Israel reports further military gains

Second ceasefire accepted in Mid-east

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Israel announced agreement with Egypt for a ceasefire along the Suez canal today, and Defence Minister Moshe Dayan said the truce appeared to be "working properly."

"I hope we have now reached the end of fighting," Dayan told the Israeli state radio five hours after the ceasefire deadline.

Earlier some "light exchanges of fire" were reported by Israel along the Suez front.

Moments after announcing the truce, Israel reported that in Tuesday's fighting between the first and second ceasefire its troops extended their beachhead on the west bank of the Suez canal down to Port Suez, at the southern end of the canal, and on to Adabiya, 11 miles south of Suez on the coast.

The Israelis said this advance surrounded the Egyptian 3rd Army east of the canal and cut all communication routes between Port Suez and Cairo.

Israeli press reports said 20,000 Egyptian troops and 200 tanks were caught in the encirclement.

Egypt, meanwhile, reported that fighting intensified late Tuesday, especially west of the canal, as a result of the "enemy pushing new reinforcements."

Both Egypt and Israel had ordered their troops to stop fighting late Monday afternoon in response to a UN Security Council ceasefire resolution adopted early Monday. But hard fighting continued Tuesday on both the Egyptian and Syrian fronts, and the Security Council issued another ceasefire appeal Tuesday afternoon.

PULLBACKS URGED

The second resolution urged the Arabs and Israelis to return to the positions they held at the time of the first ceasefire and also asked UN observers who have been along the Israeli frontiers since the 1967 war be sent to the battle fronts.

The Israeli command said Maj. Gen. Enzio P. H. Siilasvuo of Finland, the chief of the UN truce observers, made contact with Defence Minister Moshe Dayan early today and Dayan asked him to transmit a proposal to Cairo for a 7 a.m. ceasefire.

Israel said the Egyptians' affirmative response was received at 5:45 a.m., an hour and 15 minutes before the ceasefire hour.

Syria, meanwhile, had said it was studying the first ceasefire resolution, and UN Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim announced Tuesday night that Damascus agreed to accept the resolution "on the basis that it means withdrawal of Israeli forces from all Arab territories occupied in June, 1967, and thereafter, and on the basis of guaranteeing the rights of the Palestinian people."

The Syrian state radio announced the government's action and Foreign Minister Abdel Halim Khaddam's message to Waldheim in a broadcast early today.

In fighting Tuesday, Israel said it bombed Egyptian troop concentrations on both sides of the Suez canal, downed five Egyptian planes in dogfights and pushed its beachhead on the west bank of the Suez canal to within about 50 miles of Cairo.

Gen. Haim Herzog, the military commentator for Tel Aviv radio, attributed much of the fighting to Egyptian efforts to "tidy up" the zigzag ceasefire lines.

JETS SHOT DOWN

Egypt, in what it called "the most vicious fighting since the outbreak of the war," said it shot down seven Israeli jets and retook all of the canal's eastern edge except for an Israeli stronghold just north of the Great Bitter Lake. An Egyptian military correspondent said a group of Israeli reinforcements for the west bank have been "completely surrounded."

Syria said 60 Israeli planes tried to bomb civilian targets north of Damascus and in the Mount Hermon area but Syrian jets brought down 11 planes. It also reported artillery strikes against Israeli positions and the destruction of Israeli equipment, and said it sank an Israeli gunboat while fighting off a naval and helicopter attack on "civilian targets on the coast at Latakia and Bamias."

Israel said its bombers made "exact hits" on the fuel terminal at Khan Ayish north of Damascus and 10 Syrian planes were shot down in aerial combat.

Israel said Arab terrorists shelled five of its villages on the Lebanese border but caused no casualties or damage.

Industry minister says document inconclusive

MONTREAL (CP) — A leaked government document used by the Parti Quebecois to prove the economic feasibility of Quebec independence tells only part of the story, says the provincial industry minister.

Guy Saint-Pierre said in an interview the document released earlier Tuesday by the Parti Quebecois is part of a provincial government study on the costs and benefits of Confederation to Quebec. But its figures conflict with another government study and still have to be checked.

The document was released by Rene Levesque, Parti Quebecois leader, who said the Quebec Liberals are lying when they say the province benefits from being in Canada.

He told an election meeting the document was given to his party by a civil servant who was tired of hearing government officials "lie to the population about things done with public funds."

Arguments over the Parti Quebecois's proposal for an independent Quebec have dominated the campaign for the Oct. 29 provincial general election.

Premier Robert Bourassa said Tuesday he will release other documents today showing federalism is profitable for Quebec.

SAYS CAPITAL LOST

The document released by the Parti Quebecois says $10.7 billion of Quebecers' savings left the province between 1947 and 1971 and provided development capital in the United States and Ontario.

It also says the federal government collected $2.616 billion more in taxes in Quebec than it spent in the province between 1961 and 1971.

Jacques Parizeau, the PQ economist, said the figures show Quebec had a positive balance of payments every year between 1947 and 1971 except for 1965. He said this verifies his recent budget for the first year of independence.

Party leaders campaigned in various parts of the province. Premier Bourassa told about 200 persons in Mont Joli, 185 miles northeast of Quebec City, the Parti Quebecois is trying to turn attention away from its unrealistic doctrine by releasing tons of figures and statistics.

Gabriel Loubier, Union Nationale leader, told a rally in Riviere du Loup, 105 miles northeast of the provincial capital, that Mr. Bourassa and Prime Minister Trudeau are the main people to blame "for the rise in Quebec separatism." Premier Bourassa, despite his mandate as leader of Quebec, "contented himself with being the steward of Ottawa."

In Montreal, Creditiste leader Yvon Dupuis said in a CBC television interview he now feels the corporation's French language network is doing objective reporting on the election campaign.

Mr. Dupuis had complained earlier in the campaign that the network's television newscasts concentrated on the Liberals and Parti Quebecois.

Earlier Tuesday in Baie Comeau, 220 miles northeast of Quebec City, Mr. Bourassa ran into the stormiest meeting since his campaign began.

The sitting member of the local Saguenay riding is Lucien Lessard of the Parti Quebecois. In his speech, Mr. Bourassa called Mr. Lessard a "vulgar little rascal" for his attitude in the Quebec national assembly. Parti Quebecois supporters with placards were scattered through the crowd of about 600.

Quebec priests politic

QUEBEC (CP) — Thirty-one priests have released a statement here criticizing politicians and other groups who, they say, have been calling the Parti Quebecois program "Communist" or "terrorist" during the current provincial election campaign.

"We assert that we have found nothing in the program which merits these accusations," the priests said in the statement.

The statement, released Monday, also criticizes "certain parties" for trying to create a climate of fear during the campaign which ends Oct. 29.

In an interview, three priests acting as spokesmen alleged that Jean-Noel Tremblay, a Union Nationale member of the national assembly and former minister, said that PQ supporters have blood on their hands.

They said Mr. Tremblay has said the PQ is offering a "Quebec with a touch of Chile sauce", and criticized "the statements of Mr. Yvon Dupuis according to which PQ supporters are terrorists, etc."

Abbe Armand Therrien, one of the spokesmen and president of the Parti Quebecois association in Portneuf County, said their statement should not be considered formal support for the Parti Quebecois.

He said a majority of the 31 priests would not sign a public statement endorsing the PQ.

...and Caouette attacks

In Ottawa, Real Caouette, national Social Credit leader, accused the priests of acting in a disgusting manner by defending the Parti Quebecois program from criticism by Mr. Dupuis and other Quebec politicians.

In a news release, Mr. Caouette called the group "some little priests who are more pequistes (PQ supporters) and socialists than Catholics and Christians."

He said the priests had acted in a "disgusting and shocking manner by cloaking the separatist and socialist policies of the PQ in their white surplises."

Mr. Caouette singled out Abbe Gilles Marquis, one of the priests' spokesmen, and said that he "speaks like a Marxist when he asserts that the present capitalist regime only maintains a disadvantaged class, and when he pretends that only the PQ is now attacking the foundations of capitalism."

He said it is his opinion that "these priests should be working to restabilize the Christian doctrine instead of acting as defenders and propagandists for a political movement which has the support of a whole litany of Marxists, socialists, felquistes (FLQ supporters) and revolutionaries of the same kind."

Hanging up to cabinet

OTTAWA (CP) — Despite today's vote in the Commons on the capital punishment issue, it is up to the federal cabinet to say whether the gallows will be used again.

MPs were freed from party discipline in the vote, to decide to limit hanging to killers of on-duty policemen and prison guards or to make all premeditated murders subject to the death penalty.

Despite the outcome, not all murderers will necessarily hang.

Oil tanker controversy

OTTAWA (CP) — Reports that oil tankers are being diverted from Canadian destinations by oil companies has prompted a stiffly-worded telegram to major companies from Energy Minister Donald Macdonald.

"The government of Canada is concerned at unconfirmed reports that oil shipments to Canada are being diverted from this country by international shippers to other destinations," he said in the telegram.

"Given the uncertainties about oil supply to Eastern Canada, such diversions are clearly against the interest of Canadians and I would express to you most strongly my objections to any such practice."

A spokesman for Mr. Macdonald said the telegram was sent "to about nine or 10 of the big refiners," but he was unable to name them.

The cabinet can continue to commute all death sentences to life imprisonment, as it has done in every case since 1962.

The government bill being voted on would renew a five-year moratorium on capital punishment that expired last December.

During the 10 months since the bill was introduced in January, a series of unsuccessful attempts were made to toughen its provisions.

While a close vote was expected, there were cautious predictions that abolitionists would score a narrow victory and give the bill third reading.

Whatever the outcome it is assumed that anybody convicted this year of murdering persons other than police officers and prison guards will have his sentence commuted.

Since the previous ban expired, 1961 Criminal Code amendments dealing with premeditated killings have come back into force.

Prime Minister Trudeau, an abolitionist, has said no automatic commutations will take place but neither will the cabinet let a murderer hang just to prove a point.

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, also an abolitionist, has said the government should follow the will of Parliament as expressed by legislation.

Allan Lawrence (PC—Northumberland-Durham), a former Ontario attorney-general, complained during the debate that the proposed legislation is meaningless because the cabinet can be expected to commute in all cases.

help the handicapped and buy milk for Camp Chez Grand Maman. Tickets for the cow are selling for $10. The club already has taken in $3,000. The club's president, Marius Ruel stands beside a bull from Nichol's Farm, Lennoxville.

Impeachment talk abates with Nixon decision

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's promise to surrender nine Watergate tapes has blunted an impeachment initiative, but it has not silenced calls for a new special prosecutor.

Nixon worked at Camp David, Md., today on a television address to be delivered at 9 p.m. EDT.

He was expected to appeal for national unity in the wake of Monday's startling about-face, when he surprised even his closest advisers by deciding to obey a federal appeals court order on the tapes.

Meanwhile, the House of Representatives continued today a preliminary impeachment inquiry, begun just before Nixon's lawyers announced that the tapes would be given to a federal judge.

House leaders said the inquiry will continue at least until the effects of Nixon's action become known.

It was clear, however, that initial reaction to the president's reversal was favorable.

"Thank God," said Senator Barry Goldwater (Rep. Ariz.). "I'm glad it came to pass," said Democratic Chairman Robert Strauss.

Wall Street's Dow-Jones industrial average jumped 17 points in less than an hour on news of Nixon's decision.

WILL REVIEW TAPES
It was a day of surprising events. Here is where things stood when the dust settled.

—U.S. District Judge John Sirica was scheduled soon to begin reviewing the nine tapes of Nixon's private conversations about the Watergate scandal. These are tapes that special prosecutor Archibald Cox had sought before he was fired.

Sirica will listen to them in private and decide what, if any, parts of them should be presented to a grand jury. They likely will become public this way only if presented as evidence at a trial.

—The Senate Watergate committee was back in court fighting its own battle for the tapes. Sirica has ruled that the committee, unlike Cox, has no legal authority to use the courts to get the tapes.

Previously, it appeared that the committee had struck a deal with the White House and would settle for an edited transcript of the tapes, authenticated by Senator John Stennis. (Dem. Miss.)

But the committee appealed to the U.S. Circuit Court for full access, denied that it had made any deal not to continue the suit, and told Nixon there appeared to be confusion about the terms of the compromise agreement. After that, and after Nixon gave in on the tapes Cox had sought, the White House withdrew its offer to the committee.

—Crucial questions remained unanswered about the future of the justice department's newly inherited inquiries into the Watergate and related matters. It wasn't known whether prosecutors will be allowed to get any presidential tapes or papers besides those Nixon agreed to give Sirica.

STAFF MAY RESIGN

There also were reports that the staff of the special prosecution force was prepared to resign as a group. Their new boss, Assistant Attorney-General Henry Petersen, met with them Tuesday and said later that they said nothing about resigning but did not promise to stay, either.

—Vice-President-designate Gerald Ford opposed any new special prosecutor. "I see no need for that whatsoever," he said. He said Nixon's move should "wipe out any semblance of a justification" for impeachment.

—Senator Hubert Humphrey (Dem. Minn.) said the decision to release the White House tapes will deflate congressional impeachment moves. Humphrey said he still favors a new special Watergate prosecutor, to be named either by Sirica or by Congress.

—Cox vowed to remain in Washington for the time being. "I know all citizens will be happy, as I am, that the president wisely chose to respect the rule of law," he said.

Nixon apparently reached his eventual decision after being told that House Republicans would not defend him strongly unless he turned over the tapes.

Before that, Nixon had intended to fight the matter by claiming that he had settled the dispute out of court by firing his adversary, Cox. Papers had been filed with Sirica. But, at noon, Nixon informed his chief court-room lawyer, Charles Alan Wright, that he would produce the tapes.

INQUIRY STARTED

About the same time, several impeachment resolutions were being introduced in the House. House Speaker Carl Albert referred them to the judiciary committee, which announced a preliminary inquiry into whether the evidence warranted a move to impeach Nixon.

New road scheme

SHERBROOKE (CC) — By mid-November municipal officials hope to implement their innovative west ward traffic direction plan.

Designed to ease traffic congestion, the plan will turn the west ward sector near the Jacques Cartier bridge into a maze of one way streets.

Major changes of the plan are the traffic lights at the south end of the bridge and the changing of Denault and Galt streets into one way streets in opposite directions.

Cross-streets between the two will also have alternate single direction bearings. Municipal works crews are already hard at work building the different infrastructures needed under the plan. Work entails the widening of Galt street at the corner of Denault; the revamping of the exits and entrances at the bridge and the closing off of Kitchener street at Galt.

Most of the major construction work should be completed within two weeks if all goes according to schedule, a municipal spokesman said yesterday.

The plan is innovative in the sense that it will mark the first time the city has used a network of one-way streets to ease traffic congestion.

Entertainment rates increase

By JAMES NELSON
OTTAWA (CP) — Unless private citizens and corporations are prepared to spend more money on them in the next 10 or 20 years, Canada's big theatre, music and arts organizations may have to become government-run agencies.

So says Andre Fortier, head of the 21-member Canada Council, which dispenses roughly $45 million a year on the arts, humanities and social sciences.

Mr. Fortier, 46, has had a 30-year association with the performing and visual arts since his days at Laval University, Quebec, where he took a classical liberal arts course.

Subsequently he earned an honors degree in mathematics from the University of Montreal. That led to employment with the federal treasury board for 13 years, during which his main interest was in government spending programs for the arts.

The council was formed 16 years ago with an endowment income of $5 million a year. The federal government later began putting more money directly into the council's work.

BUDGET INCREASED
Its present $45 million annual budget is divided between the arts and the social sciences. But even with $20 million a year going into the performing and visual arts, many theatrical, music, ballet and opera companies and art galleries are still crying poverty.

Mr. Fortier was asked in an interview whether this is because, knowing there is government funds available, they have become extravagant in their spending and ambitions.

"No," he said. "We just realize how big the artistic industry has become in the last few years."

Mr. Fortier said that the arts are growing and that the government should have a role in their development, except possibly the performing arts, Shakespeare.

"Our town major symphony orchestras (in Toronto and Montreal) still don't employ their artists on a full 52-week basis."

Mr. Fortier said federal and provincial subsidies have grown rapidly but municipal and private support has not kept pace. As a result, the gap between revenue and expenses for most artistic endeavors has widened.

WOULD LIMIT FREEDOM
"This means, in effect, that when we reach the limit that gap will be so great that what we will have on our hands is a government institution for these bodies," Mr. Fortier said.

"This really wouldn't be new. We recognize government institutions in the fields of the libraries, the museums, the CBC and the National Film Board, and so on."

But in the performing arts, I think as long as we can keep the private sector and the box office providing a fair ratio of the funds we will be better off in terms of the freedom of the enterprise, its creativity, and so on."

He said he would not like to see performing arts companies becoming government enterprises "at this time," but couldn't say what would develop in another 10 or 20 years.

The council recently made a study of 29 arts organizations which it had subsidized for five years. It found that their costs had doubled in that time and their box office receipts had not kept pace, despite a 50-per-cent increase in audiences and higher ticket prices.

FUNDING LAGGED
"The municipalities and the private sector slipped badly—not in absolute terms, they did increase their funding, but not enough to keep up with the growing costs."

Mr. Fortier, a greying man with expressive brown eyes and Gallic gestures, warms to the subject of what the country gets for what it pays through the Canada Council.

For one thing, he says, there is about $4 of employment and economic return for every $1 the council spends. The arts attract in ticket sales as many people as professional sport.

"In Montreal there are as many people going to Place des Arts as go through the turnstiles to see the Expos. In Ottawa, more go to the National Arts Centre than to see the Rough Riders."

"These are the facts of life. This is a service industry, part of the tertiary element of our industrial structure. It's a service that is demanded by a growing public."

ANSWERS CRITICS
The council has been criticized, by young artists particularly, for putting too much of its money into big, established arts organizations like the National Ballet and the Canadian Opera Company.

Other critics say the council spreads its grants too thin, encouraging mediocrity.

Mr. Fortier said the council's first objective in recent years was to raise the quality of artistic endeavor in Canada. Now it feels the money should be spread out more.

"If we had all the funds we wanted, we could do both. But at this stage of the country's development, creativity is booming. This doesn't happen often in the life span of a nation, and when it does, we should pick it up and hope for the best."

"It's a sin that we have nothing going in Northern Ontario or in other parts of the country where there are so many pockets of population and nothing is happening."

Mr. Fortier also suggests governments may have to become more active in the visual arts.

"You can probably count 2,500 professional painters and sculptors in Canada who are trying to make a living at it. To support them with average incomes of only $10,000 a year after they've paid for their materials, they would need to sell $75 million worth of art works a year. We don't sell $5 million."

"We've got to do something. The government art bank is a good idea and we have other ideas."

In the art bank the Canada Council spends $1 million a year for the works of artists and sculptors. It rents them to government offices for a fee that goes back into the purchase of more art.

Mr. Fortier has some of these works in his own office—an articulated aluminum column by Ulysse Comtois that he can shape into whatever form he wishes, and a blue and white montage of abstract forms by an artist who had better not be named.

"I liked it at first," Mr. Fortier said of the latter, "but I think I'm growing tired of it now. I think it proves that some art is consumable. You bring it in, put it on the wall, and six months later you can pass it on to someone else."

Some municipal and private art galleries operate rental services and Mr. Fortier says this might be developed on a larger scale.

"We should have an agency that buys the best and rents out the works. Sure, it will involve a subsidy, but it is encouraging the artist to produce and sell and not leave his works piling up in his studio."

Mr. Fortier's job takes him from coast to coast twice a year, with frequent visits to Montreal, Toronto and the larger centres for major events in the artistic calendar.

"It's a wonderful life, with a lot of theatre because I have to be au fait with what is going on. I like reading and I must do a lot of it, with all the books we subsidize."

"But with a family of five, it keeps me busy."

People puzzled by Stanfield

By JACK TRACY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

In the opening chapter of his book, Stanfield, author Geoffrey Stevens describes the national Progressive Conservative leader as "the man nobody really knows." In the last chapter he writes of Mr. Stanfield at the outset of the 1972 election campaign: "Most of the people were still puzzled by him."

In the 248 pages between those two mentions of Robert L. Stanfield, the writer compiles a wealth of anecdotes and modern political history in what its publishers bill as the first complete biography of the Tory leader.

The meticulously-researched book takes Stanfield history back to 1855 when an ancestor arrived in Canada after an apprenticeship in the English textile centre of Bradford.

IS 'MADNESS'
It ends with a quotation from a letter by Mr. Stanfield to Finlay MacDonald, his chief of staff during the 1972 election campaign, asking him to stay on and help with an expected new election: "My own capacity for accepting madness is now virtually unlimited—after five years—and I may soon be ready for the ultimate—trying to run this country—which you have almost achieved for me."

The author, a Toronto Globe and Mail columnist, declared his own bias in a preface: "I am not a Conservative and feel in no peril of ever becoming one. I do, however, like and respect Mr. Stanfield."

The liking for Mr. Stanfield is evident throughout the book in which author Stevens uses acquaintances, friends and enemies of Mr. Stanfield in an effort to throw some light on this enigmatic politician.

Sometimes the light is dim. G. I. Smith, who took over the premiership of Nova Scotia after Mr. Stanfield entered the federal field, was asked how he felt about the leader. His answer: "Can you define with exactitude why you fell in love with your wife?"

KILLER INSTINCT
Dalton Camp, who led the revolt against the John Diefenbaker regime, is quoted as saying: "Stanfield is not the kind of guy who, if there is a submarine down underneath and survivors in the water, won't drop depth charges. Because he will."

But Conservative Senator Grattan O'Leary calls him "the most liberal, humane and civilized mind on our political landscape."

One incident the author relates concerns a cliff-hanger before the Conservative leadership convention in 1967. It was all set for Mr. Stanfield, then premier of Nova Scotia, to run.

Then Mr. Camp received a phone call—he felt he could not run.

"He had a report from the treasury that indicated a shortfall in revenues, which meant there would be some sort of budgetary crisis in the province that might require a tax increase," Mr. Camp relates. "He had a minister who had been out drunk and he was going to have to fire him."

It was days before everything was straightened out and Mr. Stanfield agreed to become a leadership candidate.

In the market for stoves

By JEAN SHARP
CP Women's Editor

TORONTO (CP) — There is a lot to think about nowadays, if you are in the market for a new stove. In the last few years there have been innovations that go beyond timing devices or rotisseries.

Depending on how much money you're willing to spend, of course, you can get stoves that clean or partly clean themselves, that have smooth cooking tops, infra-red ovens or microwave ovens.

Robert Harris of GSW Appliances Ltd. says he is not convinced people think carefully over the features they want before they buy a stove.

He says: "Think about your cooking habits, and what features you would use. Some look attractive on the floor, but you'll get the range home and only use the feature once."

He says many people buy a stove and refrigerator at the same time and with an amount set in their minds to cover both. If you spend a lot on extras on one, he says, you may short-change yourself on the other.

SELF-CLEAN COSTLY
G. D. Nadkarni, also of GSW, says the demand for self-cleaning is growing, and he says there are two versions.

