the Record

They can say all they want about being over the hill, it still beats being under it.

"How about a nice little one owner, two seater?"

Morrison report concludes:

Taste, smell tests not enough for tuna

OTTAWA (CP) — Canned fish that is fit to eat but looks and smells like manure will be the result if the government adopts recommendations from a report on the tuna scandal, Liberal MP George Baker said Wednesday.

Baker was commenting on a report by Dr. Alex Morrison that said federal fisheries inspectors paid too much attention to the look and smell of a million cans of tuna they banned last year, and not enough to questionable production practices at the Star-Kist Canada Inc. plant at St. Andrews, N.B.

John Fraser was forced to resign as fisheries minister last September after it was disclosed that he overruled fisheries inspectors who had declared the tainted tuna unfit for human consumption.

Prime Minister Brian Mulroney later said it was "pretty damned obvious" the tuna shouldn't have been marketed.

But the report by Morrison, the former head of the health protection branch of the federal Health Department, suggests that flawed inspection practices made the decision anything but obvious — even though there was evidence of poor, quality control, sanitation, storage and processing at the plant.

Morrison, who is chairman of the food science department at the University of Guelph, criticized inspectors for paying too much attention to the sensory aspects of the canned tuna and not enough to the way products were handled and stored at the Star-Kist plant.

He said the look-smell-taste method of testing should be offset by chemical tests to determine whether canned fish is fit to eat, even if it doesn't look, smell or taste good.

Fisheries Minister Tom Siddon could not be reached for comment on the report, which is not officially scheduled for release until today although details were obtained and published Wednesday by the Ottawa Citizen.

Fraser, who was in Boiestown, N.B., on Wednesday, said he was pleased with the report but didn't care to comment on whether its findings justify his decision to release the tuna.

"I'm not interested in whether it vindicates me or not," he said. "But what the report does do is it makes it very clear that any minister having to make an appeal on the quality of product where the processor is arguing with the inspectors is a very tough position indeed."

JUST WHAT THEY WANT?

Baker, deputy fisheries critic for the Liberals, said in an interview the Morrison report is what the government wanted to justify layoffs of fisheries inspectors and their replacement with cheaper chemical tests.

"Canada has the highest fish inspection standards in the world," said Baker, whose Newfoundland riding has a dozen fish plants and 10,000 fishermen.

"If the Morrison recommendations are accepted, you could have canned fish that would be edible but would look like horse manure."

Baker said consumers use the same method as the inspectors to determine whether canned fish is fit to eat — and if fish that looks and smells bad is marketed, the industry will suffer.

testified. "It put me in a trance to see their faces, to see the reaction of those guys. The guys being arrested were laughing at us."

A few hours after an arrest or the next day, Lefebvre added, he would break into a store chosen at random.

"I didn't even bother to see if it had an alarm system. I would go into a trance, sweating, hands trembling."

Lefebvre said he stole because he was frustrated with his job. Asked why he didn't quit, the former policeman answered: "To be like everyone else; I was earning a good salary."

Lefebvre, decorated by the police commission in 1981 for bravery after he wounded a hostage-taking bank robber, told the inquiry he held the force's record for gun use, namely some 20 times.

REACHED FOR GUN

Reaching for his weapon became automatic, he testified. "It was a reflex. I was very nervous and scared. I felt threatened."

He once even fired four times at the tires of a car driven by an impaired driver, not realizing what he had done until colleagues pointed it out.

His superiors never questioned the frequency with which he resorted to his gun, and he never confided his fears to anyone, not even his wife, Lefebvre said.

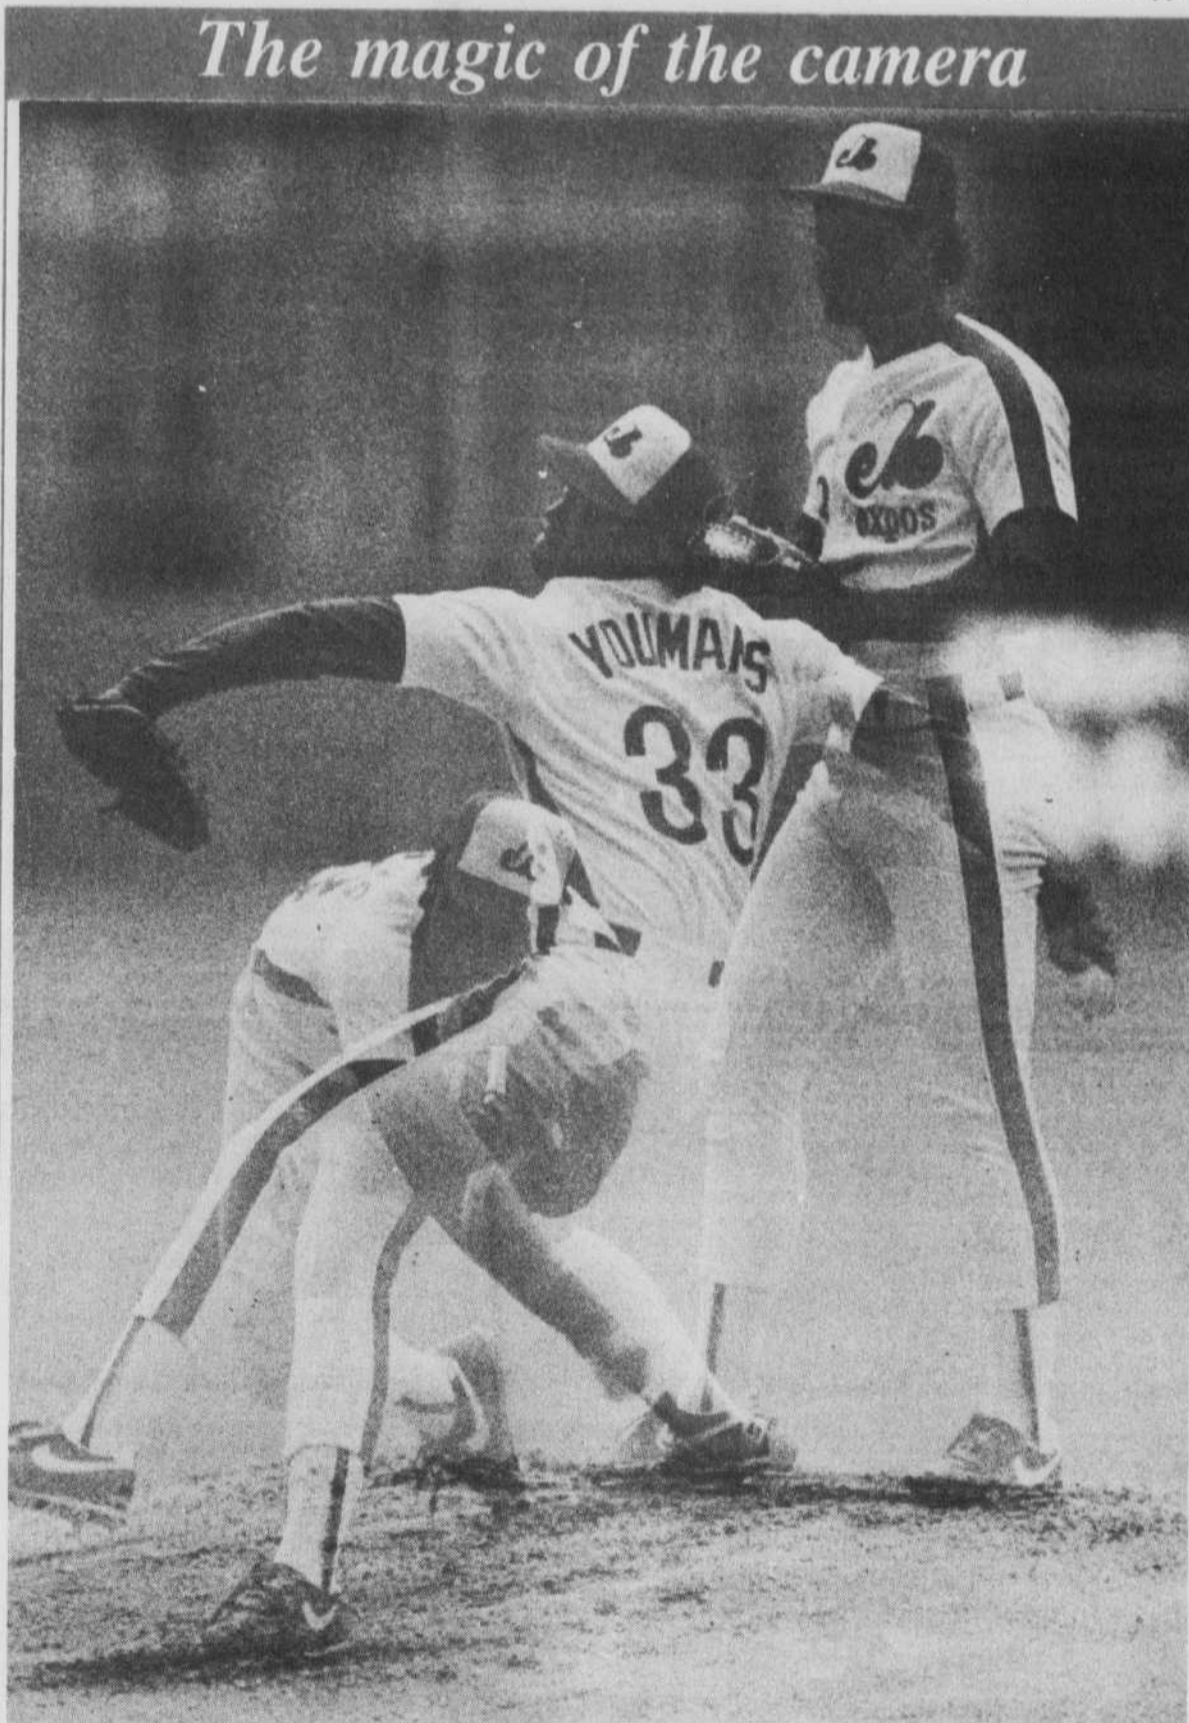

The inquiry was launched after Lefebvre killed two Quebec City policemen last summer while they were answering a burglar alarm.

In other testimony, detective John Tardif admitted he threatened to break the legs of the force's second-in-command, Romeo Gionet, for allegedly eavesdropping on a private conversation. Tardif also volunteered that he pushed Gionet back into his chair in the confrontation.

Tardif testified that the force was left badly split by a long, and what he claimed was an unfair, investigation of detective Raymond Asselin, who was ultimately cleared of any wrongdoing.

Tardif accused police chief Andre Sainte-Marie, suspended pending the inquiry's outcome, of trying to get rid of himself, Asselin and a third detective because they had testified before a commission inquiry in 1977.

Mulroney prepares to avert rift over sanctions

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Brian Mulroney is preparing to push for an emergency meeting of all 49 Commonwealth countries if efforts to resolve a rift over sanctions against South Africa fail, senior Canadian government officials said Wednesday.

The matter will be on the agenda when the leaders of seven Commonwealth states gather here

Aug. 3-5 to discuss ways of pressuring South Africa to abandon apartheid, under which five million whites govern 24 million voteless blacks.

Some countries have threatened to quit the Commonwealth unless Britain abandons its opposition to economic sanctions against Pretoria.

The government officials, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said Mulroney is already considering possible venues for an extraordinary meeting as a means of averting those threats.

The officials said Mulroney would likely insist the meeting be held before the end of the year and is willing to offer Canada as a site.

The proposal is one of a number of measures Mulroney is preparing in the event of an expected deadlock at the August meeting.

High Commissioner Roy McMurtry was asked about the matter while briefing reporters Wednesday prior to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's weekend visit to Canada.

'A POSSIBILITY'

McMurtry said a special full Commonwealth meeting "clearly is a possibility... One has to look beyond the meeting in August and has to be prepared for a number of eventualities."

Only once before has the Commonwealth convened an emergency session. In January 1966, Commonwealth leaders met in Lagos to discuss the crisis in Rhodesia, where whites had unilaterally declared independence and rebuffed demands for eventual black majority rule.

Rhodesia, now Zimbabwe, now has a black-majority government.

Mulroney will use the August summit to attempt to convince black African leaders that leaving the Commonwealth would only serve the interests of reactionary elements within the South African government who would be delighted to see the Commonwealth split over the sanctions issue, McMurtry said.

McMurtry said Canada is aware economic measures against South Africa could have a more adverse impact on some Commonwealth countries than others.

"Mr. Mulroney has indicated to Mrs. Thatcher that he is aware of the important principle of burden-sharing in this context," McMurtry said.

He speculated such sharing might include assisting black states whose economies are strongly dependent on South Africa.

Doctors who fudged forms could face charges

MONTREAL (CP) — The Crown is deciding whether to lay charges against 10 doctors alleged to have given false medical incapacity forms to young welfare recipients, a Quebec provincial police officer said Wednesday.

Sgt. Serge Granger said the force's economic crimes squad turned its files on the doctors over to the Justice Department three weeks ago following an investigation last spring.

Granger refused to divulge who ordered the investigation, which involved undercover officers passing off as patients, or why certain doctors were targeted.

Quebec Solicitor General Gerard Latulippe denied in the legislature June 9 that the probe was a new tactic resulting from the Liberal government's aim to cut welfare payments, saying the police had been doing such work for several years.

A medical certificate attesting to their inability to work enables welfare recipients under 30 to receive $326 in monthly benefits, compared with the $163 paid to those able to work.

Quebec's college of physicians has denounced the inquiry as "excessive."

CBC can't increase Canadian content

By Bill Anderson

TORONTO (CP) — CBC television officials, faced with a tight budget, announced Wednesday the networks will introduce only two new Canadian series in the fall season but will continue to promote Canadian drama.

