THE DEAD PRESIDENT.

General Swain's Statement—How the Tidings were Received—The Post-mortem Examination—The Funeral Arrangements—Universal Grief.

LONG BRANCH, September 20.—Swain, who was the only one with the President when he began sinking last night, makes the following statement:—"It was my night to watch with the President. I had been with him a good deal of the time from 3 o'clock in the afternoon. A few minutes before 10 o'clock I left Col. Rockwell, with whom I had been talking for some minutes, in the lower hall, proceeded up stairs to the President's room. On entering, I found Mrs. Garfield sitting by his bedside. There were no other persons in the room. I said to her, 'How is everything going,' she replied, 'He is sleeping nicely.' I then said, 'I think you had better go to bed and rest.' I asked her what had been prescribed for him to take during the night. She replied that she had given him milk punch at 8 o'clock. I then said, 'If you will wait a moment I will go into the doctor's room and see what's to be given during the night.' She then said, 'There's beef-tea down stairs. Daniel knows where to get it.' I went into the doctor's room, found Bliss there, and asked him what was to be given during the night. He answered, 'I think I had better fix up a list, and will bring it in to you pretty soon.' I then went into the patient's room and had some little conversation with Mrs. Garfield. She felt the President's hand, and laid her hand on his forehead, and said, 'He seems to be in good condition,' and passed out of the room. I immediately felt his hands, feet and knees. I thought that his knees felt a little cold, and got a flannel cloth, heated it at the fire, and laid it over his limbs. I also heated another cloth and laid it over his right hand, and then sat down in the chair beside the bed. I was hardly seated when Boynton came and felt the President's pulse. I asked how it seemed to him. He replied, 'It is not as strong as it was this afternoon, but very good.' I said, 'He seems to be doing well.' 'Yes,' he answered, and passed out. He was not in the room more than two minutes. Shortly after this the President awoke. As he turned his head on awakening, I arose and took hold of his hand. I was on the left hand side of the bed where he lay. I remarked, 'you have had a nice comfortable sleep. He then said, 'Oh, Swain the terrible pain,' placing his right hand upon his breast, about over the region of the heart. I asked him if I could do anything for him. He said, 'some water.' I went to the other side of the room and poured about an ounce and a half of water into a glass and gave it him to drink. He took the glass in his hand, I raising his head as usual, he drank the water very naturally. I then handed the glass to the colored man, Daniel, who came in during the time I was getting the water. Afterwards I took a napkin and wiped the President's forehead, as he usually perspired on awakening. He then said, 'Oh, Swain, this terrible pain. Press your hand on it.' I laid my hand on his chest. He then threw both hands up to his side, and, about on a line with his head, and exclaimed, 'Oh, Swain, can you stop this!' and again, 'Oh, Swain.' I then saw him looking at me with a staring expression. I asked him if he was suffering much pain. Receiving no answer, I repeated the question with a like result. I then concluded that he was either dying or was having a severe spasm, and called to Daniel, who was at the door, to tell Bliss and Mrs. Garfield to come in immediately, and glanced at a small clock on the chandelier, and saw it was ten minutes past 10 o'clock. Bliss came in within two or three minutes. I told Daniel to bring a lighted candle which habitually stood behind a screen near the door. When the light shone full on his face, I saw he was dying. When Bliss came in a moment after, I said, 'Doctor, have you any stimulants? He seems to be dying.' He took hold of his wrist as if feeling for a pulse, and said, 'Yes, he is dying.' I then said to Daniel, 'Run and arouse the house.' At that moment Rockwell came in, when Bliss said, 'Let us rub his limbs,' which we did. In a very few moments Mrs Garfield came in, and said, 'What does this mean?' and the moment after exclaimed, 'Oh, why am I made to suffer this cruel wrong!' At 10.35 the sacrifice was completed. He breathed his last calmly and peacefully."

LOWELL NOTIFIED.

LONG BRANCH, Sept. 20.—Blaine cabled Lowell as follows: "James A. Garfield, President of the United States, died at Elberon, N. J., last night at ten minutes before 11 o'clock. For nearly eighty days he suffered great pain, and during the entire period exhibited extraordinary patience and Christian resignation. The sorrow throughout the country is deep and universal. Fifty millions of people stand as mourners by his bedside to-day. At his residence in the city of New York, Chester A. Arthur, Vice-President, took the oath of office as President, to which he succeeds by virtue of the Constitution. President Arthur has entered upon the discharge of his duties, and you will formally communicate these facts to the British Government and transmit this despatch by telegraph to American Ministers on the Continent for like communication to the Governments to which they are respectively accredited."

Besides telegrams sent through Lowell to European Legations, Blaine communicated an official announcement of the death of the President and of the accession of Arthur to the Presidency to United States Legations in China, Japan, Mexico and the South American States accessible by telegraph.

THE POST MORTEM.

ELBERON, September 20.—The following official bulletin was prepared at 11 o'clock to-night by the surgeons who have been in attendance upon the late President:—By previous arrangement the post mortem examination of the body of President Garfield was made this afternoon in the presence and with the assistance of Drs. Hamilton, Agnew, Bliss, Barness, Woodward, Reybarn and Andrew H. Smith, of Elberon, and Acting Assistant-Surgeon D. S. Lamb, of the Army Medical Museum. The operation was performed by Dr. Lamb. It was found that the ball, after fracturing the right eleventh rib, had passed through the spinal column in front of the spinal canal, fracturing the body of the first lumbar vertebra, driving a number of small fragments of bone into the adjacent soft parts, and lodging below the pancreas, about two inches and a half to the left of the spine, and below the peritoneum, where it had become completely encysted. The immediate cause of death was secondary hemorrhage from one of the mesenteric arteries adjoining the track of the ball, the blood rupturing the peritoneum and nearly a pint escaping into the abdominal cavity. This hemorrhage is believed to have been the cause of the severe pain in the lower part of the chest complained of just before death. An abscess cavity six inches by four in dimension was found in the vicinity of the gall bladder between the liver and "transverse colon," which were strongly inter-adherent. It did not involve the substance of the liver, and no communication was found between it and the wound. A long suppuration channel extended from the external wound between the muscles and the right kidney almost to the right groin. This channel, now known to be due to the burrowing of pus from the wound, was supposed during life to have been the track of the ball. On examination of the organs of the chest, evidences of severe bronchitis were found on both sides, with broncho-pneumonia of the lower portions of the right lung, and, though to a much less extent, of the left. The lungs contained no abscesses, and the heart no clots. The liver was enlarged and fatty, but free from abscesses, nor were any found in any other organ except the left kidney, which contained near its surface a small abscess about the third of an inch in diameter. In reviewing the history of the case in connection with the autopsy, it is quite evident that the different suppurating surfaces and especially fractured sponging tissue of vertebræ furnished sufficient explanation of the septic condition which existed. (Signed.) D. W. Bliss, J. K. Barnes, J. J. Woodward, R. Reyburn, F. H. Hamilton, D. H. Agnew, A. H. Smith, D. S. Lamb.

LONG BRANCH, September 20.—It is said the expression on the face of the President is characteristic. The face shows emaciation to some degree, but the doctors say after the embalmment the emaciation will be less noticeable. It is probable that a plaster cast of his features will be taken.

WASHINGTON, September 20.—MacVeagh telegraphed Solicitor-General Phillips to consult the District-Attorney for the District of Columbia as to whether it would be necessary that an inquest should be held on the body of Garfield in order to enable the Grand Jury of the District to bring an indictment against Guiteau. A consultation was immediately held, and a telegram sent to the Attorney-General, informing him that though it was not necessary an inquest should be held, it might be well to have it done.

THE FUNERAL.

Requiem services will be held at Ocean Grove to-morrow, and an address delivered in eulogy of the President. All business will be suspended and buildings draped in mourning.

WASHINGTON, September 20. — Senators Anthony and Bayard arrived this evening to appoint a committee of the Senate to attend the President's funeral, and make such arrangements as are proper for the Senate to enter into. The Sergeant-at-Arms of the Senate gave instructions for the erection of a catafalque in the Rotunda of the Capitol, and for appropriate mourning decorations.

Rev. F. Power, pastor of Vermont avenue Christian Church, of which the President was a member, will preach his funeral sermon.

THE AFFLICTED FAMILY.

LONG BRANCH, September 20.—A despatch says it is now believed by those who know her that Mrs. Garfield's life is in danger, and she will not long survive her husband. Courageous as she seemed, she had her feeling under control at an enormous strain, and reaction cannot fail to come.

TROY, N. Y., September 20.—Harry Garfield, the President's son, passed through this city from Williams College this morning. His brother James is sick at Williamstown with malaria, but will leave for Washington to-morrow.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Sept. 20.—When Harry Garfield left Williams College for Elberon, he left word that his brother James, who is confined to his room with a severe attack of malarial fever, contracted at the White House, should not be informed of his father's death till he was better. Tolling of the bells and the excitement aroused James' suspicions, and it was thought best by his physicians that he should be informed of the truth. A burst of grief followed, but he is now bearing the trial bravely. Though still in a precarious condition, he was removed this afternoon to President Hopkins' house.

A PROCLAMATION.

NEW YORK, September 20.—The following proclamation, printed on white paper, with a heavy black border, has been circulated through the city:—

"Washington, September 19.—Midnight—Fellow-citizens: In the name of the now headless trunk of the Republic, you are called on to join at a minute's notice a holy alliance of vigilants, in order to shield and guard till Congress provides the one and only life that stands at this moment under the constitution between order and anarchy. Let us see that peace be to the ashes of him now canonized in the hearts of his countrymen, and that his sacred dust shall not be scattered to the four winds by factions or revolution. God reigns and the Government at Washington still lives.

GUITEAU.

WASHINGTON, September 20.—The jail warden to-day informed Guiteau of the President's death. The assassin instantly sank down on the bed, and appeared much agitated. After remaining in this position a few moments, he arose and paced the floor, muttering something to himself, as if praying. He then said he was glad the President had at last been relieved from his sufferings, as he would not have committed the deed if he had known the victim was to suffer as he did.

THE NEW PRESIDENT.

ELBERON, September 20, 4.30 p.m.—General Arthur left for New York on a special train a few minutes ago. Grant accompanied Arthur arm-in-arm to the carriage which conveyed him to Elberon Depot, and as the carriage returned empty, it is presumed he went to New York with him. There is no truth in the reported illness of Mrs. Garfield. Dr. Bliss said she was very comfortable. Before leaving for New York Arthur called upon Mrs. Garfield, and left the cottage wearing an expression of great sorrow and sympathy.

NEW YORK, September 20.—Arthur arrived at his residence at six o'clock last evening unaccompanied. He stated that he would not go to Washington yet. During the evening Gen. Grant, and Secretaries Logan and Jones and others, called on the President. It is stated that four detectives were on the train which took Arthur to Long Branch to-day. Arthur was not aware of their presence. They were under private orders of the police head-quarters to guard the President.

At 10 o'clock the throng in the vicinity of Arthur's house had materially increased. Col. Bliss was visiting the various clubs and hotels, and sending telegrams the nature of which could not be discovered. Conkling went from his hotel at 10 o'clock, but his destination could not be discovered. An air of gloom pervades the city to-day. All public buildings and most of the private houses had flags at half-mast. Many houses had crape festooned outside. The shipping in the harbor had flags at half-mast. The fronts of many of the stores were draped in mourning, also the fronts of all newspaper offices. On every hand were expressions of regret at the President's death and sympathy with the family.

PRESS OPINIONS.

WASHINGTON, September 20.—The Post (Democratic) says:—"Garfield was beloved by the North, he was trusted by the South. The lawful successor of the dead President will have the cordial sympathy and support of all people. The strife of faction will be hushed in this sad hour. As the people of the nation stand with bowed heads by the grave of their loved and honored President, they will pray that his successor may emulate his virtues, and the three and a half years to come may see Arthur constantly growing in the esteem, confidence and affection of his countrymen."

NEW YORK, September 20.—The Journal of Commerce says:—"We see no reason why Arthur may not give the country a better, purer administration than we have had for years, the very condition of his elevation to the Presidency constraining him beyond all ordinary motives to unceasing diligence in effecting such result. Providence, the people and the Constitution have made Arthur President. None of his predecessors ever filled the chair of Washington with such superb opportunities of distinction. Arthur has now his future in his own hands."

Over twenty-two thousand dollars were subscribed to-day to the Garfield fund.

AMERICAN SYMPATHY.

NEW YORK, September 20.—The Aldermen to-day passed resolutions regretting the President's death, asking the citizens to close business on the day of the funeral, and refrain from any secular employment.

SAN FRANCISCO, September 20.—Business was generally suspended. Banks, insurance offices, all public offices, stock board, etc., were closed out of respect to the President. The various commercial bodies adopted suitable resolutions. The popular expression of regret even penetrated the Chinese quarters, where flags were at half-mast. The theatres and other places of amusement closed.

WASHINGTON, September 20.—At the Executive Mansion this morning Private Secretary Pruden was arranging the private papers of the deceased President. Strenuous efforts are being made to fit up apartments for the household to-morrow.

NEWPORT, R.I., September 20.—General Hancock arrived by boat this morning. He was profoundly moved when informed that the President was dead. He spoke most feelingly of Garfield's noble qualities. He returns to New-York to-night.

DIED FROM GRIEF.

CRANSTON, N. J., September 20.—Supervisor Coates, one of the wealthiest and most prominent citizens of Ocean Township, on picking up the morning paper and noticing the turned rules announcing the death of the President, exclaimed, "Oh, my God!" and fell dead.

CANADA'S SYMPATHY.

GOVERNMENT HOUSE,
OTTAWA, 20th September.

The flags at the Citadel, Quebec, at Fort Henry, Kingston and all other military posts, and also on all Government buildings and vessels will be hoisted to-day at half-mast, and be so maintained each day from sunrise to sunset until after the funeral of the late President of the United States, General James Garfield, and it is requested by His Excellency the Governor-General that the flags on all public, municipal and private buildings and on all ships be placed and maintained in like manner from sunrise to sunset during the same period, in token of the sorrow felt by Canada and its people for the calamity which has befallen the great nation with whom the Dominion is connected by so many ties of friendship and of kindred.

JOHN A. MACDONALD.

TORONTO, September 20.—Flags are flying at half-mast on account of the death of President Garfield. None of the papers publish long editorials on the event, but all are characterized by most kindly feeling. The American consulate is draped in black. Mr. Howells is an old friend of President Garfield, whose congressional district in Ohio he used to manage. Mr. Howells has confidence that General Arthur will endeavor to carry out Garfield's policy in its integrity.

OTTAWA, September 20—The deepest sorrow is expressed in every quarter to-day at the death of President Garfield. A grand welcome was to have been extended to Sir John Macdonald at the City Hall, this afternoon, for which great preparations have been made, but the reception committee, with the approval of the Premier, have postponed the demonstration until after the funeral. This action has met with the hearty approval of citizens of all classes, creeds and nationalities.

HALIFAX, N.S., September 20.—Flags were displayed at half-mast to-day, in memory of President Garfield, from the Citadel, occupied by the Imperial troops, from the ships of war in port, many of the merchant vessels, and various buildings in the city. A meeting of American citizens residing here will be held to-morrow at the office of Consul-General Judge Jackson.

SARNIA, September 20.—Flags have been floating at half-mast all day, out of respect to the remains of the departed President.

PORT COLBORNE, September 20.—The Custom House and other flags are at half-mast for the late President. General regret and sympathy are expressed at his death.

LONDON, September 20.—The Queen telegraphed to Mr. Lowell:—"With deep grief I and my children learn the sad but not unexpected news of the fatal termination of the sufferings of the President. His loss is a great misfortune. I have learned with deep sorrow that the President has passed away."

The Prince of Wales telegraphed to Mr. Lowell:—"The Princess and myself beg you to offer our sincere condolence to Mrs. Garfield."

Earl Granville, Secretary of Foreign Affairs, telegraphed to Mr. Lowell:—"I am deeply grieved." He sent a cable message to Washington direct, requesting the Secretary of State to assure Mrs. Garfield and the Government of the grief with which the English Government received the announcement. Parliament not sitting prevents it from giving formal expression to the sorrow and sympathy universally felt, which is deepened by the courage and dignity displayed by the sufferer.

At the Methodist Œcumenical Conference, before the commencement of business, Rev. Mr. Jenkins, ex-President of the West Indies conference, moved the following resolution:—"This conference assembled, on the last day of its session, has learned with the deepest grief of the decease of President Garfield, and expresses its profound sympathy with the American nation, and especially with Mrs. Garfield, in this great and sorrowful bereavement." Jenkins reminded the members that on the first day of the conference they had sent across the Ocean to the wife of the late President, expressing fervent hope of speedy recovery of her husband, and on this last day they were going to move a message to the widow of him whom God in his Providence has taken away. This deep sorrow would, he felt assured, unite more closely the American and English nations. Rev. Dr. Douglas, of Canada, seconded the resolution, and alluded in feeling terms to the loss sustained. The resolution was carried amid deep silence.

Accounts continue to arrive of manifestations of sympathy in the provinces of England and Ireland, particularly at Cork, in consequence of its intimate connection with American shipping interests. The bells of Chester Cathedral were tolled, as also those of some churches in the west end of London. The English papers publish sympathetic biographies of the late President. The news of Garfield's death was immediately telegraphed to Mr. Gladstone.

A Glasgow despatch says the death of Garfield is the only topic of conversation on the Exchange there. Flags on public and private buildings and the great American lines are at half-mast. Similar manifestations of sorrow are reported from Preston, Dundee, Cardiff and elsewhere.

THE HAGUE, September 20.—The First Chamber of the States-General to-day adopted by acclamation a motion calling on the Government to present to the American Government an expression of profound sympathy.

PARIS, September 20.—Minister Morton's residence was besieged by hundreds of people this morning eagerly inquiring for the details of Garfield's death.

Vegetine

Worth its Weight in Gold.

TORONTO, ONT., June 2, 1880.

H. R. STEVENS, Esq., Boston, Mass.:

Sir,—Having been persuaded by a friend of mine to try VEGETINE for Kidney Disease, with which I had been troubled for four years, I consented and have given it a fair trial and am happy to say that I am relieved to such an extent that I can attend to my work with ease and comfort which I was deprived of for over three years. The best medical men of Toronto have given my case up as hopeless. I have tried every kind of medicine I have ever heard of, but with no avail whatever. Any person who may be afflicted with the same terrible disease, I would certainly advise to try VEGETINE, for I assure you (as many can testify) that it is undoubtedly the best medicine on record for the Kidney Disease. I am able to work at my trade as gilder and earn a living for my wife, two children and myself, through VEGETINE, which I consider is worth its weight in gold. Hoping that those who may give VEGETINE a trial may receive the same benefit that I have, I remain,

Yours respectfully,
CHAS. COOKE,
108 John St.

I gave Mr. Cooke the medicine and I know this statement to be true.

MR. H. R. STEVENS, Boston, Mass.:

Dear Sir—In the summer of last year I was seriously affected by that disease known as General Debility and having received medical advice without getting relief, a friend of mine induced me to try VEGETINE which I did, and the best results followed. Shortly after using it I was enabled to resume my work, and I would recommend any person who is afflicted as I was to try VEGETINE.