It sounds complicated, but this is the way he puts it: "The catalytic system is a continuous clean that has a catalyst in the enamel of the oven that disintegrates fat and splatter. It doesn't do a complete job. If you spill gravy, you'll have to wipe that up."

"Cleanliness is a relative thing, and for some housewives, this wouldn't be good enough."

"The self-cleaning pyrolytic oven burns it away at 850 to 900 degrees. Then all you do is wipe away the ashes."

He says the self-clean feature might add $150 to the cost of a stove, depending on what other features are involved.

One of the newest changes is the so-called countertop stove.

"The utensils have to have flat bottoms because there is a thermostatic sensor in the stove top that senses the temperature in the pot and turns the heat on and off. If you want to make scrambled eggs, they won't burn if you forget them."

Mr. Nadkarni says these stoves can cost as much as $900 but that price includes self-clean.

The "gourmet" oven is an extra oven used for rotisserie and broiling. It cooks with infra-red heat, and the oven stays cool while the food heats.

Mr. Harris, product manager for microwave ovens, says a portable microwave oven now costs about $600. He says the cost has dropped in two years and should come down more.

"What you're paying for is speed. It cooks food at six or seven minutes a pound compared with the normal 20 to 30 minutes."

"One area of limitation is that something that has to be cooked a long time to be broken down, a stew, for instance, can't be done in a microwave oven."

"The other is when you need hot, dry air, to brown a pie crust. It won't do that."

But he says the shrinkage on meat is cut appreciably and frozen vegetables can be cooked as is, their color and vitamins preserved.

PQ candidate gets most of the attention

St-Francois hopefuls face Champlain

LENNOXVILLE (MI) — The four political candidates in the St-Francois riding yesterday answered questions from a crowd numbering more than 200 persons at Champlain Regional College.

Most questions were addressed towards the Parti Quebecois candidate, Robert Sabourin. In answering he gave the impression that he is confronted with lack of knowledge by voters about his party's program as well as with hostility and fear on the part of Anglophone voters.

Reaction to the Parti Quebecois platform evidenced itself in both negative (in the areas of standard of living, the educational system for English-speaking Quebecers, and the question of his party's actions in questioning the eligibility of thousands of immigrant voters) and positive (especially with regard to Sabourin's personal stand on teacher reclassification) questions. Sabourin flatly denied the standard of living under a pequist government would decline and suggested that were his party to take power and the value of Quebec currency to decline under an independent country "Foreign nations will bring their business to Quebec because of the benefits involved in exporting from a country with devalued currency."

Questioned about unemployment, Sabourin asserted: "There is no strong centralized agency in Quebec responsible for the introduction of measures designed to raise the rate of employment," and contended that under a Parti Quebecois government there would be such an agency.

Asked about his personal stand on teacher classification, Sabourin said: "I was the only director-general among all the directors-general of Quebec

CEGEPs to speak out and vote against reclassification of faculty.

Perhaps most instructive about the Pequist candidate were two remarks which he made during the meeting. In introducing himself, Sabourin reiterated previous remarks about his independent personality and said: "I would have preferred a situation in which two parties would have had the guts to support independence so that I could choose between them."

Later Sabourin expressed his own reservations about the Parti Quebecois platform, saying "I don't want to give a blank cheque to the Parti Quebecois on election day. I want to give the party a mandate to study and prepare a proposed constitution for an independent Quebec to be brought for approval to Quebec's inhabitants through a referendum in two years."

Gerald Deziel, Liberal Party candidate in the riding, attacked the Parti Quebecois on the matter of potential currency devaluation under a pequist government. He contended: "Labour may be cheap with a devalued dollar but the consumer will be paying $1.42 for every $1 on every purchase."

Further, if companies see their assets decline from $15 million to $10 million they are going to leave Quebec," he declared.

Deziel also confirmed his federalist position during the meeting. "I will always be a federalist," he said, "because I feel persons should have the right to learn and speak either English or French — that's democracy."

Pressed for further reasons, he reiterated his belief in linguistic dualism.

Yves Dubreuil, Union Nationale candidate, introduced his platform, saying: "I believe in developing a strong Quebec in a strong Canada without any discrimination between persons on language matters."

Later, he challenged the Parti Quebecois, when he contended: "The Parti Quebecois doesn't explain the real dangers of independence. The St. Lawrence River, the Canadian National Railroad, and Air Canada are owned by Canada not Quebec. If we are independent then we will have to buy back these services."

Questioned about the possibility of votes being lost by the Union Nationale as a result of common belief that the present campaign will be the last for the party, Dubreuil responded that he did not believe that votes will be lost for that reason.

Further, Dubreuil contended: "The Union Nationale candidates are not campaigning as members of a party so much as on their individual merits. We expect votes because we as individuals will make good representatives of the people."

Leo Leboeuf, Creditiste candidate, arrived very late in the meeting and did not have time for more than one or two comments. Asked about the party platform in the area of education he supported the view that some teachers in CEGEPs have been spending too much time discussing political matters and too little teaching their subject contents.

With regard to the Creditiste position on the linguistic dimension of Quebec politics, Leboeuf said: "Immigrants from foreign countries will have to learn in French schools for the first five years in Quebec."

"After that point, if parents wish, they will be entitled to send their children to English-language schools," he added.

Magog (MI) — Tom Bean, principal of the Princess Elizabeth Elementary School in Magog, believes that the roots of all educational programs lie in the total development of a child in terms of social, emotional and academic spheres.

He cautions, however: "This is an adult institution set up by run by and determined by adults — there's a missionary attitude among adults — and nobody is there to represent the children's attitudes."

He explains that he finds himself wondering whether he is serving the students when he makes decisions but is rarely able to know since administrative duties keep him increasingly away from the children who attend his school.

Elaborating on his theme of total development, he says that children are most likely to learn when they are interested in what they are doing and that there is an onus on teachers to create a warm rapport with students, provide for self-discipline on the part of the students and devise individualized learning programs that are based on the interests of each child.

Bean asserts that in his school a program developed by Dr. Kirschner, of Montreal, is accorded large respect and time.

This program is based on a recognition that "a natural and creatively integrated life is the effect of well-developed sensory perception," and a belief that "any distortion or bias in the nourishment received by one's senses is the cause of defective learning."

The purposes of the program is to develop and integrate senses, to use the development and integration in furthering academic learning and to increase concentration and attention span.

Some of the exercises employed by school staff to achieve the above purposes include use of the public address system to send numbered sounds which are translated into words by the children and use of a metronome and body exercises to improve coordination.

Of the program, Bean says: "Children should have coordination well developed before they start to use paper and pencil. Further, every regular teacher should be a qualified special education teacher so that he is able to better diagnose and remedy learning problems."

Bean also decries the classification system because he feels it encourages teachers to return to the classroom in order to protect themselves. His objection focuses his belief on the opinion that every time a teacher takes a course, his performance in the classroom suffers.

A look at the candidates in Orford riding

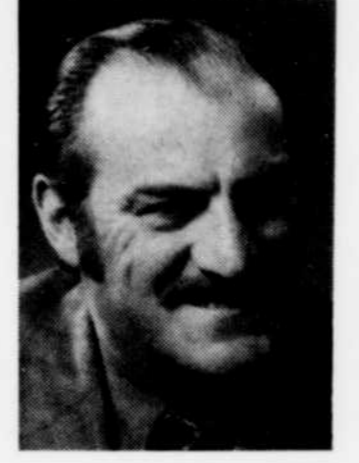

LAURENT BERTRAND

GHISLAIN PELLETIER

MAURICE THEROUX

GEORGES VAILLANCOURT

MAGOG (GH) — Orford county appears to have a promising future as a tourist centre as all four electoral candidates of the riding promised to promote the development of tourism in the region in recent interviews.

Maurice Theroux, Parti Creditiste candidate, claims he would emphasize the "economic promotion of the Magog area as a tourist haven."

He feels both French and English populations in the riding would benefit from such a promotion.

Laurent Bertrand, Parti Quebecois candidate, said he would "strongly emphasize tourism as the area is becoming more and more popular with tourists from all over the universe."

"We plan to improve the back roads system and increase the camping ground facilities," he said. "We would also like to see a reduction in the rates of the rides at Mount Orford ski area, with as a result, an increase in the tourist population frequenting the area."

George Vaillancourt, presently MNA and Liberal hopeful said that after a study for the development of tourism had been made, a recommendation that $50 million be spent to adequately develop the Eastern Townships region followed. The area takes in Orford and several surrounding counties. The study was commissioned by the Bourassa government.

Ghislain Pelletier, Union Nationale candidate, said his party would have citizens form committees which the government would subsidize and consult.

"As far as tourism is concerned, this would facilitate the continuation of work already in progress through a program revolving around the development of tourism in our region," he said.

Parti Creditiste and Union Nationale candidates claim their programs will help both the French and English populations in the riding, without dividing them. Liberal and Parti Quebecois candidates said the English-speaking minority will face no loss of security with election of their parties.

Asked why the English population should vote for the Parti Creditiste, Theroux exclaimed: "Why shouldn't they?"

"After all, English and French speaking people have common needs. I believe in the federal system and my party will contribute to accuracy in the government."

Theroux said he does not believe a government can force its people to speak one, two or three languages.

"If the individual wishes to be bilingual or trilingual — so much the better. But this is a personal matter and the government should not interfere."

Pelletier stressed the Union Nationale's program does not divide the English and French, but on the contrary would give all citizens the right to speak about all major decisions through their policy to have them form committees.

Vaillancourt said the English-speaking population should vote for him because: "By making of the federal system secure, we will assure the security of our economy."

Vaillancourt asserts he does everything within his power to help any of his constituents, English or French-speaking, with any problems they may have.

"I think this may be one reason I was reelected for a fifth term. I can identify with the average person."

The pequist candidate said English-speaking people have the wrong impression of his party.

"They think that my party, if elected, would throw the English out of the province. This is not true," he said, adding that the pequist movement is striving for economic independence.

"We want to be master of our own house, so to speak, and separation is how we will achieve this," he said.

The Union Nationale scheme to form public committees would mean more security for the workers, explained Pelletier.

Another stand the Union Nationale takes is in the case of a conflict between workers and management, he said. The party believes a government mediator should be involved from the beginning of the dispute.

Theroux said that along with tourism, the Parti Creditiste plans to develop the industry of the area. This would result in open markets for farm produce and therefore re-establish an equilibrium in the adjacent farming community, he said.

"As it is now, farms are being purchased by the affluent as summer residences," he said. "With the implementation of our new guidelines, the farming community would show an increase in revenue."

"Finally," Theroux added, "I am sympathetic to the needs of our sick senior citizen. Where does an aged ill person go when he or she is discharged from any hospital?"

Theroux said his party would place top priority in building homes for such cases.

The Parti Creditiste candidate was born in Manchester, May 30, 1914. He was employed by the Canadian Pacific in 1940 as a telegrapher and became station agent in 1965.

He has taken an active part in politics practically all his life, he said. He is presently the Mayor of Magog. He has travelled extensively throughout Canada.

Mr. Theroux is married and has seven children.

Mr. Laurent Bertrand, the Parti Quebecois candidate, is a Magog plumbing contractor. He was born in Ayer's Cliff in 1921.

He joined the Canadian army in 1941 as a volunteer and remained in the service until 1946. He took part in the invasion of Normandy and was discharged from the army with the rank of Sergeant in the Chaudiere Regiment.

He has been interested in provincial politics since he was 16 years old, he said. This is the first time he has run as a candidate.

Mr. Bertrand is married and has one child.

George Vaillancourt is presently the MNA for Orford county. He was first elected in 1960. He was re-elected in 1962, 1966 and 1970.

He was formerly a Mayor of Coaticook from 1968 until 1971. He was also a farmer and a merchant.

Ghislain Pelletier, Union Nationale candidate, was born in Magog in 1944. He was working with Dominion Textiles for the past 12 years. He is married and has one child.

Minor change required

Council delays OK to Tabco

LENNOXVILLE (CC) — Lennoxville council will not give final approval to Tabco Developments' proposed housing development here until at least one change is made in the plans.

Council will not approve the proposed street leading into the Lennoxville Gardens development because in doing so they would be breaching municipal building bylaws.

The street, according to engineers plans, would be situated only 13 feet from a house belonging to Lucien Langlois.

The house, at 116 St. Francis street, was purchased by Langlois last Friday. He had planned to build a garage adjacent to the house.

However, existing municipal bylaws state that all buildings must be situated at least 20 feet from the street. Lennoxville council at a meeting Monday evening decided they could not accept the proposed street plan for the development until plans were made to conform to town bylaws.

As mayor Cecil Dougherty said: "One house is holding up the whole development."

In order to circumvent the problem Tabco Development has three possible solutions. They could purchase the land from Langlois and demolish the house.

Langlois could decide to move the house farther from the proposed road but council deemed such a method unlikely due the fact the house is nearly a century old.

The third possibility would be for Tabco to make new plans for an entrance road and then submit them to council.

Tabco plans to begin with a 35-acre development on a 35-acre site situated above St. Francis street between Atto and Beattie streets. However, the 118 lot development may grow to more than 100 houses according to plans. Parklands and recreational space are included in the project.

But until the access street is accepted by the council Tabco will be unable to complete the project. However, council believed the problem will be solved and therefore agreed in principle to a sewer system in the development.

The plan, with an estimated cost of $66,000, was chosen as an intermediate solution proposed by engineers. It is not a final long-term system because it depends on hook-ups to existing sewers in the area.

An all-inclusive system for the project would have cost an estimated $200,000. Council decided that, for the immediate future, existing hook-ups could be used by the Tabco firm.

In other business council decided to accept a contract from the provincial government for snow clearing on Queen and College streets, a distance of 4.1 miles. Under the conditions of the contract the municipality will be paid nearly $5,000 to be responsible for snow clearing on the two streets this winter.

The two streets are both owned and operated by the government. The amount of the contract represents an increase of 13.5 percent over the amount paid last winter.

Council also refrained from giving Ascot Township the right to run their proposed sewer line across Lennoxville property until some additional details can be worked out.

Under the contract, recommended by the township, Lennoxville could purchase the sewer line in the municipality at a later date for $1 and afterwards the sharing of maintenance costs would be worked out between the two bodies.

However, Lennoxville council wants the maintenance costs shared on a pro-rata basis of users when and if the municipality decided to use the sewers.

Church guest

Lennoxville United Church will observe Laity Sunday with special services this Sunday.

The guest speaker will be Dr. Herbert L. Pottle of Ottawa. Dr. Pottle was born and educated in Newfoundland.

He served as Superintendent of Education for the United Church Schools in Newfoundland. He was also Director of Child Welfare and Judge of St. John's Juvenile Court.

He was also active on the political scene in Newfoundland. For six years he was the Minister of Public Welfare in the Government.

Dr. Pottle was appointed as Secretary of the Board of Information and Stewardship of the United Church in which capacity he served for eight years.

More recently Dr. Pottle has been the Principal Research

Busman's Holiday

Members of the Canadian Parliament have been on a busman's holiday but have not enjoyed it much. At home, among their own constituents, they have observed dissatisfaction, bewilderment and anger. While the average voter may not understand the mysteries of modern economics, he knows that the measures passed by Parliament, so far, do not begin to solve his problems but serve mainly to compound them.

When the parliamentarians reassemble, they will find that national policy, as lately amended and in some cases reversed, has reached a point of almost unbelievable confusion. What the government said yesterday is contradicted today and may be amended tomorrow.

What one cabinet minister asserts as an unalterable fact another denies. What the opposition parties propose as an alternative to these contradictions is itself contradictory when they protest against inflation and demand inflationary fiscal and monetary policies.

To take the most obvious and most important example of this disorder in high places, the government insisted, until September, that nothing effective could be done to curb inflation because it flowed out of the world economy and engulfed a vulnerable Canada. These forces were irresistible.

The nation was powerless to do more than palliate them slightly, with higher pensions and other welfare payments. But facing an unexpected emergency session of Parliament, and the threats of David Lewis, the government suddenly discovered that in at least three sectors Canada should and could be sheltered from the worldwide storm.

Accordingly, a two-price system was applied to wheat and milk. Then, overnight, without warning to Canada's largest foreign customer, the price of exported oil was raised above the domestic price. Whether these policies work at all — which is highly dubious in all three cases — they reverse the government's previous assumptions and make sad nonsense of John Turner's fighting speeches.

Again, Mr. Turner, Prime Minister Trudeau and most of the cabinet have been shocked by the price of foodstuffs and wilyly hoped that it would decline, sometime, later on. But Agriculture Minister Whelan says the price is still low, "a bargain," as he calls it. And at the very moment when it was trying to hold down the price of gasoline the government tried to hold up the price of beef by re-imposing a tariff on it.

Even more remarkable, indeed quite grotesque, is Mr. Trudeau's statement that no attempt will be made to control food prices unless such action is recommended by the price review board. "The government," says the prime minister, "will seek parliamentary authority to act" only if the board's efforts prove fruitless, as they clearly have already. In other words, Mrs. Beryl Plumtre and her little band of grocery store detectives, not the government, will decide national policy — a notion unfair to the powerless board and insulting to the public's intelligence. Moreover, it should be remembered that the board is surveying only food prices and they represent no more than a fraction, about a quarter, of total living costs.

If all this makes no sense in economics it makes still less in politics, even on the lowest partisan level. The Liberal party, desperate for seats in the West, has further alienated it by an oil policy that outrages Alberta and alarms its Prairie neighbors.

On the other hand, if the federal Conservative party were to support an effort to control oil prices for the benefit of eastern consumers it would quarrel with the furious Premier Lougheed who largely controls Alberta's 19 essential parliamentary seats, and who has taken counter-measures to the federal government's actions.

The position of the New Democratic party is equally embarrassing when it says that price controls can never work, approves them in principle, in the case of bread, milk and gasoline, recommends higher wages that must raise all prices and, by its continued support of the government, antagonizes its left-wing ideologues and undermines its electoral hopes in the West.

The state of the economic system in Canada can only be described as deepening derangement, the state of politics as chaos. Perhaps a brief lull in parliamentary debate, a holiday at home and time to think, may have persuaded the politicians of all parties that the Canadian people demand and deserve something better from their governors.

Mid-east ceasefire: It's not the first Agreement to stop shooting in the Middle East eases pressure on world nerves, but experience suggests that the relief may only be temporary. This is ceasefire No. 4 for Arabs and Israelis. It looks as fragile as its predecessors. Ceasefires such as those of the Middle East, the Asian subcontinent, Korea, Indochina and elsewhere were honored mostly in the breach. Only when the world community put actual forces between the warring parties did ceasefires tend to be effective, and even that proved insufficient.

Here, in brief, is a rundown on how ceasefires have fared in the Cold War era:

India-Pakistan
After the Asian subcontinent was divided upon withdrawal of British rule, the two new countries — India and Pakistan — warred over which would rule fabled Kashmir. The United Nations intervened and in January, 1949, drew a ceasefire line, but tension persisted and erupted in renewed war late in 1965.

The Soviet Union, disliking a prospect of subcontinent instability being exploited by its rival, China, was instrumental in bringing about a new ceasefire in January, 1966. But in 1971, the opposing forces in Kashmir fought again, this time in connection with the emergence of Bangladesh as a country independent from Pakistan. As part of that peace settlement, the two agreed to a line separating them in Kashmir, but despite concessions by both, the area remains a source of tension.

Korea
When the Communist side seemed to be doing poorly late in 1950, the United States received a Soviet signal of interest in a ceasefire providing for withdrawal to pre-war lines.

While the two sides wrangled, fighting rose in intensity. It was not until July, 1953, that a ceasefire agreement was signed.

The ceasefire line has remained a flashpoint ever since, frequently violated.

Arab-Israeli
After the Arabs were defeated in the 1948-1949 war, a UN-sponsored armistice and ceasefire line were established. But violations were constant and the tension exploded in 1956 Suez war, provoked by a British-French and Israeli invasion of Egypt.

The object of the invasion had been to topple Gamal Abdel Nasser and reverse his decree nationalizing the Suez canal.

The main result, however, was, in the words of one Western leader, to have the two superpowers snarling in rage at one another "like two wounded beasts." World calamity might have resulted, but Washington and Moscow found a common interest in preventing deeper world crisis.

The British and French were required to pull out and the Israelis to withdraw to their pre-war boundaries under a new ceasefire arrangement that called for installation of a UN emergency force between the Arabs and Israelis, as a buffer.

That ceasefire, too, often was violated. Tension peaked again in 1967 and when Nasser demanded the UN force leave it complied, perhaps to his surprise. The buffer gone, new war was inevitable, and in six days the Arabs were defeated by the Israelis.

The UN Security Council recommended that Israel leave occupied areas. Wider crisis was averted.

Ceasefire arrangements that time proved as ineffective as in previous cases. Early this year President Anwar Sadat of Egypt publicly proclaimed his intention of regarding ceasefire lines as void and his intention to invite yet another confrontation.

Indochina
When Ho Chi Minh's Vietminh forces overwhelmed the French in 1954, a ceasefire was established permitting regrouping on both sides of a line that eventually would separate North and South Vietnam. Guerrilla war never ended, however, and developed in the 1960s into the longest and most painful U.S. war.

The war ended—for Americans—this year with ceasefire agreements in Vietnam and Laos, though none yet was in sight in Cambodia.

In Vietnam, however, there is no sign of peace and the ceasefire is being violated by both sides.

Other ceasefires have been ineffective. In Cyprus, for example, a UN peace force has stood between rival Greek and Turkish elements since 1964, and along the China-Soviet border, talks have been going on since a 1969 ceasefire.

The effects of peace

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — War brought the Arabs together. Peace might pull them apart.

The Arab unity which emerged in the first 16 days of the latest Middle East war seemed to be coming apart Monday, the 17th day, within hours of a United Security Council call for a ceasefire. Allies in arms against Israel, they found themselves at odds over peace policy.

Iraq, a combatant on the Syrian front, rejected any ceasefire or negotiations with the Jewish state. Syria was "studying" the ceasefire proposal. Egypt accepted it and Jordan followed suit, apparently hoping the superpowers might force an Israeli withdrawal from Arab lands occupied since the 1967 war.

Palestinian refugees and their guerrilla fighting arm, who have been a main cause of Arab-Israeli friction for the last quarter century, were not consulted. But the executive committee of the Palestine Liberation Organization made it clear that it would not accept a ceasefire abrogating the 25-year struggle to recapture the Palestinian homeland.

"The revolution is not affected by the UN Security Council resolution," the group said. "It will carry on the armed struggle to complete the liberation of the occupied land without any condition."

IN GOOD POSITION

A ceasefire in place apparently leaves Egypt in the most favorable position of all the Arab fighting states. Although Israel said it captured 475 square miles of Egyptian territory on the west bank of the Suez canal, Egyptian forces claimed to have seized a bigger chunk of the Sinai desert and occupied the east bank of the waterway.

If President Anwar Sadat can hold on to this and reopen the Suez canal to international shipping, he would enhance the prestige he won in the Sinai campaign and offset any domestic criticism of his decision not to follow through with his initial military success.

A ceasefire in place poses more problems for President Hafez Assad of Syria, who might have to explain to his countrymen why he decided to stop fighting.

