After Jones defeated incumbent PC member Stanfield rejects Moncton mayor's nomination

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) —Controversial Mayor Leonard C. Jones won a federal Progressive Conservative nomination Monday night, and national PC leader Robert Stanfield promptly announced he will veto it.

Mr. Jones, 49, a lawyer who has been mayor of Moncton since 1963 and who has fought the provision of French-language services, defeated Charles Thomas, incumbent Conservative member of Parliament for the riding. The vote was 449-445 in his favor.

Two hours after the nominating convention, the local association executive reiterated its stand that the mayor was an unacceptable candidate. The statement said there would be no other comment until talks have been held with federal officials.

Mr. Stanfield, asked in an interview as he travelled by plane from Montreal to Toronto about the choice of Mr. Jones, said he would veto the nomination because Mr. Jones holds views contrary to those of his party.

"I cannot accept Mayor Jones as a candidate for my party," Mr. Stanfield said.

A further statement was expected later today. During the weekend, the Tory leader said his rejection of any candidate would mean the party would refuse to designate the candidate to the chief electoral officer. Without designation the candidate could not run under the party name.

MAKES APPEARANCE

Premier Richard Hatfield on a surprise visit to the convention urged delegates to consider the country's unity among other factors when casting their ballots. He left before the results were announced.

Mr. Thomas, first elected in 1972, had received Mr. Stanfield's support.

Before the votes were cast, the mayor said both the government and the opposition had been "dilly-dallying" while Canada headed for disaster.

During his term, the mayor has opposed bilingual municipal services in Moncton, about 30 per cent Acadian.

He unsuccessfully fought federal and New Brunswick acts which make English and French official languages.

VOICES LOUDER

Roger Savoie, president of the New Brunswick Society of Acadians, said Mayor

Jones would not be an acceptable candidate for Acadians.

"Nobody thinks, except Mr. Jones, that he has moderate views on bilingualism."

Sylvio Savoie, a lawyer and campaigner on behalf of bilingual services, predicted the mayor would be defeated at the polls because of his inflexible stand.

"People like Mayor Jones are playing with the future of the whole country," said Michel Bastarache, former secretary of the National Society of Acadians, since renamed the New Brunswick Society of Acadians.

The mayor has always maintained his stand on bilingualism is moderate.

"The whole thing seems to be a tempest in a teapot, much ado about nothing," he said in an interview earlier this year.

Bilingual services are neither practical nor acceptable in Moncton, he said, but he insisted anyone could be served in either French or English at city hall.

"I have never had an occasion when any department head has had a French-speaking person come to city hall looking for any of its services and not been looked after adequately."

Mayor Jones said he had met Liberal Party organizers earlier this month to offer himself as a candidate.

However, Irwin Lampert, president of the Moncton Liberal Association, said he gave the mayor no encouragement and told him he was "completely unacceptable" to the party.

Trudeau kicks off promises

Prime Minister Trudeau made his biggest election campaign promise to date Monday night, telling a packed audience of about 1,000 in Toronto that the Liberals will bring inflation under control if re-elected July 8.

"That I pledge to you," he said in a speech rejecting the anti-inflation policies proposed by the Progressive Conservatives and the New Democratic Party.

He said the Conservative wage-and-price-controls approach would be "90 days of wonder and amazement" while the NDP had proposed only "a circus of slogans."

He did not elaborate on how a Liberal government would solve inflation but said he was confident that he has "a grip on the problem."

Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield, campaigning in Montreal, challenged the prime minister's optimistic outlook with a harsh denunciation of Liberal economic policies.

"If the Trudeau government remains in office, then the remedy for inflation will be recession," he told party supporters in Westmount riding where national Conservative president Michael Meighen is running against Treasury Board President C.M. Drury.

Mr. Stanfield said Canada faces an inflationary crisis that will test the country's economic system and its political institutions. He challenged the prime minister to make details of the Liberal anti-inflation policy clear.

HITS MORTGAGES

NDP Leader David Lewis, campaigning in Halifax, also focused on economic issues Monday, emphasizing the NDP proposal that mortgage interest rates be held to six per cent for all National Housing Act loans to families earning less than $15,000 annually.

"How can the NDP advocate a six-per-cent mortgage when banks are paying 8 1/2 per cent on savings deposits," he was asked at a party nominating meeting.

"Really, the answer is not all that complicated," he replied.

Chartered banks could lend money at the preferred rate in the same way they now lend it to large corporations. They could also set aside a "relatively small portion of their funds" for investment in six-per-cent mortgages by the government-operated Central Mortgage and Housing Corp., he said.

In no case would financiers be crippled, he said. "They would simply not be making the huge profits they now collect on your money."

Canadians should not have to mortgage their souls to buy a home, he said. "But if they continue to elect Liberal and Conservative governments in Ottawa, they'll be lucky if they can get a mortgage at 12 per cent, let alone a roof over their head."

Halifax was the last stop on a 10-day, 10-city tour for the NDP leader. He flies back to Ottawa today but leaves again later in the week.

SEES BREAKTHROUGH

Earlier Monday, he told a news conference the party is optimistic of scoring a breakthrough in Nova Scotia this time. Only one New Democrat MP has been elected in the province since the party was formed in the early 1960s.

Social Credit Leader Real Caouette, who has spent most of his time at home in Rouyn, Que., said Monday he will begin campaigning next week but will conserve his energy for the concluding weeks.

He said he plans some trips outside the province and will begin an extensive Quebec campaign trip June 17.

He denied rumors that his health is failing and that he is unable to campaign strenuously. While no longer a young man, the 56-year-old leader said, "I am still capable of conducting an election campaign."

All 15 Social Credit MPs elected in 1972 were from Quebec.

Prime Minister Trudeau, who opened his day by attending a tea party and visiting a senior citizens' home, made a departure from his previous campaign message by focusing on inflation in his evening speech.

Previously, he has concentrated on attacking the Conservatives and New Democrats for forcing what he calls a needless election.

He accused Mr. Stanfield of being vague on the Conservative wage-and-price-controls policy.

"I reject that allegation," Mr. Stanfield said in Montreal. "It came from the leader of a government whose own position appears to me to be one of calculated deception."

"As we all know, Mr. Trudeau is the artful dodger, but I am determined that he will not go through this campaign ducking the truth on this crucial issue."

The Conservative leader said even the Liberals have considered price and wage controls as a contingency measure that could be put into effect if necessary.

Mr. Stanfield's visit to Montreal was scheduled late. He was to have taken Monday off. After his speech, he flew to Toronto where he will visit a number of constituencies today and address a Kitchener, Ont., rally tonight.

Mr. Trudeau flies to Sydney, N.S., today to begin a four-day train trip through the Maritimes to Montreal. He will stop at a string of communities along the way and is expected to deliver at least three major campaign speeches.

Left to right in this sequence are Marion VanHorn of AGRHS, recipient of the Mitchell Trophy after earning 18 points and the midjet high aggregate; Galt's Janet Ames, winner of the Nancy Love Trophy for the 800 metre race; and Fred Dezan of AGRHS, who was awarded the Sherbrooke General Sports Commission Trophy for amassing 23 points in his class. ## Israeli government considers Kissinger peace plan

JERUSALEM (AP) — Henry Kissinger's Middle East peace mission was at its most critical stage today as Israel's government meets for a decision on a troop-separation pact with Syria.

The U.S. state secretary emerged smiling early today from a two-hour conference with the Israeli negotiating team, where he reported on Monday's marathon talks with Syrian President Hafez Assad. It was Kissinger's 12th trip to Damascus in this current mission, now a month old.

Shimon Peres, the Israeli information minister, told reporters after the meeting at Premier Golda Meir's office that Israel will give Kissinger its final decision today on the agreement that would separate the warring Syrian and Israeli armies on the Golan Heights, where fighting has raged for nearly three months.

Asked what the decision involved, Peres replied: "A package deal ... all parts of an agreement."

"We had a very detailed meeting, the result of which is that the cabinet will meet to make a decision," added Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban.

Kissinger did not speak to reporters.

FAILURE POSSIBLE

Reports from sources close to the negotiations indicated it will be a difficult decision for the Israelis, and that Kissinger stands a strong chance of ending his peace marathon without a disengagement pact.

U.S. officials said draft agreements are already drawn up, but there are blank spaces where issues remain to be resolved.

The major remaining problems are reported to be the size of a buffer zone between the separated armies and the Israeli-sought safeguards against Palestinian terrorist raids from Syria.

Kissinger told reporters earlier that the 11th-hour snags may push back his departure from the Middle East by another day—until Wednesday. But in no case will the secretary return to Damascus, aides said.

Suspense mounted as Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko flew into the Syrian capital for a planned two-day visit shortly before Kissinger's departure Monday. They did not meet.

Gromyko, in a brief statement distributed by the Syrian news agency, described Moscow as "standing firm in the belief that a just peace cannot be established ... except through complete Israeli withdrawal from territory occupied in 1967 and thereafter."

Kissinger planned another session with the Israeli negotiators after today's cabinet meeting. He said he will dispatch State Under-secretary Joseph Sisco to Damascus with the Israeli response, but he may not await Sisco's return before flying to Cairo to give President Anwar Sadat a progress report.

Returning from his last visit to Damascus Monday—five hours later than planned—Kissinger told reporters travelling with him that he "again substantially narrowed the differences" between the two sides when he talked with Assad but that "we will not know what the final outcome is" until today.

Government takes action to acquire aircraft industries

OTTAWA (CP) — In a move to bring Canada's aircraft industry under Canadian control, the federal government plans to buy out two foreign-controlled aerospace manufacturers—de Havilland Aircraft of Canada Ltd. and Canadair Ltd., Industry Minister Alastair Gillespie announced Monday.

However, he said the government does not intend to retain control. Instead it would seek private Canadian interests to purchase the two companies as a package.

Mr. Gillespie told a news conference the de Havilland deal involves exercise of an option the government acquired in 1972 to purchase the Toronto-based company from the Hawker-Siddeley Group Ltd., a British firm. It will cost about $38 million.

Canadair, located in Montreal, belongs to the United States-based General Dynamics Corp. and Mr. Gillespie said negotiations with that company have so far consisted of only notifying the firm that Canada plans to buy Canadair.

Kettles: Lead is nothing new

OTTAWA (CP) — High lead levels in water boiled in electric kettles have probably existed since the kettles became a popular household item 25 or 30 years ago, a consumer affairs department official said Monday.