Exhibition Notes.

Not only the Stars and Stripes, but the Union Jack, the Tricolor and the Belgian flag on the Main Exhibition Building were all floating at half-mast yesterday out of respect for the martyred President.

Messrs. Gallagher & Gauthier, of the Beaconsfield Vineyard, Point Claire, are exhibiting between twenty and thirty varieties of grapes, and though not competing for a prize, have been recommended by the judges for a diploma.

The Franz & Pope knitting and Canadian ribbing machine, shown by Creelman Bros., is an interesting exhibit which has been placed at work in the annex to the main building within a day or two past. Its distinctive features from other knitting machines are, first, a simply regulated counter, by which the number of rounds of stitches is registered ; second, the capability of altering the tension while running, by which the tightness or looseness of the stitches may be nicely shaded ; thirdly, its power to knit four sizes without changing the cam or needle cylinders.

What with horses that won't go, horses that drag the cars off the track and can't drag them on again, horses that prefer to walk instead of trotting, horses that like to stand on their hind legs and keep the passengers waiting, the City Passenger Railway Co. if they are not providing an efficient service, are at least providing a lively enough one. The public seeing the constant succession of mishaps, look on smile and take the whole thing for a supplementary exhibition of our street railway service. One of the delightful vagaries indulged in, not by the order of the company, it is hoped, is to refuse to allow any passengers to board the cars near the head of the Main street, the horses being made to gallop so as to prevent that portion of the tired public, which goes down the street to meet the cars in the hope of getting a seat, from getting the better of the portion that stays behind. Some of the new drivers and conductors seem to have been specially imported from the backwoods for the purpose, for they occasionally carry on conversations both with acquaintance in the street and with one another in a very loud tone of voice. The new conductors are not any improvement on the old, the latter being noted for their civility, but the former are most decidedly "cheeky."

Lawn Tennis.

The second game in the gentlemen's championship was played Monday afternoon, between Mr. Geddes and Mr. Jospeh, and resulted in any easy victory for the latter gentleman who won in three straight sets, 6 to 3, 6 to 5, and 6 to lone. The play was fair in the second set, but failed to elicit any applause from the spectators. Mr. Joseph's game was cautious and safe throughout, while that of his adversary was just the opposite, the ball being constantly driven by him either into the net or out of bounds. A low drive which causes the ball to skim over the top of the net is very pretty when it succeeds, but the odds are against it, and an easier stroke with a little more lift to the ball would probably be found to answer better. Both players have frequently been seen in much better form than was shown yesterday. Most likely if Mr. Joseph had been harder pushed he would have played a stronger game. We shall, perhaps, see his best efforts called forth if he should have to play the final tie with Mr. Russell Stephenson. Mr. J. B. Abbott being unable to play gave Mr. Clouston a bye and in the second drawing Mr. Joseph and Mr. Clouston came first, giving Mr. R. Stephenson a bye. The four hand game was again postponed, in consequence of the absence of one player. A number of scratch matches were arranged during the afternoon, among them one which excited a good deal of interest, inasmuch as a gentlemen from England on a visit to Montreal, faced Mr. Russell Stephenson. A good deal was expected from the stranger, who was reported to have taken high place in the All England matches this year, and the anticipations of those who arranged the game that some very fine play would result, proved to be well founded. Some admirable and very well sustained rallies were witnessed, and although Mr. Stephenson won the set by 6 to 1, it must be remembered that his adversary has just landed from a sea voyage, and is consequently out of practice, while the former gentleman has played all through our matches. He would much like to see a game, say the best of five sets, between them. The drawing for the pairs in which the ladies will take part cannot be made until the four hand game before mentioned is played off. The matches will continue day by day until finished.

The New Telegraph Company.

Mr. Geo. W. Ballou, of the Mutual Union Telegraph Company, says that the wires will be opened for business to all important cities about the 1st of October. Mr. Gamble, late manager of the Western Union lines in the Pacific States, has resigned and accepted the position of general manager of the new company. The line already extends to Washington, Baltimore, Philadelphia, Boston, Albany, Rochester, Syracuse, Utica, Rome, Auburn, and Buffalo. From Buffalo to Chicago the wires reach Cleveland, Detroit and other cities. They also reach all important points between Toledo and St. Louis. From Chicago they run to Minneapolis, taking in Milwaukee, St. Paul and other important points. They cover Pittsburg, Cincinatti, Titusville and Louisville. The line is being extended to the Southern cities, and Mr. Ballou says that by the first of next month the general office will probably be connected with four-fifths of the great commercial towns in the country.

Sir Alexander Galt.

It is rumored, both in Ottawa and Montreal, that Sir Alexander Galt is not to return to his post in London. His family are still stopping at Cacouna, where the gallant knight went down to join them on Friday. His younger children are booked for school here next week. When he came out, he brought a large quantity of luggage with him. If there is a change, it will have been a sudden one, because Sir Alexander told a STAR reporter at his arrival that he expected to go back in September. He certainly went to the North-West on business connected with his office, and naturally, at the public expense. It is said that he finds the expenses of his position too heavy.

Virginia Battle-Fields.

A Visit to Spottsylvani and a Description of the Famous Bloody Angle.

SPOTTSYLVANIA, C.H., August 18.—Of all the struggles of the war this (at the Bloody Angle) was perhaps the fiercest and most deadly. The ground was literally covered with piles of dead, and the woods in front of the salient were one hideous Golgotha. I am aware that this language may resemble exaggeration, but I speak of what I personally saw. In the vicious phraseology commonly employed by those who never witnessed a battle-field "piles of dead" figure much more frequently than they exist in the reality. The phrase is here no figure of speech, as can be attested by thousands who witnessedthe ghastly scene.—Swinton's Army of the Potomac.

As seen by the stranger this historic hamlet is a place of interest even aside from its connection with the battle-field. It consists of a group of a half dozen buildings, central among which is the Court House, a small, old-fashioned brick structure in the midst of a delightful grove and a lawn carpeted with grass. In the Summer cedars and sycamores give good shade to the people who come here to settle their disputes, while in the Winter warmth of both kinds—from fireplace and demijohn—is always on hand at the big tavern across the way. Were it not for the iron-bound windows and the defiant faces occasionally seen peering therefrom the jail would look like a plain dwelling house, and so similarly, the only sign to indicate that another building is a store is a number of empty dry goods boxes in front. The public pump at the point in front of the tavern where the Fredericksburg road joins the Brock road is visited now and then by little darkeys who balance buckets upon their heads, and in the evening a few children play ball, mumblety peg and scratch-my-back around the gate of the Court House yard. It is a piece of the country with the barest hint of town life.

SIGNS OF THE STRUGGLE.

No one is apt to think, as he rests on the broad bench of the tavern porch, sees the sheep in the field a dozen steps away, hears the jingle of the cow-bells just down the road and catches the fragrance blown up from the meadow, that here Grant and Lee, joining in bloody combat, wrestled for twelve days. Nevertheless, it needs but a glance in any direction to see evidences of the struggled. The Court House still carries its scars, the heavy columns of the hotel porch show a number of shell marks, and all around are remains of earth-works that stretch for miles to the north and south. Grant's place of head-quarters below the Fredericksburg road has little of interest about it, the Ny is an ordinary stream, the Po, on the other side of the battle-field, is like the commonest of Virginia creeks, and Laurel Hill, where the action of the 9th occurred, is thickly timbered as of yore. Mounds and rifle-pits are seen at various points, and the place near the Po where some of Hancock's men found themselves with a fierce foe in front and a raging wood fire behind, yet shows remnants of burnt timber, indicative of the fray. I sought unsuccessfully for the spot where lion-hearted Sedgwick fell. That glorious old warrior's lines are plainly traceable on the Alsop farm, and Mr. Alsop thinks that he knows the fatal point—now marked by a dead oak—but there is no certainty as to the place.

AT THE EDGE OF THE ANGLE.

The Deputy Sheriff, inn-keeper and leading citizen of the settlement, Mr. Ashby, who is a kinsman of the brilliant cavalrymen of that name, kindly offered to show me what was to be seen, and after breakfast we started for what he called the "Horseshoe," or, as it is more generally known, the "Bloody Angle." Driving northward on the level Brock road for less than a half mile we wheeled abruptly into a by-way to the right and began to pass through a thicket of small pines. These evergreens, which have grown on the margin of the McCool farm since the battle, threaten to choke the narrow road. What we were going through was more like a bridle-path than a place for wheels, but, heedless of the ends of limbs that whipped him in the eyes and brushed against the sides of the buggy our horse dashed along, fetching us finally to a fallow field, wherein stands the McCool house. This place is one of grim fame and lasting history, for in the woods hereabout death's maw was gorged in the longest, fiercest, ghastliest hand-to-hand combat known to man. Tall oaks surround the house, which is a weather-beaten, rickety structure that clearly has been through the mills. At the time of the battle the dwelling was occupied by Farmer McCool, bachelor, with his two maiden sisters. When it grew hot and deafening all around the family went into the cellar, and there Miss Millie, sitting by the side of her sick sister, wrote the following note :

GRANT, GENERAL, SIR : I desire that you stop this nasty fighting. There is a sick lady in the house.

MILDRED MCCOOL.

A trembling courier in the person of a black boy succeeded in delivering the note within the Union Lines, but oddly enough the battle was allowed to continue.

"And would you believe it !" Miss Millie was wont to exclaim in chats with her neighbors many a year thereafter, "and would you really believe it ! the Yankee general wasn't gentleman enough to grant a lady's request."

"Shame ! shame !" would come in chorus, and Miss Millie's ancient rocking chair would stand still from the very amazement of the good woman between its arms. And to this day Grant is held up by Miss Millie's friends as a person who is "no gentleman" One morning, two days afterwards, it was so quiet that the occupants of the cellar concluded that the storm had swept over and Farmer McCool cautiously trust his head up from below. A Union soldier who saw the head grabbed it and the old man ducked down, leaving his wig in possession of the laughing sharpshooters.

"THE SLAUGHTER PEN."

Such incidents were pleasant to hear as we left the house, went out at a farm gate at the foot of the hillside lawn and drove through a belt of ancient and towering oaks to the Bloody Angle. We struck the apex at a point where the earthworks stand knee high. The line runs to the right as far as the eye can see along the edge of a thick woods and to the left directly into the depth of a mass of scrub oaks and pines. In front of us ten yards away was a little, yellowish, clay-plastered house, recently built. Beyond was a field of corn and down the V-shaped clearing, at the point of which we were, could be seen the Landrum House a quarter of a mile away. Walking along the line of earthworks to the left we found little except a continuous low mound, topped by trees of recent growth, and we were soon tired of the sameness of the thing. Then we returned by the same earthworks, being on the line of an obtuse angle, and again reached the apex near Jett's log cabin. The other side of the angle is much more interesting. The parapet is high. It is easy to see that the breastworks, up to my chin in many places, were turned, for there are ditches on each side of the long line. The yellow, mouldering trunks of trees, rotting stumps, logs full of bullet-holes that look as though they were worm-holes, hundreds upon hundreds of rusty canteens, pieces of shoe leather, remnants of rubber blankets, bits of cartridge-boxes and here and there a small bone are scattered everywhere along the line. Corn groves in a part of the space over which Hancock charged up to the works, but on the other side, whence came Lee's assaults, is what is left of the old growth of oak, together with a dense thicket of young dogwood sprung up within the last fifteen years.

THE OAK, FELLED BY BULLETS.

These sights made me feel more forcibly than ever before that I was indeed at the heart of a battle-field. I wanted to stop at every stump to pick for bullets, forgetting that such a precious thing as lead must have been borne away long ago. I was of the mind to kick the dead leaves from every rifle-pit, of which there were scores. I even searched for the spot whence had been drawn the stump of the red oak that was hacked down by minnie balls, and no doubt in the eagerness of the hour I made myself an object of suppressed merriment to Mr. Ashby, in whom familiarity with the place had bred contempt. If such were the humor of my genial guide he concealed it with the grace of his family and led me pleasantly along the crest of the works, which curve to the south and come to an end at last more than a quarter of a mile from the cabin at the apex. Half way around the horseshoe we saw an old man sitting on a log and picking blackberries, which grow thickly at his right hand.

"Yes, sir," he said, in reply to a question ; "they tuck me right heah at this heah spot. I was with Johnson's Brigade, Ewell's Co's, and on the mo'nin of the twelf' of May, sixth-foah, I had my ole gun stickin under this heah very log—this un right heah—I b'long up in Orange, and bein's as I was at Fredericksburg thought I'd come over and look at her. Damme if tain't the same ole log—she right heah."

"Then you were captured along with the 4,000 other Johnnies?"

"Well, now, I want ye to hush. Wish I may drap dead if I wan't bangin' 'way 'bout day-break in the mo'nin' when I see some Yanks a-comin' 'cross from that house thareaway I picks out a fat Dutchman and says to Jerry Milroy, of Culpeper, says I : 'Jerry, my dear, jes see me pepper that d——n Dutch Yank.' I pulls and the Dutchman drops, and I starts, to bite a cat'ridge agin, when I hears some ,un kind o' cold-like say :"Drap that gun !' I looks over my shoulder, and, damme gentlemen, if thar wan't a Yank with his sword drawn standin' over me right at my back. Mo' an' that ; wish I may die if the woods wan't full of 'em—chuck full of Yanks, and how they got behind us I do'an know. But I drapped her quick and walked off to Washington."

RELICS AND BURIED CANNON.

This further end of the salient is now covered with young pines and persimmons. The ditches, covered in such haste with spade and bayonet seventeen years ago, and now partly filled with leaves and shatters, while briars, wild vines, the ox-eye daisy and blue-flowered nettles now set traps to trip the footman in his rambles. Mr. Ashby tells me that the lead picked up on the McCool property after the battle was sold for twice as much as the property was worth. For months the darkeys of the county dug among the intrenchments in search of bullets, shells and scraps of brass. It is a bit of local tradition that four brass guns are buried in the corn field near the old man Jett's hut, which is not more than two hundred feet from the place where the famous red oak stood. These delightful evenings, when the good people of the country round about gather upon the tavern porch, the story of the cannon comes up and it is decided that they ought to be dug for, but Mr. Jett hoes his corn in peace and without fear. He isn't afraid of ghosts, and though many skeletons no doubt lie under their thin crust within the sight of his door he has yet to hear the midnight sound that startles him from slumber. Here more men than there are ears of corn in his clearing or hairs in his bushy, gray beard gave up their lives, but this tenant of the bloodiest corner of a bloody battle-field smokes his pipe and scratches his head in utter unconcern.

THE GLORY OF THE VOLUNTEER.

Here was the most perfect realization of the glory of the volunteer, and he who walks upon this ground must perforce pay a tribute, not to Grant, not to Hancock, not to Miles, but to the man with the knapsack and the gun. When the Union lines wavered the day before, officers spoke of the men as cowards. The truth was that the officers were at fault and the men knew it. When the attack upon this salient was made the soldiers saw that the right thing had been planned, and then they moved to the slaughter with faultless step and incomparable steadiness.

A sunny, sultry day had closed in a thunderstorm and the 10,000 men of Hancock's Second Corps found the night wet and raw. When the first gray streak of dawn stretches along the sky to the east they form for the charge, and at half-past four they move silently up a slope, through thick woods, across a clearing and strike the enemy. They bayonet hundreds of Ewell's men in the trenches and capture 4,000 more. They give and take and for two hours work with spade and gun to hold what they have gained. Then the Sixth Corps, New Yorkers, Pennsylvanians, Green Mountain boys, men from Ohio, plant themselves around the angle of captured works and for twenty hours fight fiercely in the never-ending roar. Lee has lost a point and with desperate purpose time and again he hurls the pick of his veteran host savagely down into the woods. On one side of the bank of earth floats the flag, bullet-spotted and in shreds and tatters, and on the other droops the torn banner of the South. The trenches on one side are filled with Union dead and on the other are heaps of rebel slain. Trees as thick as a man's body are torn down in the terrific storm of shot, rain falls in torrents and thousands of mud-covered fellows with guns that almost refuse powder wrestle hand to hand without rest from sunrise until long after dark. Such was the struggle at the Bloody Angle—"The Slaughter Pen" of veteran memory—an all-day combat of unparalleled ferocity and awful sacrifice.—Special Correspondence of Philadelphia Times.

Wife Selling.

So recently as July 7. 1881 a case of the kind was reported in a local English paper, as follows : William Dunn, of Ripon was summoned before the beak for instructing his son Thomas in his trade, although the Education act had provided that he should not do this until Thomas had learned certain other things which will be no manner of use to him. Mrs. Dunn, like a brave woman, came forward in defence of Thomas ; whereupon the lawyers, always desirous of a side issue, suggested that she had been married to another man. This Mrs. Dunn at once admitted. "Yes, I was married to another man," she said, "but he sold me to Dunn for 25s., and I have it to show in black and white, with a receipt stamp on it, as I did not want people to say I was living in adultery." These, I believe were the ipsissima verba of Mrs. Dunn ; and I venture to think that the exorbitant price (as it might appear to some) which her present husband gave for her was fully justified not only by her timely vindication of him and his son, but also by her prudence in having evaded the breath of calumny by obtaining a properly stamped receipt for herself.—Notes and Queries.

Protecting Corn From Crows.

The best plan of dealing with crows and other pests through the use of coal tar; prepare a pailful of seed-corn at a time, by pouring warm water upon it, allowing it to stand a few minutes, and then pour off the water by placing the corn in a box; finally put on a little coal tar, then shovel it over thoroughly. The seed will coat over very easily, put on tar enough to make the corn black. Then sprinkle on a little plaster of Paris, again shovelling the seed over, and it is then ready for planting. Seed thus prepared will drop from a bag as well as dry corn.

The coating of tar does not injuriously affect the germination of the kernel, while no crow, squirrel or hen will meddle with. Meal of any kind may be used in place of the plaster. The farmers in and about Lacolle, Que., who practice this method are the most successful in raising corn crops. Crows and blackbirds never molest fields planted in this way which ought to be more widely known and adopted in Canada.

Home-made Superphosphate.

A good corn fertilizer may be made by taking five hundred pounds of finely ground bone, and mixing it with two hundred pounds of sulphuric acid (oil of vitriol), and six hundred pounds of plaster of Paris (gypsum). A convenient way of mixing is thus described:—Procure a good sized hogshead, and saw it in two. Then divide the ground bone into two equal parts, and place half in each of the half-hogsheads. Divide the acid the same way, and pour upon the bone. The ground bone is to be thoroughly mixed with the acid by means of a hoe, and allowed to stand three or four days, or until it becomes a complete paste. Then the plaster is to be added, and this is usually done by shovelling out a bushel or so upon the barn flour, sprinkling on the plaster and working it over with a hoe until it is well mixed, and shovel it into a barrel, and take out another batch, which is to be treated in the same way until the whole is mixed. Cover up the filled barrels and allow them to stand and ferment for a week. To prepare it for use, pour a barrel of the fermented mixture upon the barn floor, and work it into one or two bushels of dry loam or muck. Let it remain a few days, and it becomes pulverized and all ready for use.