Despite initial successes early in the war, Syrian forces have largely been pushed out of the Golan Heights by Israeli reinforcements and only a small area on Mount Hermon was still contested Monday.

Not only have the Syrians failed to recapture the Golan Heights, they have also retreated on the road between Al Qunaytirah—also known as Kunaitra—and Damascus, and lost an extra 300 square miles of territory, according to Israeli claims.

Assad faces the added problem of what to do with 18,000 Kraji troops, 100 tanks and two squadrons of jet planes, whose government in Baghdad rejected the ceasefire.

With no territory to gain or lose, Iraq can afford to take its usual military stand. Baghdad's Socialist Baath party regime measures its prestige in the Arab world by the virulence of its anti-Israeli position.

On the economic front, splits are expected between conservative oil producers such as Saudi Arabia and Kuwait and militants such as Libya and Algeria.

Libyan leader Moammar Khadafi in fact termed the UN ceasefire resolution unacceptable and said he disagreed with the presidents of Egypt and Syria on their war objectives. He told Eric Rouleau of the French newspaper Le Monde that "even if Egypt and Syria should defeat Israel, I cannot give my backing to an operetta war."

WASHINGTON (AP) — Elliott Richardson, William Ruckelshaus and Archibald Cox are the latest Nixon administration casualties of Watergate-related investigations. Those who left, and why:

—Jeb Stuart Magruder, the first administration official to resign over Watergate. He gave up a $36,000-a-year commerce department post on April 26 and has since admitted participating in the Watergate cover-up while he was President Nixon's deputy election campaign director.

—L. Patrick Gray, former acting FBI director. Gray resigned April 27 after it was disclosed he burned Watergate-related documents belonging to Watergate conspirator E. Howard Hunt.

—H.R. Haldeman, former White House chief of staff, and John Ehrlichman, former domestic affairs adviser. Nixon announced the resignation of his two top aides on April 30 following allegations linking them to the cover-up.

—John Dean, former presidential counsel. Nixon fired Dean, announcing his departure on April 30. Dean later told the Senate Watergate committee that Nixon knew about the cover-up as long ago as September, 1972.

—Richard Kleindienst, former attorney-general. He also resigned April 30, claiming persons with whom he had "close personal and professional associations" might be implicated.

—Gordon Strachan, former staff assistant to Haldeman. He resigned as general counsel for the U.S. Information Office on April 30. Strachan had served as a liaison between Haldeman's office and the Nixon re-election committee.

—David Young, former presidential assistant to the domestic council that had been headed by Ehrlichman. Young, too, resigned April 30. He was one of the White House staff implicated in the break-in at the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist.

Ellsberg was involved in the disclosure of the Pentagon papers relating to the Vietnam war.

—Robert Odle, former director of administration for the re-election committee. He was fired May 7 from his consultant's job at the agriculture department after being named by the General Accounting Office as one of several persons who handled unrecorded campaign funds.

—Egil Krogh, former Ehrlichman aide. Krogh resigned as transportation undersecretary May 9 after taking "full responsibility" for the Ellsberg break-in.

—G. Bradford Cook, former chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission. Cook resigned this post following a grand jury's report that he had altered an SEC complaint against financier Robert Vesco after discussions with Maurice Stans, the president's top fund raiser. Former commerce secretary Stans and former attorney-general John Mitchell are under indictment in connection with an illegal $200,000 campaign contribution from Vesco. Mitchell left his campaign post in 1972, citing personal reasons.

—John Caulfield, former White House aide. He resigned a treasury department post May 24 after testifying that he relayed an offer of clemency from "the highest levels of the White House" to Watergate conspirator James McCord.

—Richardson, former attorney-general. Resigned Oct. 20 after refusing to fire special Watergate prosecutor Cox.

—Ruckelshaus, former deputy attorney-general. Fired Oct. 20 by Nixon after he, too, refused to fire Cox after Richardson's resignation.

—Cox, former special Watergate prosecutor. Fired Oct. 20 by Nixon, through new Acting Atty-Gen. Robert Bork, because he defied Nixon's order to him to abandon legal attempts to obtain the White House Watergate tapes.

"Don't just stand there!"

Decision on tapes will set precedent

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Nixon's lawyers seek to convince Judge John Sirica to allow a United States senator do the job the judge wants to do himself. Listen to the tapes of White House conversations about Watergate.

His answer may affect not only the tapes but also a wealth of other documents and evidence which an increasing number of published reports identify as being even more important than the tapes.

If Judge Sirica finds the Nixon proposal unacceptable, it will leave the president in a position of not complying with a court order and potentially open to a contempt-of-court charge.

At the request of special prosecutor Archibald Cox, he ordered Nixon Aug. 29 to give him the tapes of nine White House conversations during which the scandal was believed to have been discussed.

The judge wanted to decide what portions should be presented to a special grand jury investigating Watergate. The U.S. Court of Appeals upheld Sirica's ruling and gave Nixon until last Friday to comply.

Nixon has so far refused. Nor will he appeal the ruling to the U.S. Supreme Court.

The White House is expected to deliver a written statement today to the U.S. District Court where Sirica presides, summarizing its proposal that Senator John Stennis, venerable Democrat from Mississippi, listen to the taped conversations and "authenticate" a report on them.

Nixon has offered to give the Stennis-approved report both to the courts and to Senator Sam Ervin's Watergate committee. The Senate committee has tentatively accepted, after being turned down earlier by the courts in its attempt to get the tapes.

Former prosecutor Cox rejected the Nixon proposal partly because he felt it would also prevent him from obtaining other memoranda, notes and documents he requested from the White House.

Many of them are believed to deal with matters outside the Watergate burglary and its cover-up, such as contributions to the Nixon re-election campaign, wire-tapping and more than 50 other matters under inquiry by Cox's battalion of lawyers and investigators.

WANTS ITT MEMOS

Some of the papers he is known or believed to have wanted are:

—ITT: In a memorandum from then-special presidential counsel Charles Colson to then-presidential chief of staff H.R. Haldeman on March 30, 1972, Colson listed a series of memos he said might be damaging if they were discovered.

One from former domestic chief John Ehrlichman to then-attorney-general John Mitchell on May 5, 1971, alluded to discussions with the president as to the "agreed-upon ends" in the resolution of the International Telephone and Telegraph (ITT) anti-trust case. Colson said. Another went directly to the president.

Another memo a few weeks later went to Haldeman with copies to Mitchell and others. Colson said, "setting forth the $400,000 arrangement with ITT." He said this memo would show that the justice department knew ITT planned to give money to the Republican national convention before the department settled its antitrust case against the giant conglomerate, a point vehemently denied at the time.

—MILK FUND: The milk producers' lobby sent Nixon a letter Dec. 16, 1971, discussing the industry's problems with price controls and mentioning it was about to start contributing $2 million to the president's reelection campaign, investigative sources said.

Three months later, on March 23, 1971, Nixon met personally at the White House with more than a dozen dairy-industry lobbyists. Also present was the then-secretary of agriculture, Clifford Hardin. Two days after the meeting Hardin reversed an earlier decision and announced an increase in federal milk price supports of 27 cents a hundredweight, estimated to be worth as much as $700 million in added income to U.S. dairymen.

A White House tape recording of the March 23 meeting could establish what, if anything, Nixon promised the dairy lobbyists, and what they promised him.

—ELLSBERG: There is sworn testimony that Nixon personally authorized the trip by so-called White House plumbers that led to the 1971 burglary of the office of the psychiatrist of Daniel Ellsberg. Nixon denies advance knowledge of the break-in. White House tape recordings could show exactly what Nixon ordered his subordinates to do.

—REBOZO: Cox had been investigating a $100,000 cash gift in 1969-70 from billionaire Howard Hughes to the president's personal friend and Florida neighbor, G. C. (Bebe) Rebozo. Why Hughes gave it, why the money went to Rebozo, whether it was for Nixon or for his campaign and whether the president knew about a Hughes-Rebozo connection are questions without answers so far.

—CONTRIBUTIONS: Cox obtained guilty pleas from three corporations and two executives who made illegal corporate campaign contributions. Four other firms admitted similar donations. But the prosecutor was still trying to determine whether extortion was used to get campaign funds from companies that had sensitive dealings with the government.

Leisure club

KNOWLTON - The meeting of the Knowlton Leisure Club was held on Tuesday afternoon, October 2, at the Legion Hall with forty four members present. Eight tables of cards were played and prizes were won by Mrs. Una Leavitt, Mrs. Helen Mizener, Mr. Archie Ladd and Mr. Grayson Cousins. Door prize was won by Mrs. Mabel Crandall.

Mr. Glen Brown, M.L.A. was the special guest. The purpose of his visit was to discuss the future use of the land formerly occupied by the Canadian Pacific Railway station and the track road bed between Knowlton and Foster.

The following week the club met again on Oct. 9 when card playing and movies were enjoyed, presented by Mr. James Godefroy. Prizes for the card games winners were won by Mrs. Lyla Owens, Mrs. Juliette Morin, Mr. William Pettes and Mr. Robert Hastings. Door prizes were won by Mrs. Ida McVoy, Mrs. Lyla Owens, Mrs. Una Leavitt and Mrs. Elvia Johnson.

Mrs. Rose MacLean of the Medical Committee gave a talk on the feasibility of getting doctors and a 150-bed hospital for Brome County, also support was subscribed for the cost of medical supplies and equipment for the Doctor's office to be opened in Knowlton. Refreshments were served as usual at the close of the meetings.

Farmers Association

KINGSBURY - The Sept. meeting of the O.F.A. was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Rodrick Morrison.

The roll-call was each member present to give their idea of what happiness means.

A committee was put in to make plans for discussions for following meetings. They were Rodrick Morrison, Ernie Wilkins and Marg Smith.

Ruth and Leonard Driver gave a very interesting account of their recent trip to England.

A social hour was enjoyed followed by refreshments.

How could South have made the contract? Real easy. He should win that first spade with the ace, cash one trump, lead a diamond to dummy and ruff a diamond, enter dummy with the king of trumps, ruff another diamond, draw trumps; enter dummy with the king of spades, discard three clubs on the good diamonds and give up just one club trick.

Incidentally, we like North's five-heart bid. He had much more than his two-diamond bid had shown and no good way to show excess values without a bid beyond game.

Answer to Previous Puzzle

50th anniversary

LENOXVILLE - On Sat. afternoon and evening, Sept. 29, some 160 relatives, friends and neighbours called at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Blodgett, Lennoxville, on the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary.

The bride was dressed in a floor-length gown of royal blue polyester knit, fashioned with a high neckline and long sleeves. When the family arrived, a corsage of yellow mums and a boutonniere, made by Mr. R. Goodhue, were pinned on the bride and groom by their nieces, Miss Agnes McBain and Mrs. Richard Goodhue. Then their nephew, Mr. John Blodgett, presented the family gift, a gold tray engraved and extended many good wishes from all the family.

The Misses Heather and Joan Blodgett attended to the guest book.

The tea table, covered with a hand crocheted cloth, made by the bride of 50 years ago, was centered with a colourful bouquet of Fall flowers arranged by Mr. R. Goodhue.

The pourers for the afternoon were Mrs. Pearl Farley, Mrs. Jervis Read, Mrs. Ivan Herring and Mrs. Allison Blodgett.

Evening pourers were Miss A. McBain, Mrs. A. Blodgett, Miss Kathy Goodhue and Miss Susan Blodgett. A delicious lunch was also served by the family and friends.

The three tier wedding cake, made by Miss McBain was appropriately decorated in gold and white flowers and small gold 50's, also done by Miss McBain assisted by Mrs. Blanche Spray.

Among the many messages of congratulations received was a certificate from Prime Minister Trudeau and a telegram from Premier Robert Bourassa. There were also long distance phone calls from Montreal and Manitoba. They received many gifts of money and numerous souvenir gifts including a gold tea pot, matching cream and sugar with a tray from the Management and staff of the Can-Cooperative Wool Growers, Lennoxville.

Out-of-town guests were from Oakville, Ont., Montreal, Rock Island, Hatley and Somersworth, N.H., U.S.A.

Colgan-Rouleau wed

MANSONVILLE - Miss Laurette Louise Colgan, oldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Odilon Colgan of Highwater, Que., walked down the aisle on the arm of her Godfather, in the Mansonville St. Cajetan Roman Catholic Church, the morning of Sept. 30, in a semi-formal floor-length wedding dress of white tri-patterned hand crochet. It had several small pearl buttons at the neckline leading to a monkhood, which she wore over her head, a fitted bodice and extra wide long ballooned sleeves ending in wide fitted cuffs. The gown was made of a lightweight wool with a sheen to it. She carried a modernistic type bouquet of fresh white pompons and fresh multicolored birds of paradise complemented with ornamental shiny imitation leaves and a long stem bound with green velvet.

Mrs. Rouleau, mother of the groom, wore a black polyester floor-length dress with large red roses throughout the dress and black accessories. Her corsage was of red and white dual colored carnations.

Mrs. Lessard, the bride's godmother, wore a floor-length polyester gown of powderblue background with purple and mauve flower design, a small ruffled collar at the throat, long fitted sleeves, white accessories and a white carnation corsage.

The church pews were completely taken up by relatives, friends and those attending church service. Much picture taking occurred during and after the ceremony by several people as well as by a professional photographer, followed by the traditional cavalcade and horn blowing throughout the village proper.

The 193 invited guests arrived at the Tourbillon Hall in Warden, Que., to enjoy a hot chicken dinner catered to by the management, and joyfully tinkling their dishes and table for the bridal couple to embrace. A large floral basket arrangement of yellow and orange fresh gladiolus with white carnations graced the head table along with lit candles and the remaining tables held vases of colorful artificial flowers.

The remainder of the evening was spent in dancing to the orchestra known as Les Reflexes, with one of its musicians acting as Master of Ceremonies and organizing Paul Jones and other enjoyable-type group dancing.

Mrs. Jean-Louis Rouleau changed into a tangerine street-length two-piece hand crochet outfit of the same wool as her wedding dress, and same type ballooned sleeves with a shell pattern. She wore velvet shoes and purse, and a corsage of yellow miniature roses.

After a short honeymoon to Drummondville, the couple returned to their newly bought home next to the Post Office in Mansonville. Mrs. Rouleau resumed work as a teacher in the Mansonville Elementary School and her husband resumed work in the new plastic factory building.

Those attending the wedding came from Rimouski, Quebec City, Three Rivers, Frampton, St. Odilon, St. Joseph, Vallee Junction, St. Come, Montreal, St. Jean, Lacolle, Granby, Stanstead, Sherbrooke and towns of the Township of Potton.

Mr. Thomas Lessard was chosen to take her father's place as he had just come out of hospital and was unable to be present at the ceremony.

The groom, Jean-Louis Rouleau, son of Mr. and Mrs. Rosaire Rouleau of Rimouski, Que., waited at the altar for his lovely bride, where Rev. Father Maurice Domingue performed the double-ring marriage rites during the Sunday morning high mass service. Mr. Rouleau was smartly dressed in a light blue jacket with black velvet collar and black pants with a white ruffled-front shirt and large velvet bow tie. He and the men of the wedding party wore white carnation boutonnieres.

The bride and groom presented each other a wide tiara style raised yellow gold wedding band, his being perforated on the front and hers graced with tiny diamonds nesting in white gold.

Miss Colgan participated during mass by facing the worshippers and took a reading from the Epistles. Her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Gilles Hamelin, assisted the priest at the altar throughout mass and during the marriage ceremony. Mother of the bride, Mrs. Colgan, wore a floor-length, full sleeves, fitted polyester dress with standup ruffled collar. It had a small design of orange, brown and yellow and was complemented with a corsage of small yellow and orange carnations at the shoulder. She wore black accessories.

ACW meeting

SHERBROOKE - St. Peter's A.C.W. met in the Memorial Hall on Oct. 9. Mrs. B. Lothrop acted as chairman. There were 13 members present.

The usual reports of the treasurer, secretary, and conveners were given. As a group of members make quilts, a discussion took place about the recent report on hand made quilts displayed at the Canadian Guild of Crafts Shop in Montreal, and selling for $200 to $1,200 each. The Regional Deany meeting held at St. Peter's on Oct. 3, was very well planned and carried out by the executive.

125 Church calendars have been ordered, to be sold in October.

Articles for the Douglas Hospital, Montreal, such as bed linen, towels, jewellery, small hand luggage, are to be brought in for the November meeting. This group will adopt a forgotten patient at the Douglas Hospital, which involves correspondence, gifts, prayers and concern.

Thank offering donations were received.

Mrs. Franklin showed slides taken on her recent trip to England, of churches, old villages, and historic spots in the south west region. Her comments were interesting and educational. The program was applauded by an enthusiastic audience.

McComb-Moore wed

SHERBROOKE - Shelley Mairia was escorted down the aisle on the arm of her father to meet Mr. David James Moore, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Moore of Sherbrooke, on Saturday, Sept. 8, at 6:30 p.m.

Shelley is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter McComb of Milby. The ceremony was held in St. Barnabas Church, Milby. The Archdeacon Sydney Meade officiated.

Wedding music was rendered by Mrs. Barbara Winget.

Mr. Gordon Ware and Mr. Charles Gordon played the bagpipes during the signing of the register, and upon departures from the church.

The church bells were rung by Mr. Edward Blake, cousin of the bride.

The flowers in the church were arranged by the bride's aunt, Mrs. Ruth Powell.

Shelley wore a floor-length A-line gown of white crepe with English lace down the front, a floor-length train, and shoulder length veil edged with lace completed her outfit.

Miss Alvia (Susan) Lachapelle of Magog as maid-of-honor, wore a floor-length gown of mauve flowered embossed swiss. Miss Jo-Anne Blake as bridesmaid for her cousin, wore a floor-length gown of apple green, flowered embossed swiss.

Miss Kimberley Lynn Bowers, as flower girl, wore a floor-length gown of sunshine yellow flowered embossed swiss.

All the girls carried white testaments adorned with pink roses, ivy with matching ribbon on their bouquets and in their hair to match the gowns. Mr. Henry Durocher acted as best man for David. Both wearing army dress blue's.

The ushers were Mr. Brian McComb, brother of the bride and Mr. Peter Moore, brother of the groom.

Mrs. McComb, mother of the bride, chose a floor-length gown of printed imported crepe knit and black accessories.

Mrs. Moore, mother of the groom, was attired in a floor-length gown with paisley top, navy skirt and gold accessories.

The corsages for the mother's and grandmother's were American beauty roses.

All the flowers for the wedding were arranged by the bride's aunt, Mrs. Margaret Blake.

The dinner was held at the A.N.A.F. Hut, St. Francis St., Lennoxville, where over a hundred guests enjoyed a turkey dinner served by the Ladies Auxiliary No. 96. Mr. William Blake, uncle of the bride acted as master of ceremonies.

A four tier wedding cake was designed by the bride and decorated by her mother. The cake was flanked by gold candles and bowls of roses, from Mr. and Mrs. Sam Hopper's garden, great-uncle and great-uncle of the bride. Bud vases with a single yellow rose and gold candles were used on the tables.

Following the dinner, a dance was held at the Milby Golf and Country Club. Mr. Ed Stiles provided the music, along with some members from the E.T. Highland Pipe Band of which the groom is a member.

Mr. Murray Powell, uncle of the bride, acted as master of ceremonies.

The guest book was in the charge of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Powell.

Among the guests five grandparents were present. Mr. and Mrs. Thomas McComb - Eaton, Mrs. Peter Sarrasin - Milby, Mrs. Marguerite Moore - Sherbrooke, and Mrs. Susie Patterson - Magog.

Others attending from Matheson, Toronto, Ottawa, Scarborough, Ont., Burlington, Vermont, Lachine, Stanstead, Ayer's Cliff, Waterville, Sherbrooke, Eaton, Mansonville, North Hatley, Compton, Bulwer, Montreal and Pte. Aux Trembles, Quebec.

Those who entertained for the bride prior to her wedding were:

A miscellaneous shower at the home of Mrs. Peter Sarrasin, along with Mrs. Murray Powell, Miss Eva Mae Sarrasin, as hostesses.

A pantry shower at the home of Mrs. William Crease with Mrs. Robert Sarrasin, Mrs. Dennis Hatcher and Miss Cathy Winget as hostesses.

A linen shower was held at Mrs. Ruby Martin's cottage, along with Mrs. Gladys Humphries and Miss Valerie Humphries as hostesses.

A personal shower was held at the home of Mrs. Allan McComb along with Mrs. Gordon Rogers as hostesses.

The couple have taken up residence in Birchton.

Bridal shower

MARBLETON - An Oct. bride-to-be was recently feted at a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mrs. A. Guillette. Miss Eleanor Jackson arriving for a visit was surprised to find many of her friends had arrived earlier. She was escorted to an armchair under a decorated watering-can of streamers, pink bells and confetti-filled balloons.

She was pinned with a kitchen gadget corsage. Her mother, Mrs. H. Jackson and the groom's mother, Mrs. Lebourveau were seated on either side.

The gifts were then brought in by a typically dressed "hippie" couple, Peter Stevens and Susan Guillette. After all the gifts had been opened and passed around, "Handy Mandy" was brought in.

She was a "shower bride" made up of 15 kitchen gadgets with an appropriate poem, which was read, indicating all the various means she would be useful to Eleanor in the future.

While the bride-to-be was opening her gifts, Miss Heather Beattie made her a hat of all the ribbons bows. This was then given to her with a shower of confetti. Eleanor thanked her friends for the many useful gifts and hoped they'd be able to visit her in Montreal.

Lunch was then served by the hostess assisted by the Misses Heather Beattie, Nancy Kettle, Angela Betts and Susan Guillette. The shower cake made and decorated by Mrs. Madylin Betts was an umbrella of pink, blue and yellow, which the guest of honor cut and passed.

Guests attending were from Cookshire, East Angus, Montreal and South Ham.

Richmond County Women's Institute

By MRS. NEIL FOWLER
RICHMOND — The Oct. meeting of the Richmond County W.I. was held at the St. Francis cafeteria. The meeting opened with Mrs. Brosecomb in the chair and everyone repeating the Collect.
 One minute of silence was observed in memory of our past provincial president Mrs. V.R. Beattie. Mrs. Beattie will be missed not only in her own branch of Spooner Pond but by everyone in the county. 26 members answered the roll call.
 The minutes were read by Mrs. Janet Banfill and approved. Business from the minutes was a report by Mrs. Muriel Duffy saying everyone was satisfied with the space allotted at Richmond for this year. There were no passes given out for the members so everyone who had to pay their way in just to work for the W.I. booth will be reimbursed by the county treasurer. If they wish to receive this they are to turn in their bill to their own treas. and it will be paid. It was suggested that the Agriculture convenor contact the president of the Agriculture Society about obtaining passes for next year.
 There was no reply from Sherbrooke Hospital concerning a letter sent from the county meeting in May requesting visiting hours in the afternoon. A member said that it is possible to get a pass in the afternoon in unusual cases.

