

WESTMOUNT CITIZENS DISCUSS THEIR ROADS.

Much Criticism at Last Night's Meeting of Municipal Association—Aldermen Defend Council.

The Westmount Municipal Association held its first meeting of the season last evening in the City Hall. It was announced that the council would be the important question discussed, but it fell into second place when the question of the work of the Road Committee of the Council came up.

APPEAL OF DR. CRIPPEN

Counsel Claims that Jury Left Court Contrary to Custom.

When Jury During Was Suddenly Taken Ill During Trial, and Court Was Adjourned.

(Canadian Associated Press.) Melbourne, Nov. 5.—Notwithstanding the protests of the Labor League the Australian Labor party of the Australian Parliament are determined to accept the British invitation to send a delegation to the coronation of King George, believing that the presence of eleven Australian Laborites in London will be an immense advantage to the entire labor movement.

STRICKEN BY FAMINE

Strike in Spain Causes Serious Situation in Town.

(Canadian Associated Press.) London, Nov. 5.—The 'Financial News' commenting on Lord Strathcona's statement that shipbuilders were prepared to accept a five-per cent advance for the Canadian service, with a guaranteed cost of maintenance two-thirds less than that of the 'Maurice' says that if they would also guarantee the absence of fog in the Straits of Belle Isle the deal might be considered closed.

(Canadian Associated Press.) London, Nov. 5.—The 'Financial News' commenting on Lord Strathcona's statement that shipbuilders were prepared to accept a five-per cent advance for the Canadian service, with a guaranteed cost of maintenance two-thirds less than that of the 'Maurice' says that if they would also guarantee the absence of fog in the Straits of Belle Isle the deal might be considered closed.

ASYLUM BURNS AT BRANDON

Six Hundred Insane Inmates Were in Danger, But All Escaped.

Quarter Million Dollar Building is Total Loss—Militia Called to Assist.

Winnipeg, Man., Nov. 5.—A gentle, sweet-faced woman, an inmate of the institution for many years, playing all afternoon with a box of matches she had secured while assisting in the kitchen work at the noon hour, caused last night the destruction of the quarter-million-dollar insane asylum at Brandon, and rendered six hundred inmates and a hundred attendants homeless.

HONORING THE QUEEN

Street in Mount Royal Ward to be Called Queen Mary Road.

The names of Cote St. Luc road and de Lamontagne avenue are to be changed to Queen Mary road and Queen Consort and the first Superior of Cote des Neiges College respectively. Ald. Prud'homme made the suggestion, and the Board of Control, after carefully considering the question, yesterday afternoon decided the street which they own in Cote des Neiges, to be of great use as a park.

RECIPROCITY CONFERENCE

United States Representatives Presented to Earl Grey.

Ottawa, Nov. 5.—Messrs. Henry M. Hoyt and Chas. M. Pepper, the United States tariff commissioners who commenced negotiations with Mr. Fielding and Mr. W. Paterson, went to Rideau Hall yesterday afternoon and were presented to His Excellency Earl Grey. In the evening they were the guests of Mr. Fielding at a dinner given in their honor at the Rideau Club. Today's proceedings are understood to be confined to a discussion of the tariff situation in general and a preliminary study of schedules dealing with natural products and manufactured articles which have been prepared by Mr. Taft, and under their instructions they are empowered to go a long way in the direction of making a trade pact with Canada. To what point the deliberations inaugurated today will be carried before an adjournment is, of course, a matter of conjecture, but on both sides the hope prevails that a sound basis will be laid for an agreement which will result in an amelioration of prevailing unfair conditions for the mass of consumers under the existing high tariffs on an increase in the interchange of the natural products and manufactures of the two countries affected and general improvement in the relations between Canadians and the people of the Republic.

TYPHOID SPREADS RAPIDLY

Twenty Deaths Through Polluted Drinking Water at Fair.

Toronto, Nov. 5.—Such an epidemic of typhoid fever as that which is supposed to have originated from drinking of polluted water at a hotel in Toronto at a fair on Sept. 15 and 16, has never been known to prevail in one district in Canada before. From information that has come to hand from outside places, Hamilton, Peterborough, Port Hope, Cobourg, Bowmanville, Newcastle, Oshawa, Pontypool, Garden Hill, Lindsay, Kirby and several country sections, the infection has been pronounced, and twenty deaths are reported.

GREETING SOUTH AFRICA

Patriotic Message Sent by Winnipeg Canadian Club.

Winnipeg, Nov. 5.—The Canadian Club yesterday sent this cablegram to the South African Union, General Botha—The Canadian Club of Winnipeg, now assembled, appreciating the benefits of confederations, congratulate the South African Union on the opening of its first Parliament, wishes it great success, and hopes the North and South dominions, as well as the East and West, may continue united in the British Empire for mutual good and world peace.

Kingston, Nov. 5.—Donald Clarke, son of E. M. Clark, living three miles from Odesa, was driving to school on Thursday with two other children, when through an accident the horse ran away, struck a fence and in the confusion, Donald was severely kicked in the stomach. He was taken home, but never rallied, dying yesterday.

LAURIER WARD CITIZENS TO INTERVIEW COUNCIL

Ald. Turcot Gives an Account of His Stewardship, and Promises Improvements in Old St. Louis.

The citizens' meeting held in the St. Louis Town Hall last night was attended by a fairly large number of proprietors, who came to hear Ald. Turcot discourse on the sudden and unexpected increase in the valuation roll of Laurier ward, and on the promised improvements which were to be made in the locality probably by way of compensation.

Among those present were: Ex-Mayor Leonidas Villeneuve, ex-Councillors Gauthier and Jubinville, Messrs. Lamarche, E. Delorme, J. D. Langens, A. Ahary, V. Guilbeau, M. Paquette, A. Legault and many other well-known residents.

LEGISLATION TO CONSERVE WATER POWERS WILL BE PROPOSED NEXT YEAR.

Before the Caledonian Society, at the St. Andrews Home, last evening, Mr. F. D. Monk, M.P.P. for Jacques Cartier, delivered an address on 'The water powers of Canada.'

Mr. Monk spoke of the enormous water powers awaiting development in Canada. In Ontario there is 3,724,000 horse power. At Niagara, the total amount which could be developed by using all the water has been estimated at 1,000,000 horsepower, but by agreement with the International Waterways Commission the amount of water to be used is limited to 1,200,000 horsepower, which means approximately 425,000 horsepower. In Northern Ontario there is 1,200,000 horse power awaiting development.

In Quebec, on the north shore, between the Ottawa and the St. Lawrence rivers, there is 1,772,000 horse power, below the Saguenay 1,737,000 horse power. On the south shore, on the Chaudiere, there is 68,000 horse power, and on the south shore above the Chaudiere, including St. Lawrence above Montreal, 187,000 horse power, or 4,478,000 horse power, but this does not include the water powers in Abitibi, which are estimated to be 242,000 horse power on the Notaway River.

TRIBUTE TO PRINCIPAL STUDENTS OF WESLEYAN COLLEGE

Students of Wesleyan College Regret Resignation of Dr. Shaw.

The students of the Wesleyan College have passed the following resolution: Inasmuch as falling health and advancing years have made the resignation of our beloved principal, Dr. Shaw, necessary, the students of the Wesleyan Theological College, assembled in the Students' Parliament, desire to express our sincere appreciation of the many years of faithful and distinguished service rendered by Dr. Shaw to Methodism in general, and to our college in particular.

T. P. O'CONNOR SAILS

He Predicts Population of 100,000 in Canada.

Hullfax, N.S., Nov. 5.—Mr. T. P. O'Connor, M.P., left by the Maritime express yesterday afternoon for Quebec, where he will take the steamer to-day for Montreal. Before starting he called on Archbishop McCarthy, who is confined to his house by illness. His Canadian Club address in this city yesterday, the far well one in Canada, was heard by the largest audience that has yet gathered at these affairs here. Mr. O'Connor predicted the time when Canada would have a population of 100,000,000, and he uttered a fervent prayer that, unaccompanied by the blunders of the Old Land and traditions of still, it would work out a happy destiny, which he was sure it would. "God bless you," Mr. O'Connor said as he closed.

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY STOCK MARKET FACTORS

First Two Months of Current Year Show Net Increase of Over Thirty p.c.—Prospects of Increased Distribution From Land Sales.

The high of 202 3-8 touched by C.P.R. this week is one and a quarter points above the highest of 1914 touched in 1906. Remarkable earnings statements, and hope of a 'plum' from proceeds of land sales are the secret of strength in Canadian Pacific.

REVENUE FROM THE CROPS. It has been feared that Canadian Pacific earnings would reflect to some extent, later in the year, the partial crop failure along its line in the North-west, and Alberta, 20 bushels per acre is considered an average wheat crop.

LAND SALES. The special hopes of stock holders at present, however, are for a 'plum' in the shape of increased disbursements from land sales.

A LARGE RESERVE. To date, Canadian Pacific has realized from sales of land net of $83,418,141, of which $44,000,000 is still unexpended, but of which stockholders have only received directly dividends $4,833,500.

INCREASING VALUES OF LAND. The following table shows the disposition of land sales and interest receipts on proceeds of land sales to the dividend paid from that source since the company first began to give its shareholders a direct return from the land equity.

Table with columns for years (1910, 1909, 1908, 1907) and rows for Acres sold, Proceeds, Total receipts, Interest on land sales fund, and Dividend (1 percent) paid.

London is Optimistic --Stock Market Cheerful in Spite of Blue Factors

London, Nov. 5.—A striking feature of the financial markets in London during the past two weeks has been the remarkable power of resistance displayed by the stock markets in the face of some exceptionally adverse factors.

SOME SALIENT POINTS ABOUT EDMONTON

Edmonton, Alta., Nov. 5.—It is the common impression amongst eastern people having not very extensive knowledge of the west, that the three western provinces were all alike, and that western towns are all alike.

PRODUCTS AT THEIR BEST.

Then comes the reason as to why the Edmonton country is different from the rest of the West, say Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

DAIRY AND CAT-TLE RAISING.

Further it is explained that in the partially timbered country surrounding Edmonton for a hundred miles or so in any direction, the conditions are wonderfully favorable for dairying and cattle raising.

NEVER EAT UNWASHED FRUIT.

Prof. Metchnikoff and other famous bacteriologists have uttered many warnings against the use of raw fruits and vegetables on the ground that they are laden with germs.

WALTH OF THE COAL MINES.

You will be told that another point in which Edmonton is different is in the fact that Edmonton is about the only point in Canada which is the centre of a great coal field.

NEW FINANCING IN ATCHISON IS FORECASTED

Boston, Nov. 5.—In spite of the fact that Atchison has at present one of the largest potential cash balances of any American railroad—between $10,000,000 and $20,000,000—it would not be surprising if additional financing were arranged before the expiration of the current fiscal year.

THE CITY IS DOING WELL.

In the meantime, Edmonton is doing not at all badly upon the resources immediately available, and some of the development that has taken place during the past few years is decidedly interesting.

FINANCIAL STRENGTH.

Incidentally, it might be mentioned that for several weeks past, Edmonton bank clearings, as compared with the same period a year ago have shown much the largest increase of any point in Canada.

COMING EVENTS

THE SECOND WEEK OF GRAND OPERA. FRANCIS MACMILLEN IS DUE ON WEDNESDAY.

The Montreal Grand Opera Company, the first locally-controlled operatic organization in this city, completes today at His Majesty's Theatre a most successful opening week.

MISS KOELLING.

largest metropolitan organizations. Its only lack as compared with these latter is a few star vocalists, and these, as I well know, do not always or usually make for the artistic quality of the opera as a whole.

The force of singers is not yet quite complete, as Frances Alda, the famous soprano of the Metropolitan, will join the Italian list in a week or two. At her first concert appearance of the season a few days ago, at Stan Harbor, she made a tremendous hit.

The casts of the works to be presented during the coming week are as follows, and will not be changed except for the most imperative reasons: Monday, Wednesday, and Friday—'L'Amico Fritz, Mascagni; Fritz, Ugo Lombardi; David, Giuseppe Finazzoni; Federico, David; Magnanelli; Hanezo, Natalie Gervil; Suzel, Esther Ferrabini.

THE BEETHOVEN TRIO'S NEXT RECITAL. The programme for the second concert to be given by the Beethoven Trio on Nov. 22, in Windsor Hall, will include a trio by Arensky, one by Schumann (the third), songs by Miss Fraser and solos by Mme. Froehlich.

played in Montreal by any other chamber orchestra. Mme. Froehlich will play music both ancient and modern. Pastorale and Capriccio, by Scarlatti, belong to the former category, and a new Tocatta by Saint-Saens, made a sensation in Europe as played by Emil Sauer on one of his latest tours.

Miss Beatrice Fraser comes back to Canada with laurels won in England, and after hard work done in the studio with William Mason, soprano, she agrees to attract, both by reason of her nationality and because she has earned the right to critical attention in any country.

SOUSA'S BAND IS COMING. Announcement is made by the management of the Arena that Sousa and his world-famous band will appear at the Arena on Monday, Nov. 21, when two concerts will be given, one in the afternoon and one in the evening.

ORGAN RECITALS. The first of a series of four organ recitals will be given in Christ Church Cathedral to-day at 4 p.m., by Mr. Leonard Parker, A.R.C.M., A.R.C.O. The programme is: 1. Tocatta (A flat) A. F. Hesse

GLASGOW CHOIR BACK NEXT SATURDAY. The Glasgow Select Choir, which has been making an extended tour of the United States and Canada, and which was heard here, in the initial concert of its tour, at the Atlantic Hotel, has been meeting with merited success at all points.

THE HOLY CITY ORATORIO. The choir of the Emmanuel Congregational Church announce the date of their concert at 8 p.m., on Wednesday, November 15th. The choir, numbering forty trained voices, will render the popular oratorio by R. Gail, 'The Holy City.' Letters of music are assured of an evening of more than usual interest.

MISS EDITH MILLER AS SYMPHONY SOLOIST. It is now announced by Mr. Frank Vatch that the very probability that amongst the soloists to appear in the coming series of the concerts of

Keeping Faith With The Buying Public

One reason why "PROGRESS BRAND" Clothing keeps its hold on the public, is because it keeps its faith with the public.

When a man sees the "PROGRESS BRAND" label in Suit or Overcoat, he knows that he is going to get honest value for his money.

The "PROGRESS BRAND" label has always stood for satisfaction. And it means more to-day than ever before.

It is a guarantee of satisfaction. It is the guide to good clothes. It means fair play prices.

Make this a maxim—look for the "PROGRESS BRAND" trademark in every suit and overcoat you buy.

When you find it, you will find honest clothes, honestly made, at honest prices.

MGILL VS. OTTAWA

Intercollegiate Fixture Down for Decision on Campus

To-day.

MGILL LINE-UP THE SAME.

Finish of Mountain Race Will Take Place in the Football Enclosure.

A feature of the McGill-Ottawa intercollegiate match on the campus this afternoon will be the finish of the 7 1/2 mile mountain race, the finish of which will take place inside the football enclosure.

The McGill team is the same as last week, and whilst it is generally the impression that the game will be an easy one for the local boys, Ottawa, it is understood, by no means regards their chances of winning as light and it is not unlikely that a more interesting game than is generally imagined may result.

Having no interest in the intercollegiate championship which was soon forgotten when the players got warmed to the work, that is their contention, however, will not at present be a factor.

If the McGill side is anxious to beat them, it will be well for them not to be lulled into a sense of false security regarding the prospects as easy marks. The kick-off is fixed for 2:45, so that the game will be finished in good light.

Up to the time of going to press who would officiate in charge of the game had not been announced.

McGill refused Joe Jogan, as they had no knowledge of his capabilities in this direction, to coach Dr. Black and Marty Walsh will act.

