Tact: the ability to shut your mouth before someone does it for you.

"Just because you're new doesn't mean those nasty Liberals can shout at you. Shout right back."

No foreign policy by free vote, Mulroney tells petitioners

OTTAWA (CP) — A peace petition with almost 430,000 signatures didn't budge Prime Minister Mulroney from the government's commitment to continue testing the U.S. cruise missile in Canada.

Mulroney emerged from a meeting Monday with leaders of a group called the peace petition caravan campaign to say the tests will continue as scheduled, despite the huge petition asking Parliament to make Canada a nuclear-weapons-free zone.

"There's been no change in our projections or our thinking in that regard," Mulroney told reporters who asked him if the government intends to follow the petition's demand for an end to cruise missile tests in this country.

Peace caravan leaders, who also met Opposition Leader John Turner and New Democrat Leader Ed Broadbent, insisted they weren't disappointed with Mulroney's refusal to move on the cruise.

"We didn't expect that to happen overnight," said Bob Penner of the Toronto Disarmament Network, one of the groups which organized the eight-month campaign to gather signatures for the peace petition across the country.

The caravans, which arrived Saturday in Ottawa and ended its campaign with a weekend "peace watch" on Parliament Hill, presented the petition to representatives of all three parties after meeting the three leaders earlier Monday.

The petition calls for an end to cruise testing in the country, a halt to research and production of components for nuclear arms, a shift in "wasteful spending" for arms to funding for human needs and designation of Canada as a nuclear weapons-free zone.

It also urged that Parliament hold a free vote on each of the petition's main points — a proposal rejected in various degrees by each of the three political leaders.

MEETS REPORTERS

Turner told reporters after meeting the peace group a free Commons vote on the points included in the petition is out of the question as far as his party is concerned.

"I don't think Canada should develop foreign policy by way of a free vote," the Liberal leader said. "I don't think this is the sort of issue for a free vote."

Turner also said his party still supports cruise testing in Canada, although it will be having more discussions on the subject and he couldn't rule out future changes.

Broadbent, who said his party supports the petition's demands with respect to the cruise, arms production and declaring Canada a nuclear-weapons-free zone, doesn't back the idea of a free vote in the Commons on those points.

The NDP leader said it would be more useful to get MPs from the two other parties to bring the proposals into their respective caucuses to drum up support where it counts politically.

"Then you're dealing in the real world of serious politics," Broadbent said.

Mulroney also seemed to rule out a free Commons vote on the petition demands, saying it is "not something that's in the works for the near future."

Mulroney, whose party supports the cruise tests arranged under the previous Liberal government and is opposed to unilateral nuclear arms reduction for the West, said his government hasn't changed its stand on those issues.

He said he supports the overall goals of the peace group and repeated that government defence and foreign policy will subject to a wide-ranging review to begin shortly.

An unarmed cruise missile was tested over northern Alberta and the Northwest Territories last winter. It was carried by a U.S. Air Force bomber over the area. Another test is scheduled for sometime this winter.

EDMONTON (CP) — Paul Archambault, who saved three lives after a plane crash in northern Alberta which killed provincial NDP Leader Grant Nottley and five others, walked out of a provincial courtroom Monday a free man.

Archambault was charged with mischief for breaking a window in the business below where he was living in Grande Prairie, Alta., last August because he had been locked out. He failed to appear in provincial court Aug. 19.

Judge Ken Staples dismissed the mischief charge in court in Grande Prairie on Monday and ruled that time already spent in custody since Archambault's Oct. 15 arrest would serve as his sentence on the charge of failing to appear.

"You are to be highly commended for your conduct," said Staples in accepting the recommendation of Crown prosecutor Allan Beach to allow Archambault to leave the courtroom a free man.

"I was surprised at the decision," said Archambault. "I expected to be locked up for a while."

But Archambault's problems are not over. The sum of $66.35, about all the money he has in the world, was left at the Edmonton Remand Centre when he was flown to Grande Prairie.

He walked out of the courtroom wearing the same smoky clothes he was wearing when he lit the campfire to keep the three other survivors of the plane crash alive.

"I haven't even got the coins to wash them," said Archambault. The RCMP is trying to get his money back.

SAW NO DANGER

At a news conference earlier at the Edmonton International Airport before flying to Grande Prairie, Archambault said there did not appear to be any danger before the mishap despite near-zero visibility.

The 27-year-old Ottawa native was flying in the twin-engine aircraft with RCMP Const. Scott Deschamps to Grande Prairie from Kamloops, B.C., to appear in court on the mischief and appearance charges.

Archambault said Vogel told the passengers ice was coming off the propellers and the plane seemed to be descending because his ears were popping.

Then "we hit the trees...when the plane became still...we were upside down and I got out of the plane because I figured it was going to explode."

Central Intelligence Agency analysts in 1967 over whether civilians should be listed in reports on Communist troop strength.

"That is not a debate that will be resolved in this courtroom," he said. "The question is, was there anyone that didn't know about that debate?"

Following up on this argument, he questioned a retired military intelligence officer who testified he signed the October 1967 report with no reluctance.

WAS CIRCULATED

Col. Charles Morris, the fifth witness for Westmoreland, said the report was widely distributed within the intelligence community.

He said discussions about the dispute ranged from Washington to company headquarters in Vietnam, including officials from the State Department.

CBS lawyer David Boies told the jury the network agreed there was a debate. "The issue is whether that debate was in good faith or not," he added.

Boies later asked Morris whether there was pressure on his superiors to show progress in the war.

After a pause, Morris told the jury: "I'm going to say yes. There was a certain amount of pressure. ... It was just sensing it was an unpopular war and we had to get on with it."

He said the pressure grew as the war became more unpopular with the public.

Westmoreland's suit charges a CBS documentary, The Uncounted Enemy: A Vietnam Deception, falsely accused him of withholding truthful intelligence estimates from the joint chiefs of staff and then President Lyndon Johnson.

NEW YORK (AP) — A widely distributed military report explaining why a militia group was dropped from the official Vietnam war estimate of Communist Vietnamese troop strength has been read to the jury in retired general William Westmoreland's libel suit against CBS.

The October 1967 military intelligence report said civilian "self-defence" forces were "eliminated" from the official count of Communist troops because they were not considered a serious threat.

Lawyer Dan Burt, attempting to support his argument that CBS falsely accused the general of concealing truthful intelligence estimates from his superiors, read aloud from the report Monday.

Burt told the jury trial before Judge Pierre Leval of U.S. district court in Manhattan there was an honest debate between military and MANILA (AP) — The chairman of the board investigating the Benigno Aquino assassination released her final report today, concluding the opposition leader was killed in a military conspiracy.

The report said the conspiracy did not involve President Ferdinand Marcos or his military chief of staff. Marcos said the alleged conspirators would be tried promptly in a special civil court.

Marcos announced his decision at the presidential palace after receiving the report from Corazon Agrava, chairman of the board he appointed a year ago to investigate the August 1983 killing at Manila's main airport. The other four members of the panel are scheduled to issue their own report Wednesday.

The assassination, at first blamed by Marcos and the military on alleged Communist agent Rolando Galman, has been a rallying point for Aquino's family and opposition groups, who during a 14-month protest campaign have blamed the government and the armed forces.

IN CIVIL COURT

Regarding Agrava's report, Marcos said: "Rather than transmit it to a court martial, because the persons involved are military men, I am sending it to a civil court."

Agrava, a former Appeals Court judge, announced earlier today she would issue a different report than the one agreed upon by the other four board members.

Other panel members have indicated the primary difference was over whether to accuse armed forces chief Gen. Fabian Ver of involvement in the crime. The other members were reported to favor implicating him.

Aquino, a former senator considered the chief political rival to Marcos, was killed Aug. 21, 1983, as military police escorted him from an airliner that brought him back from self-imposed exile in the United States.

Marcos's statements confirmed news reports of recent weeks that the board would find military men were involved in the assassination.

He asked the investigative board and its staff to help with the prosecution, which he said would be handled by a government ombudsman and tried in a special court set up for government corruption cases.

Asked how he felt about the development, Marcos said: "I have no reaction to it."

BOARD AGREES

Agrava told reporters before meeting privately with Marcos that the board agreed unanimously on "the main body of conclusions" but decided to have two reports because they differed on some points.

Asked if the split among board members would detract from their findings, Agrava said: "On the contrary, the reports will be more illuminating ... showing the independence of mind of the board members."

Hatfield denies dope find is his

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — RCMP officers found marijuana in Richard Hatfield's suitcase almost a month ago, but no charges have been laid and the New Brunswick premier says he has no idea how it got there.

That has left George Little, leader of the New Democratic Party in the province, asking whether there is one law for those with influence and another law for those without.

Little said had the marijuana been found in the apparent possession of the boy next door, police would have been quick to lay charges.

Hatfield confirmed speculation Monday that he is at the centre of an RCMP investigation into the discovery of marijuana in his suitcase about to be put aboard a plane carrying the Queen and high-ranking provincial officials to Moncton from Fredericton on Sept. 25.

However, he said he had no idea how the marijuana got into a pocket on the outside of his suitcase.

He said police informed him of the discovery on Sept. 28, but they have not said whether charges will be laid.

Little, who does not have a seat in the legislature, said it should be clear to the police by now whether charges will be laid.

Dennis Ling, RCMP superintendent in New Brunswick, was reported to be in Ottawa discussing the case with his superiors.

Hatfield's disclosure of the RCMP investigation is but one of a series of controversies his government has faced recently.

Richard Hatfield. . . Pot found outside the bag.

Hatfield, in his 14th year in power and Canada's longest-serving premier, issued a brief statement to reporters Monday, just two days after published media reports about the incident.

His statement, read without emotion, said:

"Two days following the departure of the Queen from Moncton, N.B., two officials from the RCMP called on me and informed me that a package was found in a pocket on the outside of my suitcase and that following an analysis it was determined that the package contained marijuana.

"I told them it did not belong to me. Obviously, I do not know how it got there. I have retained legal counsel, Donald Gillis, Q.C., in Saint John, N.B., and I will not have anything further to say on the matter."

The Progressive Conservative premier emphasized the word "outside" as he described the pocket of his suitcase in which the marijuana was found.

Gillis, a prominent New Brunswick lawyer, is away for two weeks, his office said Monday.

CHECK ROUTINE

The marijuana was found during a routine search of baggage being put aboard the plane carrying the Queen.

A first conviction for marijuana possession in New Brunswick usually carries a $75 or $100 fine or in some cases an absolute discharge, which means the offender does not have a criminal record.

A provincial justice department spokesman said politicians do not have to resign because of a conviction, unless they go to prison.

Hatfield, 53, and a bachelor, has been dubbed Disco Dick by Opposition Liberals critical of his frequent trips to such places as Montreal and New York. And he has spoken out in favor of decriminalizing marijuana.

In an address in 1981 to the New Brunswick Lung Association he said he favored decriminalization because too many young people have criminal records through use of marijuana.

However, he said it should not be decriminalized before there had been extensive research into the subject.

OTHER PROBLEMS

Controversy is nothing new to Hatfield, but even he must be a bit alarmed by some recent events.

On Monday, the day the premier revealed the marijuana problem, James Gordon, Tory member of the legislature for Miramichi Bay, was fined $400 for salmon poaching.

Glendon Graham, provincial controller, will be sentenced Oct. 31 for income tax evasion, to which he pleaded guilty.

Morgentaler stung in undercover police operation on abortion clinic

TORONTO (CP)—A Toronto police officer testified Monday she pretended she wanted an abortion when she entered Dr. Henry Morgentaler's clinic just before fellow officers raided the premises last year.

Const. Deborah Massey said she and another undercover officer posed as husband and wife when they went to the downtown clinic and she used an assumed name when she signed some of the necessary forms to obtain the abortion.

The clinic was raided about 12 minutes after the two officers entered the building, Massey said. Using marked bills she paid a receptionist $250 of the $300 required for an abortion and was given a card bearing the name of a Dr. Scott before the other officers arrived.

Testifying as a Crown witness at the Ontario Supreme Court trial of Morgentaler and two associates at the clinic, Massey said she was told by a clinic receptionist not to say anything about herself to police, should the situation arise.

"If you don't, they can't do anything about us," she quoted the receptionist as saying.

Massey said she went to a second-floor washroom before the other officers arrived but later joined them on the third floor and gave her true identity to clinic staff.

Under cross-examination by defence counsel Morris Manning, the police officer said another woman, apparently attended by two nurses, was lying on a table in a third-floor room when the raid took place but didn't seem to be distressed by it.

A doctor had just left the room, she said, and another patient was sitting wrapped in a blanket on a lounge chair in an outer room.

Morgentaler, 61, of Montreal, Dr. Robert Scott, 37, of Ste-Anne-de-Prescott, Ont., and Dr. Leslie Smoling, 55, of Toronto and Woodstock, Ont., are charged with conspiracy to procure a miscarriage, the term used in the Criminal Code referring to abortion. Two related charges against Scott and Smoling have been stayed by the Crown.

A pathologist testified Monday he found bits of fetal bone and tissue in a garbage disposal unit police seized at the clinic.

Dr. Frederick Jaffe, requested by police to analyse the evidence at the Centre for Forensic Science, said he also found specimens of placenta and other tissue in the disposal unit and two seized basins.