 A brief report was given on our bus trip to Provincial convention in May. Some thought that we lost half of the day by leaving Richmond too late in the morning. It was suggested the next time we leave at 7:30.
 The treasurer's report was given Mrs. W. Lancaster moved all bills be paid.
 A letter was read reporting receipt of ditty bags sent from this county in June.

Mrs. Mountain reported that it was very difficult to deliver the bags in Montreal to the office. Another member reported that if the bags were at a point in Montreal, the head office would pick them up if notified.
 A letter was read from A. Lampron reporting the prizes won by W.I. at Richmond fair.
 Mrs. W. Lancaster won $3.00 prize on a shawl exhibited at Quebec Expo.
 Thanks was received from Judy Skuse and Gary Herbers for bursaries received.

Thanks was received from the March of Dimes for donation in memory of V.R. Beattie.
 A letter from Sherbrooke Hospital was read asking the county to make a donation, as well as some branches. 4 of the 8 branches now make donations. It was moved by Mrs. Husk and seconded by Mrs. Banfill that we make a donation from the county. 16 were in favour so the motion carried. A suggestion was made that the other 4 branches try to make a donation if possible.

Convenors reports:
 Mrs. M. Duffy - Agriculture - reported that she had phoned all branches concerning the field day bus trip to Macdonald College and only one member was able to go, so no trip was planned.
Education reported that Judy Skuse and Gary Herbers received the $50.00 bursaries this year.
 A break in the meeting was taken while the Hymn of all Nations was sung.

Mrs. Stella Coles gave her report of the board meeting at the May convention. Every branch received a copy of this report.
 The branches were asked if they have sent the names, addresses and postal code to Macdonald College for the Journal. It was asked that they send full names and not just an initial.
 The annual reports must be sent in by the end of February and no later.

Members were asked if they were willing to have the programs made up the same as last year. If so, they were asked not to send them in until after the annual meeting so as to have new officers' names. They will be made up from June to May.
 The inter branch competition for next year will be a pair of dress socks for men, with fancy stitch, grafted tow, plain color and 3 ply yarn.
 On Nov. 13 evening, the Historical Society will have Joyce Cochrane talking on Unknown Artists.

 Mrs. Marion Jameson reported that the town council had asked her to seek the help of the County W.I. by signing a petition to obtain a sewage filtration plant in the town of Kingsbury.
 It was moved by Doris Johnston and seconded by Annie Gee that Mrs. Jameson act for us to sign the petition.
 The meeting was adjourned, the sale table auctioned and lunch served by the hostesses.

Today, everybody's talking about "Consumer Protection"...well, Au Bon Marche has been protecting the consumer's pocket book for 25 years!

Doctor disagrees

Abortions like pulling teeth

By GLENNIS ZILM
OTTAWA (CP) — Some people believe that having an abortion is as simple a procedure as having teeth removed but this is not true, says Dr. Harry Oxorn, professor of obstetrics and gynecology at the University of Ottawa medical school.

"It's still a surgical procedure and it should be considered as such," he told a recent medical meeting.

Because of an increased demand for abortions in Canadian hospitals—there were 39,000 in 1972 compared with about 5,500 in 1967 before abortion laws were changed—many women get the idea that it is a safe, simple procedure.

Dr. Oxorn says that, when handled properly it is safe and simple, "but it must be handled properly."

Statistics on deaths from abortions vary from country to country with Britain reporting about 22 for every 100,000 cases and Japan 4.1.

These variations may represent different statistical methods and probably some non-reporting because of a lack of follow-up on patients after they have been treated in a clinic, Dr. Oxorn said. As well, statistics on deaths represent to some extent the degree of skill of the surgeons and the facilities available for safe operations.

CANADIAN DEATHS FEW
Statistics Canada figures for 1971 show there were 30,923 abortions in Canada and six reported deaths.

However, it is not clear whether the deaths include women who had abortions in another country and died in Canada after their return.

Dr. Oxorn expressed concern about "out-of-town abortions," where a woman cannot get the operation performed here, flies to New York, then returns with complications.

Recent large studies indicate that about 17 per cent of women have some complication after an abortion, he said.

The most dangerous are uterine perforation (where the womb is punctured accidentally during surgery, but without symptoms, and may heal spontaneously but leave a weak wall), infections, post-operative bleeding and hemorrhaging, possible sterility and complications during the next pregnancy if there is an Rh blood factor and blood tests were not done.

NEED COUNSELLING
Dr. Oxorn said that almost every study now shows there is no permanent psychiatric damage to normal, non-psychotic women. There may be mild depression and guilt feelings if the woman does not get proper counselling.

The depression is usually worse among women refused an abortion, he said. And the guilt feelings usually are worse in women whose family insisted on the abortion.

Death of the mother is much more common when an abortion is performed late during pregnancy. Complications increase with the length of pregnancy, too.

One major study showed that only 7.3 women in every 100,000 abortions died when surgery was done before the 12th week of pregnancy, compared with 22.7 deaths per 100,000 abortions after 12 weeks.

Another study showed a death rate of 3.6 per 100,000 before 10 weeks and 97 per 100,000 after 16 weeks.

SAFEGUARDS REQUIRED
Abortion death rates are lower than those for complications of pregnancy and childbirth, however, Dr.

Oxorn said deaths from abortion in Britain were 22 for every 100,000 cases, compared with 24 from pregnancy complications and childbirth.

If abortions are to be done, he said, every possible safeguard must be taken.

Ideally, surgery should be done before the 10th week. There should be counselling services but no delays in processing cases and there should be special facilities and qualified specialists.

"There's too much of this business of squeezing the procedure in. . . Perhaps it could be arranged that clinics are held in hospital operating rooms, with special staffs, during the weekends."

There should be all the blood tests and physical examinations that would be done before any surgery. Omission of these tests was dangerous.

But Dr. Oxorn believes the real answer is better birth control information.

"Abortion is a rescue operation. There's too much emphasis on the safety of abortion and not enough on the dangers. There's too much emphasis on the dangers of birth control and not enough on the safety."

By RICHARDE MEYER
WASHINGTON (AP) — Even for Archibald Cox, man of reason, it's likely to be an emotional farewell.

With his shy smile, consuming sense of duty and prodigious knowledge of the law, Cox, crewcut and greying at 61, inspired an uncommon devotion in the nearly 50 lawyers and other staff members he assembled to investigate wrongdoing in the re-election of President Nixon.

With his discharge by the president and the president's dismantling of the special Watergate prosecution force, Cox's singular role as a government prosecutor virtually independent of the justice department came to an end. He has yet to say what he'll do now.

Cox, who cloaks his brilliance with modesty, began his Watergate responsibilities by climbing the steps of the Lincoln Memorial and reading again the words chiselled on the wall. . . that government of the people, by the people, for the people shall not perish from the earth. . .

He surrendered that responsibility by declaring in reply to his dismissal: "Whether ours shall continue to be a government of laws and not of men now is for Congress and ultimately the American people."

Like Elliot Richardson, who resigned as attorney-general rather than discharge him, Cox was born into an old, wealthy and respected family. Like Richardson, he attended Harvard. Both men were law clerks for Judge Learned Hand and for Supreme Court Justice Felix Frankfurter.

SERVED DEMOCRATS
Cox first came to Washington in 1941. He joined the faculty at Harvard law school in 1945, and was named by President Truman as chairman of the wage stabilization board in 1952. Under President Kennedy he served in the justice department as solicitor-general.

As a Harvard professor, he taught the law to Richardson and the two became friends.

During a television appearance Saturday, Cox declared his intention to continue his efforts in court to obtain tape recordings of the president's Watergate conversations with his top White House aides, despite the president's order Friday to cease and desist.

"I think it is my duty," Cox said. "I am not looking for a confrontation. . . and I am certainly not out to get the President."

Later Saturday night, after Richardson's resignation and the president's dismissal of Deputy Attorney-General William French Smith for refusing to fire the special prosecutor, Cox received a letter from Acting Attorney-General Robert Bork, saying:

"I am, as instructed by the president, discharging you."

Eskimos writing a problem

BAKER LAKE, N.W.T. (CP)

— In their written language, the 17,000 Canadian Eskimos are often foreigners to each other, unable to communicate because of two vastly-different writing styles.

Eskimo writing or orthography dates back little more than 100 years even though archeologists have traced Eskimo history back more than 5,000 years.

The two basic styles have spread in spite of the tiny Eskimo population but neither originated with the Eskimos themselves. Both are the product of Christian missionaries.

Syllabics, a system of phonetic symbols, was devised by a Wesleyan missionary at Norway House, Man., in the 1830s and first used by a number of Indian tribes.

The most commonly-used style, it was taken north about 1860 and spread among the Eskimo people by the Anglican church.

The second system, the so-called Roman style, originated with the Moravian Mission in Labrador during the 1700s. Based on the Roman alphabet, it did not come into widespread use among Eskimos until after 1930.

CREATES PROBLEM
Syllabics are found mainly in the central, eastern and northern Quebec regions of the Arctic, along with scattered sections of Labrador. All other regions use Roman orthography.

"This creates a major problem for us," says Tagak Curley, president of Inuit Tapirisat of Canada (ITC), the national Eskimo brotherhood.

"If we're ever going to overcome our communications problems, we must establish a universal writing system."

With this in mind, the association has taken the first steps to explore development of a new writing system that could be used by all Eskimos.

A six-member Inuit Language Commission has been formed and ITC leaders have applied for a $140,000 federal grant to finance a detailed study.

The organization hopes to send commission members to all areas of the Arctic in search of information that could lead to a modern writing method acceptable to all Eskimo natives.

If the project goes ahead, the organization hopes the new language will be taught eventually in all northern schools and take root as the standard writing form for all Eskimos.

"It will take a long time but it's something we must do," Mr. Curley says. "Otherwise, our people will be more confused by the problems of the future than they are by those of today."

We learn from other countries

By GLENNIS ZILM
OTTAWA (CP) — "The health problems of developing countries are often different from those in Canada, but Canadians can learn a lot from them," says Dr. Helen K. Mussallem, executive director of the Canadian Nurses' Association.

She recently returned from a five-week visit to Uruguay, one of several recent visits for the World Health Organization and the Pan-American Health Organization to help developing countries plan their nursing curriculum. She also has been to Venezuela, Cuba and Brazil.

She went to Montevideo at the request of the University of Uruguay's school of nursing, one of the two nursing institutions in the country.

"That's one of their problems right there," she said in an interview. "There are only two schools of nursing to serve a population of about three million people."

"There are only about 1,000 practising nurses."

The school of nursing at the Uruguay university plans to increase its classes to graduate 100 students a year. Present classes number 30. Medical schools are graduating 300 to 500 doctors a year.

"They have about one nurse for every three or four doctors, the reverse of the situation in Canada."

Dr. Mussallem acted as a consultant to the Montevideo nursing faculty, helping to determine the philosophy behind planning for the curriculum.

The school was trying to recognize the health needs of the country—the need to have workers who could aid in solving such basic health problems as better water and sewage services, yet ensure that standards of teaching and nurse-training are acceptable to other countries.

"Another purpose was to help them draw up a study on career patterns, such as finding out why students drop out of nursing school and why graduates drop out of nursing later."

This study also would try to find out whether the students are adequately prepared for their nursing positions.

WORK IN COMMUNITY
One of the things Dr. Mussallem thinks Canada could learn from Uruguay is the emphasis given to health care for the well person.

Students in Uruguay spend their first two years doing nursing in the community rather than in hospital wards

Canadian nursing schools might learn from this, Dr. Mussallem said, "especially if they want to put emphasis on preventive medicine."

She said the influence of doctors has to be weighed, because they are asking for changes in the curriculum so that nurses will be better prepared to work in hospitals. However, this is not "where the people are."

Health professionals have to be more aware of developing the kind of worker who is right for the community, she said.

"We must be more creative in using new kinds of workers to get health, not treatment, to the people."

"I believe nurses are more dedicated to seeking new ways of health care. Doctors are more interested in the medical and scientific side."

New policy for FM stations

By JAMES NELSON
OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Radio-Television Commission (CRTC) will open a public hearing here Oct. 29 to consider a new broadcasting policy for privately owned frequency modulated (FM) radio stations.

It wants FM stations to give listeners more programs of a different sort than those broadcast by most privately owned standard or amplitude modulated (AM) stations.

FM stations put out a signal that can only be picked up by radio receivers equipped for FM. Generally, the FM signal is static-free, better suited for good music, especially in stereophonic sound.

All but three or four private FM stations in Canada are owned and operated as adjuncts to AM stations. The CRTC wants them to separate their program schedules and offer listeners distinct programming with more local talent employed.

The CRTC also is discussing with the publicly owned CBC a new program policy for both its AM and FM services. The commission last year rejected a CBC proposal to revise its programming on the basis of two services to try to raise its listener ratings. The CRTC feared the CBC only intended to copy the more popular private broadcaster style.

PROGRAMS IDENTICAL
The CRTC says the FM band is not being put to its best use when FM stations carry programs virtually identical to those carried on AM radio.

"Nor is the programming on FM with background music and little else, however desirable economically, a desirable use of this valuable frequency spectrum. A clear, new role must be established for FM radio."

Before the CRTC was set up in 1968, the old Board of Broadcast Governors (BBG) required FM stations to devote 20 per cent of air time to the arts, letters and sciences.

But since then, few FM stations apart from the CBC's FM network have been clearly separated from their AM counterparts. The CRTC has turned down many FM applications because they did not undertake to give listeners a significantly new or different program.

FM stations could carry competitive and lively programs which would fill a community need and attract big audiences, the CRTC says.

'USE LOCAL TALENT'
It would like to see more local talent employed in meeting the selective needs and special interests of radio audiences.

There were 92 FM stations on the air at the end of March this year, of which 14 were CBC-owned. Thirty-five were in Ontario, 18 in Quebec and 17 in British Columbia, the rest spread thinly across the rest of Canada. But it is estimated that 68.1 per cent of Canadian homes in September, 1972, had radios with FM bands.

The CRTC proposes that all new radios receive both AM and FM, except possibly for the cheapest and smallest pocket transistors.

The CRTC also wants the stations to separate their news-casting. News-casts should be at different times on jointly-owned AM and FM stations, and they should represent different treatment and presentation.

When the CRTC issues its final FM policy statement, it will expect stations to start changing their programs to comply, and complete the change within one year. License renewals will be granted only on the basis of a program schedule reflecting the new rules.

Ladies Aid meet

ROCK ISLAND — Stanstead South Church Ladies Aid met at the church on Thursday afternoon, Oct. 11, with Mrs. Geneva Lyons, leader for the month presiding opening the meeting with a reading from the Upper Room, prayer and singing of a hymn.

Routine reports were heard and the November 10 Christmas tea and sale discussed. It was agreed to donate a sum of $10.00 for items that need to be purchased for the tea. It was also noted this event will start at 1:00 p.m. as a luncheon. Mrs. Gordon Johnston and Mrs. Irwin Goodwin will decorate the sale table and members will act as sale ladies the day of the event.

Mrs. Harry Goodall, Mrs. Fayne Hovey and Mrs. Gordon Johnston reported they have finished cleaning the flatware in the church and had purchased some kitchen items that were needed.

A special invitation through the church bulletin is to be issued to the former Helping Circle members to join this group each month for the meeting and to remain for the Senior Citizens fellowship.

Mrs. Irwin Goodwin will be Leader for the month of November. Next meeting date is November 14.

SENIOR CITIZENS
A good number of Senior Citizens gathered in the hall of Stanstead South Church, Rock Island, on Thursday afternoon, Oct. 11 for the monthly party.

A letter was read from Mrs. Mary Young, Pointe Claire, inviting the group to attend a cinema production of The Great Waltz, on Oct. 24 at Fairview, suggesting the people come in early for lunch.

With Mrs. Gordon Johnston at the piano group singing of old songs was enjoyed. The remainder of the afternoon was spent playing cards and at five o'clock a hot supper was served by members of the Ladies Aid.

donation of Dominion Store sales slips given by a Sherbrooke Church group.

Welfare and Health - used stamps were collected.

Publicity - Mrs. Kenneth Smart gave interesting details of an enjoyable Foliage bus tour taken to Forham, N.H., sponsored by a Sherbrooke Group.

Mrs. Mickie Povey reported sending birthday cards.

Business included voting on several subjects with results, all in favor of continuing the School Fair and handicraft sales booth, but not in favor of affiliating with the Montreal Council of Women next year as this affiliation had been dropped for the past year.

The November meeting will be held at the home of Miss Edna Smith, new address University Road. This will be a supper meeting with Mrs. Garland Page assisting hostess at 6:30 p.m. on November 10. Note change of date.

The guest speaker will be Dr. Kathleen Atto and sale of poppies will be held, roll call bring a gift for a cancer patient.

At the close a delicious tea was served by the hostess assisted by Mrs. Francis Paige and Mrs. Garth Montgomery.

ACW-Guild

ROCK ISLAND - Mrs. R.W. Wells and Mrs. Ethel Barnes, Rock Island, were hostesses for the October 10 meeting of Christ Church ACW - Guild held at the home of Mrs. Wells that evening.

Mrs. Ivy Hatch, president of the month, opened the meeting by reading an October poem. Routine reports followed. It was noted the September supper project had been a success.

Mrs. Nellie Kezar, Thanksoffering secretary, received the annual thanksoffering gifts to be sent later to the diocesan secretary.

Mrs. Hatch is receiving subscriptions and renewals for the Living message magazine. These will be sent to Toronto after November 14 meeting.

Family Life secretary, Mrs. Sally Perrault, reported on the Little Helpers party held October 3 at the church and parish hall.

Several communications were read. One from Mrs. Mary Young, Pointe Claire, inviting the members to attend a movie The Great Waltz, Oct. 24 at Fairview Cinema.

A letter was also read from Mrs. J.R.S. Scott's daughter thanking the members of ACW - Guild for sympathy and friendship at the time of Mrs. Scott's death. There was also a gift of money enclosed for the treasury.

Mrs. N.C. Chamberlain, cards secretary said she had sent three during the past month to sick people.

Mrs. Wells, in the absence of Mrs. Lindsay Smith, convener of the Douglas Hospital Forgotten Patients project reported a gift sent for a birthday and that one of the forgotten ones had died recently.

It was decided to take on as a Christmas project Christmas gifts for the hospital. These should be brought to the November 14 meeting unwrapped.

Mrs. Wells, convener of gifts, noted two remembrances made for the Book of Remembrance in cases of the death of church people.

Mrs. John Shipway, prayer partner secretary read a letter from Rev. P.T. Sargent, Edmonton, Alta., and assisted by Mrs. Wells read another lengthy letter telling of his mission work.

It was agreed to cater for a wedding reception on October 20. The wedding is in the church and the reception in the parish hall. Several members volunteered to assist.

Plans were finalized for the October 25 rummage sale to be held in the Quebec Hydro building in Rock Island. The usual ladies will pick up on Wednesday afternoon but it is hoped as many as possible will take their donations to the building.

Mrs. George Millet will be president for the month of November. It was agreed to have St. Andrew's day church service at 5:30 p.m., Nov. 30 and pot luck supper at the Rectory, home of Rev. Canon and Mrs. Church and afterwards to prepare for the Christmas tea and sale on Dec. 1 in the parish hall. Mrs. Alfred Middleton read a poem Little Things.

The meeting adjourned and Mrs. Church continued with the program from the September meeting. The members were divided into groups of three to discuss Senior Adults, Christian Education and living, Overseas mission and Social action.

The evening terminated with the serving of refreshments.

Mrs. Church gave as a memorial another subscription to the Living Message. Mrs. Alfred Middleton held the lucky ticket and she asked it be sent to Mrs. Richard Middleton, Sr.

Mrs. Alfred Middleton and Mrs. John Smith will hostess the November meeting at the home of Mrs. Middleton.

Basford rejects inquiry into revenue sharing

EDMONTON (CP) — Federal, provincial and municipal representatives agreed Tuesday to refer a proposal on investigating municipal financial problems to their governments for approval.

The compromise settlement was reached after federal Urban Affairs Minister Ron Basford rejected a municipal request for an inquiry into revenue sharing between various levels of government.

Ontario and Alberta supported the municipal suggestion to the national tri-level conference but other provinces were reluctant to commit their governments.

Mr. Basford said he could commit the federal government to the compromise agreement which, in effect, was his proposal. Ontario Treasurer John White also said he could immediately promise provincial support.

But other provincial ministers were unwilling to make immediate pledges.

Basically the resolution calls for creation of an independent study group to get detailed information on municipal financial needs.

The study group would gather information on revenue sources of each level of government and fiscal transfers.

All levels of government must report back their decisions by Dec. 31. The study group, if approved, would report to the national tri-level conference in 1974.

Earlier, Mr. Basford said the federal government could not support proposals for transferring more federal money to municipalities. This would lead to reductions in federal programs.

"I am not prepared to accept cutting back on federal programs because I do not accept that they are of lower priority than the programs of other governments," he said.

Only Alberta and Ontario supported the municipal demand for a revenue-sharing inquiry. Other provinces indicated they could not make such a decision without consulting their governments.

Ontario Treasurer John White forced the division among municipalities and the federal and some provincial governments into the open by proposing a motion similar to the municipal request in a position paper.

Mr. White told reporters later that the results of the discussion are typical of federal-provincial conferences.

The minister said that the "consultative process is frustrated by an intransigent federal government which succeeds in marshalling some number of smaller provinces to its side."

Mr. Basford, however, proposed a study which would examine municipal finances to determine what the facts are. He noted at federal and provincial papers disagree sharply about the growth in tax revenue in the provincial and federal fields.

After listening to some strong views from Ontario, Alberta and some municipal leaders, Mr. Basford said he could think of no faster way to kill the tri-level discussions than to insist on revenue sharing.

He said that some persons seemed to want to force the matter to destroy tri-level consultations.

Mr. White later said that Ontario plans to continue attending national tri-level discussions whatever the results of financial talks.

Mayor J. W. Bird of Fredericton, head of the municipal delegation, said the municipalities don't want to destroy national talks with federal and provincial governments. They would not ruin these discussions for the sake of any particular proposal.

UIC payments lower in August

By NEIL GILBRIDE

OTTAWA (CP) — Total unemployment insurance payments dropped in August to $145 million, down $10.5 million from July and $9 million below August, 1972. Statistics Canada reported Tuesday.

It was the third month this year in which the jobless pay total fell below levels of the corresponding months last year. The other two months were May and June.

In August, payments in all provinces and territories except Quebec were lower than in July.

The average weekly benefit declined 96 cents to $67.37 and was $6.49 above August, 1972.

The August report gave these figures for the provinces and territories:

Newfoundland—Total payments $5.2 million, down $1 million from July and up $870,000 from August, 1972. Average weekly benefit $61.60, down $1.49 for the month and up $6.58 over the year.

Prince Edward Island—Total payments $621,000, down $132,000 for the month and up $144,000 over the year. Average benefit $54.94, up 79 cents for the month and up $9.80 for the year.

Nova Scotia—Total $4.9 million, down $809,000 from July and down $8,000 over the year. Average benefit $63.39, down 10 cents for the month and up $9.06 over the year.

New Brunswick—Total $5 million, down $1 million from July and up $504,000 from August, 1972. Average benefit $59.67, down 39 cents for the month and up $4.12 over the year.