In releasing details of the network's English schedule for 1986-87, vice-president Denis Harvey said federal budget cuts mean CBC will be unable to increase its Canadian content in prime time.

However, the network's priority "is still to produce drama that reflects this country's values."

Harvey has said that weekly series are where Canadian television must make a breakthrough, gaining audience loyalty on a week-by-week basis rather than with irregular specials and mini-series.

The new CBC schedule also includes six returning series. There will be four new American series and six returning series.

Harvey said in April that CBC-TV would be unable to deliver the same level of service because of a $48 million budget shortfall. The corporation received an increase of $22 million to its 1985-86 budget of $847 million, but said this would not cover increased costs, the devalued Canadian dollar and other expenses.

Many programs affected by the shortfall (Sportsweekend, Tommy Hunter and Good Rockin' Tonite) have returned to the schedule but will have fewer episodes or be shorter.

In the difficult area of new series, CBC has He Shoots, He Scores, a 13-part drama on Tuesday nights about the rapid rise of a young professional hockey player and the complications he encounters.

FOLLOWS LAWYERS

When the 13 episodes expire, a second series called Street Legal will replace it. That show will follow a team of lawyers in a gritty urban setting, but it'll have only six episodes and be replaced in February by Seeing Things, the popular fantasy-comedy starring Louis del Grande.

Other drama series returning to CBC are The Raccoons, Danger Bay, Hangin' In, Airwaves, The Way We Are and Beachcombers.

Returning American series are Dallas, Newhart, Kate and Allie, Golden Girls, Facts of Life and Walt Disney.

New American purchases include Designing Women, an intelligent character comedy about four women running a business in Atlanta; The Ellen Burstyn Show, a family situation comedy starring the distinguished actress; Starman, a science-fiction affair based on the feature film, and The Last Electric Knight, a sort of Karate Kid for TV.

Scientists use robot to explore Titanic

WOODS HOLE, Mass. (AP) — A shiplod of scientists and seamen set sail Wednesday back to the Atlantic tomb of the Titanic for a closer look at the spot near the luxury liner where they found wine bottles and chamber-pots.

But Robert Ballard, who is returning to the underwater wreck nearly a year after leading the U.S.-French team that discovered it, said he does not believe he will find any remains of the 1,513 people who went down with the ship on its maiden voyage 74 years ago.

"There are a lot of animals down there... and they tend to be opportunistic about situations like that," said Ballard, head of the Deep Submergence Laboratory at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution.

Researchers worked up to the last minute readying the three-man submarine that will guide a robot around and inside the legendary wreck 3,900 metres below the ocean surface. The departure was delayed for a final test of the sub Alvin in the water off the institute's dock.

The Atlantis II, carrying 56 researchers and crew, will rendezvous Sunday with a navy submarine-rescue ship that left Tuesday from South Carolina for the site of the wreck about 450 nautical miles off Newfoundland.

Statistics Canada: A glimpse at households where money is tight

By Eric Beauchesne

OTTAWA (CP) — Statistics Canada, which earlier this week gave Canadians a peek at the country's 63,250 richest families, now has provided a glimpse of the 1,623,000 households where money and other material goods are in much shorter supply.

Close to one in five Canadian households last year was classified by Statistics Canada as low-income — what some would call poor — meaning that more than 59 per cent of household income was used to keep members fed, clothed and sheltered.

For example, a family of four living in a major Canadian city with an income of less than roughly $20,800, or a single person in a major city with an income of less than $10,230 last year, would fall into that category.

Two years earlier there were 1,430,000 households, or 17 per cent of all households, that fell into the low-income category.

An earlier Statistics Canada report, based on 1980 data, indicated that the top one per cent of families — earning the equivalent in today's dollars of an average $212,000 a year — are getting richer and will likely continue to do so.

The later report, based on a 1985 survey, revealed a few of the poor are also accumulating some of the smaller luxuries in life, though in a much more modest fashion.

For example, roughly one in seven low-income, single-family households last year sported a video recorder, one of the fastest-growing consumer items, and 87 per cent had a color television.

By comparison, somewhat less than one in three single-family households whose incomes were above the low-income level owned video recorders and 95 per cent owned color television.

LITTLE DIFFERENCE

"For some household facilities such as bath and toilet facilities, telephones and radios the differences between low-income and other single-family households were inconsequential," Statistics Canada said.

"Almost all households regardless of income had them."

And a few more low-income families now have some household amenities that they didn't have when Statistics Canada last surveyed them in 1983.

Close to half of low-income families — 48.15 per cent — had freezers, 24 per cent had automatic dishwashers, 64 per cent automatic washing machines, 61 per cent clothes dryers, 95 per cent telephones, 98 per cent radios, 18 per cent overnight camping equipment and 19 per cent a van or truck.

Just over half of such families had a car, and 8.5 per cent had more than one car while 40 per cent had no automobile.

The 1985 survey also found that the dwellings of low-income households were on average smaller, older, and more in need of major repairs than the dwellings of upper-income households.

And while low-income tenants paid much less for rent than upper-income tenants, they tended to spend a higher percentage of their income on rent.

"Households in the under $10,000 class paid on average 46.5 per cent of their household income on rent compared to 8.3 per cent in the upper income class, $55,000 and over," Statistics Canada noted.

While full income figures for 1985 were not available, the agency survey also found that on average households, including all income levels, were worse off in 1984 than they were two years earlier.

"The average household income was $31,992 in 1984, down 2.9 per cent from 1982 on an inflation-adjusted basis. Overall, 14.1 per cent of all households had incomes of less than $10,000 and 12.7 per cent $55,000 and over."

Autopsy: Lost Ontario boy died of hypothermia

HALIFAX (CP) — A nine-year-old Ontario boy, missing for a week in thick woods before his body was found, died of hypothermia, probably over the weekend, an autopsy revealed Wednesday.

Military searchers found the body of Andrew Warburton of Hamilton late Tuesday afternoon, seven days after he lost his way in dense, swampy and mosquito-infested woods at Beaverbank, 20 kilometres northwest of Halifax.

Dr. Roland Perry, Nova Scotia's chief medical examiner, said in an interview the youngster probably died sometime between Friday and Sunday, meaning he managed to survive for at least three days on his own in the bush.

Perry said he saw no need for a magisterial inquiry, the Nova Scotia equivalent of a coroner's inquest, and he was releasing the body to the family. The Warburton's were returning to Hamilton on Wednesday.

"It's a case of a little guy who goes into the woods and gets lost," he said. "I don't know whether any inquiry is going to be of any value to anybody else."

The search for the missing boy was the largest in memory in Nova Scotia, but it did not escape criticism. Grieving members of Andrew's family questioned whether the military, which joined the search Monday, should have been called in sooner.

"The military should have been brought in the second day, not almost a week later," Norm Horning, Andrew's grandfather, told the Hamilton Spectator.

"If they had the army in the first place, they would have found him alive," said Horning, who described his grandson as "one of the finest boys I've known."

DEFENDS EFFORT

John Perkins, zone co-ordinator for the provincial Emergency Measures Organization, said he was satisfied that searchers — numbering up to 1,000 at times — did all that was humanly possible to find the boy.

The civilian searchers were unpaid volunteers trained by the EMO, he said. The military searchers, on the other hand, do not have special training and the Canadian Forces are not normally used in searches for missing people.

Search co-ordinators decided to call in the military when their own searchers became tired and many had to return to jobs, Perkins said.

Maj. Bill Whitehead, public relations spokesman for the Canadian Forces in Halifax, said the military cannot decide unilaterally when to join a search. Procedure calls for the EMO to pass requests through the provincial Attorney General's Department, the federal Solicitor General's office, and then the Department of National Defence. In this case, the military was asked Friday night to join the search on Monday, he said.

RCMP Staff Sgt. Doug Smith said the RCMP is in charge of such searches but it calls in the Emergency Measures Organization when it needs people with specialized training.

News-in-brief

No murder cases handled

MONTREAL (CP) — Two hundred Quebec Crown prosecutors are refusing to handle murder cases in order to press the Quebec Justice Department for wage parity with their counterparts in Ontario.

The prosecutors are also refusing to process court documents ordering persons to appear for their arraignments. As a result, court cases are backing up.

'Almost a crime of passion'

MONTREAL (CP) — A jealous husband was sentenced to eight years in prison Wednesday for fatally shooting his wife while she chatted on the telephone with her lover last January.

Mr. Justice Kevin Downs told Vincent Lafalce, 38, that his wife's killing was "almost a crime of passion."

Dental records to I.D. body

MONTREAL (CP) — Police said Wednesday they have not yet positively identified a man killed when his car exploded in the underground garage of his highrise apartment building.

Quebec provincial police Const. Pierre Lemarbré said the body was so badly mutilated that police have to check dental records before they can make a definite identification. The blast occurred Tuesday morning.

'Indian' struck from list

MONTREAL (CP) — George Meloche, whose family has lived for 200 years on what is now the Caughnawaga reserve near Montreal, is threatening to take the band council to court for striking him from the electoral list on grounds that he's not Indian.

"I think Indian. I sleep Indian. I eat Indian," said Meloche, 51. "And nobody is going to take that away from me."

Language appeal will be heard

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada has decided to hear Rev. André Mercure's appeal for French-language rights in Saskatchewan, even though the Roman Catholic priest is dead.

Father Mercure, who died of cancer in April, asked that the language case be initiated before his death. It began with a speeding ticket but took on its present dimensions when Mercure asserted that he had a right to be tried in French.

The appeal is rooted in his contention that when Saskatchewan became a province, bilingualism guarantees in the Northwest Territories Act continued to be effective. The guarantees would apply to Alberta as well as Saskatchewan if the Supreme Court agrees with Mercure's arguments.

Tap-tapping the phones

OTTAWA (CP) — All 591 wiretap authorizations requested by law enforcement officers last year were approved by superior court judges, says a federal government report.

The number of requests included 71 renewal applications and represented a decrease from 1984, when judges authorized 710 wiretaps and rejected only one request.

Football blackout over?

OTTAWA (CP) — A 16-year-old rule blacking out local TV football broadcasts on cable systems, in an effort to get more fans through the stadium gates, could be kicked aside as the federal broadcast regulator opens the subject to debate.

Hunger runners at city hall

TORONTO (CP) — More than 20 runners participating in a 7,500-kilometre relay marathon to increase Canadian awareness of world hunger were welcomed at city hall when they reached Toronto on Wednesday.

The marathon began June 2 in St. John's, Nfld., and is scheduled to end in Vancouver at Expo 86 by Aug. 30.

U.S. porn commission: $8 billion spent annually

WASHINGTON (AP) — American consumers spend $8 billion annually on pornographic material, the U.S. Attorney General's Commission on Pornography said Wednesday as it issued its final report.

Attorney General Edwin Meese, who appointed the commission's 11 members more than a year ago, received the report at a news conference with panel chairman Henry Hudson.

Hudson is a U.S. attorney who first won a reputation as a porn-fighting county prosecutor in Virginia.

"I'm not concerned about any censorship being fostered by this document," said Meese. "I can guarantee to you that there will be no censorship...in violation of the First Amendment."

The 2,000-page report links hardcore porn to sex crimes and contains 92 recommendations for federal, state and local governments to crack down on pornography in the United States.

Penthouse publisher Bob Guccione said he was "heartened to see that among the 4,500-plus titles cited as pornographic, Penthouse, Playboy and some of the other so-called mainstream men's magazines are not mentioned at all."

WARNS RETAILERS

The commission's single most controversial action occurred when its executive director, Alan Sears, mailed a letter last February to nearly two dozen convenience and drugstore chains which sell Playboy and Penthouse.

The letter said the store chains had been identified in testimony given to the panel as distributors of pornography.

More than 8,000 drug and convenience stores have stopped selling adult magazines such as Playboy and Penthouse since the first of the year.

The 7-Eleven convenience store chain said it decided to pull the magazines from its shelves because of commission testimony linking pornography to child abuse and other crimes.

Under the get-tough approach envisioned by the Meese commission, Congress and state legislatures would be called on to pass new laws while police and the Justice Department would vigorously enforce laws already on the books.

Tuition hikes: University price tag would be 'insane'

By Eleanor Brown

LENNOXVILLE — Judi Brown decided to attend a Quebec university because of the low cost. But in the face of possible tuition hikes, Brown's not sure what she'll be doing.

A government-appointed committee recommended the provincial Liberals adjust tuition fees, which have remained frozen for the last 20 years. Its report, released Monday, was a blueprint for trimming Quebec's deficit budget.

Members, including Treasury Board President Paul Gobeil and a number of senior businessmen, say fees must be brought in line with those in the rest of Canada. Tuition costs currently account for seven per cent of a student's expenses, compared to 20 to 25 per cent in other provinces. A post-secondary education costs some $550 a year in Quebec. The commission wants fees tripled.

Brown graduated from Champlain College in May with a diploma in creative arts, and was accepted at Toronto's York University. But she turned down the invitation in favor of staying in Quebec. She'll be in the University of Montreal's cinematography course in the fall.

Her reasons for not moving out are simple. "I can't afford it," Brown says. "The reason I was staying in Quebec was so I could afford university. If the fees are almost the same as Ontario, what's the point of staying?"

She says a rise in fees would mean she'd either have to find a well-paying job — or run up her parents' debts. Brown has only managed to find part-time work this summer.

Alexe Rinfret is worried, too. A third year drama student at Bishop's University and the editor of the school newspaper, she moved back to her parents' home in Ottawa to find a summer job.

Rinfret doesn't think the government could introduce a hike in time for September, but says if the Liberals go through with it, she'll be in a bind.

"If they did, I'd have to go back to Lennoxville — I have a lease," Rinfret isn't sure she could break the rental agreement, but would have to give up her education to work full-time in Ottawa. Her French isn't good enough to find employment in the area.

