KEROSENE MAY BE USED SUCCESSFULLY

on stationary, tractor and marine engines, where the pull is constant, but engine builders are a unit in declaring that none of the so-called "kerosene-burners" will ever be a success unless the motor is built especially to burn the heavy fuel.

The carburetor manufacturer has been sweating blood in an effort to meet the conditions and difficulties involved in atomizing or vaporizing low grade fuels; they have added cams, springs, levers and jets and the only result is a complicated carburetor, and you do not get the mileage today that you did several years ago.

THE NEW U. & J. CARBURETOR

solves the gasoline question and the carburetor problem. The device is simplicity itself and does not contain a single moving part, other than the float and throttle, and will give more power and speed on about one-half the gasoline required by any other make of carburetor, regardless of name or price. We also guarantee that any car can be started with the U. & J. Carburetor in zero weather without the use of any primer or other devices for cold weather starting.

We appreciate the fact that there are numerous devices on the market, claiming to do these stunts but there is only one Carburetor with a new principle, and all we ask is that you let us give you a demonstration on your own FORD CAR.

Partridge cannot be shot or hunted in Vermont prior to September 21st, 1921. The season is closed for the next two years. The open season for duck began September 16th and closes January 1st. The open season for rabbits began September 15th, and the limit for one day is five. The season and limit are the same for gray squirrels.

The Royal Bank of Canada has purchased the Duval block at the corner of Railroad and Main streets. The building is of solid brick construction, three stories and basement. It was built four years ago at a cost of nineteen or twenty thousand dollars and the sale this week was at $30,000. The difference of approximately $10,000 would no more than cover the increase in the cost of building materials and labor since 1915. The location is one of the best in the village.

The annual matches of the Stanstead County Plowman's Association will be held at Lee Farm, Rock Island, on Tuesday, October 1st. These matches are of great benefit to those who wish to excel in this line of farm work. The annual dinner of the Association will be held at Rock Island in the evening. A. H. Moore of Dufferin Avenue is president of the Association this year.

Total population in the three villages 2,399, adult males 731, owners of homes 258. These figures compare very favorably with other similar localities, being about 5.4 per cent above the average.

The two-days auction sale at Maxime Molway's, Rose Hill, Sept. 11th and 12th, resulted in the transfer of over nine thousand dollars worth of property, but left a considerable portion unsold. Some of the stock was out at pasture and could not be secured and some unharvested crops were not available. Unless he can sell these to the purchaser of the farm, Mr. Molway will have another auction early in October. Fairly good prices were realized at the sale last week.

The Red Sox Junior baseball team went to Orleans Saturday and played the high school team. The local boys were up against fellows from 15 to 25 pounds heavier, and three or four years older, but notwithstanding the handicaps the boundary boys played a splendid game. Score 3 to 2 in favor of the Elephants. Johnson and Nason make a great junior battery, and every boy on the team knows and plays the game.

It is rather hard lines when a man has to resort to the courts or even newspaper publicity in order to establish his right name in common usage, but that is the predicament in which Moses Joyal finds himself. The matter came up when he called at this office to order some printing yesterday, and was asked which way he would have his name printed. There was a moment's hesitancy, and then the laconic reply: "Better put it Duff, nobody would know me if it were printed the other way; this thing bothers me almost to death. Will I have to go to the courts to get my right name?" We recommended an ad in the JOURNAL. Mr. Joyal is a builder, an industrious, painstaking workman, whom no one has to watch to get an honest day's work. He has a wife and a good-sized family of bright, healthy children, for whom he has built a splendid home at Prospect Park. Use his right name.

ROMPERS FOR THE KIDDIES

Suggestions of Suitable Materials and Decorations for Playtime and Dress Occasions.

The baby who is brought up without an intimate acquaintance with rompers is to be sympathized with. Never was there so comfortable a style, and now that decorative handwork has taken these wee garments under its wing, never has there been a more attractive style for the playtime of the littlest member of the family.

Materials for the rompers vary from flimsy to wash silk and include seersucker, chambray, cotton crepe, linen and unbleached muslin. All admit the decorative touch. It may be smocking, which in the case of soft materials, is always lovely. The smocking can be used to excellent advantage on the wash silks built on the regulation romper pattern. It gathers in the fullness at the front of the neck and at the bottom of the sleeves and is done, of course, in a contrasting color. Flesh color smocked in light blue is a fetching color scheme.

One model that is differently attractive has a kimono sleeve instead of the set-in variety. Another has bloomer legs instead of the opening right across the bottom, which, by the way, is better for very young children. The former kimono top uses, besides the blue daisies and outlined bluebird in the front, rows of feather-stitching to hold the fullness in the proper places and thus give the kimono cut a semblance of shape.

A contrasting belt of white with bunny and outlining in yellow gives the appearance of separate trousers to a bloomer model in tan chambray. Just contrasting frills of white and pearl buttons make another chambray model as dainty a little garment as one could wish. But the prize really must go to a little dainty affair in white silk with real Irish lace pleat edging around the collar and sleeve, then blue French knots to match the blue cross-stitched geese on its belt.

KEYNOTE OF DRESS

Some of the new mushroom hats have bandeaux inside.

Little belts of bright-colored ribbon are popular for the white costume.

Black satin ribbon is arranged in spiral fashion on a black satin gown.

Individuality is unquestionably the keynote of present season dressing.

Hatpins with flower heads of brilliantly varnished kid are a Paris novelty.

Few of them are now permitting themselves to be bound by ironical style rulings, either as to color or fabric, skirt length or width.

Crepé de chine has had so many songs sung in its favor that little needs to be said. It is the fabric that for centuries has been found by the Chinese to serve mankind well.

New silhouettes come and go, but a careful study of the sartorial scenery in any fashionable gathering place will convince the observer that the best dressed women are wearing what is becoming.

Pongee Popularity.

As sure as the coming of summer, pongee in some form appears. This year there are lovely pongee parasols. Some are mounted on brown frames and sticks, with no other trimming than brown cords on the handles and brown tassels on the ends. Another shows lovely blue butterflies embroidered all over the inside of the parasol, with blue cord and blue ends to the sticks.

TOMIFOBIA

Mr. and Mrs. D. E. Doran and daughter Mabel of Nashua, N.H., and Mrs. H. E. Wheeler (née Nellie Bigelow) of Waltham, Mass., who spent a week recently visiting their sister, Mrs. C. A. Baldwin, and brother, F. H. Bigelow, returned to their home on Saturday, Mrs. Wheeler stopping at Franklin, N.H., for a few days' visit with her sister, Mrs. E. A. Colburn, and family. They came by motor and report a most enjoyable trip.

Mr. Elmer Young returned from Sherbrooke hospital on Saturday, much improved in health.