Quebec—Total $47.2 million, up $1.8 million for the month and $4.3 million above August, 1972. Average benefit $66.53, down $1.54 over the month and up $6.69 over the year.

Ontario—Total $40.8 million, down $6.4 million from July and $10.1 million less than August, 1972. Average benefit $67.42, down $2.03 from July and up $5.74 over the year.

Manitoba—Total $4 million, down $194,000 for the month and $676,000 below August, 1972. Average benefit $67.53, down 84 cents from July and up $12.12 over August, 1972.

Saskatchewan—Total $2.8 million, down $240,000 for the month and down $435,000 over the year. Average benefit $66.08, down 94 cents from July and up $6.08 from August, 1972.

Alberta—Total $6.3 million, down $280,000 for the month and $2.6 million below a year earlier. Average benefit $71.77, down 64 cents below a year earlier. Average benefit $71.77, down 64 cents for the month and up $6.89 over the year.

British Columbia—Total $18.2 million, down $1.9 million for the month and down $1 million over the year. Average benefit $74.58, up $2.41 for the month and up $7.88 over the year.

Urged to vote

SHERBROOKE (CC) — Mgr. Jean-Marie Fortier, Catholic church leader in Sherbrooke, has urged everyone to vote Monday.

Encouraging everyone to analyse the four party platforms on housing, the family, poverty, regional and sectoral disparities, working conditions and political motives, the leader said everyone has "the obligation to vote" on October 29.

But before and after that date everyone has the obligation to participate in the political process, he added.

He did not support any party but instead asked everyone to vote in the way they believe the development of social principles may be fostered.

Taxi policy

SHERBROOKE (CC) — The city of Sherbrooke will no longer be responsible for issuing permits to taxi drivers and owners beginning November 1.

On that date the provincial government will take over the responsibility.

The government will be responsible for testing drivers and for issuing permits. The action is designed to correct many of the injustices existent in the taxi industry.

As of November 1 taxi owners will purchase their permits from Quebec. Owners will not pay more than they paid beforehand to the city.

In Sherbrooke taxi owner permits were $25 while driver permits were $2 yearly. The change will cost the city approximately $2,600 in revenues, according to a municipal spokesman.

Card of Thanks

JONES — We would like to take this opportunity to express our most sincere thanks to our relatives, friends and neighbours for their kind help and support during and after the loss of our barn by lightning on Sept. 3. The many phone calls, letters and visits were of great comfort to us. A very special thanks to the Dunham Fire Brigade who did an outstanding job and to our neighbours, Mr. & Mrs. Charles Corriveau and family for their help and for allowing us to milk our cows in their barn for over 3 weeks. Again to each and everyone, a big "Thank You".

The funeral took place on Sept. 24 from R.L. Bishop & Son Funeral Chapel.

The Rev. Donald Campbell officiated and Mrs. Wright Gibson sang The Old Rugged Cross, a favorite hymn of the deceased.

He leaves to mourn his loss his wife Marie, a son Andy, a daughter-in-law and three grandsons.

Burial took place in Malvern Cemetery in Lennoxville.

ALFRED A. POIRIER

Formerly of Richmond

The death of Alfred Poirier occurred suddenly in his home on Sept. 23, 1973.

He was born in Fall River, Mass., son of the late John B. Poirier and his wife Adeline Racicot on July 16, 1893.

Moving to Richmond, Que., with the family in 1900 he received his education at the St. Francis College High School.

Returning to the U.S.A. in 1913, he later started working on the New Haven Hartford Railroad and retired as a conductor.

Always having regarded Richmond as his home town he returned to Canada in 1959. He lived near his sister in Montreal.

Left to mourn his loss are his two sons Edward A. and Raymond J., five grandchildren and two great-grandchildren, his sister Leah Jones Lynn and distant relatives.

He was predeceased by his wife Elsie Poirier and a younger sister Ida (Mrs. Fred Astell).

Following funeral services at the Collins Funeral Home interment took place in St. Anne's Cemetery, Richmond.

The view from here

with Terry Scott

I wouldn't give you a brass farthing for the chances of junior hockey surviving in Cowansville beyond this season.

Oh, I know you've seen the deathbed wheeled in every year at this precise moment in time for the past three seasons but the body just might have its final ounces of strength sapped during the coming five months.

And when they get around to performing a post-mortem I can already predict the decision: multiple fractures of the skull from excessive beating against a wall of indifference.

Just what is meant by a wall of indifference? Well, it belongs to Cowansville's non-hockey fans, who've never regarded the Voyageurs with anything more than collective apathy from the moment they set foot on the ice for the first time a full three years ago.

That night an estimated audience of 1,200 garnered their first impression of the new franchise in town and I'd be willing to wager that a lot of them haven't returned yet. You could probably even count the die-hards on the legs of five centipedes.

The Voyageurs were nothing more than a farce during their first venture into junior hockey, and nothing contributed so hugely to the steady fan desertion. But since then, no one has strived to make amends more than the new group of team directors.

I hope it's too early to accurately forecast but I have to believe they're rapping their noggins on solid concrete and it's a filthy shame since no one has put more guts into developing Cowansville's budding hockey potential.

Yet, what more can anyone surmise when the total count in the house for the Vees' opener failed to even reach the 500 mark, while the second game didn't do any better?

I can no longer buy the excuse that the Voyageurs are a bunch of bumbling hotheads who can't come within a country mile of approaching the calibre of their opponents.

That may have been the case while they experienced the growing pains of all young franchises but they turned the corner last year by earning a playoff spot with some solid, and at times, remarkably sound hockey.

Likewise, while this might honestly be termed a rebuilding year, the club has enough talent to challenge for a playoff berth and who knows how much higher once some of that youth gains seasoning.

Nor can I agree with the complaint that there's an insufficient amount of home-grown products to warrant even a passing interest.

True, the Voyageurs have constantly been forced to reach into other people's minor hockey systems to obtain respectable hockey personnel but at long last the Cowansville program appears to be on the verge of yielding a crop.

Until now, about the only really bonafide junior sensation who has graduated from the local minor hockey ranks is Alain Blanchet, the club's top scorer last season.

I'm not ignoring two other capable local products, Rick Stowe and Robby Strenguber from last year's edition, but both received the major portion of their training in high school hockey.

In the Voyageurs' 1973-74 curtain-raiser, no less than three players appeared on the roster who've progressed up the ladder in Cowansville's minor hockey set-up.

Anyone close to the team will tell you that few players were more eye-catching in training camp than Mario Surprenant, Alain Guenette, and Gilles St-Martin, who just happen to be the trio mentioned above. All of them are Midget graduates, and Surprenant, who's the oldest, hasn't even reached his 17th birthday!

But the future development of local hockey talent looks even rosier. The Royals, an Inter-City Pee-Wee team finished an impressive second in league competition last season. The Aces, a Bantam entry swept everything in sight, and the Midget Cyclones imitated the gesture by also grabbing everything within reach.

This has to lead one to believe that the Voyageurs are just beginning to be on the receiving end of some brilliant hockey potential from the minor hockey assembly line. But will the fans be around to appreciate it?

Similarly, I can't support the beef that the Voyageurs lack a good board of directors to mold them into a successful operation. The executive party, as it presently exists, is not-potch, from president Jean-Paul Leduc, who's tossed in nearly all of his leisure hours toward the project for the past two seasons, to Jean-Luc Boucher, who hasn't left a stone unturned in his quest for suitable talent.

And in Donald Hollands the Voyageurs reached out for a coach with local appeal, since he's a well-known Cowansville businessman, but also a man who knows the game thoroughly and can identify with young people.

Ironically, it is Cowansville hockey fans who have managed to keep this franchise above water for the past two years, not because of their attendance at home games, but because of their financial contributions toward numerous team projects during the year.

It was they who purchased Voyageurs' souvenirs, tickets to their benefit supper and gasorama, and collectively pulled them out of a financial bind which would otherwise have closed the book on the franchise.

Yet, when it comes time to show up at the arena and see the beneficiary of their cash, empty seats give a grim reminder that the same people have turned their backs.

I used to find excuses for the Voyageurs' unpopularity by listing all the reasons which I've already mentioned in this column, but I can't do that anymore, because it would be doing a huge injustice to the entire organization of the club.

I'd prefer to feel that the shoe is now on the other foot, and the fans have become the villain in Cowansville's discouraging junior hockey picture.

Football franchise

CHICAGO (AP) — The newly-formed World Football League awarded a franchise to Chicago Tuesday with a pledge by the new owner to gamble $4 million or $5 million on its success.

The proposed WFL, aiming to start a 20-game season next July, announced at a news conference that Thomas Origer, a Chicago construction magnate, and Cleveland sportsman Nick Mileti, were partners in the Chicago franchise.

WFL commissioner Gary Davidson, said six cities already have firm franchise commitments. They include New York, Honolulu, Toronto, Boston and Los Angeles, with Tokyo a strong possibility.

"We plan for at least eight and possibly 12 teams operating the first season," said Davidson, who previously organized the American Basketball Association and World Hockey Association.

No price was disclosed for the Chicago franchise of which Ori-ger is principal owner. A minority partner is Mileti, a principal owner of Cleveland Indians, Cleveland Cavaliers and Cleveland Crusaders.

INCLUDES VANCOUVER
 "We currently are negotiating with 19 groups for franchises covering 15 cities from Mexico City to Vancouver," said Davidson.

The new league plans to play on Wednesday or Thursday nights, from July into December and hopes to line up playing talent in a January draft. That would cover all current pro players in the long-established National Football League and Canadian Football League, along with the next college senior crop.

Origer, 40, a builder of apartments and condominiums, said: "I'm no Lamar Hunt, but I think I can ride out losses for three, four or five years."

"I am willing to invest $4 to $5 million, because I feel strongly about the staying power of this new league."

Leafs hold on to first place

By RON SUDLOW
 Canadian Press Writer
 It may be late October but the Maple Leafs aren't falling yet. The Leafs, who finished fifth in the National Hockey League's East Division last season, are still in first place after getting there with a victory over New York Rangers Saturday night in Toronto.

Tuesday night they scrambled to a 2-2 tie with winless Minnesota North Stars while Boston Bruins were beaten 3-2 by St.

Louis Blues to remain a point back in a second-place tie with Buffalo Sabres.

In Vancouver, the Canucks crept into a fifth-place tie with Montreal Canadiens by dousing Atlanta Flames 3-0 as Andre Boudrias scored twice.

In Toronto, rookie defenceman Bob Neely's blue-line blast was deflected past North Star goalie Cesare Maniago with 3:25 remaining to allow the rookie-laden Leafs to salvage the tie.

The shot ticked the stick of North Star defenceman Dennis O'Brien and went into the net just under the crossbar, ruining a sensational night in goal for Maniago who handed 38 shots.

TOOK AWAY TENSION

The goal also removed a little bit of the tension of cutting teeth in the NHL for Neely, who gave away the winning goal Sunday night in Buffalo to the Sabres' Gilbert Perreault.

"I was thinking about it the night before this game but I told myself I had to forget it and look ahead," said Neely, who saw Minnesota's second goal go in off his skate.

In the Minnesota dressing room, Bill Goldsworthy, who scored his fifth of the season to give his club a 1-0 first-period lead, said the loss was "part of the jinx we've got going."

"Every damn game, something happens. The same thing happened in Detroit. We were ahead 4-2 and they ended up tying it off the face-off."

Dennis Hextall gave Minnesota a 2-0 edge in the second period before Inge Hammarstrom scored his third of the season for the Leafs.

The North Stars get another chance tonight when they visit New York for a date with the Islanders, the only other winless club in the league.

WANT INITIAL WIN

The Detroit Red Wings play the Golden Seals at Oakland, Montreal meets the Penguins at Pittsburgh, Chicago Black Hawks are at Buffalo and the Flames visit Los Angeles Kings.

At St. Louis, all Wayne Merrick wanted to do was keep Bruins' Phil Esposito off the scoresheet. He held Esposito to a near-standstill and scored the winning goal with just over four minutes left.

A near-standstill means that Esposito only got assists on the goals scored by Ken Hodge on a power play and Bobby Orr eight seconds after he came out of the penalty box.

"I was really scared going into the game," said Merrick, who held Esposito to five shots.

"He's a pretty good hockey player, probably the best I've ever seen. All I wanted to do was keep him from scoring."

NEVER BEHIND

The Blues took 1-0 and 2-1 leads on goals by Bob (Battleship) Kelly and Mike Lampana, a rookie leftwinger making his first start after being called up from Denver Spurs of the Western Hockey League.

Boston's loss, the fourth in a row over two seasons to the Blues, cost the Bruins the services of rookie centre Richie Leduc who crashed into the boards in the third period and broke a shoulder bone.

WHA roundup

By THE CANADIAN PRESS
 The goalies couldn't quite face up to it Tuesday night in Edmonton as the Oilers whipped Toronto Toros 4-2 to move into a tie for first place in the World Hockey Association's West Division.

Both Jack Norris of Edmonton and Les Binkley were hit on the face mask by pucks and had to leave the game.

In the only other game of the night Los Angeles Sharks finally won one at home and handed Cleveland Crusaders a 4-3 defeat, their first loss of the season.

But replacement Chris Worthy blanked the Toros the rest of the way, stopping Simpson twice on third-period breakaways.

BOTH INJURED

Binkley got a cut over the ear while Norris came out of it with a severe headache.

Val Fonteyne gave Edmonton an early lead but Steve King tied it before the first period was over and Simpson put Toronto in front early in the second stanza.

But that was it for the Toros. Al Hamilton tied it for Edmonton and third-period goals by Rusty Patenaude and Ron Climie decided the issue.

The Oilers now have four victories in five starts to match the eight-point output of Winnipeg Jets.

The game featured a third-period brawl that resulted in five majors and two misconducts. Doug Barrie of the Oilers and Rich Sentes of Toronto tangled in one bout that saw Barrie get a minor and a major while Sentes drew two majors and a misconduct.

POUNDED DILLON

Oiler winger Tom Gilmore drew a double major and a game misconduct for pummeling Toronto rookie Wayne Dillon who didn't draw a penalty.

"I guess my guys want to die young," said coach Terry Slater after his Sharks took a 2-0 lead, fell behind 3-2 then won with a third-period goal within a span of 28 seconds.

Brian McDonald got his second of the night to tie the game 3-3. Reg Thomas followed with his first professional goal with five minutes remaining.

Steve Sutherland opened the Sharks' scoring in the first period when Los Angeles fired 18 of its 38 shots on the Cleveland net.

"We should have scored eight goals in the first period," Slater said of his club's first home win in three tries. "We have had a psychological letdown at home, though, so maybe we've broken that."

Cleveland scoring was confined to the second period when Gerry Pinder, Larry Hillman and Gary Jarrett clicked for the Crusaders.

Tonight the Sharks play the Aeros at Houston, Minnesota Fighting Saints visit the Golden Blades at New York and the Toros meet the Blazers at Vancouver.

All-America Award Winning Roses For 1974

For those who plant their roses in the fall, plants of these winners will now be found listed in the fall catalogs of the mail order houses and on the shelves of the larger garden centers. Those who would wait until spring to do their planting will find the three winners stocked by practically all rose plant dealers throughout the country.

Blooming plants of the three 1974 All-America award winning roses have been on display since early spring in the 114 AARS accredited Public Rose Gardens throughout the United States. Plants were shipped to these gardens last spring so that the new roses, BAHIA, BON BON and PERFUME DELIGHT would be available for public viewing throughout 1973.

PERFUME DELIGHT (Plant Patent No. 3282)
Probably the three most important qualities a rose bloom can possess are fragrance, attractive color and large, shapely flowers. Rarely, however, is any one rose endowed with all three. Even beloved Peace, huge and magnificent, lacks fragrance. There is, however, among the 1974 AARS winners, a hybrid that does possess the above qualifications and is in every sense a most outstanding rose. PERFUME DELIGHT, as its name indicates, has an enchanting, spicy, tea rose fragrance. In addition, the color of PERFUME DELIGHT is a rich, deep pink, and the four to five inch blooms, well supported on strong stems above a thick, bushy plant, are all that could be desired in a rose destined to be among the greats.

As an example of the delightful, penetrating fragrance of this rose, when a bouquet of PERFUME DELIGHT was carried through the audience to be introduced at the New York Press Luncheon last June, all heads turned to discover the source of the sudden wave of fragrance that filled the room. A product of the breeder and rose specialist, O. L. Weeks of Ontario, California, PERFUME DELIGHT comes from a parentage replete with fragrance. Of the five All-America award winners in its immediate ancestry, three (Charlotte Armstrong, Mirandy and Chrysler Imperial) are noted for their rich perfume. Further back on the family tree are to be found Madame Butterfly, Joanna Hill, Crimson Glory, Rome Glory and Night, all deliciously perfumed as well as being good growers.

The urn-shaped buds of this 1974 winner, classically long and pointed, are very deep pink, opening into large, high-centered, clear pink blossoms, many of which will no doubt find their way to the show tables of the rose societies as gardeners become acquainted with this variety. As an added asset, its excellent coloring fades very slowly and the bloom remains attractive until the petals drop.

PERFUME DELIGHT produces a vigorous, well-branched, medium-tall plant with an abundance of deep green, leathery foliage completely covering it from top to bottom. The strong, bright green canes break from the base of the plant and constantly grow new branches, producing a continuous display of flowers from spring until heavy frost. The leaves are disease resistant and stand up well against the rigors of both winter cold and summer heat.

The uses of this new hybrid tea are practically unlimited. Because of the strong stems, the shapely, fragrant blooms are excellent for cutting and, thanks to the firm substance of the petals, the cut flowers hold up well. A single bud in a slim vase, a full bloom floated in a bowl, or a sophisticated arrangement or mass bouquet of PERFUME DELIGHT will delight all eyes and nostrils.

The real effectiveness of this rose, however, lies in its use in a mass planting along driveway or walk, bordering the patio or porch, or as a bedding plant in lawn or garden. Continuous bloom and delightful fragrance justify its use in any or all of these locations.

BON BON (Plant Patent Applied For)
Seldom does a floribunda come along with as great a potential for a landscaping rose as this new 1974 award winner, BON BON. Densely covered with masses of large, showy, deep rose and white bi-color blooms from spring until fall, this new floribunda produces a low-growing, compact plant ideally suited for landscape use. It should give great satisfaction, both in plantings on the home grounds and for use in large, flowery exhibits in parks, along highways, or as striking color spots in the landscaping of commercial properties.

The individual blooms of BON BON run as large as 3 1/2 inches and the bright rose-pink and cream buds open to rounded, cupped flowers formed by as many as 25 petals of extra heavy substance. Because of the masses of large, fully open flowers, the plant in full bloom forms a huge, two foot high living bouquet. As an added asset, the roses are as richly fragrant as they are colorful. As the flowers of BON BON reach the end of their life, they exhibit an especially desirable trait in landscape roses — the petals fall cleanly, never hanging on to create an unsightly picture. The plant has been generally rated as being resistant to blackspot and mildew.

Hybridized in 1965 by William Warriner of Tustin, California, BON BON's illustrious parentage includes such world famous names as Bridal Pink, Spartan and Fashion.

Consideration should be given this rose for use as a hedge. It averages 2-2 1/2 feet in height with a very even growth and a broad, bushy plant. Neat and compact, it would produce a magnificent low hedge, covered throughout the summer with miriads of deep pink, fragrant blooms. The leaves are a deep grey-green, which adds to the attractiveness of this winner.

Everything is in big, bigger, biggest in Europe, but we probably won't go to extremes in Canada."

She said even this year's fashionable clutch bag will be big and have a detachable strap. The briefcase look will be popular.

Handbags for spring will be shown in white, bone and tan. In Europe, red is taking an early fashion lead.

The most extreme of the platform shoes have been modified for fall and will be modified still more for spring.

Lack of training dangerous

COURTENAY, B.C. (CP) — Wally Hacking loves to see other people enjoying the wilderness but the thought of the untrained hikers, canoeists, hunters and fishermen who go into the bush makes him shudder.

Mr. Hacking, 42, said people cause most of the accidents that are becoming all too common in the outdoors and with that in mind, he's been putting all his time and energy into the Comox Valley Outdoor College.

The college, established in March in this Vancouver Island community, enables Mr. Hacking to share his love of the outdoors and have the satisfaction of knowing that others, mainly young people, have been taught safety and survival techniques and are prepared for the unexpected incidents that may occur in the wilderness.

Mr. Hacking, founder and president of the outdoors college, received his survival training during 20 years in the armed forces, spending 11 of those years in search and rescue work. He also has a practical nurse's licence.

TEACHES TWO COURSES
Two courses are taught at the school.

The first is a hunters' training course, sponsored by local merchants and the provincial fish and wildlife branch. It is directed at persons aged 13 and over.

The tuition fee is $5, with students taking 24 hours of theory and 40 hours of basic survival training. Also included is 12 hours of shooting practice with a rifle and shotgun and six hours of theory on how to use the weapons.

The survival course is taught at the end of each session, when instructors take students on a 40-hour weekend camping trip on Vancouver Island, near Campbell River.

BUILD LEAN-TOS
On the trip, students construct their own lean-tos for sleeping quarters and attempt to put their new knowledge to practical use. They are also taught how to build snares and traps for use in emergency situations.

Buying, Selling Money To Make Money

Amanda Jones (left), Miss U.S.A. and runnerup in the Miss Universe contest; and Bonnie Brady, Miss Dominion of Canada, help Everette B. Harris, president of the International Monetary Market of the Chicago Mercantile Exchange, Inc. open trading in a shiny new commodity—U.S. and Canadian silver coins. The I.M.M. previously had listed contracts only in eight foreign currencies. The coins in the huge crystal ball equal only one 54.5-pound bag of silver coins. Actually each contract on the I.M.M., for delivery in March, June, September and December 1974 consists of five such bags with a total face value of $5,000. Coins are the only commodity traded on futures exchanges with a face value below which they cannot drop. On opening day, U.S. coins were sold at more than $10,000 a contract, with Canadian coins ranging from about $8,500 to $9,000 for five 50.75-pound bags.

Princess chose ring

LONDON (CP) — The design Princess Anne chose for her engagement ring was an oval sapphire flanked by two brilliant-cut diamonds mounted in a classic coronet setting.

A spokesman for Garrard and Co. Ltd., the London jewelry firm that made the ring, was asked whether the choice of a traditional style by the 23-year-old princess came as a surprise.

"Not in the least," he said. "Her taste reflects that of most young people. Although there is a marked swing to modern design for dress rings and other modern jewelry, when it comes to an engagement ring most young people want something classic and ageless that they can wear for the rest of their lives."

Garrard, which has served royalty for more than 200 years, has more than 1,200 rings in stock in its shop near Piccadilly Circus, which also offers fine gold and silverware, both new and old.

On display is a set of diamond and emerald earrings, necklace, ring and bracelet. The ring alone is priced at 75,000 pounds ($180,000). But a gold bracelet charm can be had for one pound ($2.40).