Bishop's student council vice-president, media, James Jewett thinks a fee increase is a good idea — within reason.

Says Jewett, "If they can provide a better level of education and more classroom space, more teachers, sure." But, he adds, a $1500 price tag is "absolutely insane".

The third year humanities student agrees the university needs more money. He says a 10 to 30 per cent tuition increase could be absorbed "without going through the inevitable protest."

Jewett isn't optimistic about the strength of the Bishop's student movement on the matter, either. He says wealthy Ontario students and third year, graduating pupils won't care. "I don't think they're going to bitch as much as we want them to."

But not everyone is sympathetic. While most students are upset, Bishop's economics professor Bob Barnett says its about time the government upped tuition. "The fees haven't moved in 20 years. It seems my costs have risen in 20 years."

"We're underpricing our services," Barnett feels.

He says university graduates know they'll make three times as much as those without a degree. They should pay for the right to higher wages. "I think everybody's been living on easy street — especially students... There are too many idiots in university," he says. More scholarships should be made available for the truly intelligent. The others can pay their way.

Barnett says the provincial budget has to be cut. Health care and welfare can't be touched. Tax increases would be ridiculous. That leaves education as the big loser.

But part time Bishop's history professor Graham Moodie was "thunderstruck" by the commission's recommendations. "It's bloody unfair to do this on the backs of students," he claims.

Moodie claims the amount of money raised wouldn't be significant. And he damns the decision to hold hearings on the subject in August. "With students not in school, student organizations can't really respond."

Hugh Scott and others meet with Claude Ryan

Bish boss not totally against raising fees

By William Harris

LENNOXVILLE — While Bishop's University Principal Dr. Hugh Scott isn't totally opposed to tuition hikes, he says he'll want to know exactly how much money is involved and precisely where the money is going before he agrees to anything.

"At present our average fees in Quebec are substantially lower than any other province in Canada ($550 compared to $1500-$2000), and we're very happy to be that way," Scott said Wednesday. "But whether or not we have to be that far behind the others is something we'll have to discuss with our faculty and students. Tuition fees have been frozen in this province for 20 years, so perhaps it's time for a little de-freeze."

Scott was one of several Quebec university rectors and principals to meet with Education Minister Claude Ryan Wednesday in Montreal. The meeting was prompted by a government-appointed committee report which surfaced earlier this week.

TRIPLE COSTS
Led by Treasury Board President Paul Gobeil, the committee advised the government to substantially hike tuition fees (more than tripling the current cost of a university education) and boost workloads for teachers.

Scott described the proposed tripling of tuition fees as "inconceivable. A proper time frame will have to be set up if any raise is to be accepted at all."

Scott is also concerned about the real motives behind the Gobeil report.

"Is this hike in fees a step toward better university services and more programs, or simply to ward balancing the provincial budget?" Scott asked. "If the sole purpose is the latter, I'd have to suggest there must be other ways of doing it besides compromising students."

Scott believes fees in Quebec have remained low for so long because "both major political parties have been courting the youth vote. That's the cynical view."

"Also, when all of this started at the end of the Lesage era in the late 1960s, there was a strong feeling Quebec had to 'catch up' with the other Canadian provinces," he added. "It was felt French students had not been given the same opportunities as English ones, so there was a major movement to make universities accessible to everyone. The government promised to make up the difference financially, and it did in the beginning — but in recent years this promise seems to have been forgotten."

NO CLOCK

In general, Scott was pleased with the meeting, saying the minister did not give any indication of a time limit on the debate.

"He assured us these proposals were not yet part of the official Liberal party program, and he encouraged us to be frank and honest when discussing the matter with media, faculty and students," commented Scott.

"Ryan also said he was more than prepared for the uproar and controversy the report would create, and that everyone must be open about their feelings if anything constructive is to be accomplished," he said.

Scott declined discussing teacher workloads in detail, saying "it's very unfortunate this complex issue has been grouped into the current debate. It's an issue which should be handled individually by each university. One of the strengths of our university system is the difference between our various institutions, and I feel a cross-university government policy on how many hours a teacher has to spend in the classroom would be counter-productive."

Hugh Scott... 'Perhaps it's time for a little de-freeze.'

Locals after the railway: CP guilty of fires?

By Charles Bury

JOHNVILLE — A group of angry, frightened residents living near CP mainline want the federal government to make the railway stop the fires it starts along its right-of-way.

Canadian Pacific's main track leading to the Maritimes, heads east from Lennoxville through farm and residential country in adjacent municipalities. Every spring residents complain trackside brush fires started by as many as a dozen trains a day, threaten their homes and livelihoods.

Until now the railway has responded with deaf ears, the residents say, although sparks from trains cause up to half the brush and forest fires reported in the Eastern Townships.

Thursday, a group of railway fire victims will send the Canadian Transport Commission in Ottawa a petition signed by nearly one hundred residents — two thirds of all those living in the worst-hit area in and around the town of Johnville.

The complaint will be backed up by photographs, police and fire department reports and resolutions of support from at least two municipal councils.

SUPPORT AND ASSISTANCE
The citizens also have the support and technical assistance of the Association cooperative d'économie familiale de l'Estrie (ACEF — the Eastern Townships cooperative association for family economics), an information and lobby group devoted to spreading the word about wise home economics. ACEF spokesman Micheline Cliche said at a press conference Wednesday the trackside fires cost residents money, effort and time, make them nervous and fearful, and raise local fire-fighting costs.

"We'll put the request to the CTC together and you can be sure it will be complete," Cliche said. "We have the support of Ascot Township council, which is sending us its resolution of support for the residents, and we will get one from the Eaton Township council too." The worst-affected area is shared by the two municipalities.

"As well," Cliche added, "We will have the support of Lennoxville-Ascot police chief Richard Tremblay. And we will have fire reports from both Lennoxville and Eaton (which share fire coverage of the area)."

Cliche showed reporters photographs of the burnt-over areas. They depict plantation pine trees up to about eight inches in diameter with charred bark and dead needles.

'IT WOULD ALL HAVE...'

Johanne Gendron is one of the owners who has suffered most. She said her family home has been threatened more than once by right-of-way fires. "One Sunday, if I hadn't been at home at the right time there wouldn't be anything left," she said. "It would all have burned to the ground."

On another occasion, Gendron added, "A noise woke me up from a nap. I looked out the window and there were firemen everywhere."

During a third fire, Gendron said, "we called the fire department (Lennoxville) and they said they couldn't come. They had too many fires going at once, they had seen the smoke from ours and said it wasn't as bad as the other ones."

The railway is indifferent to complaints, Gendron said. "Last year our fir plantation was damaged and we sent a complaint and claim to CPR. They finally answered it seven months later but they just said they wouldn't pay because we had no proof they caused it."

"It cost us $4000," she says. Gendron said the fires all take place "in a period of about 3½ weeks in the spring, before the grass grows up."

12 TRAINS A DAY

Another trackside resident, Jacqueline Isabelle, said the trains go by at the rate of "one every two hours or so, on the average."

Isabelle said sparks seem to fly from the exhaust stacks of the diesel engines pulling the trains. "There is an uphill slope there and when the trains are climbing on their way east, they make lots of smoke and the sparks really fly."

In Montreal, CP spokesman Ralph Wilson said diesel exhaust is indeed the likely cause if the railway is to blame. "The cause is a carbon buildup in the exhaust," he said. "The problem is red-hot sparks coming out in the exhaust."

"The exhausts have baffles to prevent that but it depends on how much buildup there is."

Another suspected cause of the fires is a condition known as 'hot-boxes', caused when wheel bearings overheat. But he says they rarely occur now. "We have only very few cars left with the old plain bearings which overheat," Wilson said. "There's been a program to replace them all since 1979. "By now almost all our cars have roller bearings. We hardly even hear the word 'hot-boxes' any more."

The railway uses herbicide sprays to keep brush down and reduce fire hazard in some circumstances, Wilson added, "but our brush abatement program, the spraying, is controversial too."

DEAL DIRECT?

Wilson says anyone with complaints about CPR is better off dealing directly with the railway than with the CTC. "The transport commission can be dead slow on these things," he said. "If the community is concerned, they could deal directly with CP."

But for ACEF's Cliche, it's too late for that. "The CTC has the role and the power to force the railway to clean up its act," she said. "This will be a formal complaint and we won't be short of witnesses."

"We want to settle it before spring," Cliche said. "It happens every year. People around here say more than 25 barns have been burned down over the years in fires from trains."

"We're starting now so there should be no problem getting it taken care of by spring," she added. "The CTC can order them to cut the brush."

ACEF hasn't yet approached local federal politicians for help in fighting the railway, says organizer Claude Sévigny. "But if nothing is moving by the fall, if it's not well on the way, we will open up the system a bit and raise a fuss."

Whoa! Lennoxville-Ascot cops say 'Not so fast!'

ASCOT (TD) — Fifteen minutes after the Lennoxville-Ascot Metro Police force began operating their radar operation, 213 tickets were given out to speeding motorists in the municipalities of Lennoxville and Ascot.

Director Richard Tremblay stressed the need for such an operation arises because many motorists are presently driving far faster than they the law allows and the safety of road traffic is in jeopardy.

Tremblay said the force receives many complaints regarding the excessive speeding on the highways and it is their job to act accordingly. He also stated that if need be, the operation will continue. Last year seven speeding-related deaths occurred in the area and Tremblay's goal is to avoid even one this year.

Of the 200-odd tickets handed out, only five drivers were guilty of not wearing their seatbelts, which resulted in an additional ticket being awarded them.

The radar operation began at 6 a.m. Wednesday and started again this morning. It will officially come to a halt at 9 p.m. tonight.

Although certain citizens have taken offence at such a system, Tremblay maintains it has much value. Traffic circulation in the region, especially Lennoxville, has greatly increased, he explains. On a daily basis, for example, Queen Street in Lennoxville is busier than Bourque Boulevard in Sherbrooke-Rock Forest.

As well, Tremblay stated, Lennoxville-Ascot police officers spend more time going to the scene of accidents than enforcing other elements of their mandate. He feels the number of accidents in the area must be lessened and radar operations are the way to do this.

Throughout the day, officers will be watching over routes 143 and 147. Thibault and Belvedere streets will be under surveillance in Ascot, while in Lennoxville, officers will take up post at points of access to Queen and Belvedere streets.

Peacemonger Ignatieff: 'Powers that be not a safe place to leave anything'

George Ignatieff... Not a spectator sport.

By Laurel Sherrer

RICHMOND — Canadians often react to the arms race between the United States and the Soviet Union as if it were a spectator sport, says self-styled peacemonger George Ignatieff.

"How can Canada react to situations as if it were a spectator sport when we are the victims?" he asked a group of peace activists here Wednesday.

Ignatieff, a former ambassador to the United Nations and an advisor to Canadian ambassador for disarmament Douglas Roche, took time off from a vacation visiting his brother in Richmond to speak to over 100 members of Townships peace groups.

Being located between the two superpowers, Canada in particular does not have the option to remain neutral in any disagreements between the two, said Ignatieff.

Canadians are already being drawn into the fray, he said, in insidious ways. Canadians are participating in American President Ronald Reagan's Star Wars proposals in indirect ways, through contracts that look like innocent research in the areas of computer and space technology.

THROUGH BACK DOOR

"I find this a very unpleasant development," he said, because this an indirect way of trying to get Canada involved in Star Wars "through the back door."

Star Wars, as Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative has come to be called, is an illusory defense scheme, said Ignatieff. Recent incidents such as the space shuttle Challenger explosion and the Chernobyl nuclear plant meltdown show us just how fallible technology is, he said, casting doubt on the ability of missiles to track other missiles in order to avoid annihilation.

The state bureaucracy, which perpetrates this illusory policy of deterrence, is the main adversary of the peace movement, said Ignatieff.

But public opinion is strong enough, even in countries such as Great Britain, which take strong stands on military strength as a deterrent to war, to fight the status quo, he said.

"It's a matter of surprise to me," he said, "to find, still, those who feel this is something that can be left to the powers that be. Having served the powers that be for some 30 years, I assure you, that's not a safe place to leave anything."

INFORMATION CRUCIAL

Information about the actions and decisions of military policymakers is of crucial importance in fighting the escalation of the arms race, said Ignatieff.

"The terrible thing," he said, "is that the military planning which is conducted in the Pentagon is under conditions of American security. It's not revealed even to our elected representatives."

There are certain steps Canada can and should take to have more control over its own security, he continued.

One is to threaten to leave NORAD (the North American Aerospace Defence Command) unless the organization is put under "responsible civilian surveillance."

Canada should also offer to set up a crisis management centre, he said, so that constant communication between civilian and military representatives can be maintained in moments of crisis, and networks of communications don't have to be improvised on the spot.

Another way Canadians could promote peace, said Ignatieff, would be to set up an international commission to check the truth of Soviet and U.S. accusations against each other. One of the U.S. military's excuses for not accepting Soviet proposals for a nuclear test ban treaty is that they claim such treaties are constantly violated by the U.S.S.R.

Cultural exchanges between Canada and the Soviet Union are also crucial to easing East-West tensions, Ignatieff said.

More 'Dynasty' and 'The Price is Right'

Sombody out there doesn't like Tommy Hunter. Or so it would seem.

The CBC's new fall line-up has been drastically altered by federal budget cuts and veritable pioneers of the airwaves like good old Tommy will return with fewer, shorter episodes.

The corporation received only a $22 million increase in its $847 million annual budget. The vice-president says this minuscule increase "would not cover increased costs". The network was expecting another $48 million and now it says the same level of service will not be possible.

The sad part of the whole line-up is the CBC will be unable to increase its prime time Canadian content. What that means are more shows like Dynasty, The Price is Right and The A-Team. What it also means is less work for talented Canadian actors who have done well in CBC dramas and proven to other countries the people behind Canadian television are probably more creative and intelligent than writers on Three's Company.

