken promises and hide the internal dissension in the Lesage cabinet.

He claimed the government should have proceeded by way of a referendum rather than by an election to determine the wishes of the people on public ownership.

The body is resting at the Gerard Brien funeral home at 229 Queen Boulevard North.

Royer service on Wednesday

JOSEPH R. ROYER

Funeral services will be held at the St. Michael's Basilica Cathedral at 10 a.m. October 31 for Joseph R. Royer, who died suddenly at 4:30 p.m. Saturday at the Knights of Columbus Hall on Court Street. He was 76.

Mr. Royer was a former Sherbrooke alderman and was a well-known figure in the business world in the Sherbrooke area.

Mr. Royer was born in Lambton, Quebec, the son of Marie Rodrigue and Alphonse Royer. He spent most of his life in Sherbrooke where he became a prominent figure in the construction industry, and also was elected to the city council.

Mr. Royer was a fourth degree member of the Knights of Columbus and a member of the Social Club.

He married Aureole Longval in Sherbrooke on May 15, 1916. He is survived by two children, Mrs. Roy Ilton (Yvette) of Hamilton, Ontario and Mrs. Andre Michaud (Gisele) of Pointe Claire, Quebec.

The brothers and sister who survive him are Telephone and Cleophas Royer of Sherbrooke, Mrs. Yves Leach (Deliane), Delia Trudeau and Rose-Anne Caouette also of Sherbrooke.

The body is resting at the Gerard Brien funeral home at 229 Queen Boulevard North.

Witness meeting ends at Magog

MAGOG — The three-day assembly of Jehovah's Witnesses at the Benoit Hall here reached a grand climax Sunday afternoon when a packed out audience of over 188 heard Mr. Laurier Saumur, guest speaker from Montreal, deliver the timely discourse, The Bible's Answer to our Problem of Survival.

Speaking concerning the present world crisis, Mr. Saumur said, "Today the survival of the human race is in question, if we are to judge from statements made by militarists, scientists and economists."

He then mentioned, the 'asteroid bomb' which would have rocket power enough to propel a small planet out of its orbit. "Mankind," he said, "has overlooked the greatest threat to their very existence, namely . . . the war of the great day of God, the Almighty". The Bible hope of survival, stated Mr. Saumur, is to seek Jehovah and seek righteousness and meekness, before that day overtakes us.

Despite the stormy weekend, the Witnesses made use of every available chair and bench to accommodate the steadily increasing audience.

Saturday afternoon featured four new ministers who symbolized their dedication to serve God by total immersion.

Delegates from Lennoxville, Sherbrooke, Granby, Richmond and Cowansville enjoyed a very successful convention and look forward to assembling again in Magog.

We the women by Ruth Millette

Ban the scarecrow look

"Too many Canadian women go to the supermarket in Bermuda shorts a little too small and with hair rollers a mile too large."

The foreign visitor who made that less-than-flattering observation of the Canadian housewives added in obvious bewilderment: "When I visited Canada 10 years ago, the way Canadian housewives dressed impressed me. But today numerous young and old, fat and thin homemakers shop for groceries in shorts."

"It's inconceivable when the very best and cheapest clothes in the world are readily available to them. How can they bear to dress as they do?"

Probably it's because the Canadian woman — with a closet full of becoming clothes suitable for all occasions including marketing and errand running — never admits to herself that for most of the daylight hours she runs around looking like a scarecrow.

No matter how often she has hopped in her car to run errands with her hair done up on rollers and wearing the same old faded, too tight shorts and rumpled shirt she put on to wash windows or do the laundry or wax floors she doesn't think of herself as a woman who is a sloppy dresser.

As long as she can manage to look like a fashion picture when she goes to a ladies luncheon or goes out in the evening with her husband or attends a club meeting, she thinks of herself as a well-dressed woman.

But all the while she is mentally considering herself well-dressed — because she can be when she bothers — she is running around day after day in one awful looking get-up after another, leaving the impression wherever she goes not of a neatly dressed woman but of one who seems to think she is invisible (hair rollers, shorts, sneakers, and all) so long as she is only marketing or errand running.

Stanstead College and Quebec High battle 18-18 tie, Jim Ball tallies two touchdowns and Tom Faust one QUEBEC—(Special)—Stanstead College and Quebec High School battled to a 18-18 tie here Saturday afternoon under adverse conditions. It was the first meeting this year of these two teams. The second tilt will take place in Stanstead Saturday Nov. 10.

Bill Redmond of Stanstead blocked a kick to help set up the visitors' first TD. Jim Ball bucked over for the major but Stanstead missed the convert.

Don Harriet of Quebec came up with a 60-yard gallop to register the home club's first touchdown. They failed on the convert and the score was tied. A few minutes later Shorty Hickson of Quebec got out around the end and went the distance to give the home club a 12-6 edge. Once again the convert missed.

In the second quarter Jim Ball came up with his second TD of the afternoon when he lugged the ball across but again the convert went astray and the score remained deadlocked 12-12 just before half time.