Our school opened on Monday, Sept. 8th, with Mrs. Wolfe Libby as teacher. Mrs. Linda Yetter has returned home after a few days' visit with friends at Richmond.

On Saturday afternoon, Sept. 13th, Mrs. Oral Tiechurst and Miss Grace Tiechurst entertained at the cozy home of the former at a most enjoyable kitchen shower in honor of Miss Mary Miller on the occasion of her approaching marriage. The useful and pretty gifts were placed in a large basket appropriately decorated, which however, did not prove nearly large enough to hold all the gifts which consisted of nearly every article used in the kitchen. The basket was carried in by the hostesses and placed before the bride-to-be, and was presented by Miss Ruth Brown, in a few well-chosen words. The gifts were unwrapped, and the original verses which accompanied some of them, were read aloud by the bride-to-be, amid much merriment. Over forty guests were present. Very nice refreshments were served by the hostesses, assisted by friends. The afternoon was spent in a social way, pleasantly varied with a few Victrola selections and several piano solos by Miss Lena Taylor. Miss Miller is a deservedly popular young lady, and has been much entertained prior to her marriage, a linen shower at Griffin and a miscellaneous shower at Beebe having been given in her honor. Before the guests departed Miss Miller cordially thanked the donors for their kindness and good wishes.

A card party and social evening will be held at the home of Mrs. Alexander Mackay, Thursday evening, September 25th. A cordial invitation is extended to all. Members of the Homemakers Club are requested to bring cards and the usual refreshments.

FITCH BAY

The following is a letter dated Aug. 1st from Rev. F. G. LeGallia who left this parish in June for a year's missionary work on the Labrador. It will be of interest to his former parishioners.

Mutton Bay, Labrador, Que., August 1st, 1919.

"As I cannot write individually to all my late parishioners at Fitch Bay, Georgeville, and Griffin, from whom I parted with such regret in the month of June in answer to the Church's call for missionary work on the Labrador, I shall endeavor to write a general letter to let you all know that after five days' sailing on board a small steamer from Quebec, named rather suggestively the 'Labrador,' I arrived without mishap at Mutton Bay, the headquarters of the mission, on July 19th, my birthday, which by a strange coincidence was the same date that I left it fifteen years before. I received a very warm welcome from the people, which contrasted sharply with the frigid temperature of the atmosphere, there being several large pieces of ice floating about in the water, and some snow was still to be seen on the land; whether it was from the past winter, or had remained all through my absence, I know not, but there it was in the same hollows and crevices where I saw it fifteen years ago. So while you may be almost sweltering with 90 in the shade, I am almost freezing at 30 in the sun. However, the air, though cool is very bracing, inducing good, sound sleep, and improving my appetite to such an extent, that I find myself gaining in weight at the alarming rate of a pound a week. If that keeps up for fifty-two weeks, you will not recognize me when I return, as I shall have grown out of all proportion to my former self, due, I suppose to the complete change of diet. Here, it is practically all game and fish. And delicious fish it is, eaten the day it is taken from the salt water. I will mention a few, not to make your mouth water, but to let you know that I am not faring at all badly. I have, had, since my arrival, such members of the flimsy tribe as salmon, trout, halibut, cod, haddock, and caplan; and some without fins, as lobster, clam, scollop, mussel, etc., a very pleasing variety. And game of almost as many various kinds. So you see that in regard to food I am faring very well.

There are many things, however, one has to do without. In fact, the art of doing without is the best known and most practiced of all the arts on the Labrador. The codfish, which is the staple means of livelihood on this coast, 'struck' as they say here, in large quantities, the day after my arrival. I was therefore able to see it at its best. Four and five boatloads were taken at one time from the trap-nets. To catch, dress, and dry these fish means much hard work for the fisherfolk, who sometimes go for a whole week with only two or three hours of sleep a night. I wonder how the 'Eastern Townships' farmer would like that? Some grouching then.

There are no slackers here, everybody works. Children of even six and seven years of age turn the fish on the rocks. They are to be found in almost every home. The words of the marriage service, 'thy wife shall be as the fruitful vine,' are certainly true of the Labrador wife. Two things she has in abundance—work and children; and such large families, twelve being not uncommon, and sometimes fifteen, or even eighteen. Race suicide is no problem here. The problem is how to provide food and clothing for the many who come. I find, however, that conditions have changed greatly for the better during the last fifteen years. They have gone some, like the rest of the world. Fish has been plentiful, and since the beginning of the war the price has been exceptionally high, an increase of fully three hundred per cent. As a result the people have made their homes more comfortable, and live and dress better. Then the Government is undertaking a larger part in the education of the children, so life, on the whole, is on the up-grade. There is, too, in my ministerial section of the Labrador, a Grenfell Hospital, with a capacity of fourteen beds, up-to-date equipment, resident doctor and nurse, large decked motor boat on which the doctor travels periodically along the coast, one-hundred and fifty miles east and west, bringing patients to the hospital at Harrington Harbor. It is certainly a great blessing to these people, and has been the means of prolonging many a life, and preventing many a near tragedy. I am taking some snapshots of interesting people, places and things, and some day I trust will be able to bring the Labrador and its people before you much more vividly than I can hope to do by letter.

With the promise of another later on, I will close this, in order to prepare for a month's missionary tour, which I hope, D.V., to undertake tomorrow."

Jest and Joke.

A joke is often rougher and less delicate than a jest, as a practical joke, but jest often suggests more of lightness or scoffing than a joke, as to turn everything into jest. Joke is the word to use where action is implied, while jest is generally applied to something said.

He was a member of the 5th Vermont regiment. Total abstinence from the use of tobacco and intoxicating liquor is given as the reason for his long life.

38 members of the 3rd Vermont regiment of the civil war attended the 34th annual meeting at St. Johnsbury recently. Captain Horace French of West Lebanon, N.H., was elected president, Charles H. PUBLIC HIGHWAYS

DRAG ROADS AT PROPER TIME

Fully as Important as It Is That Highways Should Be Done Right—Keep Ruts From Forming.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

It is fully as important that a road be dragged at the right time as it is that the dragging be properly done. Furthermore, the difficulties involved in prescribing definite rules for determining when dragging should be done are equally as great as those already encountered in attempting to define how it should be done. Only very general statements concerning this feature of the work can properly be made here, and much must be left to the experienced judgment of those who decide when the dragging of any particular road is to be started and when it is to be stopped.