FOOTBALL RULES.

From an American Point of View.

The following football rules written by Tom Akers appears in an American exchange.

Harken O ye who find the new football rules a puzzle and a snare, and give ear ye who are weary of the old, and mending ramifications and peregrinations.

First—The game is divided into four stanzas of eight verses each. In these verses there are 16 periods and 32 semicolons. Between each semicolon an opponent's slats or manure is flung. Between the semicolons it is permitted to make faces and snarl.

Second—Before and after each period the opposing captains shall change neckties. The referee shall hug the umpire and the head linesman kisses the college widow. The players may kiss whatever girl they overtake in 10 yards.

Third—It shall be a foul if any player bite an opposing player for stepping in his face.

Fourth—The ball may be advanced after the permission of the field judge and the umpire is obtained, unless there be objection on the part of the opposing captain, who shall signify such objection by raising his right hand.

Fifth—In running with the ball, a player shall not touch it with his hands, but carry it gripped between his teeth. Store and pivot teeth must be used, though shall be retrieved by the referee, though time shall not be taken out for this purpose.

Sixth—In the choice of goals a toss of a coin shall decide. The umpire shall for this borrow a half-dollar from the captain of the opposing team. It will then be a toss up as to whether either sets his quarter or half.

Seventh—No player shall be eligible unless he is under 20 years of age.

Eighth—The test of a player's being a bona-fide student shall be as follows: He must be able to read, write, draw, draw a breath, wear football clothes, have an open face like an oyster; know a football when he sees it, and a member of at least one of the following:

Ninth—It is a foul to seize a player below the hair or above the shoes.

Tenth—A brick or horseshoe concealed in a player's sweater shall be prima facie evidence of an off-side, and the opposing team shall be given nine yards and a cup of tea thereafter.

Eleventh—Players giving evidence of having bathed during the game will be expelled by the faculty and blacklisted by the amateur association.

Twelfth—Sweaters or jackets that have been greased shall be inspected by the pure food commission. If butter is used they may play. If oleomargarine is used, they shall be held to the federal grand jury.

Thirteenth—A player found to be in contact with doctors, surgeons, undertakers or embalmers, shall be penalized five red neckties and four pairs of purple socks.

Fourteenth—In case of doubt ask the umpire. He don't know.

CANADIAN CHAMPION WINS.

Jack L. Tait, Fast Miller, Beats W. C. Paull.

Buffalo, N.Y., Nov. 5.—Jack L. Tait, of Toronto, the Canadian champion miller, tonight won the title of champion miller of the world, by beating W. C. Paull, of Buffalo, the intercollegiate champion, at the opening of the indoor season at the sixth Regiment mill, Buffalo. Tait came at the end of a medley relay between teams of four men each from Toronto and Buffalo. Tait, who weighed 145 pounds, ran 220 yards, 440 yards, 880 yards and one mile. Tait and Paull joined issue on about 200 yards. Paull jumped into the lead soon after the start, but Tait ran a splendid race, gradually wearing his opponent down and leading by a good margin at the finish.

The Toronto team was composed of C. J. Watson, 220 yds, 440 yds, 880 yds, G. M. Brooks, 880 yds, time 1:58 1/2; J. L. Tait, one mile, time 1:35 1/2.

W. Norris, C. L. Watson and M. C. J. Pollock, of the West End Y.M.C.A., Toronto, qualified in the preliminary heats of the hundred yard dash, handicapped, but all failed to get a place in the final.

TORONTO'S NEW BINK.

New Arena to be Ready Twelve Months Hence.

Toronto, Nov. 4.—There must have been stones galore on a new arena and hockey rink for Toronto, even before Mr. Palmer purchased the Mutual street property from the old Caledonian Curling and Skating Club, but nothing came of any, all proving more or less rumors of the street. Now with new structure of the kind almost in sight, there has been nothing given out, and building material is being piled on the ground.

This will be the last season in the present Mutual street rink, which will be demolished in the spring, the site of which will hold the north end of the new arena.

A considerable portion of the structural steel is already on the ground, as anyone may see for himself by a look on Dalhousie street, on the west of the property.

The new arena will be ready one year hence, and will run north and south, with an entrance of fifty feet from Shuter street, midway between Mutual and Dalhousie streets.

TIGERS VS. MONTREAL

Montreal Represented by Same Team as Last Week Except Cameron.

RECORD GATE EXPECTED.

Hamilton Tickets All Sold—An immense Crowd Expected to Witness Game.

The interest in the Montreal-Tiger game to-day is summed up in the words of a Tiger official, who, writing to a friend in Montreal, says:

'All records will be broken for attendance figures when we throw open the gates on Saturday. The demand for seats is exceeding expectations, and we are not sure that our accommodations will be taxed to capacity.'

The Hamilton sports anticipate a good game is proved by the tremendous rush for seats which had all been disposed of last night.

This welcome addition to the Tigers' bank balance should leave very little need to find for payment of their new stand.

Chaucer Elliott and his men left last night for Hamilton. Willie Craig is very confident that Montreal will win, notwithstanding the absence of three such strong experienced players as Kelly, Brophy and Brophy.

That he (Craig) always plays his best game when he is on the field, the players are imbued with this spirit. It is by no means unlikely that they will come back from Hamilton with more confidence than when they left.

The team will be the same as last week with the exception that Coolican will replace Cameron, who is to hold equal to last Saturday's game may be in store, but of a more pleasant nature as far as the Montreal side is concerned, but more confidence would have been justified in Kelly, Cameron and Brophy were in line up.

HAMILTON CONFIDENT.

Hamilton, Nov. 4.—The Tigers did not practice to-day, as Manager Hope believes the perfect condition for their game with Montreal.

There will be several changes on the team, including the return of Kelly, Brophy and Brophy.

Four championship, which will be played at full back.

WAR SCARE STARTED NAVY

Canadian Programme, British Organ Declares, Due to Fright

COLONIAL PEOPLE UNPREPARED.

Warning to England Against Forcing Hands of Statesmen Issued.

(Canadian Associated Press.)

London, Nov. 5.—Commenting on the Daily News' article by-election, the 'Daily News' says: 'The Canadian navy scheme sprang directly out of the navy scare. One of the objects of the navy scare was to frighten the colonies into giving assistance before the people of the colonies had time to appreciate the need or cultivate an attitude of response. That is an extremely dangerous policy for the Empire, it is embarrassing to Laurier, and that is bad; it is provoking a strong movement of protest directed against this country, and that's worse. To the Englishman the lesson is to beware of schemes, however patriotic, which are the work of statesmen, and beware of substituting the complex Imperial machinery for the flexible simplicity of freedom and independence.'

'The Morning Post' says: 'The tribals, inspired only by the idea of racial separation, seem to feel as though while in the Empire they can never be anything but the greater part of its self-governed population is of a different race with English for its mother tongue.'

NEW MEMBER HAS GIFT OF SILENCE.

The 'Gazette' says: 'As a speaker Mr. Gilbert is an exception to the French-Canadian rule. He is the possessor of a gift of silence which few of his compatriots can boast of. His average speaking time in a campaign was three minutes in duration. Just previous to the election he enlarged, and made one speech of thirteen minutes, but was fortified then with common sense, and was frequent in his use of the word 'silence.'

But he said that if he should be sent to Ottawa he would make it his business to learn English—and he looks like the kind of man who would be likely to do anything he set about in earnest.

As to how it happened, the general talk was that the Nationalists caught the Government by surprise, and had practically clinched the victory before the Liberal orators realized that there was a big fight ahead. All sorts of stories are going around now as to the way in which the fight was waged, no one being certain, but in the homes of the voters. The people were only given arguments on one point, the navy. It was to be a war navy, they were told, and if Canada had a war navy they would go to war. And if she went to war, then the young men of the country would be dragged forth to fight and get wounded and killed. That argument, they heard before the election, but simply a fight against a war navy and the possibilities of conscription. They accepted the advice, and apparently that was the factor which turned the day.

One of the sad incidents of the election was the bereavement of Mayor Tourigny of this place, who is one of the strong Liberals of the district. He died at his home, where he had been all through the campaign, and his daughter, Mrs. Massicotte, was almost as keenly interested in the election. She was down town all evening until it became certain that Mr. Gilbert was elected, and then went to her home. A short time later she collapsed into a chair, and before her husband, Dr. Massicotte, could reach her she had expired from a heart failure, caused by the excitement. Mayor Tourigny said that it was the saddest day of his life.

Discussing the results to-day, Senator Levesque said that the defeat of the Liberal cause was mainly due to the manner in which the naval cry had been raised. But he also thought that many votes had been changed by the fact that Mr. Gilbert was a prosperous and respected farmer, while Mr. Perraault was a lawyer, and the agricultural population of the district was largely in sympathy with the Liberal cause.

THINKS ELECTORS WERE MISLED.

Mr. Jerome L. Decarie, Provincial Secretary, asked Mr. Levesque to account for the result of the contest, stated: 'The simple explanation is, the electors have been misled. The French-Canadians are loyal. They are willing to fight for the British flag as they have done. They have not deserted Sir Wilfrid. But they were told that the naval policy involved conscription. They would be forcibly drafted into the navy. They might be sent to all parts of the Empire and would never be seen again. They thought that the British flag was a piece of cruel and unparliamentary deception, but it had its effect. Then their pockets were touched. They were told that taxes would be enormously increased. Farmers do not like war. It costs them too much. The land suffers. They were made to feel that if the navy became a reality ruin would instantly come upon them. The appeals of demagogues, in many cases were unanswered. But the people in time will become better informed. The naval policy is a new national issue. It is not surprising that the farmers in distant parts of this province should hesitate to accept a doctrine that would put their lands and their property against which every sort of doubt has been arranged by the Nationalists. In new business ventures wise people do not rush ahead without due consideration. But this province will, in due time, understand its duty and maintain its dignity by contributing its share to the national defence—yes, and that through the navy.'

MONTREALER APPOINTED.

As Superintendent of Government Printing Bureau.

Ottawa, Nov. 5.—It was officially announced last night that Fred Boardman, superintendent of the Job Printing Department of the Montreal 'Herald,' had been appointed superintendent of printing at the Government Printing Bureau in succession to Wm. McMahon. The office of superintendent of stationery will be filled next week.

TO PREVENT STRIKES.

New French Cabinet May Adopt Restrictions.

Paris, Nov. 5.—It is understood that the new Cabinet, although it does not intend to legislate on the subject of strikes, will propose a law for enactment declaring strikes by employees in the public service and by state employees to be illegal, and providing a penalty for persons engaging in such movements.

LOOTED WRECKED STEAMER.

Six Suspects Arrested on Serious Charge.

Toronto, Nov. 5.—Excitement runs high in the district of Manikoulin over the loss of a large American freighter, the 'Wissackickon,' beached on a reef about a mile and a half from Duck Island Lighthouse, in Lake Huron. The boat, owned by an American transportation company, was a few days later abandoned to the insurance companies, who sent wreckers and lighters and had the ship taken to the wharf at Duck Island.

There the ship and cargo remained all winter, a man being left in charge.

The following men were arraigned before the district police magistrate, Mr. W. H. Price, and were subsequently let out on bail: John Purvis, lighthouse keeper at Duck Island, and his brother, Alex. Purvis, a fisherman; William Bain, F. Benito, K. Macdonald and D. Matheson, fishermen in the employ of the Purvisses.

MR. RUSSELL'S MOTOR TOUR.

Covers Over 2,000 Miles in His Automobile.

Toronto, Nov. 5.—Mr. T. A. Russell, general manager of the Canada Cycle and Motor Company, is on a motor tour of the western provinces, in the course of which he has covered over 2,000 miles in his automobile.

Generally speaking, Mr. Russell says business seems to be in a sound, healthy condition throughout the west, and he is able to make a thorough observation of the conditions and prospects for the coming year, especially good. The motor car, he found, has greatly increased in popularity and where the motor is used, it is a powerful machine, as they seem to be required for the prairie service.

SIX-DAYS' CYCLE RACE.

Boston, Mass., Nov. 4.—Despite the determined efforts of the leaders to pull away from the field, the fifth day of the six-day bicycle race found the racers grouped mainly in two divisions. Two days of racing, and with more and more powerful machines, as they seem to be required for the prairie service.

JUNIOR DANCE.

New Features to be Sprung at McGill.

A meeting of the McGill Junior Dance committee was held last night, and some interesting and constructive suggestions were discussed in connection with the event. It is the aim of the committee to make it the most brilliant and attractive social event of the year, and they are accordingly planning some new features, which will be sprung as a surprise on the guests. It is not yet known just what these will be, but it is possible that some of the features will figure in the list. These have been given before several times.

The date is Friday, November 18th. There will be a limit placed on the number of tickets sold. Not more than 200 couple will be present, of which not more than fifty can be non-student.

This is an innovation, it being the wish of the committee to limit the affair as much as a McGill function as possible.

The dance is to be in McGill Union hall.

An application was made for the hall at the Royal Victoria College, on account of its greater size. The request, however, was refused, and considerable indignation has been evident in some circles on account of this. The R.V.C. hall has recently been occupied by an outside non-student organization, whereas members of the University are forbidden its use.

The committee has been divided as follows: Chairman, W. J. Poarse; secretary, H. Townley Douglas; treasurer, H. Townley Douglas; Honorary members, Miss Kate Lawrence, J. Douglas Armstrong, B.A.; printing and invitation committee, Clarence Gorman, W. Scott, H. T. Douglas, W. J. Poarse; refreshment committee, L. Burk, Dalryd, L. McDonald, B.A., Eleanor Oughtred.

MR. RUSSELL'S MOTOR TOUR.

Covers Over 2,000 Miles in His Automobile.

Toronto, Nov. 5.—Mr. T. A. Russell, general manager of the Canada Cycle and Motor Company, is on a motor tour of the western provinces, in the course of which he has covered over 2,000 miles in his automobile.

Generally speaking, Mr. Russell says business seems to be in a sound, healthy condition throughout the west, and he is able to make a thorough observation of the conditions and prospects for the coming year, especially good. The motor car, he found, has greatly increased in popularity and where the motor is used, it is a powerful machine, as they seem to be required for the prairie service.

MAINLY ABOUT TRIMMINGS — BUT — HARDLY AN ADVERTISEMENT

A LITTLE while ago the Buyer for our Bed Furnishings entered a complaint before the General Manager of this Company to the effect that the Advertising Department was giving practically all the window space, and all the newspaper space to Millinery, Costumes, Dresses and more particularly still to Laces and Trimmings, just because these things are pretty, while the linens, bed furnishings and staple stocks, just as good in their class as the others are in theirs, were being neglected in the way of rightful publicity, and the Advertising Department as a consequence was reminded by the General Manager, ever so gently, that the store was just as anxious that the people should have an opportunity to see the quality in our staple lines as they have to see the beauty in our more exclusive dressy things.

But standing here in the midst of perhaps the richest, the most exclusive, the most thorough, the most beautiful, and with all the most practical collection of chiffons, laces, trimmings and dress ornamentation that Canada has ever seen, who could resist scattering again and again to the four winds the news that will help so many little womanly hearts and eager minds in their wholesome planning to look sweet and pretty the night of the reception or when that ball is to take place?

And so the members of the Advertising Department risking to pursue their own policy for at least once more, could wish that it could help these thousands of young women to see, as they themselves see, the dress possibilities of all these---

- Beaded ornaments at $1.25, $1.50, $1.75, $2.50, $3.00, $3.50, $4.75, $5.50, $6.50, $6.75, and $7.50.

NEW NATIONALISM.

Cornell President Describes It as Despotism.