Following a much needed rest Tom Faust of Stanstead put his club out in front 18-12. Keeping in the same pattern they missed the convert. Don Harriet registered his second TD of the day when he managed to get across the goal line to knot the count 18-18.

A completed convert at this stage would have given Quebec the close victory but again it was missed and the final whistle ended the game in a 18-18 tie.

Gilles Villemure is standout for Vancouver Canucks in Western loop, rated outstanding rookie goalie

VANCOUVER (CP)—Around his home in Trois Rivieres, Que., during the summer Gilles Villemure is a rookie harness race driver. There he drives standardbreds from the seat of a bicycle-wheeled sulky.

But during the winter he is a hockey player and he drives Western League forwards nuts from a hunched-over position in goal for Vancouver Canucks.

Villemure originally was a big disappointment to Canucks coach Max McNab, who walked in pre-season interviews that New York Rangers weren't coming through with the player help he needed.

Jack McCartan and Marcel Paille attended the joint Rangers-Canucks camp, but McCartan was tabbed for Los Angeles and Paille for Baltimore.

That left Vancouver with the 22-year-old rookie who toiled last year with Long Island of the Eastern Amateur League.

GREAT START

Villemure looked great in exhibition games. He even shut out Seattle Totems 2-0 in the three-game pre-season series.

When he did it again—in an identical score—in the Canucks' home opener, the announcers began to look up the proper pronunciation of Gilles—it's Jeal.

The next game was against Spokane Comets. Villemure shut them out 4-0.

"The Comets came out hitting and they came out shooting," McNab said after that one. "It was their home opener and they were after us."

"Gilles played the angles well all through the game and made some fine reflex stops, particularly when Spokane's big line of Max Meklik, Gerry Brisson and TEAM FORMED — Abbie Norris and his brother, Allie, both well known hockey players of former years have decided to return to active duty in hockey. They will play with the National Hotel Maroons in the Waterloo Industrial Hockey League.

Richard, Pennington, Delvecchio tie for honors

MONTREAL (CP)—Ab McDonald, lanky left winger for Chicago Black Hawks, rifled in three goals and picked up three assists in National Hockey League play last week to move up among the league's top seven scorers.

Official NHL statistics released today show McDonald picked up a whopping six points in three games to join three other players with eight-point totals — teammate Bill (Red) Hay, Bernie (Boom Boom) Geoffrion of Montreal and Murray Oliver of Boston.

Hay was another big gainer, moving up five points on three goals and two assists. Geoffrion picked up two points and Oliver was held scoreless in Boston's only game.

The scoring leadership is held jointly by Henri Richard of Montreal, Cliff Pennington of Boston and Alex Delvecchio of Detroit. All have 10 points.

Richard is on top officially because his points comprise five goals and five assists. The other two have 3-7 record.

Detroit Red Wings preserved their unbeaten record last week with a 3-3 tie at Boston and 2-0 shutout of the visiting Toronto Maple Leafs. The team now has five wins and two ties for a total of 12 points.

Much of the credit for Detroit's record goes to Terry Sawchuk, the league's top goaltender with a 1.28 goals-against average.

Sawchuk has allowed only nine goals in seven games and has registered two shutouts.

The Hawks have spent a total of 135 minutes in the penalty box, most penalized team in the league so far this season.

Most penalized player is Chicago's Larry Hillman, who has received 22 minutes in penalties.

Yankees ship veteran Bob Turley to Los Angeles Angels for player to be named, Belinsky mentioned

NEW YORK (AP)—Have the world champion New York Yankees entered the Bo Belinsky sweepstakes by shipping veteran Bob Turley to Los Angeles Angels?

That was the first question that popped to mind in baseball circles Monday after the Yankees sent Turley, outstanding hurler in the majors four years ago, to the Angels on a conditional basis.

Yankee general manager Roy Hamey said the Angels will give New York a mutually satisfactory player by opening day of the 1963 American League season if Los Angeles retains the 32-year-old right-hander.

Is Belinsky involved?

No, says Belinsky. "I'd think they'd make a better deal."

No, says an Angel spokesman. "Bo Belinsky won't be in the deal."

"Everybody's going to think it's Belinsky," another Angel spokesman told Los Angeles general manager Fred Haney when he was notified of Turley's acquisition. And Haney replied: "It is not Belinsky."

Haney said the spokesman added he did not know who would go to the Yankees if Turley is kept.

The spokesman was prodded by reporters with this question: "Then it could be Belinsky?"

"I suppose," he replied, "but we're not giving him away just for the sake of giving him away."

Belinsky, 25-year-old left-hander who wound up his first season with the Angels in a considerable amount of hot water, is expected to be packaged for shipment sometime before the 1963 season gets under way. The rumor started after some late-night escapades that angered Angel officials and earned him the tag "Bright Lights."