J.W. Black, chief of the products safety branch, said in an interview that lead solder used in the construction of some kettles has been common since the product first came on the market.

It was not until 1967 that some manufacturers began to switch to non-lead solder for kettles, and then for reasons other than health because the health hazard was not known, he said.

A complete report on his branch's testing of the kettles would be available today or Thursday and will probably include a list of the brand names of kettles that release high levels of lead into water, he said.

The testing program followed findings in Toronto that eight out of nine kettles failed lead-presence tests conducted after a seven-month-old baby was found to be suffering from lead poisoning.

YOUNG SUSCEPTIBLE

Officials believe infants and children are most likely to be affected by the high lead content. Last week's warning to stop using the kettles until tests are completed stressed that water for baby formulas and foods should not be heated in them.

Lead is given off by some kettles whether tap or distilled water is boiled in them, officials said, indicating that the chemicals used to treat and purify tap water are not a factor.

Mr. Black, who said almost all electric kettles in Canada are manufactured here, said manufacturers were issuing a list of all kettles that have not used lead solder in construction.

He also said findings to date support the evidence in the Toronto tests that almost 200 times the acceptable level of suspended lead particles was being detected.

Militant Protestants paralyse services

BELFAST (AP) — Militant Protestants today began to carry out their threat to paralyse essential services in Northern Ireland in a showdown with British Army troops sent in to break a general strike, now in its second week.

Angry strike leaders ordered all Protestant workers except those in hospitals to walk off their jobs at midnight, and it appeared most were obeying their stop-work call.

"Let the army bury the dead," said Glen Barr of the Ulster Workers' Council, which is coordinating the strike. "We'll eat grass before we're beaten."

Manual workers abandoned their jobs at the only remaining power station in operation at midnight. The electricity supply, already at 25 per cent of normal, was being tapered off and a total blackout was expected within 24 hours unless British soldiers can keep the plants operating.

Armed forces technicians, including turbine operators from Britain's nuclear submarines, were expected to take over control of the power stations. But the army would not confirm that they had done so this morning.

The council ordered the shutdown of essential services Monday after 500 troops took control of two Ulster oil depots and 21 gasoline stations.

SOLDIERS FILL GAP

The new walkouts left the British government with the prospect of directing its more than 16,500 troops in Northern Ireland to maintain electricity, gas, water and sewage services and provide Ulster's 1.5 million inhabitants with milk, bread and food.

Prime Minister Harold Wilson interrupted a Scilly Isles holiday to fly back to London today amid speculation he will recall Parliament from recess to discuss the Ulster crisis.

Wilson has called the strike the gravest crisis in Northern Ireland since sectarian war erupted almost five years ago. More than 1,000 persons have died in the fighting.

At the heart of the dispute is the demand by Protestant extremists for new elections and the scrapping of British plans to link Northern Ireland closer to the Roman Catholic-dominated Irish republic to the south.

Strike leaders fear the British plan will lead to a united Ireland dominated by Catholics. They believe new elections would dump Ulster's coalition government of moderate Protestants and Catholics and return Northern Ireland to total Protestant control.

ROADS BLOCKED

In the streets of Belfast, hundreds of men, women and children from Protestant strongholds formed human barricades to block roads in defiance of troops. The army smashed through barricades of commandeered automobiles and dragged away a dozen schoolboys in knickers trying to block a convoy.

Many feared that using troops to break the strike would lead to violence between strikers and soldiers, but no fighting was reported Monday and the workers council pledged that its resistance will remain passive.

Harsh effects of the escalation already are being felt by residents.

A walkout by natural-gas workers Monday left 160,000 Belfast-area consumers without heat and electricity.

Motorists had virtually no chance of finding gasoline, as troops were pumping gas only for authorized users.

There was essentially no public transport. Television stations were off, candles were lit where electricity was not available, and long lines of shoppers were buying up anything available at the few shops still open.

Film distributor began career as map-maker

MONTREAL (CP)—John Lash's success story began with military map-making in Western Europe and is being realized today in a thriving film distribution business.

Investors need skepticism

TORONTO (CP) — All investors need a balanced degree of skepticism, but never more so than when sorting out the difference between growth and concept stocks.

Canadian Business Service says confusion often results because many growth stocks—such as Polaroid and Xerox—start out as concept stocks.

"But for every concept stock that makes the transition to growth and glory there are probably hundreds, even thousands, that survive only as painful memories on worthless bits of paper," the Toronto investment service says.

A concept stock is an equity issued by a company whose future is dependent on an untried and unproven concept. The concept stock may have a limited history of growth but it does not exhibit the primary characteristics of a growth stock.

BETTER GROWTH

These characteristics, the service says, include a better-than-average growth rate over 10 years or more within an industry which is growing at least as fast as the economy.

The attraction of growth stocks, the service says, lies in their continuing expansion and earnings predictability.

"When earnings projections for such stocks are off target, more often than not they underestimate the actual fiscal results."

In contrast to concept stocks, growth stocks tend to survive and often expand when companies have had years.

Mr. Lash is founder and head of City Films Ltd., which distributes about 30,000 documentary, educational, travelogue or promotional films a year inside Canada.

Beginning more than 20 years ago with little more than the conviction that his business idea could work, Mr. Lash's firm now handles films made by 15 pharmaceutical companies, the Post Office, airlines, foreign governments and tourist boards.

Making films is one thing, he says; it is quite another to get them to an audience, not once, but a thousand times. When he was able to convince companies that he could do a better job than they could he was on his way.

Mr. Lash came to Canada in 1948 and worked at several jobs over a four-year period before he was able to make a start in film distribution.

DID AERIAL WORK

His interest in photography and film organization grew out of a stint of map-making of Western Europe for the Royal Air Force shortly after World War II.

The task, undertaken by Mr. Lash after a wartime tour of bomber duty, involved taking millions of aerial photographs. Although the number of films he handles every year is rising fast, Mr. Lash has ideas about his business that go beyond simple distribution to embrace new trends in visual communications and the public impact of his films.

He fairly bubbles when he speaks about the current revolutions in audio-visual teaching.

"With audio-visual, everything is on a one-to-one basis between the teacher and the student," he says. "I visualize the day when students will be taking viewers and film strips to help them with their homework. Already the children of today learn more by the time they are 12 than I shall learn in a lifetime."

One new film he likes to talk about is "Newborn" which is being shown to pre-natal classes at the Royal Victoria Hospital here.

INVOLVES FATHER

"It involves the father for the first time and in one recent class up there, five men accompanied their wives. It's a film that helps people to understand how to act with a new baby, problems that may arise, a baby's needs, how it learns about the world around it."

He sees the need for a variety of educational films ranging in subject from information on venereal disease for public school audiences to care and consideration for other people's property.

Mr. Lash said he would also like to see a library of 200 films each examining one occupation in depth, which would benefit students about to enter the job market.

Possibilities are endless, and he said he plans to visit Britain and Europe this summer to look for new films and new markets.

Final preparations underway

Festival des Cantons ready for opening

By CROSBIE COTTON
Record Reporter

SHERBROOKE — Hundreds of workers continue preparations for the first Festival des Cantons which opens in the downtown area Thursday evening.

Festival organizers are putting the finishing touches on the different activities which are scheduled during the festival which will run until Sunday night.

The downtown area will become a mass of humanity when four streets are closed to traffic and a festival of "authentic Quebecois expression" is placed before the public.

Only minor problems have to be settled and organizers are hoping for good weather to assure the festival's success as many activities are scheduled outdoors.

City officials and festival organizers finally ironed out their problems last week. The city had put up $20,000 to establish a permanent organizing committee and had agreed to supply public works employees and materials to help set up the festival props.

Last week city officials were stunned when they realized the public works part of the contract could cost the city as much as $15,000, according to one source. However, after meeting with festival organizers, the city reduced the figure to approximately $9,000.

Much of that figure is for the purchase of equipment and materials which can be used in coming years. City officials now believe the public works part will cost approximately $5,000 yearly in addition to the purchase of equipment.

But the problem between city officials and festival organizers hasn't put a damper on the growing enthusiasm being shown towards the festival throughout the region and in many other parts of Quebec and northeastern United States.

Busloads of tourists are scheduled from as far away as northern Quebec and Louis Bilodeau, president of the festival, says: "We know hundreds of people are coming from Vermont and New Hampshire."

Organizers are expecting more than 250,000 people to participate in the more than 35 activities which have been scheduled. Already banners hang from the King and Wellington Street intersection and posters are plastered throughout the downtown area.

Some stores have already filled their display windows with antiques and other Quebecois products.

The festival will be officially declared open Thursday evening although four streets in the city centre will be closed earlier that day as exhibits are set up.

Peel street will become "antique street" as more than 20 well-known dealers set up booths. The highlight of the street will be a house decorated entirely with antiques.

The arts will be featured on Cathedrale street with Quebec artisans displaying their wares, while Brooks streets will be lined with more than 50 monuments at least ten feet high which local groups have been building for more than two months.

Local florists have put together a gigantic flower display which will be on view in the square in front of the Sherbrooke Cathedral. A gigantic tent is to be erected in Racine park where youngsters can enjoy socio-cultural activities throughout the festival.

Many activities have been prepared for the Wellington street south area. Merchants will open sidewalks and on street boutiques as the commercial street is turned into a mall.

It will be a special time for senior citizens also. The small lake at Howardene Park has been stocked with fish and will be used for angling contests open to persons over the age of 65 years. Massive activities for senior citizens are also on tap Saturday at Champs de Mars Park where officials expect more than 5,000 people will gather.

There will be old time fiddling, concerts and sing-songs during Saturday's festivities.

Sherbrooke Sports Palace will be the scene of concerts and contests on all four nights of the festival while the Centre Cultural, located at the Université de Sherbrooke, will be the site of spectacles including a classical concert and a night-long rock festival.

Professional theatre will stage French-language plays at the theatre located in Jacques Cartier Park and there will be dancing in the streets nightly.

A moderately priced gala supper, featuring French-Canadian food, will be hosted at the Belvedere street armory. Old fashioned breakfast are to be served every morning on Wellington street.

Sports activities are also on tap with a 13.1 mile marathon race in Jacques Cartier park Saturday and the provincial horse pulling contest at Ecole 24 Juin throughout the weekend.

Many different contests are already underway. There are photography and hospitality awards up for grabs.