Ithaca, N.Y., Nov. 5.—In a speech last night before the Cornell Civic Club, which is conducting a mock campaign preliminary to taking a straw vote among the Cornell students on Monday, President Schurman, who was a delegate to the Republican state convention and voted in support of Mr. Roosevelt, said:

"I regard Mr. Roosevelt's new nationalism as the most revolutionary and dangerous programme any political leader has laid before the people since the close of the Civil War. To call it an application of the ancient moralities to modern conditions is a downright travesty of the Decalogue. In reality, the new nationalism of Mr. Roosevelt is the world-old despotism of one-man power decked out in the rainbow promises of a benevolent socialism."

He will sail to-day on the "Celtic," in time to reach London for the opening of Parliament on November 16.

The 'Witness' Fashion Hint

BRAIDED VELVET SUIT.

Braided trimmings are exceptionally wide, sometimes 18 inches across the front of garments. Of course these wide braids are expensive, ranging from four to five dollars for a single yard. This smart velvet suit is effectively trimmed with wide braid in a novel style. Uncut velvet is a pepper and salt effect is combined with plain black, garnet, velvet, and a smart result. Cord ornaments and deep fringe complete this clever little costume.

8837—LADIES' ONE-PIECE WAIST.

This model may be made to close at the centre back, or at the shoulder. The body and sleeves portions are cut in one, with underarm and shoulder seams, and the waist may be worn over a gump or tucker of contrasting material. The design is unique in its simplicity. The broad tucks lend fullness and width over the shoulders, and the flat round collar makes a pretty neck finish. The pattern is cut in six sizes: 22, 24, 26, 28, 30, 32 inches bust measure. It requires 1 5/8 yard for the tucker and 1 1/4 yard for the waist, of 44-inch material, for the 28 inch size.

TORONTO WINNIPEG

There will be differences of opinion among Canadians as to the Englishman regarding Mr. Mulloy's views. "A man in the overseas dominions," said Mr. Mulloy, "has not full citizenship. He is not entitled to the full liberties of a British citizen."

Mr. Mulloy said that much as he loved his native land he had no voice in the shaping of the foreign policy which involved the destiny of the state. There was not a citizen of the overseas dominions who had the slightest influence in the formation of the British foreign policy, although on that policy depended the destinies of six nations. The man of the Overseas Dominions would not always be content with a mangled form of British citizenship. What they wanted, he declared, was a federation of British States, having equal responsibility; and the alternative was the formation of independent nations. The man born in Canada was not torn into a King-John, but into an imperialist, or he must either be a loyal subject of the King, in which case he was an Imperialist, or be considered a Free Trade in the Empire, then she should meet Canada. She could have free access, for ever, to one-fifth of the wealth of mines, forests, land and fisheries. Other nations were rapping at the door to get into those markets in Canada because they saw thousands of people going there every year. The United States sold more to Canada at the present time than England did. The world laughs at your fiscal policy," he exclaimed, "and your enemies hope you will continue it for a few years longer. You are standing with your back to the future, waiting to see whether the Lord helps those who help themselves."

In conclusion, Mr. Mulloy pleaded that British capitalist would invest their money in colonial rather than foreign enterprises. Industry makes wealth, and you have sent a fertilizing stream to build up the American railways. You are subscribing money to build railways in Argentina, Mexico, and Timbuctoo. How is it going to help you? Many industries are dead or dying in this country because the capital that was in them has been with-

HYDRO ELECTRIC EXEMPT.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Nov. 5.—The Hydro-Electric Commission won its appeal against the city of Niagara Falls and the township of Stamford at the Court of Revision and Appeals, held here yesterday. Mr. F. W. Hope, secretary of the commission, was present on behalf of the commission, and contended that the commission's property was exempt from taxation under the act of 1904, on the ground that the Hydro-Electric was supplying power, not distributing it, this being done by the municipality.

TO RECOGNIZE REPUBLIC.

London, Nov. 5.—The Lisbon correspondent of the "Times" says he is informed from the highest authority that the British, United States, French, Spanish, German and Italian ministers have been authorized to recognize the republic as soon as the constitution is voted after the elections.

MR. L. W. R. MULLOY.

There was a greater amount of patriotism, according to population, in any of the British dominions than in Great Britain.

Canada, Mr. Mulloy declared, would buy from the Mother Country as large a quantity of finished articles as possible, and Great Britain, he thought, should buy her raw material as far as possible within the Empire. There was no commodity required for the wants of man, not even luxuries, that could not be produced within the Empire. Canada was ready to meet the Mother Country, and if Great Britain wanted

INDUSTRIAL HOME NEEDED FOR PROTESTANT GIRLS

The need of an industrial home for Protestant girls, to which delinquent girls could be sent when found guilty of offences by the courts in Montreal, has long been felt by the judges and those who are interested in social matters.

At present the judge or magistrate who has the case of a Protestant girl to deal with in a quandary. Either he must send her to jail, or to the Home of the Good Shepherd, a Catholic institution, or discharge her in the hope that the Children's Aid Society will be able to place her under the care of a probation officer.

Both the first alternatives are objectionable to most of those who are now sitting on the bench in Montreal. To send a girl under sixteen to the woman's jail is liable to throw her into company which will militate against any chance of future reform, and to send a Protestant girl for a term of years to a Catholic institution is contrary to the feelings of Protestants and Catholics alike.

Yet, there are many girls who come up for justice who by their behaviour have shown that they are not fit to be placed in a position where they can mix indiscriminately with other children until they have shown signs of reform from the company of life which they are pursuing, and there are others who, having been led into wrongdoing by older people, are surrounded by an environment which makes it almost impossible for them to throw off their evil restraint and strike out on better lines.

For some years now this lack of a Protestant industrial and training school for delinquent girls has been realized and regretted by the judges and social workers of the city, and many of them have been endeavoring to persuade the Government to take the matter up and found an industrial home on modern lines for the reform of girl delinquents. Over two years ago the Children's Aid Society presented a memorial to the Government on the subject, and received a favorable reply, but nothing else happened, and although every few months similar applications have been made, nothing has been done.

have been made in the reform of delinquent boys, nothing has been done to improve the girls who are sent down from the Montreal courts. They learn washing and cooking, both of the plainest description, and that is all. Social reformers know that to many girls these two things offer no attraction, and that the whole period during which they are in the institution is regarded as punishment, and incites to no desire or inclination for reform in the girl. They leave the institution at a dangerous age, with only this knowledge of cooking and washing, and with a feeling that they are at war with society. They are thus easily attracted by the more brilliant and apparently easy way of earning their living which leads them down the broad paths of white slavery.

Experience in other countries has shown that if these young delinquents are placed in an institution under the indeterminate sentence where they are taught a trade or profession, such as stenography, or dress-making, or millinery, which appeals to the artistic sense which has made many of them revolt against mere domestic forms of labor, then when they have learned their profession properly they can be released with the practical certainty that they will not again fall back into their lives of delinquency.

This is not a theory, but a demonstrated fact in most cities where modern reform methods are used. In Montreal a recent experiment made by the Children's Aid Society has also served to prove this statement. A girl of fourteen was brought up in the same situation as a domestic servant. She was a domestic servant who, enquiries showed, could never keep a situation because of her petty thieving habits. She had been remanded for a brief period to the Good Shepherds, in order to show her what would happen if she did not reform, but with no effect, for directly she was sent home she found a situation as a domestic servant she became hard and sulky, neglected her work and started stealing small articles again. As a last resort she was given to a probation officer of the society, who after obtaining her confidence found her a situation as a milliner's apprentice. She was given prettier clothes than she had been accustomed to, placed among companions of her own age, and the society paid her expenses whilst under training, of course keeping her constantly under the eye of the probation officer. In a matter of only two months ago, and during the whole of that period the girl has not given one minute's trouble. She is considered one of the brightest girls in one of the largest millinery houses in Montreal, and is now sent to do the purchasing of ribbons and flowers and the other things which once she could not keep track of.

There are many other girls like this one coming before the Montreal justices who could be reformed in the same manner. There was an institution to take them; but at present there is not, so the white slave traffic is constantly augmented by the fact that delinquent girls in the city have no chance of being reformed in the only natural way—by following the lines of least resistance.

MAKE WAR ON THE RODENTS

This Necessary in the Interest of Health, Says Dr. Louis Laberge.

Cats Carry Infection to the Children With Whom They Play.

Milk and water, and the malicious mischievous fly, cannot, according to Dr. Louis Laberge, be blamed for all the sickness which breaks out in Montreal. He believes that rats, which are becoming more and more numerous, are a greater cause of disease than any of these. He thinks that it would be wise indeed to make a regular fight against these rodents.

"You can see yourself how these rats spread disease," remarked the medical health officer. "They revel on filth. They will eat biscuits and good food of course. But they enjoy refuse even more. They are filthy. Cats catch them. They must get a part of the filth on their tongues. Then they play with children. Perhaps they lick the faces or hands of the children. That is undoubtedly one of the ways infection spreads."

In other countries the authorities are making a determined fight to exterminate these animals," continued the doctor. "Certain parts of England are introducing regular rat catchers. In Paris poison is being placed in the drains. Yet here, where the rodents are becoming more numerous nothing is being done. They do damage to property as well as to the health. I am told in England they cause in one year depreciation amounting to $12,000,000."

Many, it seems, feel with Dr. Laberge. Moreover, some have a remedy to suggest. One physician stated that the rats could be less numerous if the lanes were properly cared for. "No one owns these now," he said. "When property is sold they are thrown in. As a result they are not properly cared for. The city should ask Legislature for the right to take over the alleys. The Road Department should grade them and see that puddles do not stand for days as they do now. The garbage should be more carefully collected too. It is what attracts and nourishes the rats."

Some time ago Dr. Laberge received a letter from Australia telling of the steps taken to exterminate the rodents there. "It is unique and well worth repeating," he said.

The theory upon which the scheme is based is that rats are jealous. It is known that they are polygamous, and the idea is to kill only the females, cutting off the sales of the males so that they will be known when next caught. The females being demolished the males will be put to it for mates. Consequently they will become jealous and wage war upon one another. In fact, there will be trouble in the rat family.

The scheme sounds pretty, but many consider it better to kill every rat off on the principle that a dead rat is better than a live one, which may or may not kill one or two others.

SEPARATION BILL Measure Forbidding Establishment of Orders in Spain is Adopted.

Cadix, Nov. 5.—The Senate has passed a bill forbidding the establishment of new religious congregations. The vote stood 149 to 85. This is a triumph for a and a relief to the Government, for the bill was endangered in the Senate, where the Clericals and Conservatives are strong. The measure will pass the Chamber of Deputies easily.

Senator Canalejas says the bill will only be operative long enough to enable the Government to negotiate an agreement with the Vatican concerning religious associations.

El Mokri, the representative of the Sultan of Morocco, has conceded Spain's demand for six million pesetas as an indemnity for the war in Morocco.

YOUTH SENTENCED. Boy Who Killed Companion Sent to Reformatory for Five Years.

Quebec, Nov. 5.—Five years in the reformatory is the sentence which Judge Carroll imposed on Wilbrod Laprise, aged 14 years, the lad who on Sunday afternoon, the 9th of October, fired the shot which caused the death of the ten-year-old son of Mr. J. A. Langlois, M.P.

LETTERS FROM READERS

THE CITY'S OPPORTUNITIES LOST. (To the Editor of the 'Witness.') Sir,—A very serious piece of news has come to those friends of city improvement who have been working for some time past to obtain for the city the much-needed extensions of its unique heritage, Moult Royal Park.

Montreal in the matter of parks is the most meanly provided of all the large cities in America, as an examination of the figures in other cities will readily show.

Three big estates are at present upon the market, estates that really form strategic parts of the park: the Molson estate, the Redpath estate, and the Brunet estate. In any other city the opportunity to buy them would be snatched up by the authorities, backed by the universal sentiment of the people; the prices in each case being exceedingly reasonable.

It is Montreal to be alone in falling to secure for its population its natural and necessary possession; no natural, that many are unaware that the city does not own them; so necessary that we shall one day beg for them at twenty times the price. The Controllers, the Board of Trade, the Metropolitan Parks Commission, the City Improvement League, the Parks and Playgrounds Association, and other competent bodies, have unanimously urged the acquisition of these properties. The indifference of a majority of the City Council has brought the matter to a standstill.

Some time ago it was learned that the Brunet estate had become impatient and had refused to grant any longer delay. The matter by the matter by the city, and had set about what was to it a matter of urgent business, but what is for us the complete disfiguring of that important side of the park adjoining the Cote des Neiges road, causing the city's large expenditure upon the widening of that road to end in no result whatever. To-day these bodies learn that the Redpath representatives have also become disgusted, and have unanimously decided that the city shall on no account have this property; that if like the other it shall be cut into building lots.

There remains a reasonable offer from those controlling the Molson estate which is absolutely necessary for the extension of the people's playground, Fletcher's Field. These administrators have waited like the other, and doubtless will soon be following them in their refusal to be played with.

The city's loss of the first property is a thing of the past. Its loss of the second is now announced. Its loss of the third is being considered. What are the people going to do about it? A. LACOSTE, President of the Montreal Parks and Playgrounds Association.

THE BAZAAR FOR THE BLIND. (To the Editor of the 'Witness.') Sir,—Will you permit me on behalf of the board of management of the Montreal Association for the Blind to try to express their deep gratitude to all who assisted in making the bazaar at the Arena such a great success. So many friends rendered willing, efficient, untiring and effective assistance, that it would be impossible even to name them all, within the necessary limits of this letter, and to begin to particularize would be tedious.

The foundations were laid by the members of the twenty churches, eighteen schools and five societies; and the hundreds of individuals, who by the sale of tickets, and by contributions to the various booths, ensured the success of the bazaar from the commencement. Never did a stronger and better selected or better organized corps of assistants than had Mrs. Fessenden, the honorary convener of the bazaar. How much the association owes to her untiring tact and hard work, only the assistants know.

The association is under particular obligation to the ladies, whose dancing provided a remarkably graceful and attractive entertainment, efficiently seconded as they were by Mr. Knowles's military band and the New Era Orchestra.

DEBATE AT M'GILL

Silver Cup Presented by Mrs. Wilson Reford

A meeting of the McGill University Literary and Debating Society was held last night, in the Union, a very large attendance being present. The occasion was that of the second competitive debate, held for the purpose of choosing the "intercollegiate" debaters. The Royal Victoria College students were invited, and a large number of these were present.

The subject for debate was: "Resolved, that Canada will eventually become annexed to the United States." Mr. Murray commented on the great natural trade routes between the various parts of Canada and the United States, between the Maritime Provinces and New England, between Manitoba and the South, and between British Columbia and the Western Pacific states. He also noted in contrast the great natural difficulties that stood in the way of general interprovincial commerce, pointing to the I. C. R. as a monument of the failure of the Canadian Government to divert the trade from its natural path.

The other speakers followed with an array of information and eloquence. MacNaughton, pointing out the degeneracy of the Americans as shown by the fact that divorce followed in one out of every twelve marriages.

Professor Stephen B. Leacock, B.A., Ph.D., was present as judge, the decision, however, was withheld for a few days. Dr. Leacock is reporting on the eight speakers who have participated in the competitive debates, and will choose the intercollegiate debaters.

The announcement was also made of the donation of a beautiful silver cup by Mrs. R. Wilson Reford. The cup is for impromptu speaking. There is to be a contest in the early part of the year, at which speeches will be given on some topic of Canadian national importance. The speakers will be notified of the subject of the speech which they must deliver, twelve hours before the contest.

This year's contest is to be on December 2nd.

WAS VETERAN ENGINEER. George Smith Killed in Wreck at Corinth, Ont.