Asked by the defence how fetuses are disposed of following legal hospital abortions, Jaffe said they are generally sent to a pathology laboratory to be legally recorded and eventually incinerated.

But in the case of mature fetuses, those between 24 and 26 weeks and "able to live on their own," the family may have a special request for disposal, he said.

Jaffe, director of laboratories at Toronto Queensway Hospital, told Manning he had seen cases where women died as a result of a self-induced abortion or an abortion performed by unqualified practitioners. But he added that such cases disappeared after abortions were legalized in Canada under certain conditions.

SHOULDN'T INTERRUPT

Jaffe agreed with the defence counsel it "wouldn't be favorable" for a doctor to be interrupted while performing an abortion.

An Ontario Health Ministry official testified that Morgentaler hadn't been given approval by then health minister Larry Grossman to open the abortion clinic.

Malcolm Walker, acting executive director of the ministry's institutional operations division, said he was aware Morgentaler had sought permission but there was no evidence any such approval was given.

In June 1983 Morgentaler wrote the ministry asking for accreditation for his clinic, saying the clinic could be viewed as a pilot project for future free-standing clinics in the province.

Abortions have been legal in Canada since 1969 under Section 251 of the Criminal Code, but on strict conditions: They may be performed in accredited hospitals when approved by a committee of at least three doctors who determine whether the pregnancy endangers the woman's life or health; or they may be similarly performed in an unaccredited hospital if the provincial health minister gives his approval.

The jury trial, before Associate Chief Justice William Parker, continues today.

Police starting to take 'Grenade lady' personally

WASHINGTON (AP)—They call her "the lady in gray," and, more pointedly, "the grenade lady," and she's done it again—single-handedly holding up her sixth bank in 60 days by threatening to blow up tellers with a hand grenade.

"We're starting to take it personally," police officer Connie Curran said Monday after the bank robber made a successful raid on the First American Bank in Springfield, Va., using the same method as in five previous holdups in the Washington suburbs since Aug. 23.

In every case, the slim, young woman strolled into the bank wearing sunglasses, a baggy gray sweater and a slyish gray beret. Over her right shoulder she carried a tote bag. In her left hand she held a brown sock with a toe that bulged with a lemon-shaped object.

She handed notes to tellers listing the denominations of the bills she wanted, singled out which drawer she wanted the cash taken from and demanded the note back. Police say she's used the same note in every robbery.

She spent between two and five minutes in the banks and left without hurrying, police said.

VERY UNUSUAL

Fairfax County Police spokesman Warren Carmichael said: "It's unusual to have robberies committed by females; very unusual to have financial institutions robbed by females and it's even more unusual to have bank robberies by women carrying hand grenades."

The holdups have come in pairs, on Aug. 23 and Aug. 27 in the Fairfax County town of Annandale; Sept. 24 in Annandale and Sept. 26 in Wheaton, Md., another Washington suburb.

Before Monday's robbery in Springfield, there was an unsuccessful attempt last Thursday in Baileys Crossroads, Va. That job was foiled when a teller told the woman there was no money in the specified drawer.

The woman insisted, police said, but when the teller opened the drawer to show the woman it was empty, the robber left empty-handed. In none of the bank jobs were tellers able to pass money laced with exploding dye packs that can mark an escaping robber.

Carmichael said additional resources are being thrown into the effort to capture the woman. He did not give details, nor would he reveal how much money was taken in the robberies except to say it was a "substantial amount."

Quebec posties opposed to latest contract offer

OTTAWA (CP)—The 22,000-member Letter Carriers Union of Canada will accept a tentative contract with Canada Post despite rumblings of discontent among members in Montreal, union president Bob McGarry said Monday.

The settlement was reached Oct. 4 and a countrywide ratification now is under way. Results will be announced Oct. 29.

"It's not the first time that a contract acceptable to the rest of the country has been rejected by Montreal," McGarry said in an interview.

"I felt then (Oct. 4) and I feel now it's a contract that, for these times, gives job protection to the membership and a wage increase that will keep up with inflation."

He was responding to criticism by Leopold Cote, a spokesman for about 3,000 letter carriers and postal couriers in the Montreal area.

Cote said Montreal union leaders would not hold a gun to members' heads to influence voting but were recommending the deal be rejected because "it would take us back 15 years."

Some union locals elsewhere already have rejected the contract, Cote said.

McGarry acknowledged that votes have been tabulated in some areas of the country, but he refused to discuss results other than to say "I think the members will accept it."

The union president did confirm publicly for the first time Monday that the 15-month pact proposes a pay increase of 2.9 per cent or 37 cents on the current hourly average of $12.61.

VALUE RISES

But he said the overall value rises significantly when medical, dental and other fringe benefit improvements are taken into account.

"I don't want to get into it too much and be accused of trying to influence the vote. But by the time you deal with the fringes...it's more than five per cent," he said.

"To me, I just think it's going to keep him (the letter carrier) up with inflation and that he's going to have a job 15 months from now. Then we'll be back into bargaining again."

Rejection of the contract would represent not only an embarrassment to McGarry and the bargaining committee but it would be a major setback for the post office.

The deal is the first major working agreement to be negotiated since Ottawa began lifting wage controls in the federal sector Oct. 5.

Thatcher witness took pill overdose

SASKATOON (CP)—A key Crown witness who testified Colin Thatcher offered him $50,000 to kill JoAnn Wilson, Thatcher's former wife, was confined in a doctor's care last week, Court of Queen's Bench learned Monday.

The court also heard a tape recording in which Gary Anderson, a neighbor who loaned Thatcher a car on Jan. 21, 1983, the night Wilson was killed, said it was difficult to clean the blood from the automobile. A voice identified as Thatcher responded: "That right?"

Anderson, a mainstay in the first-degree murder case against the rancher and former provincial energy minister, was unavailable for his scheduled court appearance last Friday.

The 38-year-old said Monday he was absent because he was being treated after an overdose of headache pills.

"Arrangements were made for me to see a doctor," Anderson told a surprised courtroom. "He confined me to a place."

He did not elaborate on where he was confined, but defence lawyer Gerald Allbright was expected to elicit more information today during cross-examination.

Anderson said the doctor told him his "physical health" is fine, but he may have "to check back in."

BEING PROTECTED

The husky, bearded farmer said he has been under police protection for months in a secret relocation program, but became depressed. He said he encountered difficulties in getting new documents such as a driver's licence and a health-care card.

He said he did not like his new home, although he admitted he chose it.

He said he felt police were not helping with his problems and "I became very lonely and depressed."

Last week, he went to his mother's farm, which is adjacent to Thatcher's land near Caron, Sask.

Last Thursday, he got into a loud argument with a policeman who visited him and threw the officer off the property. That night, after taking 12 Tylenol tablets during the day to combat headaches, he gulped another 24.

Police surrounded the house and ordered him to come out. He surrendered and later was taken to Saskatoon for treatment.

Anderson testified earlier Monday that Thatcher asked him to kill Wilson in the fall of 1980, three years before she was beaten and shot to death in the garage of her Regina home.

Thatcher, who still holds the south-central riding of Thunder Creek for the Progressive Conservatives in the Saskatchewan legislature, watched expressionless from the defence table, a pen clenched in his teeth, as Anderson testified slowly and deliberately, pausing before each answer.

OFFERS MONEY

"At that time, he asked me if I would be interested in killing his wife," Anderson told the court. "He made an offer, if I would, of $10,000 to start, $10,000 on completion and $10,000 a year for three years."

"I said I was not interested. He continued to ask me and press me... I said I was not interested."

Anderson said Thatcher asked him to find someone who might be interested in killing Wilson.

The witness said he gave $15,000 of Thatcher's money to two men, Cody Crutcher and Charlie Wilde, who were to kill Wilson. But, they reneged on the deal.

Anderson, who has a criminal record for assault, impaired driving and driving while prohibited, said he met Crutcher while in jail.

"Apparently, the hit was not made and Colin again approached me and wanted to know what the hell happened and wanted to know what about his $15,000."

Anderson said he arranged a meeting between Thatcher and Crutcher, but the deal fell through again when Crutcher was arrested while robbing a Winnipeg pharmacy.

The witness said he bought a .303 Lee-Enfield rifle for Thatcher just before Wilson was shot and wounded by an unknown sniper in May 1981.

At a meeting later, Anderson said, he asked Thatcher: "How the hell could you miss at that range?"

"His response to me was that he just didn't know."

The day Wilson died, Anderson loaned Thatcher his car, a 1974 Mercury he described as "a fast car." Thatcher said he had been "stalking" his former wife, Anderson testified.

On the day of the killing, he also returned a .357 magnum pistol Thatcher had loaned him. Anderson said he used the weapon in experiments with home-made silencers Thatcher asked him to make.

Anderson and a Moose Jaw welder eventually constructed six crude silencers, but Anderson said he threw them away. One was retrieved and is a Crown exhibit in the trial.

Two days after Wilson's murder, Anderson testified, he retrieved his car from a prearranged drop-off point. He drove it to his farm and removed some clothing from the vehicle. He took the black ski jacket and blue jeans—similar to the costume Thatcher wore when he took the car—and burned it.

He cleaned the car inside and out. The court later heard an hour-long tape recording of a meeting between Thatcher and Anderson on May 1, 1984, a week before Thatcher's arrest. At one point in the tape, which is so clear the court could hear birds chirping in the background, Anderson says: "Had a bitch of a time getting blood and stuff off."

ON TAPE

A voice identified as Thatcher's replied: "That right?"

The Thatcher voice later asked of the car: "There is a chance it can surface?"

Anderson said no. The Thatcher voice replied: "OK."

At other points in the tape, the voice said to be Thatcher dismisses the intensive police investigation: "They got zero."

The same voice later says: "Just remember, there are no problems and there won't be unless they trip over something and I got no intention of giving them anything to trip on."

The 112-seat courtroom was once again packed, with people lining up for hours for a chance to hear the case.

Thatcher's son Greg, who was on hand last Monday for the first day of the trial, was back for the sixth. Thatcher's mother, Peggy, widow of former Saskatchewan premier Ross Thatcher, sat with her grandson in the third row.

Thatcher, 46, dressed in a blue suede sports coat, spent much of the day hunched forward in his chair, watching Anderson.

The trial continues.

News-in-brief

PCs urged to release peace report

MONTREAL (CP)—The Very Rev. Lois Wilson, former moderator of the United Church of Canada, urged the Conservative government Monday to release Joe Clark's report on disarmament.

"People are asking what has happened to the task force on disarmament and I think it would be a great public service to release it," said Wilson, a director of the newly-formed Canadian Institute for International Peace and Security and a president of the Geneva-based World Council of Churches.

Clark defends Chretien

TROIS-RIVIERES, Que. (CP)—External Affairs Minister Joe Clark has defended his Liberal predecessor, saying Jean Chretien did nothing to impede Quebec Premier Rene Levesque's recent official visit to China.

In a letter printed Monday in the daily Le Nouvelliste, Clark said Levesque was temporarily prevented from having the official encounter he sought in Shanghai—during a tour of the Far East earlier this month—because Chinese government officials were unable to accommodate his schedule.

Levesque had claimed officials in the former Liberal government had refused him permission during the summer when plans for the Far East tour were being prepared. It was only through the efforts of the new Conservative government in September, said Levesque, that the visit to Shanghai was arranged.

GM strike causes metal layoffs

CAMBRIDGE, Ont. (CP)—The strike at General Motors of Canada Ltd., now into its sixth day, has had a ripple effect at a metal products company in Cambridge, Ont., as 73 workers received layoff notices today.

Pat Gagnon, personnel and industrial relations manager at Butler Metal Products, said 73 of about 400 hourly workers received the notices due to the GM strike. Twelve more will be laid off next week and as many as 40 others may follow if the strike continues.

Butler is a major supplier of metal stampings to the automotive giant in both Canada and the United States.

Alberta mourns Notley death

EDMONTON (CP)—Sorrowful members of the Alberta legislature, some choking back tears as they spoke, paid their respects to Opposition Leader Grant Notley in a 35-minute sitting Monday.

Sergeant-at-Arms Oscar Lacombe marched to Notley's desk, empty except for a Bible and a bouquet of white roses, and saluted the place Notley had occupied for 13 years.

More than a dozen members rose and remembered the man for what they described as his unflinching wit, enthusiasm, hard work and courtesy.

Bishop wants help for Pope deficit

OTTAWA (CP)—Catholics across the country may face a third national collection to help individual dioceses pay a total deficit as high as $5 million from Pope John Paul's Canadian visit.

John Sherlock, bishop for London, Ont. and president of the Canadian Conference of Catholic Bishops, told the bishops' annual plenary assembly Monday to consider possible solutions to the problem during meetings here this week.

Because the bishops meet only once a year, they would have to give the conference executive the power to call another national collection "as a solution or possible solution" to meet the deficit problem, Sherlock said.

Mulroney vacation still a secret

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Mulroney's office denied Monday a newspaper report that the prime minister was a vacation guest of Montreal industrialist Paul Desmarais during the last two weeks in Florida.

But Press Secretary Bill Fox refused to say who owned the private house which he said Mulroney rented for his vacation in Palm Beach.

Fox got entangled in a lengthy verbal tussle with reporters over the issue as they pressed him for details about Mulroney's holiday.