All persons participating in the festival are encouraged to wear old time costumes during the first Festival des Cantons.

Organizers have travelled through Quebec hosting press conferences and are delighted at the publicity they have been given. The Regionale des Caisses Populaires has contributed $15,000 for publicity and the printing of official programs.

Hotels say they have many reservations even now and are looking forward to full houses over the weekend.

"It looks like a success," one organizer said. "Only time will tell but I think the festival will become more and more popular each year as news of it spreads."

Louis Bilodeau is impressed how quickly the festival has caught on and how many persons have pitched in to make it a success.

"We only really got started when the city gave us our money three months ago," the popular animator of the Soiree Canadienne television program said. "They liked the proposal as soon as we made it."

"Now, everything is going well and everywhere people are talking about it," he added.

The festival was set up to give the city a chance to rival other Quebec centres for the tourist dollar. Quebec had the carnival and St. Jean the blueberry festival.

Organizers adopted the Festival des Cantons because there was no "authentic" festival dealing with Quebec's customs and arts.

If all goes according to plan, and it looks like it will, the festival will be increased to a 10-day affair next year.

School scene

SALE OF BROMPTON AND DOLLARD SCHOOLS
The St. Francis Protestant School Board has received no objections to its intention to sell the Windsor-Brompton School. The SFPBS will proceed to advertise the sale of the building.

The Eastern Townships Regional School Board has received no contestation of its resolution to purchase the Dollard des Ormeaux School, in Lennoxville, from the local Catholic school board. The ETRSB will proceed to renovate the building during the summer in order to house its board offices there beginning next year.

RE-ORGANIZATION OF ADS SCHOOL DAY
The St. Francis Protestant School Board is considering the feasibility of changing the closing hours for its Asbestos-Danville-Shipton School during 1974-75 in order to enable transportation of elementary and secondary school students on the same buses.

By altering hours to 8:15 a.m. - 3:30 p.m. on four days each week and 8:15 a.m. - noon on the fifth, the board anticipates transportation service savings of approximately $20,000. The school committee is being consulted on implementation of the scheme.

SFPBS MILEAGE ALLOWANCE INCREASE
The executive committee of the St. Francis Protestant School Board has resolved to increase the mileage allowance for school board personnel travelling on board business. Effective July 1, 1974, the rate will rise to $0.17 per mile from the current $0.14 per mile.

SFPBS SETS INTEREST RATE ON TAX ARREARS
The executive committee of the St. Francis Protestant School Board has recommended to the board of commissioners that the interest rate assessed for school tax arrears equal 12 per cent per year. The increase would become effective with the issuance of the school assessment notices for the 1974-75 school year.

SFPBS CAFETERIA OPERATIONS
The St. Francis Protestant School Board has determined that the price of meals in both the Asbestos-Danville-Shipton and St. Francis Elementary Schools will be set at $0.60 per meal, effective September 1, 1974. The increases were prompted by recognition that the board would be forced to accept deficits in the cafeteria operations at the two schools during the current year, and the desire, on the part of commissioners, to avoid such an occurrence during 1974-75.

UNIVERSITY OF SHERBROOKE APPOINTS DEPARTMENT HEADS
The University of Sherbrooke has announced the appointment of department heads for the faculties of philosophy, psychology, social service and French.

Jacques Plamondon, a professor at the university since 1965, was reappointed for a three-year period to head the philosophy sector.

Yves St-Arnaud, with the university since 1971, has had his tenure as psychology faculty head extended until May 31, 1975, at which time he will be eligible for further reappointment.

Hector Ouellet, a University of Sherbrooke teacher since 1969, has been appointed head of the social service department for three years.

Michel Theoret has been appointed French department head for three years. He has been with the university since 1968.

USAAPP PRESIDENT RE-ELECTED
Philippe Therberge has been re-elected president of the University of Sherbrooke Association of Administrative and Professional Personnel (USAAPP). The association also re-elected Guy Cloutier as vice-president and Andre J. Hamel as secretary. Roger Turcotte was unanimously appointed USAAPP treasurer.

COLLEGE DE SHERBROOKE GRANBY CAMPUS BUILDINGS
The board of governors of the College de Sherbrooke is awaiting written details of a governmental proposal to the effect that the CEGEP's Granby campus could be housed in the building presently used by the Immaculee-Conception School.

Originally, the college expected to build its own campus, but with the failure of that idea, the Meilleur Regional School Board entered into an agreement with the department of education concerning the feasibility of providing the school to the CEGEP.

An estimated $750,000 in renovations would be effected if the college should it accept the building.

SECOND ANNUAL REGIONAL CSRE FESTIVAL
More than 10,000 persons, primarily students, visited Joliet School during the second annual regional festival of the Commission Scolaire Regionale de l'Estrie.

Held last week, the festival featured exhibitions of the best work created in CSRE-directed schools, audio-visual presentations, drama presentations and musical concerts.

U OF S HISTORY DEPARTMENT HEAD NAMED COMMISSIONER
Andree Desilets, director of the University of Sherbrooke history department, has been named Quebec representative to the Canadian Commission of Historical Monuments and Places.

Some 14 persons, representing national museums and the public archives of Canada and the provinces, comprise the commission. They are charged with consulting with the minister and recommending the commemoration of places, persons and events of national historical significance.

BISHOP'S UNIVERSITY SITE OF SANC CONVENTION
On June 8, persons drawn from more than 30 nationalities will combine efforts to organize an annual buffet at Bishop's University. Established under the auspices of the Assistance Service to New Canadians (SANC), the convention will involve a menu drawn from the national diets of the persons involved, and a folklore exhibition.

CHAMPLAIN RENEWS ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICE RENTAL
The board of governors of Champlain Regional College has decided to seek renewal of the lease it holds from Westburne Industries for its Queen Blvd. N. administrative offices.

The cost to the board, the same as last year, will be $1,800 for the 1974-75 school year.

CHAMPLAIN SEEKS AUTHORIZATION TO PLAN BUILDING
The board of governors of Champlain Regional College is seeking governmental approval to proceed with the preparation of preliminary plans and specifications for a building to be constructed on the Lennoxville campus of Bishop's University. The building is being planned to accommodate 1,000 students.

CHAMPLAIN ENTERS INTO AGREEMENT WITH KING'S HALL
The board of governors of Champlain Regional College has sought approval from the department of education to enter into an agreement with King's Hall, in Compton, for rental of classroom and other space from the latter corporation.

The space, to be rented during the 1974-75 academic year, would involve some 23,000 square feet at $2.25 per square foot per year.

Included in the total package agreement between the two institutions is the provision of residence accommodation for King's Hall to Champlain students.

SHERBROOKE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE TO OFFER COURSE
The Sherbrooke Chamber of Commerce will offer a three-day seminar in industrial relations during June at the College de Sherbrooke. Costing $50 per registrant, the course will be directed by Pierre Gaze, a University of Sherbrooke administration faculty graduate.

Intended to reach businessmen with small and middle-sized enterprises, the seminar will focus on strikes and dealings between management and unions. Nine films and two case studies will be used as resource material during the June 7-9 program.

MNA Vaillancourt says Bill 22 will be an amended for English

SHERBROOKE (CC) — The Bourassa government's Bill 22, establishing French as the only official language in Quebec is only "a first approach," Georges Vaillancourt, Orford county MNA and minister of state attached to municipal affairs, said yesterday.

Speaking on a local radio open line program, Mr. Vaillancourt said English-speaking residents of Quebec have nothing to worry about because "it (the bill) is going to be amended."

"You have to have a first approach, you know," Mr. Vaillancourt told one caller. "Quebec, I think, is the only province which doesn't have a bill to promote language."

Mr. Vaillancourt expressed concern that the anglophone population was disturbed by the bill which was introduced in the Quebec legislature last week.

"After the amendments are included I am sure the bill will be accepted by most Quebecers," he exclaimed.

Mr. Vaillancourt, who had trouble fielding the questions fired in English, repeatedly referred to a commission established by the government to get public reaction to the proposed legislation which has become the most controversial in recent Quebec political history.

The commission, which will begin sitting on June 11 for a three week period, would "be happy" to get the comments of all persons in the province, the Orford representative said.

"The government brought in the legislation because it had been asked for many years by the population of Quebec," he claimed. "You see, that first of all, the government prepared the legislation to go to the public."

Urging the local population to "bring suggestions," Mr. Vaillancourt claimed the bill will have no effect on the English population. He contended the bill was between the two extremes described as the English-speaking population, who only wanted their language spoken in the province, and French extremists, who wanted only French spoken.

He said the government was in the "centre" of the Quebec population.

Mr. Vaillancourt was faced with a hostile listening group Monday. Callers accused Mr. Bourassa of hurling insults at the anglophone population and charged that the bill was filled with discrimination.

"My husband and I worked damned hard to make something for ourselves in this country," a caller, who had moved here from England, said. Claiming she had never had any trouble with her French-speaking neighbors, she added: "It would be a pity if we had to move somewhere else in Canada."

Mr. Vaillancourt, despite at least one direct question, attempted to avoid the language of instruction question. When one caller asked about the changes proposed in education, Mr. Vaillancourt and the caller attempted to determine what article in the proposed law was involved and not the impact the change would have.

Election campaign picks up locally

SHERBROOKE (CC) — Federal election action has begun to pick up in the Eastern Townships with many party candidates already nominated and more conventions scheduled.

In Sherbrooke riding only the Social Credit party has yet to name its candidate. Irene Pelletier, Liberal incumbent, has already opened campaign headquarters while Dr. Alexandre Kindy was nominated Progressive Conservative candidate for the third consecutive election at a convention Sunday evening.

Hebert Wallot, a doctor of medicine now specializing in psychiatry, was nominated to run for the New Democratic Party during the July 8 election in Sherbrooke. The NDP convention was held during the weekend.

GRAHAM NDP CHOICE
In Compton riding only Duncan Graham, who will represent the NDP, has been nominated so far.

Mr. Graham, a teacher at Stanstead College, represented the party in the riding 18 months ago.

The Liberals in Compton have decided to go with Claud Tessier, Lac Megantic mayor, who lost out to Social Crediter Henri Latulippe in the 1972 election.

Mr. Tessier will be introduced to Liberal supporters at a convention next Sunday.

Mr. Latulippe, who has represented the riding since 1962, stunned many voters last week when he said he was retiring from active politics. The SC party hasn't set a nominating convention yet. Also, the PCs haven't named a candidate in the riding so far.