Corinth, Ont., Nov. 5.—George Smith, of St. Thomas, the oldest engineer on the Wabash, was killed last night, when his engine crashed into the caboose of a train which was making a sliding ahead of him. His fireman and the crew of the other train barely saved their lives. Smith was one of the few left of the Grand Trunk engineers who entered the service of the Wabash when their line was opened in St. Thomas, 40 years ago.

NO INVASION OF PERSIA.

London, Nov. 5.—A despatch received here by a news agency from Teheran reported that a British invasion of Persia had begun recently at Lingah, on the Gulf of Persia, and that it was stated that the commander and officers of the British cruiser "Proserpine" had been wounded in a pitched battle. It turns out that the affair had nothing to do with Persia. Sixty men who had landed from the "Proserpine" near Chahbar, in Baluchistan, had a brush with Afghan guerrillas, in which the captain of the vessel was slightly wounded. Chahbar is 350 miles distant from Lingah and in another country.

LITERARY REVIEW.

STORIES OF EAST AND WEST.

India is still a sufficiently mysterious land to form an always acceptable background for a story. In the conditions of unrest prevailing there at the present time the problem of the relation between the native and the European is of specially keen interest. The theme of 'The Broken Road' which has been endorsed as a faithful account of these relations is closely akin to that of a book just issued, 'The Rajah's People,' by I. A. R. Wylie (The Macmillan Company of Canada, $1.25). This is a less powerful story than 'The Broken Road,' because less simple and direct, but it presents also a lifelike picture of Anglo-Indian society in a native capital, and has the thrill of the mystery and cruelty of the eastern mind pitted against the superior power of British law and order. The fact that baffles the East, that men who in time of peace live useless, almost degenerate lives, become at the first sound of danger, erect, fearless and resourceful, is strikingly illustrated in the experience of this Rajah. The preamble of the story is a scene often repeated in mutiny times. Two Englishmen and their wives are making their last stand against a native horde. Help is promised, but arrives too late. At a given signal the bungalow is stormed. One of the men puts a bullet through his wife's brain to save her the horror of capture. The other wishes to do the same, but she refuses, and escapes from him in the darkness. Both men then sell their lives dearly. The next scene is nearly twenty-five years later. A group of people have met, among them the son and adopted daughter of the two couples in the bungalow. Lois Carruthers has been adopted by the friend who arrived too late to save them, and Captain Stafford has come with his regiment to Merut, the scene of the old tragedy. A beautiful English girl, Beatrice Cary, and an English civilian named Travers, are the conspirators in the plot, involving a scheme which awakens the interest of the mysterious young Rajah and also means his financial ruin. He stands the loss bravely, but when Beatrice, who went into the plot against the Rajah, but has learnt to love him deeply, confesses that it was all a plot, and that she took part in it to save herself, and her mother from disgrace, he leaves them in utter disgust. He falls in with the plans of Behar Singh, and leads a great native rising. The hour of danger calls out the best in every man in the little English garrison except Travers, who is false and cowardly through all. By means of certain documents he secures a hold on Stafford which makes him give up Lois, whom Stafford loves. He works on the sense of right of the two young people till he secures the engagement he wishes and marries Lois. When the rising comes, and he cannot escape, he is killed.

During the rising the Rajah learns from the dying Travers that he is really Steven Carruthers, son of the English officer, who was killed and his half-caste wife, who was taken prisoner. He was born during her imprisonment and taken by Behar Singh to live as his pretended son. The words of Colonel Carmichael and of Beatrice persuade him to break away from his Hindoo people, the rising collapses at once, the Rajah is imprisoned, nominally, and Steven Carruthers is pardoned. He and Beatrice shortly afterwards married. Jack Stafford had been murdered by old Behar Singh at the beginning of the rising before the documents showed that he and Lois were half-brother and sister, she the daughter of Stafford's father and Behar Singh's stolen wife. To save Lois from the knowledge of her Hindoo blood he had suffered in silence. Even this knowledge, however, does not keep her oldest friend and childhood's lover, once cheated by Travers, from seeking her for his wife. The plot, especially the romantic portion of it, is unreal, the chief worth of the story is the contribution it makes to the knowledge of the west concerning the east, which is the only thing that can lead to any real understanding between the two elements of the Empire. Another novel from the clever pen of Elizabeth of German Garden fame, is 'The Caravanners,' (The Mueson Book Company). The controversies that waged over some of the former pictures of German domestic life are not likely to be set at rest by this addition to their number. The German husband in this story is a caricature, evidently intended to be the type of a class. The humor of the book is marred by its distinctly venomous quality. Though there can be no doubt that the German ideal of womanhood and the position of the Hausfrau differ greatly from the English ideas and customs, especially in view of the utterances of their illustrious head, yet anything so utterly stupid, boorish and selfish as the Baron von Otrringel is not worthy of credence as a type of any class in any country with a pretence to civilization. It is just a clever piece of spite. Yet, being clever, it is decidedly entertaining, if not convincing. The story is told by the Baron himself, with colossal conceit with regard to himself and his country he writes down his views on the caravan trip he has made with his wife, Edelgard, and a party of English tourists. Two of them are, from his point of view, spoiled German women, who have absorbed the ideas of English society and ceased to be the unquestioning subjects and subservient admirers of their masculine relations. The Baron has fallen under the spell of the Frau von Otrringel's bright conversation and tiny feet. It is on her invitation he joins the Caravanners for a month's trip. The weather turns out to be most unpropitious for the expedition. Rain, fog, chilly winds damp the Baron's ardor at the outset. The others are prepared to make the best of things, and enjoy the camping out even under difficulties. But the weather is not the chief drawback. The disgust with which the Baron beholds the men take the heavy end of all the work, driving the horses, making the fires, cooking the sausages and eggs, going on foraging expeditions, is only equalled by his horror and indignation at the discovery that his well-trained wife has succumbed to these new influences and shows immediate signs of insubordination. All the party harmonize except the Baron, who soon discovers that whenever he honors any member of the company with his conversation and his views, that member in a short time remembers something to be done at once and disappears. He is exceedingly rude to two strange young men of the party, as he supposes them to be of inferior rank to himself. The German attitude to the clergy is also caricatured in this connection, though not to the same extent as the attitude to wives. One of the young men is popularly known as 'Sidje' Browne, and is studying for the Church. This is enough for the Baron. He seeks opportunity to be offensive by way of proving his superiority, and then finds to his dismay that he is really Lord Sigismund Browne, and a cousin of a very lofty Serene Highness in Germany. He then proceeds to try to efface the impression of his first rudeness that he may be invited to the ancestral home and be presented to the august relative. His success, never very great, is reduced to a minus quantity by an interview with the occupants of a motor car which he meets on a narrow road. He has heard the expression, 'road-hog' applied to selfish motorists, and takes the opportunity to block the road with his caravan and send the motor into the ditch, while addressing the owner of the car by this polite epithet. He feels himself hardly used by fate when the irate old motorist is discovered to be Lord Sidje's father. That is the beginning of the end. The indignant old man carries off his son from such company. The other young man, Jellaby, a member of parliament, is very devoted to the pretty widow, Frau von Eckthum. The Baron falls to see how the lady can endure his company and on various occasions interferes and attaches himself to her. He goes in to the crypt of Canterbury Cathedral one evening when they are sojourning by that town, and hears the lady and Jellaby deploring the company of 'that bounder.' He never dreams they refer to himself, but applies all their remarks to Menzies-Legh, the husband of Frau von Eckthum's sister. He comes round the pillar and strikes them dumb with horror, announcing that he has heard all they said, but will keep their secret. He again takes the lady from Jellaby and escorts her to the caravans. Next morning Jellaby disappears and the Menzies-Legh party have a telegram that necessitates their leaving. When the Baron finds that Frau von Eckthum is also going, even his frugality is sacrificed to his disappointment, he pays the month's caravan hire, though only a week has passed, and takes Edelgard back to Germany. The atmosphere of Storchwerder soon takes effect on her new high spirits, though the influence of that unfortunate caravan trip is hard to efface. When the Baron hears of Frau von Eckthum's marriage to Jellaby he is thunder-struck, as he is convinced she is in love with himself, but decides to lock his secret in his own breast—and his book.

Another of George Bell and Sons' artistic reprints of pastoral stories is 'Silas Marner,' George Eliot's simplest story of country life. The weaver of Raveloe, his adopted child, Eppie, sweet Nancy Lattimer and her weak lover and husband, Godfrey Cass, with his wicked brother, and Eppie's sturdy young lover, Aaron Winthrop, are congenial subjects for the pencil of that most sympathetic of pastoral artist illustrators, M. V. Wheelhouse, whose work adorns so many of the Messrs. Bell's publications. The book is one of the 'Queen's Treasures Series,' bound in linen, at 2s. 6d.

The fourteenth volume of the 'Collections of the Nova Scotia Historical Society' is published by Wm. MacNab & Son, Halifax. This volume contains four papers dealing with early history in the seaboard province. The first is a very full account of the various acts, treaties and agreements entered into by Britain, on behalf of Canada, with the United States, with reference to fishing rights and privileges on the coasts of Newfoundland and Nova Scotia. In view of the recent award of the Hague Tribunal, made public since the going to press of this volume, it is of special interest to follow the steps of that special goal. The words of the writer, the Hon. Wallace Graham, Judge of the Supreme Court of Nova Scotia, receive endorsement from the more recent judgment of the Arbitration Court. On the whole, as a result of the treaties, the arbitrations and adjudications, we have come off well. His position throughout is that the United States Government was not warranted in claiming the rights possessed by the American colonies of Great Britain. It shows how the Treaty of Paris accorded them privileges in Canadian waters, but distinguished between these and their rights on the high seas. These privileges were withdrawn after the war of 1812, and the subject has been a bone of contention ever since the convention of 1818. These limited the fishing rights to the status they have held up to the present year. The Reciprocity Treaty in force from 1854 to 1866 and various other temporary agreements have altered the relations between the countries for a time, but these have always reverted to the status fixed by the 1818 convention. The most disputed point, the construction to be put upon the word 'bays,' still unsettled when the paper was written, has now been set at rest by the Hague award, in accordance with the principle laid down by Judge Graham. In closing, he pays a glowing tribute to the part played by the Home Government.

The memoir of Governor John Parr, of Nova Scotia, is a vivid and fairly appreciative though not flattering portrait of that famous soldier and careful governor. The tale of the sufferings of the U. E. Loyalists before they were driven from their homes in the revolted colonies, throws in the shade the deepest tragedy of the expulsion of the Acadians. The great work of John Parr was the settling of the refugees on Nova Scotia soil. He set himself to the task with such energy that he became very deeply interested in the newcomers, and was as ready as the Home Government to bestow on them not only lands, but offices and honors. Too ready, the old-converts thought, and the descendants of some of them is ready to affirm. We do not easily realize now how unpopular many of these refugees were at the time, nor what demands they made on the loyal colonists of Nova Scotia. Time has softened their defects and thrown into relief their virtues, especially their loyalty to Britain. The account of the De Monts Tercentenary and the capture of St. Pierre in 1793 call to mind the old French days of war and adventure. —a capture of the two rocky islands, with great loss of blood and less time and trouble, than the disposal of the prisoners afterwards. Halifax once more was a relief camp, as it had been in the loyalist days, until the French colonists were sent back to Europe. When Britain, in a spirit of friendliness handed back the islands at the close of the war, most of the old inhabitants returned to build up their ruined homes and restore in the new world a little bit of old France.

The novel, by E. Phillips Oppenheim (The Mueson Book Company, Toronto), will appeal to the reader who enjoys the shadowy mazes of intrigue through which winds the alluring thread of romance. Ferdinand Delora, a Brazilian, is commissioned by his government to negotiate the purchase in England of two battle-ships to be handed over to China. In Paris he falls a victim to a powerful, mysterious gang of thieves, and while ill and deprived of memory and reason his brother, Maurice, who lives in Paris, procures his papers and goes to England, ostensibly to carry out the transaction, in reality to secure the tremendous sum involved for himself and his confederates. Figuring prominently in the course of events are Captain Rotherby, a young Englishman of leisure, Louis, a maitre d'hotel, and Selicia Delora, the niece of the chief conspirator. Of course, the plot is not revealed until the end of the story, when Delora dies, seemingly by his own hand, but in all probability by the hand of Louis; when part of the two hundred thousand pounds involved is found on his person, and when the brave Englishman and the lovely Parisienne become married lovers.

A new development in imaginative literature is found in an anonymous book published by The Mueson Book Co. There is likely to be considerable difference of opinion, especially among women readers over 'Letters to My Son.' They deal with a subject seldom treated at length in fiction, though it is frequently suggested to add a thrill of human interest to scenes of domestic life. The letters are all written between the time when the mother definitely knows that a child is to be born and the time of his birth. They contain a vigorous, whole-hearted, prosperous Englishwoman's views on various subjects, such as, religion, morality and social science, as well as glimpses of the intimate life of home and heart between the best type of English country gentleman as devoted to his wife as she is to him, and the tenderness and fond imaginings of a loving mother brooding over her unborn child. It is all very well done, with grace and much emotional power, the difference of opinion will be as to whether such an unveiling of the sanctities of home life is desirable or not. There is a good deal to be said on both sides. In this age of club life and business life, when the gentler feelings of humanity are apt to be crowded out by other interests, the heart may be warmed by sitting so close to the hearthstone. Yet the national reserve that has prevailed about the British home is a safeguard not to be lightly broken down. We do not wear our hearts on our sleeves.

'Molly' has already appeared as a short serial in one of the periodicals, and is now issued in book form by the Copp, Clark Company, Limited, Toronto. The author is Eleanor Hallowell Abbott. A rubber broker, Carl Stanton, is confined to his lonely apartments by an acute attack of rheumatism. His fiancée, young, beautiful, coldly selfish, and undemonstrative, has gone South, leaving him to battle alone with the horrible physical suffering and loneliness. In one of her infrequent, matter-of-fact letters she encloses a dainty odd little circular advertising 'The Serial Letter Company'; offering to supply epistles of all sorts and conditions for a remuneration. Maddened by pain and utterly lonely the sick man applies to the 'Company' and receives day after day the most tantalizingly original, whimsical, missives, accompanied by the oddest gifts and bearing the signature Molly Make-Believe. Of course, the inevitable happens—the mysterious Molly with her keen insight, quick understanding sympathy and vivid imagination displaces the prosody indifferent fiancée in the affections of the sick man. Breaking his engagement, he sets out to discover the whereabouts of the letter-writer, and with the aid of a detective finds her in a little Vermont village. The charm of the little story lies not in its plot, but in the quaint fancies of the dainty Molly, and her sympathy almost poignantly kept, another power of unselfish loving.

The reminiscences of Goldwin Smith that appear in the November 'Canadian,' as the first of a series, touch upon his connection with the 'Saturday Review,' in his early days in London. After speaking of the proprietors, John Douglas Cook and Alexander Beresford Hope, the story continues: 'The other members of the original staff, if I remember rightly, were Rev. Venables Maine, afterwards Sir Henry Maine, the historical jurist; Lord Robert Cecil, after Lord Salisbury; Thomas Colclough Sanders, a clergyman called, from his cure, Scott of Hoxton; and William Harcourt, who joined the staff. George Venables and Lord Robert Cecil were the chief editors, while Sir Henry Maine, the historical jurist, was the guest of Hope at Bexleybury, where we had very pleasant meetings. I was a young man, and I always felt and expressed more confidence in his judgment and rectitude than in his strength. Bismarck in his slashing way said of him that he was a pale pointed to look like iron. This was exaggerated. But Lord Salisbury used to speak both in public and private of Disraeli's character and designs in terms which I think have been thought would make their union impossible. His ultimate submission to Disraeli was ascribed to the pressure of his aspiring wife.