The press secretary denied a report last week that said Mulroney spent two weeks as a guest of Desmarais, chairman of Power Corp., who has played host to former prime minister Pierre Trudeau. Desmarais is considered a friend of Mulroney's.

Reagan, Mondale get in last digs

Walter Mondale, with 14 days left to catch up to Ronald Reagan, is depicting him as an uninformed, pass-the-buck U.S. president, while Reagan dismisses the challenger as having "no business" in the White House and talks confidently of victory.

The Democratic presidential nominee must make up perhaps one percentage point a day—or more—in public opinion polls before election day Nov. 6.

National polls in recent days have shown Reagan ahead by as few as nine and as many as 25 percentage points.

250 arrested in police raid

SEBOKENG, South Africa (Reuters)—Some 7,000 police and soldiers sealed off this black township early today and arrested more than 250 people in a clampdown on unrest, a government spokesman said.

The spokesman said the soldiers and police raided the township in the middle of the night and carried out house-to-house searches to curb unrest "fanned by revolutionary elements but... also exploited by criminal and intimidatory forces."

Battle rages over journalist jailing

PARIS (Reuters)—A diplomatic battle is intensifying over the fate of French television journalist Jacques Abouchar, sentenced to 18 years in jail in Kabul for illegally entering Afghanistan.

The French External Relations Ministry called in the Afghan charge d'affaires in Paris on Monday and demanded the journalist's immediate release.

It was the fourth time Abdullah Keshmand had been summoned in two weeks, but the ministry marked its growing anger by making public that this time the order came expressly from External Relations Minister Claude Cheysson.

Police search for kidnapped priest

WARSAW (Reuters)—Polish police have said they are intensifying a search for kidnapped priest and Solidarity supporter Jerzy Popieluszko who disappeared last Friday.

About 4,000 sympathizers of the cleric, a prominent anti-communist and supporter of the banned Solidarity free trade union, attended a Mass for his safe return last night at his church in Warsaw.

The Polish bishops issued a statement Monday expressing concern for his safety.

Jan Swiecynski, head of the investigation department of Warsaw police, said on television that a witness had come forward to say she had seen Popieluszko get out of a car in the capital the day after his abduction.

Israeli PM refuses U.S. offer

JERUSALEM (AP)—Israeli Prime Minister Shimon Peres says he is refusing "for the time being" what he claims was a U.S. offer to defer payment on $500 million in debts.

In a state-of-the-nation address Monday, Peres told parliament the offer of a 90-day deferment on war debts falling due this year was made earlier this month by U.S. State Secretary George Shultz.

Peres first announced the supposed Shultz offer last week, but U.S. officials denied any such offer had been made. Shultz said he had mentioned the idea of a payment deferral as a possibility.

Peres said the offer was made as a "safety net" to protect plunging foreign currency reserves while Israel begins an economic recovery plan to cut government spending and trim living standards.

Bishops meet Ireland officials

BELFAST (AP)—Four Roman Catholic bishops from the United States arrived in the Northern Ireland capital of Belfast on Monday to meet politicians, clergy and trade unionists on the second day of a fact-finding mission.

The visit, at the invitation of Irish bishops, began in Dublin, capital of the Irish republic, on Sunday and will end Thursday.

Leading the mission is Bishop James Malone of Youngstown, Ohio, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops.

Road signs feel the wrath as racists bring out spray paint cans

French-language wording was blacked off road signs with spray paint in Ayer's Cliff last week.

By Bobby Fisher

AYER'S CLIFF — One or more would-be Picassos vented their linguistic frustrations last week by damaging about 20 of this town's road signs, the brick walls of a local grocery store and two provincial government signs.

Residents awoke Thursday morning to find that a racist, failed artist or two had used a can of black spray paint to cover up French-language wording on most road signs and had scrawled across a provincial government sign near the municipality's sewage treatment plant on Tyler Street and painted the message 'English Rules' on another government sign near Bacon's Bay.

And both side walls of the Epicerie Batrie also felt the wrath of the unbalanced painter. One side was covered with the message 'Hallowe'en 84'.

Neither of the town's two other main stores — JB LeBaron Ltd. and Marché Tardif — were touched. Most French-speaking people in Ayer's Cliff shop at Epicerie Batrie while the majority of the English population buy at JB LeBaron. Marché Tardif is a épanneur-type store.

Municipal maintenance workers discovered the damage Thursday and filed a report with the town office.

The road signs, a municipal spokesman said Monday, are worth about $25 each. "A STOP sign costs about that much," the official said. No estimate of the total damage has yet been calculated.

HAS AN IDEA

Ayer's Cliff Mayor Jean-Paul Verpaelt said he "doesn't know" who is responsible for the vandalism, but that he's "got an idea" about who the person or persons may be.

Verpaelt was asked if he thought the sign-painting was the work of teenagers pulling an early Hallowe'en prank. "I've got an idea it might be some grown-up kids," he replied.

RECORD-PERRY BEATON

The provincial government felt the wrath of racists last week in Ayer's Cliff when a sign near the municipal sewage treatment plant was vandalized.

The mayor said no decision has been taken yet on whether or not the signs will be replaced or if an attempt will be made to clean the spray paint off them. "We haven't decided yet," Verpaelt said, adding that a move likely won't come for some time.

"It will be discussed at a council meeting and we won't hold one until next month after the (council) election," he said. "We won't be calling a special meeting for this."

Verpaelt, who is fluently bilingual, has been mayor of Ayer's Cliff since 1975. His term concludes next year.

There has never been any serious animosity between English- and French-speaking residents of Ayer's Cliff. In fact, townspeople often boast of the good atmosphere in the municipality and of how well the two cultures co-exist.

That's why the Mark of Zero blacking out French wording is puzzling to many residents. "I don't understand why anyone would do that," one said. "It must be somebody who thinks a tasteless joke is funny."

The Québec Police Force has patrolled Ayer's Cliff regularly since the municipality's one-man police force was dropped in the mid-1970s. Verpaelt said he hasn't contacted the QPF yet. "I don't think we could do much now anyway," the mayor said. "We've asked them for things bigger than this before and they couldn't do anything about it."

Opinion mixed on detectives' return to duty

Record News Services

SHERBROOKE — While the mayor again hailed the acquittal of two detectives in the killing of an innocent man in police raid last December, residents were divided Monday over the ruling.

A 12-member jury cleared Roger Dion and André Castonguay, both 41, on Saturday on all counts in the death of Quebec City carpetlayer Serge Beaudoin and wounding of his partner, Jean-Paul Beaumont, during a police raid on the Châtillon Motel in Rock Forest Dec. 23.

The defence had argued Dion and Castonguay acted in self-defence when they fired 21 shots through a motel room door believing the two men inside the room had killed Brink's guard Yvon Charland during a hold-up at the Pascal store in the Carrefour de l'Estrie shopping centre in Sherbrooke the previous day.

The acquittal was the topic of discussion Monday on radio shows and street corners in the city.

"You couldn't expect that they'd send policemen to prison," said resident Claire Letourneau.

"We knew the ending ahead of time," said laborer Paul Brulotte, adding that most of the people he's talked to disagree with the jury's verdict.

"No policeman has ever been found guilty in a case like this," said Brulotte. "It seems to me that they should at least have changed jobs."

GET BACK BADGES

On Monday, the two officers got back the weapons, badges and identification cards they surrendered after the shooting. They have been restricted to office duty for the past several months, but will return to the detective office next Monday. Sherbrooke police chief Maurice Houle said the pair will get this week off to "decompress" from the harrowing experience.

"Maybe lawyers will learn something from this," said Robert Hall. "The law is never simply facts. You have to put a case in front of the court."

"There was a lack of proof concerning intent," added Hall. "That's a fundamental part. They were unprepared, but not consciously negligent."

Pensioner Antonio Couture criticized the outcome.

"If someone like me had done the same thing, I'd get 50 years," he said.

"Police can do what they want and get the benefit of the doubt. If we do it, we get socked."

Mailman Serge Lussier said Sherbrooke "has a very good police force, so for me, this had to be a mistake."

Mayor Jean-Paul Pelletier, former chief of the city's 150-member police force and before that a career RCMP officer, broke his 10-month silence on the incident Saturday, then opened up again Monday, saying "justice has prevailed."

SURPRISED BY TONE

However, he said he was surprised at the condemnatory tone directed at the two men from some residents.

"The police department was affected by it," Pelletier said. "They found it very difficult to accept."

"If we treated criminals the way those policemen were treated, we'd probably be chastised in some way. Had we been in the Old West, they'd have been strung up from the highest tree."

"What happened was an accident," said Pelletier. "The loss of life was unfortunate, and I sympathize with the family. We will try to avoid such accidents in the future."

A third officer, Det. Michel Salvail, who was in command of the raid, still faces trial in connection with the shooting. Castonguay, Dion, the City of Sherbrooke, the police force and the Quebec Justice Ministry still face civil suits totalling $836,000 in connection with the case.

Pelletier said the city will make an approach of some kind to the Beaudoin family, but he wouldn't specify what or when it would be.

Cabinet minister to hear E.T. transportation woes

SHERBROOKE — Eastern Townships residents will have a chance to start cashing in their election chips Wednesday as the new cabinet minister responsible for a hot topic in the region pays a visit to the area to bone up on his ministry's "main files".

Conservative Benoit Bouchard, Minister of State for Transportation, will spend Wednesday afternoon in Sherbrooke, meeting local community-development groups and getting an earful about two transport issues: rail and air travel.

At the height of the federal election campaign in August, Tory leader Brian Mulroney repeatedly promised to restore the Via Rail passenger service The Atlantic Limited, which formerly ran from Montreal to Saint John, N.B., through Sherbrooke. In Sherbrooke, he was even more specific, promising to bring the Eastern Townships "the first-class passenger rail service it deserves — as good a service as in (then-Liberal transport minister) Lloyd Axworthy's riding."

Minister Bouchard will get a chance to hear about the good old days of the Atlantic Limited when he meets representatives of several groups. Among those invited to fill Bouchard's ear are the Eastern Townships regional development council (CRDE), the Sherbrooke-area Chamber of Commerce, the E.T. industrial-promotion association, and the tourist bureau.

As well, spokesmen for the Sherbrooke airport, located in East Angus, will be present to tell the minister why Sherbrooke should no longer be the only Canadian city of its size with no passenger-air service.

In a press release announcing the Bouchard visit, Sherbrooke Tory MP Jean Charest says the visit "will allow the people of the region to stress the important points which were brought up by the Conservative candidates during the recent election campaign."

Charest says he believes the visit

Benoit Bouchard... Will hear complaints illustrates the new government's will to "follow up on the urgency expressed" during the campaign on the Via and airport questions. He added that he is "more than ever determined to get an attentive ear for the region in Ottawa."

While cabinet minister Bouchard is finding out about the Eastern Townships, MP Charest will be returning Wednesday from his first cross-Canada tour as an elected official. The 26-year old lawyer was invited to Vancouver by Surrey-White Rock, North-Delta MP Benno Friesen, president of the Conservative national caucus in Ottawa.

Charest was a guest Thursday on a radio open-line program hosted by former B.C. Premier David Barrett. He also made a speech to members of Friesen's riding association.

Guatemalan works for rights of fellow countrywomen

SHERBROOKE (LL) — People in Canada should be more aware of the situation of women in foreign countries, says a representative of Ixquic, an organization working for the rights of women in Guatemala.

Rosa Maria Castillo has been touring Canada for the past 10 days telling people of the situation in that Central American country. She was in Sherbrooke Sunday and Monday as a guest of the Eastern Townships Committee for Central America and Carrefour de solidarité international.

Castillo told a group of about 40 people Sunday and members of the media Monday that although women in Guatemala had a very important role in the country's history they have no rights.

Castillo places much of the blame on the military government in the country which, she claims, distorts and hides the truth. "The government encourages the media to distort the truth. For example, over the past ten years there have been massacres by the army but the number of people killed was well concealed," she said.

Castillo also pointed out that women were not paid very well for their labor and were often taken advantage of because they will take small amounts of money to support their families.

RECORD-LOUISE LEGER

Rosa Maria Castillo of Guatemala stopped in Sherbrooke on the last day of her Canadian tour to speak on the situation in Guatemala, particularly the rights of women.

"Women make a large contribution to the economy but they get no recognition for it," she said. "They do not have any rights."

"Our goal is to let them know they should have rights and to educate people in other countries on the situation. You don't hear much about Guatemala in the news and we want to bring to light what goes on there and ultimately achieve international solidarity."

Judge sets example in community work lapse case

SWEETSBURG WARD (JM) — Judge Guy Genest served notice to scofflaws that they had better complete sentences of community work when he sentenced Suzanne Ruel in Sessions Court Friday to 60 days in jail.

Ruel, 29, of Cowansville, was working as a barmaid in the Bree Bar when QPF morality squad officers raided the place in August 1982. She subsequently pleaded guilty to charges of possession of restricted drugs with intent to traffic, and to having trafficked in marijuana, hashish and cocaine.

Ruel left work with Crown attorney Henry Keyserlingk's secretary she would not be able to appear on Friday. Keyserlingk telephoned her home and told the person who answered that Ruel would become the object of an arrest warrant if she failed to appear. Ruel eventually arrived late, after the issuing of a bench warrant, which was later revoked. She told the court she didn't want a lawyer and pleaded guilty to breach of probation.