POISSON CHOSEN
In Richmond-Wolfe, Jean Yves Poisson will represent the Liberal party. Mr. Poisson, of Asbestos, defeated Windsor mayor Marcel Noel by four votes at a nominating convention held near Danville last week.

The PC nominating convention in the riding was to have been held last Sunday but was mysteriously cancelled at the last moment. It has been tentatively rescheduled for this Sunday.

The Social Credit and NDP parties haven't held their convention in Richmond and no date has been set. Leonel Beaudoin, who was the SC incumbent, is also retiring from the political scene. Mr. Beaudoin led the SC to victory in Richmond-Wolfe during the past two elections, the last time with a more than 4,000 vote majority.

INCUMBENT WINS
In Frontenac county only the PC candidate has not been nominated. Liberal incumbent Leopold Corriveau will battle with NDP candidate Adrien Paquet while Mrs. Therese Mercier will represent the SC party. Mrs. Mercier is the only woman nominated in the region to date.

In Brome-Missisquoi PC incumbent Heward Grafty will face Liberal nominee Peter Turner, a well known lawyer.

In Drummond county the Liberals have chosen 34-year-old lawyer Yvon Pinard to represent them. Jean Luc Pepin, former Minister of Industry, Trade and Commerce, who was defeated by less than 70 votes by the SC nominee in the 1972 election, did not seek the nomination.

Louis Faucher leaves post as Chamber of Commerce head

SHERBROOKE (CC) — Louis Faucher, who led the Sherbrooke Chamber of Commerce into a new era, stepped down as president at the annual general meeting last night.

It is ironic that Mr. Faucher's one year term as president came to an end just days before the major portion of his efforts come before the public eye.

Mr. Faucher was responsible for re-organizing the chamber into a series of committees each looking after a part of local, regional, provincial and national issues.

The only major local project which the chamber completed was an analysis of the city's hydro-electric system.

But next Monday the chamber will present a series of detailed briefs to municipal officials. The briefs deal with proposed solutions to many of the city's chronic problems and were prepared in conjunction with the Université de Sherbrooke.

The subjects of the briefs include the relocation of the C.N. railway tracks in the downtown area, the cleaning up of the north bank of the Magog river, road and traffic security in Sherbrooke with emphasis on the urgency to complete the Trans-Quebec autoroute, and a study of the scheduling and route of Sherbrooke Transit buses.

Mr. Faucher could have left office in even more glory than he did if he had been willing to present the briefs to local media yesterday. The briefs are ready to be given out.

But Mr. Faucher, similar to his actions throughout the year, would not give out the reports. He wanted them given to Sherbrooke council and Sherbrooke Transit authorities before the press. He believes that both the city and Sherbrooke Transit have the right to study the briefs and then be ready when the press asks questions passed on the reports.

"We have to work together," he said earlier in the year. "There is no need to have reports which only attack. They have to provide answers too. We have to work together with the city, not against it."

That is the era which Mr. Faucher led the chamber into last year; an era of working together with all groups for the betterment of everyone.

An act of discrimination

The Bourassa government's long-awaited language legislation has provoked embittered protests by English-speaking members of the Quebec assembly. No one can reasonably object to the principle that French should be the first language of Quebec as English is the primary language of Ontario. But it should be possible to encourage the use of a language without subtracting from the existing rights of the minority or engaging in outright discrimination against immigrant parents. The new bill does both. Furthermore, its key sections are extremely ambiguous. Their true meaning will depend on regulations as developed over a considerable period by civil servants enjoying great discretion. In spirit such a measure runs counter to the language legislation of the federal Parliament which was supposed to enhance national unity by extending the rights of the French minority in Canada. It is bound to have unfortunate consequences outside Quebec because there has been pressure on other provinces to move toward greater bilingualism and at least in some cases a considerable response.

In a speech to his Mount Royal constituents, Prime Minister Trudeau took note of Mr. Bourassa's promise that the Quebec government would be flexible. He added, by way of reassurance, "You can trust us to talk to them to make sure they do the right thing." Mr. Trudeau's sincerity is not in doubt. But there are two points to be noted about this observation. The first is that rights which depend on someone talking to someone else (even when both profess to be Liberals) are not rights at all. They are matters of grace. The second is that there have been a good many such assurances since this legislation was first mooted by the Quebec premier.

The bill has been discussed in general terms for some time and was definitely promised last March. It has caused a good deal of apprehension in the English-speaking community and was hotly debated in Mr. Bourassa's caucus. Not surprisingly, it has been brought up by correspondents in various interviews with the prime minister. On May 4, for example, in a conversation with Paul Jackson, Mr. Trudeau remarked, "If you're looking at the facts, the Quebec policies, as proposed, intend to guarantee every right of the English-speaking minority and guarantee them even more strongly than the rights of the French-speaking minority have been guaranteed in, say, Ontario or in other parts of Canada where they have historic roots."

On May 18, interviewed by Joe Morgan, the prime minister spoke in the same sense. Deploring semantics, he said that he would not quarrel with anyone over words. "I want to know what they mean, and in the case of Quebec what they mean is that, to use your words, the first language will be French, but the English language will be more respected in Quebec under this new legislation than French is respected in, I suppose, in any other part of Canada with the possible exception of New Brunswick. You've got to look and measure Quebec's acts by comparison with other acts. And not a single English-Canadian of English origin is going to be hurt by this legislation."

Evidently, the Bourassa government did not take the Trudeau government into its confidence on this matter or else official talk so far has been of little use. The bill provides that a firm seeking a certificate attesting to the adoption and implementation of a "francization" program. There is nothing comparable in Ontario and such a requirement could certainly be detrimental to English-speaking businessmen of English or other origin.

The principle of free choice in education has been abandoned. Instruction in English will henceforth be provided on a conditional basis. Tests will be used to direct children of immigrants into French-language schools. When Mr. Cloutier, the minister of education, insists that the government "does not want too much coercion," he admits by obvious implication that it contemplates some.

In these circumstances, English-speaking Quebecers cannot be expected to rely very much on generalized assurances. The public hearings, which are to start in June, will provide one forum for protest. Others will certainly be found. Even a government as powerful as Mr. Bourassa's cannot well ignore a massive protest by a million-strong minority which is, after all, an important marginal factor in many constituencies. But it is most regrettable that such a struggle should be necessary because it cannot fail to have repercussions elsewhere in the country, reviving harmful controversies which were at least beginning to fade with the passage of time and the general desire for better understanding.

WINNIPEG FREE PRESS

Opinion from the French-language press

LE DROIT

Ottawa Le Droit: The Bank of Canada has just confirmed the financial upward trend by increasing its interest rate to 8 1/2 per cent, assuring us that the chartered banks and others will support the central bank in this increase.

Despite these constant increases in the interest rate, the demand for credit remains high.

Moreover the majority of banks insist that their clients have liquid assets amounting to at least 25 per cent of the value of the house, in ideal conditions, before granting a mortgage loan.

And these ideal conditions include that the house is well situated with a maximum of services.

The intention is clear: the banks want to stifle the housing market.

Towards what type of residence are those consumers, who are incapable of having access to credit, being pushed? High rises remain the only recourse.

However, in this sector of housing, prices are rising rapidly. It is often necessary to pay more than $200 a month for a two-bedroom apartment.

There is no great availability of apartments and there is even a scarcity in some municipalities. The prices will doubtless go up again.

When is the situation going to end? The number of apartments available is not great enough for the game of demand and supply to work towards a lowering of rents.

Credit is more and more inaccessible for the middle-income consumer.

Unless incentive measures are combined with threats of anti-speculative legislation... one risks finding oneself with a stifled market and an even higher cost of housing.

—Pierre Tremblay (May 16)

LE DEVOIR

Montreal Le Devoir: Leader of a marginal party which barely obtained seven per cent of the vote in the last legislative elections, Valery Giscard d'Estaing has just achieved, in two months, a feat which seemed impossible immediately following the death of Georges Pompidou.

Having eliminated the man supported by the majority party in the first round of voting, he has overcome the sole candidate supported by the leftist parties.

By a curious turn of circumstances, this eminent man of the minority finds himself called to the presidency of the entire French people.

As much as his victory impresses us, considering how unthinkable it would have been a few weeks ago, it also frightens us when one thinks of the harsh obstacles waiting for the new president.

WASHINGTON - (NEA)

A sampling of expert political judgments suggests that, so far, Nelson Rockefeller simply isn't making the right kind of moves to advance him toward the 1976 Republican presidential nomination.

His persistent denials of intent ("I am not a candidate") are widely viewed in the world of politicians and observers as foolish. The climate of the times, engendered by the horrors and deceptions of Watergate, doesn't allow for that brand of silly coyness today.

From the moment of his resignation as governor of New York last fall, no appraiser of politics has felt that there was anything but self-serving political purpose in his creation of the so-called Commission on Critical Choices.

Even if there were substantial contrary evidence, it wouldn't make much difference anyway. Americans are tired of commissions setting forth choices and goals. There is no hint that this one or any other today could serve well as anybody's presidential launching platform.

But these things are only the start of Rockefeller's current problems. More damaging for the long haul is that he really seems not to have learned much about presidential nominating tactics from his past failures.

In a way that cannot be disclosed here, he was put to a small but important test in this field some time back. His response was so utterly unsophisticated, after all these years, that it cast him in the most dismal light.

Rockefeller is surrounded by some demonstrably able, charming, experienced aides. They have served him long and well in many ways. But the proof lies in history. Not one of them has the kind of sharply tailored talent required to get him enough national convention delegates to win a presidential nomination.

Giscard d'Estaing, in succeeding Georges Pompidou, owes his victory above all to his exceptional personality which made him appear the most competent of the candidates seeking to succeed the dead president.

His adversaries tried to identify Giscard d'Estaing with a narrow-minded and stupid right... and by playing on this they misjudged the voters.

Despite the propaganda fed to them, millions of Frenchmen preferred to examine each candidate calmly. It is not surprising... that their choice finally fell on the candidate who seemed to be the one who had the highest degree of competence and technical mastery, qualities which those who are governed like to see in their leaders these days.

For the political future of France, the results obtained by Francois Mitterrand are just as significant as the victory of Giscard d'Estaing. The French have rejected the chance offered them to consummate the integration of the Communist party into national life by giving it a chance to participate, for the first time since the end of the Second World War, in the operations of a French government.