In the first instalment of his account of 'Saddle and Camp in the Rockies,' in the current 'Outing,' Dillon Wallace tells of his experiences in the land of the Apaches. These words of Uncle Sam are still children of the wild, in several cases shy of the camera and in others amusingly anxious to be photographed, but their patriotism is well developed, at least in one direction. At one stopping place Mr. Wallace had evidence of this: 'I made some purchases in the store, and in my change received a government cheque made out in favor of an Indian who could not write. It is required in cases of this kind that the endorsement be made with the endorser's mark witnessed by two signatures. This Indian had wet his thumb with ink and thus made his mark which to my surprise was witnessed by no less than three persons than Theodore Roosevelt and Hoke Smith. 'Are these signatures genuine?' I asked. 'Oh, yes,' answered Coleman, 'Teddy Roosvelt will be in to-morrow, and you'll have an opportunity to meet him.' Sure enough Teddy came, bandanna handkerchiefs around his neck, and all. He was an Apache Indian policeman, I saw another cheque endorsed by Abraham Lincoln, Oliver Cromwell, and George Washington.

Arthur L. Frothingham, some professor of ancient history, archaeology, Princeton University, recently discovered in the Vatican the tomb of Marcus Aurelius. Estimating its identity as the tomb of one of Rome's four greatest emperors, and as a magnificent work of art, he convicts the Emperor Constantine of a by no means uncommon theft in appropriating it for the Empress Helena. There seems little question but that the sarcophagus could not have been carved for the Christian Emperor, and certainly the weight of evidence lies with the author's contention. Prof. Frothingham's narrative of what will probably be adjudged his notable find, is the leading article, well illustrated, in the November 'Century.'

What C. R. N. Fletcher, formerly Fellow of All Souls and Magdalen College, Oxford, lacks in dignity he makes up in forcefulness in his style in 'An Introductory History of England,' of which volumes III and IV are now published by E. P. Dutton & Co. The title is a misnomer, for the author has missed what he set out to accomplish, the drawing up of an introductory historical sketch for the use of the younger students, but he has produced a most readable commentary on various men and matters of English history. Something of his style may be indicated in the quotation of a few of his characterizations such as of George II, 'the vainest little strutting peacock of a man you can conceive,' of James, who added to his Popery the misfortune of being an immeasurable ass,' of the British soldier at the time of the American Revolution, as 'still an amorphous lobster, loaded with all the horrible rigidities of an intolerable uniform.' Of the Revolution itself he says: 'The baleful skill with which the leaders of the revolt played their cards seldom been equalled. The most disgusting hypocrite of the lot is perhaps Benjamin Franklin, the Pennsylvania Quaker, who, with loyalty ever on his lips, patiently undermined in both worlds the cause of the loyalists and of the government, seduced Chatham, whom he visited in 74, with his glib phrases about the 'old Whigs of the old like; swore that his countrymen had no thought of separation at the very time that Congress was in the making; and finally, negotiated the treaty with France. The rant and froth about Natural Rights were left to Patrick Henry and Jefferson. The Machiavellian intrigues to Samuel Adams. Every molecule of maladministration was magnified into a mountain, and artfully shown off on a broad background of principle.'

There is a word of praise to be said for that 'light' reading which leaves a smile behind it even though its cherry road lies outside the pale of real literature, and in face of much of the sordid material that is put together between bookcovers in the sacred names of art and truth, it is pleasant to welcome now and again much that is cheerful and simply wholesome, however it may sin against the standards of literature that last. Mr. George Barr McCutcheon, who can claim the distinction of the best seller, however much his books may be looked at askance by the stickler for style, was asked recently for the recipe for his success. He replied: 'I just try to write cheerfully about men and women as I see them. Most persons like cheerful stories, and so I suppose they like my stories. And, of course, the right man always gets the right girl in my books.'

Mr. Lang's twenty-third annual Christmas book, 'The Little Fairy Book,' has just been published by Longmans, Green & Co. In the preface Mr. Lang writes: 'The fairy-book has been almost wholly the work of Mrs. Lang, who has translated and adapted them from the French, Italian, Portuguese, Italian, Spanish, Catalan, and other languages. My part has been that of Adam, according to Mark Twain, in the Garden of Eden. I have worked, Adam superintended, and so superintended. I find out where the stories are, and advise, and in short superintend. I do not write the stories out of my own head.'

WAS REDUCED TO A SKELETON GIVEN UP BY THE DOCTORS AND PREPARED TO DIE "FRUIT-A-TIVES" SAVED HER LIFE.

MADAME ARTHUR TOURANGEAU. During digestion, the muscular coat squeezes and presses the food from one end of the stomach to the other, and this churning mixes the food with the Gastric Juice. If the food is not churned properly, or if the Gastric Juice is weak—then the food is not dissolved properly and indigestion and Chronic Dyspepsia result. Gastric Juice comes from the blood—and the only way to have strong, active Gastric Juice is to keep the blood pure by keeping the bowels and kidneys regular, and the skin active. "Fruit-a-tives" will always cure indigestion, Sour Stomach and Chronic Dyspepsia because the fruit juices act on liver, bowels, kidneys and skin, purifying the blood. "Fruit-a-tives" relieves any irritation in the stomach—strengthens the muscular coat—and ensures the Gastric Juice being full strength and abundant. If you have any Stomach Weakness or Trouble of Digestion, by all means take "Fruit-a-tives." 50c a box—6 for $2.50—trial size, 25c. Sent on receipt of price, if your dealer does not handle them, by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Madame Tourangeau suffered for eleven years, and was finally given up to die by her physicians. "Fruit-a-tives"—the marvelous remedy made of fruit juices—completely cured her and restored her to health. Here is her letter—read it—study it—profit by it. Riviere a Pierre, Co. Portneuf, Que., May 9th, 1910. "I look upon my recovery as nothing short of a miracle. I was for eleven years, constantly suffering from Chronic Dyspepsia and Indigestion with Constipation. The last two years of my illness I was confined to my bed nearly all the time. I was treated by several doctors and they simply did me no good. During the last 90 pounds, and I vomited everything I ate. Even water would not stay on my stomach. "The doctors gave me up to die as the stomach trouble produced heart weakness and I was frequently unconscious. I received the Last Rites of the Church and looked forward to death in a short time. I was reduced to a skeleton. "At this time, a lady friend strongly urged me to try "Fruit-a-tives," and how thankful I am that I did so. When I had taken one box, I was much better, and after three boxes I was practically well again and had gained 20 pounds. I have taken 13 boxes in all and now weigh 150 pounds and am absolutely well—no pain—no constipation—my heart is sound—and complexion clear. "For the sake of other sufferers, I give you permission to publish my letter and photograph."

NEW PLACE VIGER STATION WILL HAVE SEVENTEEN TRACKS

Square Mile of Excavation to Complete New Extensions and Improvement of Freight Facilities on C.P.R.'s Great East End Terminal.

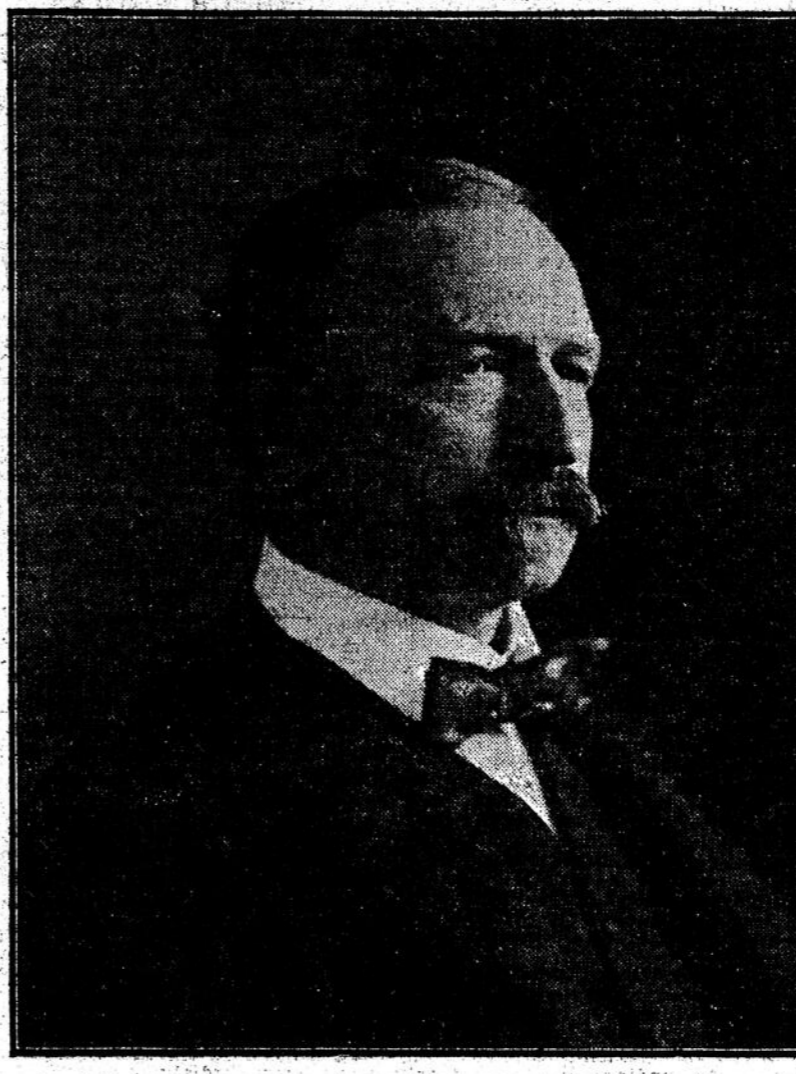

Within five hundred yards of the centre of the city there is a spot where no less than one square mile of stupendous excavation and building work is at present going on, with hundreds of men working simultaneously at hundreds of different kinds of labor.

Within twelve months it is expected that the new bridge, the new warehouses, the new station, the new hotel, all will be finished—a temporary viaduct has been built so as to permit of the ordinary traffic proceeding without inconvenience.

cut factory, Paquette's saw and planing mill, and the Montreal Brewing Company's brewery. Notre Dame street was built up the entire distance with stores and dwellings, the majority of which were modern buildings. The side streets were built up mostly of dwelling houses of brick and stone. The removal of these buildings necessitated months of labor for a large army of men, and this work was not finally completed until late in the spring of the present year.

Before the last buildings had been removed, the steam shovels had commenced work last April on what, perhaps, constituted the largest piece of work of one kind in connection with the Place Viger improvements, and, in fact, possibly the largest excavation from one place, and handled in the same time, which has been undertaken in this city.

This permanent bridge over Notre Dame street will be a modern structure in every sense of the word, the foundations consisting of about 200 concrete pedestals and two abutments on which will stand a heavy steel structure supporting a modern waterproof bridge present ground area, will be of structural steel and concrete, and freproof, and will take many months more to complete, but when it is finally put into service, the East end of Montreal will be able to point with pride to a hotel and station which for modern facilities and completeness in every respect will not have a rival in this or any other city until the completion of the new Windsor station.

SIR THOMAS SHAUGHNESSY,

Go into the station to-day, and it will be found that the old eight tracks are deserted except for the cars brought on to them to carry away the debris of the old bridge, and the debris of the old platform coverings. The tracks now run at right angles to the direction of the old ones, and twelve of the new tracks are now in operation. When finished there will be five more, on the space which is now covered by the cliff which separates the existing tracks from the bridge preparations. It is true that between the present tracks there are only wooden platforms, of three-inch planks on cedar sills, but it was too late in the season after the excavation was completed to construct concrete platforms, which work must be done in warm weather owing to the over the construction of the concrete platforms. Each service track in this yard lies between a baggage and passenger platform, so that in the handling of traffic the baggage trucks will be taken down a platform supplied solely for that purpose, which will be entirely free of passengers. High power electric standards now shed a magnificent light over all the twelve tracks already in use.

The reconstruction of the freight facilities, apart from the preparation for carrying out same included in the excavation, and the storage warehouse under Notre Dame street, will not be undertaken this season, but as soon as the snow is off the ground next spring, the present team track yard will be enlarged; the old freight sheds, alongside the river, removed, and replaced with modern in-bound and out-bound sheds, office buildings of freproof construction, and all modern freight handling appliances.

These new sheds will each be approximately 1,000 feet in length, provided with both trackage and teaming facilities. The wagon roadways, which will extend to miles in length, will be constructed on modern lines, which will insure good roadways throughout the season. The team yard will be equipped with the latest type of heavy freight loading machinery, in fact, all the elevators and other mechanical equipment to be used on this terminal will, as far as possible, be operated by electricity, thereby insuring prompt handling combined with cleanliness.

The total trackage, which will be in use when the new layout is completed, will be upwards of ten miles, and the platforms in the passenger yard, if laid continuously, would extend for a distance of between two and three miles.

The winter, of course, is coming along, and will prevent some work, but the structural steel work will be continuously proceeded with, more particularly that part in connection with the new Notre Dame street bridge.

Apart from the actual erection of the new station, the extensive alterations definite shape, the rest of it is still an immense cleft, many hundreds of yards long, and deep as the highest cliffs at the seashore, which this part much resembles.

This work is for the C. P. R. Place Viger station and hotel, which will give Montreal another railway terminus that will not be far, in appearance, behind even the Windsor station of the same company, when the further additions there are also completed.

People passing along Craig street see little of workings of the new work going on. Trains standing on the completed twelve new tracks, which now run along parallel with Craig street, at the rear of it, on the river side, are about all that can be noticed of the enormous alterations which have taken place, and are taking place in the district, a square mile in extent, which lies behind the hotel and extends east as far as Sohmer Park.

But walk up the little hill in Berli street, passing the front of the new station—now already risen one story from the ground—and turn on to the bridge along Notre Dame street eastwards.

You won't go very far, not more than a hundred and fifty yards before you discover that the main roadway is seen, as it is called off, and it is very necessary, too, that it is called off, for half a dozen yards in front of the barricade the high roadway suddenly ends in space.

The eye travels beyond the sudden sheer break. Spread over what looks like a quarter of a mile straight in front lies a vast underneath sort of world, so far below that the men moving about and working there look mere pigmies throughout the length and breadth of all.

Along to the left rears up the immensely high and immensely long rugged edge of the cliff. Straight level ahead, far below, run hundreds of consecutive pedestals, at equal distances apart, looking for all the world like beehives, which are the foundations for the steel columns and beams on which the floorway of the new bridge will be laid, which bridge, when completed, will be fifteen hundred feet long, and will extend from Berli to Montclair street. Underneath it all will be the two-story freproof storage warehouse, fitted with elevators, which will be finished within the next few months. To the right stretches out a wilderness of car lines, freight cars, and open ground, down to where the two elevators at the river side tower above.