Turley won 17 games for the Yankees in 1955. He followed with 8-4 and 13-6 records before blossoming into a 21-game winner in 1958 when he won the Cy Young Award as the outstanding pitcher in the majors. Turley has been on a downhill path ever since.

Branch Rickey rejoins his former club, St. Louis Cardinals, after 20 years, in charge of development

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Branch Rickey rejoined St. Louis baseball Cardinals today after a separation of 20 years and announced it would take a miracle for the Cards to win the pennant next year.

The bushy-browed, 80-year-old Rickey sat in an office at Busch Stadium and said his new job is the production and development of players.

"This club can't be traded into a pennant," Rickey said. "There aren't that many players around for trade. The players have got to be developed."

When told that a new baseball stadium is scheduled for completion in St. Louis in 1964, Rickey said "it would be a great thing if the team could be a contender by then."

Rickey said he looks upon St. Louis as home. He worked as field manager, business manager and vice president from 1917 until 1942.

Two of Rickey's most noteworthy contributions to baseball were the development of the farm system and the bringing of Negroes into the major leagues.

He spent 26 years with the Cardinals and helped develop players who won nine pennants and six world championships between 1926 and 1946. Then he went to Brooklyn where his teams won two pennants in eight years.

Rickey left Pittsburgh Pirates in 1955 and recently was president of the Continental League, a proposed third major circuit. The league never made it, but it forced the two major leagues to expand from eight clubs to 10.

Coach Dube to have new faces in lineup for big game with Vics, workout slated for this evening

Sherbrooke Beavers will resume training this evening at the Arena and from all reports it would seem that Coach Gilles Dube will have a few new men on hand. Following Sunday's loss to Drummondville the local mentor wasn't satisfied with the showing of several of his men and contacts have already being made to secure reinforcements.

Coach Dube had counted on a few extra men for last Sunday but late Saturday the players in question decided not to sign. Pierre Trottiere and Dicaire from Montreal were two Coach Dube had figured on but for some reason they turned down the terms from the local club.

The Beavers have several cases pending and Coach Dube figures he can reach terms with a few before Sunday. A couple of good men is all that Coach Dube figures he needs and it is expected he can pick them up in the near future.

Coach Dube wasn't satisfied with the showing of some of his older men Sunday. They seemed content to take things easy this evening and they failing to drive as much as they should be in for a real hard are capable of. The defense and workout. Coach Dube wants to go all out to work overtime around his men into better shape to the fact that time after time they were left alone when reason for the tough period their mates failed to cover this evening.

THERE'S NO EQUAL TO OLDSMOBILE!

Super 88 Holiday Sedan

Whitewall tires optional at extra cost

Year after year, Oldsmobile's special brand of quality is taken for granted—by everybody except Olds. And here for '63, Oldsmobile has again allowed no compromise. The wheelbase is a full size 123" (126" in the Ninety-Eight)—the interiors are, as always, truly luxurious in room and appointments—the ride and response even more dramatic. Experience the result—you'll agree no car offering less can truly be called a "luxurious", "big" or even a "generous" automobile.

NEW "TILT-AWAY" WHEEL ADJUSTS TO 7 POSITIONS*

The flick of a lever—and Oldsmobile's new "Tilt-Away" steering wheel swings up for easier entry and exit. Even while driving, you select the wheel position that suits you best—could anything be more comfortable?

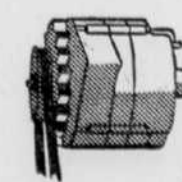

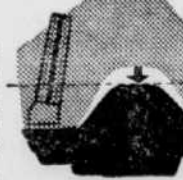

NEW SELF-ADJUSTING BRAKES GIVE SMOOTH, SAFE STOPS

Oldsmobile's efficient brakes make their own adjustments in 1963. Back up—stop—and there you are! Extra convenience, increased safety... that's the '63 Olds.

MORE ROOM WITH NEW FLATTER FLOOR

Oldsmobile's new flatter floor makes more room for the man in the middle (thanks to a 44 per cent smaller transmission tunnel!) Olds demonstrates what "legroom" really means.

NEW DELCOTRON GENERATOR KEEPS BATTERY FULLY CHARGED

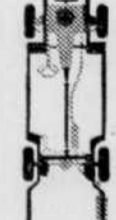

Even at idling speeds, the new Delcotron Generator charges the battery. Keeps it fully charged for those must-start mornings—and prolongs battery life, too!

*Optional at extra cost

NEW EXTENDED-LIFE EXHAUST SYSTEM RESISTS CORROSION

Excess heat and corrosive acids can cut down your muffler life. Olds does something about it with special aluminizing of muffler parts plus a heavier gauge steel in the tailpipe.

GUARD-BEAM FRAME ENSURES QUIET, SMOOTH RIDE

Oldsmobile's famous ride doesn't just happen. It's built on a solid foundation provided by the Guard-Beam frame—with the help of Vibration-Tuned Body Mountings at over 90 locations.

More than ever, there's "something extra" about owning an Olds.
