Massey-Vanier celebrates academic success

By Gordon Lambie

Massey-Vanier High School's annual awards ceremony took place last Wednesday evening, celebrating the academic stars of the class of 2016 with 127 different awards, bursaries, certificates, and trophies. Over the course of the evening the academic and community achievements of 66 different students were rewarded with more than $91,000 in financial aid.

While it was not unusual for students to be called up several times to accept different forms of recognition, Anne Escande took the evening by storm, ending the night having been awarded 11 different honours. Alexander Lukacs was also kept on his feet, accepting eight different prizes over the course of the night.

Many award presenters took a moment to publicly address either the recipients of their award or the graduating class as a whole. Some offered

Arms dealers are a despicable lot (in fiction, at least)

Good guy spies are always on the lookout for the bad guys selling WMDs

In April 1995, an American Persian Gulf War vet who despised his own government blew up a truck parked at a federal building in Oklahoma City, killing 168 people and injuring hundreds. Timothy McVeigh (and at least two accomplices) had made the powerful bomb with fertilizer and a handful of other commonly available items. He was executed for his crime.

In the world of fiction, however, the most fun thrillers do not generally feature fertilizer bombs. The books present high-tech weapons of mass destruction, or crates full of submachine guns or banned landmines, all purchased from vicious, amoral arms dealers. After all, evil international gardening shop moguls may not quite capture your imagination.

When offering entertainment, this generation's spy and terrorism thriller writers often present a fascinating mix of the fake and the real. And readers must have a solid knowledge of international history and politics to get the most out of these good reads: These days, there's a focus on Russian power brokers, hints as to the real-life complicity of iron-fisted politician Vladimir Putin, and a goodly dose of Muslim terrorists and dirty European bankers.

Would-be killers and bombers need weapons. Fictional arms dealers are a vilified breed, their sins believed to reach down through multiple generations. In the crime/detective novel The Glass Rainbow, the aged Louisiana cop Dave Robicheaux is sickened that his daughter is dating Kermit, an older man connected to a family of plantation slave owners and, later, arms makers.

On one visit, over-protective dad sees a glassed-in mahogany bookcase that "contained framed photographs of Kermit's grandfather, Timothy Abelard, standing alongside members of the Somoza family in Nicaragua, supervising a cockfight in Batista-era Cuba, receiving a civilian medal for the productivity of munitions that his defense plant had manufactured during the Vietnam War, and finally, Timothy Abelard overseeing a group of black farmworkers in a field of wind-swirling sugarcane."

Robicheaux expertly nurses the chip on his shoulder, certain there is an Abelard family connection to the local murders of six young women, women no one cares about.

This is a gritty novel set in steamy post-Katrina summer heat, in which the police are little better than the criminals they seek to stop. Robicheaux's best pal is out of control, drunk and violent (yet Robicheaux will do what he has to do to protect his friend). And because this is down South, there's race relations to consider, and the lingering trauma of the U.S. civil war.

The Glass Rainbow, published in 2010, is the 18th in bestselling author James Lee Burke's Robicheaux series, and is filed in the Lennoxville Library's Large-Print section. If you want to start from the beginning, The Neon Rain came out in 1987 (but it's hard to find); check Adult Fiction and Large Print shelves in the Lennoxville Library for others in the series, and use our interlibrary loans service.

The Vince Flynn thriller American Assassin (2010, in Adult Fiction in the Lennoxville Library) puts arms dealing right up front. Flynn has written a popular series starring the CIA-trained secret agent Mitch Rapp, but American Assassin goes back to the very beginning and offers Rapp's origin story. His recruitment, training, his first kill, and more.

Rapp wants revenge for Pan Am 103, the (real-life) 1988 flight that blew up over Lockerbie, Scotland, murdering 259 passengers and another 11 on the ground; Rapp's (fictional) fiancée was on the plane. "Rapp thought of the past three years. All the sleepless nights when he had yearned for the opportunity to meet just one of the men behind the downing of Pan Am 103. When he had imagined down to the most minute detail what he would do to them. And now he had the man who had supplied the plastic explosives and military-grade fuse and detonator sitting in his sights."

This is just the first of many assassinations in this thriller.