A gentleman says he has used this formula, or one much like it, for many years, and has tried it side by side with purchased superphosphates, and with more satisfactory results. Its cost, aside from the labor of manufacture, is about seventeen dollars per ton, or considerably less than half that of the commercial superphosphate; labor included, it would not cost more than half. There is no doubt that fertilizers of this kind are of great benefit to vegetation in giving it an early and vigorous start, even if one has an abundance of stable manure. Our seasons are short, at the best, and a week's start, for corn, by means of superphosphates, may save the entire crop from an early frost.—Farmers' Cabinet.

Necessity for Soiling.

The drouth still continues in this section, there having been little rain for two months. Wheat was a fair crop; oats very good; early potatoes also; corn will be less than half a crop; hay crop good; pasture about dried up, except on low ground. Many farmers are foddering stock. Wheat is worth $1.30 to $1.40; corn, 70c.; oats, 45c.; potatoes, 75c. to $1.; butter, 40c; eggs, 20c; other things in proportion.

I think it would pay farmers in this section, as well as others, to have more sowed corn and other crops to feed in a green state—in fact, to go to soiling, especially in a season of drouth. There are many farms in this section that have low, moist pieces, which could be sowed to advantage with corn or millet, that would be a great help at such times as this. Even on upland, if the ground is rich, or moderately so, with plenty of fertilizers put on and well cultivated, heavy crops can be grown even in dry weather. I think the time will come, and before many years, when the farms in this section will have few division fences; the stock will be stabled and their food taken to them. It is so even now with some. Not only would the manure heap be increased, but the cattle would do much better than when wandering over the dried and parched fields as they are now doing, or farmers compelled to sell some of them at a low price for the want of food. Indeed, some of my neighbors have been compelled to sell a part of their stock for the want of keep.

I know that some would say it is too much work; it would not pay to have a man and cart to cut and haul green food to the barn every day; so much work would eat up all the profits. I think the extra manure made or saved, and the gain in the stock, would pay well. One thing is certain; some of us must put our land in better condition in some way, or it will not pay a very heavy profit; and I think soiling is one good way. Will some one tell us the best way, and the cheapest, to improve the farm? H. T., Marshallton, Pa., in Country Gentleman.

Insect Enemies of the Onion.

A recent visit to the Berea onion farms was of much interest to me, as I gained an insight into the battle that is going on there constantly with the insect enemies, which conflict may yet result in abandoning the muck for a few years to other crops, to starve the onion-eaters out. So far, there are four insects which commit ravages—the fly, the maggot, a small, shiny black bug, and last, the mole cricket, beside which the other three are nothing. In Berea, the fly is mildly aggressive, and causes no alarm. The maggot is doing something, but by close watch of the young onions, and pulling and thoroughly destroying the sick ones, this pest is not very formidable, and is not upon the increase. The case of the little black bug is a matter of discussion; just what his habits are, and to what extent he may increase, are matters of conjecture. Dr. Gould finds that an old hen with a brood of chickens, kept upon the muck in June, will have the effect of making them very scarce, and the chicks do no damage to the onions; for, besides picking off the bugs mentioned, they also catch a great many other insects, worms, &c., which if present would conflict with the perfect growth of the onion.

Within a year or two, the mole cricket has made his, her and their appearance—whence, no one seems to know, but promptly upon arrival they went to work, not only to eat, but also to propagate their species. This cricket when fully grown is about two and one-half inches in length, and about as thick as the little finger. In appearance it somewhat resembles a huge grey spider, and is very quick of movement; and as they are provided with a pair of claws close up to the head, they are enabled to make rapid progress through the muck, cutting off the roots of the onions with their sharp mandibles.

To learn their habits and to wage a war of extermination upon them has not yet resulted in much progress, though Dr. Gould seems to have come nearest to solving the difficulty. By close observation, he has found that they choose high ground above the usual water level to deposit their eggs, and from this he has made substantial progress. The nest—if this term is allowable—is a cylindrical hole about a foot in depth, made very smooth and slightly bulbous at the bottom. Here the mole cricket deposits some twenty or thirty eggs, which by some process hatch out into tiny mole crickets. The doctor is of the opinion that the mother supplies them with food for a period, but is not certain; but when they are a little more than half an inch in length, they are met with in the muck with the larger ones. The cricket has the curious appendage of a pair of half developed wings, which gives color to the theory that it was once a flying animal, and by a changed condition of circumstances is losing the wings; or else they are in a process of development, and are yet to fly from onion field to onion field, in quest of richer morsels.

By trials, Dr. Gould has found that submerging them in water for three days will kill them, and so has conceived the plan of flooding his muck as soon as the onions are harvested, his land affording natural facilities for it, and allowing the water to remain until January. This season his muck has been practically exempt from their ravages; and by raising his dam, and including the entire muck, he expects to exterminate them wholly. On lands not so favored, other practices are instituted. One is to dig holes a couple of feet in depth, fill them with horse manure and cover with soil. This affords warmth, which the crickets avail themselves of as cold weather approaches, and by occasional throwing out, the crickets can be readily killed and the trap again set. Others keep at them by close observation of the muck, and whenever a slight ridge of soil is seen, a muck rake is brought into requisition and the enemy raked out.

Much discussion is had on the point whether the mole cricket eats the onion or simply cuts off the roots as he burrows along in his winding way beneath the surface. The ravages lessen as the onions send out increased numbers of rootlets, but certain it is that, when placed in captivity, and subjected to an onion diet, the little fellow eats onions readily, reducing the problem to this conclusion, that whenever they increase to a numerical strength that deprives them of their natural food, whatever it is, the onions will furnish them with a handy and not objectional ration.—J. G.—Ed. Country Gentleman.

Ash of Tan Bark.

Having a few years ago burned a large quantity of tan bark for the sake of the ashes for fertilizing purposes, I will give J. S. G (page 536) the result of my experience. The bark used in tanneries is chiefly hemlock and oak. Hemlock bark is not so rich in potash and phosphoric acid as oak bark, but still it contains a large proportion of each of these, sufficient to make the tanners' waste of great value for agricultural purposes, especially as in some cases the bark can be had for the taking of it away, and when it is burned the ashes can often be procured at the same rate. In the tables of Wolff and Knopf, the following analyses of the bark of oak, and some other woods, are given:

		Potash.	Phosphoric Acid.
Oak bark with twigs, per cent.		19.8	9.3
Fir bark	do.	3.0	8.3
White pine	do.	8.0	2.5
Red pine	do.	2.6	2.6

Now, there is no question about the value of the ash from oak bark, and as regards that of hemlock, if it is no better than fir, it is yet of considerable value; but the fira are all species of the genus Abies, and our hemlock is one of this genus, Abies canadensis, and may therefore be considered as fir so far as this inquiry is concerned. Then the bark is well worthy of use for its ashes. At the accepted value of potash and phosphoric acid, oak bark ashes should be worth $2 per 100 pounds, and hemlock ashes about 50 or 60 cents. As a bushel weighs 30 pounds, the value of that quantity is easily ascertained.

The manner of reducing the tan bark to ashes is as follows: A heap of dry brush and waste wood is first made, or several of them, if there is a large quantity of ashes. A load or two of ashes is then thrown upon the heap, and the kindling is then set on fire. The damp tan bark smolders slowly away, and this slow burning improves the ashes, because no potash is volatilized and lost as with a fierce heat. The bark is thrown upon the heap from the wagon to keep up the fire, and a hundred loads can easily be burned in each heap.

Ashes so prepared are a concentrated fertilizer, and one ton or 25 bushels per acre will give about 200 or 250 pounds of carbonate of potash and 150 to 160 pounds of phosphoric acid per acre, which is a liberal application. Their value cannot be increased by any mixture, whatever, but if ammonia or nitrogenous manures are supposed to be required, fish guano or sulphate of ammonia may be used, but not mixed with the ashes. The whole will then become a complete fertilizer, but it is probable that the ashes alone will be found sufficient. I have found the ashes thus made spread at the rate of a two horse load of 40 bushels per acre to have a remarkable effect upon corn, and to show finly upon the following crops until the land was seeded to grass and clover.—H. Stewart, in Country Gentleman.

Harrows on the Western Reserve.

With the introducing of grain-raising on a large scale in heretofore exclusively grazing localities, comes a question of harrows; and certain it is that the old letter A drag is incompetent to perform the labor of the present, and that something must be brought forward that will not only cut through the earth, and to considerable depth, but also pulverize the soil as well. On the clay lands, where the tendency is to compact rather than to become friable and mellow, the common drag will not do; for anything that tends to make the soil more firm must be avoided, though on sandy land that would be quite a desirable feature. To meet this want here in Ohio, the first step was to bring out the square-hinged, "forty-tooth" drag, but in putting the wheat ground into fine condition, this involved too much labor; and the plank rubber followed, both as a pulverizer and as a substitute for a roller. To a certain extent this is a good farm tool, but its fault is that it is deceiving—making smooth the surface, while below, the soil is full of lumps, and affords the roots of the plants but little chance to draw upon it. It will be readily admitted that both the straight-tooth drag and the "rubber" do not go deep enough, and it needs something to bring up the lumps from the bottom of the furrow, so that they can be crushed.

Here on our clay soils the disk harrow has not met expectations, and its introduction has been exceedingly limited. In the same way, the screw pulverizer will never meet much sale, even if its cost did not shut it out from the average farmer's possibilities. With us, the spring-tooth harrow is rapidly gaining ground, and the sales have been very large. It is exceedingly simple in construction—two letter-A's, one set behind and into the other, and hinged together so as to be very flexible. The teeth are flat bars of steel, fashioned like a letter C, one end being attached to the frame. This makes the teeth very flexible, and yet with great digging power; the principle is like the operation of a coil-tooth rake, making it impossible for the teeth to clog in any condition of soil. The ground is thoroughly "torn up" by the 18 teeth and fined, and a couple of cross-diggings usually put the ground into admirable shape. As might be expected, the draft is strong and it needs two horses, but what is lost in extra power is gained by de spatch.

Those who have sulky cultivators find them an excellent aid in stirring the soil and bringing the lumps to the surface where they can be crushed; it is about as effective a machine for its various offices as any that I have yet met with. In preparing wheat land, they are especially valuable, as they can be used exclusively after the fallow plowing to loosen up the soil, and as they take 4½ feet at a breadth, their capacity is considerable. Several of my neighbors do their Spring plowing for oats with them, and with excellent results; and where land is plowed in the fall, their use enables the farmer to get upon his land in the Spring and fit it for seeding, when it would be impossible to get a plow across the field, i. e., plowing as it should be done.

I quite agree with your correspondent on page 485, in regard to the beneficial working of the Thomas harrow, especially in burying manure. I hold to surface manuring; yet how to cover the manure so that fertility and plant root are brought into close proximity, was a matter I had not before accomplished satisfactorily, but after this I do not expect to devote much time to its consideration, so well does the harrow work.

Several years since I made a blackberry root-puller, and so well did it work that it has done duty, ever since in all my field work. It was simply a square frame of 3 by 4 inch white elm scantling, three cross pieces bolted on two 2 by 4 inch strips. The teeth were made of ⅝ inch steel bars, cut 9 inches long, sharpened chisel-fashion, and then bent somewhat like a letter J. There are twelve of them set 16 inches apart, four in each cross piece, and so placed that one cuts through the soil each 5 inches. A chain was then hooked over opposite ends, and the drag started. It was a "terror" to take out brier roots and the like, and on any soil, if dry enough to work, it performed excellent service. Of course it "combed" the land, and if roots and the like met it, the teeth would get full after a while; so when on a bad piece, I would stop each "across," and by lifting up the back part of the frame, the teeth would unload. When the field was finished, I went to the end of the window, stepped on the drag and raked my briers up into heaps, when I carted them off. The drag cost me a half day's work, and $3.25 for the teeth but upon the whole it is quite as good as any implement. In bringing lumps to the surface it is nearly as good as a $30 spring-tooth harrow.

For leveling land, one of the most effective tools when a farmer has two span of horses is a T rail, which any accommodating railroad section boss will lend for a few days. By attaching a team to each end, a strip of land 28 feet wide is fitted, after dragging, in almost perfect order, smooth, crushed, leveled and compressed; but it takes power, though it is rapid and effective.

That there can be no harrow adapted to all soils, or all conditions, is evident, for the one soil needs a machine that lifts it and makes air, warmth and even light to penetrate it, while another, to aid the crop, calls for almost the reverse; so that in the selection of his tools the farmer may escape many failures, if he will inquire into the conditions that are to be met, and buy his implements accordingly.—J. G.—Country Gentleman.

Flower Garden in Autumn.

James Vick, in his excellent "Floral Guide," gives the following practical directions for some Autumn work in the flower garden:

There is a little garden work, that can be done to much better advantage now than at any other time, while there is some work that must be attended to in the Autumn, or left forever undone. We will endeavor to give our readers some ideas on these two classes of work.

It is a good time, in the pleasant Fall weather, for arranging beds of herbaceous plants, such as hollynocks, delphiniums, pæonias, &c. Roots can be divided without injury, and generally with great benefit to the health of the plants. Lilies, and hardy bulbs, can also be removed and replanted as soon as the leaves begin to ripen. Plants that are somewhat tender in the North, such as tritomas, pampas grass, &c., and any other tender plants that it would be desirable to save over the Winter, may be secured in pits or cool cellars. A simple pit is made by removing the earth for say two feet, over which is placed a hot-bed frame and sash. Even boards or mats will answer for covering. Give air during fine weather.

General improvements in the garden should be now made, for our Springs are short and unpleasant. Dig up and put in order every vacant bed, as it will not only facilitate Spring work but do the soil good and have a neater appearance than if left rough and weedy.

All bulbs and plants that die down to the ground in Autumn may be protected by covering the surface of the earth with leaves, manure or straw, but plants that retain their leaves during Winter will not bear this kind of protection. A few evergreen boughs thrown over the bed, a little straw between the plants, or some light open covering of this kind, is all they will bear without danger of smothering and rotting.

Autumn sowing.—Most people have observed no doubt, that self-sown seeds, that is, seeds that have dropped from the growing plants of the previous season, sometimes produce the strongest and most healthy plants that bloom the most freely. This is true of several kinds, and particularly of those that suffer under exposure to our midsummer suns. The reason is that self-sown seeds get a very healthy growth in the Spring, vegetating as soon as frost is gone, and are good sized plants at the time we usually put seeds in the ground, even if they do not start in the Autumn. They thus mature and flower during the cool weather of Spring. The clarkias and nemophilas and annual larkspurs are noted examples. There are also several varieties of hardy annuals that do well with Spring sowing, that will bear Autumn sowing in the open ground, and reward us with early Spring flowers. Sweet alyssum and white candytuft will give us abundance of white for early cutting, if sown in Autumn. In a shady soil the portulaca may be sown in Autumn with good success. Seeds of biennials and perennials, if sown early enough to produce strong little plants, will flower next Summer; pansies and chinese pinks, though they bloom the first Summer if sown in the Spring, will make much stronger plants and flower more freely and earlier if young plants are grown in the Autumn.

All hardy plants, the pæonias, hollyhocks, and phiniums, perennial phlox, day lily, dicentra, and plants of a similar character, indeed, all that will endure our Winters, should be planted in the Autumn, if possible, as they thus get a good start in the Spring.

Western New York Notes.

The first of September brings no abatement to the excessive heat and drouth. All promises of rain have failed, and the atmosphere has settled into a dull smoky haze, indicating what is doubtless the fact, that extensive forest and field fires are raging in some not very remote section. Having occasion to dig into a side hill a day or two ago I found the soil thoroughly baked to the depth of over a foot, and deeper than that there is very little moisture. The potato crop will be much smaller than promised two weeks ago, and my experiment of planting an acre or two in the middle of June, will this year prove a failure. Of course no wheat is sown as yet, and my belief is that should rain come now unless it is an unusually long and severe storm, seeding should be further delayed. The soil is not only too dry, but too hot for wheat. The tender sprout, putting forth in an atmosphere of 90° to 100°, and the root in soil nearly as warm, must be seriously injured. Wheat loves cool and moist weather, and if it cannot have it, will never give a maximum crop. The few years when 40 and 50 bushels per acre are produced, have been seasons when the weather was very like that of England.

I do not anticipate that in this country, save in a very few localities, we can rival the wheat crop of English farmers. True enough we are running them out just now, but it is by our improved machinery and greater cheapness of land, enabling American farmers to grow wheat more cheaply. A large proportion of American wheat will not, in ordinary seasons, average ten bushels per acre, and this year considerably less than that. Yet it is from these sections, where the yield per acre is smallest, that the bulk of our wheat export is produced. The reason is that because on such land, small as is the yield per acre, the crop is worth more than the land it grows on. In other words, by counting the value of the land nothing, the farmer is able to earn large rewards for his own and hired labor. We in Western New York, blessed or burdened as the case may be with more costly land, are often obliged to work for board and clothing, and content ourselves with making a fair percentage on the capital invested. Which is the true mode of reckening? Are our eastern lands too highly priced, or does the western farmer err in making no account of the value of his farm? The fact that wild land at the West can be had from the government free of cost, necessarily reduces the price of lands near by to the bare cost of the improvements made. But happily for good farming that time has nearly gone by. Good land will long continue to be cheap, but its price will steadily advance and there will never again be a time when land, merely as land, and without improvements, will have no price. As soon as western farmers put a price on their land they must be forced to compete with us of the East and with English farmers on more equal terms. Then if they would undersell us, they must increase the yield per acre, and not merely the number of their acres.

My earliest plowing for wheat, in July and early in August, was made when the ground was quite moist, but it has dried out now, so that neither weeds, or scattered grain, can germinate. I have no fear that rain will not come to sow the wheat, but my expectations of killing a large number of weeds by repeated harrowings must be disappointed. Perhaps, however, the seeds find moisture enough in the heavy dews to germinate, but cannot put forth a root, and thus perish. At all events, I am making a good seed bed for the time when the land will be fit to sow, and after so long a drouth, when rain does come, it must be rich in ammonia, which it gathers passing through the air. I have about two more acres to plow, and hope to finish these to-morrow. Then, when rain comes, I will be prepared to cultivate so thoroughly that it will be as little likely as a Summer fallow to become too dry again for seeding. There are some pieces of Summer fallow, a mile or so from here, plowed in June, which despite the drouth are moist enough to germinate seeds. If the weather were only cooler, and without more rain, such fields could now be sown. But the prospect is that a good deal of October wheat will be sown. Some farmers are only beginning plowing, and land now plowed will need good weather and a full month's culture to fit it for wheat seeding.