EXTREME CLEMENCY

Keyserlingk reviewed the facts for Judge Genest and said considering the object gravity of the offences that Judge Claude Leveillé had shown extreme clemency handing down the maximum of 120 hours of community work accompanied with a three-year probation. "Despite an extension to May 31, 1984, she only completed 70 hours, had many unscheduled absences, failed to report to her probation officer, and provided no motives for the lapses," Keyserlingk explained. "Judge Leveillé must have considered her children when he handed down a sentence below the criteria established by the Appeals Court."

Ruel told the judge she worked irregular hours as a waitress and could give no valid explanation as to why she hadn't completed the last 50 hours. The judge determined members of her family could look after her children, aged 7 and 2, then suggested a discontinued term. Keyserlingk did not object. "There are no mitigating factors in her favor and the only solution is jail," Keyserlingk said without suggesting any period of imprisonment.

"It is regrettable but in your case there is no other remedy than jail," Genest said. He determined she was off duty from her job as a waitress on Sundays and Mondays, then ordered her to spend the next 60 days in jail on those days beginning at 10 a.m. Monday to 4 p.m. Tuesday, and placed her on probation for that period as well as adding another year to her probation once the jail term is completed. Ruel broke into sobs as she sat down waiting to be taken to sign the probation orders.

always been held behind closed doors.

Those opposed to the purchase cited the city's downtown master plan, which creates a link with Plateau Marquette. Those in favor saw it as a golden opportunity to purchase a major downtown structure for a song.

The decision has met with some mixed reaction. SIDAC King-Wellington president Charles Leblanc finds the present position of the council "contradictory."

"The council voted in favor of the master plan, and in favor of the question of a base price of about $300,000... But what about the grand principles we defended last night?" he asked. One year ago the council voted unanimously to accept (another) plan, to create a link with the Plateau Marquette. It's contradictory, to say the very least.

Added Leblanc: "I'm surprised and disappointed. The council has returned to its first position, and without consulting the milieu. Our fear now is that the transaction for the purchase is finished (at $1.3 million) and the master plan has been definitely shelved."

Council to offer $1.3M on Gabr Frontenac office

SHERBROOKE — After two hours of deliberation Monday night, Mayor Jean-Paul Pelletier broke a tie vote, paving the way for a new offer of $1.3 million less taxes and utilities due the city for the purchase of Saad Gabr's Frontenac Street offices.

On the first vote, eight of 12 councillors opposed an offer of $1.6 million including amounts owed the city in back taxes and utilities — approximately $300,000. Following an amendment by Antonio Pinard which put the offer at no more than $1.3 million, a second vote was taken and the council found itself deadlocked at six in favor, six against.

Pelletier cast his vote in favor of the $1.3 million offer, breaking the tie and sending him off to meet bankruptcy trustees in possession of the building.

There was much debate over the controversial office, which like many of the enigmatic North Hatley financier's properties has become part of a long list of half-finished plans and promises. This was also the first time the purchase was debated publicly; talks previous to Monday night have

Trains and planes from a government

A pair of tricky subjects will face Minister of State for Transport Benoit Bouchard when he visits here Wednesday. A member of Parliament for only a few weeks and a cabinet member for even fewer, Bouchard will illustrate two things to the people of the Eastern Townships: how serious the newly-powerful Progressive Conservatives really are about keeping their election promises (or more plainly, keeping their word); and how useful it is to be a junior member of a 40-person cabinet.

Bouchard is not minister of transport; that job falls to westerner Herb Mazankowski. But as minister of state for transport he has some responsibilities in that department, although little power. Wednesday Mr. Bouchard will face representatives of several Townships groups vitally interested in a couple of transport issues: the restoration of passenger rail service; and the introduction of regular air service to the region.

The train people will remind the minister that the Eastern Townships was one of the first areas of Canada where early development followed—and couldn't have happened without—dependable train service, to move both people and goods to and from the region and within it. They will remind him that over the century-and-a-half that has followed, rail service here declined gradually, from the rate of several trains a day in many spots to once a day and then once a week, except for Sherbrooke.

Then, the minister will be reminded, after the Canadian government had taken over passenger service at great public expense and formed the Crown corporation Via Rail to run the trains, even Sherbrooke was cut off. He will then also be reminded that his own boss minister Mr. Mazankowski led a cross-country task force while in opposition to look into the decline in rail service, and concluded that the Eastern Townships had been unfairly dropped from the Via timetables. Indeed, the Senate transportation committee decided that bringing the trains back to Sherbrooke is "an urgent priority" for Canada.

As well, the people will tell Mr. Bouchard how important dependable public transport is to the economic development of this huge country's outlying areas. Train service can mean jobs.

CLEARLY PROMISED

Finally, the minister will be reminded that in July and August this year, when the Tories were begging Canadians for their votes, his leader Brian Mulroney clearly promised, without beating around the bushes, without using hypothetical language or conditional tenses, without covering his mouth or looking away from the cameras, that a Conservative government would bring Sherbrooke back its train—a train which serves not only the Eastern Townships but a large part of Eastern Canada, from Montreal to the Atlantic coast.

The airport people will remind Mr. Bouchard that Sherbrooke is the only city of its size in Canada, probably in all North America, with no passenger air service. He will be reminded that many much smaller Canadian cities, including at least two provincial capitals, have several daily visits from Air Canada—another Crown corporation which was set up at great public expense to serve the outlying regions of the country.

The minister will also be reminded of the sorry history of the Sherbrooke airport, which seems to be a provincial airport paid for by Ottawa but somehow belonging to the city, on city land, but actually located in the next county, in East Angus.

Then he will be reminded again how important public transport is to the economic development of a region. Air service can mean jobs too. No flights, no bosses. No bosses, no jobs. No jobs, no candy—or anything else.

Meanwhile, Mr. Bouchard will be reminded, the Voyageur bus line (owned by Prime Minister Mulroney's sometime vacation crony Paul Desmarais and his giant Power Corporation), is busy cutting back its Sherbrooke service, the only remaining public-transport link between this city and the rest of civilization (if you don't count the bus to Lennoxville).

After the people of the region have finished bringing Mr. Bouchard up to date on their problems, the minister of state will have a couple of his own to consider.

First, will he go back to Ottawa to recommend that Sherbrooke get trains and planes from a government committed to cutting public expenses?

And second, whatever his recommendation, will it have any effect? After all, Mr. Bouchard is on the bottom rung of the tall cabinet ladder.

Nationalist veterans still loyal in remote village

By Angus MacSwan

HONG KONG (Reuters) — In a remote Hong Kong village, groups of old soldiers sit in the shade playing mahjong and dreaming of the days they fought Mao Tse-tung's communist army.

Rennie's Mill, nestled in a cove on the east side of the Kowloon Peninsula, has been their home since they fled across the border from China after the defeat of the Nationalist army in 1949.

Nationalist flags fly all year round in the forlorn anti-communist enclave. But this year the defiance is overshadowed by the Sino-British agreement that will see Hong Kong handed back to Peking in 1997.

"Hong Kong is part of China; it should go back to China—but not to the communists," said Law Chai-lan, a 63-year-old Nationalist Army veteran, as he sat beneath a portrait of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek in a Refugees Relief Committee hut.

"It should go when the Nationalists have back China," he said.

When will that be? "We don't know, but we still trust it will."

Law said he will stay in Hong Kong until 1997 and then move to Taiwan, where the Nationalist government regrouped after losing the mainland to the communists.

Since the agreement between China and Britain was announced in September, more than 1,000 people have come to Rennie's Mill to ask the committee how they could get to Taiwan, he said.

The village got its name from a Canadian wheat farmer who set up a flour mill there in the early 1900s.

His competitors ganged up against him and the mill went bust. Rennie hanged himself, thus also giving the place its Chinese name, Diaoqingling (Hanged Man's Hill).

For years, no Chinese would settle on the haunted hillside and the mill fell to ruin.

When thousands of defeated Nationalist soldiers, their families, and other Kuomintang supporters flooded into Hong Kong in 1949, the colonial administration set up what was intended to be a transit camp at Rennie's Mill.

MADE OF PAPER

Some 20,000 refugees were billeted in tents and huts made of oiled paper, recalled Shi Lee, 67, a former medical orderly in the Nationalist Army who arrived here in 1950.

"It was very crowded," he said. "Some people could not get food, no clothes, no shoes. They got work as coolies, in factories, and Rennie's Mill got started."

Today, several hundred old soldiers are whiling away the rest of their days here. "The old men die, the young men leave Rennie's Mill," said Shi.

"(Chinese leader) Deng Xiaoping's new policy is OK but he is old. We don't know if the policy will change. This is the problem. We cannot believe the communists."

Law agreed: "They have only been in power 35 years. That's not enough time to know if you can trust them. Their leaders change. One can say one thing and then he will be turned out and all he said will become untrue."

Rennie's Mill now is a ramshackle village where about 10,000 people live. Barbers cut hair outdoors, the stores sell dried seaweed and rice from barrels, and the occasional dead rat lies in its warren-like streets.

The language spoken here used to be Mandarin and the dialects of northern China, but today Cantonese has taken over.

Sentiments are shifting, too.

"Young people are growing up without the same hatred toward the communists," said Robert Graham, a doctor at the nearby Haven of Hope Hospital, which was set up by Protestant missionaries who also fled China after Mao's victory.

"They are more interested in materialism than politics," he said.

Letters Three refrigerators, one electric stove, one oil-burning...

Editor:

This is to thank you all for publishing my letter in The Record of Tuesday, October 16, 1984 in connection with selling my real estate. However, perhaps I should have mentioned that this offer includes all the furniture, three refrigerators, one electric stove, one oil burning stove, three bedrooms with beds, several bureaus, chairs and a lot of other stuff. I would not have sold my holding absolutely free of debt for three times 20,000 if there wasn't a place waiting for me out west, and there are oil containers too, with a capacity of 500 gallons, always full; 540 to be exact. But really, it's the neighbors, the wonderful French and English neighbors, that makes living worthwhile. So, please buy this old place place. How you choose to pay me $20,000, I will leave to The Record. If I were a wealthy man it would cost you nothing, but I just can't give it away.

When I get out west I will always keep in touch. Thank you for being so kind to me.

TED WRIGHT,
Dunham, Que.

P.S.—Please be advised that I know none of your staff personally, except for Michael McDevitt and his photographer, but I love you all.

P.S.—It has surprised me how few people in Quebec can obtain $20,000. Out west in Victoria, B.C. 100,000 is just peanuts.

P.S.—The honorable Ronald Reagan is ready to sacrifice us all on his altar of ignorance. It's all the things he doesn't know that frightens me. He is a worldwide IRA. This is 1984 and nobody in a high-up job takes the pale-face Bible literally, but this ignoramus does. He is doing his best to lower the world into his way of thinking. He is totally and utterly and absolutely uncooperative. He will never change. He has no more right to carry the fate of the world in his hands than I a lifetime atheist, has to be the Pope of Rome. And another thing, our Bible is just a very minor religion full of flaws, gaping errors, all unacceptable today. Canada is almost as bad as the United States of America. The old-timers that demanded the complete separation of church and state could foresee this present day danger.

About 300 acres worth

Editor:

I strangely resent some of the uncouth remarks made about a certain Mr. Ted Wright here in your newspaper. Why anyone can surely deflect that this here man is not a nit-wit, no siree, he says we should have blisters on our hands from picking our shovels and should help a cow to have a calf. What a nice guy!

And he wants that we should grow corn to keep our debts down. With my debts, I'm going to plant about 300 acres worth. Also,

I'm going right out tomorrow to buy a new broom to sweep clean for Brian. I ain't gonna let no cesspool of debt mess me up, no siree sir!

I'm gonna try to find a good Indian to run for premier of Quebec like Ted there said. This here man is for all good things, ya see, and he's against all things that are bad for you like Ronald Reagan and hard pore pornography.

Thank you for this space in your nice paper.

MARY JOHNSON,

Great machinegun post

Editor:

I was wondering if The Record "higher ups" were even considering buying Ted Wright's house?

Why does he feel you people need to grow broccoli, cabbage and the like?

Why does he feel the location is tremendous?

Why does he feel Michael McDevitt worthy to judge a "pig-in-a-poke"?

Well, if a move is being considered, I happen to know of a great machinegun post in North Korea...

Miniature NATO arms control unit a challenge

By Paul Taylor

BRUSSELS (Reuters) — Visitors to NATO headquarters looking for the arms control department are in for a surprise—it consists of just three men.

Although the North Atlantic Treaty Organization proclaims disarmament as one of its major goals, only three of the NATO secretariat's 1,300 civil servants work in the arms control section, a tiny sub-branch of the Division of Political Affairs.

To put that figure into another perspective, NATO employs the same number of people to clip newspapers.

Officials give differing explanations of how the anomaly arose, but they agree on its effect: it means the NATO secretary-general and his staff are ill-placed to give any impulse to western disarmament policy.

This presents a challenge for the new secretary-general, Lord Carrington, who intends to play an active role in promoting arms control as part of a more political and less military image of NATO.