The rule frequently cited that all earth roads should be dragged immediately after every rain, is in many cases entirely impracticable and is also very misleading because of the conditions which it fails to contemplate. It is true that there are many road surfaces composed of earth or earthy material which do not become very muddy under traffic, even during long rainy seasons, and since such surfaces usually tend to harden very rapidly as soon as the weather clears up, it may be desirable to drag roads of this kind immediately after a rain. Such roads, however, would not ordinarily need to be dragged after every rain, because of the strong tendency that they naturally possess of holding their shape. On the other hand, many varieties of clay and soil tend to become very muddy under only light traffic after very moderate rains, and it is evident that roads constructed of such materials could not always be successfully dragged immediately after a rain. Sometimes, in fact, it may be necessary to wait until several consecutive clear days have elapsed after a long rainy spell before the road is sufficiently dried out to keep ruts from forming almost as rapidly as they can be filled by dragging.

Well-constructed sand-clay topsoil roads should not often become muddy after they are once well compacted. They may become seriously rutted, however, under heavy traffic, during rainy weather, and are almost sure to need dragging several times each year. Such roads should ordinarily be dragged as soon after a rain as practicable as otherwise the surface soon becomes dry and hard, so that it is necessary to do considerably more dragging in order to fill the ruts. Furthermore, the material which the drag moves will not compact readily unless it contains a considerable amount of moisture.

Gravel roads can be effectively maintained with a road drag only when the gravel composing the surface is fine grained and contains a considerable quantity of clay earth. Gravel road surfaces in which this condition prevails not infrequently get badly out of shape during wet weather, and may sometimes require considerably more attention than well-constructed sand-clay topsoil roads. The time for dragging gravel roads is unquestionably while they are wet. In fact, the best results are sometimes obtained by doing the dragging after the road has become thoroughly soaked and while it is still raining.

In general, it may be said that the best time to drag any type of road is when the material composing the surface contains sufficient moisture to be compacted readily after it has been moved by the drag and is not sufficiently wet for the traffic following the drag to produce mud.

Change in Road Sentiment.

When we consider the fact that such a large proportion of our population are owners of automobiles it is not difficult to understand the change in sentiment in regard to road building that has recently developed.

Big Saving in Hauling.

If our main highways were improved with permanent surface, we would certainly save 8 or 9 cents per ton mile in hauling the immense interstate commerce that each year originates from agriculture, mine and forest.

PROTECTING HORSES FROM STABLE FLIES

Source of Keen Annoyance to Animals in Hot Weather.

Most Logical Method of Abating Nuisance Is to Eliminate All Breeding Places—Coal Tar Sprays Are Recommended.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Stable flies are a source of keen annoyance to work animals during the heat of summer. Every owner who has the welfare of the dumb beasts at heart should strive to alleviate as far as possible the discomforts to which the horses are exposed.

The most logical method of abating the fly nuisance is to eliminate all breeding places, such as manure piles. Manure should be kept in fly-tight pits or bins until such time as it can be hauled to the fields. Pits should be conveniently located so the manure can be easily thrown in at the time of cleaning and so constructed that it can be readily removed. It is essential that flies be prevented from reaching the manure, but, as some of them will, even though great care is exercised, it is advisable to place a fly-trap on the pit.

The coal-tar sprays used in combating the fly evil in the dairy stable are also efficient in driving the winged pests away from the horses. Among the best of these is a solution of 100 parts of fish oil, 500 parts of oil of tar, and 1 part of crude carbolic acid. It may be prepared at home at a cost of about 35 cents a gallon. This spray, as well as kerosene emulsion and other fly repellants containing coal-tar products, fish oil, resin, and oil of tar, are best applied with an inexpensive spray pump. It is preferable to give the horses a hasty spraying early each morning before they go to work. This brings best results from the use of the fly eradicator.

For general comfort of the work animals when they come from the field at night it is recommended that after the harness has been removed each animal be given a sponge bath with a solution of cool salt water. In case there are any work calls or shoulder sores, these injuries should be treated with white lotion, which is one of the most healing and soothing preparations of its kind for use in warm weather.

STORAGE LOSS OF POTATOES

Farmers and Dealers Are Preventing Enormous Wastes by Building More Improved Houses.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Importance of modern sweet potato storage houses, such as have been designed by the United States department of agriculture, in which potatoes can be kept with practically no loss, is shown by the enormous waste resulting from improper storage. South

Interior of Satisfactory Potato Storage House With Earthen Side Walls.

Carolina in 1917, because of disease in the field and in storage, lost 60 per cent of its crop—that portion being valued at $4,688,110.

This state produces about 12.5 per cent of the sweet potatoes raised in the United States, and the crop ranks fourth in the state in value, being surpassed only by cotton, corn, and tobacco. Storage losses through the South are being greatly reduced, as the farmers and dealers are continually building both community and individual storage houses of the improved type.

LOSS OF VALUABLE MANURE

One-Half of Plant Food Value Lost When Left in Open Yard During Summer Months.

Manure left in the open yard through the summer months may lose one-half its plant-food value due to fermentation and leaching. Rotted manure which has been saved carefully will be richer in plant-food elements, ton for ton, than fresh manure. It requires one and one-half to three tons of fresh manure to make a ton of rotted manure, which is reduced greatly and the total quantity of plant-food elements also is decreased by fermentation and exposure. Except in special cases and for certain crops or gardening conditions, there is no advantage in rotting the manure; better apply it fresh from the stable before any loss occurs.

ALL TO BE HONORED ALIKE

No Distinction in Headstones Over British Officers and Men Who Died in the War.

Speaking of the resolutions adopted by the imperial war graves commission, a writer in the London Times says: "From the first it was laid down by the commission that no distinction should be made in the form or character of memorial to officers and men lying in the same cemetery. It was felt that what was done for one should be done for all, and that all, whatever their military rank or position in civil life, should have equal treatment so far as their graves were concerned. Were the erection of monuments left to individual initiative, probably those of the well-to-do would overshadow those of their poorer comrades, to the loss of the whole sense of common sacrifice and service. The place for the individual monument, it was thought, should be at home. Therefore the creation of individual headstones of a single uniform pattern has been decided upon. These headstones will bear the badge of the regiment or unit to which the soldier belonged, together with the name, rank, regiment, and date of death. They should be easy of identification, and will perpetuate the present effect produced by the wooden crosses. As a central monument in each cemetery a cross and memorial stone are to be set up, simple but impressive in character. An inscription for the stone has been selected by Rudyard Kipling."

OLD-TIME TOOTH POWDER AD

Printed in Scottish Newspaper in 1660, in All Probability It Was the First.