The new step which the left has taken in France is probably just as important for the future as the sure victory which has just been won by a competent, if hardly representative man, taking into account the organized political forces in his country.

la presse

Montreal La Presse: ... I would be wrong to say that Canadians are only interested in what goes on in their own backyards. This time last year, television viewers throughout Canada could not tear themselves away from their sets during the Watergate hearings.

As for Quebec-France relations, no Quebecer is indifferent to that subject, especially in view of the recent French elections which could have effects on Quebec's relations with France.

Whether the effects will be good or bad have yet to be seen.

Be that as it may, television played an important role in this election. The televised debate between Giscard d'Estaing and Francois Mitterrand has been compared to the Kennedy-Nixon debate in 1960, although I do not know whether the comparison can be applied to the letter.

Looking at the results of the election, it seems Giscard d'Estaing won over the viewer as much as the voter.

No less honorable is the defeat of Francois Mitterrand. A fighter of his strength, courage and tenacity—this was not his first attempt at the presidency—must be admired.

Although there are no feelings of victory or defeat in Canada following the French election as, of course, Canadians could not vote, this is not to say some did not have secret preferences as to who would make the best president of France.

As it turned out, the results have added further defeats to those already suffered by the left in France and now there is no lack of prophets of doom who predict that it will all end in catastrophe.

Certainly, many things will change in France. But it is difficult to understand why the fact that a country has democratically chosen two candidates of different temperaments but equal value should bring promises of misfortune. —Guy Cormier (May 20)

Granby La Voix de l'Est: The nationalization of automobile insurance is often discussed in many sectors as a solution to the problems of insurance.

But the report which has just been tabled in the national assembly of Quebec by a study committee on automobile insurance suggests a solution to all the problems without calling for nationalization.

The report by the committee confirms its faith in private enterprise which controls automobile insurance, on condition that the insurance companies follow, to the letter recommendations made in this report.

It was time that the Quebec government decided to put its nose into automobile insurance.

Quebecers have been asking for a long time that the state intervene in this domain. The exorbitant cost of automobile insurance in Quebec is the main reason that car drivers in Quebec have had enough when they compare their costs with costs in other parts of Canada and the world. It is certain that healthy competition among private insurance companies is a factor that should benefit consumers.

We believe the committee considered these advantages before recommending that administration of insurance be left to private enterprise if all proposed reforms were applied.

We now must wait for the implementation of the committee's recommendations. If the insurance companies conform to the reforms which the report of the committee's report recommends, nationalization will not take place. —Jean Naud (May 16)

"DID YOU HEAR SOMETHING?"

Bebe paid Nixon's bills

Jack Anderson's

Washington Merry-go-round

WASHINGTON — At the same time that Bebe Rebozo was collecting secret cash contributions for President Nixon, the presidential crony also paid some of the President's bills.

We have now traced to Rebozo's personal account an $11,978.84 check, which went to pay for improvements on the President's property at Key Biscayne, Fla.

Reliable sources also claim that Rebozo paid for a swimming pool, a pool table and architectural services for the President. We have not seen the canceled checks, however, for these expenditures.

The $11,978.84 check, dated Aug. 6, 1969, and signed by Rebozo, was made out to Babcock Company, a Florida firm. A Babcock official, confirming receipt of the check, said it was payment for electrical, air conditioning and painting work on the Nixon home at 516 Bay Lane.

The official also confirmed receipt of two other payments for work at the presidential compound. On Aug. 7, 1969, an $11,307.12 cashier's check was delivered to the company. The cashier's check, drawn on Rebozo's Key Biscayne bank, bears Richard Nixon's name as the remitter. We have established, however, that Nixon was not in Florida at the time.

Again, on Oct. 9, 1969, Babcock received payment for a $6,299.44 bill, which the company had submitted to Rebozo for replacing a roof and air conditioning ducts at another of President Nixon's Key Biscayne houses. We have been unable, however, to determine whose check was used in this transaction.

Sources familiar with the financial records also say that Rebozo paid presidential pool, pool table and architectural services, but we have been unable to obtain the exact figures.

It is an interesting coincidence, however, that these expenditures coincided with the delivery of the first of two $50,000 cash bundles which billionaire Howard Hughes sent to the President. Richard Danner, a Hughes henchman, told us he delivered the cash to Rebozo at his Key Biscayne bank. It could have been in the summer of 1969, Danner said, but he couldn't be sure.

Hughes' former chief honcho, Robert Maheu, told us he was certain the first $50,000 was delivered in 1969. To the best of his recollection, he said, it was in August.

Footnote: The White House did not respond to our inquiries. Rebozo, speaking through an intermediary, said he would have to check his financial records which he did not have at hand. We will be happy to publish their comments when we receive them.

Smuggling Syndicate: Chinese opium mandarins have organized a smuggling syndicate similar to the one run by the Corsican Mafia, which for years has supplied most of the heroin on American streets.

The Chinese smuggling ring has its headquarters in Taipei, the capital of trouble-ridden Taiwan.

To the credit of Taiwan's police, they have kept the Chinese narcotics chieftains under close surveillance and are working with U.S. authorities to disrupt the opium operation. But ironically, it has been good law enforcement that has driven the independent ethnic Chinese drug smugglers into one tightly disciplined organization.

In the last few months, Hong Kong narcotics agents have intercepted several trawlers running opium to Hong Kong for conversion to heroin. These seizures slowed the heroin trade for six to seven weeks and forced up the price of heroin 100 per cent for awhile, according to intelligence sources.

A Hong Kong agent also grabbed a supply of acetic anhydride, the chemical used to process opium into heroin labeled "Salt Fish" to sneak it into Hong Kong.

The seizure was followed by police raids on three of Hong Kong's most important heroin laboratories.

All this police action finally led to hectic efforts to form a Chinese smuggling syndicate based in Taiwan. The Chinese narcotics dealers have developed a ruthlessly efficient organization, with ties to foreign banks.

But the Taiwanese police have doggedly kept on the trail of the narcotics smugglers, using sophisticated equipment to bug their meetings and phone calls.

Footnote: The United States has also put the heat on South Vietnamese and Thai authorities to make more drug arrests. With Oriental guile, some police have arranged with cab drivers to stash marijuana in their hacks. When an American fare is picked up, the hacker signals the police who arrest the unsuspecting American for possession of marijuana. This increases the number of arrests, although not quite in the way the United States had intended.

Sadat's Charity: Without congressional approval, President Nixon quietly authorized a $10 million grant recently to Egyptian President Anwar Sadat's favorite charity.

The $10 million contribution in U.S.-held Egyptian pounds was sent to Waafa Wa'l Amal, the Loyalty and Hope Society, which is headed by Mrs. Anwar Sadat.

In a letter to Rep. Lester Wolff, D-N.Y., the State Department conceded that the grant had been authorized "notwithstanding the absence at the time of formal diplomatic relations and the existence of other potentially applicable prohibitions."

But the money, though it may have violated the law, went for a good cause: relief efforts such as rehabilitating recent war casualties.

DR LAWRENCE E. LAMB

Irregular periods near menopause

By Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB - I am in the menopause stage, and I would like to know how long you go skipping monthly periods. I am 48. I have skipped two months and am going on my third. Will I stop altogether or will this go on for awhile?

I also have a slight buzz in my right ear part of the time. Sometimes it lasts for days. The doctor said it was nerves and pressure. He checked my ear for wax.

I do have an aggravating daughter who is causing a lot of trouble. She gets me very upset at times. I was wondering if it's because I am in the change. Have you heard this before? I would like to know what causes this buzz in my ear, because it is very annoying.

The doctor told me I could take tranquilizers, but I don't want to get in the habit of drugs. I mean tranquilizers. Am I lacking something like a vitamin?

DEAR READER - You can never be certain how long the irregularity will last. And, you may gradually taper off with an occasional period or even stop suddenly.

You should know that you can still get pregnant even after your periods stop completely. Many a middle-aged pregnancy has occurred because the couple thought that the woman was no longer capable of having children.

You can still ovulate even though you may not be menstruating. Never make the mistake of assuming that menstruation and ovulation are the same thing.

For more information on menopause write to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019, and ask for the booklet on menopause. Send 50 cents to cover costs. The buzzing in your ear can be caused by your increased irritability or heightened awareness. Under different circumstances you might not even notice it. This problem is sometimes caused by wax in the ear, or any inflammation. Your doctor was prudent to eliminate these problems. The buzz can also be caused by different drugs. These include quinine and large doses of aspirin.

Buzzing in the ear can also be caused by changes in the circulation in the region of the ear and changes in the ear associated with age.

My guess is that your ear buzzing and your daughter problem are both aggravated by your increased tension. It is a time when people should try to make life less stressful. The family can help a woman a lot in these difficult days if they properly appreciate the problem. Women often become easily agitated with problems they would ordinarily take in stride. When Mom stops being her unflappable self, the children often don't understand.

And, I'm inclined to think that a less stressful life is better than tranquilizers. Of course, if you are irritable it is the wrong time to use nervous stimulants that have effects exactly opposite to tranquilizers. I refer here to coffee. Anyone who has irritability problems should consider stopping it entirely. A decaffeinated product is often useful in these instances. If you are a coffee drinker, stop it and see if that helps you.

Dr. Lamb welcomes questions from his readers, but because of the volume of mail he cannot answer personally. Questions of general interest will be discussed in future columns. Write to Dr. Lamb in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, N.Y. 10019.

Dinner time nightmare

Dear Ann Landers: Are we a typical American family, or is there something wrong at our house? For the last three weeks, dinner time has been a nightmare. (The ones before that weren't anything to brag about either.)

The problem is continual bickering between my husband and the children. He picks at them until everyone is in a surly mood and there is no geniality whatever. It's "Get your elbows off the table! Sit up straight! Go wash your hands again, and get them clean this time!" I realize manners are important, but he's so critical I could scream.

We will be having a pleasant conversation and suddenly my husband finds fault with one of the kids. Before long, it's a four-dimensional fight with banging of fists, yelling and people leaving the table angry.

I have read that mealtime is supposed to be a pleasant event, the one time in the 24-hour period when the entire family gets together to enjoy one another's company. But not at our house. How do other people handle it?—The Boxing Glove Brigade

Dear Brig: Rest assured yours is not the only family that fights at the dinner table. But it certainly should not be a nightly event. I suggest that you and your husband get some counseling. Children SHOULD be corrected, but obviously your husband needs instruction on how to go about it. When the dining area becomes a battle zone, it sets up patterns for indigestion and other stomach disorders that can plague children for the rest of their lives.