Those who have Winter apples this year may get a good price for them. The crop in this section is lighter than it has been for years, and near the lake shore the outlook is poorer than here. Drying-houses cannot find supplies, and are bidding up the price. As they take, at this season, windfalls that would otherwise be lost, this is a profitable mode of disposing of such lots. But good, marketable, Winter fruit must this year bring a price that dryers cannot afford. About one-third of my trees are bearing this year, and a rather larger proportion in the young orchard. The trees which bear even a few this year are marked for extra manuring next Winter, as, if rightly managed, they can be brought into bearing full crops in the odd years which in future will long continue to be seasons of general failure. My object in manuring next Winter will be to stimulate wood growth next Summer and prevent any fruiting in 1882. As a rule, manure applied to apple trees hinders rather than promotes the growth of fruit the first season after; but the second or third year the orchardist gets the benefit.

Sept. 3.—Several fine showers Thursday night and Friday morning have brought some relief to the parched earth. On plowed fields the moisture has penetrated to the depth of three to five inches. Most of the potatoes were badly injured by the drouth before the rain came; but some late pieces will be helped considerably. There will, however, be very few fields that can yield half a crop, and the most a good deal less. Plowing, even on stubble, is not appreciably better, and unless more rain comes, fitting land for wheat, seeding must prove slow and expensive work. Considerable corn was cut before the rain, but now what remains will be left in hope that it will ripen more thoroughly. The ears are very short on the best fields, and where weeds have abounded much of the corn has not attempted to form an ear. Apples are ripening prematurely. Since the rain the the weather has been "muggy," and the sky overcast with clouds and smoke.—W. J. F. Monroe County, N. Y., in Country Gentleman.

SECRETS OF THE STABLE

MYSTERIES CLEARED UP!

Hundreds of Thousands of Dollars Saved in Horse and Cattle Flesh!

In tens of thousands of Stables throughout Europe and America, there are fine looking Horses, Cattle, Sheep and Swine, fed at trifling expense, at which the ordinary uninitiated stockkeeper stands amazed. By personal knowledge, he knows that his neighbor does not feed his stock so abundantly, or care for them so attentively, yet he sees his neighbor's animals fatter, sleeker, healthier, and in every way more satisfactory. Persistent enquiry and close observation, reveal the fact that in the stables of the knowing ones takes the place to a very large extent of grooming, extra feeding and petting. By a judicious use of

DICK'S BLOOD PURIFIER!

A horse, cow or smaller animal, will look better with half the feed, and half the attention, keep healthier, live longer, and sell better, than animals that get all the feed, and all the attention that money can procure. A horse discreetly coursed with and fed on straw, will do better than ninety per cent. of the horses that get all the hay they can consume. Lean animals are made fat, and fat animals are made fatter by the moderate use of

DICK'S BLOOD PURIFIER!

No living man would keep a horse or cow, or sheep or pig, poor or sick, if he knew how soon and cheaply it can be put into condition by the use of

DICK'S BLOOD PURIFIER!

There are constantly coming in from all parts of the continent, emphatic testimonials, praising Dick's Blood Purifier.

One Man Writes:

"Seeing one of my horses out of order over a year ago, a neighbor advised me to get a couple of boxes of Dick's Blood Purifier, mentioning that he kept it in his own stable constantly. I sent to the druggist's, but found he was out of it. In the meantime, I borrowed a half box from my neighbor, and used it until I could get a supply direct from you. Before the half box was exhausted, the animal's spirits improved, his coat commenced to turn glossy, and he showed a healthy appetite for even the most inferior kinds of fodder. I continued the treatment until two boxes were consumed, and then suspended for a month, after which I administered a box and a half, when I sold him to a buyer who dropped in. I realized $160 for the animal, for which I would have gladly accepted $50 three months previously, and all the difference gained by spending a couple of dollars on four boxes of

CIRCULATION!

A VITAL QUESTION.

On the 1st September the publishers of THE STAR wrote a letter to the proprietors of the Mail challenging them on the question of circulation. To this challenge the Mail made no reply. On the 17th September the challenge was published in THE STAR for the purpose of forcing the Mail to respond. Well, it has at last responded—a response that will immortalize its publishers as the champion equivocators of the Dominion. We will give the public the substance of this wonderful response.

"The attention of the publishers of the Montreal journal was attracted at the time of first publication to the Mail's claim of the 'largest circulation,' but prudence, no doubt, prevented THE STAR from challenging the statement.

The attention of the proprietor of THE STAR was again attracted to The Mail's claim when that gentleman was in Toronto some months ago; but a natural modesty, combined with business prudence, no doubt, prevented him from issuing any challenge to The Mail on the subject.

It will thus be seen that THE STAR starts with a statement that is inaccurate, and calculated to mislead. Instead of its attention being recently called to the matter, it has been considering it for over a year, and no doubt making preparations for a challenge."

Until the Mail issued its poster we were not aware that the Mail had publicly claimed the largest circulation. We are, however, anxious that the Mail should not suffer by any delay on our part, and in order to accommodate them and make them very happy, provided they will kindly accept our challenge, we will allow the investigation to go back over a year or two years or more as the Mail may choose. Will that satisfy them on this point?

The next item worthy of notice is to the effect that the Mail did notice our challenging letter notwithstanding our denial.

"The Mail did 'find it convenient' to reply promptly, as on the 5th September the Managing Director wrote to Messrs. GRAHAM & Co., asking them in view of their challenge to 'kindly send copies of each of your editions, daily, weekly, and any others you publish.' He desired to examine the paper which was courageous enough to challenge the Mail's right to claim the 'largest circulation' of any paper in Canada.

"The Mail's demand for copies of the various editions of THE STAR was a fair and reasonable one, and was worthy of prompt consideration. And we fail to see how the publishers of THE STAR can justify their neglect to comply with the Mail's demand, if they were acting in good faith."

This is very funny. THE STAR challenges the Mail by means of a private letter, and the Mail replies "kindly send copies of each of your editions, daily, weekly and any others you publish;" not a single allusion to the challenge. If the Managing Director of the Mail were to walk into the Imperial Bank of Canada and say to the manager "Can you loan us a thousand dollars?" and the Bank Manager should say, "What is the latest news from Washington?" would the Mail director consider he had received a reply to his question? We think not; he would naturally say the Mail wants money, as THE STAR now asks for "acceptance" or "non-acceptance" of its challenge. The Mail's reply could have been comprehended in three words, thus:—"Yes, we accept your challenge," or "No, we cannot." Moreover, copies of all our publications were sent immediately to the manager of the Mail, and we are prepared to prove that he received them. No one in Canada knows THE STAR better than the Mail people. They keep it on file in their office and take it regularly home to their families; they read it carefully, and religiously, discuss it, and criticize it, and are completely overwhelmed with grief and disappointment at THE STAR's success. They know it too well in fact. For these statements we have the authority of the principal director in the Mail company, a fine genial gentleman, a worthy imitator of the late G. Washington on the veracity business, the owner of a great paper mill and a Mexican silver mine.

"We propose that a comparison shall be instituted between the subscription lists and bona fide permanent circulation of each paper. In fact, let the test question be which paper has the largest number of annual prepaid Canadian subscribers. This will make the matter perfectly plain to the average newspaper reader; perfectly clear to the business men who are interested, and perfectly simple for those who may be entrusted with the duty of determining the result of investigation and comparison.

THE STAR will, no doubt, be perfectly willing, probably anxious, to meet us on these fair and reasonable grounds; and we will place the sum of five thousand dollars in the Imperial Bank here as our stake on the result of the undertaking. We venture to name his Worship the Mayor of Toronto as our referee in this matter, and we agree that the stake of the loser shall be left in trust with the judges, to be distributed at their discretion to the charities of Toronto if the decision is in our favor, and to the charities of Montreal if THE STAR should succeed in making good its claim."

This means that the thousands upon thousands of papers purchased every day by our news agents and sold to regular subscribers must not count as circulation if there should be an investigation. It means that the thousands of merchants who all the year round buy THE STAR from the newsboys on their way home from business will not count either. This is too great a joke, and must be considered as such; therefore we will not enlarge upon it.

Thus far it will be seen the Mail walks round our challenge as something they are afraid might bite them. The rest of its article in reply is made up of abuse, gratuitous abuse, which shows that the publishers of the Mail are dreadfully and sincerely mad, cross and thoroughly annoyed, for all of which we are extremely sorry, because we like the Mail publishers personally; they are generally so very good natured and kind.

The Mail offers to put up FIVE THOUSAND DOLLARS for something, but forgot to say what that something was. The financial feature of this controversy is the only feature that gives us any occasion for regret. We reproached the Mail with undue delay in replying to our challenge; it is now said that the delay was caused by some little difficulty in raising the five thousand dollars. If that is true we are sorry we reproached them. We were poor once ourselves.

The publishers of THE STAR have placed in the hands of the Manager of the Bank of Toronto, at Montreal, the sum of five thousand dollars, as shewn by accompanying receipt.

BANK OF TORONTO.
MONTREAL, September 21, 1881.

Received from Hugh Graham, of the Montreal STAR, Five Thousand Dollars ($5,000) currency, as an evidence of good faith in the circulation controversy now going on between the Montreal STAR and the Toronto Mail. I am instructed to hand over the five thousand dollars to Toronto charities should the publishers of THE STAR fail to fulfil their offer to open their books to an investigating committee and place before them all the necessary evidence in determining figures of circulation, and to answer every question asked.

J. MURRAY SMITH.

Now, we ask the Mail to place a like sum in the hands of a Toronto banker on like conditions, and then come out squarely and manfully and answer our challenge. Accept or decline.

"YES" or "NO."

We need offer no apology to our readers for occupying so much space by this controversy. It is a great public question that is under discussion, in which the public have the deepest interest. A newspaper publisher who receives public patronage on false representations of circulation is as great a villain as the man who obtains goods on false pretences, and should be punished by the law of the land. We are seeking an opportunity to enlighten the public in this matter, and whatever enquiry is instituted must be of the most searching character, and conclusive in its results. We trust the publishers of the Mail will accept our challenge without any more dodging or evading.

We reproduce our challenging letter with the remarks.

A CHALLENGE!

To "The Mail" Printing Co., Toronto, Ont.:

GENTLEMEN,—

Our attention has been directed to a recent announcement, manifestly emanating from "The Mail" office, although without a signature, claiming for "The Mail" a larger circulation than any other Canadian paper.

In justice to the public and THE STAR we cannot permit such a statement to go unchallenged. For upwards of twelve months we have claimed publicly, conspicuously and persistently that THE STAR had a bona fide circulation by many thousands more than "The Mail." These statements, published over our own signature and submitted with the offer of abundant proof and substantial evidence of good faith, have heretofore remained undisputed.

The announcement, of which we have now the best of reasons to complain, appears in the form of a poster, stating that "The Mail" has a larger circulation than any other Canadian paper, and we take this means of directing your attention to it.

While we are fully prepared to grant to "The Mail" and all other papers all the praise they justly merit for enterprise and ability, we are not disposed to overlook statements regarding circulation that, in our opinion, are not in accordance with facts.

We sincerely believe the "Mail's" latest statement in this connection is wholly unfounded and utterly impossible of proof, and as fully believe THE STAR still maintains its acknowledged position as the most extensively circulated Canadian paper, and in support of this we offer to place in the hands of competent judges overwhelming proof of a character beyond the possibility of dispute, provided you will submit the evidence in your own defence.

It may be that your statement now complained of was made without due consideration, in which case you, as gentlemen in honor bound, will of course at once make the "amende honorable" or accept the only alternative. There cannot be two papers each one enjoying a larger circulation than the other and both having the largest circulation, therefore it is due to the public and "The Mail" as well as THE STAR, that the whole question of circulation should be fully and satisfactorily investigated, unless one or the other accepts a secondary position. As far as THE STAR is concerned we are thoroughly convinced it stands at the head of the list, and while adhering to this view we are ready for an investigation. What say you?

Awaiting an early reply, we remain,

Yours truly,
GRAHAM & CO,
Publishers STAR.

The letter written to the publishers of the Toronto "Mail" was received in Toronto on the 2nd September, and certainly, under the circumstances, merited an immediate response. The publishers of "The Mail," we regret to say, have not yet found it convenient to reply although they have now had fourteen days in which to write it. Our letter is a direct challenge to "The Mail" on the question of circulation, and we think the public will agree with us that it is time the matter was fully cleared up. While we think our offer was fair and reasonable and worthy of prompt consideration, we fail to see how the publishers of "The Mail" can justify their silence if they are acting in good faith.—GRAHAM & CO., Publishers STAR.

Supplementary Exhibition.

The proprietors of the Montreal STAR were urged to place one of their new printing and folding machines in the Exhibition. No doubt, one of these wonderful works of mechanical skill would have proven a great centre of interest in Machinery Hall, but the risk involved in moving it was too great. Strangers to the city, however, will have permission to visit THE STAR press-rooms on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 8 to 6, and on Mondays, Wednesdays, Fridays and Saturdays from 4 to 6. These machines have been visited by thousands of people who have been greatly edified and amused. They print, cut and fold the various editions of THE STAR at a speed of nearly forty thousand copies an hour.

A "ROLL of bills" was found on a big, strapping fellow who asked protection of the police the other night in Montreal. We do not know the amount of the "roll of bills," but if the police authorities made the men who ask protection do a fair amount of work in return for what they get, there would be less loafers and more room at the police stations. It has always surprised us that experiments that have been successfully tried in other towns could not be tried in Montreal. In several places, tramps are put to work and made to earn their board and lodging, and they may thus be prevented from committing crime as well as from going hungry.

SEVERAL people have been poisoned through eating canned meats and fish recently. The only way to put a stop to this is to make the people who can meats and fruits liable to prosecution for criminal carelessness in the event of poisoning taking place. Canning meats, fruit and fish has become a lucrative business, but a few more cases of poisoning and the business may be checked if not ruined. A good chemist could at once supply the means of preventing the absorption of poison from the tins, and if the manufacturer has not honesty enough to guard the lives of his customers, then he should be made to experience the penalty.

SALMON at one cent each! Just fancy a luscious, good sized salmon of say twelve or fourteen pounds for one cent. And yet this is what salmon has been selling for in B. C. The Indians, it appears, caught 66,000 of those fish in three or four days and they sold them for one cent each. So a news item says and we see no reason to doubt it. And then 66,000 represents $660, and that is quite a sum for B. C. Indians to make in three or four days. The salmon made them wealthy and being wealthy they did not work, and having money and no work they, we imagine, drank and now it is in order to hear of a savage murder. It is the natural current of events.

Is it the case, as passengers arriving by the Canadian mail steamers inform us, that the Government employs an altogether unsuitable and inadequate boat as tender to those steamers at Rimouski,—a boat that rolls dangerously when the least sea is running, and that has no proper certificate for the conveyance of passengers at all? In such matters as these we look to the Government to set an example of strict obedience to the law. Public attention was strongly aroused on this subject last Spring, in connection with the dreadful accident at London, Ont., but if the community is to be guaranteed against a repetition of such horrors, there must be continued vigilance to see that the conditions of safety are not neglected. From all that we can learn, it seems evident that the Government is wantonly running a great risk in employing the vessel to which we have referred; and, if the present season passes without accident, it will be more through good luck than good management.

GENERAL SHERMAN does well to condemn in the strong terms in which he does, the attempt by a United States soldier to shoot Guiteau. We wonder it is not more generally felt that if there ever was a case in which it was necessary and desirable that justice should be done in a calm and deliberate manner, the present is pre-eminently such a case. Surely a great nation does not want its mandate executed by the first hot-headed ruffian that comes along. Let Guiteau be assassinated, and let public sentiment condone the deed, and what guarantee will there be that the next time an unpopular crime is committed, some one will not, in like manner, seek to earn a momentary notoriety by anticipating the verdict of justice. There is nothing a civilized nation should watch more jealously than the beginnings of anything like anarchy; and nothing can be more anarchical in its nature than the murdering of offenders whom the state has already in its grasp. The many threatenings indulged in against Guiteau all indicate a certain want of confidence in the established methods of justice; but better far that any number of criminals should escape after such a trial as the laws of the country can give them, than that private individuals should be encouraged to make themselves the ministers of what they are pleased to regard as justice. General Sherman well says that the man Mason who shot at Guiteau shall be brought to trial just as if he had shot at the most unoffensive citizen. A soldier at least should be above so horrible a breach of discipline as taking the life of a prisoner he is set to guard.

Shade Trees.

Montreal would lose half its beauty if it lost all its shade trees. Take away the maple alone, with its shelter in Summer and its tints in the Autumn, and where will the beauty of Mount Royal be in the embers of the fading year? Or apply the axe to that park-like avenue—Sherbrooke street—and see how the aspect of the place will change, and how the beautiful will become barren, and the barren desolate and weary. Looking down at Montreal from the top of the mountain, the city looks as if built in a wood, with long avenues cut here and there for the convenience of the inhabitants, but come down and you find the trees irregular, and often neglected. Great gaps are seen in which there are no trees at all, and the beauty and harmony of the scene is marred. Places where we should have maple, elm, ash, basswood and black walnut we find empty, while here and there the protections around the young shoots are too often broken and allowed to remain so. Look at the vista along St. Catherine street, Union avenue, or any other street where the shade trees are comparatively protected and flourish, and how beautifully cool they look, hiding the houses in the near distance, on either side and sheltering the pedestrians who seek refuge under them, when the sirocco burns the leaves and bleaches the grass into a brown and sickly hue! Do they not relieve the eye, and lend to the city a charm which makes it picturesque and beautiful, do they not arrest the attention even of those whom we might suppose to become indifferent by constant association. Our shade trees are among the things we pride ourselves on, and yet much more could be done to make them more numerous than they are and to afford them more protection. And not only should this be done in Montreal, but all over the Province, for if "beauty is a thing of joy forever" it is in the power of every city and village in the country to lend a charm of beauty to the dreary rows of stone or brick which line the thoroughfares in grim and uninviting numbers. Let the elm, the ash, and the maple fringe the roadside everywhere, and let us be able to walk through avenues, darkened by the ample leaves of the shade trees along our way. In the busy haunts of commerce shade trees may not be desirable, but the places are few indeed that shade trees would not flourish and be protected in and in which the people will not seek their shelter when Old Sol pours down his rays in mid-summer. Let them attract the lightning or gather the moisture as the timid ones say, for their charms we will risk the infinitisemal dangers which the too timid picture in their fearful imaginings.

Corners.

Many wise reflection are now being indulged in on the New York Stock Exchange on the subject of "corners." One would have thought that the subject was altogether too trite to furnish matter for much discussion at this time of day; but it seems that the last squeeze in Hannibal and St. Joseph stock was too tight a one altogether for the christian virtue of some of some of those who allowed themselves to be caught. They say that "corners" in general are all very well, but that this particular corner was the most iniquitous thing they ever knew. Its squeezing powers were quite unprecedented; and it was operated by men without a shadow of conscience or remorse. The sufferers feel, in fact, as if they had just crawled out of a well managed hydraulic press, with just enough strength left to go and tell the story of their wrongs to the courts. We confess to only a moderate amount of sympathy with the injured Bruins, and we doubt exceedingly whether the courts will be able to afford them any relief. The corner was made by the buying up, by a few individuals, of all the common stock of a certain rather obscure railway, at a time when heavy contracts to sell that stock at certain low figures had been entered into by a number of speculators. The speculators, of course, expected to settle their little differences on these contracts according to the state of the market for that particular stock; and so they did in effect, only the market was made for them in a very peculiar fashion by the gentlemen composing the corner. These, controlling all the stock, ran it up and up by ten per cent. at a time to more than double its actual value. Everytime the bears declined to settle, the corner clapped on ten or even twenty per cent., and finally when the time was up, the bears had to pay 200 for stock which they had agreed to sell at something like 80, or at least had to settle their differences on that basis.