"Even the smallest pocket can stretch to that," the company spokesman said. "We are particularly keen to encourage young people to get into the habit of coming in to browse around. After the engagement ring we hope they will come back to buy the wedding ring and so establish a regular relationship with us."

Garrard also encourages its staff to stay on for a long time and some customer-salesman relationships continue for generations.

It was Frederick, Prince of Wales, father of King George III, who gave the company its first royal warrant in 1735 when he appointed George Wickes to be his "goldsmith, jeweller and silversmith." The name Garrard did not come until 1792 when the business became the property of Robert Garrard, whose sons Robert, James and Sebastian subsequently came into possession as Garrard Brothers.

PRESTIGE GREW
In 1737-1738 a service of plate costing 3,000 pounds was made for the Prince of Wales. After his death in 1751 a new warrant was issued for the new Prince of Wales, the future George III, during whose reign another warrant was issued to the company as "court jewellers." By then the company had built up a steady clientele consisting of most of the nobility, and royal patronage had become the norm.

The coronation year of 1821 brought much new business to Garrard. The Duke of Wellington went there for his coronet which cost him 26 pounds. Later the firm was asked to recut the famous Koh-i-Noor diamond which at London's Great Exhibition of 1851 was valued at 2 million pounds.

Investment increase

By PETER BUCKLEY
WASHINGTON (CP) — The value of direct United States investment in Canadian industry increased by $1.7 billion last year, mainly because U.S. affiliates in Canada put a record amount of profits into further expansions and acquisitions, the commerce department reports.

Preliminary figures put the total book value of U.S. direct investments in Canada at the end of 1972 at $25.8 billion, a seven-per-cent increase over the $24.1 billion reported a year earlier.

Reinvested earnings accounted for $1,367 million of the increase, nearly $300 million more than the record 1971 figure.

Net capital outflows from the U.S. to Canada accounted for $380 million, about $100 million higher than in 1971 but well below the record of $1,153 million in 1966.

The figures are contained in a detailed summary of U.S. direct investment in foreign countries, published in the latest edition of the department's monthly Survey of Current Business.

Throughout the world, U.S. direct investment was valued at $94 billion at the end of 1972, up $8 billion or nine per cent from 1971. Reinvested earnings accounted for about 60 per cent of the increase, the first time since 1955 that they have been larger than the net capital outflows.

Leonard Lupo, the survey's author, wrote that the increase in reinvested earnings "resulted from both an unusually large increase in the dollar value of earnings of incorporated foreign affiliates and a sharp decrease in the proportion of earnings paid out by them as dividends."

The reduction in dividend payments was attributed in part to dollar devaluations, which meant that in some cases a smaller amount of foreign earnings would provide the same dividend to the U.S., and in part to U.S. restraints on the growth of dividend payments.

In Canada, the manufacturing sector, which accounts for 45 per cent of the book value of U.S. investment, provided more than 60 per cent of the 1972 increase in book value—rising to $11.6 billion from $10.5 billion in 1971. Reinvested earnings accounted for 75 per cent of the increase.

The Canadian petroleum industry saw a $92-million net deficit in U.S. capital outflows, but reinvested earnings of $314 million sent the 1972 book value to $5.3 billion from $5.1 billion the preceding year.

A LICK IS WORTH A THOUSAND WORDS — Laurie Birmingham receives an affectionate lick from one of the residents of the SPCA Shelter at 3215 Jean Talon St. W. He is no doubt trying to convince her that he should be adopted and taken home. Last year some 7,000 good homes were found for animals by the SPCA. Part of the donations to SPCA during its fund raising campaign which closes Oct. 30 will pay for the ten tons of animal food consumed at the shelter and the twelve tons of absorbent paper used to line cages. The floors at SPCA are mopped 4 times per day and donations will also pay for the 450 gallons of soap, disinfectant and anti-bacteria chemicals used.

Canadian leather popular fashion

TORONTO (CP) — In high fashion clothes and in sports clothes, Canadian leather fashions are more and more in demand in Canada and in other countries, says Elizabeth Hammond.

Director of the Leather Bureau of Canada, she says leather fashions from Canada have been winning world acceptance.

Highlight examples of the styles she means were shown at the recent Canadian Leather Show.

One was an elegant shirt-style jacket for men in beige suede. A windbreaker style, stitched in white, and a wide-lapelled hacking jacket were featured.

There was a welding suit done in caramel brown with seams threaded with metal striping for reinforcement.

Canadian leathers are noted for their range of colors. Two fashion colors for fall are mauve and a wine shade called Bordeaux. They were even used in two-tone men's shoes.

Winter wheat, wheat germ, which is a clearer shade, and deer tan were described as good standard fall colors that are popular again this year by Fred Glasser, president of the Leather Bureau. Mr. Glasser says a light navy is on the scene this season too.

Tributes to Pablo Casals death pour in SAN JUAN (AP) — Tributes poured in today acclaiming the greatness of Pablo Casals, the cellist and humanitarian who died Monday at 96.

He was to be buried this afternoon in a black granite vault less than a block from his home here in this Puerto Rican city.

Casals, who for the last 35 years used his musical talents in a protest against tyranny and a campaign for peace, died after three weeks in Auxilio Jutuo Hospital. He was taken to hospital after a heart seizure, but doctors said he also suffered from chronic bronchitis, a kidney failure and circulatory ailments.

He was the foremost cellist of the 20th century and a superlative performer into his 80s. In recent years he won new honors as a conductor.

"Sometimes I feel like a boy," Casals once said. "Music does that. I can never play the same piece twice in the same way. Each time it is new."

"Pablo Casals was one of the greatest musicians of all time and the greatest cellist," said Eugene Ormandy, the music director of the Philadelphia Orchestra. "His love of people was probably the reason for his rich and long life."

Mstislav Rostropovich of the Soviet Union, considered Casals' successor as the world's No. 1 cellist, said: "I have lost not only a great teacher but a true friend. I feel a great personal grief."

Born Dec. 29, 1876, in Vendrell, in the fiercely independent part of Spain known as Catalonia, Casals played before Spanish royalty before he reached the age of 15. He was solo cellist for the Paris Opera while still a teen-ager.

He returned to Spain in the 1930s to conduct his own orchestra, but was driven abroad by Francisco Franco's overthrow of the republican government in the Spanish civil war.

"At that time I vowed I would not play in those countries which recognized Franco Spain or in any other country where basic human freedoms are denied," Casals, a fervent anti-Fascist, said

performed frequently in the United States and Europe. He moved to Puerto Rico in 1955. Two years later, at the age of 80, he married his pupil, 20-year-old Martita Montanez. It was Casals' fourth marriage and her first. She was at his bedside when he died.

In Spain, Casals' death was received with deep regret in music circles. "It is painful that a universal Spaniard has to die out of his home, for questions that concern neither culture nor the art," said composer Cristobal Halffter in Madrid. Casals' only return to Spain was in 1955 when he accompanied the body of his third wife, Francisca Capdevila. His first wife was Guilhermina Suggia, a Portuguese cellist pupil whom he married in 1906.

He married his second wife, Susan Metcalfe, an American singer, in 1914. He had no children by any of his marriages.

TORONTO (CP) — When Jacques Plante left Boston Bruins last spring to take a job with Quebec Nordiques, at least a couple of bridges appeared to go up in smoke behind him.

For one thing, Plante was crossing the line from the National Hockey League to the upstart rival World Hockey Association. The NHL has made it clear it would like to see the WHA fade away.

And secondly, Plante had promised the Bruins he would play in goal for them at least another season. That was the claim of an agitated Harry Sinden, Bruins general manager.

But despite having crossed the battle lines to the WHA after supposedly going back on his word to Sinden, Plante says he still has numerous friends in the NHL who were especially helpful in his getting started at Quebec.

Here for a recent WHA game against Toronto Toros, Plante said in an interview that he consulted several NHL people before he even took on the job of general manager and coach of Les Nordiques.

"Emile Francis of New York Rangers, Scotty Bowman of the Canadiens, Milt Schmidt of the new Washington franchise and Mr. (Frank) Selke Sr. were most helpful in their advice."

"They all told me I could handle the dual job of general manager and coach, providing I got an assistant. Otherwise, I would have to work 16-17 hours a day."

"They gave me tips how to sign players and how to sign my own contract and they warned me that the most difficult aspect of the GM job is signing players. Boy, how right they were."

Plante said he also called King Clancy, a Toronto Maple Leafs vice-president who gladly provided details on training camp setups.

In each case, Plante initiated the contact with the NHL club officials although he was never sure how they would react.

"I decided to call them and I figured if they didn't want to deal with me, I would have lost only the price of a phone call," said Plante.

"But they were very nice. It works both ways. If they need anything from me, I'll be only too willing to reciprocate."

Mansonville social notes

Mr. and Mrs. Hermann Ommertli returned home from Zurich, Switzerland reporting they had a wonderful time visiting with old friends and relatives and travelling around the country including high mountain passes. Upon their return home, weekend visitors were Steven and David Showler, Montreal, teenage sons of their foster son.

Mr. and Mrs. John Achtamichuk, Regina, were weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Reg Darbyson.

Mr. and Mrs. Cromwell of Montreal recently called on friends in town after spending some time in Victoria, B.C.

Mr. and Mrs. Lee E. Tinker and son, Bedford, spent the weekend at their camp here.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Tinker entertained Mr. Tinker's niece and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Dixon of Pocatello, Idaho, and Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Tinker, Derby, Vt. The group spent a day at Derby with the latter people and also called on other relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Ray Tinker accompanied their guests to Cowansville for a day.

Home from hospital, Mrs. H.C. McLean is wished a speedy recovery after minor surgery.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Gardner spent the weekend with their son Erwin in Morrisville, Vt.

Mr. and Mrs. Eric Barnett, Cromwell, Conn., were dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Barnett and son, Roger. They are staying with Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Clark while visiting friends and relatives in the area.

Mrs. B. Barnett spent the week with her brother, Mr. and Mrs. Wellington Brown, Toledo, Ont.

Miss Joyce Tracy, Highwater, has returned to Hairdresser School in Montreal after recovering from blood poisoning.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Fidler, who are a very active young couple, have put in windows and added a room to the upstairs of the former School No. 7 (where Rev. Ernest Manley Taylor began his education).

Mr. and Mrs. Elden Judd were in Berkshire, Vt., where they attended the 25th Anniversary (Sept. 15) of Mr. and Mrs. Wallace Johnson. Weekend guests of the Judds were their daughter, son-in-law and granddaughter, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Kraak and Maria of Sutton. Mrs. Judd's brother, Mr. Roy Judd, Sheldon, Vt., was also a weekend guest.

Mrs. Hazel Jones and Mrs. Mary Miller were invited dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Fullerton on the occasion of their birthdays.

Other dinner guests for the happy day were Miss Marion Atwell and Mrs. J.C. Reilly.

Mr. Clinton Adams has returned to hospital and is wished a speedy recovery. Cards will be appreciated - Room 335, BMP Hospital, Cowansville (Sweetsburg).

Mrs. Bertha George and her daughter, Miss Dorothy George of Sutton, visited Mr. C.S. Adams in the hospital. Mr. and Mrs. Arthur George, Montreal, who have been staying at their summer cottage in Bolton Center, called on Mr. George's mother, Mrs. Bertha George.

Mr. and Mrs. Cedric Bailey, Sr., have returned home after a 5,000 mile western trip by car spending a month at various places. They visited Mrs. Bailey's three sisters whom she has not seen in 17 years and her husband has never seen one of them who lives in Prince Albert, Sask., the other two live in Brooks, Alta. and Rosebud, Montana respectively. Her brother from La Grande, Oregon, whom both had not seen in nine years, joined them at Rosebud. They also visited Mr. Bailey's aunt, uncle and cousins in Calgary, Alta., and Winnipeg, Man. They made a call at the house of Earl White who was not at home and they later found out that he was visiting in the Mansonville area at that time. After Montana they ended up in Clarence, N.Y., visiting Mrs. Bailey's nieces and nephews and then on home just in time to enjoy the fall foliage.

Mr. Raymond Bedard returned home after a six-week holiday by jet to Calgary where he visited relatives and helped them on their farms driving a tractor and combine. While there he visited many interesting sites before returning home by bus.

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. Tomuschat were Mr. and Mrs. M. Scherenberg, Clearwater, Fla., and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Maihofer of Houghton Lake, Mich.

Mr. Orville Schoolcraft was given a standing ovation at the Sept. 29th Cote-St. Onge wedding reception, Brome Fairview Hotel, on the occasion of his 89th birthday (actual date Sept. 28).

Mrs. Lyle Sargent, Windsor, Vt., Miss Doris Warner, St. Johnsbury, Vt., spent nearly three weeks with their sister Mrs. Oscar Sargent, also two brothers, Gerald and Newell Warner and their wives, North Troy, Vt., were dinner guests, and weekend guests at the same period of time were a niece, and nephew, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Morton, Southbridge, Mass., and another niece Mrs. Lyle Thompson, Richford, Vt. was an afternoon caller.

Canadian Legion member, Pete Aiken of Dunkin was assigned to the job of repairing (with new timber where needed) the back porch and stairway of the Legion building.

It was erroneously stated in a miscellaneous shower article that Miss Peggy Newell became married to Mr. Paul Ethier, whereas it should have read "Became married to Ronald Ethier", whose father is named Paul.

Calling on Mrs. J.C. Reilly were Mrs. John Franklin and her mother, Mrs. Florence Garland Ericson, Mystic, Conn., accompanied by Mrs. Franklin's uncle, 90 year-old Homer E. Perkins of Barre, Vt. They looked for the grave stones of Louis and Hanna Perkins and Homer wanted to see the area, also if anyone he knew still lived here. He returned to the home where he was born and said his room was still the same as he visioned it these many past years. (Charlie McClure's home). Louis and Hanna Perkins at one time lived in the house next to Mrs. Reilly. They had three sons: Calvin, Everett and Juduthan. Homer's father was Everett, who had a saw mill with his brother Jed in the area. Mrs. Florence Ericson was the daughter of Everett and May. Mrs. Reilly said that she remembers her grandmother saying she would cross the ice of the river in winter to see Mrs. Louis Perkins and it was always so warm and peaceful in her kitchen. The group also called on Mr. and Mrs. Rupert Fullerton and others, while staying overnight in North Troy, Vt. The visitors succeeded in their mission by finding the graves and headstones of Homer's grandparents in the cemetery on West Hill known as The Chapel burying grounds.

Mr. and Mrs. George St. James, Jennifer and Patricia of Delson, spent Thanksgiving weekend at their cottage, Highwater, while here they visited Mr. and Mrs. George Durocher and baby son, Kevin of Waterloo. The St. James' returned home to Delson via Sutton Mountain taking in the peak colors of the fall foliage.

Mr. and Mrs. Murray Bedard and four children of Candiac, spent Thanksgiving weekend at the home of Mr. Bedard's father, Raymond Bedard. While here they called on Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence White and son, John, and also on Mr. and Mrs. Clare Bedard and son Brian.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Heath and son, Francis, and Miss Wendy McDonald, Montreal, Mr. and Mrs. Duane Smith and two sons, St. Bruno, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Heath, Mr. and Mrs. Lynne Erwin and Miss Julie Heath and friend, Waterloo, Mr. and Mrs. Alton Aiken and two children, Stephen and Esther, Prescott, Ont., were Thanksgiving Sunday dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Smith spent Thanksgiving Sunday afternoon with Mrs. Smith's sister, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfrid Royea and son, Brent, Cowansville.

Mrs. Marcella Hinds and two children, Robert and Kathleen, Frampton, Que., were weekend guests of her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Lessard. Also visiting the day dinner were their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Gregoire and three children, Lise, Jean-Luc, and Michel of Longueuil.

Miss Eida Sargent and Miss Pansy Sargent, Montreal, were Thanksgiving weekend guests of their mother and family Mrs. Frank Sargent, Dunkin. Also present for Sunday Thanksgiving dinner were Mr. and Mrs. Larry Sargent and two children.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Tinker had 14 relatives for Thanksgiving Sunday dinner, coming from Pocatello, Idaho, Newport and Hancock, Vt.

Harvey Jewett was home from Queen's University, and Cheryl Jewett, who has a position as Assist. Librarian in the Montreal Children's Hospital was also home for the Thanksgiving weekend. Weekend guest of Mr. and Mrs. L.H. Jewett, Hill Haven, was Miss Linda Buzzell, Supervisor at Butters' Memorial Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward

Gladden, Richford, Vt., were Sunday afternoon callers of Mrs. Eva Cook and son, Harold. Other visitors at the same home were Pastor Sydle, Foster, and Mr. and Mrs. Burton Tracy, Bolton Center. The Cooks called at the home of Willy Waterhouse, Sutton, where they enjoyed a social visit.

Mrs. Mary Miller spent Thanksgiving weekend at the cottage on the Lake with Mr. and Mrs. G.S. Haram and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Curtis McGivern and Mrs. Geneva Lyons, Rock Island, were Thanksgiving afternoon visitors of Mrs. Inez McGivern, Highwater. Callers were Mrs. Winnie Smith, Farnham, Mrs. Burnett and the Misses Helen and Doris Douglall Cowansville.

Some of the parents of Mansonville attended open house held Wednesday evening, Oct. 10, in the Massey-Vanier Regional School, among whom were the committee members Mrs. Merton Bailey of Highwater and Mrs. Maurice Jewett of Vale Perkins, who were re-elected as school committee members representing the Mansonville area. At this open house there were demonstrations of math, science, gym and art exhibitions, also many other interesting activities. The school band played almost continuously in the plaza and the school choir rendered several songs in harmony. An opportunity for all parents to meet the teachers of their children proved of interest as there may have been nearly 1,000 parents there, which was considered an excellent attendance.

Walkathon held

DANVILLE — On Saturday, Oct. 13, a large number of participants from the various schools in the locality and a number of adults participated in a Walkathon in aid of the Asbestos Library.

Over the course of 22 miles there were numerous check points - at all of which members of the St. John Ambulance Corps of Asbestos were on duty.

In this venture the Police of the Town of Asbestos, the Danville Police and the Provincial Police co-operated in making it a safe day - with prevention of accidents the foremost in their thoughts.

Mr. Roch Frechette - Councillor in charge of the Town Electrical Department was one of the marchers, as was Katherine Kirstein, who completed the 22 miles in slightly over 11 hours of walking. Katherine had the distinction of being the only English walker in the group.

Although the final figures are not yet known - there was a sum of $2,000 at the last check - which will provide the Asbestos Library with approximately 2,000 books.

Surely a great deal of credit is deserved to the many small feet for the long miles covered and it is hoped that those who use the Library's facilities will pause to consider just HOW this large addition of literature became available to them.

Udolphus chapter IODE

RICHMOND — The October meeting of Udolphus Lord Aylmer Chapter I.O.D.E. met in Chalmers Church parlor, with the Regent Miss Barbara Dougherty in the chair and opening the meeting in usual form. She welcomed the twelve members and one visitor present. A minute of silence was observed in memory of a valued member Mrs. Raymond Beattie who passed away recently.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read by Miss Viola Noble, secretary.

A motion was passed that the usual number of subscriptions to magazines be sent to the local schools and a substantial amount voted to the Provincial Bursary Fund.

The wool convener reported wool on hand and more to be ordered for sweaters etc. to be sent to the Dixville Home.

Mrs. D. McLaughlin, card convener, reported one sympathy card sent.

The secretary gave a report of the plans for the Marathon to be held shortly. Nine groups for Bridge and six for 500 are to play. There will be a prize for each group but there is no big card party to be held this year.

The meeting was then closed in due form.

Card Party

BISHOPTON — A very successful card party was held by the Bishopton committee for Brownies, Guides, Cubs and Scouts on October 12 in the Town Hall.

Cards were played at twelve tables and prize winners for the evening were: Ladies 1st - Mrs. Lois Currier, 2nd - Mrs. Ernest Bennett, Gentlemen's 1st - Morris Bennett, 2nd, Durwood Dougherty of Brookbury. Door prizes were won by Frank Vintinner of Bury and Ernie MacAulay.

Crokinole was played at eleven tables and prizewinners were: Girls 1st - Margaret Bennett; 2nd - Pamela Fleury. Boys 1st - Henry Lebourveau of Brookbury; 2nd - Randy Vintinner of Bury. Door prizes went to Marc Fortin and Michael Hartwell.

The committee for this card party were Messrs Irving Willard and Knight George.

Lunch was served by the Group Committee members at the close of the evening. Chairman Keith Vintinner thanked everyone for making this such a successful event. Proceeds go to transport local club members to Bury to the meetings.

SOCIALS
Mr. Irving Willard, accompanied by his brothers Stanley and Gordon Willard of Montreal, left by plane on October 15 to spend a week in Vancouver visiting their brothers Messrs Earl and Vernon Willard and their families.

Mr. and Mrs. Cyril Rolfe spent the weekend in Quebec City visiting Mr. and Mrs. Bill Pollick and son Sean at 749 Avenue du Chateau, Ste. Foy.

Sunday School Rally

AYER'S CLIFF — A combined Thanksgiving and Rally Day service was held at Beulah United Church, conducted by the assistant minister Stanley Beerworth. Mrs. W.S. Keeler, pianist for the Sunday School played for their singing with Mrs. D. MacKinnon officiating at the organ and the choir in attendance to lead in the singing. The scripture readings were given by Kelly Holmes and Dottie Babbins. One song Clap your Hands was sung very nicely by the Sunday School.

Miss A. Webster gave a report on the Sunday School and presented awards to the pupils follows:

Perfect Attendance - Sherry Campbell; Perfect attendance for 3 years - Angela Little; Absent one Sunday - Shelly Ann Sharman, Peter MacKinnon, Karen Fisher; Absent two Sundays - Angus, Helen and Kathleen MacKinnon, Janet and Elizabeth Cooper.

Kindergarten to Primary - Cindy Bryan, Cara Lee Whipple, Helen MacKinnon, Robert Holmes, Timmy Babbins, Glen Dezan, Scott Wallis.

Primary Jr. to Junior - Holly Whipple, Mark Whipple, Karen Fisher, Elizabeth Cooper.

The staff of teachers are - Primary, Leta Dustin, Kindergarten, Mrs. W. Robinson; Primary Jr. girls, Mrs. E. Whipple; Primary Jr. Boys, A.C. Keeler; Primary Jr. Miss A. Webster; Kindergarten assistant - Janet Cooper; Substitute teacher - Mrs. C. Mitson.

UCW meeting

Unit five of the Lennoxville United Church Women held their October meeting in the Lounge in Douglas Hall, Queen street with 12 members present.

Mrs. Robert Blackadder welcomed all. Devotions were led by Mrs. Clem Mallalieu who took as her theme, Thankfulness.

Correspondence included a letter of thanks from Mrs. Wayne Crack for the cup and saucer she received from the group before leaving town for Alexandria, Ont., which she explained as favorable surroundings.

The hymn-sing led by Rev. Burn Purdon was planned for October 21 and November 4 at 7:15 p.m. in the Upper Scott Hall to acquaint all with the new hymns.

The leader gave an interesting report on the Fall Rally held at Stanstead which, she, with Mrs. Allan Sutor and Mrs. Clem, Mallalieu attended from this unit.