Check with the school principal or your family doctor about a competent counselor. If you can't get your husband to go alone. Somebody in your family needs to understand the damaging effects of nightly dinner table fights.

Dear Ann Landers: I know you have a lot of men readers and this is one letter they won't be interested in but please print it anyway—for the millions of women who will secretly bless you.

I need to know what to do about recipe thieves. Jesse James did it with a gun. Brassy dames do it with flattery and pressure. I am a gourmet cook. Most of my recipes are the result of experimentation and dogged striving for perfection.

What can be done about guests who literally demand a recipe right on the spot, as well as those who telephone the following day, with pencil and paper in hand, to "take it all down"?

Usually I give in, after extracting a promise that it will never be given to anyone. Later I learn my recipe has been passed around town to five others. Imagine my surprise when I found two of my original creations in the Church Auxiliary Cook Book!

Am I selfish to feel that my culinary achievements are mine and mine alone and no one should beat them out of me?—Pestered In Passaic

Dear Pestered: Why blame your friends when the fault lies with you? "Sorry, no." are two perfectly respectable words, and if you don't wish to give a recipe, you should say so.

I've asked for recipes myself and found that most women are flattered to share them. I've also been told, "Sorry, no." and I accept that answer and think nor: the less of the woman who would prefer to keep her recipe to herself.

+++++ What's proudest? What's O.K.? If you aren't sure, you need some help. It's available in the booklet: "Necking and Petting—What Are the Limits?" Mail your request to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 3346, Chicago, Illinois 60654, enclosing 50 cents in coin and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope.

The Day Under Your Sign

ARIES (Born March 21 to April 19): Avoid extreme fatigue, rich food, excess drink. The keyword today should be moderation in all things.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20): By always being too complacent, you can make those around you feel inferior and/or unneeded.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 21): Make no rash moves. What looks great at first glance may not seem so attractive when you think it over.

CANCER (June 22 to July 21): A lively day socially, but work tends to be boring and uninteresting. Financial outlook good.

LEO (July 22 to Aug. 21): You're not overly enthusiastic about lacking the job today, but you'll cheer up when you see the results.

VIRGO (Aug. 22 to Sept. 21): Keep risk-taking to a minimum. Outlook is negative for speculative ventures of any sort just now.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 to Oct. 22): You find it hard to resist a bargain, but remember if you don't like it later, sale goods can't be exchanged.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23 to Nov. 21): You tend to be too aggressive, too inclined to exert your own will under today's powerful sun.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 to Dec. 21): If you must make a trip, get an early start so that you can be home before dark. Obey all traffic laws.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 to Jan. 20): Mixed aspects (similar to Cancer). You may be a bundle of nerves, but calm down when invited to a party.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19): Take a look at what the higher-ups, the "big shots," are doing. You may have an idea to present to them.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to March 21): You may want to call a gathering of the clan to discuss a family situation that has everyone uptight.

50th anniversary

EAST ANGLUS - On April 28, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Bell were at home to their friends, the happy occasion being their Golden Wedding Anniversary. They were married on April 29, 1924 at Christ Church, East Angus by Rev. Warren.

Mrs. Ross Bellam pinned a rose corsage on her mother and a carnation on her father. Tea was poured by Mrs. Orion Gordon and Mrs. Clarence Quinn. Refreshments were served by their daughters, Mrs. Franklyn Evans, Mrs. Ross Bellam and Mrs. Donald King and by their daughter-in-law, Mrs. Douglas Bell, Jr.

A three-tiered cake which adorned the lace covered table was made and decorated by Miss Glenna Evans of Sawyerville. Candles and white and red carnations also decorated the tea table. The carnations and another arrangement of white and mauve mums were a gift from the couple's grandchildren.

Their six children were present along with ten of their fourteen grandchildren and their great-grandson also being a visitor. Tea was served to approximately seventy guests.

Those attending from a distance were Mr. John Riddoch of Three Rivers, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Quinn of Richmond, Mrs. Gordon Bell, Mr. and Mrs. Orion Gordon of St. Catharines, Ont., Mrs. Flora Baker and Mr. and Mrs. Phil Schappert of Kitchener, Ont.

Mr. and Mrs. Bell were the recipients of many beautiful gifts including flowers, fruit, china, money and over fifty lovely cards. They also received a telegram from Governor General Leger.

INTERNATIONAL LIBRARY AND OPERA HOUSE

The Haskell Library—rich in history

BOUNDARY—Many exciting things have happened at the Boundary over the years. Perhaps the years 1901-1904, at the turn of the century, were one of the highlighted years.

In those days travel was mostly by horse and buggy or sleigh trains ran several times a day to make connections between larger centers both sides of the border. Such new inventions of the past century were still a marvel, the old wall crank telephone, the electric lights, but no direct dialing, no electric homes, just lights. Warmth was from bucksawed and split wood piles.

It was in 1901 that the birth of the famous International Library and Opera House was conceived by Mrs. Martha Haskell and her son Colonel H. Stewart Haskell, residents of Derby Line, Vermont. Their family mansion was the present Hackett Apartments, just a stone's throw from the Haskell Building.

The chosen location was directly on the American Canadian Boundary line so that a half is a possession of Uncle Sam and the other under the Dominion of King Edward.

Nothing but the best work sufficed. This unique building was planned by architect James Bal of Rock Island and was built under the supervision of Nate Beach, a Civil War veteran.

The Opera House is a scale model of the old Boston Opera House and has been regarded by many people as one of the loveliest examples of the rather elaborate designs of that period.

Where is another part of the world where one can sit in an auditorium in one country and see a stage performance or a concert that is in another country? Because of this the Haskell building has been featured in Ripley's "Believe it or Not" column and also "Strange as it may seem" by Hix, Bernard Cerf referred to it as the "Unique Little Theatre."

The corner stone of this beautiful building was laid on Oct. 15, 1901. With all due ceremony by prominent Master Masons of Golden Rule Lodge, A.F. & A.M. No. 5 Stantstead. This lodge had been established not far from this chosen site in 1803 at Derby Line by Judge Timothy Hinman and Major Rufus Stewart, both of whom were great-grandparents of Colonel H. Stewart Haskell, he being a prominent Mason.

This red letter day was a historic and glorious day, Vermont-Quebec foliage wearing her bright autumn colors, the Union Jacks and the Stars and Stripes flowing in the breeze significant of the international aspect of the building to be constructed. Women in their best gowns, just an inch or two from the dirt streets, men in the fashions of that period; beautiful horses drawing the carriages with people from all walks of life.

There were many prominent Master Masons among the large attendance from both sides of the Border. Fraternity Brother H.S. Channell of Golden Rule Lodge was Grand Director of Ceremonies. Bro. H. Stewart Haskell, and Rev. Bro. G. Ellery Read, was chairman.

There was on this historic day a grand parade. This was headed by the "City Band" from Coaticook and 140 men. Over 1000 people were on hand to witness the ceremony and probably few missed the proceedings for they took place after the march from an improvised balcony on the building site that was decorated with flags of these two great countries.

The programs included speeches from high officers in Masonry and at the conclusion of the ceremony, three rousing cheers and a "tiger" was given Mrs. Martha Haskell. At 5 p.m. a supper was served to many of the Masons before those from a distance left for their respective home by train.

So began the construction of the monumental building that was to serve two purposes, a library and the Opera House. The lower part of the building, the library, is of a near Greek architecture and the upper story, the Opera House, of Colonial design.

It was built to withstand all weather conditions of native granite stone and buff brick. The lower storey is in rock face granite with cut entrances and moldings, the upper storey is principally of buff brick. It has columns, belt courses, balustrades and trimmings of dressed and polished granite which presents a harmonious and altogether rich and solid effect. The tower is, perhaps, the main architectural feature of the exterior, rising to a height of 80 feet.

The interior is finished in some of the finest wood available at that time and probably a fortune today could not match its curly birch. The library has an adult and a children's reading room, large and spacious library room, plus other rooms and hallway. Some antiques and photographs of the Haskell are in evidence.

The present librarian is Mrs. Adelaide Prangley. If the Haskell were alive today there is no doubt that they would say "well done good and faithful librarians of the past and the present" for his Haskell Free Library is second to none in either Quebec or Vermont. It continues to build up year by year and many historic books are kept in safe vaults and may be viewed only in the library.

A second red letter day in the history of the building was the opening concert in the Opera House on June 7, 1904. What a night! What a concert!

The stage is 50 feet wide and 24 feet deep, with a proscenium arch 26 feet in width and 20 feet high. The delicate shading of pink, green, ivory, the angels adorning the pastel and gold of the half circle of the balcony. The comfortable seating. While in the center of the delicately decorated ceiling was and is a sunburst chandelier. It was only a few short years ago that it was original clear electric light bulbs used the opening night were changed.

At the opening were many distinguished men and women, all beautiful in evening clothes of that period, stylish hair dos, fans and feathers, beards and neatly trimmed longish hair and high silk hats.

The show was two nights, June 7 and 8 with the Columbian Minstrels performing for the first half and a special musical comedy "The Isle of Rock" for the second half of this delightful evening.

The star of the show was the late Eugene Cowles, composer of the famous song "Forgotten" and was for many years a leading member of the famous Bostonians. Eugene was a native of Derby Line. He possessed a magnificent bass voice and he appeared at the Haskell Opera House at least once a year in concert for several years to come.

The poster of that first concert is framed and hangs in one of the hall entrances to the Opera House to be viewed by many.

The past 70 years have seen many events of all varieties on the stage of this famous Opera House. Divine church services were held there, after St. Edwards Parish in Derby Line was established only a few years ago. Their first masses were in this building. Shows, concerts and prominent speakers of the world have acted and spoke from this stage.

Prominent musicians have presented Operas, concerts and last year, 1973, the Stanstead College Centennial year was celebrated with many events, one of which was a concert by the Canada Symphony Orchestra. Beautiful music to a capacity audience, men and women in much the same fashion as in the 1904 year.

From this concert came the inspiration to Edwin Earle and a group of American and Canadian men and women to revitalize this famous Opera House, which along with the library, seems to be more appreciated by people from a distance visiting the building. A visit to this Haskell building is a must to tourists and they are always graciously received by Mrs. Prangley as by past librarians, yet just accepted by local people.