"It's not going to be easy for Carrington to intervene effectively in arms control policy with virtually no staff working for him on arms control," one NATO official said.

Some officials said they believe the unit was deliberately kept small to ensure that the United States, rather than the alliance as a whole, was in charge of arms control policy.

The 16 NATO countries conduct two sets of talks collectively: the long-deadlocked Vienna negotiations with the Warsaw Pact on troop reductions in Central Europe and the Stockholm conference on confidence-building measures in Europe.

The Western position in both these negotiations is worked out by national experts that meet in Brussels under the chairmanship of NATO's arms control unit. That at least is the theory.

In practice, officials say, the United States plays a predominant role in determining NATO's stance and the allies and NATO staff have only limited influence.

OVERRIDE ALLIES

For example, the Reagan administration pushed through a change in the Western stance at the Vienna talks earlier this year despite the misgivings of some European allies and NATO's military commanders, officials said.

The allies and NATO staff have even less say in nuclear arms control, partly because the arms are American.

It took European leaders many months to persuade President Reagan to enter the now-defunct Geneva talks with the Soviet Union on medium-range nuclear missiles in 1981.

During the negotiations Washington did consult its allies frequently through a Special Consultative Group of national experts meeting at NATO headquarters.

But on the one occasion when a breakthrough seemed possible—an informal compromise sketched by the top U.S. and Soviet negotiators during a "walk in the woods" in June 1982—allied governments were kept in the dark until after both superpowers had rejected the formula, European officials said.

Helmut Schmidt, then West German chancellor, said later that he would have accepted the deal with little hesitation if he had known about it at the time.

DOESN'T CONSULT

On strategic arms talks, also now suspended, Washington "informs rather than consults" its allies, a NATO official said.

The chief U.S. negotiator, Edward Rony, visited alliance headquarters before and after each session but NATO countries had no voice in formulating the American position.

In the absence of a joint arms control think-tank, the most significant allied attempts to sway U.S. policy come in top-level bilateral contacts.

"How much the allies influence Washington depends largely on whether (West German Chancellor) Helmut Kohl or (British Prime Minister) Margaret Thatcher can catch Ronald Reagan's attention at the right moment," a NATO official said.

"At times it seems there is a deliberate effort to circumvent the NATO machinery on sensitive arms control issues to avoid involving countries such as Greece and Denmark who are regarded as less sound," he said.

An American defence analyst close to NATO said one obstacle to greater allied influence on arms control was the virtual U.S. monopoly on intelligence and technical analysis.

"If the Americans don't like an idea, they can produce reams of analysis papers, charts and slides showing why it's no good," he said. "The European official sits there with a few points written on the back of an envelope and his mind boggles."

While only three civilians on the NATO staff work full-time on disarmament, nine military officers are listed as working on arms control for the alliance's military committee.

Insiders say this group filters disarmament proposals rather than generating them. "They are there to control the arms controllers," one said.

Carrington's first months in office have been marked by a drive to shore up relations between the United States and Europe, recognizing that progress in East-West relations is unlikely until after November's U.S. elections.

Moscow's refusal this year to negotiate on most arms control issues took much of the pressure off NATO to come up with new ideas. But arms control in some form is likely to be back in business next year.

Norway confident NATO will back store

By Simon Haydon

OSLO (Reuters) — Norway, on NATO's northern flank, is confident the alliance will finance a scheme to gouge big chambers out of its Arctic mountains to store millions of dollars worth of weapons for use in a crisis.

The government envisages underground caverns packed with ammunition, guns, military transport and enough food to feed several armies in time of war.

NATO so far has balked at paying the costs of underground storage—$5.7 million out of $114 million being spent on the whole project to stock equipment for U.S., British, Canadian and Dutch troops who would be rushed to Norway in a crisis.

But Norway argues there is little point in storing strategic hardware in prefabricated buildings above ground that would be vulnerable to attack.

PREPARE PROPERLY

"I believe we have won the battle to prepare ourselves properly," Deputy Defence Minister Odomund Hammerstad said.

NATO officials in Brussels said there is a strong chance funding for the Norwegian project would be approved. But the money is not likely to come until late in the 1985-1990 cycle of the alliance's infrastructure fund, which defence ministers are expected to finalize in December.

Advance stocking of equipment for Allied reinforcements from abroad is necessary because Norway refuses to allow foreign troops to be permanently stationed on its soil.

Oslo's aim is not allowing foreign bases is to reduce tension with the Soviet Union, with which it shares a 200-kilometre border.

Regular shipments of equipment for Allied reinforcements have been made from the United States for the last three years, and most of it is stocked in warehouses near the central city of Trondheim.

STORE HOWITZERS

Defence Ministry officials said Norway has agreed to stock heavy gear for a U.S.

Marine amphibious brigade, including howitzers, bridging equipment, ammunition and trucks. Most of the stocked equipment for British, Canadian and Dutch reinforcements consists of vehicles.

Argument in NATO over the project is only over whether extra money should be spent on underground, rather than surface, shelters. NATO's European headquarters wanted Norway, rather than the alliance, to foot most of the bill.

"Norway wants to have its cake and eat it too," a British official said. "It won't allow us bases here and yet expects us to pay to keep equipment here and duplicate it at home."

Hammerstad said it is essential the weapons be stocked underground. "It would be ridiculous to store sophisticated guns and ammunition in the open."

In peacetime underground shelters would deter terrorists, while in wartime the mountains would shield equipment from everything but a direct nuclear strike, he said.

McIntosh apple still a favorite despite itself

CHAZY, N.Y. (AP)—The McIntosh apple has survived its own splotchy appearance, its sensitivity to bruises and nearly a century of scientific research to remain one of the favorite fruits of millions of North Americans.

The Canadian-created apple has retained its appeal largely because of its versatility—it is equally good fresh or cooked—and its unique, slightly tart, almost sweet flavor.

But in the more than 170 years since it was first produced by an Ontario farmer, the McIntosh has had to overcome problems ranging from its short harvest period to its red- and green-splotted appearance.

"Everyone wants an apple to be red or they want an apple to be green, but the don't want an apple to be red and green," says McIntosh grower Donald Green Jr. "Even when I'm taking a picture of my apples, I look for red ones."

Green is the owner of Chazy Orchards, which he says is the largest McIntosh orchard in the world. It is one of more than a thousand apple farms in New York state, where some seven billion bushels of McIntosh apples are harvested each year, making the area the world's leading producer of the variety.

Fifteen kilometres from the Canadian border on the western shore of Lake Champlain, Green's orchard contains 27,200 fruit-bearing McIntosh trees, some of them 50 years old. More are planted each year simply because the McIntosh is a survivor among apples.

The 56-year-old grower, who's been in the apple business about as long as he's worn his crew cut—some 35 years—can run off a long list of disadvantages to the McIntosh: it bruises easily, it costs more to pick and is probably the weakest apple when it comes to fighting the only fungus that affects the fruit, apple scab.

Green must pay the 150 Jamaicans he brings in every season and local pickers 70 cents per 40-pound box of apples picked, which he says is about 35 cents more than growers with other varieties pay.

"We can't just have people pulling the apples off the tree and throwing them in boxes. Our pickers have to be more careful."

HARVEST SHORT

And he also has just three weeks in October to get all of his apples picked, compared with some varieties, like the Cortland, which stay on the tree until December.

But Green says he has one very good reason to continue growing the McIntosh: "It's the only apple that'll grow up here."

Roger Way, professor emeritus of pomology at Cornell University in Ithaca, N.Y., agrees: "I don't think it's likely that any variety will replace the McIntosh as the most important apple in the state any time soon."

Way's comment means a lot. Cornell scientists at the State Agricultural Experiment Station in Geneva have been searching for a new and improved apple for 89 years.

Though the Cornell scientists have come up with a dozen different kinds of apples that have the McIntosh as a parent, including the highly regarded Empire, a cross between a McIntosh and a Red Delicious, planting of new McIntosh trees has steadily increased.

"People are devoted to the McIntosh," says Ralph Baldasaro, chief executive officer of the New York-New England Apple Institute in Westfield, Mass.

TASTE DIFFERS

"You can get the Mac in many forms. If you like a sharp taste and a crisp apple, you can look for one with more green on it, or you can let it sit and it becomes sweeter and less crunchy."

"It's also one of the most aromatic apples. The McIntosh apple excites your senses with its aroma as you eat it."

First produced in 1811 by John McIntosh in Dundela, Ont., the McIntosh slowly spread to surrounding areas.

A brass plaque, dedicated in 1913, still marks the place where the first McIntosh apple tree stood in Dundela, about halfway between Montreal and Toronto.

The McIntosh is the only apple tree that's able to make it through the harshest of winters and thrive in the cold nights during its late September to early October picking period, Green says.

"Those cool, frosty nights trap the natural plant sugars up into the apples; they don't flow back into the roots," Green says. "We think that gives our apples that little extra bit of flavor."

Chamber speech set

SHERBROOKE — The man who may hold more professional and volunteer directorships than anyone else his age in Canada will be speaking at the Sherbrooke Chamber of Commerce's regular dinner/speech Wednesday night.

Maurice Jodoin, 45, president and chief executive officer of General Trust of Canada, is on the board of Trust Général Inc., Sherbrooke Trust, Sodarc, Roynat, the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts, the National Drama School, the Orchestre des jeunes du Québec, the Montreal Chamber of Commerce and the Ecole des hautes études commerciales in Montreal.

Jodoin is also president and chief executive officer of Sterling Trust Corporation. He is a commissioned officer in the Canadian officer, and meditates for a half hour every day to keep everything in perspective.

Before his speech, entitled "New Realities", Jodoin is the guest of honor at cocktail party in his honor organized by Sherbrooke Trust, which is an affiliate of General Trust. It is part of the local trust company's 110th anniversary celebrations.

Maurice Jodoin

Cocktails start at 5 p.m. at Hotel Le Baron, followed by the dinner/speech at 6:30. Tickets are $20.

Long-term mortgage may soon make big comeback

TORONTO (CP)—The 30-year mortgage, a staple of the housing industry in the days before sky-high interest rates, could soon be back.

The longer terms may return because of a new security called mortgage-backed bonds. Although they are not available yet, financial companies and federal government officials have been busy meeting for months to develop them.

The bonds are common in the United States where they have been a big hit among homeowners and the investing public. However, no one knows whether they will catch on in Canada's $100-billion mortgage business.

"The size of the market may be quite different than in the States, but it's certainly something we're all interested in looking at," said Susan Dabarno, a vice-president of Canada Permanent Mortgage Corp. of Toronto, one of the participants in the group studying the securities.

Financial officials say the outlook for the longer-term mortgage is uncertain, mainly because homeowners may be reluctant to lock their loans in for long periods at current interest rates of about 13 per cent. If the cost of money were to fall, however, the situation could change.

Before long-term mortgages are available in Canada, financial institutions will be experimenting with the five-year period — the current limit under conventional financing. Terms beyond this will require slight changes to the federal Interest Act, the legislation governing the mechanics of consumer lending and loan disclosure.

Book dispels myth of unlimited fertile soil in Canada

Farm writer Garry Fairbairn throws a left jab with his new book and it should hit every Canadian right where it hurts — in the old breadbasket.

The book, Will the Bounty End?, features an empty shopping cart on the cover as a symbol of what could happen if Canada doesn't start taking better care of its agricultural land.

Fairbairn is quick to dispel the myth that Canada is blessed with endless rolling vistas of rich soil eager to produce salads and meat for city-dwellers.

He points out that although Canada is the second-largest country in the world, only a thin strip of land along the American border is suitable for farming.

Of all Canada's farmland, only an area the size of Nova Scotia is prime, and about one-third is within a couple of hours' drive from Toronto.

The land that produces vegetables to line supermarket shelves and grain for export to bring in much needed foreign currency is in danger, Fairbairn says.

CITIES THREATEN

It's slowly but steadily being paved over by creeping cities or eroded because of sloppy farming practices.

"There is a threat looming over agriculture that is far more than any supertanker oil spill could be; immeasurably more harmful than any pipeline disrupting caribou migrations," Fairbairn writes.

In the years since homesteaders first broke the Prairie sod, about half the life-giving organic matter in the topsoil has been used up.

Fairbairn, a former Canadian Press reporter who recently became managing editor of the Western Producer farm magazine, says Canadians for too long have taken for granted a fact that former agriculture minister Eugene Whelan was so fond of repeating: Canadians pay less to stuff their refrigerators and cram their cupboards than people in almost any other country.

For example, a 1980 study found that a resident of Ottawa had to work 8.5 hours to buy a shopping cart full of 21 common foods.

In Stockholm it took 13.5 hours, in Rome 15.5 hours, in Tokyo 26 hours. Only in Washington was food as inexpensive as in Ottawa.

IMPORTS WILL RISE

Fairbairn says Canadians are too rich to starve, but if the land is allowed to be lost or deteriorate, more and more food will have to be purchased on expensive world markets.

"The first challenge is to make farming economic, to provide the land's caretakers with the means and incentive to conserve one of the nation's most important resources."

The answer isn't just more subsidies but a comprehensive program to stabilize farmers' incomes, says Fairbairn.

"Without wild, unpredictable swings in their incomes, farmers will be able to plan confidently for sustainable long-term production and conservation practices."