Food was solicited from those present for the Christmas Bazaar supper to be held on November 21. A work night was held at the home of Miss Esther Bassett on October 16.

Mrs. N. Puddester had Christmas cards and wraps on sale and would take orders and will have same at the Bazaar.

At the close refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Garnet Williams and Mrs. Charles Vaughn.

Maple Leaf Lodge

DANVILLE — Members of Maple Leaf Rebekah Lodge heard of the interesting trip made by the installing team to La Tuque on the previous Sat. Oct. 13 at their regular meeting on Tues. evening, Oct. 16.

Sis. Margaret Horan, who was absent at the time that the other members were installed, was duly installed in her office as treasurer for the coming year.

Several veteran jewels were ordered purchased, as this is the Noble Grand's project for the new term - to purchase these jewels for members with many years in the Order.

Sis. Lil McMorine spoke of attending a meeting in honour of the Sovereign Grand Master which was held at Lennoxville recently.

A visitor, Sis. Eunice Beer of Whitby, Ont., was welcomed to the meeting.

Sisters were reminded that the basket lunches would be used for the regular meetings, with hostesses on special occasions.

For this meeting Sis. Irene Monahan and Sis. Myra Whitham served delicious refreshments in the dining-hall at close of the meeting.

Mothers Association

DANVILLE — Mrs. R. Lodge, the new president, was in the chair for the meeting of the Local Association of Mothers of Guides and Brownies which was held in Trinity United Church Hall on Mon. evening, Oct. 15.

Mrs. Hilary Smith is the new Tawny Owl to assist Mrs. Lloyd Findlay, Brown Owl.

At present there is a great need for one or more mothers to assist with the Guide Company which is quite large this year.

Various committees were appointed and Mrs. Claude Dubois has consented to be the Cookie Convener for this town, replacing Mrs. Gordon Statton, who has moved away.

A notice has been received stating that the Fall Divisional meeting will be held in Asbestos on Nov. 5.

Plans were made for the next meeting, which will be on Nov. 26 and then every second month - with the fourth Monday as a date most convenient for the mothers.

Mrs. Lodge served refreshments at the close of the meeting.

Impala for 1974.

We build and test it the way we do because we know how much you trust Chevrolet.

Before we gave you the 1974 Impala, we gave it the works. We ran it through mud and salt and water, up steep hills, into potholes with teeth-rattling bumps and over rugged Belgian blocks.

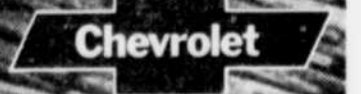

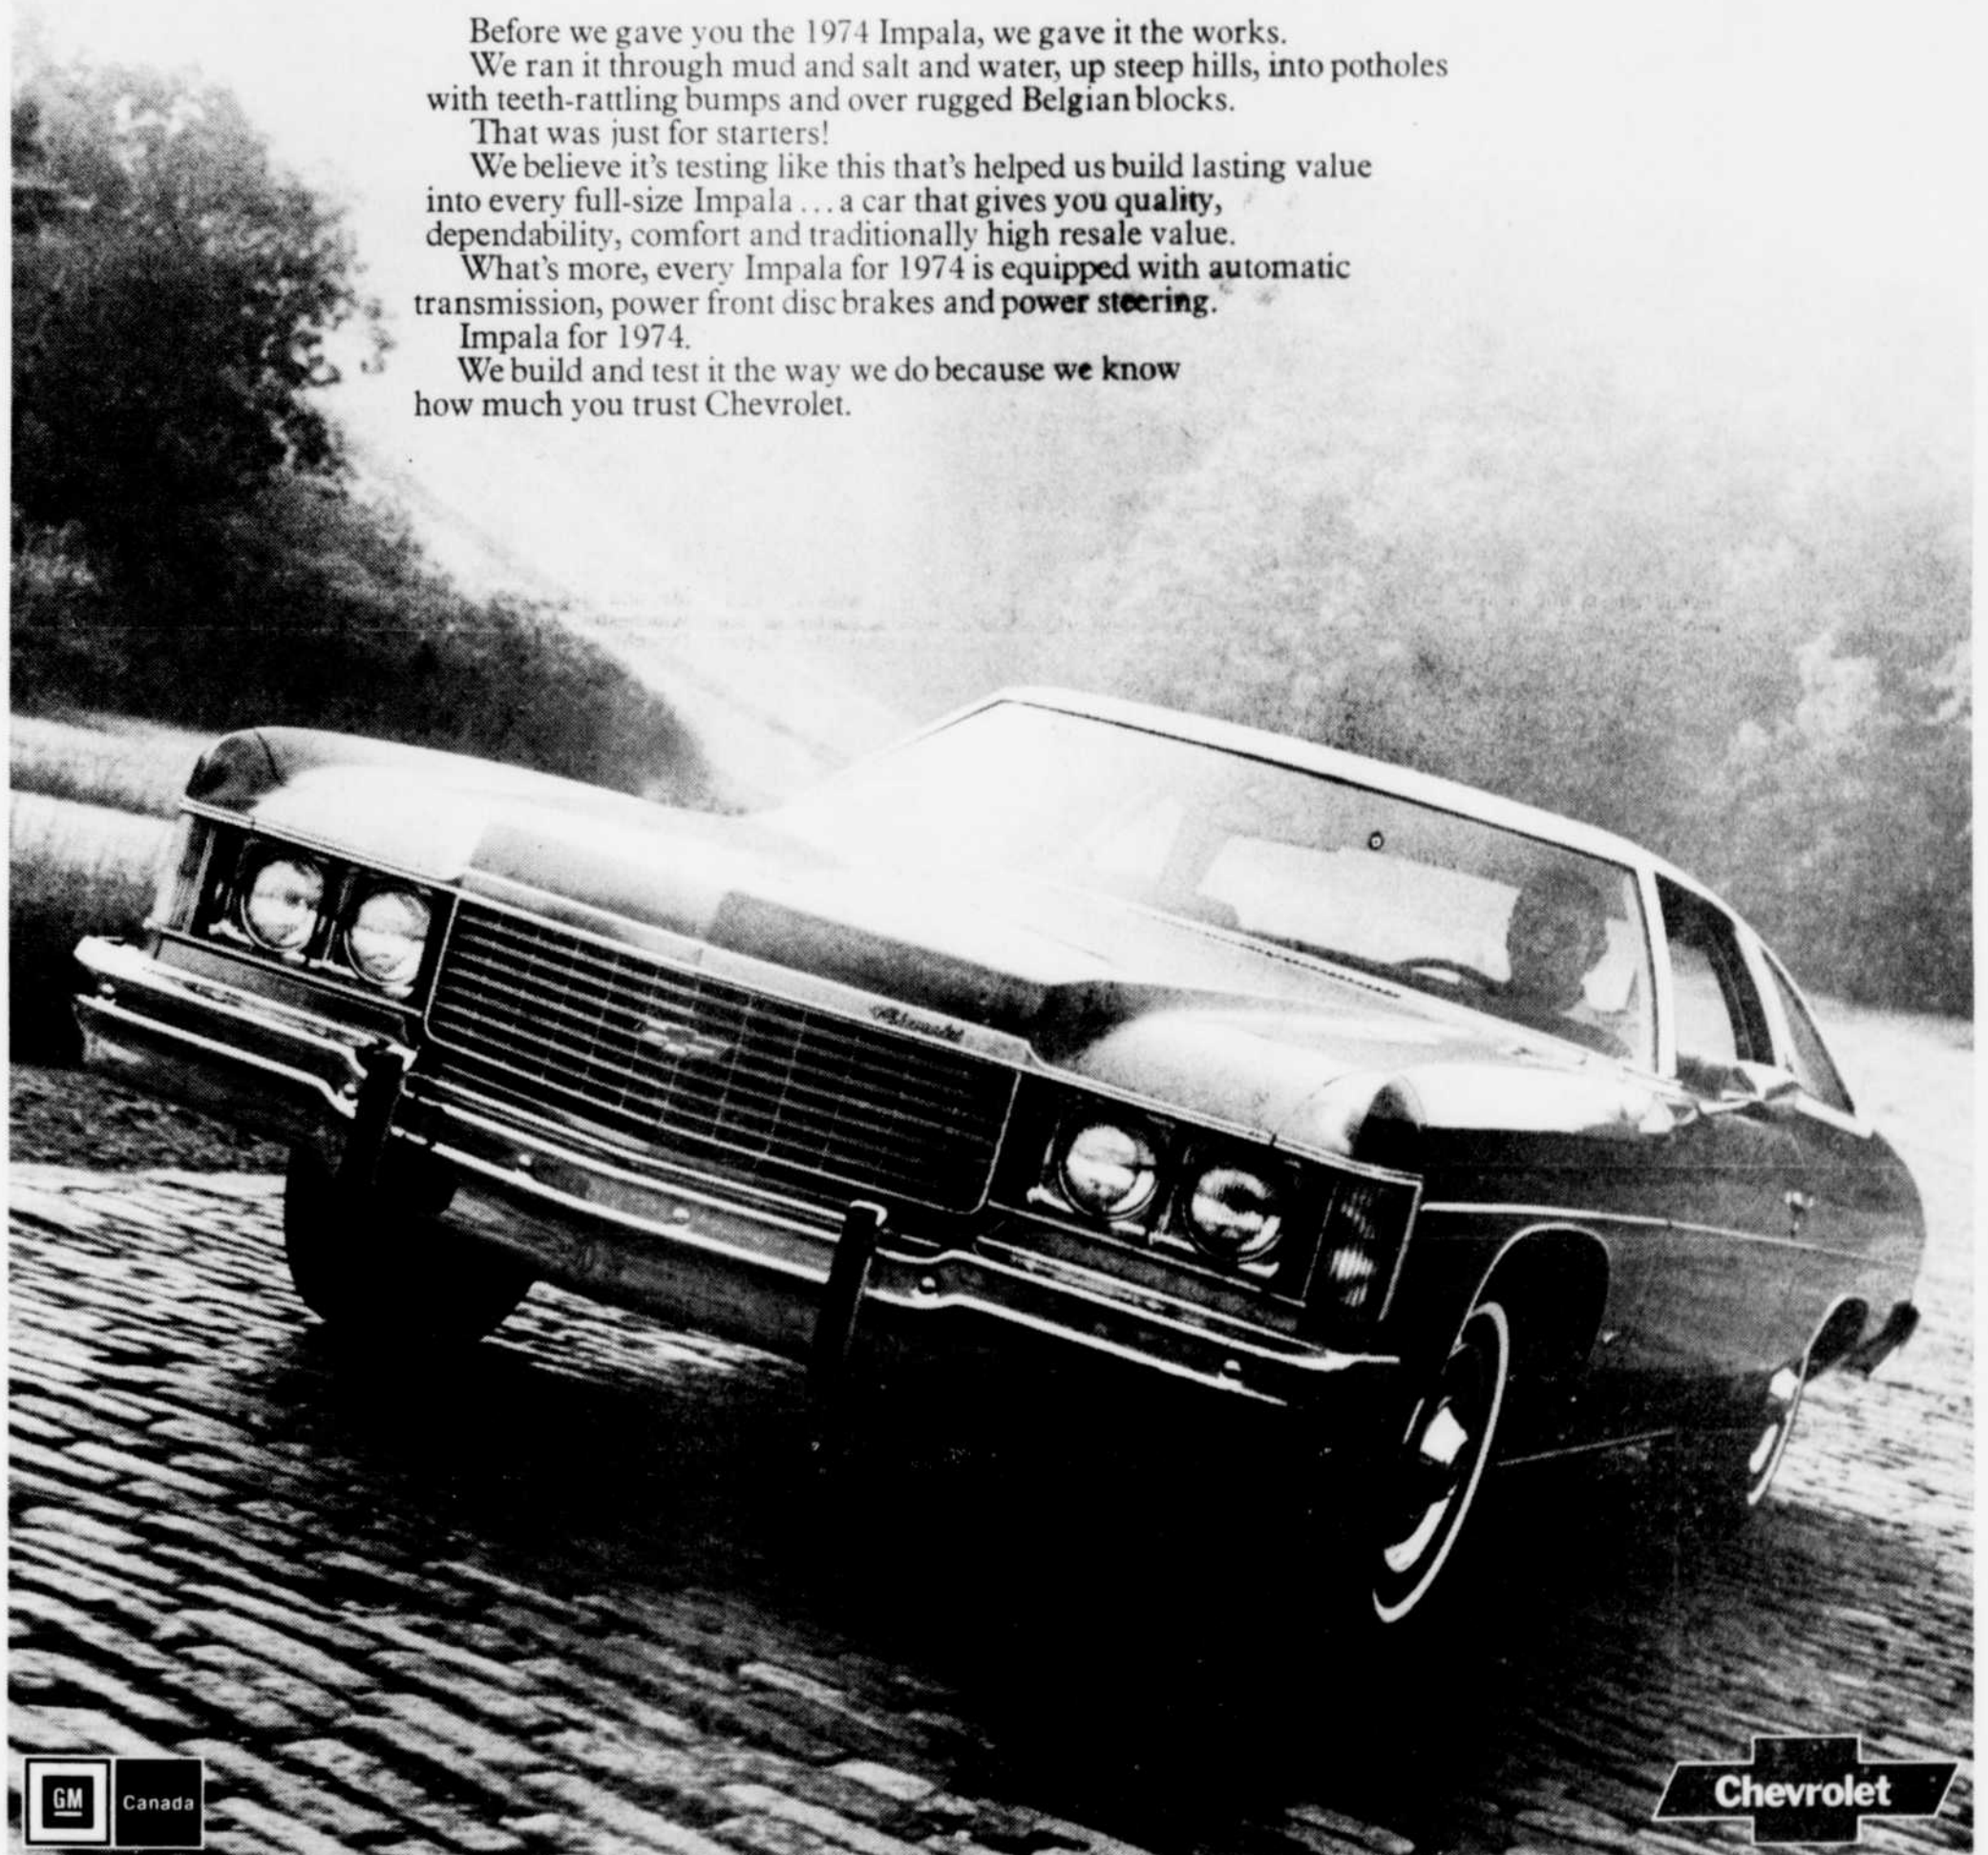

That was just for starters!

We believe it's testing like this that's helped us build lasting value into every full-size Impala... a car that gives you quality, dependability, comfort and traditionally high resale value.

What's more, every Impala for 1974 is equipped with automatic transmission, power front disc brakes and power steering.

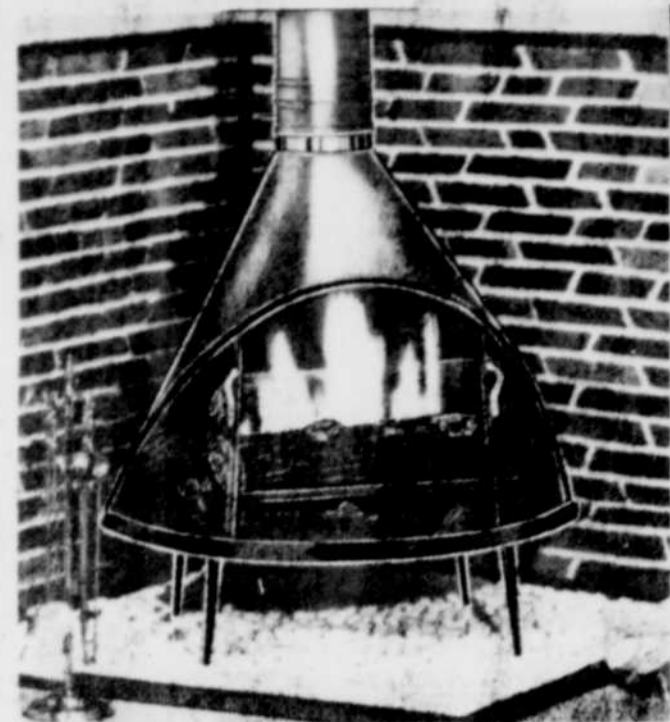

Impala for 1974.

We build and test it the way we do because we know how much you trust Chevrolet.

Illustrated Impala Custom Coupe.

Some of the equipment illustrated is optional at extra cost. Bucking seat and shoulder belts is an idea you can live with.

Cancel wedding he changes mind

Dear Ann Landers: Please forgive me for altering some of the facts in this letter to disguise my identity, but I just can't give it to you straight. My uncle was lieutenant governor of the state 12 years ago. Every time my husband introduces me he says, "This is my wife, Gertrude. Her uncle was the lieutenant governor." Occasionally I catch a pained "so-what" look. I want to sink through the floor. I never did care for that introduction but my husband seems to think it's appropriate.

According to him generals, senators, governors and other VIPs retain their titles even though they are no longer in office. He says it is not only correct, but pleasing. What about it, Ann? (P.S. I STILL don't like it.) — Just Plain Gertrude

Dear J.P.G.: It is appropriate (and pleasing, I'm sure) to call a retired officer "General" or use the title "Governor" or "Senator" after the fact, but you are none of these, so why must your husband drag your uncle into the act? Does he feel you need a build-up? Or, does HE need it?

Tell him, in no uncertain terms, that you are content to be just his wife and that's the way you want to be introduced.

Dear Ann Landers: Help! Please. What is the kindest way for a young married couple with a child to tell their parents on both sides to cool it? We don't want to seem unkind or ungrateful.

How many times a day should they phone? How many Sundays in a row should be devoted to parents?

There are disturbing questions and we don't have the answers. Do you? — Had It In Ohio

Dear Ohio: No. Nobody has. It depends on a variety of things about which I know nothing. How often do they call? How long do they talk? Do they drop in uninvited? Do they invite you to their home or do they just come to yours? How long do they stay? Do they "take over" your child? Do you accept financial help from them? Expensive gifts? Favors, such as "sitting," taking the child when you go away on weekends or vacations? Does your spouse like your parents? Are they demanding, boring, tiresome? Or are they good company? Every young married couple should sit down and think about these things and come up with answers that make sense to them.

And before you arrive at any conclusions, please remember this: You will never regret it if you put yourself out a little for your folks. Most parents have put themselves out a great deal for their children.

Dear Ann Landers: I have no tears of sympathy for that 40-year-old man who says it's too late for him to get dates. (Several girls turned him down and he was so hurt that he just gave up.)

A man always has a chance, no matter what his age. This is not true of a woman. I am 40 and have never been asked out by a normal, single man — only married men, alcoholics and homosexuals who want a "cover." Such losers are a waste of time and I refuse to be bothered. But since I'm a woman I must wait to be asked out.

I wish that 40-year-old man who feels like a "reject" would ask ME for a date. I'd accept so fast his head would swim. — Unclaimed Jewel

Dear Jewel: You and 500 other women who have written to me this week. What's the matter with you fellas out there, anyway? Get moving. And don't ask ME for names and addresses. Do your own research.

Dear Ann Landers: I am writing this letter for my son Howard. He is 23 and engaged to be married around Christmas. But last week he decided he doesn't want to go through with it.

Brenda (not her right name) is two years older than Howard and she is very pushy and domineering. They dated steadily for three years and Brenda was his first serious girlfriend. She is a nice person, but I'm sure she pressured Howard into giving her a ring. From the beginning I knew she was chasing him.

Howard asked me to write to you and inquire if it would be all right for him to write Brenda a letter breaking the engagement. He says it would be a lot easier on everybody. What do you say, Ann? — Concerned Mom

Dear Mom: Easier for HIM maybe, but gutless to say the least. A fellow who takes three years of a girl's time should have the decency to say goodbye in person.

Dear Ann Landers: Please don't consider this a put-down. I just want to tell you that I think you are missing a good bet. A person of your influence should be bending every effort to get colleges to include some courses on what married life is all about. The high divorce rate in our country is a scandal, and getting worse. Why? Because young people have no idea of what to expect. They can't learn anything from their parents' marriage because it's a different world today than it was 25 years ago. That crooning lieutenant in the white pants doesn't always make the perfect husband.

Enlightened instruction on everyday living would mean a great deal more than biochemistry, zoology or Russian history when the going gets rough. How about it, Ann? — D.C.B.

Dear D.C.B.: Sorry, I disagree. College is too late. I've been speaking in behalf of family living courses in high school for 18 years and am pleased to report that many high schools now have them.

I've also done a good bit of lecturing in high schools, and I know what the kids want to know because of the questions they ask. They are eager to learn what makes a marriage work. Invariably someone wants to know how many times I've been married. When I tell them I'm still with the original model after 34 years, they actually cheer! It's funny, but it's sad, too, that a lasting marriage is such a novelty that it rates an accolade.

Dear Ann: I'm 16, female, tall and slender, the quiet type, just average looking. For the past three years I've been the victim of stares, people pointing at me and whispering, wondering if I am a guy or a girl. This happens on the street, the bus, in a store — everywhere. I am not imagining things. Frequently people have said, "Thank you, son," or "Excuse me, young man."

When it first began I didn't care, but now it depresses me. Should I ignore it? Or should I straighten them out?

More on what I look like: My hair is medium length. I don't wear makeup. I wear mostly jeans because they are more comfortable than dresses. In case you are wondering, I am NOT a lesbian. — Hers Not His

Dear Hers: The solution is simple. Wear lipstick. Get out of the jeans. Put on a skirt and blouse or a dress and some earrings. No one will ever call you "son" or "young man" again.

DR. LAWRENCE E. LAMB

'E' WON'T HELP MUCH Ulcerative colitis

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Dear Dr. Lamb — I have chronic ulcerative colitis for which I consult my doctor at regular intervals — without much improvement, I admit.

A health-minded friend, a nurse, has recommended a number of items she thinks would help me, such as vitamin E, lecithin, etc. She also says "no white flour" while the doctor says "no whole wheat."

Would you comment on the value, if any, of vitamin E and lecithin in particular, as well as any general suggestions for the diet of a patient with ulcerative colitis. Are protein supplements of any value?

Dear Reader — For the benefit of our other readers, your problem of ulcerative colitis is a disease that affects the colon primarily. It causes attacks of severe diarrhea, similar to dysentery. As such, it causes a loss of fluid and important salts from the body. In severe cases it can result in hemorrhage from the bowel.

Ulcerative colitis actually affects much more of the intestinal tract. The colon normally does not enter into digestion other than in its role of reabsorption of water from food residue. All of the absorption of nutrients, vitamins, and minerals occurs in the small intestine. Yet these digestive functions are also often impaired in patients with ulcerative colitis. The decreased absorption of vitamin K often leads to an increased tendency to bleeding.

The involvement of the small intestine often destroys the enzymes there that are necessary to absorb milk sugar, lactose. As a result many patients with ulcerative colitis cannot digest milk or milk products.

To answer your specific questions, vitamin E is not likely to help you much. There is no reliable evidence of it having helped any ulcerative colitis patients. Lecithin is not absorbed from anyone's intestine, even in normal people. Lecithin is a combination of choline and a fatty acid containing phosphorus. The enzymes normally present in the intestine break it apart into choline and its fatty acid or it can't be absorbed.

The lecithin in the body is formed from food substances in the liver. The choline is important, but any diet that contains sufficient protein found in animal proteins provides the materials the body uses to manufacture choline, which it can do. So, I am not optimistic that either of these measures will be helpful to you.