So after a meeting or two, the North Country Concert Association was formed and incorporated. The next step was to prepare for a series of concerts, four to be exact.

The first of these four will be to coincide with the 1904 opening date, June 4, 1974. Ruth Jessup, a dramatic soprano, of Chicago and the North Country Chorus under Mary Rowe, director, will be on the stage and will feature selections from Bach to Broadway.

A ticket campaign the last part of April indicates these concerts should be well attended as patronage has been very good.

So it is that on June 7 of this year, many thoughts will be turned back to those early years and the Opera House again filled with an appreciative audience.

Through the years this International building has been blessed with an excellent Board of Trustees. They are the custodians of it and they too have done their responsibilities with love, dedication and devotion of the trust placed in them.

The present Board are Kenneth Baldwin, Rock Island, chairman; Lloyd O. Selby, Derby Line, vice-chairman; Stuart Edgar, Rock Island, secretary; and directors, John Flood, Mrs. Patricia Walsh, Robert Darby, Derby Line; and Lee Heath, Stanstead.

NEA Women's Editor

NEW YORK — (NEA) — This year it's "no more" for cutesy sportswear for the nursery set.

It's an active sportswear look with all the flair of big people fashions — especially in the fabrics, colors and patterns. A special point is that it's no longer a navy-and-pastel world, and bunny and bird motifs have moved over to make room for the rest of the animal kingdom as well as fish patterns and stripes. And more important than the fashion pluses, wearability and practicality make their marks especially with polyester doubleknits.

This year Bill Beaton top designer for Bull Frog knits, introduces a fascinating collection for the seemingly never-tired toddlers. In sizes two, three and four, Beaton breaks loose with jogging, tennis, bowling and just plain kicking costumes. Right for all these activities, they can also be counted on for double duty like single stroller sitting.

Active wear best characterizes the Bull Frog knits collection and can readily vie with the best of pro shop fashions. And the toddler is the true activist. After the first step no mother in the world needs to be told who is the busiest body in the house.

The fashions for that age group are great. But, of course, little people given their own choice would probably prefer to streak.

Poodle gives researchers hope for a cure

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Researchers say an eight-pound poodle, who collapses hundred of times a day, has given them new hope of finding a cure for humans afflicted with a rare sleeping disease.

The two-year-old silver-grey poodle, named Monique, suffers from narcolepsy-cataplexy, a disorder that affects about 150,000 persons in the United States, said Dr. Merrill Mitler, research associate at the Stanford Medical Centre Sleep Disorder Laboratory.

Mitler said the poodle was donated to the laboratory by her owner who lives in Saskatoon, Sask., a year ago after a veterinarian recognized symptoms of the disease. Mitler did not identify the dog's former owner.

Symptoms of the disease include an irresistible urge to fall asleep and a state of waking paralysis brought on by excitement, Dr. Mitler said in an interview recently.

In humans, the unpredictability of the disease makes simple activities like driving a car dangerous. Attacks frequently occur during periods of sexual arousal, he said.

CAUSE UNKNOWN

Mitler said drugs can help lessen the severity of attacks, but the cause of the disease is unknown and no cure exists.

Mitler said the dog has hundreds of attacks a day, each lasting from a few seconds to a minute or two.

During the attacks, Monique is totally paralyzed but wide awake, able to breathe and sustain a heartbeat, Mitler said.

Mitler said Monique is the only narcoleptic dog available to researchers for study, and one of only four documented cases of such dogs in the U.S.

He said researchers at the laboratory plan to breed Monique with her normal brother to produce a line of offspring, many of which may have narcolepsy.

"We can experiment on them with a variety of drugs and implant them with electrodes, which would be difficult to do in humans," Mitler said.

Father Frank Hurley—Alaska's flying bishop

HOONAH, Alaska (AP) — "Seven-niner-oh-four-victory... Sorry about the trouble you had, Bishop."

"Good to see you back in the sky again."

Flight Service in Juneau is talking to an old friend in the clouds, a gregarious, graying Irishman named Francis Thomas Hurley who learned to fly to pursue his scattered flock through the timbered, mountained miles of southeastern Alaska.

Flight Service watches over Father Frank—that's what many call him here—as he flies the unpredictable skies of this Roman Catholic diocese from Icy Bay in the north to Ketchikan in the south, a span of 550 miles of green islands, deep blue fiords and crystal glaciers. He covers 36,000 miles from May to November visiting the 36,000 Roman Catholics, one for every eight square miles.

His diocese was almost abandoned four years ago but now is a well-knit, growing province of the church, thanks to the 41-year-old bishop.

An unclerical sight he is—his black trousers rolled up to the knees, black shirt open at the neck, ruddy complexion and trimmer than he used to be when he had a desk job in Washington.

FEW CATHOLICS

Of the few hundred people who live in Hoonah, a handful are Catholic. The ferry stops twice a week in the summer. Otherwise the only contact is by air.

His first stop is the local saloon which is already busy by mid-afternoon. The wife of the owner is Catholic and he wants to make sure she knows he will say Mass. She has heard.

It takes maybe 45 minutes to walk to the church. The canine population is out in force and seems to outnumber the human.

The church is a long boardwalk climb up the hill. It is obviously new, pre-fab, one of 11 churches scattered over nine parishes. This one is served by a visiting priest and a sister.

Disappointment shows on Bishop Frank's face as he stands in the pullman kitchen making coffee. The parishioners want this church, but they have done little with it. He takes that as a measure of their interest.

Behind the altar is an Indian totem in the form of a cross, the face of Christ, the eyes of God in the hands, a sign of strength and wisdom, the Sacred Heart from which three flames grow symbolizing the trinity. It was designed and made by a parishioner whose only visit to the church in the last three years was when she presented it to the bishop.

NOT OPTIMISTIC

One visitor says when he attended mass here two years ago, there were only three people in attendance. Today there were 20.

But Father Frank is not optimistic. Next time there might be only three again, he says.

Alaskans are a kind apart, he says. Most have come here from somewhere else: "I don't think it was so much running away as it was looking for something new that would in a way not commit them to the past.... We all get locked into patterns and I think this is the nature of the beast. The people up here just did not want to stay locked into patterns. They wanted to get out of them."

An expert in church-state relations and tied to a desk at the National Catholic Welfare Conference in Washington, he suddenly found himself assigned to Juneau to determine whether it should be maintained as a separate diocese, or absorbed by Anchorage.

In Juneau, he found the church dislocated into isolated, autonomous islands. No sense of unity. Distances were great and no two towns were connected by road. He recommended that, to serve the people, the diocese should be maintained. Three months later, in 1971, he was installed as bishop.

His brother Mark now is the bishop of Santa Rosa, Calif., only the second time in this century that two American brothers have been bishops at the same time.

WI meeting

EAST CLIFTON — On May 2, the Milby Women's Institute members and their husbands were guests of the Clifton Institute. This being Farmers night, the local farmers were also guests and Mr. Don MacMillan spoke to the group on information for farmers. Instructions were given on soil drainage, bulldozer work and herd enlargement followed by a question and answer period.

Mrs. French introduced the speaker and read a market report of July 1954. The change in prices was discussed.

Mrs. Bain thanked Mr. MacMillan and told him we always look forward to his visit and Mrs. MacMillan.

Mr. and Mrs. Van Lierop of Flanders were present and joined in the discussions and told of European conditions today. Door prizes were won by Mrs.

Donald Coates, Stuart Cairns, George Rowell and Mrs. V. Bell.

A delicious lunch was served under the chairmanship of the president, Mrs. Goodhue.

The Clifton Women's Institute held a meeting on May 9 with Mrs. Irwin McBurney Roll call was an exchange of slips and bulbs. The meeting was opened with the Creed and Ode. Motto was "As a man soweth so shall he reap." Several sick and shut ins are to be remembered. The minutes from the Convention held on May 6th were given by the delegate Mrs. Leta Cairns.

A new member, Mrs. Sandy Terry, who lives on the former Gilbert farm was welcomed to the group. A report of the musical evening held in Sawyerville was called a big success. Settlement was made for the candy provided by this Branch.

A Radio Broadcast is being prepared for June 17 over C.K.T.S. This being the Centennial year of the Town Council, it will be on the Centennial.

Reports were given by the convenors. Welfare and Health — Mrs. McBurney gave information on the use of aspirins and related drugs and their misuse. Home economics — Mrs. Black presented the bill for postage for handbags sent and remnants to be asked for to go to Save the Children Fund also. Education — Mrs. Montgomery reported on her work on the school programming committee.

Mrs. Gordon French gave a report on the food prices questionnaire just completed by the provincial and federated convenors of agriculture.

Canadian industries welfare and health. Though prices are high on all essential food stuffs, namely eggs, meat, dairy products and baking supplies, it was found that Canadians were eating better. Fewer canned foods, candy, pop and convenience foods were on the shopping list.

People were cutting expenses by a do-it-yourself system. Bugbears were premiums in products, especially in cereals, enticing children to request the premium and cereal goes uneaten, sales gimmicks with an increase in price and fancy packaging and drops in farm prices seldom being passed on to the consumer especially in the case of meats — right now pork is an example, price markups on the same package.

Lunch brought the evening to a close.

"Well," said North philosophically, "If you are going to overbid you should learn to play the cards better."

"What could I do?" asked South.

"Practice counting to nine," replied North.

South's three notrump was really an overbid. If he had just bid two notrump North would have taken him on to game. After all you don't need much of a hand to reopen when the bidding has died at one heart.

Now let's see what North meant by South being unable to count to nine.

If you win nine tricks at a three notrump contract the sun shines and everyone is happy. At least you and your partner are.

WI meetings

HATLEY — On Saturday, May 18, the Hatley Branch of the Women's Institute held their annual May Fair in the Town Hall. The flowers, plants and shrubs made a very spring-like showing to the right of the entrance of the Hall. A number of gay afghans, both ancient and modern draped around the stage looked quite gay. Two beautiful needlepoint pictures and an oil painting along with two colorful handmade rugs, hooked on canvases, made the back drop.

The home bake sale and the refreshment booth shared in the success of the "Fair". Special thanks goes to the ones who demonstrated and exhibited their beautiful handwork. Mrs. Clifford Curtis demonstrated the art of "Tattooing" and showed pieces of her crocheting, hair pin lace tatting, and crewel work many of which had won special prizes at the County Fair in former years.