The network will introduce only two new Canadian series which will reflect "this country's values." Doesn't it make you crazy when TV knows what your moral values are? The corporation has decided our morals will include something called "He Shoots, He Scores", a 13-part drama about the rise of a young pro hockey player. Naturally, there will be minor crises in the athlete's life along the way, to keep this 13-week monstrosity alive.

The other series is called "Street Legal", about a group of lawyers in a "gritty urban setting" — maybe Charlottetown? This winner will have only six episodes and will be replaced in February by the return of "Seeing Things", a show the network is probably sorry they had to cancel last year.

It goes without saying shows like The Journal will return. The show has an alleged budget of $13 million per annum. Did you really expect this one to disappear? At least it proves there is good television out there.

Naturally, Sesame Street and that inane children's show about a man who holds a boy and his dog hostage in a tree, Mr. Dressup, will be back for the young at heart. What would life be like without Casey and Finnegan? Some of us grew up believing Casey was a real boy.

The vice-president did say that mini-series have got to go. He says Canadian television must gain more audience loyalty on a week-to-week basis rather than with smutty mini-series and irregular specials.

Sometimes it's hard to figure out if we watch the CBC because it's good television, or because we've been brainwashed into believing it's 'good for us'.

Yiddish was a 'kitchen jargon'

TORONTO (CP) — Eleazar Birnbaum still remembers the homework from the course his father Solomon taught.

It was 1948, and Birnbaum was taking a class in Hebrew paleography, the study of ancient Hebrew manuscripts, from his father at the University of London, England.

At that time, controversy raged in academic circles over the recently discovered Dead Sea Scrolls. How old were they? Some said as recent as the tenth or eleventh century A.D.

Everyone in the field held a theory, and academic reputations were on the line. The elder Birnbaum had managed to get photos of the scrolls, his son recalls, and brought them to class.

"He threw them on the table and said, 'Date these.' And we all got the date within a century of the date he established by his own methods," Birnbaum says.

PROVES ACCURATE

Those methods, based on painstaking study of individual letters, proved surprisingly accurate, placing most of the parchments around the first century B.C. — a date now widely accepted by scholars.

Such work established Dr. Solomon Birnbaum's reputation as a pioneer in the study of Jewish languages and writing. Today, at 95, he is regarded as having founded the academic study of the Yiddish language.

It has only been recognized by scholars in the last 30 or 40 years, says Ben Kayfetz, a former worker for the Canadian Jewish Congress, and a friend of the professor for many years.

"Many Jews... tended to disregard Yiddish as a folk dialect, a kitchen jargon, with no pedigree, no structure, no status. It was just something to make jokes about on the stage."

Now, by contrast, he says, major universities such as Columbia, McGill, Harvard and Oxford have recognized Yiddish and other Jewish languages as a legitimate field of study.

Earlier this month, the University of Trier in West Germany held a special convocation to award Birnbaum an honorary doctorate for his research on Yiddish, a body of work that extends back more than 70 years.

"It's always nice to find understanding and acknowledgement, even if it's not the first time," Birnbaum says.

In 1970, Birnbaum moved from England to Toronto, where two of his four children now live. He has kept on researching as much as his health will allow.

To this day they swear grey seals did the damage

By Steve MacLeod

ST. ANDREWS, N.B. (CP) — A few years ago, in one of the many sheltered bays that cut and curl the New Brunswick coast, a severe winter storm ripped through a fledgling salmon farm, heavily damaging a few pens.

To this day, the locals still swear it was grey seals that caused the damage.

"It's bull," snorts David Lavigne, a zoologist from Guelph University and one of Canada's top authorities on marine mammals. "It turned out the guy had seal insurance, not storm insurance."

It's been that kind of half-decade for the lowly seal.

Since the end of the commercial hunt for another species, the harp seal, in 1983, the marine mammal with the doe-like eyes and the cottony-white pups has been portrayed as a beast of unparalleled gluttony, scouring the East Coast like some great oceanic vacuum.

Figures are flaunted to nail the point home.

An adult seal, we've been told, eats anywhere from 15 to 40 kilograms of fish a day. Some say they eat their 200-kilogram body weight. And with roughly 2.3 million seals swimming the Atlantic Coast, that's pretty big competition for Canadian fishermen.

Lavigne has heard it all before. "These estimates are simply nonsense," he says. "This view that marine mammals are gluttons is simply not substantiated by the available data."

MODEST EATER

Lavigne said that studies have shown that an adult seal eats from five to 10 kilograms of fish a day depending on the kind of fish and its nutritional value. The fattier the fish, the less a seal has to eat.

And, because seals migrate up and down the East Coast, he says much of their feeding is outside commercial fishing zones and much of what they eat has no commercial value. The harp seal, the main target of the seal-hunt controversies of the 1970s, is actually an Arctic animal that migrates to the southern fringes of the late-winter ice only for the short whelping season.

"There is no evidence that seals are having an impact on the fishery," Lavigne said during a three-day symposium for marine scientists in early June.

Advocates of the seal hunt have called for a return of the annual harvest, which ended three years ago when European markets dried, saying the seal population is growing unchecked and threatens the future of the Atlantic fishery.

The Atlantic seal population consists of about two million harp, about 200,000 hooded, 100,000 grey and 10,000 harbor seals. Lavigne calls the figures "ballpark estimates" and says there is no data to suggest their numbers has been growing, falling, or stabilizing.

"The point is, we just don't know," he said. "There is the common perception we understand precisely how many animals there are in any population."

"That simply is not the case. There is uncertainty in all these numbers."

LARGE KILLS

At the height of the hunt, about 200,000 harp and hooded seals were killed annually on the ice flows of the Gulf of St. Lawrence and the northern Newfoundland ice patch known as The Front. Lavigne, while saying he has no objection to a hunt in principle, said a return to an annual harvest won't solve industry problems.

He said people are arguing that fewer seals would also mean fewer cod worms, a parasite that is passed from seal feces to cod. A recent study of fish caught near Sable Island — a huge breeding ground for grey seals — discovered as many as 140 worms per fish.

"The obvious solution is, if we had no seals, we'd have no cod worm," said Lavigne. "But one could equally argue that if we didn't have cod, we wouldn't have cod worm."

"There's no simple relationship between cod and seals."

Lavigne said the only short-term solution is better processing. Cod worms are plucked from fish in a process called candling, where fillets are put on light tables and the worms cut from the flesh.

He said the industry would be better off downplaying the worm problem.

"They're cutting their own throats. I've had intelligent people see a cod worm on a fish and say, 'I'll never eat another cod again.'"

Although the idea of worms is unappetizing, they are harmless to eat if the fish is cooked, he said.

Letters In a towering rage wondering

Dear Editor:

Your heading on page 2 of yesterday's (19 June) Record proclaims that the (Moroccan) wedding party at Hatley Acres "pleased 500".

I know personally of at least three whom it did not please: a 93-year-old lady who lives alone and is nervous, who thought her house was being broken into when the fireworks started.

She was really quite frightened, as well as wakened; another lady, who had been bereaved the day before and had just managed to get to sleep; she lay awake the rest of the night; and myself, in a towering rage wondering how anybody could be so selfish and inconsiderate as to create, deliberately, all that noise and the bright flashes at that hour of the night.

Surely the two families concerned had organized enough flamboyant entertainment to satisfy their penchant for ostentation, without including the fireworks.

Yours sincerely,
(Mrs. Alex) Lorna Casgrain

For those who lost so much

Dear Editor:

After reading The Record Wednesday, June 18, I felt I had to write how I felt for all those unfortunate folk who lost so much in that terrible wind-storm that hit many parts of the Eastern Townships, on Monday evening, June 16th.

I'd like to compliment ("CB") for the coverage of the storm, (with I guess I'd have to say,) the exception of the picture of the dead cow on the Lavoie Farm. It is very hard for a farmer to see an animal of any kind, die, but much worse when it is one that IS his livelihood. However, my point in writing is NOT to tell you what pictures one should print with their articles... rather, that having experienced losing a big part of our barn roof last year, July 29th, in a twister-type storm, and again this year on the same Monday that hit the rest of the Eastern Townships, we were in its path once again. Thank God no severe damage was done, but we did have two very large maples uprooted and several of our beautiful trees damaged alongside the road, in front of our farmhouse.

When we read or hear on the News of these things happening, we in no way can begin to imagine the terrorizing fear one has, and at the same time know that you are totally helpless. At both of these occurrences, the members of our family were on the verge of going to the basement, when you suddenly realize it is too late... it has hit... and in no time at all... the damage is done... the storm's over... and you are thanking God for being alive.

It takes real courage to be hit as many times as the Longvals and to be able to keep on smiling. I hope for all those hit, it'll never be again, as you never forget the fear when you hear the wind starting to pick up its speed.

Compassionately yours,
BARBARA E. HARVEY

U.S. porn recommendations: Smut shouts its presence

By Calvin Woodward

NEW YORK (CP) — On Times Square and along West 42nd Street, where colorful banners tell surging crowds they are in the heart of New York City, smut shouts its presence.

During the day and most vividly at night, dozens of sex shops, movie houses, 25-cent peep shows and adult bookstores grab attention with their lurid, flashing marquees and risqué posters.

Hordes of shoppers, businessmen and Broadway theatre patrons walk by a store window stacked with wares — sunglasses, discount cameras and sexual aids.

Advocates of a crackdown on the multibillion-dollar pornography industry see all of this as moral sewage backing up into the mainstream of society, and just one reason why pornography must be checked.

But their crusade so far has had its most profound effect on more restrained adult material.

At least 8,000 convenience stores across the United States have pulled Playboy, Penthouse and similar magazines off their shelves in response to pressure from church and women's groups and, some say, to intimidation from Washington.

Canada has its share of smut places, but Canadians are working on legislation which, if passed and applied to the limit, would conceivably clean them up.

MILDER APPROACH

The U.S. approach, as proposed by a commission appointed by Attorney General Edwin Meese, appears to be considerably milder although it is proving at least as controversial.

The key conclusion in the commission's report is that pornography contributes to violence. On that basis, it wants the government to strengthen enforcement of obscenity laws and stiffen penalties. The report, completed but only scheduled for release today, also encourages citizens to "boycott, picket and monitor porn in all forms."

Publishers and civil libertarians have denounced the recommendations as an odious assault on constitutional freedoms.

The report, said the American Civil Liberties Union in Washington, is "a dangerous call to arms against free expression, one which relies on misrepresentations, distortions and deception to pollute the national debate over sexual materials and censorship."

And the report is also being discredited by leading researchers. Experts whose testimony the commission used in establishing a link between porn and violence say their evidence was twisted to reach an unsupported, pre-ordained conclusion.

Even some of the commissioners say facts were trampled in a rush to judgment. "No self-respecting investigator would accept conclusions based on such a study," two of them wrote.

Whether the analytical flaws will matter to opinion-sensitive politicians, however, is another question.

When a 1970 commission concluded pornography was a harmless vice, then-President Richard Nixon simply disregarded the issue. And since then, sexually explicit material has become more readily available through the rise of home video cassettes and adult cable TV.

IDEOLOGICAL LINES

The American mood now is perceived as more conservative ethically and at the same time more conscious of porn as being degrading to women. But the issue cuts jaggedly across ideological lines, uniting fundamentalist church leaders with some feminists on one side; liberal and conservative opponents of censorship and government intrusion on the other.

"In our minds, there is no consensus to move against this material," says Christopher Finan of the Media Coalition, which represents book and magazine publishers and distributors. "What you have is a very well-organized minority group, magnified by an administration willing to countenance this kind of attack on the (Constitution's) First Amendment (rights on freedom of expression)."

The report's recommendations are designed mainly to rein in the most loathsome and legally obscene pornography, such as the sexual exploitation of children, its authors say.

The recently introduced Canadian legislation, while taking similar aim against this sexuality, would go beyond that to forbid visual depictions of intercourse and "other sexual activity."

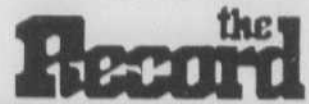

Back on 42nd Street in Manhattan, both sides in the debate over the Meese report can find ammunition for the coming struggle.

Here, porn fighters point to the flesh-peddling and declare that porn is pervasive, not a matter of choice.

But next to the Victory Theatre, showing Nympho Hookers, is the Lyric Theatre with its big attraction — the movie Cobra with Sylvester Stallone. Cobra features more than 30 killings and a philosophy that violence, in effect, is "the cure."

Some see hypocrisy in a campaign to fight violence by fighting porn while at the same time, Stallone is a welcome guest at the White House.

The Brombys hosted Cowansville's Local Day

By Angela Giguere

COWANSVILLE — This year the Cowansville 4-H Club's annual Local Day was hosted by David and Marielle Bromby at the Bromhaven Holstein Farm.

Competitor's ages ranged from 3 to 19. Both the overall grand champion calf and overall grand champion showmanship trophies were won by Jennifer Menec. The reserve grand champion calf and showmanship trophies both went to Nathan Forster. Jessica Bromby took the grand championship pee-wee showmanship trophy.

Other events included a treasure hunt that thrilled all participants as they found silver dollars at the end of the trail, and an "all aboard" hay-ride for the city folk.

A tasty barbecue, which seemed to satisfy everyone's appetite ended the day's festivities, with hopes of enticing even more sup-

'Appropriate technology' the key words for Brace

By Peter Alvo

STE. ANNE DE BELLEVUE — Now that summer is upon us and gasoline prices have dropped substantially, few of us seem concerned about energy consumption.

Nevertheless, the staff of the Brace Research Institute of McGill University, under the direction of Tom Lawand, continues to develop ways to reduce the world's dependence on conventional energy sources.