Because ulcerative colitis patients often lose protein during their attacks, I do recommend a high protein intake. You can either enjoy this in the form of protein foods (meat, poultry, fish) and have the added advantage and diet satisfaction of bulk, or you can take protein powder supplements.

Your doctor must think it possible that you don't tolerate gluten and that this may be a factor in your problem. Whole wheat bread contains more gluten than white bread, but if gluten is a problem, I would wonder about your eating any breads or cereals (except corn or rice) or any foods that contain them.

What you need to do about vitamin, mineral and protein supplements depends a lot on how much trouble you are having with absorption that varies a lot with different patients.

Nixon worked Sunday

By BRUCE LEVETT

WASHINGTON (CP) — For the first time in more than six months, President Nixon spent an entire Sunday working at the White House.

The last time was April 15 when he received an intensive briefing on the rapidly breaking Watergate scandal.

This time there were two topics — the firing of special prosecutor Archibald Cox and the efforts of Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, in Moscow for talks on the Middle East crisis.

There were no announcements as to what went on in the Oval Office, either during the morning session when Nixon met with top advisers or during the afternoon, when he worked alone.

Later, there was a brief announcement that the Moscow meetings had led to an agreement that would be put immediately before the Security Council of the United Nations.

Whether the president watched the carnival-like crowd carrying "impeach" signs outside along Pennsylvania avenue as he worked inside, was not known. He should, however, have been able to hear the demonstrators at some point.

It was an orderly demonstration, with probably no more than 150 persons involved at any one time, and police took no action but it was as noisy as it was orderly.

Pickets hung over the rope which always stretches along the curb outside the White House. They waved "Honk Your Horn" signs at motorists and shouted at them.

Most of the motorists complied. The din could be heard for blocks.

Some sources said part of the morning was taken up by the president and close advisers on White House strategy to counter the growing speculation over the possible impeachment of the president. There was no announcement of this effect.

Outside, however, the word "impeach" glared from nearly all the signs carried by the pickets.

One read "Nixon can fire anyone — only the people can fire Nixon." The man carrying it shouted over and over, "Write your congressman."

An enterprising hawk in a straw boater set up a card table across the street and sold "Impeach Nixon" bumper cards printed in red, white and blue.

Girls wore them like Miss America banners. They blossomed across the backs of leather jackets. Some pickets waved them at passing cars.

There were two groups circulating around the White House. The other group was the usual crowd of visitors who chose the last long weekend of the year — Monday was Veterans' Day in the United States — to tour the mansion. Most of them took movies and snapshots of the demonstrators in the bright autumn sunshine.

There was little pro-Nixon sentiment in evidence. Once a girl shouted curses at the demonstrators from a passing car.

Two middle-aged women, their cardboard sign lettered "God bless Nixon," walked through the crowd.

GAS PRICE UP AGAIN
WASHINGTON (AP) — The Cost-of-Living Council allowed a second increase in United States retail gasoline prices Monday to reflect higher wholesale costs. The increase is effective immediately. A previous price increase was approved Sept. 28. The council also approved increases for home heating oil and diesel fuel probably ranging from one to two cents a gallon.

POSTPONES VISIT
LONDON (AP) — Princess Margaret has postponed a visit to Egypt scheduled for next month because of the Middle East war, an announcement from her residence, Kensington Palace, said Monday. "Her Royal Highness is very disappointed that she will not be able to open the new British Council building in Cairo," the announcement said.

Tour of the Americas planned by Canadians

By PETER LLOYD
OTTAWA (CP) — Dave Irvine-Halliday says he's a cautious man.

That's the kind of statement that raises eyebrows among people who know he and his wife are planning a 40,000-mile "tour of the Americas," including the first "total encircling" of South America by road.

But when the Irvine-Hallidays leave in November their four-wheel-drive pickup truck will be equipped with 500 pounds of spare parts, an electric winch, a radio transmitter, emergency rations and a machete.

It will also carry their two pre-school-age children.

When he talks about the 18-month journey, ranging from the tip of South America to Alaska, Mr. Irvine-Halliday admits to some trepidation.

"We're taking as many precautions as we can and still go there. The biggest precaution would be to stay in Ottawa."

"My biggest fear is anything happening to the children."

The 31-year-old electronics engineer and his 29-year-old wife are hoping their respective experiences as a mountaineer and nurse will help them through any difficulties encountered on the tricky South American leg of the trip.

CROSS OPEN COUNTRY
"For between 4,000 and 5,000 of the 40,000 miles there are no roads, just cattle tracks and bush roads. We'll have to cut down some trees and build some bridges."

Mr. Irvine-Halliday expects the journey across the adjacent countries of Guyana, Surinam and French Guiana, in the northeastern part of South America, to be one of the toughest parts of the trip. "God willing," he says, the trip will be the first road crossing of the area by a single vehicle.

The tour of 13 South American countries "in about a year" will also be a first as far as he knows.

"We've written to National Geographic and they say to the best of their knowledge no one has completed this kind of circumnavigation by road."

From a mountaineer and experienced outdoors man one might expect a "because-it's-there" reply on asking Mr. Irvine-Halliday about his motivation for the trip.

But the Scottish-born adventurer has another answer, a double-barrelled response reflecting a newly-found patriotism and a long-term business outlook.

DOING IT FOR CANADA
"Canada is our adopted country and we'd like this sort of first to go to this country. We'd originally planned this sort of trip as the long way back to Scotland but we've decided to remain in Ottawa indefinitely after we return."

The Irvine-Hallidays have been in Canada almost four years but it was not until recently that they decided to stay here after their visit to the extremities of Tierra del Fuego, at the tip of South America, and Anchorage, Alaska.

About $6,000 worth of film is the biggest item in the $20,000 the Irvine-Hallidays have sunk into the project. They hope to get enough footage to prepare some documentaries for educational television.

Mr. Irvine-Halliday wants to convert his experience into a career as a film producer while his wife, hoping to esablish herself as a writer, will record their trip in a book.

Profit and loss cannot be forgotten. "Let's face it, this isn't an ego trip, it's a business."

One of their chief assets during the trip will be a powerful shortwave radio with which they hope to call Ottawa at least twice a week.

A special radio club, named the CAN-SAX Radio Club after their Canada-South America Expedition, and a 700-foot antenna have been set up to receive their transmissions.

HOPE TO MAKE FRIENDS

"There are a lot of people here looking forward to this aspect of the trip. We'll try to make as many contacts as possible and get some South Americans speaking to Canadians."

The radio will also be useful in determining road and weather conditions ahead, as well as providing a warning of any political unrest en route.

In addition to travelling through areas with no roads, or on roads that may be little more than the fignment of a cartographer's imagination and crossing the 15,889-foot Ticlio Pass in central Peru, the family will attempt on foot to reach the source of the Amazon River.

The truck, even with its four-wheel drive, winch and fuel capacity of more than 50 gallons, will be useless on this part of the trek, which Mr. Irvine-Halliday describes as a "50- to 60-mile hike through the mountains."

His caution surfaces again in a parting shot on the outcome of the adventure:

"I think we'll make it back, but we'll need a bit of luck."

By DENNIS BELL
THE SCALES, Alaska (CP) — The Golden Staircase is an incredibly steep 1,500 feet of shattered boulders leading to the summit of the Chilkoot Pass from a tiny alpine valley cluttered with the debris of 22,000 men and women who made the agonizing ascent 75 years ago.

At the height of the Klondike Gold Rush during the winter of 1897-98 the Staircase was the supreme test of courage and endurance that faced the stamperders heading north to Dawson City, Y.T. in the mad scramble from the Pacific Ocean to the Yukon interior.

And it was at The Scales, a valley of no more than a half-square-mile, that the gold-seekers paused for their first awesome look at the stone monster they wistfully named the Golden Staircase.

The gold rush has faded into history but the Staircase remains as implacable and forbidding as ever, a giant sawtooth memorial to the astounding human drama that unfolded on its steep flanks at the turn of the century.

NEW PARK'S CORE

Today the 32-mile Chilkoot Trail forms the core of the recently-announced Klondike Gold Rush International Park. And despite weather that ranges in summer from formidable to impossible, about 1,000 mountaineers and backpackers hike it annually.

On the American side the trail follows the Taiya River from tidewater at Dyea, Alaska, up a wide valley to The Scales. The summit of the 3,740-foot-high pass is a rock-strewn mountain bastion that marks the border between British Columbia and Alaska.

The Canadian side is a beautiful 16-mile stretch of alpine range that contrasts sharply with the rain forests of the Alaska coast. The ecology of this area is so fragile that wheel ruts left by freighter wagons that hauled supplies from the summit to Lake Bennett, B.C., at the northern end of the trail still can be seen today.

Three-quarters of a century ago the Canadian government established a customs post and Royal Northwest Mounted Police barracks at the summit of the pass to establish Canadian sovereignty and keep track of the horde of stamperders then descending on the Yukon.

HAUL HALF TON

The rule then was that anyone wishing to follow the trail into Canada and north to the Klondike Goldfields via the Yukon River system had to haul a minimum of 1,000 pounds of supplies over the summit.

Incredibly, the run up the Staircase was so demanding that most of the stamperders traversed it in winter, when the loose rocky slopes were frozen solid and covered with snow. Enterprising trail guides hacked out a footpath of roughly 1,600 steps and charged $10 a head to use it.

For most stamperders the RNWMP's supply requirements meant 15 or more round trips carrying packs averaging 50 to 75 pounds. Few could afford to hire the professional Indian packers and it took most of the stamperders two or three months to move their grubstakes over the summit.

The classic photograph of the Klondike stamperde, taken in the winter of 1898, shows an unbroken line of men inching up the staircase, bent under the weight of enormous packs, black specks against a wall of snow and ice.

MANY DIED

No one knows how many men the Staircase killed that winter. There were frequent avalanches. Some men went berserk and killed themselves rather than keep on going, others quietly stepped off the trail, sat down and froze to death without uttering a sound.

This summer the Yukon government organized an expedition of 45 men who retraced the route of the old Chilkoot Trail from Dyea to Lake Bennett as part of the celebrations commemorating the 75th anniversary of the Klondike Gold Rush.

One of the men who made the hike was Howie Firth, a burly 27-year-old from Whitehorse, N.W.T., whose grandfather, T. A. Firth, was one of the original stamperders who packed his half-ton of supplies over the summit.

"It was a gutbuster—and I only had to make the summit once," he said following the two-day hike. "I don't think I'll ever understand how my grandfather did it or why he did it. He must have been crazy, or mad for gold."

When news of prospector George Carmack's strike on the Klondike River reached the outside world in the summer of 1897, "Chilkoot" became a household word overnight. By the time the first stamperders sailed into Dyea and Skagway the Chilkoot had been mapped by both the Canadian and American governments.

GREW QUICKLY

Within weeks Dyea mushroomed from a single shack to a sprawling city of tents and log cabins whose 4,000 residents drank in hurriedly assembled saloons, slept in drafty log hotels and bought supplies at wildly exorbitant prices in trading posts.

Along the entire length of the Taiya River, tent cities flourished.

By the end of summer the following year—after the main flood of the stamperde had gone by—three aerial tramways were in operation up the Staircase from The Scales to the summit, remnants of which can be seen to this day.

It all came to an end a few months later when the first train rolled up to Lake Bennett from Skagway, Alaska, via the White Pass and Yukon Railway's new line through the neighboring White Pass.

Traffic along the Chilkoot died overnight. The tent cities folded. Cabins and wood-frame hotels were simply abandoned, and the tram crews downed their tools and walked out to Skagway.

TRAIL OVERGROWN
In just a few years the trail became overgrown with brush, alder and weeds, the cabins collapsed and the woods were silent once again.

With the rebirth of interest in the gold rush era during the 1960s, the governments of Canada, the U.S., Alaska and the Yukon got together and organized a restoration of the trail that has been under way for the past five or six years. Today, most of the footbridges have been rebuilt over the Taiya and its tributary creeks. The trail has been flagged and posted with signs indicating mileage and points of interest.

The Scales, surrounded on three sides by towering peaks, is the only flat terrain north of Sheep Camp until the Canadian side and Crater Lake. It is an incredible sight. The moss-covered landscape is dotted with all manner of paraphernalia dumped by the stamperders.

There are huge cogwheels, pieces of pot-bellied stoves, wagon wheels and a big gear-box.

On the western side of the bowl there is a pair of thick woollen pants, suspenders still in place, peeled off and left where they fell by some gold-seeker about to scale the Staircase.

And there are dozens of rubber boots, all of the same type and many with the laces intact. Apparently they were sold by the thousands to stamperders in Seattle, who subsequently found them next to useless on the Staircase.

Souvenir hunters have already made considerable inroads into the fantastic collection of artifacts at The Scales and elsewhere on the trail, despite laws in force on both sides of the border against their removal.

Despite the increasing popularity of the Chilkoot as a hiking trail, it's doubtful that the Staircase will ever again feel the thunder of 22,000 pairs of boots in a single year, let alone the bite of a bulldozer building a highway. The terrain is simply too rugged and too inconvenient.

Double birthday party

BEEBE — Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Cooper entertained at a family gathering in honor of the birthday of Mrs. Cooper's mother, Mrs. Adelaide Laberee, of Rock Island, who was observing a birthday and Mr. C. Cooper whose birthday was October 16.

The afternoon was spent visiting and in the evening several tables of cards were in play.

A smorgasbord supper was served, the table being centered with a decorated cake, made by Mrs. Albert Simoneau, and cut by the celebrants.

Attending were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Harvey, Mrs. Frank Grant and family, Pierrefonds; Mr. and Mrs. Edward Simpson, Heather and Diane, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Simoneau, Rock Island, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Laberee, Stanstead. Callers were Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Laberee of town.

Kottke voice needs work

By MICHAEL BENNETT
CP Correspondent

Leo Kottke's critics say his voice sounds as if it had been aged in an oak cask of Southern Comfort.

"People who are trained in voice say weird, mystical things like 'Now I'm going to resonate my sinus cavities' or 'I think I'll aim it at the roof of my mouth,'" says the 28-year-old singer, whose guitar style is as rich as the orchestral ragtime of Scott Joplin on his stride piano.

"It's people like that who can't stand my voice. It's my diction they hate. I'm a mush-mouth."

The controversy over Kottke's vocal qualifications leaves him unmoved.

"I really was never down on my voice. I always sang when I performed and my first album (only 1,000 copies were released on the Oblivion label) was mostly vocals."

Then he sent some tapes to John Fahey, guitarist extraordinaire, owner of Takoma Records and producer of Kottke's Mudlark album. Fahey couldn't stand listening to him sing.

GAINED CONFIDENCE

Kottke managed to sneak in a couple of vocal tracks on Mudlark, leaving Fahey slightly apologetic, mixed in a few more on Greenhouse, and by the time he finished recording My Feet Are Smiling, his singing was positively confident.

"Singing must be the most satisfyin' way of makin' music. You've got so much involvement. You can feel it in your stomach and in your head."

His voice in conversation sounds like mellow summer thunder over Athens, Ga., where he was born. He grew up in Muskogee, Ill., listening to people like Burl Ives and the Kingston Trio.

The guitar playing—and probably the singing too—all began with mononucleosis—"a great disease for a kid to have."

"You don't hurt anywhere, and you can think straight, and you've got to just lie around. My mom went out and bought me a Gene Autry guitar and I really got into chords."

Kottke was about 12 at the time and that particular guitar fell apart after two weeks of C-chords. It wasn't long before he was travelling to country music festivals in Virginia.

LEARNED FROM SEEGER

"Probably the person I've listened to and learned the most from is Pete Seeger. He plays nice basic stuff, with enough of an idea thrown in now and again to show you how to work somethin' into what you're playing."

"I learned about how to use what you have, even if it's only a little bit. Records that he did like The Goofer Off Suite were invaluable to me so far as learnin' how to play."

"I still get hung up on little fragments of my own stuff."

As a teen-ager, though, he was more interested in banjo—the mountain kind. Somewhere in there too was eight years on the trombone, ending at the annual pancake breakfast in Muskogee where he arrived to play without his horn.

"At that point, I was listening to a lot of jazz. Not so much any more, except when I'm in an acerbic sort of mood. I love Kenny Burrell. I don't know if it's really jazz or not, but John McLaughlin leaves me speechless—this incredible technical skill that never becomes gibberish."

"I don't listen to just guitar, though. I like Aaron Copland a lot. And I'm sort of opera nut. I should say an aria nut. Bjoerling, di Stefano, the great classic tenors."

"I have one record that has 80 high Cs by 80 different tenors. Only about three of them really make it. It's interesting to hear how the rest of them fake it."

Presley is sick

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A "persistent case of recurrent pneumonia" has put singer Elvis Presley in hospital.

Presley's condition poses no real danger, said Maurice Elliott, public relations director for Baptist Hospital. "All Elvis requires is a few tests and about a week of rest."

NICE, France (AP) — Keith Richards of the Rolling Stones and his wife, German movie actress Anita Pallenberg, were given suspended one-year prison sentences Monday for holding drug parties in 1971 at their home at Villeneuve-sur-Mer. They also were fined $1,100 each.

The drug parties were said to have attracted young residents of the Riviera during Rolling Stones practice sessions. However, four other members of the Stones were not involved in the case.

Prosecutor Georges Guyot told the sentencing court Richards and his wife now have been cured of the dope habit, and the court agreed to drop all restrictions on their return to France. They have been living in Switzerland.

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Back in the 1920s, Janet Gaynor won the first Academy Award for best actress in Seventh Heaven. But now she is fed up with films.

"I am not interested in today's movies," said the 66-year-old former star.

"There is no glamor, no fantasy, no romance in films anymore. Films show life the way it is—but people don't go to the theatre to see it the way it is. They go to get away from it."

Miss Gaynor, who quit Hollywood in 1938 after 14 years, recalled:

"One of the reasons I quit was that I did want a little more freedom... I spent years never seeing anything because I had to sit with my back to the room in a restaurant. And in the day of the silents everybody wanted to touch you because they didn't think you were real."

ROME (Reuter) — Work on the film Moses, which was suspended on the outbreak of the Middle East war 10 days ago, has been resumed in Jerusalem, co-producer Vittorio Bonicelli said Monday.

The film, starring Burt Lancaster and Anthony Quayle, is going ahead as planned, Bonicelli said.

The only change in shooting schedules was that sequences due to be filmed in Jericho, near the Israeli-Jordanian ceasefire line, now would be shot in Jerusalem, he said.

1,500 feet of shattered boulders

By DENNIS BELL
THE SCALES, Alaska (CP) — The Golden Staircase is an incredibly steep 1,500 feet of shattered boulders leading to the summit of the Chilkoot Pass from a tiny alpine valley cluttered with the debris of 22,000 men and women who made the agonizing ascent 75 years ago.

At the height of the Klondike Gold Rush during the winter of 1897-98 the Staircase was the supreme test of courage and endurance that faced the stamperders heading north to Dawson City, Y.T. in the mad scramble from the Pacific Ocean to the Yukon interior.

And it was at The Scales, a valley of no more than a half-square-mile, that the gold-seekers paused for their first awesome look at the stone monster they wistfully named the Golden Staircase.

The gold rush has faded into history but the Staircase remains as implacable and forbidding as ever, a giant sawtooth memorial to the astounding human drama that unfolded on its steep flanks at the turn of the century.

NEW PARK'S CORE

Today the 32-mile Chilkoot Trail forms the core of the recently-announced Klondike Gold Rush International Park. And despite weather that ranges in summer from formidable to impossible, about 1,000 mountaineers and backpackers hike it annually.

On the American side the trail follows the Taiya River from tidewater at Dyea, Alaska, up a wide valley to The Scales. The summit of the 3,740-foot-high pass is a rock-strewn mountain bastion that marks the border between British Columbia and Alaska.

The Canadian side is a beautiful 16-mile stretch of alpine range that contrasts sharply with the rain forests of the Alaska coast. The ecology of this area is so fragile that wheel ruts left by freighter wagons that hauled supplies from the summit to Lake Bennett, B.C., at the northern end of the trail still can be seen today.

Three-quarters of a century ago the Canadian government established a customs post and Royal Northwest Mounted Police barracks at the sum-

HAUL HALF TON

The rule then was that anyone wishing to follow the trail into Canada and north to the Klondike Goldfields via the Yukon River system had to haul a minimum of 1,000 pounds of supplies over the summit.

Incredibly, the run up the Staircase was so demanding that most of the stamperders traversed it in winter, when the loose rocky slopes were frozen solid and covered with snow. Enterprising trail guides hacked out a footpath of roughly 1,600 steps and charged $10 a head to use it.

For most stamperders the RNWMP's supply requirements meant 15 or more round trips carrying packs averaging 50 to 75 pounds. Few could afford to hire the professional Indian packers and it took most of the stamperders two or three months to move their grubstakes over the summit.

MANY DIED

No one knows how many men the Staircase killed that winter. There were frequent avalanches. Some men went berserk and killed themselves rather than keep on going, others quietly stepped off the trail, sat down and froze to death without uttering a sound.

This summer the Yukon government organized an expedition of 45 men who retraced the route of the old Chilkoot Trail from Dyea to Lake Bennett as part of the celebrations commemorating the 75th anniversary of the Klondike Gold Rush.

One of the men who made the hike was Howie Firth, a burly 27-year-old from Whitehorse, N.W.T., whose grandfather, T. A. Firth, was one of the original stamperders who packed his half-ton of supplies over the summit.

"It was a gutbuster—and I only had to make the summit once," he said following the two-day hike. "I don't think I'll ever understand how my grandfather did it or why he did it. He must have been crazy, or mad for gold."

When news of prospector George Carmack's strike on the Klondike River reached the outside world in the summer of 1897, "Chilkoot" became a household word overnight. By the time the first stamperders sailed into Dyea and Skagway the Chilkoot had been mapped by both the Canadian and American governments.

GREW QUICKLY

Within weeks Dyea mushroomed from a single shack to a sprawling city of tents and log cabins whose 4,000 residents drank in hurriedly assembled saloons, slept in drafty log hotels and bought supplies at wildly exorbitant prices in trading posts.

Along the entire length of the Taiya River, tent cities flourished.

By the end of summer the following year—after the main flood of the stamperde had gone by—three aerial tramways were in operation up the Staircase from The Scales to the summit, remnants of which can be seen to this day.

It all came to an end a few months later when the first train rolled up to Lake Bennett from Skagway, Alaska, via the White Pass and Yukon Railway's new line through the neighboring White Pass.

Traffic along the Chilkoot died overnight. The tent cities folded. Cabins and wood-frame hotels were simply abandoned, and the tram crews downed their tools and walked out to Skagway.

TRAIL OVERGROWN
In just a few years the trail became overgrown with brush, alder and weeds, the cabins collapsed and the woods were silent once again.

With the rebirth of interest in the gold rush era during the 1960s, the governments of Canada, the U.S., Alaska and the Yukon got together and organized a restoration of the trail that has been under way for the past five or six years. Today, most of the footbridges have been rebuilt over the Taiya and its tributary creeks. The trail has been flagged and posted with