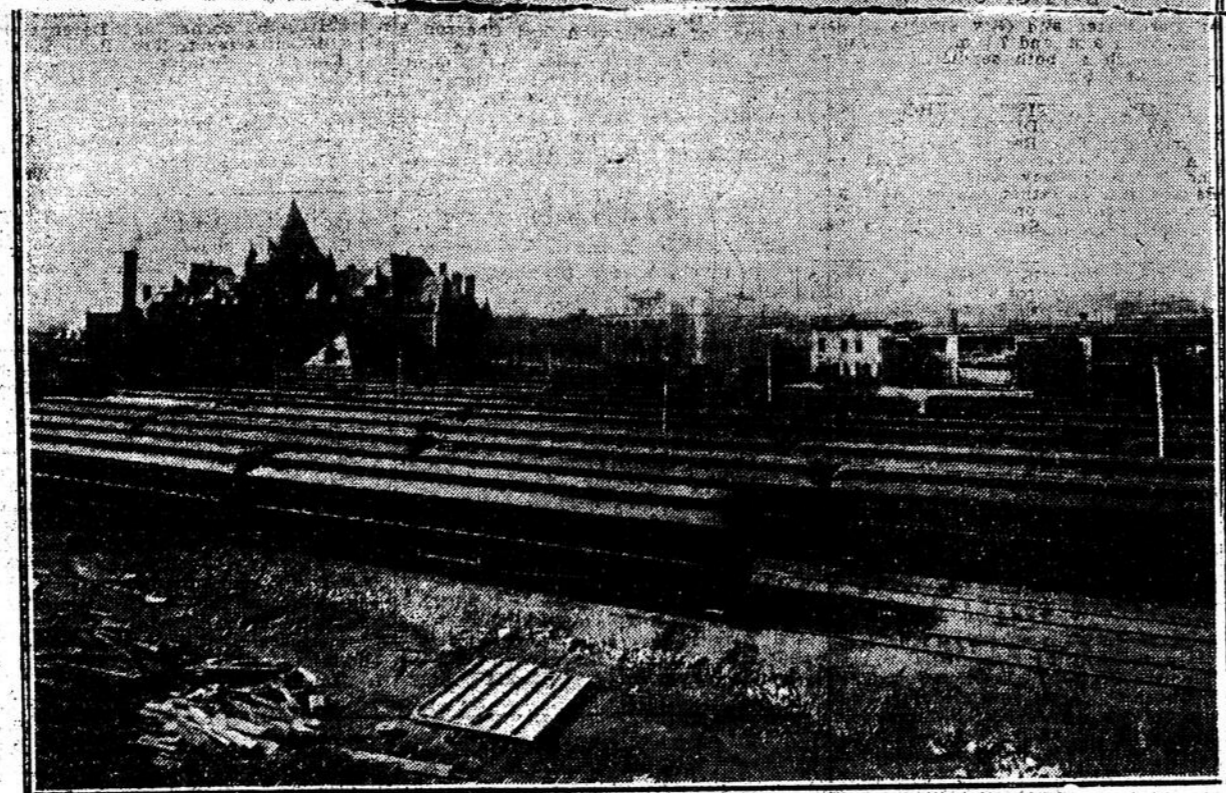

While this prodigious work goes on and it looks on the face of it as though here was a job for life, yet

Montclair and Notre Dame streets and running from there parallel with Notre Dame to Lacroix street, then swinging back on a curve to the existing Notre Dame street bridge at that point. The construction of this temporary roadway itself, necessitated a large amount of labor, and took approximately one month to complete.

As regards the new station entrance, this will be at the present Berri and floor, the surface of which will be made of the best street paving material obtainable. Along the centre will run a double line of street car tracks, which will be laid with the heavy new rails now in use by the Montreal Street Railway.

As regards the new station entrance, this will be at the present Berri and

THE NEW PLACE VIGER STATION.—The photograph shows twelve of the new railway tracks running parallel with Craig street, and also the back of the picturesque Place Viger Hotel.

It included the diversion of the Montreal Street Railway and the Light, Heat and Power Company's, and Bell Telephone Company's pole lines and wires, and the construction of a roadbed and sidewalk about 1,200 feet long. A single car track line goes light through, carrying a light car. A few carts and a few pedestrians daily proceed along it, but not one Montrealer in a thousand has the faintest idea of the scene day by day unfolded. The temporary bridge looks down on to the twelve new tracks and the trains standing upon them at the foot of the cliff beneath.

Everything about this part giganticly points to the huge character of the work being done by the C. P. R. to put up and equip an improved second station in Montreal which shall be able to expeditiously deal with all the immense traffic of this largest company in the world, not only in 1911, but even for many years to come. The C. P. R. do not wait for fancies. They get ready beforehand, and the tangles never appear.

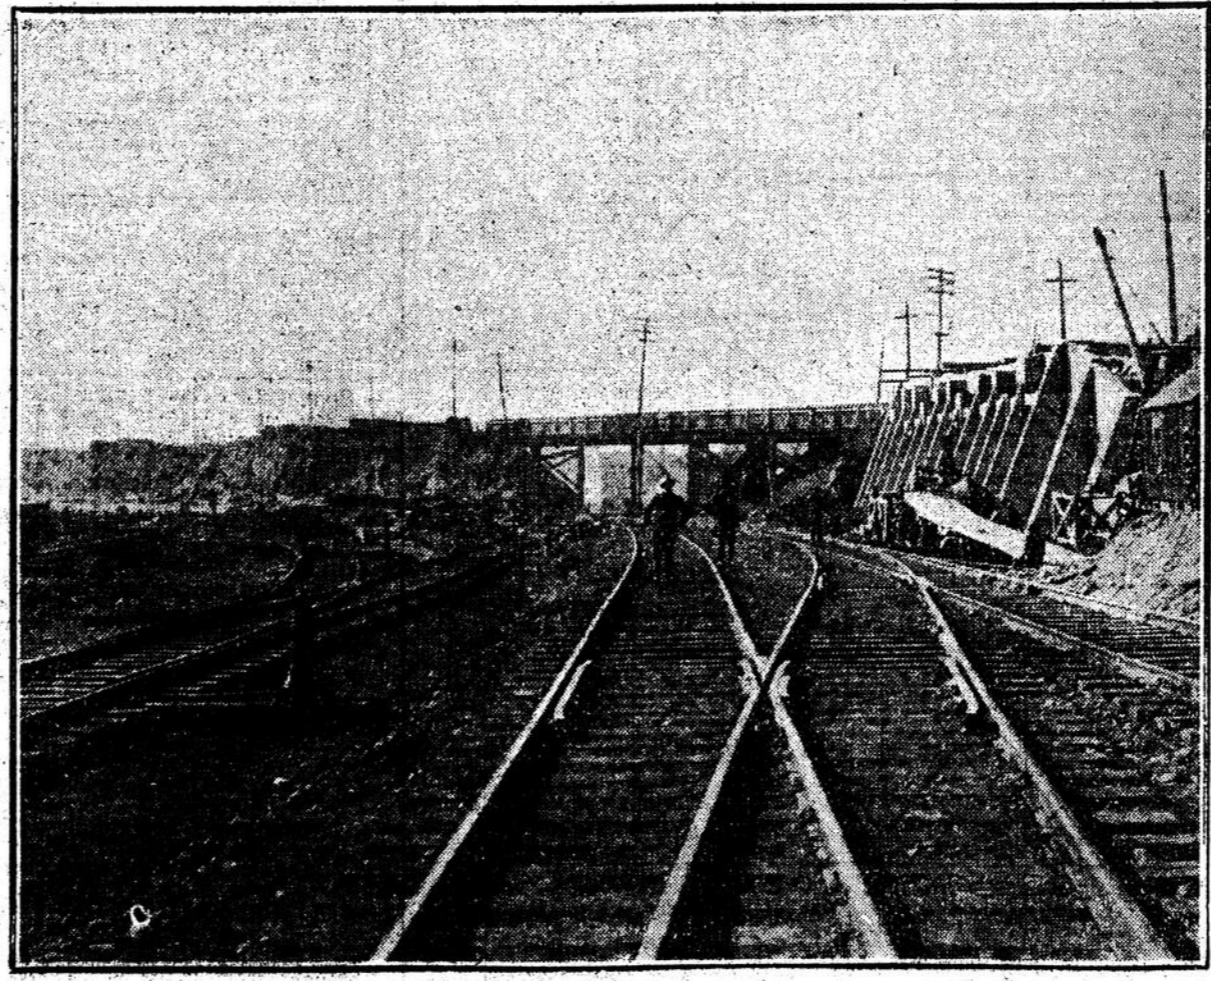

Throughout that long thousand-foot additional stretch for lengthening the bridge, the building part of the work here is now only just beginning to show its head above the ground.

This party from April 15th to September 20th has had over 370,000 cubic yards of material taken from it, two great crab-like steam shovels, known as the Atlantic type, 24 yard buckets tearing out the earth day by day, and together with Hart convertible cars, locomotives, Lidgeford ballast loaders, and Jordan spreaders, the most modern equipment in construction work, has dumped it on the harbor front, there to be utilized in connection with the raising of the harbor tracks to a higher level, so that these tracks will not be likely to be submerged during the high water in the spring.

The greater part of the summer last year, and also last winter, was spent in clearing the property purchased by the C.P.R. Company, which extended on the south side to Notre Dame street, from Lacroix street to Panet street, close by the western boundary of Sohmer Park. On the north side of Notre Dame street the property purchased extended from Lacroix to Montclair street, and part of this distance northward as far as Craig street.

Craig street corner. For this considerable alterations will be necessary on the existing domains of the hotel. At present the station proper, which is being extended along Berri street about 300 feet, and which has already reached one story, practically duplicating its effect of frost on the concrete when laid in such an exposed manner. Eventually these tracks and platforms will be protected by a train shed or roof. This work, however, will not be undertaken this year for the same reason which necessitated holding

THE NEW PLACE VIGER STATION.—All this dividing cliff has yet to come down to make room for five additional tracks.

Pneumonia

Pneumonia is nothing more or less than "Lung Fever," or as it used to be called, "Inflammation of the Lungs," and the results come entirely from a local source, such as taking a violent cold.

There is more or less difficulty in breathing, a cough, at first dry, but soon accompanied by raising a thick, sticky, rusty-colored matter, composed of a mixture of phlegm and blood.

There is only one way to prevent Pneumonia, and that is to cure the cold just as soon as it appears. Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup will do this quickly and effectively.

Mrs. G. W. Bowman, Pattullo, Ont., writes: "Three years ago I caught a cold which ended in a severe attack of Pneumonia. Since that time, at the beginning of each winter, I seem to catch cold very easily. I have been so hoarse that I was unable to speak loud enough to be heard across the room. Last winter, however, a friend advised me to try Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, saying it had helped her. I bought a bottle and before it was half used I was completely cured. I also find it a good medicine for the children when they have colds."

Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup is put up in a yellow wrapper; three pine trees the trade mark; the price 25 cents. Manufactured only by The T. Milburn Co., Limited, Toronto, Ont.

and enlargements to the famous hotel, and the fabrication and erection of the structural steel work in connection with Notre Dame street, all of which is let to contractors, under the direction of Mr. Painter, the company's architect, all the work that has been done and all the work yet to be accomplished has been done and will be done entirely under the direction of the forces of the C. P. R.

This work, it goes without saying, is of a very varied kind. There is bridge work, concrete work, platform, and the buildings apart from the station proper. All this has been in charge of Mr. J. H. Hawkins, bridge and building master of the Canadian Pacific Railway.

The track work and the excavation work also means another wholesale order. It is carried out under the superintendence of Mr. N. Delaire, roadmaster of the C. P. R.

The divisional engineer of the C. P. R. in charge is Mr. C. B. Brown, with Mr. S. P. McConnell, an assistant divisional engineer.

The resident engineer, who has charge of all the outside work, is Mr. K. Montgomery.

In charge of the entire operation is Mr. R. Gilliland, superintendent of Montreal terminals, and of the section as far as Smith's Falls.

It is not so long since the present, and soon to be known as the old Place Viger station and hotel, were built, with accommodation then, suitable in every way, it might have been supposed, for at least a quarter of a century.

If this new station proves insufficient, the only thing will be for the C. P. R. to push back through those intervening five hundred yards, and take in the Champ de Mars, including the City Hall, the Court House, and the government buildings.

It is not, by any means, every one in Montreal, so great and so cosmopolitan has grown the city, who is aware that before the Place Viger Station and Hotel came into existence, some of the site was used for the Dalhousie Station. Neither does everybody here know that previous to that time Dalhousie square occupied the spot where now the old car tracks are in process of being torn up. In those comparatively ancient days, and Back in the days over a hundred years ago, this part of Notre Dame street was the fashionable afternoon promenade. The new Place Viger Station, with all its attendant facilities for merchandise, can hardly fail to add greatly to the position of Notre Dame street, from Berri to Gouffroy street, a locality which has looked for some years as if it had got lost, and the owner failed to claim it. Notre Dame street east, may yet, through the new station, set back to more than its old day distinction.

With one of the seven best hotels in the world, with a square mile of tracks and more than up-to-date storage and freight facilities on the very edge of the river, where can facilities of the new Place Viger be duplicated on this or any other continent except, possibly, and then not necessarily, at the new Windsor Station.

THE SAGGING SISTERHOOD

Age has been defined as simply a condition of the tissues, says a writer in the "Eagle." Sagging is even more simple—it is a habit of the tissues. At any age, it may begin young, or be indefinitely deferred by its would-not-be subject. Some women's mouths sag at 17, while some are firm and sweet at 70. Wrinkles and will be intimately connected. The will be to droopy and discontented is a mental make-up pencil, drawing tell-tale lines around the nose and mouth and furrowing the forehead before the first gray hair comes hastening to its aid.

Also, the mind can sag at any age—and frequently does so by 25. The sagging sisterhood contains many young novices, though it is recruited most largely, perhaps, by those in the 30's. The Rubicon, for many women, seems to come there. They halt, demur and give up. Once they used to take to caps. Now they take to mattresses, or invalidism, or eating and cards. Mental flabbiness grows on them. Never to be shaken off, says "Harpers Bazar." In any department store, the saggers can be observed in force—so much so, that to look over a car seat full of women, and see one middle-aged face whose mouth turns up instead of down at the corners, is an encouraging surprise.

Nevertheless, sagging is unnecessary at any age. It is a foolish habit. The health specialists who first started out to preach the Gospel of keeping the chest well up and the head held high were experts. They struck straight at the root of half the invalidism of a droopy woman—her habit of letting herself sag, of sitting in a heap, of standing in a way that is relaxed and ungraceful.

They have cured their hundreds—let us hope they will cure their ten thousands—but there are hundreds more every day who need their invigorating advice. To pull up the chest, lift the head, draw in the chin, step out, and keep going, is good doctrine, profitable for all and positively life-saving for some. When it becomes habit not to droop, but to stand lithely erect, rigors and ailments will roll off the straightened shoulders with an alacrity that seems miraculous, and sometimes is actually claimed to be so.

Polee spells power; sag spells weakness. A careful examination of one's mouth in the glass, and a definite resolve to pull up its corners therewith, may mean the reinvigoration of a home, the rebuilding of household ideals that had relaxed almost beyond repair. The habit of keeping at one's best is the most constructive of habits. One's level best soon turns out to be a rising level, then foothills, then peaks one held as beyond endeavor. The sagging sisterhood dwell forever in the valley. It would be sad—if they couldn't help it. As they can!

A woman has only to wear a sad expression of countenance and talk in a whining voice, and people give her credit for unfathomable depths of sentiment and emotion; while her sister, who goes smiling through life and irradiates cheerfulness wherever she may be, is credited with utter want of heart; for in these days of advertisement people have not the discernment to perceive the difference between the melancholy woman and the cheery one is generally the difference between selfishness and unselfishness. — Ellen Thornycroft Fowler.

Happiness does not consist in doing what we like, but in liking what we do. If we cannot live so as to be happy, let us at least live so as to deserve happiness.

Recipes to Reduce Meat Bills

Bolled Wheat.—Put one pint of wheat into a quart of water and boil hard one hour; turn off the water, thereby getting rid of the rank, coarse taste of the wheat. Fill up your dish and boil hard an hour, or till it all pops open. Eat hot, with milk or butter or cream, it is delicious.

Baked Corn Bread.—One cup flour, one-half cup wheat middlings, two cups corn meal, all stirred together. Melt a chunk of suet or dripping the size of two eggs, add one-half cup of molasses, one teaspoonful salt, the same of soda and cream tartar. Add a chunk of bacon the size of your hand, cut into pieces the size of a bean, stir the mass together with sour milk or buttermilk to make stiff batter. Add one egg if you so desire. Bake one and one-half hours in a covered dish. Now if you desire to cut down your flour bills, about one-half, commence to bake this delicious bread. You will never go back to white bread again after eating this.