One of those individuals who has leisure enough to dig into the records of days long past, has unearthed what is said to be the first advertisement ever published of a preparation for cleansing and preserving the teeth. It appeared 238 years ago, and, though the language is a bit involved, the writer needed no lessons from modern publicity experts in claiming virtues for his product. The ad was printed in the Mercurius Politicus of Leith, Scotland, in 1660, and reads:

"Most Excellent and Approved Dentifrice to scour and cleanse the Teeth, making them white as Ivory; preserves from Toothache; so that being constantly used, the parties using it are never troubled with the Toothache; it fastens the Teeth, sweetens the Breath and preserves the Mouth and Gums from Canker and Impostumes. Made by Robert Turner, Gentleman; and the rights are only to be had at Thomas Rooker, Stationer, at the Holy Lamb at the East end of St. Paul's Church, near the School, in sealed papers at 12d the paper. The reader is desired to beware of counterfeiters."

Warfare Little Changed.

When General Pershing saw the dangerous salient in the German line, he put in the American army instantly, meeting the emergency as Caesar met the rush of the Nervii in that same northeast France. When he encountered the complicated fortifications, trenches, pits and tangles of the Argonne, he employed precisely the kind of tactics to win through that Xenophon employed at the River Centrites more than 2,800 years ago and the same that Caesar used in his triumphant campaign against Vercingetorix. The details change, the principles remain. Napoleon summed up the unaltering art in 78 maxims, and the last of these declares that the only way to become a great captain is to study the campaigns of the great generals of all times.

War Horrors.

Two women were talking on a bus. "My hair became so gray during the war," said the first woman. "I hope it will be all right after awhile." "I can understand," said the second woman. "It was enough to make any one's hair gray. I am sure you won't add any more gray hairs now that peace has come." "Oh," said the first woman candidly, "it wasn't exactly because of the war that my hair became gray—that is, it wasn't because of worry; but, you know, the preparation I used to use—was imported—and during the war I couldn't get any of it. I had to let the gray hairs have their way—but now I hope it will be different," she ended brightly.

A Crying Need.

"There ort to be a school here for training young footpads," said Sandstorm Smith, the well-known cattle baron of Rampage, Okla., who is temporarily in Kansas City's midst. "After having grown accustomed to the regular fashions in such functions it pesters me to be fooled with by ignorant amateurs. Half of the time, with their jiggling and stuttering, I don't know whether they are trying to hold me up or act out some sort of a charade."—Kansas City Star.

KEPT BUSY DODGING SHELLS

Negro Soldier Tells Amusing Story of His Game of Leap Frog "All Over France."

The inferno of hot work in the line evoked the religious fervor of negro troops, which never is far from the surface, and this aspect of the fighting still occupies a prominent place in the recollection of wounded negro soldiers returning to this country.

"When Fritz spotted us hell bus' wide open an' tu'n all dem onregret fellers into ragin' prayeh meetin'," said a sergeant. "Den we onlimbeh en smite ol' Satan wid de swo'd o' Gideon; dem Fritzies, dey jes' skedaddle ev'ry' w'ich ways."

Private Charles Walker of the Five Hundred and Seventeenth Infantry, a "ragin' prayeh meetin'" of one, was cited for his devotion to duty in carrying messages under fire when all the other runners of his outfit had been killed or wounded.

"I jes' kep' a-prayin' an' a-runnin' an' a-dodgin'," he said, "an' the Lord sure kep' step wid me, but I don't see how he done it. I jes' natchully played hide an' seek, en leap frog wid shells all ovah France, I reckon."

"But w'en de biggest of all come a-whoppin' along I wuz right out in de open an' no shell hole nigh. Honest to goodness, hit wuz ez big ez me an' a dern sight mo' sure weah hit wuz gwine. I flop like a rabbit an' fall'y cuddle de yeth—reckon I landed quicker'n dat ol' shell did."

"I jes' lay theah a-talkin' to Jesus hard ez I could en a-watchin' dat ol' shell all de time. I seen her fall'y humpin' he'self outen de groun' er-swellin' to bus'. But thank de good Lord, she quit er-humpin' an' er-swellin' and I crep' off fo' she made up 'er mind w'at she gwine to do nex'."

SENTIMENT IN THE TRENCHES

Soldier's Reason for Not Shooting Hare Was a Decided Reflection on the Hun.

This tale comes from a soldier who was one of the first Yanks to reach the front:

A big, burly, good-humored chap was with me on outpost duty and we were lying listening in a wood where there were several clumps of underbrush in our neighborhood. We were thinking of another move forward when we spied a large French hare running straight toward us. He was coming as directly as possible away from the enemy lines.

Although there was no attack from either side in progress at that moment, the desultory rattle of some machine gun and the occasional crack of a rifle rendered it safe to try a shot at any object without fear of discovery.

"Hit him or I will," said I. "Don't shoot," was the answer, "the poor beggar thinks he has a better chance for life coming over to us than he has going in the Huns' direction."

That bit of sentiment knocked me cold and I could not stir the trigger. The hare disappeared in the underbrush and I felt convinced that his sympathies were with us. It would have been a different story had it been the spiked cap of a Boche we had sighted.

Automobiles in Canada.

In 1914 the number of automobiles in Canada was 67,415, increasing to 189,820 in 1917. It is estimated that the number of cars in use at the close of the present year will be approximately 250,000. With an estimated population of 8,000,000 this gives a proportion of one car for every thirty-two inhabitants, as against one for every 118 inhabitants four years ago. Statistics have been compiled showing the occupations of car owners throughout the country, and from this it is apparent that about 90 per cent of all the cars in use are owned by persons whose occupations are such that the automobile in their hands is a utility enabling them to do more and better work. Nearly one-half of the cars in use are the property of farmers.

Will Sell Seadler.

An echo of the German sea raiders comes from the South Pacific. There on the coast of Lord Howe island lies the wreck of the Seadler, of Atlantic fame two years ago. According to reports, the raider is to be sold by auction by the French government. Though her hull is badly damaged the Seadler's engines are in good condition, and there is also a large quantity of hawsers, tanks, and other equipment. The famous raider was at one time the barque Pass of Balmaha, of 1,571 tons. After her capture by the Germans the latter fitted her out with powerful Diesel oil engines of 120 horsepower.

Katie.

"Katie" is the soldiers' stuttering song. When little Mary first heard it she was amazed for she did not think that anyone except her little playmate Ruth stuttered. But when she heard it again and again she began to understand its nature. One day after hearing it she went to her older sister. "Margaret," she began, "don't you bet Ruth could sing 'Katie' better than anybody you know?"

Boa Constrictor Mascot.

An officer of the fleet just returned from abroad says the queerest ship mascot he ever saw was a full-sized boa constrictor on H. M. S. Vallant, one of the dreadnoughts of the British grand fleet—long enough, he says, to use for a homeward-bound pennant, if slightly flattened out.

Only a GOOD White Lead can hold World Supremacy for 200 Years

TWO hundred years ago—when the sign-painter was an artist of every high standing—the best white lead for any kind of painting was Brandram's Genuine B.B. Today, the most fastidious painters still choose this world-famous white lead for their most particular work.