Rapp's training and deadly assignments are a direct response to what is seen as American mistakes: "We got soft in the '80s and let the assholes get away with too much shit."

What's real here, and what isn't? In Rapp's world, US spies swear they'll never kill innocents. In the real life of this decade, American drones are accused of killing innocents in, for example, Yemen.

For more Mitch Rapp, follow American Assassin with 2012's Kill Shot (in Adult Fiction), then go back to 1999 with Transfer Of Power, and then just keep going! Filed in Adult Fiction, and via interlibrary loans.

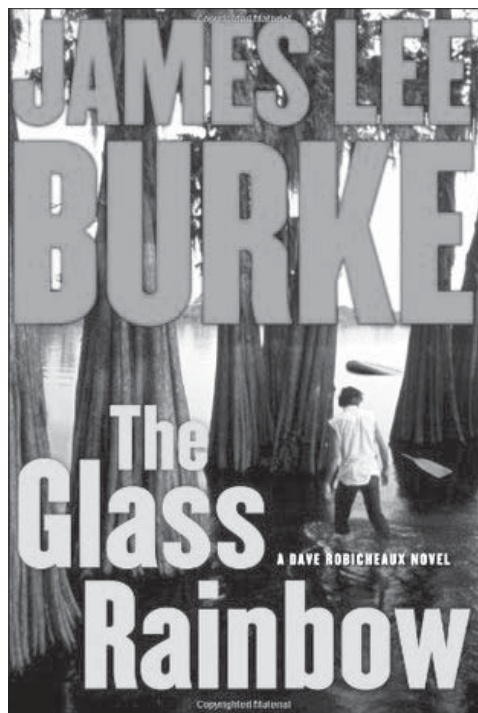

Author Daniel Silva's hero is an Israeli spy, Gabriel Allon, who moonlights as an art restorer for the Vatican. Silva's one-two punch Moscow Rules (2008) and its sequel, The Defector (2009, both filed in Adult Fiction; there's an abridged version in Audio), both feature the murderous Russkie arms dealer Ivan Kharkov.

In The Defector, the man who saved Allon's life just months before (as described in Moscow Rules, titled for a supposedly real, unwritten collection of "rules" in the spy biz) goes missing.

Further, Allon knows he's also been marked for death by Kharkov, a man who can never forgive.

Real Soviet history inspires this thriller: As author Silva notes in his afterword, Joseph Stalin murdered

Townshippers head to The Hill for supply management

By Matthew McCully

Close to three thousand protesters from across the country converged on Parliament Hill in Ottawa yesterday in defence of Canada's supply management system; among the crowd were three bus loads of townships farmers and agricultural industry supporters, as well as a convoy of tractors that had made the journey, some travelling for days on back roads at an average of 40 km per hour, to gain visibility and demonstrate their resolve.

Dairy producer Peter MacKinnon from the Coaticook area was on one of the three busses that arrived from the Townships, and spoke to The Record via cell phone as the protesters gathered at Jacques Cartier Park in Gatineau, preparing to march to Parliament Hill.

"It's very energetic," MacKinnon said, referring to the crowd of protesters. He counted 14 busses and a convoy of tractors in his immediate surroundings.

He sent a number of pictures to The Record throughout the event.

MacKinnon added that the protesters were in the process of learning songs, composed specifically for the occasion to the tune of Frère Jacques.

The purpose of the demonstration was a show of support for Canada's supply management system.

Concessions made in the Trans-Pacific Partnership (TPP) for more dairy imports into Canada, combined with diafiltered milk and other creatively labeled dairy products coming across the border from the United States through legal loopholes puts the system in jeopardy, according to critics.

Just as farmers in Quebec and Ontario were revving their tractor engines on Tuesday and hitting the road for Ottawa, Conservative leadership candidate Maxime Bernier was making clear his desire to abolish the supply management system, referring to it as a government cartel.

"It's the opposite of a free market," Bernier said, during Tuesday's press conference.

"Supply management is a system based on keeping the prices of dairy, poultry and eggs artificially high through the control of production, the banning of imports and price fixing by bureaucrats," Bernier said.

While Bernier's comments were likely a topic of discussion during yesterday's demonstration, MacKinnon said the protest had been in the works for months.

"This has been brewing for much longer," he explained.