The original mandate of "Brace" was to develop techniques to render arid lands useful for agriculture. Today, the key words at Brace are "appropriate technology". These words define a methodology that seeks to provide low-cost alternatives for the energy needs of individuals and communities both here and in developing nations. An important component of the Brace approach, besides using solar, wind and biomass energy as alternate sources, is to rely as much as possible on locally-available materials for the design of alternate energy systems.

The Brace Research Institute is presently working on a plan with the RONA hardware association to provide standard designs and components for solar systems to the Quebec homeowners. This "build-your-own" concept could mean substantial savings on fuel bills for the consumer.

Engineer Chris Ives, a Brace affiliate, is currently perfecting a roof solar collector that can supply most of the energy required by a domestic hot water tank without the use of electric circulating pumps.

Aside from research, Brace is actively involved in lectures, workshops, student training and employment training programs in appropriate technology.

Brace has an extensive library with information on solar greenhouses, wind energy, small turbine generators and biogas energy to name a few. A number of interesting publications are also available for a small fee. Tours of the institute and of the field station may be arranged in summer by calling 514-457-6477.

The Brace Research Institute and field station are situated on the Macdonald College campus in Ste. Anne de Bellevue.

Magog company wins SDI loan totalling $69,000

MAGOG — Salaison Orford inc. will receive a $69,000 guaranteed loan from the Société de développement industriel du Québec (SDI).

The money will go towards financing the company's planned $607,000 renovations.

Orford deputy Georges Vaillancourt announced July 2 that provincial Industry and Commerce Minister Daniel Johnson authorized the SDI to participate in the project.

The plant's modernization programs will lead to the addition of 13 new employees. Salaison Orford currently employs 25 people.

Salaison, founded in 1983, is known for its smoked ham products marketed under the brand names Orford, Estrie, Vieilles Forges and Chatelain. Its products are furnished by Quebec farmers. Only a small portion of its output is marketed outside Quebec.

With the loan, the company will be able to expand its Magog plant and acquire new machinery which will enable it to diversify its products, especially pork and turkey products. Company officials foresee increasing their market share outside the province.

U.S. Customs broker opens new office

DERBY LINE — F.H. Fenderson Inc., U.S. Customs Brokers, have moved into their newly constructed office in Derby Line, Vt. The building overlooks the U.S. Customs office on Interstate-91.

The Fenderson firm's first office in Vermont was located in the Derby port in 1978. Offices in Highgate Springs and in Norton, Vt. followed in 1979 and 1980. Surprisingly, Fenderson was the first Customs broker to serve all ports in Vermont.

The firm was founded in 1950 and has seven other offices in Maine, two in upstate New York, and one in Massachusetts.

As U.S. Customs brokers, the firm helps Quebec firms export their goods to the U.S., filing what amounts to be a tax return, called a Customs entry, due on imports. There are over 6000 product classifications for duty, and probably as many regulations.

The Derby Line office provides Customs clearance for both truck and rail shipments. It has trucking permit facsimile service for truckers who need permits sent over the phone. It can also help importers obtain their own U.S. Customs bonds, thereby saving money on their clearance costs.

Sherbrooke is the principal area using the Derby Line port. As a result, all of the firm's Derby Line staff are fluently bilingual. Russell Blais is the manager, and is assisted by Doris Gagne and Diane Kelley.

Robert Fenderson, company president, had a lot of praise for his staff and said that exporters must like working with them, since the firm's business had doubled this year over last.

Wall Street binge has spooked markets

By The Canadian Press

The Wall Street selling binge that has spooked international stock markets in the last two days continued to knock billions of dollars off prices on the Toronto Stock Exchange on Tuesday.

The TSE 300 composite index — the widest measure of stock market activity in Canada — fell 44.92 points to close at 2,997.30, the first time the index had sunk below the 3,000 level since mid-March.

Combined with a 32-point loss Monday, the market has racked up its worst two-day decline in nearly five years. About $7.4 billion has been trimmed from the value of TSE shares, bringing the total value of the market to $235 billion.

In New York, the Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks — a widely watched measure of U.S. stock activity — fell 18.27 points to 1,820.73. The loss was much less than a decline Monday, which sent the average plummeting 62 points.

On a point basis, Monday's decline in the Dow Jones was the worst in history, although the percentage fall was less drastic than the stock market crash of 1929.

BUBBLE BURST

Toronto analysts said favorable economic news in the last few months has artificially bid up stock prices, but now the bubble has burst. On Tuesday, all major stock groups except gold mines fell in value.

Gino Blink of Deacon Hodgson Inc. said the market has probably seen the worst of the current decline. "We're moving toward the end of this downdraft," he said.

In other business news:

• In Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Algoma Central Railway has cut its dividend by five cents to 15 cents a share as a result of lower expected profits in 1986 caused by lower traffic levels in its rail and marine divisions. The company, which had 1985 net earnings of $4.9 million, didn't give a specific profit forecast.

• General Motors Corp. plans to build four versions of its Saturn small car, including a two-seat sports coupe, a trade publication says from Detroit. The report in this week's Metalworking News edition of American Metal Market was one of the most detailed yet of GM's hush-hush plans for the cars to be built at its high-technology factory in Spring Hill, Tenn.

Air Canada wants Quebecair

TORONTO (CP) — Air Canada wants a piece of Quebecair, the ailing regional carrier being offered for sale by the Quebec government.

An Air Canada spokesman confirmed that a letter of intent has been sent offering to purchase a minority share of the provincially-owned airline, subject to certain conditions.

The spokesman would not give details, but it is understood that Air Canada is looking at between one-quarter and one-third ownership.

Quebecair is perceived as the weak sister of Canadian aviation, with poor management and equipment unsuited to the routes it flies.

An involvement by the national airline is dependent on Quebecair cleaning up its act — a condition that will likely involve the installation of an Air Canada management team.

Quebecair currently employs 163 technicians to support the fleet of two McDonnell Douglas DC-8s, four Boeing 737s, two Convair 580s and one Hawker Siddeley 748.

The airline also operates under contract a propeller-driven fleet of three 580s and two 748s.

The Quebec government has received four offers to purchase all or part of the airline, with Quebec City-based Nordair Metro and a group of Quebecair employees both offering to take the airline lock, stock and barrel.

So far, Air Canada has not officially allied itself with any of the bidders, but the potential line-up is already apparent, with the national carrier massing its forces behind the employee group against Nordair Metro, which is 35 per cent owned by Nordair Inc. of Montreal.

Nordair is controlled by Air Canada's arch rival, Canadian Pacific Air Lines Ltd. of Vancouver.

Pioneer Day includes dancing and parade

I want to thank all the people who did not remind me of events taking place this week. Their thoughtfulness frees most of the column for Pioneer Day this weekend. On the other hand, please send news next week! Pioneer Day causes about a three-day creative burnout and when I sit down next Monday to write this piece, I'll need all the help I can get. Is your cat having a birthday? Tell me. Who knows, I may even try to get the Great Mystic Fish-Throwing Contest going at last. The organizers of the Canada Day party in Mystic missed the boat this year...but perhaps winter is a better time for a fish-throwing contest.

One future item to remember is the corn-roast and square dance in Knowlton August 16. I'm mentioning it now to give everyone a chance to get in shape for the event. In shape - that's spelled e-x-e-r-c-i-s-e.

For those of you who attend church more often than Easter and Christmas, remember your offering pledge when you take off to warmer climates (I hear the arctic is popular this year) during vacation. Bills always arrive at awkward times and bills to a church are no exception. A post-dated cheque to cover your absence is always appreciated. Go for it!

MUSEUM ANYONE?

Now, before diving into Pioneer Day, may I remind you of the Stanbridge East Museum. As mentioned before, there's more than the old Cornell Mill building, there's also Hodge's Store and Bill's Barn - all for a mere $1.50 for adults and 75¢ for the kids. The theme this year is "Rural Women" which is most appropriate as 1986 is the 75th anniversary of the Quebec Women's Institute. The Museum is open 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily. I'm sure all readers of Down The Pike are regular visitors...but you probably know people who aren't. Talk to them.

OK, here it is, Pioneer Day! A special feature this year is a display of weapons, loaned by the David M. Stewart Museum on Isle Ste-Hélène. If what they've sent whets your appetite for more, you can visit their museum by taking the Jacques Cartier bridge to Montreal and getting off halfway. Either the Fraser Highlanders or aa Compagnie Franche de la Marine will be on duty and the museum is a delight. One tip - choose a hot day to go. It's cool inside those six-foot stone walls!

MILITIA PARADE

Now, back to Philipsburg. After the service in the United Church, the militia will go on parade in their new uniforms, be inspected, then march into town to start the 5-km race with a small volley about 12:15. Runners not overcome by smoke will charge off and most will be back in 15 to 20 minutes. I can do it in five but cars are verboten. By then, the picnic in the park will be in full swing as people devour homemade sandwiches while applauding runners as they go panning past. Watch for a really hot race between Gordon Renny and the Jackass who is fondly tipped to lose - again.

Down the Pike

By Ashley Sheltus

Once the runners clear the road, the dancing will begin. First up will be the Royal Scottish County Dancers (about 2 p.m.). After their demonstration, they'll invite members of the audience to join them in a few of the easier measures. From personal experience, I can assure you that it's fun and you can cut a neat figure, no matter how many left feet you have.

MORE DANCING

Once the Highland Fling has been flung, the German Language Townshippers' Association will take to the roadway to show their stuff. Considering the names of original settlers, German and Scottish dancing would have been exactly what a visitor to Philipsburg would have found 200 years ago.

Dancing will take place at various times all afternoon and between sets you can visit the weapons display at the Town Hall or wander among the local artisans, while they paint, carve and weave. Some of them will have articles for sale, others will just be demonstrating. Have fun!

From time to time there will be loud bangs. That will be the militia demonstrating musketry both at the park and on the grounds of the Catholic Church. If you want to help them into full uniform, eat heartily. The sandwiches and drinks sold at their booth are provided by members of the community to help the militia. There will be another booth where you can join the militia in an honorary or active capacity. Join the Pioneer Loyalist Association and get your free programme and the 1986 souvenir button for only $1.00.

A final plug for Saturday's picnic and street dance. Like the Sunday affair, it's a family outing. You don't have to do anything, just come out for a good time. At the moment the plan includes square dancing by the Twisters-n-Twirlers but if too many of them decide to go on vacation, others will improvise. Let's face it, 200 years ago events just happened. Entertainment is planned, enjoyment is spontaneous. Come and enjoy.

Blokes hail tiddlywinks as next Olympic sport

LONDON (Reuter) — To escape from a nurdle and avoid being boondocked, you need a university degree, an agile wrist and a zany sense of humor.

So says Jonathan Mapley, Britain's finest exponent of tiddlywinks which must rank as one of the most esoteric sports in the world. But its supporters hope it one day may be included in the Olympics.

Players of the game revel in its obscure terminology, from the horrors of your wink being trapped under the cup in a nurdle to it being flung across the felt mat to the boondocks — "That's the real bad part of town," Mapley says.

From Melbourne to Boston, tiddlywinks seems to attract academics with a sharply tuned sense of the ridiculous.

Mapley is the world's fourth-ranked tiddlywink after three Americans.

The game is deceptively simple. You and your opponent use large counters, or squidgers as the cognoscenti call them, to flick flat little colored winks into a plastic cup.

Mapley, a 39-year-old chartered accountant and British tiddlywink champion, argues that this "requires a lot of intelligence as well as a sense of silliness."

"I like it because the game is good fun, slightly zany and demands steady nerves."

Pitching your squidger and wink against a worthy opponent has its allure because, he says, "much forethought and strategy are needed."

"You must have a university degree and manual dexterity."

Judging by the rotundity of his fellow players who gathered in London for a crack at the world speed-winking record, a voracious thirst for beer may also rank among the required traits of a champion tiddlywink.

"We tend to be built for comfort rather than speed," Mapley conceded. "Strategy breaks in the pub are an essential part of the game."

Sadly, under the glare of television lights in London, they failed to lower the speed-wink record of 27 winks potted in three minutes by a team of four Cambridge students back in 1974.

Britain stages eight tiddlywink tournaments a year and boasts about 250 tournament players.

"There are about 75 in the United States while France, Israel and Australia play it, but not very seriously," Mapley said.

U.S. TOP THREE

The United States boasts the top three players in the world: Larry Kahn of Silver Spring, Md., David Lockwood of Chicago and Aryi Gitelman of Boston.

"Washington, Boston and New York State are the tiddlywink hotbeds," Mapley said. "But the Massachusetts Institute of Technology is the real home of the American tiddlywink."

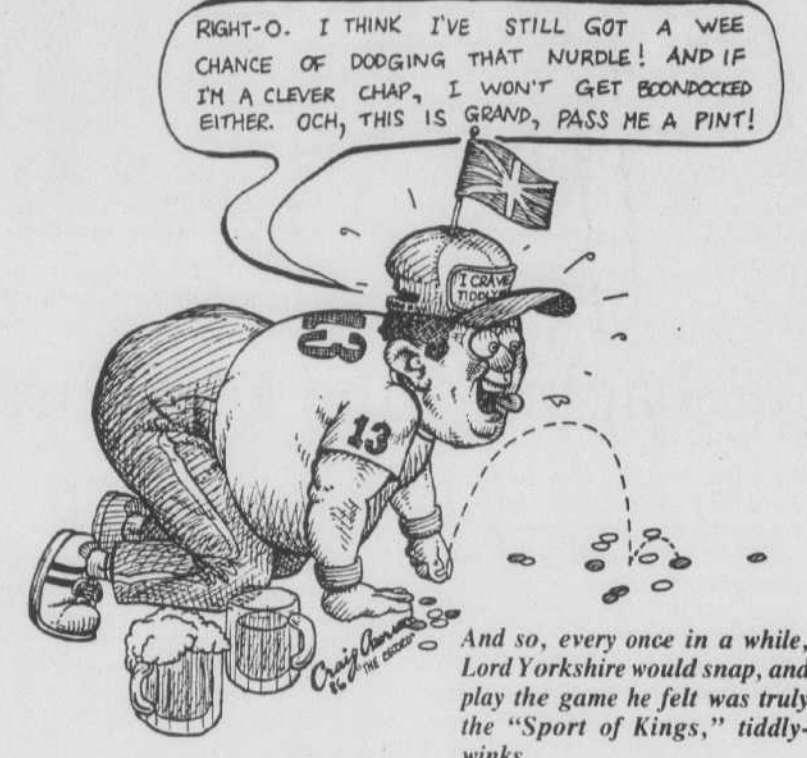

Mapley argues that tiddlywinks, like snooker, contains all the drama and tension of a gladiatorial contest on felt.