The major problem with Fairbairn's book is that although it was intended as a warning to the public, it is too dry — also a major criticism of Fairbairn's last book, From Prairie Roots, which dealt with the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool.

Perhaps that stems from the fact Will the Bounty End? was commissioned by the Agricultural Institute of Canada, the national organization of farm scientists.

Some more opinions from the people closest to the problem, such as farmers, and some more detailed case studies of individual farm problems would have made its 160 pages more palatable food for thought.

But it's still a hearty meal well worth a chew.

Will the Bounty End?, by Garry Fairbairn. Published by Western Producer Prairie Books; 160 pages; $13.95.

Money for young farmers

While agricultural financing is being widely discussed in the agri-food community, the feasibility of young people going into farming is still a major topic of discussion.

The Quebec young farmers' federation (Fédération de la relève agricole du Québec, FRAQ), recently addressed this concern in Lévis during a study day on conditions facing young farmers.

The FRAQ believes it is still possible for young people to go into farming, but greater governmental help is needed to have viable operations. That is why a paper prepared by the organization, and examined by those attending the study day, calls on the various authorities concerned — notably the Office du crédit agricole and the Farm Credit Corporation — to implement policies which develop agriculture within the framework of the family farm.

The young farmers' federation also asked that all current policies be reviewed and modified to make it easier for young people to buy farms. In this respect, the federation asked the provincial government to raise long-term farm credit subsidy maximums from $150,000 to $200,000, for individuals, and from $200,000 to $300,000 for groups. It likewise suggested that the guaranteed maximums be increased from $200,000 to $300,000 for individual producers, and from $450,000 to $500,000 for a group of persons.

Moreover, the federation wants the respective governments to implement a long-term credit program for young producers with an escalating interest rate, to be two per cent the first year, and going up by one per cent each year thereafter during eight years, or until the escalating rate reaches the prevailing subsidized rate. The FRAQ wants the escalating rate to apply to loans between $150,000 and $250,000 and to have these amounts indexed every three years.

Participants likewise examined the $50,000/$8,000 question. In this respect, they asked for the following:

- That the possibility of choosing between the establishment subsidy (which they would like raised to $15,000) and the $50,000 no-interest loan for a five-year period be a permanent alternative;
- that the latter amount be granted on top of the maximum amounts normally subsidized;
- that the interest rebate apply to the last portion of the loan;
- and that the criteria for the $8,000 grant be relaxed, and that this sum be available to shareholders of partnerships composed of the farmer and his wife.

QUÉBEC ENUMERATION 84

October 22nd to 27th is revision-time.
It's in your interest to see to it.

In cities or towns of over 2000 people
For any change in the electoral list (entry, correction or striking off) a voter must go to the filing office nearest to home. Filing offices shall be open from October 22nd to 27th, between 8:00 a.m. and 10:00 p.m.
Applications for change will then be submitted to a Board of Revisors who have sole authority to accept or reject the change.

In rural areas or townships of 2000 people or less
Rural areas have no filing offices. Voters in rural polling subdivisions who wish to apply for a change in the electoral list (entry, correction or striking off) must call on the rural revisor for their polling subdivision. Revisors shall receive such applications from October 22nd to 27th, from 4:00 to 6:00 p.m. and from 7:00 to 9:00 p.m.
To find the name, address and telephone number of your rural revisor, please check the electoral list delivered to your home, or enquire from your local Returning Officer.
Rural revisors, too, have sole authority to accept or reject applications for change in the electoral lists for which they are responsible.

Canadian Club of the Yamaska Valley

Ann Medina will address the Canadian Club of the Yamaska Valley on Wednesday, November 7th at 2:00 p.m. at the Auberge des Carrefours in Cowansville.

Mrs. Medina began her career in journalism as founder of her high school newspaper, and her broadcasting career, as announcer on the radio station she began at Wellesley College. Graduating with a B.A. degree in Philosophy, she moved on to the University of Chicago where she obtained her M.A. in Philosophy in 1967. While in Chicago she worked as a stringer for the local ABC station during the summers of 1963 and 1964 respectively. Mrs. Medina also studied at Harvard and at the University of Edinburgh.

While working for the NBC in Cleveland Mrs. Medina did an investigative series on slum housing, winning two Emmies for outstanding individual achievement and best produced show. After travelling with the George McGovern campaign in 1972 she moved to ABC New York as Correspondent for The Evening News. ABC sent Ann in mid 1974 to Canada to cover a variety of stories and it was on that trip that she met her husband and decided to stay in Canada.

She joined CBC's Newsmagazine, first as a reporter and then in 1980, as executive producer. During her stay in Newsmagazine, Ann travelled extensively through the Middle East, Northern Ireland, Spain, Cyprus... including interviews with Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Archbishop Makarios.

She joined The Journal in May, 1981 and again has spent a great deal of time in the Middle East. She is one of the few reporters who has interviewed both Prime Minister Menachem Begin and PLO Chairman Yasser Arafat. Her extensive travels have put her in the midst of wars, riots, street gang fights and violence. She was in West Beirut under siege in the summer of 1982 and accompanied the Nicaraguan Sandinistas in an attack raid into the mountains. She has done stories from Northern Ireland, Israel, Egypt, Syria, Lebanon, Cyprus, the Basque region in Spain and Nicaragua.

Sherbrooke Hospital Ladies Auxiliary

The Annual meeting of the Sherbrooke Hospital Ladies Auxiliary was held on Monday, October 15, 1984, in the lounge of the Norton Annex.

Our guest speaker for the event was Mr. David MacKenzie, Director General. He reminded us that we must all give serious thought to the rapid increase in the cost of health services today. We must establish some criteria as to whom is to receive specialized care and in what order. Rationing is necessary, but as patients we expect the best possible care for ourselves and our families. How do we establish this criteria — what do we give to whom?

In Canada, the financing is in the hands of people not using the system. Perhaps we are inhibiting excellence and if returned to individuals we would spend it differently. When we need care, we do not want to be put on a waiting list. Have we really benefited by putting it totally under government care? Perhaps there is a place for a mixed economy of health care — partly financed by insurance companies. We should make our views known to those who are making the decisions.

In the States, 10% of the gross national product is spent on health care, while in Canada, only seven per cent. Americans are able to receive the best care immediately, if they are willing to pay for it. He was thanked by Madge Paulette for his interesting perspective on our health care system today.

A short business meeting preceded our guest speaker. Our new executive for the year was welcomed by Madge Paulette who will retain the office of President for another year. Joan Bishop is 1st Vice-President, Nancy Hunter, recording secretary and Helen Simms, corresponding secretary. Annual reports were presented by the various committee chairmen. The members were reminded that volunteers are still badly needed in various departments of the hospital. Another drugstore day in aid of the hospital is being planned for November at the Zako Pharmacy. A letter was read from Mrs. Kouri, Director of Nursing, expressing the urgent need for a second whirlpool bath and stretcher, possibly for the 4th floor. A decision was made to finance this project. Members were reminded of the next meeting to be held on November 26th.

Always reliable, always a favorite on cool fall days

I was just looking through a little booklet given to me several years ago called Old Fashioned Eating. It is made up of favorite all-time recipes of The First Presbyterian Church Women's Association Sidney, Ohio, celebrating their Sesquicentennial Year. I must confess I have never used one, but as each recipe bears the donor's name it would seem certain they are reliable and they sound good.

With cooler fall days perhaps most acceptable would be some oven dishes.

ACW meeting

WINDSOR — The October meeting of St. George's A.C.W. was held on Tuesday afternoon, October 9 at the home of Mrs. Agnes Oakley, with nine members and three guests present.

The president opened

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I am in my middle 50s, active, healthy, have a good job and enjoy life. My only problem is that my wife (of 30 years) is in a nursing home, the result of a head injury in a car accident. The doctors do not believe she will ever recover, nor do they have any idea how long she will live.

I have become quite close to a friend of ours whose husband died 15 years ago. We have dinner together every night and I take her to civic and social functions. You might say she fills in for my wife in every way. The woman is active in church affairs and is well thought of in the community. She says she loves me and will marry me when my wife dies.

We have discussed our relationship with our pastor. He did not discourage it since he is familiar with my wife's condition and knows the needs of a healthy male.

Do you see anything wrong in what we are doing? We expect a sensible Ann Landers answer. C.W. In Evansville, Ind.

Dear Evansville: Do these words sound familiar? "...in sickness and in health, for richer or poorer, forsaking all others, till death do us part." Read them carefully and you will find a "sensible Ann Landers answer."

MONTREAL (CP) — The fastest start of his eight-year career has earned Mike Bossy of New York Islanders the National Hockey League's first player of the week award, the league announced Monday. Bossy's 10 goals and 10 assists in six games helped New York Islanders to a 4-2 won-lost record for the period of Oct. 11-21.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Willie Stargell, Pittsburgh Pirates' all-time leader in home runs, runs batted in and extra-base hits, was named minor league hitting instructor Monday by Branch Rickey, the National League baseball's minor league director. Stargell has been a minor league advisor for the last two years. He retired in 1982 after 20 seasons with the team.

GENOA, Italy (AP) — A Czechoslovakian water polo team member has been reported missing since Saturday and police in this Italian Riviera resort believe he might have fled to seek political asylum. Police said they have no report that the player, identified as Roman Bakic, 25, has appeared before Italian authorities.

BRIGHTON, England (Reuters) — Brighton manager Chris Cattlin has reacted to his team's poor performance during the weekend in a manner unlikely to be followed by Britain's 91 other soccer bosses — he has fined himself a week's wages. Cattlin didn't disclose what he earns a week.

SEOUL (AFP) — A four-member Latin American boxing team, led by Peruvian manager Alvaro Torres and including Colombian boxer Joaquin Caraballo Flores, pleaded guilty as a public trial opened Monday to fraud charges for having staged a sham title bout here. Besides Torres and Caraballo, trainer Amancio Castro of Colombia and matchmaker Ernesto Gallardo of Mexico were also arrested last month after the unranked Caraballo had posed as world-ranking Alberto Castro in an International Boxing Federation flyweight title bout.

JOHANNESBURG (Reuters) — Yannick Noah of France, Andres Gomez of Ecuador and South African Johan Kriek confirmed their entry Monday in the South African Open tennis tournament which begins Nov. 19. Noah is currently ranked 11th in the world, while Gomez is the fifth-rated player in the world and Kriek is No. 10.

ATLANTA (AP) — Atlanta Braves' pitcher Pete Falcone retired Monday from major league baseball. The 31-year-old left-hander, who said during the 1984 season that he planned to quit at the end of the year, made it official during a meeting with Braves' general manager John Mullen. During a 10-year major league career that included stints with San Francisco, St. Louis and New York Mets, Falcone compiled a 70-90 record with a 4.07 earned-run average.

OTTAWA (CP) — Ian Millar of Perth, Ont., has been named Sports Federation of Canada athlete of the month for September after qualifying with two clear victories for the equestrian World Cup championships in April in Berlin. Millar took four first places at the $360,000 Spruce Meadows Masters, the richest show-jumping event in the world, just outside Calgary.

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Oakland A's pitcher Ray Burris demanded Monday that the team trade him, after the club refused to give him a long-term contract.

The A's last week agreed to exercise an option on Burris' contract to pay him $500,000 for the coming season, but the club refused to extend the pact two more years, as requested by the 34-year-old pitcher.

Traded by Montreal Expos last season, Burris had a 13-10 record and an ERA under 3.00 until the final month, when he finished at 3.15.

GREENWICH, Conn. (AP) — Professional tennis star Ivan Lendl suffered minor cuts to his face Monday afternoon when his Porsche skidded on wet leaves and struck a tree, police said.

The 24-year-old Czechoslovakian was given a ticket for "unsafe movement on a highway," which carries a fine of $40, said Sgt. Douglas Fischer.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Pirates pitcher John Candelaria has undergone surgery to remove a bone spur in his left elbow, the National League team says.

The surgery was performed last Friday by Dr. Paul Bauer and was termed successful by the orthopedist, team officials said Monday. Bauer also operated on Candelaria in 1981 to repair a torn bicep muscle and nerve damage.

MONTREAL (CP) — Mario Tremblay of Montreal Canadiens will be sidelined for a week after suffering a groin injury in practice. Tremblay, a right winger, has played three of Montreal's five games this season and had one assist. Tremblay will miss the Canadiens game Tuesday in Quebec City against the Nordiques, Buffalo Sabres Thursday and the Pittsburgh Penguins on Saturday.

Browns give coach Rutigliano his walking papers

CLEVELAND (AP) — This was one of the more polite firings in pro football history.

"I've asked my friend and associate, Sam Rutigliano, to step aside as head coach of the Cleveland Browns," Browns' owner Art Modell said Monday, as he announced the promotion of defensive co-ordinator Marty Schottenheimer to head coach.

Despite the Browns' 1-7 record following Sunday's 12-9 loss to Cincinnati Bengals and Rutigliano's career record of 47-50, Modell said he agonized over the decision to fire Rutigliano.

"Sam Rutigliano represents what I consider to be quality, integrity and character," said Modell. "There are very few like him in pro sports today."

Rutigliano, 52, a vice president of the team, has a contract that runs through 1988. Modell said Rutigliano was welcome to remain with the Browns' front office, but Rutigliano said he will wait until January to decide about his future.