Potatoes and Cheese.—Boil eight or more potatoes, mix together with a cupful of hot milk. Beat until very light, seasoning to taste and shape into a cone-shaped mound on a buttered baking dish. Make a large hollow in the centre of the mound, pour in a filling made of a tablespoonful of a half of melted butter, half a cupful of grated cheese, the yolks of two eggs well beaten and salt and pepper. When the cheese has melted and is mixed with the butter and eggs pour the mixture into the hollow mound. Spread the sides of the mound with grated cheese and bake until brown in a hot oven.

Fricadella.—Take one pound sirloin or lower round of beef. Chop fine and season with salt and paprika. Add one-half of an onion that has been sliced fine and fried, a little soup greens, chopped fine. Soak a thick slice of stale bread in water. When soft squeeze out water and mix bread with the meat. Bind with an egg, mix thoroughly and mould into a round form. Put in a small dripping pan and roast for about twenty minutes.

Turkish Rice.—Put into a saucepan a cupful of stewed and strained tomatoes. Add half a pint of stock, one chopped onion and salt and pepper to taste. When the mixture comes to a boil, stir in a cupful of water, washed rice. Stir lightly until the liquor is absorbed; then put in a cupful of butter. Steam over a slow fire for twenty minutes. Remove the top, stir gently

AN IDYL: - By Christopher Robert Stapleton

When 'neath my sheltered roof-tree
Just you and I alone
Are sitting cozy-cornered,
And you are all my own;
And every snore that comes
Its heavy accent dulled,
Has curged away in distance,
As though a storm had lulled—
Then shall you, dear, draw closer,
And, sheltered in my arms,
Forget that outside people
Know wrangles and alarms.

When, daily labors ended,
And gaze out o'er the meadows,
Where the sun is slipping down;
Or in a book I'm reading
Some tale of long ago,
How once in summer ages—
Men loved each other so—
Then shall you o'er my shoulder
Lean, bending like the rose,
Your vivid eyes both tempting,
Till doubly kissed they close.

When back from outward travel
I come at twilight gloom,
And scarce the cowbells' fancies
That hover through the room—
Those fancies which unsummoned
From filmy corners flit,
Too finely webbed and subtle
To brave one sunny smile—
Then shall our hearts together
Pulse on in measured life!
Home-sheltered from the weather,
We'll kiss as man and wife.

When silent years have fallen
To numbered page on page,
And you and I are sitting
In the ingle-nook of age;
And there and there are pauses
That slacken life's quick throbs—
The wheat of wisdom ripened,
The joy caught through the sob—
Then may our children's children
In every chamber roam;
And the young voices bless us,
When we old folks fare home,
—Yourth's Companion.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS.

Bristle brushes, if merely dusty, can be cleaned in kerosene.

A small broom made of stiff wire is convenient in cleaning skillets.

Keep a bag of sulphur in the bird cage to drive away lice.

Salt sprinkled on a carpet before sweeping reduces the amount of dust that rises.

Cut glass looks clearer when washed in tepid water and then brushed with a dry bristle brush.

To clean Japanese trays, rub a little olive oil on and then polish off with a flannel.

To polish stoves use boiled linsed oil on the steel parts. Rub well with a woolen cloth.

Ice cream becomes butter if it is not allowed to chill before the can is turned in the ice.

When mosquitoes get into the house and heat with the corn. The flavor is of carbolic acid on it.

A piece of beeswax tied up in a rag to rub quickly over the bottom of a hot flatiron will keep it smooth.

A boom board for the shirts should be very smooth and but thinly covered. Some advise a marble slab.

Do not put milk in the cut glass tumblers. Milk clouds glass so that its original brilliancy cannot be restored.

Some persons keep their vells in condition by dipping them in alcohol several times and hanging them up indoors to dry.

AMUSE YOUR CHILDREN.

"I am sick and tired," said a sweet-faced young mother, "of this modern amusement. To my mind it is just an excuse for selfish mothers to save their troubled consciences."

"No, you need not tell me of the evil to a child of making it dependent upon others for amusement. Few children have resources of their own, and if an older person will not help them out the poor little tots have a stupid time of it in the years when they should be the happiest."

"There is my Bobby. I play with him every day with never a thought of the misery I am laying up for his wife. His wife should be glad and thankful to amuse him when he is tolling and slaving for her. If she hates to sacrifice herself the more reason that Bob should remember a mother who was never too busy or too tired for a romp with him."

"The other day a red-hot lecture was read to me by the president of our Mothers' Club when she caught me blowing soap bubbles with my small boy. She assured me that I was spoiling him utterly by not allowing him to contrive plans for living his own life without help from others, and tried in every way to make me feel that it was his duty to invite her here."

"John has some quixotic ideas about duty, we all know."

"It was not pleasant for me to have her come," said Amy in a low tone; "but even Christ pleased not Himself."

Mrs. Harmon was silent. She was a Christian, but the thought flashed across her mind that many times her own pleasure had meant too much to her, and for a moment she felt uncomfortable.

Mrs. Belden is uneducated. Amy went on, "and her manners are surprising, but she has good common sense. And I really think that she is growing fond of me."

So it seemed, for when the time came for Mrs. Belden to return to her own home, she threw her arms around Amy and kissed her affectionately.

"Good-by, dear," she said. "You've been very kind to me. 'Tain't everybody that would 'a' wanted a plain old woman like me botherin' 'em. I've had the best time of my life, an' I shan't forget you an' John, nor your prayers either."

A year later John and Amy were summoned to the step-mother's bedside. She was passing from this life to another, but her countenance shone with peace.

"I'm ready to go, children," she said tremulously, "an' 'twas your kindness an' your prayers that set me to thinkin'. I made up my mind then an' there that I wanted the Christ that you trusted in, an' I found that. He was ready to take me.—"Morning Star."

who had lost the best interests of my child at heart.

"If Bobby is not going to be so good or as happy a man because his mother rocked him to sleep occasionally and would play with him whenever he asked her to he will have to run his chances of not turning out well."

"As for the romps, I enjoy them as much as Bob does. It brushes up my wits and limbers my bones to keep up with my small man."

"There is a lot of good in modern ideas of bringing children up, but some of the ways in which women carry them to excess makes me almost long for the times when we women were just unscientific mothers with only love to guide us in bringing up our little ones."

"I don't believe either Bob or Bobby's wife to be will ever revile his mother for the jolly hours my boy and I have had together. If they should do so, I do not care."—The Times.

Other gifts there are none. And this is a custom that one could wish were more general. There is no wedding cake, either as we understand it, but each guest receives a kind of sweet cake of the substance of cracknel biscuits, made in the form of a ring about ten inches in diameter.

Do you mean I can do it by "Yes"? "When I say "Now I lay me," word for word, it seems to me as if nobody heard—Would "Thank you, dear God," be right? He gave me my mamma. And papa and Sammy—O mamma, you nodded I might! Clapping his hands and hiding his face. Unconsciously yearning for help and for grace. The little one now began: His mother's nod and sanction sweet. Had led him close to the Lord's dear feet. And his words like music ran: "Thank you for making this home so nice. The flowers, and folks, and my two white mice (I wish I could keep right on); I thank you, too, for every day, Only I'm most too glad to pray,—Dear God, I think I'm done.

"Now mamma, rock me—just a minute— And sing the hymn with "darling" in it— I wish I could say my prayers! When I get big I know I can; Oh! won't it be nice to be a man. And stay all night downstairs?" The mother, singing, clasping him tight, Kissing and cooing a fond "Good-night," Treasured his every word. And well she knew the artless joy And love of her precious, innocent boy. Were a prayer that her Lord had heard. —Mary E. Dodge (Selected).

MENDING THE DUSTPAN.

"Sonny," said Rob's mother to the child, "I'll give you a dime if you'll mend my dustpan."

Rob looked at the dustpan, which had parted company with its handle, and wished he were a tinsmith. Then he had an idea. He found a lath about a yard long, sandpapered it smooth and nailed it to the back of the dustpan in such a way that one end rested on the floor, while the other served as a handle. Rob's mother can use her dustpan without stooping now, and likes it much better than before.—Tribune.

THE LITTLE BOY'S OWN PRAYER.

Kneeling, full in the twilight grey, A beautiful child was trying to pray; His cheek was on his mother's knee. His little bare feet half hidden. His smile still coming unbidden, And his heart brimful of glee.

"I want to laugh. Is it naughty? Say? Oh, mamma! I've had such fun to-day, I hardly can say my prayers. I don't feel just like prayin'; I want to be outdoors, playin'. And run, all undressed, downstairs."

I can see the flowers in the garden bed, Shining so pretty, and sweet, and red, And Sammy is swinging, I guess— Oh! everything is so fine out there, I want to put it all in my prayer;

THE STEPMOTHER

By WILL N. JENKINS

John Belden, country man and bred, had like many country boys, gone to the nearest city to seek his fortune, but unlike many he had resisted the temptations with which he was surrounded. The teachings of a Christian mother, who had gone to her reward, followed him; and his final often many prayers in his behalf often stirred his heart; and finally in a great religious awakening, he yielded to the pleadings of the Spirit and became a professed follower of Christ. He prospered in worldly matters, and at thirty was proprietor of a thriving little business. About this time he married Amy Harmon.

The Harmones were well-to-do people, cultured and refined. Amy was a church member and a faithful worker, but her lot had fallen in pleasant places. Her parents had shielded her carefully from hardships, and the best in which she had moved had been very exclusive. She knew nothing of the rough side of life, and shrunk from contact with coarse, uneducated people. Before her marriage she had remarked to her mother:

"There is absolutely no one who has a claim on John. His step-mother is living, but she will not trouble us. He was fifteen years of age when his father married again, and in less than two years he left home, so the old lady is nothing to him."

"What sort of a woman is she?" asked Mrs. Harmon, with considerable interest.

"From what John told me she must be coarse and ignorant. I am so thankful that we shall not be compelled to notice her."

But she had been married only six months when, one evening, John said earnestly:

"Amy, dear, I have been thinking that we ought to do something for my step-mother."

Amy looked up quickly. "Why, John, I thought you told me that he income was sufficient for her simple wants."

"So it is, Amy, but she requires help of a different kind. She is not a Christian, and she must not be nearly twenty years of age."

"That is sad, indeed. But I don't see how we can help her."

"My dear, I think that is a way to help her. She must be very lonely in that big house, not handy to neighbors. I have neglected her, and my conscience is not easy. The mere fact that she is provided with material things is no excuse. Her soul must be starving."

"John, I fail to see how you have neglected her. She has no claim on you."

"She was my father's wife."

"Well, what of it?" and it must be confessed that Amy's tone was a trifle reluctant. "Your father lived only a few years after he married her, and she certainly never did much for you."

"That is true, Amy, but she was kind to me in her way. I was a proud, sensitive boy, and when my father married her I was a delicate, refined woman—had been dead but two years, and to see a stranger in her place was bitterness itself to me."

"I can understand that, John," said Amy softly, putting her hand caringlingly on her husband's shoulder.

"My step-mother tried at first to win my heart, but I was stubborn and she soon ceased her advances and spoke to me only when it was necessary. Then I left home, and have since troubled myself but little about her. She has no relatives, and I fear, but few friends, and though I have tried to persuade myself that I could not be expected to notice her, and she has probably never thought of such a thing, yet I feel that I have not done right. It has come to me very forcibly of late that I am neglecting a duty that Christ requires of me."

"What would you do?" gravely inquired Amy.

"My dear, if we should invite her here for a few weeks and strive to make her visit pleasant, might it not be a help to her?"

"Perhaps so, John."

"She is uneducated, and no doubt her dress would be quaint and old-fashioned. If she should visit us a great many comments would doubtless be made. Of course, Amy, I do not wish to invite her unless you are willing, but in any case I must go to her. I wrote to her at the time of our marriage, but received no reply. Poor soul! I doubt if she can write."

"John, if you feel so strongly about this matter, I am willing for you to invite Mrs. Belden, and I will try in every way that I can to make things pleasant for her."

And so it happened that a few weeks later John's stepmother came to make the young couple a long visit.

The oddity of the old lady's dress could not but attract notice. Her bonnet, though well preserved, was evidently one which she had had for many years, and over her face she wore an ancient green veil. Her other garments corresponded with the bonnet and veil and she carried a huge cotton umbrella.

"That is what I call kind," she began, as soon as the first greetings were over. "I didn't expect, John, to be invited here—thought likely your wife was one of the stuck-up sort. But I'm glad to come. I tell ye—'tis something to be invited to the city.

I ain't so fashionable as some, mebbe, but I kin take hold an' help with the housework—I'm wuth a dozen girls for work yet."

Amy's heart sank as she listened, but she managed to say:

"It will not be necessary for you to work, Mrs. Belden. We want you to enjoy your visit."

It was evident that the old lady did enjoy her visit. John took her over the city and visited all the places of interest. She exhibited the delight of a child, commenting freely on the many things that were new to her. And in no way did Amy slight her husband's step-mother.

"Many of your friends think you have done a strange thing in harboring Mrs. Belden," said Mrs. Harmon to her daughter one day. "And I cannot understand how you could consent to have her here. Before your marriage you felt thankful that no one had any claim on John."

"I know, mamma, but this old lady has been lonely, and I fear there have been few pleasures in her life. John felt that it was his duty to invite her here."

"John has some quixotic ideas about duty, we all know."

"It was not pleasant for me to have her come," said Amy in a low tone; "but even Christ pleased not Himself."

Mrs. Harmon was silent. She was a Christian, but the thought flashed across her mind that many times her own pleasure had meant too much to her, and for a moment she felt uncomfortable.

Mrs. Belden is uneducated. Amy went on, "and her manners are surprising, but she has good common sense. And I really think that she is growing fond of me."

So it seemed, for when the time came for Mrs. Belden to return to her own home, she threw her arms around Amy and kissed her affectionately.

THE ADVENTURES OF PHYLLIS

SUMMARY OF THE PRECEDING CHAPTER.

A sudden reversal of fortune through the father's rash speculation plunges the Talbot family, living in Buenos Ayres, into the dilemma of how to make a living. Mr. Talbot announces his intention of leaving for a short time, and the two boys decide to farm, and of the three girls Grace is about to be married. May takes a position as companion and Phyllis, after much hunting, secures a position as governess in a little hill station in the home of a Mr. Maurice. Arriving alone at the lonely station, she was driven to her destination by a hired man, but she found that the only persons at the station at which she finally arrived were an angry old Spanish woman and a sick man. The woman declares she is Mrs. Maurice, but is only surprised at the arrival of Phyllis and the girl who mischievously decides to be sent for to nurse the sick man. Without money and in a strange place she can only remain where she is.

When he had gone the old woman came back, and stood for a moment looking at Phyllis, as if the girl with her city air and simple but well-kept dress were a stranger to her. Then talking still in that incomprehensible jargon, which was neither English, Spanish, or Chilian, but a mixture of all three, she asked Phyllis if she was hungry.

"Very hungry, nearly starving!" cried the girl, with a nervous laugh, for the keen air of the mountains and the long rough drive had provided her with an amazing appetite.

The old woman grunted in no very pleased fashion, and disappearing into another chamber, returned presently with a loaf of black bread, some goat's milk cheese, and milk in a queer old wooden measure, hooped with metal, which looked like tinned milk.