Snooker, a form of pool, has become a hugely successful television sport in Britain with its top players becoming green baize millionaires.

"I think that if a television company gave us 30 minutes air time and an expert commentator," said Mapley, "then people would be hooked (on tiddlywinks)."

However, he admitted ruefully: "Tiddlywinks is seen as trivial by everyone. There is a credibility gap to get through."

But, unabashed and ever optimistic, Mapley dreams one day of tiddlywinks being included as one of the sports at the Olympics. "We have got to aim that high."

And so, every once in a while, Lord Yorkshire would snap, and play the game he felt was truly the "Sport of Kings," tiddlywinks.

Tobacco ads still taboo, say anti-smoking group

TORONTO (CP) — The Non-Smokers' Rights Association says the packaging and advertising campaign for Sportsman Natural and Natural Light cigarettes links smoking with a healthy lifestyle and it is again urging the federal government to ban tobacco advertising.

Newspaper and other print advertisements have appeared recently in Ontario touting the "natural satisfaction" of the two Rothman's Inc. products. The cigarette packages show two men fishing in a canoe.

The Toronto-based anti-smoking group says the cigarette company is trying to portray smoking as an acceptable element of outdoor activity. It even takes issue with the products' names, since the two brands are comparably high in tar and nicotine and since neither Rothman's nor other manufacturers say what ingredients cigarettes contain.

"This light cigarette is the equivalent of a light beer with 10 per cent alcohol by volume," said David Sweenor, staff counsel for the association.

The group also worries that the Sportsman campaign will spread to other parts of the country from Ontario.

Rothman's declined comment Monday on the advertising campaign. Carol Hochu, public affairs co-ordinator for the company, said Health Minister Jake Epp is reviewing a tobacco industry proposal on advertising and promotion of its products and that it "wouldn't be prudent to comment" until he has completed his study.

Boy wonder belts out gospel tunes for Reagan

WASHINGTON — He has appeared at the Wolf Trap Center for the Performing Arts, at Howard University, and at many large churches. He has been featured in the press. Not long ago he was the Reagan's guest at the White House and was lauded in the President's State of the Union address.

And he's 12 years old.

All that public attention is fine, says gospel singer Tyrone Ford, a slight, friendly, good-looking youngster. But what he really likes to do is go to evening services at the churches surrounding his home -- "when I'm allowed," he adds, with a meaningful glance at his grandmother, Burter Carelock.

At church he can drink in the ringing gospel music he's grown up with. His family's modest two-story brick-front house here is smack in the middle of this tradition. Next door is the storefront Holy Mystery Mountain Church, and nearby, the Fishermen of Men Church and the Christian Tabernacle Church of God.

From this rich heritage, Tyrone has emerged as a kind of boy wonder who conducts the youth choirs of three different churches, plays piano, and sings gospel. And if things work out right, "I'd like to make a record this year," he says. "I believe I'm going to."

SOMETHING UNUSUAL

It started when Tyrone was four. "I knew there was something unusual," explained Mrs. Carelock as we sat with Tyrone before a kerosene heater in their living room, while his little cousin Natasha -- an obvious favorite of Tyrone's -- jumped on and off his lap. "You know how children start going to church and the come back home and start imitating that what they saw and heard?" Mrs. Carelock asked. "Well, Tyrone would pretend he was the pianist. One time he was watching the pianist at church, and he told her, 'I can play what you play.' He couldn't even reach the pedals, but he got up there and played the same notes she was playing."

"This friend of mine -- right across the street -- had an organ, and Tyrone would go over and play 'When the Saints Go Marching In' and 'This Little Light of Mine.' He could play those tubes by ear. People would ask him, 'Who taught you how to play?' He said, 'God did.'"

In his State of the Union address, the President referred to Tyrone's "towering talent" and said, "With God as your composer, Tyrone, your music will be the music of angels." Mrs. Carelock recalls vividly what happened the day before: "That morning -- it was about 8 o'clock -- I saw these three people coming here and we haven't even gotten up?" I went to the door and they said, "You must be Mrs. C. I'm a representative from President Reagan, and he sent us over here to invite Tyrone down to the White House tomorrow." I said, "Tomorrow!" He said, "Yes."

Christening

On Sunday morning at the 11 a.m. service in Hatley United Church, the little three-month-old son of Perry and Sue-Lane (Drew) Comeau was christened by the Rev. Jane Aikman. The baby was given the names Michael Lester and the godparents were his aunt, Sherry Drew and Tom Standish.

Following the service friends and relatives were guests of Michael's parents and grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Lester Drew for lunch in the vestry of the Church. The buffet table was centered with the christening cake which was the top layer of his parents' wedding cake, and a birthday cake for his great-great-grandmother, Mrs. Nellie Hartwell who was celebrating her 85th birthday.

Michael was the recipient of several gifts and currency, and during the luncheon, several pictures were taken, including some of the five generations.

Out of town guests were his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Coote and uncle from Richmond and his aunt, Mrs. Brian Suitor and Bridget of Lennoxville.

Crawford - McKenney wedding ceremony takes place

A very pretty wedding was solemnized in Wesley United Church, Beebe, at 2 p.m., when Sharon Louise McKenney, daughter of Louise McKenney of South Burlington, Vt., and Mr. and Mrs. Morris McKenney of Richmond, Vt., became the bride of Bradley Charles Crawford, son of Hollis Crawford and the late Margaret Crawford of Rock Island in a double-ring ceremony performed by Rev. Keith Eddy.

Miss Viola Moranville, at the organ, played the traditional wedding music, and also accompanied the soloist, Shawn King of Milton, Vt., who sang "Truly", a Lionel Ritchie rendition. Large bows of yellow ribbon with long streamers marked the guest pews.

The bride entered the church escorted by her uncle Edward Watson, and looked radiant in a white floor-length gown of nylon net over a white nylon bouffant skirt, lace bodice and long lace sleeves ending in points over the hand, tiny buttons were used as closing at bodice back. The nylon tulle veil was held by a band of red and yellow roses with greenery. Her bouquet was a colonial arrangement of red and yellow roses.

Carol O'Halloran of Burlington,

Vt., as maid of honor wore a floor-length gown of pink glazed cotton with a large round collar, full skirt with white ribbon sash, she carried a long stemmed yellow rose.

Susan Watson of Newport, Vt. and Kelly Whitney Kaufman of Kennet Square, Pa. as bridesmaids were gowned identical to the maid of honor.

Heidi Wendebank, step-sister of the groom, junior bridesmaid, was in a pink figured street-length dress, carrying a white basket of white daisies.

Jennifer Watson, cousin of the bride as flower girl, was charming in a dress identical to the junior bridesmaid. She carried a white basket, strewing petals before the bride down the aisle to the altar. Both girls wore baby's breath in their hair.

The bridal gown was worn by the groom's mother at her wedding 22 years ago. The attendants' gowns, with one exception, were made by the groom's step-mother Mrs. Barbara Crawford.

Gentlemen in the bridal party wore burgundy tuxedos, groom in tails, his boutonniere being white and burgundy roses.

Best man, Brian Crawford, brother of the groom, and ushers, Robert (Bobby) Crawford, brother of the groom, Tony Sheldon, cousin of the groom and Lee Clowery, friend of the couple wore yellow rose bud boutonnieres.

The bride's mother was attired in a blue and white swiss polka dot dress with white carnation corsage, and the groom's step-mother chose a blue taffeta dress with white carnation corsage.

Reception followed at Salon Bavaois in Beebe where 140 relatives and friends enjoyed a cold buffet meal, following which, dancing was enjoyed to music played by the Salon management for a time.

The bride threw the traditional bouquet which was caught by Jami Robertson, and the garter by Lance Dubois.

The cake was made by Ruby Sheldon, aunt of the groom, two top layers being on posts; iced in white with colors of the bridal party attire as trim, and topped with a miniature bride and groom standing on a platform under a pink canopy. The room was decorated with pink and white streamers and bells.

Third generations of the bride's family to be married on June 14. In attendance were four generations of the groom's family.

Many gifts were unwrapped by the couple and placed on display for a time.

The couple left on a short trip, the bride wearing a two piece dress with white pattern on peach for travelling.

They will be in their apartment on Main Street in Beebe, after July 1st.

Guests attended from Kennet Square, Penn., Burlington, Winnooski, Milton, Westfield, Island Pond, Newport, Vt., Mont real, St. Blaise, Magog, Ayer's Cliff, and surrounding area.

Linda Durocher, aunt, also godmother of the groom, pinned corsages on the parents and grandparents of the couple on entering the church.

Bridal shower

On Tuesday evening, June 17, approximately 25 friends and relatives gathered in the Bishop Stewart Memorial Anglican Church Hall, Frelighsburg, to honour Whitney Young with a bridal shower. When Whitney entered the hall, she was met with flashing bulbs and her brother Robert's fiancée, Debbie Rhicard of Stanbridge East with a corsage which was eventually pinned on the guest of honour.

Whitney was seated between her mother Norma Young and her future mother-in-law Joan Foster in front of a table laden with gaily wrapped gifts, which were opened and viewed by all. Whitney graciously thanked everyone for their thoughtfulness, but soon discovered she was not finished! A hat, made from a paper plate and the ribbons and bows from the gifts and designed by Lynn and Debbie Rhicard was ready, and Whitney patiently sat for the "fitting" and posed for more pictures!

Punch was served and a toast proposed to the future bride, followed by delicious refreshments of sandwiches, pickles, celery, olives, carrot sticks, tea and coffee.

The beautiful shower cake, decorated in white with pale yellow roses was cut by the guest of honour and served to all, assisted by Debbie and Lynn Rhicard.

Whitney became the bride of Ivan Foster, on Saturday, June 28, in the Bishop Stewart Memorial Church, where she was christened, confirmed and later a server.

Tomorrow's styles aren't likely to be more sensible

A little over 100 years ago the great American thinker Thoreau, left his now famous shack on the edge of Walden Pond in Massachusetts and went into town to buy himself a jacket. But when the smiling salesman showed him what she had on the rack he said no thanks, he'd like a jacket of the same style he was presently wearing. "I got it here several years ago," he said, "and I've found it both sensible and serviceable and I'd like another like it."

To which the girl replied, "Oh, no sir, I don't think you'd want to wear a jacket like that today. You see, they aren't making them anymore."

"They?" Thoreau repeated, "and who are they?"

He never got an answer for that, but he came away surmising that they were to be found somewhere among the mysterious and inaccessible people up on God street, well out of the sight and hearing of common men, and that they consulted no one but themselves when they issued these almighty decrees about what a man must wear this year. Thoreau had some rather caustic things to say about them, but they are apparently impervious to protest, even the protest of a great philosopher.

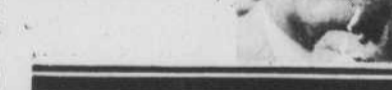

And they are still up on God street, still in business.

Which explains why, when I got on the bus to the city the other day, I discovered that I was flat broke. For when I reached for my billfold in my back pocket, it wasn't there. It wasn't there because there was no pocket there anymore. This was my first trip out in a new pair of trousers, a pair which he had styled to have two big kangaroo pockets in front and none at all back where they should be. And in my rush to get dressed in time, I had been so nonplussed about where they had intended me to keep my billfold that I had set it aside temporarily and then forgotten all about it.

They had decreed that a man should no longer be allowed to sit on his money.

Incidentally, the material which they are now putting into our trousers isn't exactly to my liking either. These new fabrics may look smart and keep their press, but they are so cold and clammy that when I finally took my seat on the bus the other day — on credit — I thought at first that Rosemary's baby must have been there before me.

H. Gordon Green

I suppose we can also thank them for the fact that you're not supposed to wear a shirt now unless it is burdened down with cuff links. How a man could manage those things if he didn't have a woman in the house, I can't imagine. And then there are those new ties which they have now knotted about our necks.

Even at its most sensible, a tie has always been a bit ridiculous; forever getting into our soup or catching catsup or getting trapped in the car door. In all the history of man, a necktie has never served any useful function other than to provide a convenient place for the baby to wipe his greasy hands.

But useless as it is, one has to shell out more shekels than ever to buy one. I thought I was pretty shrewd the other day when I found a perfectly good shirt for $5.00. Alas, it cost me $6.50 to buy the right tie to go with it.

And what next will they command us to wear? Pant cuffs again? Starched collars? Cuffpieces?

One thing is certain, tomorrow's styles aren't likely to be any more sensible than they are today. As Thoreau observed, whenever they order us to wear some new style, it is for the benefit of the manufacturers and sundry other of the great people in the market place, and not for the poor sucker who is obliged to wear it.

As the legend goes
We have a gentle monster
Who has been with us, since long, long ago.

He is very shy folks
And usually stays out of sight
But don't worry folks
He is much too nice to bite.

He has his lair under Mount Owls Head
Where one day he was wed
To a childhood sweetheart
Named Maggie

They have lived there all of their life
And she is a very good wife
She makes him some very good dishes
Of which she always adds fishes.