What is now made the ground of complaint is that the corner was engineered by Mr. Wm. Dowd, the President of the Hannibal & St. Joseph Railway, and lately the Republican candidate for the Mayoralty of New York. It is held that Mr. Dowd, had no right as President of the railway, to engage in such operations; and, further, that it was his duty, when he saw the stock rising, to convert into stock certain bonds of the railway, bearing interest at 8 per cent., which he had power so to convert. The railway shareholders, it is said, should have reaped the benefit of a rise in the value of the stock, not Mr. Dowd as an individual speculator. This may be sound doctrine, but it has never been up to this day, Stock Exchange doctrine. The rise in the value of the stock, Mr. Dowd would reply, was not a real increase in value; it was a result artificially produced by the ingenious strategy of the makers of the corner, and what claim have the shareholders, as such, to any share of the profits? To be sure, some of the 8 per cent. bonds could have been converted into common stock at great advantage to the Railway, but that would simply have been giving the Railway a bonus that it had never earned; and, so far as the makers of the corner were concerned, it would just have been driving an enormous hole through their solidly constructed wall. The only difference between this particular corner and thousands of others was that it was carried with a somewhat higher hand than usual, and was more successful. As long as the gambling spirit prevails on the Stock Exchange, corners will be made; and, as to keeping railway presidents and other responsible officers out of them, the thing is impossible, and will be until the millenium arrives. There is a lesson, however, for "the unlearned and the unstable," which they would do well to learn, viz: to keep out of corners, and not to place themselves at the mercy either of bears or bulls. If old operators get badly caught, as in this case, what may greenhorns expect?

Canadian Pacific Railway Items.

The "fill" at Cedar Lake, about a mile and a half west of Kalan, on the Canadian Pacific Railway, gave way last Monday night, and sank 10 feet, the rails being on a level with the water.

The auditors of the Canadian Pacific Railway at Winnepeg report earnings for the month of August $69,300.18, expenses $27,646.98, net profit $41,653.98. Earnings for same month last year $22,403.80, expenses $17,174.61, profits $5,249.10.

An interview between the Selkirk deputation and Canadian Pacific Railway magnates yesterday resulted in a proposition from the latter to extend the branch line to Selkirk for a bonus of $70,000, the road to be completed by the 1st September, 1882.

Word has been received from Manner Rodgers, in charge of the Rocky Mountain survey of the Canadian Pacific Railway, stating that Vermillion Pass has been found impracticable for the purposes of the railway, and that the energies of the surveyors would now be confined to other passes. He asked for further instructions. A reply was sent, allowing him to use his own judgment as to the course he should pursue during the Winter.

A Steamer Injured.

The propeller "Lake Ontario," while unloading railroad iron at the Great Western Railway wharf, at Hamilton, yesterday, met with an accident. The grips holding one of the rails broke and the rail, falling with great violence, went through the boat's bottom, making a hole three feet square. The "Ontario" immediately became half full of water and nearly capsized, but by the efforts of the captain and crew a sail was placed over the hole. The pumps being put to work, the boat was got into seaworthy condition and taken across the lake to Port Dalhousie, where she was put in dry dock to undergo repairs.

THE EXHIBITION.

Machinery Hall—Building Material—Hereford Cattle Notes.

The special attractions connected with the Exhibition to-day will be numerous. The grounds will be visited at two o'clock this afternoon by Sir John A. Macdonald, to whom an address will be presented. At three o'clock a grand free piano recital will be given by that queen of pianists, Madame Carreno, in the main building. The sale of thoroughbred cattle by Thomas Potter, auctioneer, will commence at two o'clock. In the evening there will be a grand display of fireworks (weather permitting) on the Montreal Lacrosse Grounds. To-morrow the special attractions will also be numerous. A sale of pure bred sheep and swine will be held at two o'clock by Thomas J. Potter, auctioneer. A grand athletic tournament on the race course in the new grounds will commence at three o'clock. The programme will embrace bicycle races, foot races, pony races, tug of war, etc. The tug of war promises to be an exciting struggle. Only first-class men have been chosen for it. The obstacle race, too, will be a novelty. The pipers of the Royal Scots will play at the tournament.

MACHINERY HALL.

The exhibit of machinery in this hall neither in originality of design nor in variety comes up to expectations. Machinery is always interesting and the lot shown this year attracts a great crowd of people, but that is not the best sign of quality. There were several machines, however, highly worthy of study.

The Corriveau Silk Mills have a silk loom of their own manufacture in the building and make beautiful silk handkerchiefs in the presence of many admiring spectators. Their loom is capable of turning off five dozen handkerchiefs a day. This Company is rapidly increasing its business and now have 118 looms in operation in their mills. Forty of these looms are for making dress goods, ten for making handkerchiefs and three for making ribbons.

R. H. Buchanan & Co., Montreal, show a large variety of useful machinery. They exhibit two portable engines with upright boilers and driving apparatus, the manufacture of John Doty, Toronto. The greatest advantage of this class of engine is that they take up so little space. They also show a fine collection of pumps, a steam governor, an injector and ejector, a steam guage a safety valve, emery wheels, a turning lathe, etc. The wind mill shown by them on the grounds attracts much attention. Their exhibit is, on the whole, very creditable. A small steam portable fire engine manufactured in London, England, suitable for towns and villages, is also shown by them. It weighs only a ton, and has a capacity of 9,000 gallons.

Simeon Cloutier, Quebec, shows a machine which is called a leather measurer although no one appears to know just what it is useful for and no person is at hand to explain it. It is a singular looking machine.

Messrs J. MacIntosh & Son shows their patent railroad frog and also a switch guard.

The Hart Emery Wheel Company Hamilton, make a fine display of emery wheels from Italy and show two machines in which they are used for sharpening saws, one for gang saws and one for circulars. All the work required in sharpening by these machines is to put the saws in them.

The Universal Grinder made by Newell & Chapin, New York, is on hand as usual, under the superintendence of Mr. J Cheeseman. They are capable of grinding anything from corn to coffee spices and barks.

The show of the Canadian Electric Light Company, occupies a darkened room partitioned off in one corner of the building. The room is always crowded with visitors.

J. R. McLaren, Jr., exhibits a wood-turning lathe, and R. A. Rolland, a churn motor working an old fashioned churn with an upright dash.

A great loss to the exhibit of machinery is the failure of the Waterous Company, of Brantford to get their large exhibits of engines on hand. Their large space is vacant.

BUILDING MATERIAL, &C.

In plain moulded bricks J. M. Clark of Ottawa exhibits some excellently formed and well fired bricks. Bulmer & Sheppard have also a remarkably good display of common building bricks, as well as drain tiles and red and white terra cotta. Mr. J. M. Clark, Ottawa, displays some beautiful carving in wood for decorative purposes. A. Howell, Quebec, has a good invention in the way of a door pully and sash regulator.

T. Castle & Sons, Montreal, exhibit a beautiful panel of stained glass as well as some very chaste gilding on glass and some excellent specimens of window shade painting. G. Phillipson, Montreal, has some beautiful specimens of stained glass and fresco painting. T. F. Stoneham, Montreal, has a good display of window shades in cut and engraved panels. Champigneule, Bar-le-duc, France, has a very good display of colored glass. Mr. P. T. Somerville exhibits some beautiful work in Canadian marble.

R. Beullac, of Notre Dame street, exhibits a superb collection of church ornaments and everything in the way of artistic statuary for religious edifices. Mr. Spence has a very creditable display of stained glass, including a very rich and chaste window for Mr. L. J. Sargeant's house.

Robert Mitchell & Co., of Montreal, are deserving of all praise for the truly magnificent display they make of nearly every article made in their estensive establishment. Their exhibit is divided into two sections: on one side they display all kinds of brass castings, including brass cocks, valves, whistles and safety valves, &c. Their whistles and valves are especially good and have obtained a prize and diploma. Their other section contains gas lamps of polished bronze in every style, and displaying some great chasteness of design.

Messrs. Rogers & King have a large display of cast iron goods, including all kinds of heating apparatus, headers, bends, soil and waste pipes.

Messrs. H. R. Ives & Company have their exhibit erected on the grounds directly opposite the main entrance and display ornamental railings, cast iron stable furnishings and a very handsome garden pavilion of iron, &c.

The Dominion Barbed Wire Company have a fine exhibit of their barbed Wire in the open grounds, where it is shown off to the greatest advantage. Mr. Leach represents the Company on the grounds. The Company have, with creditable enterprise, stretched their wire along the top of the fence in front of the grounds.

CATTLE—HEREFORDS.

The exhibit of Hereford cattle is behind that of several other breeds in numbers, but only behind the Polled Angus in general excellence. There are about thirty head in all shown and the principal exhibitors are Messrs. M. H. Cochrane, Geo. Whitfield; W. T. Benson, Cardinal; J. Hickson, and Dawes & Co., Lachine.

Senator Cochrane shows some Herefords as fine as any ever seen before in this country. His three-year-old bull President, may as well be called a model animal of his breed. He is smooth and fine in every particular. He is extremely fat, good condition by the way being a characteristic of nearly all the Cochrane cattle. A three-year-old Hereford cow, also of his, is a very superior animal. The rest of his Herefords are all good.

W. T. Benson has some prime cattle of this breed on exhibit. Arabella, 2nd, is a three year old cow, bred by William Taylor, Shoule Cot, Herfordshire, England. She is a splendid milker. Vixen is a fine two year old heifer, which comes from the celebrated Lancashire Lass, which has taken thirteen first prizes in Great Britain. Mr. Benson exhibits several other fine cows of this breed, besides two promising calves. A heavy well-conditioned four year old bull is exhibited by J. Hickson. Dawes & Co., Lachine, exhibit nine Herefords, —six cows and heifers, two calves and a yearling bull. The bull is already very fine, and promises to be remarkably good later on. A two year old bull shown by J. P. Gibb, Compton, deserves more mention than we can give it.

The Whitfield farm is represented in this breed by five head, two cows and three bulls. They are all good animals, the three year old bull General Roberts in particular. He is evidently second of the breed on the field only to President Cochrane's bull of the same age, which is simply perfect. General Roberts has about all the best qualities of his race, being well proportioned, short legged, heavy bodied, has great depth of the fore quarters, and seems to be an animal in every way superior. He was calved August 9th, 1878, and bred by T. Duckhorn, Boysham, Court Ross, Herfordshire, England. His sire was "Helianthus," and his dam "Daisy," by Statesman. His grand-dam was "Browny 2nd," by "Grand Duke." The sire of "Helianthus" was "King of Lilies," and the dam "Queen of Hearts." The dam of "King of the Lilies" was "Queen of the Lilies," who was the winner of the first prize at the Southampton meeting of the Bath and west of England Society and at the Manchester meeting of the Royal Agricultural Society of England besides in many local places. General Roberts is consequently descended from the most celebrated stock. Duckham is a yearling bull with some very smooth points. He is well proportioned, bow set, handles well and has a good skin. Lady Lizzie and Lady Lass are two four-year old cows of fine qualities. The former is a strong heavy cow of the breed and seemingly a fine milker. She is of the very highest pedigree, being sired by "Sir George 2nd" and out of "Lady Lizzie 2nd," by "Bismarck." Lady Lass is an extra cow. She is well topped and has many other good qualities well brought out. She is also descended from "Bismarck" and was one of four cows that took first prize at Leominster Agricultural show in 1879. The Whitfield show of cattle is indeed very fine, though it does not attract the same attention as that of the magnificent Polled Angus. The Hereford breed of cattle do not receive the same favor in this country as the Durham and Ayrshire, and the Durham seems to be crowding them out even in their native English counties. They are a breed which is larger and stouter built than the Ayrshires and smaller than the Durhams, and have much of the milking quality of the former and the beef producing qualities of the latter.

Yesterday was a proud day for the Whitfield cattle. Having carried off a greater number of prizes than other herd exhibited they took precedence in being exhibited in the cattle ring in the afternoon. The procession of prize cattle belonging to this one farm, as animal after animal, each with the red or blue cards attached, were led into the ring by the attendants, was fine enough to impress the onlooker's mind with the conviction that stock-raising in this Province, as far as quality was concerned, was little, if any, behind that of any other country in the world. Durhams, Herefords, Devons, Polled Angus, West Highland cattle were all represented, and a Brahmin sacred cow brought up the rear. The two Durham bulls, Royal Lird and Duke of Rougemont preceded in the course around the ring and the massive, majestic appearance of the one and the beautiful white color of the other were the objects of numerous commendatory remarks from bystanders. The Polled Angus bulls and cows from their excellence and novel appearance to many beholders were even more commented upon. A great crowd of people surrounded the ring and the show was remarked upon as a magnificent one.

HORSE SALE ON THE GROUNDS.

The sale of horses took place on the grounds yesterday morning at ten o'clock, Mr. Potter being the auctioneer. There was a good attendance. The Cleveland bay coaching stallion "Braithwaite Raymond," owned by the Hon. J. J. C. Abbott, was sold to Mr. W. H. Martin, Shefford, Que., for $200. The stallion "Marquis," owned by Mr. Neil J. McGillivray, was sold to Mr. A. Scott, of Petite Cote, for $130.

The sale of cattle, for which there are a good many entries, takes place to-day.

EXHIBITION NOTES.

A committee of three dentists appointed by the committee to examine the exhibit of the S. S. White Dental Manufacturing Company of Philadelphia, Boston, New York and Chicago, report that the exhibit is worthy of special notice and recommend that a gold medal be given them as a special award for their exhibiting here.

In referring to fire escapes in our notices of the exhibition we made an erroneous reference to the one exhibited by Messrs. Cooper, Fairman & Co. Their fire escape is to be found to the left of the main entrance.

The auctioneer's tent on the Exhibition grounds was besieged yesterday by intending buyers of cattle. Over three hundred catalogues were distributed.

We omitted to mention, in referring to the handsomely arranged salon of the Oshawa Cabinet Company, that the carpets which so materially assisted the display, were exhibited by Messrs. James Baylis & Son, of Notre Dame street. They are very chaste in design, and rich in make, consisting of tapestry, Brussels, Wilton velvel and Xminster, all with borders to match.

Special Features of the Exhibition.

The "Cooks Friend" Baking Powder manufactured by W. D. McLaren of this city, still holds its position as a favorite with the public. Last year Mr. McLaren obtained the bronze medal at the Toronto Exhibition, and at the Dominion Exhibition, held in Montreal, last year, he was also awarded the bronze medal (first prize). It is claimed to be the only "Cooks Friend" in the market, although there are many infringements both as regards copying the name as well as the pattern of the packages. It contains no alum or no injurious ingredients and has now been upwards of a quarter of a century before the community, and is continually growing in public estimation.

Another interesting invention is the improved electric semaphore invented by the late Robert Watson, jr., Montreal. This is a further proof of the uses to which electricity can be applied, and we have no doubt this admirable invention will shortly be in general use. The advantages which are claimed in its favor are, an immense saving in the tear and wear of the plant as now used in operating a semaphore. Instead of having a heavy weight to raise and a strong friction to work against, all that is necessary is to touch a button and the semaphore is raised or lowered instantaneously, while by the old system a succession of manipulations of the lever is necessary before the semaphore is placed in position. Another great advantage is that the distance which can be operated on is unlimited. It is certainly a great labor-saving invention, and is well worthy the attention of railway men. The machine has been brought to its present perfection by Mr. Nesbitt, Electrician, of Toronto. Another important feature of this invention is, that on the event of the wire becoming disconnected, or anything going wrong, the semaphore immediately assumes the position of danger.

There is an old saying to the effect that our domestic happiness often depends on the state of our biliary and digestive organs and that most of our little troubles may be more efficaciously cured by the physician than by the moralist. Nowadays however we require neither, Vegetine, the great elixir, has taken their place and shouts defiance to all such monsters as torpid livers dyspepsia et hoc genus omne; it not only clears the blood, but it is also claimed to have the power of purifying the mind. It is entirely a vegetable preparation and has an enormous sale. It is also another sequence of our national policy and in its manufacture employment is given to a large number of hands, at the factory, Toronto. The proprietors of Vegetine have made a very extensive display at the Exhibition. It has gained already a very great popularity amongst the public and more especially as regards its blood purifying qualities.

It is said of the great Queen Elizabeth that she left no less than three thousand different habits in her wardrobe when she died. This is not surprising, and is easily accounted for. She had no such emporium of fashion within her reach as Ligget & Hamilton's, nor had the modellers of fashions in those bye-gone days such inventive and brilliant powers of pleasing the fair sex as is displayed by such firms. It would have done the good Queen Bess good to behold such articles of vertu as Ligget & Hamilton display in the way of handsome and elegant dresses and costumes. They are marvels of beauty and of perfect taste, and are greatly admired not only by the fair sex but also by their lovers. They have received no less than five first-class prizes in this line. Ligget & Hamilton have also something else on the "tapis," and make a most creditable display of carpets in the left wing of the main building, including Brussels, Tapestry, X'minster and other well-known carpets.

The wheel of fortune is, at the best, a most fickle and uncertain means of gaining a livelihood, but when one is assured that there's millions in the patent wheel and hub of L. Bredannaz & Co., then the matter is worthy of study, and upon inspection the inventor of this enterprising French firm is deserving of more than a passing remark. The advantage derived from the invention is simply that each spoke is capable of being changed at a moment's notice, and replaced by another without removing the tire, or even taking the wheel off the axle. The felloe of the wheel is also in sections, and is capable of being manipulated in the same manner. Mr. Bredannaz also exhibits a furnace for heating tires, which is capable of turning out a large number in a very short space of time. He has obtained a medal and diploma at the Toronto Exhibition, and has been equally successful here, having been awarded first prize.

H. R. H. the Princess Louise has had many distinguished honors conferred on her and she is well worthy of them, but paramount to all is, we consider, the wide world renown the "Princess Baking Powder" has given H. R. H. Fortunately the Princess is conscious of this. She herself uses no other baking powder, because she knows that its absolute purity is attested by leading chemists, and its popularity is increasing so fast that she finds it necessary to keep up with the age. This popular baking powder is shipped in large quantities by its energetic proprietors, Messrs. Wm. Lunan & Co'y. of Sorel, to all parts of the Dominion, ranging from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and recently they have received numerous orders from the Brazils, Bermuda and the West Indies. This is also a product of the N. P., and is fast driving from the market all American brands. Messrs. Lunan & Co'y. have received numerous most satisfactory assurances from all parts, of its growing popularity and appreciation, which is very pleasing considering the short period this brand has been in the market.

There is an old French song which says:—

"The icy gale, the falling snow,
Extinction to the fires shall bring;
But, like the flowers, with brighter glow,
They shall renew their charms in Spring."