Brandram's Genuine B.B. White Lead

The reason is not far to see. Most white leads are produced by one process of corrosion—such as the so-called "Old-Dutch" process, "Chamber" process, or some more or less mechanical process. But Brandram's Genuine B.B. White Lead is a combination of different processes. Thus, particles of different shapes and sizes are merged so as to form a product of wonderful smoothness, capacity and covering power.

Measured in terms of cost per hundred pounds, Brandram's Genuine B.B. White Lead is the most expensive lead on the Canadian market. But, considered from the standpoint of covering capacity and length of service, it easily outclasses all other white leads, and proves the most economical in the end.

The formal opening of the College took place on Tuesday. The registration is said to have been the largest yet for any opening day. Yesterday over fifty pupils had been registered at the Bugbee Business College.

During the summer vacation Mr. and Mrs. J. D. McFadyen visited relatives in Ontario, making the trip by motor.

They went via Burlington, Vt., ferried to Chazy, and after a pleasant run over splendid roads through Northern New York, crossed the St. Lawrence to Brockville. From that point West through Kingston, encountered poor roads. They visited Toronto, Lindsay, Hamilton and Kitchener, but the Ontario roads proved so unsatisfactory that they decided to return via the U.S. The homeward journey was made via Niagara Falls, Rochester, Syracuse, Utica and Schenectady, thence north through Saratoga Springs to Burlington. The route from Niagara to Schenectady was over an old Indian trail, but the last trace of the Indian has been obliterated by the onward march of civilization, and it is difficult to imagine the connection between the broad concrete highway of the present and the foot-paths of the historic Red man. The road is about as smooth as a floor, and one of the finest on the continent.

Edward Audinwood and family received from the Derby Line post office Wednesday morning eleven letters returned from France, which were written to their son, Charles E. Audinwood, many of them over a year ago. There were months that no word came from home. Scolding and criticism is foolish as the war is over. One indication of efficiency in the U. S. army postal service is the fact that letters were not lost.

DERBY ACADEMY NOTES

We are glad to see the sun shining again.

The sophomores were very busy last week trying to keep track of the freshmen but somehow the freshmen were always successful in having class meetings.

Miss Edna Woodard '22 and Miss Elsie Royce '22 returned to D.A. this week.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Case '14 of Springfield, Vt., were in town last week. While here they visited D.A.

Another diamond is shining in the class of '18.

Too bad the sophomores have such weak lungs that they have to use an automobile horn to make themselves heard.

At last the terrible strain on the freshmen is over. Now, really, it wasn't half as bad as you hoped, was it?

A new cement sidewalk is being made from the main walk to the academy steps. A very great improvement. Its appreciation will be shown by its use.

Eighteen pupils, both girls and boys, are taking chemistry this year. We expect great discoveries as long as the girls are taking it.

The school picture was taken last Wednesday. A sample print shows them to be very good. The only trouble is that a great many students were absent.

The freshmen are starting out all right. They practiced their yell four miles from home.

Stop! Look! Listen! A committee has been appointed to arrange a programme for Field Day which will occur in the more or less near future. Watch the bulletin board.

Thursday the freshmen certainly got ahead of the sophomores when by some planning they had a car waiting in front of D.A. for them at 4 o'clock and immediately after being dismissed from school they got into the car. One of the sophomore boys whose ear was near by, got there before they started and it resulted in a wild ride for the freshmen, followed by sophomores, to Derby Line, where the sophomores gave up the chase and the freshmen succeeded in practicing their class yell.

Miss Mildred E. Ware '19 who has been working in the town clerk's office, spent a few days in Burlington. From there she went to Portland, Me., to spend the remainder of her vacation with her aunt.

Sept. 8th, Percy Fellows '16 returned to Middlebury where he will resume his studies in the college and also teach one class in biology in the high school. This work is to give him college credit.

The boys have caught the basket ball fever already.

Edith Cowles '16, George Cowles, Ruth Moulton and Alden Hay '18 have returned to Middlebury to resume their work in the college.

On Saturday evening, Sept. 13, W. Percy Kelley ex-'17 held at his home "a soldiers' reunion." There were present seven young men, former students of D.A. Those who were privileged to meet with them enjoyed the evening at least as much as the "veterans" did.

In spite of rainy weather a fair number of students and townspeople attended the freshmen reception Friday evening, Sept. 12th. An amusing programme had been prepared by the fourth year class, Iva Nason '22 acting as master of ceremonies. The freshmen entered into the fun heartily and gave their yell with a spirit we hope they will continue to show throughout the next four years.

MAGOG

Condensed on account of late arrival Mr. E. W. Bracey of Bolton Center and Miss Lizzie Sandell of Magog were married in the Methodist Church on Thursday, Sept. 11th, Rev. S. W. Boyd officiating. The young couple left on the evening train for Sherbrooke and Montreal.

On Wednesday evening the choir, of which Miss Sandell was a member, presented her a casserole, and other organizations of the church gave a Nippon china tea set of 36 pieces.

The banquet tendered the soldiers at the Catholic Church on Thursday evening last was a very pleasing and successful function. Tables were laid for 400 people and others were served afterwards. Creed and nationality were forgotten and all enjoyed a social hour.

BEEBE

Sunday evening, Sept. 21st, the W. H. and F. M. Society of the Advent Church will hold the service which was postponed last Sunday evening on account of the illness of Mrs. J. F. Longland who was to have charge of the service, and whom we trust may be able to be present next Sunday evening, and give an address. Special music will be provided for the occasion. All are welcome.

Mrs. Mabel Taylor spent the week-end at her home at Ayer's Cliff. Miss Ada Longland accompanied her, both returning home Monday.

E. M. Campbell is better, being able to be about the house. We hope to soon see him out on our streets again.

A very appetizing supper was served in the dining room.

FALL AND WINTER COATS

all bought early enough to get the very lowest prices and enable us to save our customers several dollars on the least expensive ones. The cheaper ones cannot be duplicated at all; the more expensive ones cost now from three to fifteen dollars more than we paid for them. Ladies' Coats, Well Made and Good Material, priced $12.50, $15.00, $17.50, $22.50, $25.00 and up. Wooltex Coats priced $22.50, $25.00, $29.50 and up.

There is nothing offered that compares in value with the Wooltex Coats, because their whole coat season was figured on materials that cost them only about one-half of the present prices of materials. On all re-orders we have to pay extra for the higher prices paid the labor, and no coat can be duplicated if they have closed out the material. Buy your Fall Coat when you can get a Wooltex for the same price you will have to pay later for cheaper made coats.