The big issue at the moment, according to MacKinnon, is the losses local farmers are facing because of diafiltered milk.

"We want Ottawa to apply the rules as they should be," he said, explaining that the product is not considered a milk ingredient at the border, but is being used by Canadian companies to produce cheese.

"It was created for the sole purpose of getting across the border," MacKinnon said.

MacKinnon pointed out that it was not just dairy farmers at the protest. On the bus he was on, MacKinnon said there were feed mill representatives, veterinarians, machinery dealers, and other people reliant on the industry.

"As the health of the agricultural industry fluctuates, so will their livelihood as well," MacKinnon said.

Marcel Blais, vice-president of the Townships Dairy Producers Association, was one of the many farmers who arrived in Ottawa yesterday on a tractor. He was part of a 16-tractor convoy that left from Longueuil, and travelled for two days.

"We wanted to be seen by the population," Blais said, explaining the reason for the long slow journey.

"We're not asking for money; we want the norms and regulations to be respected," Blais said, explaining that cheese standards were clearly established in 2008, but are not being enforced.

According to Blais, two of the three thousand protesters on Parliament Hill yesterday were from Quebec, but there was representation from all the provinces in Canada, he added.

background on the award being presented or simple introductions about the students being honoured, while others took the audience into in-depth explorations of students' lives. Before the ceremony finished, the graduating class had been called everything from the builders of the future to a bunch of "young punks and punkettes," received a ukulele serenade from music teacher William Jarand, and been treated to a speech of intentionally generic platitudes by Science and Ethics teacher Adam Alter. At the same time, individuals were praised for plans to work on technology that will help the blind to see, and for perusing futures in the world of criminology and elementary education.

Particularly poignant in the context of a ceremony that opened with awards in memory of former students and graduates who died young was the message of Michael Drolet. In presenting the Class of 1983 reunion memorial fund bursary Drolet noted that 14 of his former classmates are no longer alive and implored the members of the class of 2016 to avoid dangerous decisions as they head off to the graduation and prom.

The Record's Charles Bury Bursary was presented this year to Nicholas Parrott of Bedford.

Parrott is heading to Dawson College to study Cinema-Communications, after which he plans to enroll in the Journalism program at Carleton University in the hopes of one day becoming a sports journalist. He told The Record that he has loved sports all his life and hopes to do an internship with TSN in Montreal over the course of his studies.

The award winner said that he is already working on building his exposure, posting hockey commentaries on the fan site nextgensports.ca.

The Record congratulates all award recipients and wishes them well in their future projects.

Hatley resident receives esteemed award

By Rachel Newcombe
Special to The Record

It is a whirlwind week for Hatley resident and MacDonald College student Shelby Drew. This past Saturday, she received the Lieutenant Governor bronze award, and will be graduating on Friday.

Drew, a former Alexander Galt Regional High School student, will be graduating from the three year Farm Management and Technology program at MacDonald College. The Lieutenant Governor award came at the culmination of a busy and productive three years.

She said she was surprised to find out that she and a fellow classmate had received such a prestigious award.

"I had no idea until I got the letter in the mail," she said. This is not the first award Drew has been nominated for. In April she won the Spirit of Agriculture award from Farm Credit Canada for a project she completed. She will be presenting this project later in June in Quebec City.

Being awarded the Lieutenant Governor award was what Drew described as, "the experience of a lifetime."

"There aren't many times when you're around such a diverse group," she added about the over 70 people that were presented with awards at the ceremony.

This was all before she actually went up on stage and received the award from Lieutenant Governor J. Michel Doyon. "It was exhilarating and stressful," she laughed, adding that there were a lot of things she had to remember about how to walk on the stage, and how to interact with someone of such a high stature.

Drew accomplished many things that helped get her to that moment. "I've been an active member of the Hatley 4H for 13 years," she said, outlining her years there, most recently as vice-president. She has also been a part of 4H on the provincial level.

Once Drew made the move to MacDonald College, she immediately became heavily involved in the mass judging livestock club. This led to her involvement in shows and events, like the Mac Royale.

"We were kind of drafted," Drew remarked about joining the club. She explained that upper year students often recruited first year students with strong skills, and, "who could be bossy."