They frolic and play around Skinners Isle
And then they rest in the cave for awhile
They are happy and never pout
Even when there is an intrusion by Jacques.

I wonder if they have a big family
Herman has seen the skeleton of one of their babies
But he couldn't tell
If it was a boy or a lady.

Yes they play and frolic
From shore to shore and either by myth or fact
I hope that they will remain
With us forevermore.

And now I will add another name to the list
Our "Lake of Shining Waters" Could become known as
"Lake Memphrie-Maggie.

That is all for now folks
If you ever see them
Be as nice as you can be
Because they, like us
Are living in the land of the free.

Dracontology is a new word
How mysterious it sounds
If you want to know more
Ask Jacques, the answers can be found.

Adios Amigos

God Bless

HELEN BROWN BURTON (author)

Please note that the name Memphrie is derived from the name Memphris in this poem, which I wrote in July or August in the year of 1985.

HATLEY'S CANADA DAY '86

The day was just perfect
The weather was great.
What a huge crowd.
The workers can be proud.
The imagination of each float.
Even one pulled by a goat.
Transportation was the theme well chosen it would seem.
There were tractors, of course.
No parade without a horse.
There were cars galore
in the parade, and many more.
There was a school band.
The music all day was grand.
The cloggers did very well.
One can easily tell
lots of planning pays.
That goes on for days and days.
One idea strikes a tiny spark from that follows much work.
The children did their part with bicycle, pony tractor and cart.
A lot of work it takes but a great parade it makes.
Greetings from an old friend.
Entertainment for hours on end.
Plenty of good food to eat
each person's desire to meet.
For small children a fun ride
a donkey cart did provide.
There were races too
when their ride was through.
There were sales tables, no end where your money, you could spend.
The whole day really flew.
No one needed to be blue.
For the evening I can not vouch
I was home on the couch.
Congratulations on Hatley's Canada Day with my poem my respects I pay.

GIVEN AT SHERBROOKE, this 10th day of July, 1986. Me Pierre Huard, City Clerk

United Church Women hold regular meeting

AYER'S CLIFF — The last meeting before summer recess of the UCW was held in the church hall on June 17 with Muriel McClary and Merna Rogers as hostesses. A delicious dessert and tea were served at 1 p.m., and a pleasant social time enjoyed.

Following this, the meeting was called by the President Elizabeth Robinson who welcomed those present and opened the meeting with the Purpose repeated in unison. The devotions were taken by Muriel who read scripture from Micah 6th chap. verses 1-8. She closed with Mother Teresa's Prayer and the Lords Prayer repeated in unison. Rev. Diane Blanchard showed a film strip on native Indians and held a question period following. There is much we don't know about our Indian friends.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved. We missed our treasurer Ruth Clough who is having some trouble with her leg and all hope she may soon be much improved. Her report was given by Elizabeth which showed the finances were in good condition.

The casserole dinner netted us $385.00. It was voted to buy new tablecloths for the diningroom. Muriel McClary and Merna Rogers will look after this.

The Smorgasbord Supper was discussed and the planning committee are Muriel, Merna and Flora. The dinner will begin at 5 p.m. and prices will be $5.50 adults and children 6 to 12, $2.50. Money was voted to help with the expenses of the dinner following the outdoor service at the Harper Home on the lake.

We were pleased to have Frances de St. Croix with us for this meeting and to know her husband Austin is improving. We certainly miss him around the church and village.

The meeting was adjourned by Frances.

EAST FARNHAM — The regular meeting of the East Farnham U.C.W. was held at the home of Mrs. Jessie Horner on June 18. The President Bernice Thomas welcomed all and thanked Jessie for hosting the meeting. The devotions were taken by Olive Harris, who reminisced about when she was 14 years old and living in England she attended a temperance meeting. She sat by an elderly lady who knew Lucy M. Montgomery who wrote Anne of Green Gables. Later Mrs. Harris heard from the author and she visited the home. She recited a poem. Assurance which appeared in the Anglican paper, The Churchman. All repeated the Lord's Prayer. One hymn was sung "For the Beauty of the Earth."

The minutes of the last meeting were read and with two corrections were approved. The secretary read a thank-you from the President for the Memorial given in memory of her sister Daisy Sanborn.

The Treasurer's report given by Marion Collins was very favorable, also the Memorial Fund. Several donations had been added in memory of Daisy.

The Sunshine report given by Marion Collins in the absence of Elizabeth Collins showed a balance of $12.01. A gift of fruit had been given to Mr. Molenaar. Mrs. Molenaar thanked the members for all the support she had received at the time of her husband's death.

The work convener handed in $10.00 for goods sold since the last meeting.

The Fall Rummage sale date has been changed from Sept. 20 to Sept. 13.

Edith Shufelt reported on our outing in July, when we will be going to the Piggery in North Hatley, to see the play Stagestruck on July 23. Tickets are $5.50 each. Several cars will be going. After the play we will stop at Suzanne Quilliams in Eastman for a picnic lunch.

It was moved and seconded that the usual amount be given the Memorial Fund in memory of Mr. Molenaar, also a donation will be sent to the Mission and Service Fund.

Cards were signed by the members to be sent to Lela Shufelt in the CHU Hospital, to Leslie Collins in BMP Hospital and to Mrs. Clara Sutherland who celebrated her 85th birthday on June 17.

Members were reminded that Mrs. Mabel McEwing will be celebrating her 100th birthday on August 21. A shower of cards will be sent.

As there was no other business, tea and sunshine moneys were collected, and refreshments served by Christine Molenaar, Yvonne Hall, Hilda McEwing, June Royea and the hostess.

WATERLOO — The June 12th meeting of the Waterloo UCW began with a very enjoyable supper at the Roi du Champignon. Twenty four ladies attended and after the meal, adjourned to the home of Ginette Williams for a short business meeting.

The meeting opened with the recitation of the Purpose, after which Bobby Cochrane gave a beautiful devotional on "Loyalty". We must remember that during the summer, that the regular routine of the church is disrupted but the expenses are still there. When you are away, attend church, and encourage that church to carry on. We need enthusiasm to make friends for the Kingdom of God.

After roll call, Sylvia Salls, read the minutes of the last meeting, and, in the absence of the treasurer, her report was given by Doris McGovern. Myrtle Wilkinson said that the Board report was in the current news bulletin. Mildred Irwin gave the card report and the visits for the month totalled 52. The Christian pi: was passed to Gayle to be worn during the summer.

Julie Taylor had no report on our foster child, Marie but stated that letters to her would be welcome.

After Ann Harsell reported on donations for the bazaar, President Joyce Ossington announced that a nominating committee would be required for the coming year.

Don't forget the Summer Event, July 11, 12, 13. More information can be had from Joyce.

Various reports were presented. Money was given to the Board of Stewards, also to help children in the area to attend the United Church Camp this summer.

The business meeting closed early so that we could welcome our guests at 8 p.m. from Bulwer, Cookshire, East Clifton and Sawyerville.

After the arrival of our guests, Mrs. Hazel Rogers conducted devotions.

Mrs. Heather Turchyn welcomed our guests and introduced Mr. and Mrs. David Nortcliffe who gave an interesting presentation, including slides and commentary, on their stay in "Tuk" about one hundred miles north of Inuvik. Tuktoyaktuk lies on the Beaufort Sea. Clothing, carvings and knives were shown to the ladies who examined them carefully.

In the absence of Barbara Harvey, the President Elizabeth Biggs opened the meeting with prayer.

Business rising from the minutes was that a vacuum had been purchased for the church and as yet nothing more had been done re: the flooring for the church hall.

It was decided to hire Emma McMahon to clean the church hall every three months.

At the close of the business the members ended their evening at the Anglican Church where they watched the art of flower arranging. The demonstration was given by Dawn Smith of Longueuil and much enjoyed by all.

will continue for the two days with a barbeque, conformation classes of calf, beef and horse, Alumni showmanship class, showmanship classes for the evening events and on Sunday, July 20 a water fight, clean up and departure.

Congratulations are in order for three members of the Hatley 4-H Young Farmers club who recently participated in a Provincial event in Ormstown on Judging. Olivet Baptist Mission Circle holds regular meeting

SUTTON — The Olivet Baptist Mission Circle met at the home of Mrs. Edith Bennett on June 19. The President Mrs. Kay Woodard opened the meeting with the hymn, "Father I know that all my life is portioned out for me and the changes that are sure to come I do not fear to see", she read the Purpose of the Baptist Women's Missionary Society and all repeated the Lord's Prayer.

The scripture lesson read by Mrs. Dorothy Lawrence was taken from John 15, verse 10. If ye keep my commandments ye shall abide in my love. If we live by the teachings of Christ, old age will never be empty. Those who give much of themselves through service, through friendship, through caring for others will reap the blessings from the giving of such love in their old age. Christ said "My peace I leave with you", His peace is ours for the taking. This was followed by prayer.

The study by Mrs. Frances Baker was on Refugees. A refugee is anyone who has been uprooted from his home and looks for protection to a government or authority other than his former one. People become refugees because of armed conflict and political unrest, they have many hardships because of family separations and physical violence. Here in Canada believers have special responsibilities because God has granted us the privilege of living in a tremendous country with vast resources and so many Canadian Baptist Churches have sponsored refugees, given them language courses and helped out financially and in other ways.

News cast by Miss Lees Bennett. The United Nations Organization has proclaimed 1986 as "International Peace Year". This proclamation is intended to be a call for reflection on the right of all peoples around the world to live in peace. The OXFAM-Quebec TV special attempted to make Quebecers more aware of the critical situation in the Third World and the specific aid needed there. A special service was held in marking the 50th anniversary of the ordination of women in the United Church of Canada, this was followed by prayer.

Mrs. Esther Cleland gave special prayers and blessings for all missionaries throughout the world, prayer partners were mentioned and French Protestant Churches in Quebec. A hymn followed, Lord for tomorrow and its needs I do not pray, keep me my God from stain of sin just for today.

Eight members answered the roll call by reading interesting clippings and there were two visitors. A letter was read from Mrs. A.G.J. Steeves who now lives in New Brunswick. A social hour followed when the ladies enjoyed a cup of tea and delicious refreshments.

St. Andrew's WMS hold regular meeting

SHERBROOKE — On June 9 the members of the WMS of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church met at 6 p.m. for dessert served by Roxianne Walker and Eva Sawyer. These delicious refreshments were enjoyed by all and a time of fellowship at this time was also enjoyed prior to the commencement of the final meeting until September.

The meeting was opened by the President, Alene Morrison, who read a poem entitled "Creed". The hymn, "Christ for the World" was sung, accompanied by Annie Goodfellow at the piano. The motto and purpose were repeated in unison. Sixteen members answered the roll call. The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

The members were requested to watch for information on South Asia during the summer, as the program in the fall will be on that country.

Johnson sets record at Goodwill Games

MOSCOW (CP) — Somewhere above, Harry Jerome is smiling and nodding. After 20 years, there is another Canadian who is the elite of the world's sprinters.

Ben Johnson of Toronto won the men's 100-metre dash Wednesday at the Goodwill Games in 9.95 seconds, handily beating arch-rival Carl Lewis of the United States.

It was the fastest time to be recorded at sea level and matched the second-fastest clocking ever, emphasizing Johnson's contention since late last summer that he is the No. 1 sprinter around.

Not since Jerome was tying world records for the 100-metre and 100-yard dashes in the 1960s has there been a Canadian atop the sprint world. Jerome died in 1982.

"I am going to be hard to beat right now if I am running faster than Lewis," said Johnson, who recorded his third consecutive victory over his American rival, who finished third in 10.06. Chidi Imo of Nigeria was second in 10.04.

And Johnson, a 24-year-old native of Jamaica who came to Toronto when he was 14, is convinced he could have matched, or bettered, the world mark of 9.93 set three years ago by American Calvin Smith.

"If my (starting) block didn't slip at the start a couple of inches, the time would have been even better," said Johnson, who will be running this weekend in a meet in East Germany before competing later this month at the Commonwealth Games in Edinburgh, Scotland.

SET MARK

Smith set the world mark in Colorado Springs, Colo., and American Jimmy Hines clocked 9.95 in 1968 at the Mexico City Olympics. Both times were set at high altitudes, considered by track experts as easier to do than at sea level where air resistance is heavier.

Later, Lewis anchored the U.S. 4x100-metre relay team to victory in a time of 37.98 seconds, 15 hundredths of a second off the world best, which Lewis set with three others at the last Olympics.

Meanwhile, hurdler Edwin Moses of the United States continued a remarkable career which has given him four world records at 400 metres with his 111th consecutive win, clocking 47.96 seconds.

A Soviet cycling team lowered the world record in the four-kilometre pursuit to four minutes, 12.830 seconds.

Mike Conley of the United States won the triple jump with a leap of 17.69 metres. The world record holder in the triple jump, Willie Banks of the United States, pulled out of the competition at the last minute with an ankle injury sustained Monday at a meet in Finland.

Doug Nordquist of the United States won the men's high jump at 2.34.

Olga Vladykina of the Soviet Union won the women's 400 in 49.96, and her teammate, Tatyana Samolenko, won the women's 1,500 in 4:05.50.

And twin brothers from Portugal, Domingos and Dionisio Castro, finished first and third, respectively, in the 10,000 metres.

Canada gets fourth win at World Championships

TENERIFE, Canary Islands (CP) — The Canadian men's basketball team has posted its fourth straight victory at the world championships, defeating the Netherlands 96-79 Wednesday.

Centre Greg Wiltjer from Victoria, B.C., was the top scorer of the game with 20 points, while guard Eli Pasquale of Sudbury, Ont., and forward Gerald Kazanowski of Nanaimo, B.C., added 18 each.