The "charms" spoken of would be materially decreased if people would only insure their dwellings and invest in one of Gregory's Patent Fire Escapes which is exhibited at the right hand side of the Main Building. Its simplicity is its greatest feature, and merely consists of a chain ladder which is capable of being removed from window to window. The chain traverses on a horizontal bar running the whole length of the building, and can be moved from place to place in a moment's notice. The whole ladder is stored away in a zinc box at one end of the traversing rod, and the very act of lowering it gives the fire alarm not only to the Fire Station but also to the inmates of the house. Access is had to the escape from a fire alarm box, duplicate keys of which are kept by the watchman and at the Fire Station.

There is nothing more trying or more likely to "tees" the wits out of a man than to have to sit all day long at a badly proportioned, badly constructed desk. To enter the lists as a Knight of the "Plume Volante," it is absolutely necessary that not only the pen (which at all times is mightier than the sword) be perfect, but, also, that the desk one writes on be of proper proportions and comfortable to work at. Messrs. Tees exhibit something quite new in the way of office and school furniture and embracing all the most modern improvements in their line of business.

Recent Business Failures.

The failures throughout the United States and Canada, reported to Bradstreet's during the past week, were 103, an increase of 30 over the record for the preceding week. It will be seen, from the reports, that inadequate capital and inexperience were the causes of many of the failures. Numerous traders who had started in business within the past year found it impossible to compete with old established houses, and have had to go under. Speculation has also affected several firms, and the embarrassment of a number of small manufacturers in Philadelphia is noted. In New York city the principal failures were Sterling & Co., dealers in hollowware; Freidenrich & Rosenblatt, manufacturers of shirts, and James Jordan, books; Brooklyn: Weber & Amthor; St. Louis: C. K. Stinde, boots and shoes; Elmira: The Davis Iron Wagon Company, which was sold out by the Sheriff. In the Middle States there were 28 failures, an increase of 13; New England States, 15, a decrease of 2; Southern States, 10, an increase of 1; Western States, 29, an increase of 15; California and the Territories 6, a decrease of 4; Canada, 15, an increase of 7.

Fragments.

The Court of Queen's Bench Appeal side yesterday, delivered the following fragments.

Molson, Appellant, and Carter, Respondent.—A writ of appeal was issued on the last day of the year, and the bond was insufficient. The Court probably had a discretion to allow the defect to be corrected, but in this case Molson had already the opinions of the highest Court of this country and of the Privy Council, and the capias was good and valid, and the Court saw no reason to grant further indulgence. Applications rejected.

Corporation de L'Assomption, Apellant, and Baker, Respondent, judgment confirmed.

Lareau, appellant, and La Societe de Construction St. Jacques, respondent, Judgment confirmed.

Gault, appellant, and Dussault, respondent. Judgment reversed.

Dorion, appellant, and Attorney-General, respondent. Judgment confirmed.

Bruneau, appellant, and Bertrand, respondent. Judgment confirmed.

Mr. Justice Brayley, of the U. S. Supreme Court, visited the court in the course of the forenoon, accompanied by Mr. Justice Mackay, and was invited to a seat on the Bench.

THE FRENCH IN TUNIS.

Soldiers Dying of Ague—France compelled to Occupy Tunis.

LONDON, September 20.—The Paris correspondent of the Daily News says:—"M. Roustan's statement to the Cabinet Council was a thinly veiled attack on General Farre, Minister of War. M. Roustan desires to have General Gallifet at Tunis. M. Roustan urged, above all, the employment of an energetic commander, unhampered by daily instructions from Paris." The correspondent says that forty-eight French soldiers perished at Gabes, in three days, of ague. General Farre, he says, certainly acted without consulting his colleagues in the Cabinet or President Grevy in the matter of the circular regarding the strength of the battalions to be sent to Africa.

A despatch from Tunis to the Daily News says:—It is thought the French will be compelled to occupy Tunis before the march upon Kairwan, as the latent excitement increases in several quarters of the city. The abdication of the Bey is postponed for the present, but it still impends.

Despatches show that Salvatier's column has been constantly attacked since the 10th instant. The Arab loss has been generally heavy.

A despatch from Paris to the Times says:—In consequence of the universal outcry, General Farre has wired all the generals not to enrol more of the 1876 soldiers in the battalions destined for Africa, and to send back to their respective garrisons those who may be on their way to embark.

THE NORTH-WEST HARVEST.

WINNIPEG, Man., September 19.—Mr. Harder, assistant traffic manager C. P. R., has, through station agents along the line and other sources, collected a very valuable series of reports, showing the state of the harvest in the province and the North-West. In southern Manitoba, around Emerson, the crops are far above an average count; 1,300 acres under wheat average 30 bushels to the acre, return 10,000 bushels oats, 5,000 barley, 10,000 tons hay from 10,000 inhabitants. Mennonite settlements report a large acreage under cultivation, wheat yielding 30 to 40 bushels to the acre. They have harvested of wheat 76,000 bushels, oats, barley and corn 43,500 bushels; potatoes, 105 bushels; flax seed, 1,575 bushels; hay, 15,000 tons. Nearly 11,000 acres were cultivated in central Manitoba and east, although the crops, in many instances prolific, hold over an average, but south of Lake Manitoba the crops suffered from overflow of the lake, but this is purely local. West, near Portage la Prairie, and south as well in the far west, around Bertle, the harvest is very prolific, 48,000 square acres in the vicinity of Portage la Portage are cultivated; a portion, 18,818 acres, gave 12,055 acres of wheat averaging 25 bushels to the acre; oats, 5,858 acres, averaged 55 bushels; barley, 399 acres, average, 30; potatoes, 265 acres, average 300; hay, 255 tons. Crops in places average 40 bushels per acre. Prince Albert is doing well in farming, 20,000 acres under crop; 10,000 wheat, 5,000 oats, 5,000 barley; yield per acre—wheat 30 bushels, oats 50 bushels, barley 46 bushels. Large quantity of hay saved. About 2,000 settlers here, are making handsome profits by selling wheat at $1.50 per bushel, oats at 75c and barley 50c per bushel. The settlement is on the North Saskatchewan, 500 miles north-west of Winnipeg. The harvest altogether is the most prolific ever garnered in the North-West.

IRISH AFFAIRS.

The "Times" on the Situation—Mr. Parnell's Policy.

LONDON, Sept. 19.—The Times, in an editorial article this morning, says:—"It would be well if the numbers of imprisoned "suspects" were increased by some Irish-Americans who, not out of patriotism, but of spite against everything English, have been at no pains to conceal their advocacy of armed insurrection. If there is a semi-military police, if there are soldiers and Coercion Acts in Ireland, the English people deplore such means of government. But it is the attitude of a section of the Irish people themselves under unscrupulous leaders which has rendered these things necessary." The Times also says:—"It must be confessed that the present, when there are weekly accounts of murders and murderous assaults, is not the time to call for the release of all the 'suspects.' No Government, however mercifully inclined, could afford to appear frightened into clemency. The League sets no example of moderation. Exceptional cases may deserve the consideration of the Government; but there is too much reason to fear that most of the imprisoned men would resume their criminal courses."

BOSTON, September 20.—General P. A. Collins, President of the Land League of America, received to-day a cable despatch from Mr. Parnell summing up the result of the Convention. He further says:—"The Executive of the League is empowered to select test cases, in order that tenants in surrounding districts may realize for themselves, by the result of the cases decided, the hollowness of the Act. The laborers' organization is merged in that of the tenants, who, with the artisans and traders, are banded together in one solid organization, and will now move forward for the freedom of the Irish, the development, of Irish industries and for Irish legislative independence. The direction of the movement here will probably claim my instant attention and my presence in Ireland for many months hence, rendering a visit to America unlike. T. P. O'Connor and Dr. Dillon Eagan will sail for Boston early in October, and will represent my views and those of the Irish organization fully."

CITY ITEMS.

—Hurdle races on the Exhibition grounds, Friday afternoon, commencing at 3. Prizes will be given for heavy-weights, light-weights and farmers' horses, over hurdles. Flat races for ponies and donkeys, to be followed by a goodly parade of all classes of horses round the course. Full particulars will be published in Thursday's STAR.

—The Canadian Illustrated News, which appears this morning, will contain a full account of the late President, accompanied by a portrait. As the intelligence only reached us yesterday morning, and the News was printed in the afternoon, our readers will be able to appreciate the journalistic enterprise of our contemporary. The same number will also contain a page of sketches taken on Saturday at the Exhibition, the rapid production of which would, in itself, be a remarkable feat, were it not that the issue of the President's portrait, specially prepared for this number, shows that the News can do even better. Of course, the Exhibition will be the main attraction of the number, and a large double page bird's-eye view of the grounds is provided us, which will be useful to intending visitors during the week.

Personal.

Judge Bosse is lying very low at his residence in Quebec. He is not expected to live through the week.

River Notes.

There are fifteen steamships and twenty-one sailing ocean going vessels at present in port.

The crews of the Ross-London line of steamships have lately been rigged out in "man-o-war" suits.

A great deal of the crockery and glassware in the pantrys of the vessels in port was broken by the shock of the torpedo explosions on Saturday.

The Two Premiers.

The Right Hon. Sir John A. Macdonald, K. C. B., arrived last evening at 9.20 by the Q., M., O. & O. Railway from Ottawa. He was met at the station by Messrs. M. H. Gault, M.P., M. P. Ryan, M.P., J. J. Curran, J.C., and a number of leading citizens. The right hon. gentleman was driven direct to the residence of Mr. Gault, M.P., where he will remain as a guest during his stay in the city. Sir John will visit the Exhibition grounds [illegible] Hon. Mr Chapleau and in the evening the two premiers will attend a reception of the Junior Conservative Club to be held in the parlors of the St. Lawrence Hall. During St. John's visit to the Exhibition grounds an address will be presented to him felicitating him on his renewed health, &c., and strictly of a non-political nature.

THE TORCHLIGHT PROCESSION.

A Brilliant Display—The Streets Thronged with Spectators.

The Citizens' Committee scored another brilliant success in the firemen's torchlight procession, held under its auspices last evening. Punctually at eight o'clock the line of procession was formed on the Champ de Mars, and a rocket sent up from the head of the line was a signal for its advance. The salvage waggon in which was seated Ald. Hood, Chairman of the Fire Committee, headed the procession, and had a large locomotive headlight lashed in front of it. Following it was the Band of the Sixth Fusiliers, and the Centre Division of the City Brigade, and behind these were the Eastern division of the Fire Brigade and the Brigades of Cote St. Louis and St. Jean Baptiste Village. The Western division of the City Brigade and the St. Henri and St. Cunegonde Brigades brought up the rear. The St. Henri Band and L'Harmonie, Montreal, took part in the procession. The route taken by the procession, which was rather more than a mile long, was via Gosford and Notre Dame streets, Place d'Armes Square, St. James, Radegonde, St. Antoine, Windsor, Dorchester, Mountain, Sherbrooke, St. Denis and Craig streets to Victoria Square, where the procession broke up. The sight presented by the procession was brilliant in the extreme and was greatly admired by the throngs of people who were crowded into the streets along the route. Four or five parafine torches were carried by each of the vehicles in the procession, and the light reflecting on the burnished metal work of the engines and reels and on the brass helmets of the city brigade, along with the constant glare from the rockets and Roman candles, which were put up from every part of the procession, made a sight which, for brilliancy, could hardly have been surpassed. The streets, while the procession was passing, were lit up as bright as day. The appearance of the Brigade was highly creditable, and the men are deserving of praise for the pains they took in insuring a success. Too much credit cannot be given to our worthy City Father Alderman Hood, who alone organized and so successfully carried out this brilliant quota of our Exhibition programme. Anything the representative of St. Antoine ward takes in hand he does thoroughly, and last evening's Exhibition was no exception to the rule.

Amusements.

THE CARRENO-DONALDI CONCERT.—This concert at the Queen's Hall last night was not merely successful, it was an ovation. The hall was well filled, and every piece on the beautiful programme was received with the greatest delight. There was some little delay in the opening, which was filled up by Dr. Davies who in the kindest manner treated the audience to a Voluntary on the great organ, and was received with universal satisfaction. Immediately at its close, Mme. Carreno, with a quick, natural, almost girlish awe, advanced to the front of the stage and was for some moments obliged to repeat her acknowledgements to the exceedingly hearty greeting of the large audience. We need not say that the beautiful "Chopin Ballock" was divinely rendered. Sig. Ferranti in "Cavatini," was received with caution, as though they felt he must prove his title to their approbation, but he was not long in securing this for his irresistible drollery soon convinced them that he had lost none of his former comic power. He was heartily applauded. This put the audience in good humor, and the prima donna of the evening, Mme. Donaldi, was received with the same hearty demonstration which greeted the other artists, and she sang "L'Ardita" with great power and effect. Mme. Donaldi has a fine soprino voice, which completely filled the great hall. Each of the other pieces were rendered with genuine spirit, and to the entire appreciation of the very critical audience. The concluding piece was Lisst Fantaisie on Rigoletto by Madame Carreno, which fairly captivated the audience and was played with amazing power and brilliancy. The artists were called and recalled several times during the performance. The accompaniment was not good being generally too loud, and often uncertain, and there was some mismanagement in not providing sufficient programmes, about half the audience being left without any. This evening Mme. Carreno, Donaldi and Sig. Ferranti appear in the Mechanics' Hall, when we have no doubt they will have a crowded house to hear them. We should have mentioned that the piano used by Carreno was the magnificent Weber Grand purchased by Sir Hugh Allan for the use of the Hall.

ALBERT HALL.—A good audience assembled last night to see the second appearance of Corinne in "The Mascot" at the Albert Hall. The music was charming, the dancing good, and the acting much above the average. To all those who wish to enjoy themselves we recommend Corinne.

CITY ITEMS.

—Bicycle races this afternoon on Montreal Lacrosse Grounds.

—Queen's Beach term opens on Saturday. The room is being fitted up.

—The C. P. R. Company had a horse die from exhaustion on Monday night on Craig street.

—While the torchlight procession was in progress last night, the gas lights in the city were put out.

—For the past six weeks there have been no scavengers seen on Maisonneuve street, between Logan and Ontario.

—The Montreal Abattoir Company's Works may be visited by the public to-morrow, between the hours of 9 a.m., and 5 p.m. The Abattoir is near McDonald's Tobacco Factory, and is reached by way of Ontario and Frontenac streets.

—A little after ten o'clock last night, ward was sent to No. 2 fire station that one of the poplar trees on the Champ de Mars was on fire, probably caused from the fireworks. It was put out in a few seconds by a stream from a hydrant close by.

Police News.

Francis Rafferty, for cruelty to his horse, was arrested.

Raphael Bell, for keeping a billiard table without a license, was fined $50 and costs or 3 months.

The case of Pamela Garceau, for selling liquor without a license, was adjourned until Thursday.

Josephine Fox, wife of James Lowe, was arrested yesterday morning for threatening to shoot her husband.

Moise Daigneault, for selling liquor without a license, was fined $75 and costs or three months; on a further charge for unlawfully keeping intoxicants he was fined $20 and costs.

Personal.

Mr. Wayne Griswold, late of Montreal, was recently the recipient of a very handsome testimonial from a number of the great Railway Presidents of the United States. A little over a year ago Mr. Griswold embarked in the railway iron trade and has been eminently successful, having already amassed a fortune of nearly a quarter million of dollars. His sales in one month approached ten millions of dollars, being the largest by any house in the trade. Mr. Griswold has an establishment in London and one in New York.

THE DEAD PRESIDENT.

Dr. Agnew Never Had Hopes of His Recovery—Extra Session of Congress in October—Universal Sympathy.

LONG BRANCH, Sept. 21.—Dr. Agnew is reported as saying: "When I first opened the wound of the President I felt Garfield had received his death blow, and I have never had any hopes of his recovery. At the same time it was my duty, as well as that of my associates, to fight for his life, trusting to the resources of science, the assistance of nature and the interposition of Providence in the affairs of men to rescue him from his fate. I have never seen a more patient sufferer. His mind continued clear and logical." Dr. Agnew stated that on Monday the President remarked: "If the good points of my troubles and the bad points were placed together in parallel lines, I am afraid the line of bad would far exceed either."

NEW YORK, September 21.—There was a very heavy demand yesterday for mourning goods. There is a considerable advance in prices.

WASHINGTON, September 21.—It is reported it is the opinion of prominent officials that an extra session will be convened in October.

On September 19th, 1863, Garfield was made Major-General for gallantry at the battle of Chickamarga. It is recalled that he frequently said he thought he would die on the anniversary of his promotion.

LONDON, Sept. 21.—At a meeting of the City of London merchants and others, the death of Garfield was feelingly alluded to.

ROME, Sept. 21.—The Grand Master of the Italian Freemasons has referred touchingly to Garfield's death.

PARIS, Sept. 21.—In consequence of the death of Garfield, M. Cachery, Minister of Posts and Telegraphs, has postponed his official reception.

LONDON, September 21.—Every hour increases the evidence that the present is the most remarkable demonstration of sympathy ever witnessed in Europe. The bells of the parish churches in various places in England are tolled, which is an unprecedented tribute to a foreign ruler. The municipal bodies of Leeds, Hartlepool, Falmouth and other places passed resolutions of condolence. A mourning flag was hoisted on Manchester Capital.

MADRID, September 21.—The sad intelligence from America caused a profound sensation yesterday at the opening of the Cortes and in Imperial diplomatic circles. Leading officials called at the American legation and the King sent a message to Mrs. Garfield.

THE EXHIBITION.

The Eighth Day.—Reception of Sir John A. Macdonald.

This, the eighth day of the Exhibition, has been in every respect a success. The weather has been very fine and the crowd of visitors not noticeably smaller than that of yesterday. Several distinguished parties have been on the grounds to-day, among them being Lieut.-Gov. Robitaille, Hon. Messrs. Ross, Caron, Paquette, Lynch, and some English visitors. The visit of Sir John A. Macdonald attracted a large number near the judge's stand in the afternoon about three. He arrived, accompanied by Sir A. T. Galt, Messrs. M. H. Galt and A. W. Ogilvie. He was received by Mr. H. Bulmer, on behalf of the Permanent Exhibition Committee, being presented with a very flattering address.

Sir John, in replying, expressed himself as pleased with the welcome accorded him and was gratified that politics had no place in the address. He was pleased that the successful season which was in prospect when he left the country had indeed come, and he thought no one would feel inclined to blame the present Administration for it.

Sir John was speaking when our reporter left.

LADIES' DRESS.

The exhibit of ladies' dress is one of the most successful features of the Exhibition and will go far to convince our fair American cousins that they do not enjoy a monopoly of good taste and artistic skill in the pomps and vanities of this wicked world. It is really matter for congratulation that Canada can display such wealth of design, and perfection of execution in feminine costume, for after all, dress is no mean criterion of the social condition of a people. Some genius has gone so far as to recognize in that abomination, the plug hat, one of the greatest safeguards of society, on the ground that its restraining influence prevents the wearer from such extravagant follies as standing upon his head and so on. Without going that far, it may be granted that dress has its influence for good or evil, besides being to some extent an expression of character. It is to be regretted that the dress exhibit is so limited.