When asked why she chose this particular area of study, Drew had a simple answer. "My passion for agriculture, and my grandfather," she said. Drew's grandfather still operates a farm in Waterville, and she commented that through the ups and downs of his life, he still got up every day and farmed. She explained that his passion was a big inspiration to her.

With her degree winding to a close, Drew reflected on the past three years she spent at MacDonald College.

"It was the most amazing experience of my life," she said, her voice filled with passion. Originally petrified to go, she explained that she had found an extended family in her classmates. "Our class was just so connected. They made my three years so awesome."

After graduation, Drew plans to move back home to Hatley. "I'm hoping to eventually start my own ranch," she said. Her goal is to one day be able to establish beef sales in a direct-to-consumer business model. Happy to be graduating, Drew is eager to get home and get started on the next step.

'Breaking Bad' adventure ends in court for Sherbrooke couple

Record Staff
SHERBROOKE

Taking a page out of the popular television series 'Breaking Bad,' a Sherbrooke couple turned to selling cocaine solution to get out of a difficult financial situation. It didn't end up as well as they might have hoped.

Tommy Bureau and Nadia Lafrenière pleaded guilty Wednesday in Sherbrooke to the charges of possession of cocaine for the purposes of trafficking before Quebec Court Judge Claire Desgens.

Both individuals admitted their involvement in the scheme between October 2014 and January 2015. Bureau also entered a guilty plea to a charge of breach of conditions for not respecting his curfew in December of last year.

The couple fell victim to an anonymous tip that put police on the trail of the couple, neither of whom had a previous criminal record.

Using the couple's cell phone number, police were able to trace them down and make an arrest. Sherbrooke Police investigators were able to witness exchanges with customers made from their vehicle. These transactions lasted about thirty seconds.

During a search of their home, investigators SPS found 20 grams of cocaine divided into bags as well as $ 1,229 in cash in a safe.

Statements made by the accused to police officers revealed that the couple moved 70 units of cocaine a week for a profit of about $10 per unit.

Defence attorneys for the couple have asked for a pre-sentence report to assist the court in deciding the couple's fate.

The couple apparently dove into the business because of financial difficulties and not because of a drug problem. Arguments on sentencing are scheduled to be heard on September 19.

EDITORIAL

It's time for the provincial and federal governments to join with Grassy Narrows to clean up the Wabigoon River.

Grassy Narrows' fight for clean water is a struggle for environmental justice

By David Suzuki

Biologist Rachel Carson's Silent Spring was published in 1962. The book — about widespread agricultural pesticide use and how toxic chemicals like DDT were threatening insects, birds and other wildlife — garnered widespread acclaim and is heralded as a catalyst for the modern environmental movement.

That same year, a pulp and paper mill in Dryden, Ontario, began dumping untreated mercury waste into the Wabigoon River — more than 9,000 kilograms up to 1970. The mill was upstream from several First Nations communities, including Grassy Narrows, home to the Asubpeeschosewagong Netum Anishinabek people. Mercury contamination has triggered an ecological crisis that has devastated the local environment and community members' health to this day.

The Wabigoon River has been sacred to the people of Grassy Narrows for generations. Along with the chain of lakes through which it runs, the river provided fish, drinking water and nearly full employment in guiding and commercial fishing. But shortly after the mill started dumping, mercury began appearing at alarming concentrations far downstream and throughout the entire food chain — in the sediment and surface water of lakes and rivers, where bacteria converted it to toxic methylmercury, which accumulated in the tissues of fish, aquatic invertebrates and people.

Silent Spring introduced the concept of bioaccumulation, the increasing concentration of toxic material from one link in a food chain to the next. Scientists who have monitored mercury in Grassy Narrows found the higher up an organism is on the food chain, the more mercury it contains. Top predatory fish, such as northern pike, have more mercury than fish that eat insects, such as whitefish. Grassy Narrows' residents have elevated levels of mercury in their blood, hair and other tissues from eating fish and other aquatic foods as part of their traditional diet.

Mercury is a potent neurotoxin. Because of chronic mercury exposure, people have suffered from numbness in fingertips and lips, loss of co-ordination, trembling and other neuromuscular problems. Mercury poisoning has also been linked to developmental problems in children, which persist into adulthood.