Fine Tailored Suits at $32.50 and up

Our prices are only possible because we are sharing our profit with our customers by marking all suits from $2.50 to $15.00 less than their actual values. There is nothing to be gained by waiting as prices are bound to go higher.

Tricolette, Tricotine, Silks, Serges and Jersey Dresses

We never bought half as many dresses any season before, as we knew from the prices of materials that all dresses must go very much higher, and we are getting notices that we can not duplicate any of these dresses at the same prices. The money we have saved will be given to our dress customers who buy early enough to get one bought early.

Silk Poplin Dresses priced	$12.50, $15.00, $17.50, $22.50
Silk Dresses priced	19.50, 22.50, 25.00 and up to $50.

Crepe de Chine Waists priced	$5.00 to 12.50

The Basement Store

Offers many very interesting articles for the colder weather. At this time everyone begins to think about bedding and we are prepared with Comfortables, Blankets, Sheets, Pillow Slips and White Quilts, all bought at the time they were the lowest this spring so we can sell at less than would be possible if we had to buy today.

BLANKETS

50x72 at $2.00, white and grey
60x76 at 2.95, " " "
64x80 at 3.50, " " "
66x80 at 3.95 and $5.00 white, grey and tan.
Handsome Plaid Blankets at $5.00, $5.95 and up to $8.95

We are offering a bale of Single Blankets, 66x80, grey, tan and a few white ones, bought direct from the mill and some of them slightly damaged. These blankets will be just what is wanted for sheets later and would cost regularly at least $2.00 a piece. We offer this lot at the following prices.

Damaged $1.19, Slightly Damaged $1.29, Perfect $1.39

There are not enough of these blankets to last very long at the prices we are offering them at and we will not be able to get any more this fall. Beautiful Wool Blankets, some of them priced up to $15.00 and $16.50.

A Splendid Stock of Comfortables all priced as low as last year, but worth very much more; this is because we bought them early.

White Quilts, Crib Size, Single Bed, Three Quarters Bed Size, and Full Bed Sizes, Plain Hemmed, Scallop, Square or Cut Corners, and all priced at less than the present values.

Sheets and Pillow Slips—While these goods are very scarce we have had a good stock all the time, and with the orders that have been booked for months beginning to come in we will be able to supply any demands you may have. There seems to be only higher prices ahead instead of lower ones, as we had hoped during the war, as the mill price of Lockwood 40-inch Cotton is 30¢ today, which is more than it retailed for at any time during the war. We shall keep a stock of the known brands of cottons on hand, sell them at the very lowest possible prices.

1500 Yards Mill End Ribbons

2 inches to 5 1/2 inches wide, Beautiful Shades, priced 10c., 15c., 19c., 25c., 35c. a yard. This is less than half their actual values and we have been notified by the mill that this is the last lot we will be able to get. If you buy these Ribbons for your Christmas work you will have more to spend for your other presents.

Our store is crowded with Extra Values to help during this time of high prices.

BAGDAD

Al Maidan, a New Street Through Center of Bagdad.

PEOPLE are apt to be disappointed in Bagdad, but this is not unnatural unless one bears clearly in mind that what one sees today is a comparatively modern Turco-Arabian town and not the city of romance of Arabian Nights entertainments that one has probably imagined. That old Bagdad, or rather Dar-es-Salam as it was originally called, was built in the year 763 A. D. by Al Mansur, the second Abbasid caliph, out of the ruins of the city of Ctesiphon. It saw its palmiest days in the time of Caliph Haroun-al-Raschid, the fifth of the Abbasid line, who flourished from 786 to 800 A. D. The city soon after this came to its end.

The caliphate was for political reasons moved to Samarra in 836 and when it was brought back again to Bagdad in 892, a new city was built on the opposite, i. e., left, bank of the Tigris, a mile or two downstream from the old site. Of Dar-es-Salam nothing now remains but a few indistinct mounds, says a writer in the Times of India Illustrated Weekly.

It cannot even be said that the new capital of which we have just spoken is the Bagdad that we know today. The site has remained the same, but of the city there is now nothing above ground that can be identified as being nearly as old as 892. Bagdad has suffered more often and more severely from destruction and decay than European or Indian cities, even taking into account such incidents as the great fire of London or the sequence of events that has produced the seven capitals at Delhi, or the cheery habit of the old Roman emperors of pulling down the buildings of their predecessors in order to build finer ones for themselves. Twice has Bagdad been sacked: in 1258 by the Mongols under Hulaku Khan and again in 1400 by Tamerlane. It has been besieged many times and flooded still more often.

Such a life would be bound to tell on the constitution even of a well-built city and Bagdad was not that. It was built with inferior building material and as often as not with inferior skill, and its sufferings have entirely changed it during the course of time.

Few Old Buildings Remain.

How thoroughly bad the construction of some buildings has been—more particularly in modern times—may be judged from the fact that two large minarets belonging to one of the mosques of the city, which were built within the memory of the inhabitants of Bagdad, have already lost their top stories. But this, of course, is an extreme example. On the other hand there is the Khan Aurtmah, a large brick vaulted building in the center of the city, which is, in its way, as wonderful a piece of construction as one can see anywhere. It was built in 1359 and is still in use and in excellent preservation. The Marjanlyah mosque, close by, and having as part of its endowments the income derived from the Khan Aurtmah, is another fine old building. It was built two years before the Khan and is of considerable architectural merit.

A few fragments of an earlier date are to be found in different parts of the city. Some portions of the old fortification of mustashir, for example, and the eleventh century minarets of Suqat-Ghazi and of the Qamariyah mosque and, at any rate, some of the walls of the old Mustansiriya college (eleventh century) may be mentioned. But there are no other old buildings as complete as the Khan and the mosque.

Beautiful—From a Distance.

Apart from these few examples of an earlier period, the Bagdad we know today is of the seventeenth or eighteenth and succeeding centuries, which in terms of architecture is comparatively modern. Judged in this light Bagdad is not disappointing. It is, particularly for a Mesopotamian town, quite a delightful place. From the distance it presents a most attractive picture. From miles away in the desert one can see the green mass of Bagdad floating in the atmosphere and as one approaches nearer along the dreary, dusty track, its colored domes and gilded minarets can be distinguished showing above the palms and trees. As one enters the town most of this is lost to sight and one finds oneself in a narrow winding street. The walls on either side are usually very bare. Every now and then one passes a door, sometimes plain, sometimes quite ornate with jolly brass door knockers. Above, from the first floor are projecting oriel windows, these, too, varying from plain brick and timber to carved wood of great richness—with pierced screens, often of very beautiful design. But be they plain or fancy, they cast a pleasant shadow on the road beneath and incidentally block out from view except for a glimpse here and there, the domes or minarets which were so noticeable from outside the city walls.