Messrs. Ligget & Hamilton of Montreal show some ladies' dresses which are a constant centre of attraction to the fair sex, and fill the breast of the careful paterfamilias with nervous anxiety. The most conspicuous object is a straw colored silk dress, trimmed with pale blue and a spray of roses. Around the train is a treble box pleat above a single box pleated flounce. It has a basque, with short sleeves, and the skirt is trimmed in front with chenille and lace. The dress has a profusion of kilted pleatings in front, with lace flounces. There is also a very rich dress for a child of eleven years of cardinal and straw colors, with very fine pleatings over wider pleatings, and a very finely pleated flounce round the bottom of the dress, edged with lace. One of the most tasty articles shown by this firm is a very handsome black silk and brocaded skirt, with brocaded basque and scarlet lining, trimmed with deep fringe. The bonnets also merit much commendation.

Messrs. Boisseau Brothers have a very elegant exhibit, including a case of ostrich feathers, remarkable for the richness and good taste in the blending of color. The same creditable feature characterises the bonnets exhibited by this firm. The shades of color are numerous, rich and rare, sage green prevailing, but all most artistically blended. One of the nicest is a shaded green bonnet with three very pretty feathers of the same color edged with pink, and with steel buckles. A very conspicuous bonnet is one of dark blue satin with steel buckles and a yellow flower.

Miss Marie Paradis exhibits an infant's dress, very prettily designed, embroidered with silk and scolloped around the edge.

Madame Bussier displays some remarkably pretty crochet bonnets "made by idea," and well deserves the first prize, which she obtained, for a "tidy" of colored needle work, on crochet work, also "made by idea." Perhaps the best bonnet in this collection is one of pale straw color, with trimmings in all shades of red silk.

Madame Naud exhibits an infant's evening robe of great beauty. It is of all shades of red, the hood lined with red silk, edged with floss and a silk tassel. There are also some very nice velvet caps for children, embroidered with gold and with gold tassels.

Mr. C. J. Grenier, of Montreal, has a good show of corsets.

Miss Emily Louisa Clendinning exhibits a magnificent velvet table cover with seal edging and raised flowers. The selection of flowers is very judicious.

Mrs. J. A. Cote shows a handsome satin quilted skirt with two pleated flounces, shaded red. The pattern represents our national emblems, rose, thistle, shamrock and maple leaf.

Messrs. Letendre, Arsenault & Cie. have a very tasty collection of bonnets.

THE HORTICULTURE EXHIBITION.

The Finest Display ever Made—The number of Entries—Special Features—An Unfortunate Occurrence—Amateurs to the Fore.

The Horticultural Exhibition of Montreal opened yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, under the most favorable auspices. It is altogether within the bounds of truth to say that there has never been anything to equal it in the annals of our flower shows. The Victoria Rink presents a most brilliant appearance, looking like an immense conservatory, with this advantage, that a large collection of fruit adds to its attractions. The general aspect is that of freshness and ripeness, and all the internal arrangements of the Victoria Rink are perfect. The preparations were all so well made that every plant and fruit plate was in its order at the hour of opening, and this day at noon, the judges having finished their awards, cards were attached to the exhibits of each winner, thus enhancing the interest of the whole. A string band performs in the afternoon, and L'Harmonie in the afternoon, and to-night the Lieut.-Governor of the Province will be present. Among the special features, attention is called to a superb table of plants prepared by Mr. Bain who also exhibits six varieties of seedling coleus of his own raising. Nothing finer has ever been seen in Montreal. Mr. Vandry, of St. Hyacinthe, also exhibits number of new varieties of coleus. Among the novelties received only this forenoon, were varieties of the Vermont grape and the Vergennes grape, a new seedling from the Catawba. The attention of growers is called to these. The fruit is from the vineries of Mr. W. E. Greene, Vergennes. S. Anderson, of the Cayuga Lake Nursery, N.Y., contributes no less than 74 varieties of grapes and 30 varieties of pears. Dr. Hoskins, of Newport, Vt., so well known in this city personally and as a fruit grower, and Mr. Webster, of Roxbury, show a splendid collection of new apples. Another new thing is the elephant potato, furnished by Mr. J. C. Chapais, of St. Michel, P. Q., a monster tuber, producing 27½ lbs. from 28. Notice should also be taken of an improved sliding frame, for the better display of cut blooms, suggested and carried out by the Secretary, Mr. H. S. Evans. In viewing this splendid spread of cut flowers, the most favorable comment was made that our Quebec friends have again come forward to assist us therein, Messrs. Bell, of that city, showing an unexampled set of dahlias. The Central floral stand is a pyramid of rare flowers, the work of Messrs. Alex. Duff and Dwight. Some of the plants from private conservatories are of rare value, such as the Enthurium Schwartziana, worth $40, Bonapartia Juncia, the Zebra plant, Euphubia Splendens yielding a milky fluid to the pinch, Eucharis Amanizonica, or lily of the Amazon, Eucalpus Tricolor, Latania Bourbonica. All these are from the gardens of Mr. Andrew Allan. From those of Mr. J. Molson we have Rhododendron Balfouria and Cycus Rovoluta, and from Mr. W. Lunn forty varieties of Caladium. A most gratifying feature, denoting the beneficial influence of our Horticultural Society, is the great improvement made by amateurs in the cultivation of plants. Even second-class amateurs have specimens on show that would do no discredit to experienced gardeners. Especially is this the case with a fernery contributed by J. B. Goode. While every department of the Exhibition is worthy of the praise which has here been given it, it is only right to say that the hot-house, and especially the out-door grapes are simply wonderful. An English gentleman made the remark that the grapes he had seen at Toronto and at Mile-End were equal to those of England, but the grapes at the Rink were superior and he has made arrangements to purchase vines.

Amusements.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—The play "One Hundred Years Ago" is creating great interest throughout the city. The tickets are being rapidly taken and up every thing promises a gratifying success. The Company are engaged to play during the whole week of the Yorktown festivities, at Yorktown itself.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC.—Lotta is captivating packed audiences at this house nightly. On Monday, long before the hour for the curtain to rise, the notice "standing room only" was posted in the lobby of the house, and many people had to be refused seats. The play was the ever popular "Musette," in which Lotta is so successful. Piquant, sparkling and deliciously saucy, Lotta is beyond doubt the most universally popular little lady who honors Montreal with her presence. In "Musette" her antics with Billy Bokus, Mr. Bradshaw, were perfectly irresistible, and she and Billy were called back a half dozen times or more to repeat their delightful snatches from the "Golden Slippers" and other negro melodies. Lotta and Billy are a sufficient attraction to draw crowded houses of themselves. To-night the bill will be "Zip," and to-morrow "The Little Detective." Lotta's visits to Montreal are too infrequent, but the demands for her in all quarters are very numerous. Those who wish to enjoy a very pleasant evening should not miss seeing her to-night.

BURNING OF A SHIP AT SEA.—LONDON, September 21.—The British ship "Borrowdale," Captain McAllister, from San Francisco June 5th for Liverpool, has passed Queenstown with Captain Peabody and part of the crew of the American ship "R. B. Fuller" on board. The latter vessel was abandoned when on fire. All hands were saved. The "R. B. Fuller" was from Cardiff July 30th, bound to Valparaiso.

THE ENGLISH COTTON TROUBLES.—LONDON, Sept. 21.—In response to the circulars sent to the cotton manufacturers of Blackburn and thirteen other places, the Secretary of the Masters' Association has received information from seventy manufacturers in regard to stopping their looms three days weekly for a month. Forty-two are willing to co-operate in the movement and twenty-eight have declined.

THE ARCTIC SEARCH.—ST. LAWRENCE BAY, August 18.—The Arctic search steamer "Rodgers" arrived to-day. The Captain of a whaler states that the Esquimaux at Point Barrow say they saw four white men going toward Mackenzie River this Spring and found where they made snow huts to live during the Winter. They saw dead men in the huts and also saw the tracks of a sledge with dogs and foot prints. The men are supposed to be the survivors of "Jeanette." It is thought, however, the men were from the missing whalers. The "Rodgers" and Russian frigate start to-morrow for the Arctic to investigate the rumors.

ANOTHER CONNECTION MADE PERMANENT BETWEEN THE PROVINCES OF ONTARIO AND QUEBEC.—CARILLON, September 21.—This morning at eleven o'clock the Keystone crib of the cofferdam was successfully lowered into place, thereby securing the completion of the dam this season. All doubts as to the practicability of Mr. Merrill's plans are now at an end.

FROM QUEBEC.

[SPECIAL DESPATCH TO THE STAR.]

CATTLE DISEASE.—QUEBEC, September 21.—A new kind of cattle disease, said to resemble congestion of the bowels, has carried off in a few days five milch cows and two horses belonging to Mr. Jos. Bussieres, milkman, of this city.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT.—A workman named Ouimet, in the mill of Paradis & Co., at Levis, has had his arm cut off below the shoulder, and grave apprehensions are felt for his recovery.

THE NEWSPAPER WAR.

What the Toronto "Evening Telegram" has to Say in the Matter.

[SPECIAL DESPATCH TO THE STAR.]

TORONTO, September 21.—The Evening Telegram of this afternoon has the following editorial:—"Advertisers will be interested in knowing whether the claim put forward by the Mail in regard to its circulation is based on fact or fiction. The Montreal STAR has issued a challenge which should be the means of determining the question at issue, THE STAR claiming to have a larger circulation than the Mail. The answer made by the Mail is given in a very bombastic tone, and five thousand dollars is named as the price which the Mail says it is prepared to hand over to certain charitable institutions if it does not prove its claim; but it has twisted its claim into such a strange form that it is hard to recognize it. Instead of standing by its boast that it has the largest circulation of any daily or weekly paper published in Canada, it says it has the largest Canadian circulation. * * * It wants to lop off all the papers which THE STAR circulates outside of Canada, and then put the two circulations side by side. More than this, it stipulates that the subscribers must be annual subscribers, and that they must have paid in advance, as if it made a shadow of difference to the advertising public whether the subscribers paid by the year or the month, paid at the beginning or at the end of the year. The truth is that the Mail has been caught fibbing about its circulation, and takes this means of sneaking out of the difficulty, covering its retreat by a great flourish of trumpets, and waving a cheque for $5,000. The victory is already with THE STAR, which publishes its circulation in every issue, something that the Mail has not yet had courage to do. It has not only made the Mail take backwater, but it has forced the acknowledgment from it that its circulation is confined to the Dominion, and that outside of the Dominion it is very little known. Having got advertisements from the public on the false pretence that it had the largest circulation of any journal published in Canada, the Mail had better refund the money to those whom it has deceived.

THE DEAD PRESIDENT.

A Last Look at the Dead.—Transporting the Remains.—The Funeral Train.—President Arthur and the Cabinet.

ELBERON, September 22.—8.45 a.m.—President Arthur has concluded to go to Cleveland with the funeral party. The arrangements are all completed. Notice was given that those desiring may view the remains of the late Chief Magistrate. A line was formed and people are passing in single file through the cottage. Two sentinels are stationed at each side of the entrance, to prevent more than one person entering at a time. The casket is very unpretentious, being covered with rich black cloth and with the exception of having silver mountings is perfectly plain. The only decoration is a large "V" shaped sago palm, which extends from the foot of the casket upwards. The appearance of the late President is so changed that persons familiar with his natural countenance would scarcely recognize him.

THE FUNERAL TRAIN.

9.30 a.m.—The engine and coaches are in readiness to start. The entire train is heavily draped in mourning and presents a decidedly solemn appearance. The line formed at 8.45 from Elberon Hotel to Franklyn Cottage, has been diminished somewhat, but crowds of new arrivals surge into the surrounding grounds every moment. Ocean avenue, for two blocks in either direction, is blocked with vehicles. The occasion is one of extreme solemnity. No disorder prevails. There is a large gathering composed of all classes, who are very quiet and apprecative of the occasion. The President himself, from all that can be learned from the attendants, never had any illusion as to his fate. It is said Dr. Agnew has been the governing mind in Garfield's case since he came into it.

THE COFFIN.

The following will be the inscription on the coffin plate:—"James Abram Garfield, born November 19th, 1831; died President of the United States, September 19th, 1881."

ARTHUR AND THE CABINET.

It is stated that no word of business or of a political nature passed between President Arthur and the members of the Cabinet yesterday. Informally, President Arthur said he expected their aid and co-operation toward bearing the heavy burden that had fallen upon him. After the funeral is over the Cabinet Ministers all intend informally to tender their resignations. There was a very affecting scene between Mrs. Garfield and President Arthur when the latter called at the cottage with the members of the Cabinet.

EN ROUTE.

The funeral train passed Elberon station about 10.12. President Arthur and General Grant boarded the train at this point.

GARFIELD LEAVES NO WILL.

WASHINGTON, September 21.—It is stated that President Garfield has left no will, and that during his sickness he said he did not wish to make one, that he was willing to trust to the courts of the country to make an equitable division of his property among the members of his family. The value of his property is about $25,000, including his house in this city, which is mortgaged.

LIFE INSURANCE.

The Washington agent of the Equitable Life Insurance Company said this morning that President Garfield had twenty-five thousand dollars insurance on his life in that company, and that he also had policies in other companies.

THE RELIGIOUS SERVICES.

LONG BRANCH, September 21.—At half-past nine Chief Justice Waite, the members of the Cabinet and their wives arrived at Francklyn Cottage. The doors were closed to visitors. Religious services were conducted at the request of Mrs. Garfield by Rev. Chas. Young, of Long Branch. There were 50 persons present, including the family and attendants, members of the Cabinet and their wives, and a few personal friends. When the moment for the solemnities was announced the windows and doors were closed, and all sounds were hushed. Owing to the necessity of starting the train promptly the services were limited to five minutes.

THE FUNERAL JOURNEY.

Immediately after the services at the Cottage, Mrs. Garfield, accompanied by her son Harry, General Swain, Col. and Mrs. Rockwell, Mollie Garfield, Dr. Boynton and C. O. Rockwell, entered the first coach. The members of the Cabinet and their wives followed and took seats in the second coach. Mrs. Garfield was heavily veiled, and in passing to the train exhibited the same fortitude which has characterized her manner throughout. Besides the members of the family on the train were Private Secretary Brown, Warren Young, John R. Van Warner, Chief Clerk of the Post-Office Department, and others. A few moments before ten the casket was removed from the cottage by six strong men, and passing through a guard of soldiers formed in parellel lines was placed in the coach. The attendants and others who accompanied the party, took seats in the fourth car. The train left exactly at 10 o'clock and reached Elberon about 10.08. At this point Arthur and Grant boarded the train.

WEST PHILADELPHIA, September 21.—Funeral train passed at 12.44 p.m.

WILMINGTON, Del., September 21.—Funeral train arrived at 1.36. There were immense crowds at all the stations. Men take off their hats and women bow their heads.

GUITEAU.

WASHINGTON, September 21.—Guiteau is somewhat restless, but alternately reads and writes. He is thought to be writing his reflections on the shooting and the President's death. It is generally thought by those who examined the statutes that Guiteau cannot be convicted of murder under the district laws. Col. Corkhill is now said to entertain that opinion.

NEW YORK, September 21.—The Garfield fund is now $211,000.

LONDON, September 21.—The Times has eleven columns of news relative to the death of Garfield, with a mourning border. A crowded meeting was held at the London Good Templars Lodge last night. The death of Garfield was specially alluded to. Bishop Hood (colored) eulogized the late President.

Montreal's Sympathy.

At an adjourned meeting to-day at the U. S. Consul's office, the following resolutions were reported by the committee appointed yesterday:

"We citizens of Montreal, once resident in the United States, called together by a common grief, hereby resolve—

"That the sad death of President Garfield has filled us with personal sorrow not less real and keen because of separation from our native land.

"That we record our deepest and most indignant abhorrence of the cowardly deed by which the President has fallen, and our most earnest protest against the spirit of violence which can encourage or promote such murderous attacks.

"That we regard with greatest admiration the character of the late President, so beautiful in private and domestic worth, so eminent for public services and spirit, and so distinguished by mental strength and culture.

"That we look with pride upon his whole self-made career, and see in it the worthy type and product of institutions which offered to the poorest boy his country's highest place and gift.

"That the heroic fortitude with which he bore protracted suffering has shown the noble charity and courage he possessed, and has secured for him the love and esteem of all mankind.

"That the bright example he has given, in both health and sickness, of trust in God and submission to the Divine Will, is a most grateful consolation in our affliction.

"That we hope and believe his martyred death will powerfully aid the cause of political reform, for which his voice had eloquently pleaded and to which his life was pledged.

"That the general grief so plainly manifested by this city and community is deeply appreciated by us as his countrymen and friends.

"That arrangements be made for appropriate memorial services on the day of his burial, in which all our fellow citizens shall be cordially invited to unite."

"That copies of these resolutions, with the most respectful and heart-felt sympathy, be sent through the Consul-General to the Department of State, and to Mrs. Garfield."

The meeting then adjourned after appointing committees to take charge of the memorial meeting and also one to respond on the part of American citizens to the movement for a public meeting, which it is understood the authorities intend to call.

The following letter explains itself:—

September 21st, 1881.

His Worship the Mayor of Montreal:

SIR,—I am requested by the President of this Board (i. e., of Trade and Exchange), on behalf of its Council, to request that you call a public meeting at such early date as you may deem fitting, for the purpose of affording an opportunity to the citizens for expressing their deep sympathy with the people and Government of the United States in their sore bereavement by the death of their late President, James A. Garfield. Your compliance at very earliest convenience will oblige, sir, yours obediently,

WM. J. PATTERSON,
Secretary.

The following telegraphic despatches have passed between the Commissioner of Customs, Ottawa, and the Collector of Customs, Montreal:—

SEPTEMBER 20th, 1881.

To Collector of Customs, Montreal:

You will hoist flag at half-mast from sunrise to sunset each day until after the funeral of late President of United States.

(Signed), J. JOHNSON.

MONTREAL, September 21, 1881.

To J. Johnson, Esq., Commissioner of Customs, Ottawa:

Had anticipated wish of Government. Flag on Custom House at half-mast as mark of respect to memory of late President United States and sympathy with the sorrowing people since the sad news reached me.

(Signed) W. B. SIMPSON, Collector.

His Worship the Mayor has called a public meeting for three o'clock to-morrow afternoon in the Mechanics' Hall to pass resolutions expressing sympathy with the American people and the family of the late President in their bereavement.

Mr. Stonegrave, Canadian Passenger Agent of the Central Vermont Railway, early yesterday draped the front of the Company's office, on St. James street, in black and white festoons of cloth, while in the window, upon a background of black velvet, is an excellent portrait of the dead President enclosed in a wreath of white flowers and surmounted by a lithograph copy of the President's letter to his mother, of August 11th, the last one he wrote. The emblems of mourning are pleasing and appropriate.