Mrs. Hugh McClary showed how she makes attractive jewellery from pearl and gold beads of various sizes woven into intricate patterns. Mrs. Ethel Whitcomb and her sister, Mrs. Mabelle McClary demonstrated their speciality of flowers made from a form of bread dough. These are very dainty roses, daisies and pansies in pastel shades.

A very attractive exhibit of dozens of novelties made from plastics, wool and other modern material, among them being dolls, animals, sun hats, and daintily decorated note paper made by Mrs. Fred Keet and her daughter-in-law, Mrs. Allan Christie, of Stanstead won the drawing of an oil painting of the Bow River Valley, a scene from the Canadian Rockies, painted and donated by Mrs. Clyde Lattin.

Two kaftans and a knitted bedspread in synthetic red, white and blue squares made a bright addition to the decor. Special mention must be made of the three quarters of a century old centerpiece made by the late Mrs. Wesley Whitcomb and the patchwork quilt made of 48 different blocks, each one a different well-known pattern made by the late Mrs. William McClary. Both of the above-mentioned ladies were life-long residents of this community.

SCOTSTOWN — Mrs. Bea Atkin was hostess at the home of Mrs. W.A. Ladd on Monday evening, May 13 for the regular meeting of the Women's Institute.

The meeting opened with the Collect and Ode Mrs. Ladd welcomed Mrs. Harvey MacRae as a new member.

There were nine answered the roll call and one visitor by naming a Canadian wild flower.

Mrs. F.B. Mayhew read the minutes of the April meeting and gave the treasurer's report. Both were accepted.

Mrs. W.A. Ladd read a thank you from Mrs. James Barter for the Easter treat of fruit and candy given the residents in the Rosemary Home.

The secretary read letters from Save the Children and Sherbrooke Hospital. Mrs. F.B. Mayhew had made five ditty bags that she gave out to be filled. One member gave money to help pay for the postage on ending the ditty bags. Anyone having large remnants of cloth kits could be sent with the ditty bags to Montreal to be sent to others who are learning to sew in other countries.

Mrs. W.A. Ladd told things she had heard on the T.V. on baby car seats, life preservers and liferent breakfast foods.

Mrs. John MacAulay spoke of the Guides holding a parent night meeting and that there was a good response to the paper drive and that the rummage sale would be June and the guides would serve coffee. Anyone having paper and rummage can get in touch with Mrs. MacAulay or the Guide leader, Mrs. Geoff Wells.

Several members have garden plants started in the house and one has some miniature pines and Norway spruce trees growing quite fast.

It was decided that the monthly meetings be held the second Monday of the month instead of the first Monday.

The president asked the members to be thinking of something special to do to celebrate their 40th Anniversary this fall.

It was voted on that if at all possible that one should go as delegate to the annual convention to Macdonald this year. One was appointed and would go if possible.

It was decided that 30 Souvenir Q.W.I. pens with a crest on be bought and the treasurer sent a certified cheque for them to the Q.W.I. Office at Macdonald College.

Mrs. F.B. Mayhew gave the report of the County annual meeting held in Brookbury attended by her, Mrs. W.A. Ladd, Mrs. Harvey MacRae and Mrs. Bea Atkin. Mrs. Ladd thanked her for giving the report.

Mrs. Harvey MacRae invited the members to her home for their picnic dinner meeting in June, the date to be set later.

The meeting adjourned and two games were played. Several won prizes.

Mrs. MacRae and Mrs. Ladd assisted Mrs. Atkin in serving refreshments.

made to North Country Hospital in Newport, Vt., La Providence Hospital in Magog, St. Vincent de Paul Hospital, Sherbrooke Protestant Hospital and the Quebec WI Service Fund.

Proceeds from sale of Mother's Day flowers were gratifying.

Mrs. F. Finlayson, citizenship, read an interesting article, stating that the newly appointed Lt. Governor of Alberta was a Mr. Steinhour, an Indian, and the first appointment of a member of a reserve to a government position.

LENNOXVILLE — The boys and girls track and field teams from Alexander Galt Regional High regained top honors at Saturday's Y's Men's Track and Field Meet.

The girls have copped their section and the Elkas Trophy for the last three years, while the boys were victorious in 1971 and 1972. Bishop's College School was last year's boys winner.

Following the Galt girls lead of 109 team points, was Massey-Vanier Regional with 50. Richmond Regional with 44 and BCS with 40 points.

The fellows were outdone by their female counterparts, but still accumulated 107 for AGRHS to go on to victory for the A.C. Skinner Trophy. BCS came second with 75 points, while Stanstead College had 57 RRHS was a close fourth with 55, followed by fifth place MVRHS with 24 points.

Canadians trade Wilson

MONTREAL (CP)—Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League announced Monday night that defenceman Rick Wilson has been traded to St. Louis Blues for future considerations.

Wilson divided his time during the 1973-74 season between the Canadiens and Nova Scotia Voyageurs, Montreal's American Hockey League farm team. Wilson, a native of Prince Albert, Sask., joined the Canadiens' organization two years ago after a college hockey career at North Dakota University. He had two assists in 17 games with Montreal this year and scored four goals and 19 assists in 47 games with the Voyageurs.

Guidolin leaves Bruins

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Bruins go into today's National Hockey League amateur draft without a coach in the wake of Bep Guidolin's decision to quit his job rather than settle for a short-term contract.

Because the Bruins won the Prince of Wales trophy with a first-place finish in the Eastern Division, they have last pick in every round of the junior draft.

But Bruins managing director Harry Sinden already has given the word that the team will continue picking its share into the late rounds today.

Guidolin was not available for comment and his wife said he spent Monday fishing while Sinden broke the news that the coach would not be returning.

Sinden said he regretted Guidolin's decision, but added the Bruins could not meet his demand for a long-term pact.

Guidolin's decision came eight days after the Bruins lost the Stanley Cup championships to Philadelphia Flyers.

"Bep did a good job for us," Sinden said, "and I wish him the best of luck in his future endeavors."

WANTED SECURITY
 Before leaving Boston last week to make up his mind in the quiet of his Barrie, Ont., home, Guidolin said: "I have to think about some security. It's got to be a long-term deal, and if it isn't you can say that I won't be back."

Sinden said the Bruins usually offer contracts for one or two years.

The Bruins management said Monday that no decision had been made on Guidolin's replacement, but two names keep coming up as strong possibilities: John Ferguson, a former hard-nosed hockey player for Montreal Canadiens, and Don Cherry, coach of Rochester Americans of the American Hockey League.

In Montreal, Ferguson said he would be interested in the Boston job.

"A team like the Bruins appeals to me very much," he said, adding he would insist on a multi-year contract and that he had received some feelers from Sinden earlier last winter.

"Harry asked me what I was doing next—that was all," Ferguson said.

Guidolin is reported to be a leading contender for a coaching spot with the new Washington Capitals. Milt Schmidt, general manager of the Capitals, hired Guidolin as coach of the AHL Boston Braves in their first season two years ago. Schmidt said he hadn't spoken with Guidolin yet, but would have to get permission from the Bruins before he could.

Guidolin moved up to coach the Bruins when Tom Johnson was fired in February 1973.

Dal Canton pitches Angels to victory

Bruce Dal Canton has two "out" pitches in his repertoire—the knuckleball and the double-play ball. He learned about the double-play ball from his manager Monday night.

Faced with a tough ninth-inning situation, Jack McKeon advised his pitcher to "throw the double-play ball to Brooks Robinson." He did and Kansas City Royals won 9-1 over Baltimore Orioles.

The Orioles looked as if they would knock Dal Canton out of the game in the ninth with two singles and a hit batsman that loaded the bases with one out.

Then McKeon bounced out of the dugout to suggest the double play.

In other American League games, Boston Red Sox nipped Minnesota Twins 3-2 in 10 innings, Chicago White Sox defeated New York Yankees 5-3, Oakland As routed Detroit Tigers 12-2, Texas Rangers blanked Cleveland Indians 6-0, and Milwaukee Brewers shut out California Angels 2-0.

Relying heavily on his knuckleball, Dal Canton, 3-2, finished with a five-hitter.

Fran Healy staked the Royals to a 2-0 lead in the second inning with his sixth homer of the season following a two-out single by George Brett off Jim Palmer, 2-6.

CARBO GETS WINNER
 Bernie Carbo, who had homered for two runs in the fourth inning, hit a two-out single in the 10th to give Boston its victory over Minnesota in a game which featured a brilliant pitching duel between Boston's Luis Tiant and Minnesota's Ray Corbin.

Juan Beniquez extended his consecutive-game hitting streak to 10 by opening the 10th with a single off Corbin. It was the fifth hit off Corbin, who then left the game in favor of Tom Burgmeier.

The Minnesota reliever induced Cecil Cooper to ground into a double play and the Twins seemed safe. But Burgmeier, 0-2, walked Dwight Evans and Carl Yastrzemski, setting the stage for Carbo's single to right for his third RBI of the game.

Tiant scattered 10 hits and evened his record at 5-5.

Skip Pitlock scattered five hits in 6 2-3 innings in his first AL start and Chicago, helped by Pat Kelly's two-run single, beat New York.

Pitlock, 26, a left-hander, walked three, struck out eight and blanked the Yankees until the fifth inning when Thurman Munson hit a two-run homer. Terry Foster relieved in the seventh. Doc Medich, 6-4, was the winning pitcher.

JACKSON ADDS THREE
 Reggie Jackson had three hits to raise his batting average to

Leafs trade Johnston

TORONTO (CP) — Eddie Johnston, a 38-year-old goaltender with Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League, has been traded to St. Louis Blues for right-winger Gary Sabourin, the Leafs announced Monday.

Johnston played one season with the Leafs after being traded from Boston Bruins for Jacques Plante and the Bruins' first-round amateur draft choice in 1973. The Leafs chose defenceman Ian Turnbull in the draft.

Sabourin, 30, has played seven seasons with the Blues, and scored seven goals and 23 assists in 54 games in the 1973-74 season.

Jim Gregory, general manager of the Leafs, said he was sorry to let Johnston go, "but due to the expansion draft, we were forced with a protection problem."

Gregory said the addition of Sabourin will give the Leafs "muscle and aggressiveness on our forward lines."

Johnston's record with the Leafs in the 1973-74 season was 12 wins, nine losses and four ties, as he spent most of the season rotating with the Leafs' two other goalies—Doug Favell and Dunc Wilson.