Out of the maze of these narrow streets one would never emerge had it not been for the kindness of the Turk, who very thoughtfully cut a broad road right through the center of the town in commemoration of the fall of Kut. Now, in our day, we use it for the main stream of traffic.

But the most charming feature of Bagdad is the river front and this alone is sufficient to compel one's admiration for the city. Basra in comparison is all mud and shipping. Amara is pretentious with a row of buildings of uniform design facing on a promenade, which reminds one too much of a terrace on the "front" of a small seaside resort. Kut is picturesque too, but designed on a scale befitting its size and importance, and with its mosques and public buildings, the palms and the trees and more especially the numbers of delightful riverside houses, with their verandas and balconies and their exquisite little gardens overhanging the river, Bagdad has a character and a charm all its own.

OLD LONDON MADE MODERN

Circumstances Under Which the Traveler May See All That He Has Traveled Far to See.

St. Etheldreda, in Ely place, Holborn, London, is one of the old city churches about which Dickens declared a full half of his pleasure in them arose from their mystery. That they existed in the streets of London was a sufficient satisfaction to him, but possibly he would have added St. Etheldreda to the list of the three famous old churches whose names he admitted were household words, if, on his night walks abroad he had heard the watchman cry the hour, as Etheldreda's watchman does to this day. Old London, lurking up byways and round corners, is still to be discovered by the curious who carry the lantern of a certain knowledgeableness. The cry, "Past ten, past eleven," from the watchman of the church with the Saxon name, lying off Holborn with its asphalted pavements and motor buses, bears witness to the assertion.

Lawsuit Lasted 478 Years.

A lawsuit regarding Rhodensian mining rights, which has reached the house of lords in its fourth year, is quite a legal infant when compared with some that have preceded it. The Thellusson will case, for example, dragged out in the courts from 1797 to 1857. Another similar action at law, known as the Bishop-Demetra will case, lasted 122 years. Even this, however, is not a record, for in 1808 there was settled at Friema a lawsuit that had been in progress since 1430. The raising of a dam was the point at issue and it occupied the courts for exactly 478 years.

WHAT THE WORLD WAR COST

Ability to Meet It Consists in Country's Productive Power Exercised to the Limit.

The ultimate factor in war finance is not the dollar, but what the dollar can buy—at the moment when it is necessary to use it. The economic burden of a war is not borne by capital, that is, the stored-up savings invested in railroads, factories and banks, but by the productive power of the country, engaged in unproductive consumption. For war is waste, observes the April La Revista del Mundo.

When estimating the financial ability of a nation to make war a consideration of her wealth does not tell the story, just as a consideration of population, which would give Russia the first place, would be altogether false. It is the ability a nation has to master and mobilize her dollars and send them into the trenches and make them fight, that reveals her financial power as a military nation. Germany, with her long preparation, her autocratic government machinery, was able to conscript all production for war purposes, and mass her economic strength almost as speedily as she massed her fighting men.

Great Britain and the United States, not being versed in the science of war did not understand this factor. The economic resources of these countries were not mobilized and massed all at once, but each government was forced to take over more and more of the machinery of production as war needs became increasingly great. These two countries, with bulldog, but mistaken, determination, clung to the slogan, "Business as usual," as long as it was possible to do so. The business men of those countries believed that so long as there was plenty of money in circulation every one would be able to turn to, buy government bonds and thus assist in the business of war. But this fallacy is akin to the common one of mistaking dollars for wealth.

The cost of the war, as nearly as it can be estimated in money, shows the national debt which each belligerent now carries ranges from 48 per cent of the national wealth (in Japan) to 80 per cent of the national wealth (in Hungary). How these staggering liabilities are to be met is the problem for the future; but the United States, with a debt amounting to 6 per cent of her national wealth of $250,000,000, is in the favored position undoubtedly, facing unprecedented possibilities in credit expansion.

Threw but Seven.

The quartermaster's department in Hoboken is anything but a place of joy. It is where the effects of many thousands of doughboys who "went West" are sent for distribution. Each pitiful package or bundle or box is checked up and sent to the nearest relative. Occasionally, however, the solemnity of the situation is relieved by the laughter of some returned hero who comes to the depot to announce that he is not dead and to claim his precious belongings. The other day a burly negro appeared, wearing three gold chevrons and a wound stripe, laughing heartily at the thought of him being reported dead. As if any old Hun could kill him! He told a tale of terrible fighting and suffering, all the time smiling cheerfully, and allowing as how he hoped his personal effects would be located. A small package, with his name on it, was at last found and opened for final checking. It contained a wad of money and the tools which had helped to enrich the dark man—a pair of dice. There was much laughter, hearty handshakes and back slapping, when the soldier was handed the money and the African golf outfit, which only threw seven.—New York Sun.

Bedouin Bards.

The descriptive power and fidelity of Arabic poetry in setting forth both the life of the people and the scenery of the clime are remarkable. It conjures up visions of tawny brows, flowing beards, soft eyes, picturesque turbans, pawing chargers, and patient dromedaries. We seem to be there. It is the land of the date tree and the fountain, the ostrich and the giraffe, the tent and the caravan. It is the home of the simoon and the mirage. It is the world of the desert and the stars. Hospitality waves her torch through the night to win the wanderer to be a guest. The very picture, embodiment, breath, blaze, of all this is in the lyrics of the Bedouin bards. The richness of their language, and something of the character of the people who use it, are shown in the fact that it has 80 names for honey, 500 for the lion, and a thousand for the sword!—William Russell Alger.

Take No Chances.

The following interesting bit of information is from Safety Engineering: "Not every one understands how inflammable and explosive chlorate of potash is. One man learned in a peculiar manner. He was carrying chlorate of potash tablets in a small bottle in his coat pocket; the cork presumably became loosened and fell out. Entering a street car, he knocked the ashes from his pipe, as he supposed, and put it in his pocket. In a few moments there were spurts of blue flame, and the tablets 'went off.' For a time the man was in danger of being mistaken for an enemy alien, carrying bombs. The mystery of the explosion was solved by finding small particles of glass wedged in the clothing around where the bottle had been. Other than the shock to his own nerves and those of the passengers, the only damage was to his clothes, which were burned badly."

TRUE LOVE LAUGHS AT AGE

Shafts of Father Time Powerless to Affect Those Blessed With Mutual Affection.

Ordinarily, we would cuss to the limit a "peeper" or an eavesdropper. But we have a confession to make on the first count, and we would plead mitigating circumstances. Here is the story:

On a drizzling, foggy night, our way lay down a side street toward home. Several rods ahead there was a shaft of light and when we reached the spot we found a window with the shade half-way up. Wickedly, but not maliciously, we hesitated, stopped—and we peeped.