"I'm a football coach," Rutigliano said. "I've been a football coach all my life and that's what I'd like to do."

Schottenheimer, 41, in his fifth year with the Browns, has transformed the Browns' once-weak defence into the top-rated unit in the American Football Conference and the second-rated overall in the NFL.

Schottenheimer, previously a defensive coach with Detroit Lions and New York Giants, was given a contract running through 1986.

"As I perceive it, this is fresh start. We've got to get this organization back to winning ways," said Schottenheimer. "I wanted to become a head coach in the National Football League, but I'm sorry it had to happen this way."

Rutigliano, the fifth coach in Browns' history, replaced Forrest Gregg after the 1977 season.

Two more Cubs become free agents

NEW YORK (AP) — Pitchers Dennis Eckersley and Tim Lincecum of Chicago Cubs were among seven players who filed for free agency Monday, the Major League Players Association said.

That brought the number of free-agent pitchers to four for the Cubs and the total number of declared free agents to 37. Rick Sutcliffe, the ace of the Cubs staff, and Rick Reuschel filed for free agency last week.

The free-agent re-entry draft will be held in New York on Nov. 8. The deadline for filing for free agency is midnight next Monday night. Clubs have until Nov. 5 to try to re-sign their baseball players.

Also among those declaring free agency Monday were two members of California Angels, pitcher Craig Swan and infielder-outfielder Derrel Thomas. The rest of the latest free agents were pinch-hitter Benny Ayala of Baltimore Orioles, pitcher Rudy May of New York Yankees and outfielder Gene Richards of San Francisco Giants.

Eckersley, a right-hander, had a 10-8 record and 3.03 earned-run average after being traded to the Cubs from Boston Red Sox last season. He pitched 160 1-3 innings. Stoddard had seven saves, a 10-6 record and 3.82 ERA in 92 innings with the Cubs.

Swan was released by New York Mets early last season but pitched only five innings for the Angels with assorted injuries. Thomas was acquired last season from Montreal Expos and batted .138 in only 29 at-bats with the Angels.

Ayala, used primarily as a pinch-hitter and part-time designated hitter by the Orioles, hit .212 with four homers in 118 at-bats. May, a left-hander, did not pitch at all this year for the Yankees with a back injury. Richards hit .252 in 135 at-bats for the Giants.

'Hacked'-up Dickerson carries Rams over Falcons

ATLANTA (AP) — Eric Dickerson was fuming.

"They really hacked me off," the Los Angeles running back said of the Atlanta Falcons' defenders after helping the Rams to a 24-10 victory in the only National Football League game Monday night. "They have no class."

Dickerson, who ran for 142 yards on 25 carries, including a 10-yard touchdown run, charged the Falcons with hitting late on numerous occasions and was particularly incensed at Atlanta defensive back Tom Pridemore, for an alleged tardy hit on only his second carry of the night.

"It was No. 27, I don't know his name. I think he wanted to do a head stand or a hand stand on my back after I had been down what seemed like five minutes. It was right there on the sideline and a referee was right there and said he didn't see it. I think somebody needs glasses."

He said that wasn't the only cheap shot, but "that's the way they play."

The six-foot-three, 220-pound speedster didn't let it bother his performance, scoring the Rams' first touchdown on his 10-yard sweep after only 1:03 of the second quarter before letting Henry Ellard do the rest.

CATCHES TD PASS Ellard, who helped set up Dickerson's score with a 29-yard punt return, caught a nine-yard TD pass from quarterback Jeff Kemp only 1:08 later, then closed out the 21-point second quarter with an explosive 69-yard score on a punt return with 39 seconds left before intermission.

Mike Lansford ended out the Rams' scoring with an 18-yard field goal in the fourth period.

The Falcons could only manage a 39-yard field goal from Mick Luckhurst in the second quarter and scored in the closing minute on an 18-yard pass from Steve Bartkowski to Stacey Bailey.

Ellard, a second-year player from Fresno State, who suffered a bruised thigh and sat out the second half, said his punt return TD "wasn't the end of the game" for the Falcons "but, it probably was a big letdown."

The Rams have won four of five games for a 5-3 record.

The Falcons managed only 217 yards against the Rams and dropped to 3-5.

and the strength in a division can be turned around."

Carrying 23 players goes against the grain for Winnipeg head coach Barry Long. Even a minimum of 20 players is too many for the Jets bench boss.

One of these days, he says, he might play only 13 players — three forward lines, four defence-men and a goaltender.

"Boston can get away with it, dressing 20 but playing only 13," Long says. "We should be able to do the same."

Two mainstays of Philadelphia Flyers when they won the Stanley Cup in 1974 and 1975, centre Rick MacLeish and defenceman Joe Watson, have a new role in the operation of the National Hockey League club.

They're part-time salesmen of season tickets for the team, helping prospective purchasers to select best available seats in their price range.

It wasn't all that long ago that season tickets were impossible to purchase at the Spectrum.

Mario Lemieux, last spring's top draft choice of Pittsburgh Penguins, is the latest French-

Oilers' power not cut by efficiency

Defenceman Kevin Lowe says Edmonton Oilers are concentrating on defence this season because "we've got nothing left to prove scoring goals."

The Oilers, defending Stanley Cup champions and the only team in National Hockey League history to score more than 400 goals in a season, have allowed 20 goals in seven games so far this year.

However, they've scored 43 goals and have a 6-0-1 record, so their scoring power hasn't suffered.

At this juncture, all 21 NHL clubs have retained their first-round selections in the 1985 draft — a rarity indeed. In the past, several weak teams usually had traded their top picks to strong clubs long before this.

"The feelers from other teams about our first-round pick have started already," said one general manager of a lower-placed club.

"I've had calls from a couple of GMs, just testing the water to see if we had any plans at all about trading our first-rounder."

Jimmy Devellano of Detroit Red Wings is one general manager who strongly opposes the trading of draft picks, saying if all teams retain their choices, competition will be upgraded quickly in the National Hockey League.

"If the teams at the bottom hang on to their draft picks and use them wisely, they'll force the top teams like New York Islanders and Edmonton Oilers to draft 19th or 21st," he said.

"Do that for four or five years

Unity Fifty-plus Club holds regular meeting

AYER'S CLIFF — The Club held their regular meeting on Tuesday Oct. 2nd with a good attendance of members and also welcomed the Senior Club from Coaticook as their guests for a casserole dinner. Total attendance was 87. The hall looked attractive with vases of fall flowers on the tables and on the piano.

At 1 p.m. the dinner was served buffet style, consisting of many delectable casseroles, coleslaw, jellied salads, potato salad, french bread, pickles, etc. Desserts followed of apple and squash pies, squares, cookies, tea and coffee. It was a time of good fellowship which was enjoyed by all. Grace was said before the meal by Gladys Holmes.

Later on, the tables were cleared away, and several were busy in the kitchen washing dishes. The gentlemen rolled the tablecloths, and soon all was tidy again.

Everyone was made welcome by the President Phil Davidson who had several cards circulated around to be signed and sent to those in hospital and ill at home. Final arrangements were made for a bus trip on the 4th through Bolton Pass to Knowlton, Cowansville and Granby, where a stop was made for dinner and a bit of shopping.

Several games of bingo were played later in the afternoon, which is always fun, with many of the guests being lucky winners. Two spot prizes were also won at the dinner hour by Olive Parker, cup and saucer, and plate by Marguerite Luce.

The weather was perfect and I am sure everyone had enjoyed the time together. After the bingo games, tea, coffee and sweets were served and a social time enjoyed.

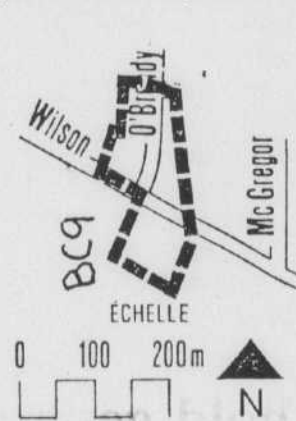

On Oct. 10 ten members from Ayer's Cliff Club joined the members from the Coaticook Club on a bus trip which they had chartered for a trip through parts of N.H. where among other stops they visited "LuckKnow" a large estate in the Ossipee Mountains and toured th "Castle in the Clouds", a beautiful spot. Coming home the bus stopped in Colebrook, where all enjoyed a good dinner. A beautiful happy day for all.

Public Notice

To the property owners who are entered on the valuation roll in force in the Ville de Sherbrooke on October 1st, 1984 with respect to an immovable situated in zone BC9 as described below and to the tenants of immovables situated in said zone and registered on the electoral list revised on October 11th, 1984.

is hereby given by the undersigned, City Clerk, that at a regular meeting held on October 1st, 1984 the Municipal Council of the Ville de Sherbrooke has adopted by-law No. 2987 amending zoning by-law No. 1071 and modifying the zoning in zone BC9 of the City so as to permit secondary commercial establishments in zone BC9. Zone BC9 is bounded as follows as it appears on the plan annexed to by-law No. 1071, extract of which is reproduced in the present notice:

that the property owners and tenants mentioned in the first paragraph who were of full age and Canadian Citizens on October 1st, 1984 in the case of physical persons, or who will have satisfied within the prescribed delay to the requirements of articles 385 of the Cities and Towns Act in the case of corporations, commercial partnerships or associations, can request that by-law No. 2987 be submitted to a secret poll according to articles 385 to 396 of said Cities and Towns Act;

that this request must be made by way of the registration procedure provided for in articles 370 to 384 of the Cities and Towns Act and that in conformity thereof all property owners and tenants qualified to vote on by-law No. 2987 will have access to a register made available to them at the City Clerk's Office, 145 Wellington Street North, from 09:00 hours to 19:00 hours, on October 30th and 31st, 1984;

that the number of signatures required in order that by-law No. 2987 be submitted to a secret poll is 7 persons and that in the absence of this number, by-law No. 2987 will be deemed to have been approved by the persons qualified to vote; that all who are qualified to vote can consult by-law No. 2987 at the City Clerk's Office during the regular office hours and during the registration hours; that the result of the present consultation by registration will be announced on October 31st, 1984 at 19:00 hours, in the City Council Room, at the City Hall, 145 Wellington Street North, Sherbrooke.

GIVEN AT SHERBROOKE, this 23rd day of October, 1984.

Brome Legion Branch No. 23 November calendar

KNOWLTON — The annual Remembrance Day Banquet will be held as usual in the Legion Hall, Knowlton, on Saturday, November 10 commencing at 6:30 p.m. A limited number of tickets are available to all members of the Branch and of course to the "Legion Friends" who support them throughout the year in their endeavours. The tickets are $8.00 each, or $15.00 per couple. These are available from the secretary, Mrs. Brian Badger at 243-5162. Entertainment for the evening will be provided by the Yamaska Valley Barbershoppers.

On Sunday, November 11, the annual Remembrance Day Service will be held in the Knowlton United Church, commencing at 11 a.m., the Reverend Peter Hartgerink officiating. Legion members are asked to form up at the Metro parking lot at 10:30 a.m., uniforms and medals where possible. All veterans are cordially invited to parade with them whether Legion members or not.

At 3:00 p.m. the annual Cenotaph Service will be held on the Academy School grounds. All veterans, whether Legion members or not are asked to form up at the junction of Victoria Street and Lakeside Road (opposite the City Hall) to parade from there to the school grounds. This parade will be led by Bishop's College School Band and the Cadet Corps of Lennoxville. All those who do not feel they can march this distance will meet them at the Cenotaph on the school grounds. The local troop of Scouts, Cubs, Guides and Brownies are cordially invited to parade with them also.

The annual poppy Campaign will be underway commencing November 1st, under the direction of the secretary, Mrs. Badger. The annual general meeting of the Branch will be held November 21 at 7:30 p.m. in the Legion Hall.

Border Curling Club ladies hold general meeting

BEEBE (IH)—A general meeting of the Border Curling Club Ladies was held in the Club House the evening of October 15. The Ladies president, Jackie Cass called the meeting to order and welcomed the good number attending.

She introduced her executive with Nancy Denney, co-president, Judy Philip and Diane Lageux, first and second vice-presidents, Rita Cloutier, treasurer and Mary Loiselle, secretary.

Mrs. Loiselle read the minutes from the April general meeting and the two executive ones held on September 8th and October 1st that brought everyone up to date on plans for another season of curling and social events.

Dorothy Jackson will head a committee to take inventory of the kitchen items and purchase more to make up table settings for 100 persons. All ladies were invited to donate a dish towel to replenish the low supply.

Sharon Camber is Match chairperson and said a Friendly evening will start off the new season, the date to be announced after the ice is ready. The ice-making machine is now operating so it should be ready in early November. Janet Cass and Jean Camber will assist Sharon on this important committee.

Anne Denney is chairlady for the Bonspiel dinners and has a committee for the opening 'spiel in November, again, date to be announced.

Georgette Stratton will convene the lunches for the outside bonspiels. Carol Woodward and Diane Lageux are representatives to CLCA, and it was voted the Border Club will again take membership as there are several interesting competitions for active curlers.

Arlene Probyn will choose her own committee for decor in the Club House; Nancy Denney and Judy Philip will be in charge of a special money raising project and Priscilla Fitch will choose her committee to up-date the Ladies by-laws that will be voted upon at a later date.