The United States Department of Agriculture reports that the average condition of potatoes on September 1st was 70, showing a decrease of 22 yer cent. since August 1st. The condition last September was 90. The general average of New York, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Wisconsin and Iowa, which produce three-fifths of the crop of the country, is 68, or within 2 per cent. of the average of the whole country.

A large number of lumbermen attended the sale of timber limits yesterday afternoon, at Ottawa. Bidding was brisk, and over $200,000 was realized from the McDougall and Fraser limits.

Wholesale Provision Market.

No change of importance has transpired since last report. The city jobbing trade is fairly active, but the shipping business is quiet and steady. At Ingersoll, yesterday, twenty factories registered 7,375 boxes, all August make; no sales; 12½c offered and refused, holding for 12¾c and 13c for August. September and balance of season is not offered. A late report of the New York butter market:—"Export grades, so far as made public, have remained very quiet, but there is some attention being given to stock on the chances of finding better terms, and it is possible that business may result. Some of the principal holders assert that they have not as yet made up their minds to modify the asking figures, and will wait a while before doing so, but admit that no bids can be obtained anywhere near their present limit of valuation." Butter—Wholesale prices—Creamery, late made per lb, 24c to 25c; Townships, good to choice, per lb, 21c to 22½c; Morrisburg and district per lb, 20c to 21½c; Western dairy, per lb. 18c to 19½c. The Montreal Horse Market.

There has existed a fair demand for horse flesh, but business resulting was not large, prices being high and offerings of serviceable animals not numerous by any means. Among horses purchased for export were several fine carriage and saddle steeds. One of these brought $900; and others, $350, $300, $215 and $200 each. At the Exhibition several auction sales were commenced, results of which will be given later. Finance and Commerce.

The money market continues to rule dull. Call loans on stocks were secured at 4 to 5 per cent. and time loans at about six per cent. Sterling Exchange was quoted at 8¼ prem. for round amounts, 8½ counter and 9 demand. Documentary 7¾ to 8. Drafts on New York were drawn at 3-16 to ¼ prem.

The stock market this morning was weaker, particularly for Ontario, Richelieu and City Passenger which respectively declined 3, 2½ and 2 per cent. Other weak stocks were Montreal, which fell 1, and Merchants which dropped ½ per cent. Montreal Telegraph and Gas were steady.

The Montreal Gas Company have declared a semi-annual dividend of 5 per cent.

There was no afternoon session of the Stock Exchange.

The Mechanic's Hall should be crowded this evening to hear the three great artists, Carreno, Donaldi and Ferranti. In their several departments each is prominent. A small Weber Baby Grand will be used by Carreno on the occasion.

All the Weber Concert Grands being sold or otherwise engaged, Mme. Carreno has consented to perform her part of the programme at the Mechanics' Hall this evening on a little "Baby Grand," similar to those used in the drawing-rooms of several of our leading citizens. Those who are fortunate enough to own one of these charming instruments, which have been carried to such a state of perfection by Weber, are specially invited to witness its action under the trying ordeal of Carreno's playing, which is about the severest test a piano can be put to.

MINNIGREY!

BY

J. FREDERICK SMITH,

Author of "The Jesuit," "Amy Lawrence," &c.

This story was commenced in THE STAR under the title of

and the original title of "Minnigrey" has been restored, as the author was suffering injustice by the change.

"But I can love you," said Gus, gently kissing her flushed cheek; "love you with a brother's love—pray for you, and bless you, Agnes: for you have proved yourself a true, generous-hearted girl—true to the natural feelings of your sex, its gentleness and mercy."

Agnes disengaged herself firmly, but reluctantly from his embrace; her heart swelled with emotion, but did not once waver from its generous purpose.

"Come," she said; "all is prepared for flight. At least, in my wretchedness, I shall have the satisfaction of knowing that I have saved you: and that thought shall cheer my solitary existence."

"Not solitary, Agnes," replied the young man: "you will soon forget the stranger—who, after all, is not worthy of your love—and in another's arms—"

Another's arms!" interrupted the girl, with a passionate flood of tears; "oh never—never! think not because I have been lightly won, that my love was light. Till I knew you I never felt what passion was; no other voice will ever cause my heart to tremble, or bring the blush into my sun-burnt cheek. From this moment," she added, "it is dead, dead to all but memory; a living corpse within a walking tomb!"

Despite the deep and fervent attachment which our hero bore to Minnie, he could not help feeling a tender sentiment of regret at the sorrow of which he had been the involuntary cause. It was something more than a brother's love, and yet it was not passion. His words gradually calmed her emotion: he spoke to her of the future, and she listened to him with calmness—she was soothed but not convinced.

"Come," she said, "let us not waste the time which may be more usefully employed; I will not ask you to forget me, for it will be sweet to me to think that in your distant land, when you are happy in another's love, you sometimes cast a thought on the poor girl who loved and saved you."

With these words she descended the ladder; our hero followed her, and after passing through a narrow passage, which ended in a door masked by an oaken cabinet, in which the monk kept his vestments, found himself in the apartment of her uncle—the porter of Bueno Convento.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

"When the moonbeam rests on the silent earth,
And the stars shine bright, is our hour of mirth;
In some woodland glade we hold our court,
And the revel by night is the gipsies' sport."
ROBIN GOODFELLOW.

Although free from his prison, Gus was still within the caserne; there was the guard to pass, and how that was to be accomplished in his uniform, and at night, he had not the remotest idea; but Agnes, with her woman's love, had foreseen the difficulty, and arranged it.

It was a part of the policy of the illustrious chief who commanded the British arms in the Peninsula, as much as possible to conciliate the clergy—he knew their influence with the people, the power they exercised over the mass: strict orders, therefore, had been given, whenever the troops were quartered in any of the convents, or presbyteries, that every respect should be paid to the inmates, and no interruption permitted in the exercise of their functions. It was no unusual thing, therefore, for the worthy fathers of Bueno Convento to leave the caserne at midnight, to carry consolation or the viaticum to the dying. On such occasions they were preceded by two stout peasants, who resided as laborers in the convent, with lanterns at the end of staves. The approach of the cortege was announced, as in all Catholic countries, by the ringing of a bell; no sooner was the sound heard than the sentinels threw open the gates and presented arms. Those who were strictly Protestant reconciled themselves to the act by saying the honor was rendered to the priest; the catholics—and there were many in the army—paid it to the mysterious element which he carried in a small silver shrine suspended round his neck, but which was hidden from the gaze of the profane by the flowing robes of the bearer.

Agnes had availed herself of the facility thus afforded for the egress of the priests, to arrange for the escape of Gus; pointing to the long vesture and scapulary of her uncle, she bade the young soldier dress himself in them, while she went to summon the two peasants who were to precede him as lantern-bearers. Fortunately the disguise was sufficiently long to hide his uniform, and the cowl to disguise his features.

By the time that Agnes returned with the two attendants, Gus had donned the robes of the absent monk; fortunately for the feelings of both, there were but few moments left for parting; the grateful youth pressed the hand of the sobbing girl, and imprinted a last kiss upon her pale cheek.

"Farewell!" he whispered; "never will your generous conduct be obliterated from my heart—till it ceases to beat it will enshrine your name. I shall breathe it in my prayers, pronounce it in my dreams."

"Away at once!" faltered Agnes; "Our Lady and the blessed saints protect you, and forgive the sacrilege I have been guilty of to serve you!"

No sooner did our hero make his appearance at the door of the lodge than the peasants began their march, the foremost ones ringing the bell. The sentinel on duty fortunately was an Irish Catholic, eager to show his respect for the faith of his fathers; he hastily threw open the gate, and presented arms as the little procession passed. The heart of the fugitive beat heavily, a word, a look, a gesture might have betrayed him, but no—all passed without the least suspicion, the soldier resumed his post after closing the gate, and recommenced his interrupted march up and down the post.

Agnes, who with breathless terror had watched the issue of her enterprise, no sooner saw that it had succeeded than she fell upon her knees, and breathed forth the gratitude of her heart in prayers to those saints who, in her simplicity and superstition, she thought had befriended her. Earnestly she craved pardon for the fancied sin she had committed, and resolved to confess and obtain absolution the very first opportunity.

The motive which had prompted her—the impulse of mercy, womanly affection and pity—had already effaced the sin, if sin there were, more efficiently than human words or priestly offices could effect.

We seldom err when we obey the natural dictates of the heart.

After Gus had left the caserne about half an hour, Agnes, who was anxious to reach San Josef, throwing her mantilla over her head, left the lodge, her faithful guard and companion, the dog Mingo, whom she had confined in the cellar, for fear his barking should betray her presence in the lodge during the day, accompanied her.

Some little demur was made to her leaving the caserne so late at night: more than one soldier offered to accompany her, for it was now nearly daylight, and many were on foot. The gallantry of the military is proverbial, and more than one pretty peasant girl in the commune had to regret having lent the credulous an ear to the love whisperings and promises of heretic strangers.

"At least let me have my choice of a companion," replied the girl with a merry laugh, which found, however, no echo in her heart. "if you are resolved that I should not risk the return to my village alone."

The soldiers declared that the proposition was a fair one; and more than one amorous well-knit fellow stood forward, in the hope of being selected by the dark-eyed peasant, who had long been an object of admiration among the men.

To the astonishment of all she selected a soldier who was crossing the esplanade at a short distance; his comrades called to him, and laughingly informed him of his good fortune. He thought at first that they were jesting. They assured him however, that it was no jest.

Blue Peter, for the favored one was no other than the friend of poor Gus, was about to refuse the unexpected favor, when he caught the eye of Agnes; he recognized her in an instant, and read in the expression of her countenance that it was no idle motive which had induced her to act a part so different from her natural character, and the modesty of her sex.

With a gallant bow he offered her his arm, and, amid the ironical cheers of his comrades, passed the gate with the trembling Agnes. It was some minutes before the poor girl found courage to speak, and Peter was equally silent; his spirits were oppressed by the danger which threatened the life of his friend.

"I fear you judge me harshly," observed the peasant.

"Not in the least; I have not judged you yet; I am surprised, I must confess, that you should be seen leaving the caserne at such an hour; he whom you came to see ought, at least, to have accompanied you, and protected you from insult.

"He whom I came to see left the caserne an hour before me."

"His conduct was not gallant."

"It was prudent."

"Prudent!" repeated Peter, "I do not understand you."

In his ignorance of what had taken place, he judged the conduct of the generous girl as men too often judge the weaker, and, with all their faults the better sex. He imagined that the pretty Agnes had listened to the flattering tale of some young officer, and that her visit had been paid to him.

An Arran correspondent writes that the tenants of the Duke of Hamilton, whose leases now expire, are having their rents raised in some cases most exhorbitantly. An occurrence of a most singular character has taken place in one of the swimming ponds in connection with the Dundee public baths. The water is let off into the river at low tide, and the pond is refilled from a tank on the premises. While the pond was being emptied the other day a lad named Johnston, contrary to the rules of the establishment, sprang in feet foremost to have a bathe. To the consternation of those present he did not return to the surface, and his next appearance was at the door of the baths naked and bleeding. The suction of the water had drawn him through the pipe a distance of between 20ft. and 30ft., and had shot him as if from a catapult, into the River Tay. The pipe is only 12in. in diameter. Johnston says that on leaping into the pond he felt as if some one had seized him firmly by the feet; the next moment all was dark, and he was propelled into daylight and the river.

TRAVEL, ADVENTURE AND NATIONAL CUSTOMS.

A HOT BEAR CHASE.—George Coe, foreman of the Applebee and Fisher lease, was coming down the rugged hill above Knox City, one evening last week, when he saw something in the thicket that closely resembled a dog. He looked more carefully and found it to be a large black bear. This was the last time he looked. Without a moment's hesitation he started down with the fleetness of the wind. He arrived in Knox white with fright and almost breathless with fatigue. After recovering himself somewhat he told H. T. Morian and Joseph Bannister of the terrible discovery made by him. These gentlemen each procured a trusty shot-gun, which they loaded with five drachms of powder, and twelve buckshot. Three ferocious dogs were also secured, and the hunting party went forth to do and dare. Arriving at the point where bold bruin had been seen by Coe, the dogs caught the scent, and in a very short time came upon the bear. A fierce fight followed between the dogs and bear, during which active engagement bruin sustained but little injury, while one of the dogs had a piece of flesh torn from his hip, and the hide on both flanks lacerated in a hideous manner by blows from the shaggy brute. Bannister got within forty feet of the bear, and taking a careful aim fired. The bear uttered a groan of pain and fled at a lively gait down the rugged mountain side which is thickly covered with underbush. The men and dogs started in pursuit, but were unable to make anything like the speed attained by the bear. They could easily track the animal by drops of blood which stained the brush where he passed along. They continued the search until darkness overtook them, and then were compelled to abandon the trial. Early the following morning they resumed the hunt. The place where the bear had lain during a part of the night was discovered. The leaves and ground were covered with bruin's blood, but the bear could not be found. While the dogs were engaging the animal the preceding evening the men had full view of bruin. He was a monstrous big black bear, weighing, perhaps four hundred or more pounds.

THE HUCKLEBERRY PICKER'S ADVENTURE WITH A LITTLE BLACK DOG AND A BEAR.—"As I was sitting down picking huckleberries—I had a little black dog with me—I heard the dog barking furiously. I thought that somebody was plaguing him; he is a dog that don't like to be plagued. I thought that I would get up and go and see what was wrong with him. So I got up and started with my pail. When I got there I saw a bear as big as a yearling calf. When the dog seen me he ran to me and the bear after him. I picked up a stone—he was coming full tilt, with his mouth wide open. I fired away with the stone and hit the bear a pretty hard rap alongside the head. That made him mad; he growled a little, and came right on. I picked up a pine knot, and when the bear came up the dog snapped him on the hind leg. He jumped at the dog; then the dog jumped between my legs; the bear jumped at me, and then I struck him on the snout. He snifted, and blew the slobbers in my face so I couldn't see for a little bit, then the bear started off and the dog after him, and bit him in the hind leg again. The bear turned and chased the dog, which ran behind me; then the bear jumped at me, and I struck him square on the snout again and knocked him down, and then I ran for dear life. I was too scared, to tell the truth (we believe him), and the dog after me, and the bear after the dog. I lost my hat and pail, but did not dare to stop and pick them up. I ran about a half mile, when I stopped and looked back, saw two more bears coming; they were cubs. Then the dog and old bear came full jump—they all got together. I thought that I was a goner, sure, but they all made for the little dog; they fought awhile, and I called the dog off. I ran to a tree and climbed it, and the three bears started off, and the dog started after them; he ran after the bears about a mile. I tell you, if ever anybody made for home I did. This was the first and last berrying that I have done this year. That kind of a bear ain't to be fooled with; I don't want to see any more bears very soon. I have seen a great many bears in my time, but that was the meanest I ever seen. She struck the dog once and knocked him twelve feet through the brush, and the dog got up and started at her again, but was careful to keep out of the bear's paws. I tell you I was glad to get back home alive."—Williamsport Sun and Banner.

WINTRY BLASTS ARE SPECIALLY FRUITFUL of coughs and colds. Children who romp out of doors during the cold season are very subject to them, and no household where there are children should be unprovided with an effectual safeguard against lung disease. Such a one is Northrop & Lyman's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil and Hypophosphites of Lime and Soda, a preparation in which the former ingredient possesses the utmost purity, and where its well-known pulmonic properties are increased by the admixture of the lime and soda salts. Of these the basis is phosphorus, an essential constituent of the brain, the muscles and the blood, and long recognized by physicians as a strengthening and fortifying agent of surpassing efficacy. The waste of bodily tissue consequent upon lung, chest, and throat complaints is promptly checked by this time-honored remedy, and the irritation of the breathing organs arrested and overcome by it. The article has been pronounced by physicians the best preparation of its class, and this professional verdict has found an echo in the grateful acknowledgments of many who, despairing of aid from any source, have nevertheless sought and found relief from it. Persons whose chest and lungs are weak should use it as a preventive. Asthma, coughs, colds, spitting of blood, bronchitis and laryngitis are promptly remedied by it, and it also possesses properties as a blood purifier very manifest in various types of scrofula. Prepared only by Northrop & Lyman, Toronto, Canada.

GRAND RAPIDS, May 24, 1880.

MR. JAMES I. FELLOWS, St. John, N.B.

My Dear Sir,—In gratitude for the benefit received by the use of your "Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites," I do most cheerfully add my testimony to its wonderful effects in permanently raising me almost from the grave. For several years I have been a great sufferer. My lungs were affected, and I was completely run down by general debility, so that my life was despaired of by many of those who knew me here in Grand Rapids. I had the best medical advice, but it availed me nothing, and I kept getting worse and worse. At last, I was induced to try your Hypophosphites, and in doing so was pleased to notice that it gave me almost immediate relief. At the time I commenced using them I weighed about 120 pounds, and coughed continually; now (eight months later) I have gained my weight and over, and I hardly think there is a man in Grand Rapids enjoying better health. In concluding this rather long testimonial, allow me, Mr. Fellows, to congratulate you on your Hypophosphites, for I think it the greatest of all medicines, and, my friends as well as myself, that it saved me from a consumptive's grave. Yours gratefully,

J. E. LEONARD, of Leonard Bros'., Grand Rapids, Mich.

NEW INVENTION.

Dansereau's Patent Carriage Top,

Made and Patented by

PIERRE DANSEREAU, Carriage Maker,

Nos. 219 and 221 Craig street, Montreal.

This new carriage top has been patented in Canada on the 7th May, 1881, and in the United States on the 5th July, 1881. First Prize and Diploma Montreal Exhibition September, 1881. This patent carriage top is entirely new and possesses the following advantages over the ordinary carriage tops: It is made entirely of wood and so constructed as to open and close like those made of leather. It can be put up on any kind of Summer or Winter carriages or coaches. It is more durable than any made of leather or cloth only which after a very short time break and crack in the folds, show all the ribs and give the carriage a shabby and worn out appearance. Moreover, the cold which in Winter cracks the leather has no effect on this patent top, which can at any time be made new with a fresh coat of paint and varnish, which preserves them for almost any length of time. This patent top is also made to receive glass sashes all around, making the interior of the carriage well lighted and, which is more important, very warm in Winter. It possesses more particularly the great advantage of opening and closing at will and with great ease, in the Winter as well as in the Summer carriages, without any risk of breaking any part of it as it often happens in the other kinds. This top is without doubt the cheapest most economical that can be built. It dispenses also in Winter with the use of a great part of the costly fur robes now necessary. In this respect it secures to the carriage-makers and hackmen immense advantages, by the economy of its construction dispensing with a costly leather and taking much less time in building. Finally, it allows the same body with its top to be used either in a sleigh with glass panels opened or closed or in the same way in a Summer vehicle or coach. This patent top has received the approval of the principal carriage builders of Montreal, who have examined it and whose letter is appended:

P. DANSEREAU, ESQ.,—We, the undersigned, after examining your patent carriage top, have much pleasure in saying that we find it a very useful, economical and durable one and we have no doubt it will advantageously replace those utilised until now. Signed, N. & A. C. LARIVIERE, BRUNO LEDOUX, F. RITCHOT, JULES LAJEUNESSE. 221x