There sat an old man and his wife. They must have been well up to the allotted three-score of years. He was smoking and she was knitting. Still we peeped. Then she looked up at him and smiled and said something. He laid down a book, struggled up from out of his comfortable seat and kind of hobbled out of the room, shortly returning and carrying a glass of water, which he handed to her.

And as she drank she held the wrinkled and bony hand of her lover. Then, as she finished drinking, she released his hand and the look she gave him and the look he gave her were like shafts of sunshine breaking through the murky clouds after days of rain.

That picture has haunted us a long time. Somehow she seems beautiful in our eyes, and yet we did not get a "closeup" of her features. And he, why as we keep thinking of him, we hark back to the days when we once visited a fine old Southern gentleman who possessed the graces of a Chesterfield and the courtesy of a Don Juan. Then we recall the words of a poet which fits the case precisely: "Let Time reach out with his sickle as far as ever he can; although he can reach ruddy cheeks and ripe lips and flashing eyes, he cannot quite reach love."

When a man really loves a woman she will never grow old, and when a woman loves a man he is neither decrepit nor bowed nor tremulous. She is the same lass he wooed and he is always the same gallant young fellow who won her heart and her hand. They are absolutely equals, happy and free. These two lovers are traveling toward the City of Silence, but they are leaving behind a picture never to be forgotten.—Fremont Herald.

Patriotic Kansan.

I had looked forward to my first glimpse of France with an almost fanatical eagerness. France—the land of dreams—I had visioned it so often! But my first real sight of it, save for a few harbor lights, was not at all the thrilling experience that I had expected. As we steamed up the river to Bordeaux I stood, with a group of eager watchers, beside the rail, and looked at the fields stretching along the sides of the river. They were very green, even though it was winter time; and though I was almost breathless with the wonder of reaching a promised land, that vivid green was the only thing that I could quite comprehend.

Dog Watches for Auto.

Does evolution in the life of animals cause them to take added care in going across a street infested with autos? Some folks say it does. Early in the auto age numerous dogs were killed because they would run out to bark at an auto and, judging the speed by that of a horse-drawn vehicle, they often were run over.

This fact can still be noticed in some country districts, where autos are not plentiful. Close students and lovers of dogs in the city say they have often noticed dogs looking to the left and to the right before they start across a street. Of course, not all of them do, neither do all human beings, but the "thinking" dog does. Watch it for yourself.

Future of "Tired" Nations.

The recuperative powers of nations is great beyond belief, and hope is ever present as long as the spark of vitality is left. The same superhuman effort that was put forward to repel the invader will again be exerted to remedy the damage that has been done; only there must be a breathing space between effort, and in that space lies the greatest danger. This danger, however, is more imaginary than real, and whatever means are resorted to by the population to lighten the effect of this reactive period, it soon pulls and the sober minds of the populace again attain the ascendancy.—Forbes Magazine.

Extravagance in Combs.

The notice, "Ladies are requested to remove their combs," appears now on theater programs in London, because of the vogue of the huge Spanish comb among smart women. Some of the combs are of enormous size. The tortoise shell vogue is an expensive one. A light tortoise shell dressing set costs $1,000 or more.

Protected His Tonsils.

John Lay denies the story that he had his tonsils unburned by gazing skyward the other afternoon at the airplane that was cutting didos in the sky. He says the machine shifted its position often enough to keep him turning about, so that part of the time his mouth was in the shade.—Sikeston Standard.

MASSAWIPPI

On Saturday evening last the friends and old acquaintances of Mrs. Martha Place invaded her home, Fineview, on the Cliff road, and took possession. Mrs. Place had had an inkling of the affair, and therefore was not taken wholly by surprise. She gave all a warm welcome, and made the time pass pleasantly. All seemed in a merry mood, and the hostess was the life of the gathering. Midnight came all too soon, with games, etc., etc., followed by refreshments. Yearly, Mrs. Place comes to her summer home, and the party is an annual event, always looked forward to by both the young and the elders of this vicinity. The "home" is particularly interesting, it having been built many years ago by Mrs. Place's grandfather Jonathan, one of the pioneers of Hatley, who came here prior to 1802, with his parents, Jonathan Cox and wife (Naomi Smith) from New Hampshire. A log house was erected, not far from the site of the present one, which was destroyed by fire, and afterwards the house now standing on the left side of the road was completed. This remains about the same today and is filled with many relics, antique furniture, etc., used in those long ago days. The road passed at the south of the house when it was built, but was later changed, leaving the "front door" at the back of the building which gives the real front side a lonesome effect, but once you enter, and Martha is there, all loneliness flies. It was her birthplace and abode until the age of about five years, when her father, the late Joel Cox, built the next house a bit farther down the road, and moved thereto. Mrs. Place has had her home in Boston for nearly fifty years, but never forgets her friends of "other days," and those of her kin buried in the cemetery here. She delights to come and renew old memories, yearly, and all are glad to see her. Let us give "flowers" to the living and not wait until they are gone from our sight. May she live long to enjoy the best and most loving regard of those nearest her (her grandchildren) as well as all others who know her, so well, as a kind and good friend, and when she goes it will just be "an revoir."

Mrs. MacRay of Gould has been engaged to teach the elementary classes and took up her duties Monday. Both teachers are boarding at Greenbank. The Homemakers Club held their monthly meeting in the town hall, Wednesday. There were fourteen in attendance. Mrs. Luke Colt was chosen to act as president pro tem. The usual refreshments were served. Plans made were to meet in two weeks to finish a quilt that had been on the tapis for some time, and turn it into cash, as being more useful than an unfinished quilt.

Men's and Boy's Clothing is ready for your needs. We own these goods 20 per cent below today's prices, and are going to give you the benefit of our early buying. We have stocked a specially fine line for young men, we have the Form Fitting in Waist Line, Half Waist and Half Belt, Slant and Plain Pockets in all the Popular Cloths.

We are stocked for the trade of the young men.

Don't forget that if you buy your clothes of us you will be well dressed, and it don't cost any more to look fit and up-to-the-minute than to look slouchy and like a back number.

All our Goods are

and the range is from:

$20 to $45.

Drop in and take a look.

TOP OUT A NEW SUIT WITH A FITTING HAT

The right shaped hat complements the suit. We study in our buying to have our hats and caps fit the suits we offer. We won't let a customer leave us if out of balance. A man or boy wants to look the part; it isn't false pride or show, it's common sense and decency.

A homely, ily shaped underpinning spoils the looks of a building, but not more than the ily shaped, misfitting boot spoils the fine, dressy effect of the suit and hat.

We have a good Dark Tan Shoe for $7.50, and prices move on up to $12.00. Blacks are from $4.00 to $9.00.

We carry the Varnishes for your interior repairing of finish and floors.