Japanese researchers, who have monitored the health of Grassy Narrows' residents since the early 1970s, concluded that many suffer from Minamata disease, named after the Japanese city of Minamata, which was poisoned with mercury when a chemical company dumped tainted wastewater into Minamata Bay in the 1950s and '60s.

Grassy Narrows is at the centre of one of the worst toxic sites in Canada. Scientists have found dangerously high concentrations of mercury in area lakes more than 50 years after initial contamination. One meal of walleye from nearby Clay Lake, a traditional fishing area, contains up to 150 times the amount of mercury deemed safe by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

Because of mercury contamination, the Ontario government closed Grassy Narrows' commercial fishery in 1970 and told people, particularly children and women of child-bearing age, to avoid eating fish. Though well-intentioned, this policy worsened residents' health by encouraging them to replace a staple wild protein source with store-bought food, which is inferior in quality and nutritional value.

Fish are a traditional food of Indigenous communities in Northern Ontario, and their harvest and consumption are important for culture and health. Fishing is also a protected treaty right. Years of case law, as well as the Supreme Court of Canada's 2014 Tsilhqot'in decision, have drawn attention to the fact that treaty and Aboriginal rights enshrined in Section 35 of the Canadian Constitution are meaningless if Indigenous peoples can't continue to live off healthy populations of wild game, fish and plants.

A recent scientific report found that Grassy Narrows' Wabigoon River can be cleaned up, and the fish can become safe to eat again — but only with political will.

The underlying message of Silent Spring, that everything is connected, is tragically playing out in Grassy Narrows. The people there have resisted degradation of their lands and waters and are leaders in the environmental justice movement.

It's time for the provincial and federal governments to join with Grassy Narrows to clean up the Wabigoon River. No single act would go further to illustrate that a new era has dawned in our relationship with Indigenous peoples and our shared environment. thousands, and the current regime has little interest in publicizing the evils of the past. "One of the few sites where Russians can mourn Stalin's victims is Butovo, just south of Moscow. There, from August 1937 to October 1938, an estimated 20,000 people were shot in the back of the head and buried in long mass graves. I visited the recently opened memorial at Butovo with my family in the summer of 2007 while researching Moscow Rules, and in large measure it inspired The Defector.

"One question haunted me as I walked slowly past the burial trenches, accompanied by weeping Russian citizens. Why are there not more places like this? Places where ordinary Russians can see evidence of Stalin's unimaginable crimes with their own eyes. The answer, of course, is that the rulers of New Russia are not terribly interested in exposing the sins of the Soviet past. On the contrary, they are engaged in a carefully orchestrated endeavour to airbrush away its most repulsive aspects while celebrating its achievements."

Silva partly bases his argument on the fact that Vladimir Putin is a former KGB officer, and the KGB played an essential role in Stalin's rule.

The books are numbers 8 and 9 in the Allon series. Want more Allon in your reading life? Start with The Kill Artist (2000, in Adult Fiction; for other Silva books, check Adult Fiction, Audio and Large Print, and use our interlibrary loans service).

Of course these books focus on the spies, the good guys who must find the bad guys and stop them with the finality of a bullet.

For a reality-based look at what motivates the terrorists, consider the work of Atkinson Fellowship winner and National Security Reporter Michelle Shephard, who has begun publishing her analysis of what makes an ISIL or ISIS terrorist: "Most especially, I will focus on Daesh's foreign members, those who are a part of 'Generation 9/11,' between the ages of 16 to 28 and who grew up in the shadow of the Sept. 11, 2001, attacks [in the United States]. The majority of Daesh's estimated 30,000 foreign members, including about 100 Canadians, belong to this demographic." The series will appear in its entirety in the Toronto Star and a quick search on the newspaper's website should get you to the right URL.

Canadians are also considering issues like arms dealing. Somebody's manufacturing all these weapons — and sometimes that somebody is us. Not all arms sales are illegal.

The governing federal Liberals have signed off on a Tory-brokered sale of tanks to Saudi Arabia. The tanks are apparently largely made in London, Ontario, in a factory run by an American company, General Dynamics Land Systems. It's a $15 billion deal, which the company says will help maintain the jobs of 3,000 Canadians.

The sale to the Western ally Saudi Arabia — a strict, Islam-inspired absolute monarchy supported by oil sales — is controversial. Including here in Sherbrooke.