New members, either active or social are welcome and the new curlers will be given an opportunity to "try curling" at the beginning of the season. Anyone wishing to join the club should contact one of the executive or club members.

Lower Windsor Ladies Aid holds regular meeting

WINDSOR — Lower Windsor Ladies Aid held their October meeting on Thursday afternoon, Oct. 11 at the home of Alison Watson. Twelve members and one guest were present. Winnie Paterson, chaired the meeting as our president has recently been hospitalized.

The meeting opened with the Lord's Prayer, followed by the roll call, minutes of the last meeting, and financial report. Correspondence included a letter of thanks from the Wales Home Auxiliary, a letter from the Ladies Dept. of the Richmond Fair, a thank-you from a recent bride and an acknowledgment for a memorial donation.

A motion was made to continue the Fair prizes as they are. Cheques will be going out to this year's winners shortly. They were Marjorie Dobb, Karen Banfill and Bruce Banfill.

Invitations were given out for the forthcoming 125th Anniversary of St. Andrew's Church. This group will purchase cheese to help with the refreshments.

Plans were finalized for the sale coming up on Saturday evening, Nov. 3rd. The usual table of articles priced to sell will be featured, as well as the regular table of home baking, hand knits, jams, jellies, etc. Each member to furnish food for lunch.

A card party was planned for Nov. 17. Each member to bring an article for a grocery box to the next meeting. The names of Noella and Olive were drawn to donate for next month's auction.

A drawing was held on a chose of articles from the sales table. Winners were Vera and Alison. The remaining articles were sold by auction with Winnie Paterson acting as auctioneer.

At the close of the afternoon, delicious refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by her daughter Cathy.

Catholic women's League meets at Magog

The regular monthly meeting of St. Mary's Council, Catholic Women's League of Magog, took place on Tuesday, Oct. 9 at 7:30 p.m. in St. Anne's Hall. The meeting opened with the League prayers and Rosary with special thoughts of two members who have passed away since the spring meeting, Teresa McClements who died in May and Mary Noiseux who died just two weeks ago. Also remembered were the husband of one member, the mother-in-law of another and Mildred and Ena Donigan who have been ill for some time.

The spiritual reading was done by Vice-President, June Boudreau...it was on the Thanksgiving theme and very appropriate for the time.

In the absence of the recording secretary, the minutes were not read. Treasurer Anna Buck reported a balance of $334.01 but there were some outstanding bills to be deducted. Corresponding secretary Ruth Pott read thank you notes and a letter from the Townshippers Assn. It was decided to invite Lorie Curtis to our November meeting for a talk on health and social services available in English.

The Hospital Convent reported 15 visits to the hospital and 55 to shut ins. Stamps were turned in for the Missions and Sybil Gauvin reported a Mass will be said for Veterans on Remembrance Day, Nov. 11. Masses will also be said for Mrs. McClements and Mrs.

Noiseux.

It was moved by Ruth Pott and seconded by Dorothy Langlois that the rule of ballot be waived and the present slate of officers be elected again for the coming year. Carried.

A White Elephant Sale is planned for Thursday, October 25, at 1:30 p.m. in the basement of St. Patrick's Church. Anyone who wishes to donate articles may bring them after noon on this day and everyone is cordially invited to come in and look around.

Mrs. Jennie Hogan was appointed to notify members of meetings and other activities for the coming year. A Bake Sale and Tea is tentatively scheduled for Sat. Nov. 24th but plans were not finalized. Mrs. Marcelle Forêt will again be in charge of publicity for various events.

After the meeting, which closed with League prayers, lunch was served by the hostesses Dorothy Langlois and Sybil Gauvin.

A pass tells its own story

By James Jacoby

Some of our modern expert partnerships claim to know how to bid hands with 7-5 distribution after an opening bid of one no-trump. I won't argue with them. The diagrammed bidding is also effective. Sometimes when you're off two aces, the defense fails to take them against such uncluttered auctions. That is not today's problem.

South played six hearts at a North American championship some years ago. There was a presumption that most pairs would reach slam, so, as always at duplicate, a possible over-trick was important. South could try leading the heart queen and, if West did not cover, perhaps assume West did not have the king. That approach would not work. No defender looking at the ace of hearts in dummy would assume less than Q-J six times in declarer's hand after the dramatic jump to slam.

Declarer did better. At trick two he led the king of diamonds. When East played low, he ruffed and played a heart to the ace, dropping the singleton king. South wasn't peeking, but he was listening — to the bidding. West was the dealer and had passed. He held the K-Q of spades and surely the diamond ace since East had not covered the king. If West also had the heart king, he would have opened the bidding, so declarer's only chance for an over-trick was to play East for the singleton king.

Philathea Unit UCW holds regular meeting

LENNOXVILLE — The Philathea Unit of the Lennoxville United Church Women held their October meeting in the Douglas Hall parlor. Miss Edna Davidson, leader, was in the chair and opened the meeting with the Purpose and members responded to the roll call by repeating a verse from the Bible containing the word Thanksgiving.

Miss Davidson read an article on Thanksgiving showing this a time to give thanks to God as even nature gives thanks in its own way. The animals and all humans should count their blessings and thank God. This was followed by a Thanksgiving prayer.

Mrs. Lyman Rothney, secretary, read the minutes and noted the up-coming U.C.W. Bazaar would be held November 17 in the Scott Hall. Members were solicited for food for it and reminded to bring decorated baskets to the next meeting for Christmas cheer.

Members regretted to hear that Mrs. MacRae, a member who has been ill is now moving to a Rest Home in Frankford, Ont. Mrs. Mildred Robinson invited members to her home to bid Mrs. MacRae farewell as she will be her guest before leaving.

This concluded the meeting and members repeated the Mizpah Benediction.

A successful white elephant sale followed, and refreshments were served by Mrs. Arlene Card and Mrs. Warren Ross, replacing her mother Mrs. Wallace.

HAVE YOU EVER THOUGHT OF REFORESTING?
WE HAVE SUBSIDIES FOR YOU

THE EASTERN TOWNSHIPS WOOD PRODUCERS SYNDICATE

The Eastern Townships Wood Producers Syndicate has the pleasure to inform woodlot owners that its reforestation programs have been modified in order to include subsidies for drainage.

In this way, financial grants are awarded to owners desiring individual technical assistance to realize:

- application of weed-killers
- site preparation, mechanically or otherwise
- drainage
- etc.

These subsidies vary depending on the type of site preparation best suited to your woodlot and your future plantation.

Our forest engineers and technicians will be happy to visit your woodlot, with you, following a call on your part.

This program is also offered to municipalities, villages, or other organisms desiring to reforest certain sites.

For further information, without any obligation on your part, please contact:

Mr. Claude Chabot, Inf. I. M. Env.
Tel.: (819) 567-8905 (Rock Forest) or Miss Luce Cardinal, tech. I.
Tel.: (819) 888-2642 (La Patrie)

These programs are available on a first come, first served basis!

Women's Institute members hold regular meeting

DUNHAM — The meeting of Dunham Women's Institute took place at the home of Mrs. Jack Wilkinson at Lake Selby, on October 3.

Our Motto— a nation's health is a nation's wealth.

The Roll call was name one thing pertaining to health for which you are thankful.

The Mary Stewart Collect was recited, Salute to the Flag also, and the W.I. hymn sung.

Most of our members were very thankful for good health, but one members stated she was grateful for modern medicine. Other reasons given were: old illnesses almost eliminated; blood pressure pills; failure of birth control pills; others were able to get about and attend meetings in spite of ailments; elastic stockings, and the writer is surely grateful for baking soda. There was laughter and momentary shock at some of the responses.

The minutes were read by Christine McLaughlin.

Pearle Yates was unable to attend, owing to the death of her mother in Ontario.

Approximately 25 members were present at our potluck dinner. There were many delicious casseroles, salads, desserts etc. We certainly were well fed.

Barbara Harvey gave the report on the Missisquoi County Semi-annual meeting in September. There were 35 present at Cowansville United.

On November 29 there will be a Food Sale at the Shopping Centre.

June 25, 1985, will be Federated Women's Institute Convention in London, Ontario. 27 delegates are permitted to attend.

We are asked to contribute $1.00 per member, for two years, to cover expenses for the special anniversary fund (provincial). Cheques are to be made out to the Quebec Women's Institute Anniversary Fund, to be celebrated in the later fall of 1986.

While in New Brunswick this summer, Mrs. Harvey had the opportunity to meet Conrad Dube, the cyclist, who had polio in the 50's, and who has been travelling in 81 countries. Mrs. Harvey was very impressed with this gentleman's ambition and persistence.

For World Food Day, it was approved that a donation of apples would be made to one of our local institutions.

We shall hold another Silent Auction for the benefit of Unicef at the next meeting. Members are all asked to donate something.

The QWI president's letter mentioned the competition objectives; an essay competition to all children. Needlepoint scenery designs, with all types of stitches demanded.

Past President's Essay Competition entitled Water for a Thirsty World, or, My Dream of Peace; to be in personal handwriting, one side of page only. Not less than 250, and not more than 1000 words. Competitors must give date of birth, age, address and name of school through which contact was made. This to be due for 1985.

The anniversary of 75 years will be celebrated in 1986.

Mrs. Harvey suggested that the children be informed of this Essay Competition, to be approached, so that they can have the opportunity to enter. It was decided that Beverley Wilkinson would approach the Principal of the School.

We were informed that the WI pins would not be available for about two months.

The Plowman's Association Match on Oct. 20 at David Realffe's, Stanbridge Ridge Road, Stanbridge East. Dunham Women's Institute are donating $25.00 towards this event.

November 22, 23, 24 Book Sale at Heroes Memorial morning, evening, all sorts of books for adults and children.

Margaret Ellis reported on the Apple Pie Festival at the Museum, which was very well organized. The Barbershop Quartette sang at 4 p.m. This year there were plenty of pies for the attendance recorded. Miss Barbara McGibbon was in charge.

Agriculture convenor Barbara Harvey read a review from the Family Herald 1961, Seven Days to Better Living. It was a story about Mrs. Townsend taking a boy to Agriculture School. Because the school was empty during one summer, someone organized a holiday place for farm wives; during which time they would have a rest, attend lectures, mingle with other ladies. Other programs were offered. Talks on Consumer Affairs were given. A baby sitting service was provided. Automobile lessons were available. This was at Olds, Alberta.

Betty Wilkinson read a poem on Trees, relating to the four seasons.

Shirley Vaughan, Education convenor told us about the strike in the Sherbrooke Science Computer Building. As a renovation is taking place, it is hindering the college system and preventing students from doing their work. The employees were complaining about job mobility, contracts, salaries etc.

Lucy Staton Health convenor was in charge of the program. She said as many references to health had been made earlier, she did not consider it necessary for her to make any further statements.

Ruby Shgerrerr read about the Apple Pie

Oven at Great Lakes' Farms. Diane O'Shea is especially promoting the Apple Pie Day, as a matter of nutrition, and making all sorts of menus featuring apples.

We heard an account from Mrs. Ruth Fennor of B.C. who was responsible for organizing the A.C.W.W. conference in British Columbia.

Mrs. Clark crocheted a beautiful yellow, orange, white and brown afghan earlier this year, and tickets on it will be drawn at the Christmas meeting.

We closed with the WI Grace. The next meeting will be at the home of Margaret Ellis, and the hostesses will be Alyce Farnam and Lucy Staton.

AYER'S CLIFF — The Ayer's Cliff Branch of the W.I. met at Maple Manor Rest Home for a part of their meeting on Friday, Oct. 5, where Mrs. Louise Robinson is now convalescing after being a heart patient for several days at the Sherbrooke Hospital. She was unable to come to the meeting so the meeting came to her. Twelve members answered the roll calls and seated repeated the Collect and sang two verses of the Ode.

The secretary Mrs. Lord read the minutes of the previous meeting also a full report on the School Fair dinner and booth prepared by Mrs. Robinson and the regular report. The finances which were very low are built up again to keep up our obligations and do other welfare work. This was very encouraging for Louise who has always worked very hard at these projects.

Following this part of the meeting, all adjourned to the United Church Hall to complete the meeting. It was passed in our Branch to continue to buy seeds for the School Fair as we feel it is a help to the children. A collection was taken for Unicef and also a cross is to be purchased for Armistice.

It was also noted that Lana Dunn and Miss Desruisseaux won trophies at the School Fair.

Convenors reports: Education Jessye Pierce reported on activities at the local school. Welfare of Health: Alice Vance read an article from the W.I. magazine and a poem about grandmothers.

Dianne Saunum: Home Ec. read an article on laces and trims and showed a napkin and holder she had made which were very attractive.

International Affairs: Georgette Seward read an article regarding shipping in the Persian Gulf and mines in the Gulf. Mrs. Drew also read an interesting article.

It was noted that the books were to be changed at the Library on Oct. 16th and some members agreed to go and help on this project. All were glad to know the government agreed to keep our library going for another year.

The County meeting will be held in Ayer's Cliff on Oct. 23 for dinner. Comm. to plan same Dianne Saunum and Georgette Seward the Comm. to plan same.

Jessye Pierce and May Palmquist as hostesses served delicious sandwiches cheese and etc. and a nice cup of tea and a pleasant social time was enjoyed.