Phyllis thanked her, and sat down to make the best possible meal under the circumstances. The bread was sour, almost unpalatable, and the cheese was very hard. But she had no teeth and a good digestion, so was not afraid of evil consequences. The milk would have been positively delicious, only it had been kept in a garlic-flavored vessel, and she winced a good many times as she forced herself to swallow a few mouthfuls.

"The sick man," she moaned again, and she thought herself that some of the milk might do him good also. "May I give him some?" she asked, touching the milk, and then touching the loaf.

The old woman nodded, and Phyllis hunted round until she found a spoon, a wooden one, which also smelled of garlic. Then she lifted the sick man up, and was amazed to find that although he seemed so desperately ill, he was not unwell.

"Poor fellow, how uncomfortable you must be!" she exclaimed, when she made the discovery. He seemed quite an old man, she thought—at least his hair appeared to be white—but the lamp gave such a dim light, and his face was so bandaged, that she really could see very little of what he was like.

She induced him to swallow a few spoonfuls of milk, then drawing the rug closer about him, turned to see what was the next duty claiming her attention.

The old woman sat on a battered hencoop which stood close to the smouldering fire of sage brush, fuel that gives little heat and little flame but smoked in plentiful measure. She still stared at Phyllis and mumbled a great deal as if she were grumbling, and when she caught sight of the girl she said this did not matter very much.

It was growing late, nearly midnight in fact. But there was no sign of bed for Phyllis, while the two dogs in the wagon, was yawning tremendously.

So far as she could gather, the old woman herself, and the sick man were the only inhabitants of the lonely little house in the high valley. Where the Basque had gone she had no idea, but certainly he was not in the house.

Instead of the solitude frightening her, it was a positive relief, and she found her courage fast coming back. Loneliness could not hurt her; the old woman and the sick man were harmless enough, while the two dogs which had crept in and gone to sleep in the corner, were already to be regarded as friends.

"If only she could go to bed, how thankful would he be!" Approaching the old woman she asked, helping out her words with gestures, "When can I go to bed? Where can I sleep?" The old woman suddenly began to speak eloquently, or so it sounded, but Phyllis could only shake her head and smile.

"Camba!" exclaimed the old woman, which word literally translated might mean "Oh, bother!" but which stands for many things, and likewise expresses various emotions. "What is it you want me to do?" asked Phyllis, suddenly realizing that the poor old creature was making some request.

for him, and springing up she flung her arms about him, saying urgently: "Oh, please, please! You will hurt yourself if you pull your bandages about, and you do frighten me so very, very badly." "Poor little girl, no one shall hurt you, don't you be afraid!" the sick man exclaimed, becoming suddenly docile; and then to her delight he sank into fitful slumber again. ("To be continued.")

MUST KEEP THE SABBATH Archbishop Complains and Chief Campeau Says He Will Enforce Law.

Archbishop Bruchesi has written to Mayor Guerin urging him to see that all manufacturing places are closed on Sunday. His Grace states that at present the law regarding Sunday observance is being somewhat laxly kept. Persons going along St. James street east can, he says, hear the rush of machinery, which must mean only one thing, that behind the closed doors work is being done.

Such a state of affairs the Archbishop declares is not in the interests of the community, and he asks that steps be taken to have the law enforced. The communication, which reached His Worship Mayor Guerin yesterday afternoon, has been forwarded to Chief of Police Campeau, who expressed some surprise at hearing that such a condition of things exists. But the Chief has stated his intention to see that a change is made immediately. The Sabbath observance law, it appears, is first being observed.

'SECRETARY' MORRISON. Experiences in South Alaska Will Be Talked About in the Y.M.C.A. To-morrow.

The adaptability of the Young Men's Christian Association to meet the all round needs of all sorts and conditions of young men has been nowhere more strikingly demonstrated than in the construction camps in the West. On the Skeena river, in Southern Alaska, the Grand Trunk Pacific have thirty-five camps within a radius of eighty-five miles, building the railway there to the coast. In this colony 'Secretary' Morrison has established the Y. M. C. A.

Mr. Morrison has had some vivid experiences since first undertaking this kind of work some three years ago, at Tart, Montana. Many requests had been made. Reports said to conditions were bad, but the Y. M. C. A. had been told. Arriving there he found the twenty buildings comprising the one street of the town consisted of a narrow strip of shacks, and an undertaker's tent. Drunken men and fallen women were loitering in front of each of these places, and through screened windows could be seen gambling games running in nearly every saloon. "I have a high regard for the Y. M. C. A.," said the superintendent, "it helps my boys, but I don't think it would be any use to try it here, and, nodding in the direction of the saloons, from which came the sound of tinkling pianos. That's what sends men to town. They get so restless for amusement when they come to town and hear that music that they can't stay away from it. There are only three virtuous women in town; more than eighty fallen women! What chance does a young man have of keeping decent out here under such conditions?"

THE LIGHTING OF THE HOME

LIGHTING FIXTURES of to-day are expected to serve the ends of ornament as well as utility. They must not only light the rooms—they must also form part of the interior decorations and harmonize in design and finish with the other furnishings. The natural prominence of the LIGHTING FIXTURES in any room makes their reflection a matter of no little importance. Our display of Lighting Fixtures is without doubt the largest and most complete in the Dominion—our show-rooms containing over a thousand sample fixtures. From these it is easy to select fixtures suited to any style of architecture or any scheme of decoration—and at almost any price desired. We will welcome a visit from you at your early convenience.

New Depot to be Opened on Cadieux Street.

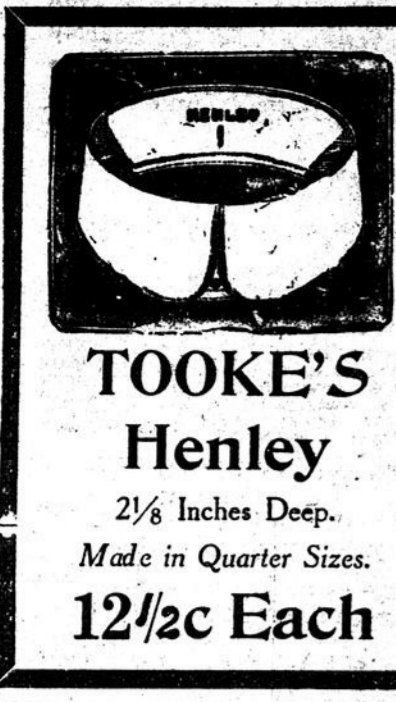

At the monthly meeting of the society held on Thursday afternoon, 3rd inst., in the Bible House, 74 Union avenue, there was a large attendance. Dr. Alex. Johnson, 1st vice-president, was in the chair. Rev. Dr. Shaw, the president, being unable to attend on account of ill health. The reports of the general agent, district secretary and colporteurs were presented, and were of unusual interest. So far the new depot, recently opened for the sale of the Bible in French and foreign languages, is a success. Mr. and Mme. Domyezov, the new colporteurs, understand their work, and seem to possess the spirit of wisdom and patience for their difficult undertaking.

NEWS OF JEWISH WORLD.

The 'Odessa' press recently published a report that General Tolmachev was shortly to succeed M. Dymkowsky as Governor of Moscow. It is known that some six weeks ago M. Stolypin, who has never disguised his contempt for the Black Hundred, rabidly anti-Semitic Prefect of Odessa, addressed to the latter an unofficial letter in which he stated, sans phrase, that the mischievous and aggressive attitude of the Odessa branch of the Union of Russian people and its leaders, and the gubernatorial license extended to the Union in its efforts to stir up strife between the Christians and Jewish sections of the population, and in fact all the various ill effects of the misgovernment of the city rendered it urgently necessary that he (Tolmachev) should forthwith send in his resignation of the Odessa Prefecture. The reply of Tolmachev was what might be expected, he emphatically refused to relinquish his post except at the direct command of the Czar. The Czar and his advisers evidently think that Tolmachev is protecting the Orthodox minority from the oppression of the Jews. As a matter of fact everyone who has any right to be called a statesman, who has lately been given the title of 'Tolmachev Pasha.' A Tolpach is a wooden instrument with which when washing the women beat their linen.

The general staff, the Turkish Minister of War granted leave of absence to the Jewish soldiers for the New Year Festival, and the Day of Atonement. Yeldore Berger, a young Chicago violinist, has carried off the highest honors at the Brussels Conservatory of Music. The Jewish National Union of Vienna is putting up a candidate in the person of Herr Lucien Brunner to contest the seat for the Leopoldstadter in the Diet vacated by the death of Dr. Leoner. Baron David Ginsberg has addressed a request to the Jewish press, and the Jewish Literary societies to celebrate the seventy-fifth birthday, and the literary jubilee of Abraham Harkavi, the celebrated historian and philologist. Rabbi Barnett A. Elias (brother-in-law of the Rev. Melodia de Sola of Montreal), late Rabbi of the Congregation of Charleston (South Carolina), is temporarily occupying the position at Temple Emanuel, New York, vacated by the resignation of Dr. J. L. Magnes. The predictions that the Russian authorities would disregard the representations of the Senate, with regard to the expulsions of Jews from the Jewish population of the Turkish Empire, have been fully realized. The Governor of Ekaterinoslav, to whom the remonstrances were addressed, has ordered the expulsion of more Jews from the villages. The appointment of David Effendi Molcho, formerly First Interpreter of the Imperial Divan, as a Senator is officially announced. There are now two Jews in the Turkish Senate. On the occasion of the Barham, the most important religious festival of the Mohammedans, which coincided this year with the Jewish New Year, the Rabbi Nahum waited on the Sultan, to convey to His Imperial Majesty the congratulations of the Jews throughout the Empire. The Sultan graciously accepted the congratulations, and addressed a few very cordial remarks to the Chief Rabbi. General Tolmachev has surprised Odessa by an order threatening all citizens with a fine of five hundred roubles or imprisonment for three months for arousing the feelings of one nationality against another.

What the Prefect regards, however, as anti-racial agitation is the criticism of his own campaign in favor of the anti-Semite Reno and the protests against his unjustified 'sanitary' fines imposed on Jews. Dr. Paul Nathan, vice-president of the Hilfsverein der Deutschen Juden, arrived in New York on a mission, the object of which was not publicly divulged. It was expected that he would make a fairly long stay, and many receptions were being arranged in his honor. Dr. Nathan, however, suddenly returned to Europe. The work of the Hilfsverein is said to be of the highest possible value to the Jewish population of the Turkish Empire, and it has the great advantage over the Alliance of being more in accord with Jewish nationalistic sentiments. The first annual prize distribution of the Amele Torah School, which took place last month at Alexandria, was graced with the presence of the Governor of Alexandria. The report of the proceedings which was specially noted was the remarkable proficiency in Hebrew shown by all the pupils. The medium of teaching is French, however, but Italian occupies a prominent part of the school programme. A former Jewish soldier, who participated in the Far Eastern Campaign, has been exiled from Kieff. The police promised to return him his passport (permitting him to reside anywhere), sent to the authorities of his native town. Failing to get it, the soldier came back to Kieff to demand justice. The police, however, ignore his inquiries and refuse to allow him to trade in Kieff, and the once healthy man is now on the verge of starvation. This is only one among hundreds of similar cases. The Jews in Salonica are making great efforts to spread the knowledge of the Turkish language among the Jewish population of this great city. The study of Turkish has been greatly neglected in the past, because it was of little material or moral value to the Jewish population. Thanks to the co-operation of the Governor-General and the Director of Public Instruction of the Vilayet, who has promised to admit a fairly large number of Jewish students into the Government schools, the 'Association of the Old Pupils of the Franco-German School' and the 'Cercle des Intimes' have secured the admission of 128 young Jews into Turkish schools. The knowledge of Turkish will enable the Jews to take a still more active part in all branches of activity throughout the Empire. A remonstrance to the Minister of the Interior, to a young Jew who occupies a fairly high post in the government, 'Give me ten Jews who know Turkish, and I will appoint them deputy-governors' well illustrates the above. Large portions of Kurenitz, Kletsk, Shargorod, Bukli, and Krichashin, have been destroyed by conflagrations, leaving hundreds of Jewish families without shelter or means of subsistence. The German Emperor has conferred the Order of the Red Eagle, Second Class, on Commercial Privy Councillor Emil Jacob, of Berlin; and the Order of the Crown, Third Class, on Rabbi Dr. Frank, of Cologne. The Jewish Board of Guardians of London, show a large deficit of thousands of dollars, during the first months of the present year. It was noted that casual relief did not take so large a sum as formerly. The prevention of tuberculosis takes up a large sum every year. The well-known 'Aesthonian' Jew, Mr. David Yellin, one of the members of the Municipal Council of Jerusalem, has recently been interviewed by the Anglo-Jewish Press. According to Mr. Yellin, the Jewish population of Palestine is showing a slow but steady increase, and in most cases the new arrivals make a good living for themselves. The 'dhaluk' evil was commented on, and Mr. Yellin expressed the opinion that the fund should certainly be administered in a better manner. The famous 'red ticket' about which we hear so much from the anti-Zionists, is a regulation which is never enforced.

HELPING THE PASTOR.

Sermon at Zion Church To-morrow Will be Composed of Members' Contributions.

To-morrow evening a service at great interest will be held at Zion Congregational Church. This will be the annual brotherhood service, and the sermon by the pastor, the Rev. Frank J. Day, M.A., B.D., will be a collaboration of contributions from the members of the Brotherhood on the subject—'Do the conditions of modern life help or hinder the progress of Christianity?' This subject was chosen from a number of themes suggested some time ago, and will undoubtedly prove of great interest. The Brotherhood choir of about thirty voices will lead the singing. Zion Church Brotherhood is this year taking a most active interest in questions of civic and social reform, and has already done some good work in the investigation of present conditions in Montreal. Just now the members are busy over the question of gambling resorts, and the result of their work will be made public in a sermon which will be preached some time this month by the pastor.

POLITENESS IN CANADA.

(Fair Play, London.) More customs inspection here. We were overhauled at New York, again at Montreal, and for the third and last time at Frontenac, but I am bound to say that, beyond a trifling loss of time, we had nothing to complain of, and were treated with politeness and civility. That word civility suggests another reflection. Civility, as we understand it in England, or on the Continent, is unknown in Canada, or America. For instance, at the Windsor Hotel, inquired at the desk if there were any letters for me. The clerk turned to the pigeon holes, dumped on the counter a bundle of letters under my initial, and simply saying 'Look,' left me to find out for myself. It was not so much what he did as the way in which he did it that struck me as odd; which he did it very much so through both Canada and America. If you happen to look at the cigar case on the hotel counter you will likely hear, 'Want a cigar?' called at you from the far end. 'Sir' is a word almost

LODGE OF KING SOLOMON'S TEMPLE.

(London Standard.) After protracted negotiations it was decided recently to form a Freemasons' lodge, mainly of research, to meet at Jerusalem, and to be called 'The Lodge of King Solomon's Temple.' The members were to be drawn from all parts of the world. Owing to the political unrest in the East the promoters were advised to postpone the actual establishment of the lodge in Jerusalem for a few years and to meet meanwhile somewhere under the jurisdiction of the Grand Lodge of England. The promoters, after much deliberation, decided to have the new lodge consecrated in the province of Chesapeake, and the charter was granted last month by the Grand Lodge of England. Lord Eserton himself will perform the ceremony. The founders of the new lodge number eighty. Many of them are drawn from distant parts of the Empire.

unknown in that country, and yet it is a word one does not wish to disappear from the English language, as across the Atlantic it seems in the way to do it.

In connection with the recent Emigration Conference at Liban, it transpires that the Government permitted the third of the delegates to participate in the gathering, and that the rejected delegates included some of the leading lights of the movement. Its importance, and the centre of activity was transferred to the informal meetings of the delegates, held at night sittings at the unofficial gatherings, and it fell to the task of the Conference to merely ratify these resolutions.