"We knew we were going to have a hard game and we wanted to make sure that we played a very aggressive game and took the game right to them," said head coach Jack Donohue. "We felt we had to play a very tough defence; they're a very good team."

Kazanowski opened the scoring with a hook shot in the first minute of play. Wiltjer made it 4-0, before seven-foot-four Rick Smits put the Netherlands on the scoreboard. Smits had a game total 13 points while Emil Hagens led the Dutch team's scoring with 17.

Captain Jay Triano of Niagara Falls, Ont., who had 17 points, said the victory puts the Canadians in good shape for the final game of their opening round today against Yugoslavia, which beat Argentina 87-68 Wednesday.

The All Star votes are in Raines doesn't make it; he's not starting the game

NEW YORK (AP) — Outfielder Darryl Strawberry, one of three New York Mets voted to the starting lineup, was the leading vote-getter for the National League all-star team today by the baseball commissioner's office.

Strawberry attracted 1,619,511 votes, more than 135,000 ahead of the next most popular player in the fan balloting — his teammate, catcher Gary Carter.

The third Mets starter is first baseman Keith Hernandez.

Also selected to the starting team for Tuesday's game at Houston were second baseman Ryne Sandberg of the Chicago Cubs, shortstop Ozzie Smith of the St. Louis Cardinals, third baseman Mike Schmidt of the Philadelphia Phillies and outfielders Dale Murphy of the Atlanta Braves and Tony Gwynn of the San Diego Padres.

Strawberry was hitting .295 with 13 home runs and 45 runs batted in through Wednesday. He is the first NL player ever to start all-star games in his first three full seasons in the major leagues.

Hernandez, hitting .286, won his eighth consecutive Glove Award last season and will be making his first all-star start. Montreal Expos' rookie Andres Galarraga finished fourth in the voting.

Carter is hitting only .241 but has 13 homers and 57 RBI. He won his sixth consecutive selection with 1,486,141 votes. Since 1970, when the fans regained the vote for the starting teams, only Carter, Johnny Bench and Ted Simmons have been selected as starting catchers for the National League. Montreal's Mike Fitzgerald was fourth.

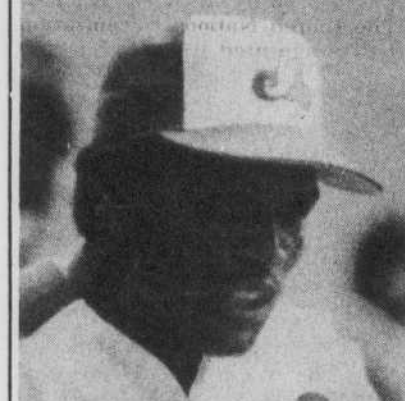

RAINES MISSES START

Murphy earned his fifth straight starting assignment with a .273 average, 14 homers and 36 RBI. Tony Gwynn held off a late surge by Tim Raines of the Expos to win by 82,848 votes for his debut as a starter. Gwynn, the 1984 NL batting champ, is hitting .335. Andres Dawson and Mitch Webber of the Expos were eighth and 11th, respectively.

Sandberg makes his second start at second base. He has a .276 average with 43 RBI. Expo Vance Law was fifth.

Smith makes his fourth straight start at shortstop and joined Strawberry, Carter, Sandberg and Murphy in attracting more than one million votes. Smith is batting .290 and is known as the Wizard of Oz for his fielding exploits. Montreal's Hubie Brooks finished second.

Schmidt, at .285 with 17 homers and 61 RBI, was a starter at third base from 1979-84. He began this season splitting his time between first and third base but has been mostly full-time at third for most of the season. Tim Wallach of the Expos was third.

Floyd Youmans pitches a beauty

With Youmans' help, Expos defeat Astros 2-1

MONTREAL (CP) — Since becoming manager of the Expos, Buck Rodgers has rarely hesitated to remove his starting pitchers at the first sign of trouble.

Yet when Floyd Youmans found himself in a jam in the eighth inning of Montreal's 2-1 National League baseball victory over the Houston Astros on Wednesday night, Rodgers didn't even have anybody warming up in the bullpen.

It may have seemed somewhat uncharacteristic to observers of the Expos field skipper, particularly since runners were at second and third with only one out, but to Rodgers it was right in line with his philosophy.

"He's a young man and we're bringing him along in a certain way," said Rodgers, who watched his starter get out of trouble with back-to-back strikeouts.

"He's had a lot of adversity. He struggled through his first five or six starts, but now he's progressed to the point where we can pitch him nine innings.

"He's coming along the way we want him to and tonight he passed another test."

LAUDS EFFORT

Rodgers described the young righthander's two-hit and career-high equalling 11-strikeout performance as his best of the season.

"He wasn't a one-pitch pitcher and he wasn't a thrower," Rodgers said. "He was a pitcher who had command of all of his pitches and who used them all."

Youmans, 9-5 walked four en route to his second complete game of the year, the first coming when he one-hit the Phillies in a 12-0 rout on June 8.

"He didn't have all those runs to work with and he had to make good pitches to good hitters in some tough situations," said pitching coach Larry Bearnarth.

Youmans wasted little time setting the tone for the evening, striking out the first three Astros he faced.

"I had a good feeling coming out of the bullpen before the game that things would be good for me tonight," said Youmans, who won his fifth straight decision. "I cut down on my base on balls and I was able to get my changeup over when I want and that really helped me.

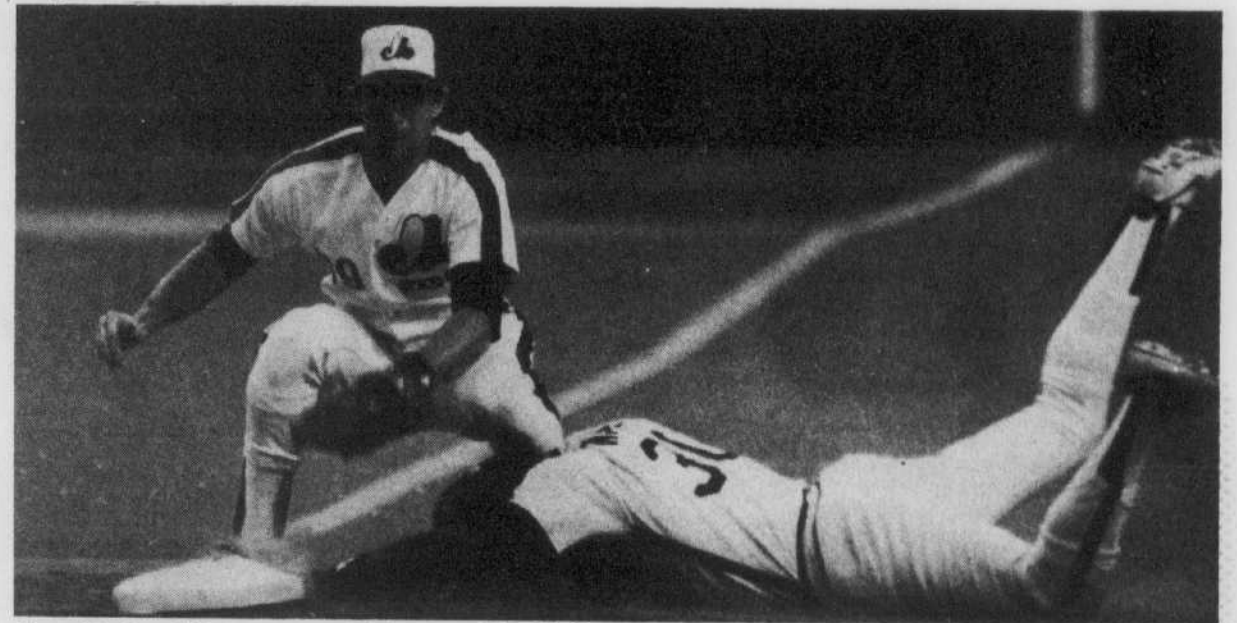

"I'm also relaxing more. I went through a period of trying to do more than I could, but now I'm just trying to do what my abilities allow and I'm getting great results."

The Expos gave their 15,316 fans something to cheer about in the first inning, when Andre Dawson drilled his 14th home run into the left field bleachers.

Montreal added to their lead against Bob Knepper, 10-7, when Youmans led off the third with a base hit to left. He went to second when Dawson was hit by a pitch and scored when Hubie Brooks followed with the second of his three singles.

Expos players congratulate Floyd Youmans after his win.

Tony Walker skids to a stop at third where Tim Wallach is too late with the tag.

Blue Bombers played it somewhat simple last week and a balanced passing attack. The Bombers lost Jeff Boyd to the National Football League but gained a competent replacement in Perry Tuttle.

"He hasn't dropped a ball yet," Murphy said of Tuttle, a former first-round pick in the NFL draft. "I also like his blocking downfield."

Tuttle has caught 12 passes for 144 yards and wideout partner James Murphy has hauled in 24 passes for 281 yards to lead the league.

Quarterback Tom Clements, meanwhile, has found his form after throwing four interceptions against the Lions. Clements completed 20 of 23 passes for 274 yards in just one half of the Saskatchewan game and leads the league with a 67.2-per-cent completion ratio.

Murphy plans to stick to the leaner approach to his offence again when the Bombers meet the Tiger-Cats in Hamilton.

The Tiger-Cats, struggling at 0-2 mark, must find ways to stop Winnipeg's effective running game wing why Rough Rider head coach Joe Moss concentrated on recruiting receivers from the United States Football League who were familiar with the run-and-shoot offence. While J.C. Watts has done a fine job throwing and scrambling for the Rough Riders, Lester Brown has given Ottawa the running game they need to set up the pass. Calgary did better under quarterback Rick Johnson the last time out. Johnson's favorite target is Emanuel Tolbert.

Prediction: Ottawa by five (tonight).

TORONTO (2-0) at B.C. (1-1)

The Lions paid a heavy price for letting Mervyn Fernandez punt for the injured Lui Passaglia when the stylish receiver hurt his hand last week. Toronto may be forced to go with a sub-par Condredge Holloway after the veteran quarterback was bounced out of the game last week because of a knee problem. The Argonauts have managed to win despite being handicapped by a horrendous offensive line. Tailback Craig Ellis has helped take away some of that pressure but Toronto has yet to protect his quarterback effectively.

Prediction: B.C. by six (Friday).

WINNIPEG (1-1) at HAMILTON (0-2)

The Tiger-Cats looked awful against Ottawa last week, allowing Rough Riders to romp through the defence at will. Hobart continues to run effectively but his passing has been spotty and his receivers have dropped too many balls. The return of Rocky DiPietro will help. The Blue Bombers should be able to handle Hamilton although the Tiger-Cats can be expected to put on a better show than in recent weeks.

Prediction: Winnipeg by three (Saturday).

EDMONTON (2-0) at SASKATCHEWAN (1-1)

The Eskimos are coming off a 36-13 romp over B.C. while Saskatchewan is staggering from the Winnipeg blowout, a combination of opposite mood that often makes for an interesting game. The Roughriders were handcuffed against Winnipeg; quarterback Joe Paopao completed seven of 12 passes for just 48 yards while running back Bobby Johnson rushed three times for six yards. Saskatchewan should bounce back but look to Edmonton to bash them back to earth.

Did Bias free-base cocaine?

BALTIMORE (AP) — A prosecutor in the cocaine-induced death of Len Bias is investigating whether the University of Maryland basketball star smoked cocaine free-base vapor, which has more impact than inhaling cocaine powder.

The Maryland medical examiner reported two weeks ago that Bias, a 22-year-old who had passed three National Basketball Association physicals, was crippled within minutes of exposure to cocaine. The medical examiner, Dr. John Smialek, said Bias probably had snorted the drug.

However, on Wednesday,

Smialek's assistant, Dr. Dennis Smyth, said an examination of Bias's trachea showed it was red and congested, possibly indicating heat damage from inhaling free-base vapor.

Another sign of free-basing, Smyth said, was the unusually high reading of cocaine in Bias' blood, 6.5 milligrams per litre.

"We've never seen people snorting get levels that high," Smyth said.

Smialek said cocaine was the sole reason for Bias's death because the drug interrupted electrical signals from Bias's brain to his heart.

Lenn girl Jocelyn Smith vies for championship, shares lead

LENOXVILLE — Lennoxville's own Jocelyn Smith, formerly of the old Lennoxville Golf Club is currently tied for the lead at the Quebec Ladies Amateur Golf Championship. With the absence of Ontario's Brenda Burns, Smith is favored to win the tournament, which she has placed second at for the past two years. This following the 1983 tournament, when she beat out the rest to take the championship.

Smith is currently tied with three others: Eve-Lyne Brion de LaVallee du Richelieu; Nadia St-Amand of Bellevue and Sharon Smith of Hamilton, Ontario. All four share a score of 77 as they go into the second round today.

Overtrick fever lays South low

By James Jacoby

Greed is a terrible thing in any human endeavor, but it is often encountered in duplicate bridge, where an extra trick can be quite important.

South won the ace of spades in hand, noting that he was in a good contract and had received a favorable lead. (A heart or diamond opening lead would have placed him at some risk.) Four club tricks would be enough for him to make the contract, and his chances of winning four clubs looked good. So he led a club to the ace in dummy, at which point East dropped the nine. Now of course a low club returned toward the jack would guarantee the contract against any remaining club combination, and at rubber bridge that would be the automatic play. But South was intrigued by that nine-spot. It might be from Q-9 doubleton, in which case he could lay down the king and make an extra trick. Or maybe it was from 10-9 doubleton, and if he returned to his hand and led the jack he could make all the club tricks that way.

Finally, it could be a singleton nine. Then leading the jack from his hand could not hurt. When West covered, South would win in dummy, force out West's 10 and still have the spade queen to get back to dummy. That play looked best. He came to his hand with a spade and led the club jack. When West showed out, South's hand collapsed. He had overlooked the possibility of a false-card by East.