Saudi citizen Raif Badawi is an honorary citizen of our city, where his wife and three children live. Badawi was sentenced to a $300,000 fine, and is serving 10 years in a Saudi prison, plus condemned to a total of 1,000 lashes, all for insulting Islam and criticizing the government on his blog. (Raif Badawi's 2015 book 1000 Coups de Fouet : Parce Que J'ai Oser Parler Librement, can be ordered via interlibrary loan; his lawyer, who specializes in human rights law, has been sentenced to 15 years under Saudi "antiterrorism" legislation.)

Today marks the 75th vigil to be held at Sherbrooke City Hall by Badawi's supporters.

BOOK SALE

Our annual monster book sale is set for Friendship Day, on Saturday, June 11. Lennoxville Library folk will set up tables on Queen Street, at the corner of College, and bring out hundreds upon hundreds of books for you to buy. It's an important fundraiser for the library, and a great way for you to pick up great reads for the summer, and beyond.

June 11 is also the first day to sign up your kids for our TD Summer Reading program. Ask for more details at the front desk!

In other news: It's your last chance to see the artworks of Catherine-Anne Gillies, on our walls until Saturday, June 4.

Because the City of Sherbrooke is our principal sponsor, Lennoxville Library membership is free for all residents of Sherbrooke. Books and audio books are always free to members; DVDs are $1 (the money will be used to keep the collection up to date).

How much richer our lives would be if we took time to check in with one another before dealing with the business of the day.

ONE COLUMN, FOUR VOICES

Opening to the Spirit

Today's word: Meeting

By Revs Mead Baldwin,
W. Lynn Dillabough,
Lee Ann Hogle, and
Carole Martignacco

1) Meetings: how many of us enjoy meetings? It is certainly not one of my favourite activities. There are agendas to prepare. Minutes to read and sometimes preparatory work to do in advance. Then there is the meeting itself where some try to take control and others are too bored to participate.

I wonder if there might be another way to carry out a meeting. To truly meet someone, to see and be seen, to become curious about the life journey of someone else, to share an important part about ourselves can be some of the most meaningful experiences we will ever know. I am envisioning a meeting where time is always reserved for the recognition of each individual and where they happen to be at on that particular day. One may be waiting anxiously for test results. Another may be mourning the loss of a loved one. Yet another may have just received good news.

Parker Palmer, a well-known author, writes about the importance of creating a safe place for the soul to show up. This does not need to be confined to spiritual retreats or psychological self-help groups. Any time we can create a safe place for all to simply be themselves and feel supported, we are contributing to the well-being of our community.

How much richer our lives would be if we took time to check in with one another before dealing with the business of the day. Surely it would nurture more compassion, allow us to be more patient with one another and help build a reverence for each person's journey. And as a by-product our meeting would probably be more productive and creative. Let it be the first item on the agenda!

2) I have a datebook full of meetings that I need to attend or chair. In fact, last weekend I chaired a meeting with about 200 people who were there either in person or in remote sites. Unlike some of my other colleagues I actually enjoy most meetings, perhaps because each one is an opportunity to greet new people and share ideas.

The word "meeting" means more than just a gathering to plan business. I like the metaphor of people on separate journeys who randomly encounter others who may or may not be on similar quests. They share their experiences and are enriched.

Many of our meetings are nothing like that however. While I was doing my Master's degree I preached most weekends in Kahnawake as part of a team with another student like me. We had a supervisor who liked to take charge. We met once ostensibly to plan a joint church service for Christmas. My student friend and I shared ideas which one by one were dismissed, and near the end of the meeting the supervisor pulled out a complete order of service he had done and told us what parts we had. The "meeting" was a sham of course as most encounters with him were. The exchange of ideas was a mere formality.

Meeting other people and truly exchanging hopes and dreams, then working toward a common goal can be so enriching. Meetings are a necessary part of life. Let's take time to make them authentic encounters, both with each other, and with the divine spark which inspires us all.

3) As Jewish theologian Martin Buber wrote, "All life is meeting." Most days are filled with them! Scheduled or spontaneous, in person, by phone, email or Zoom. The calendar tells us who, what and where - with maybe an agenda sent ahead to help focus and save time. At best, meetings energize me with a lively exchange of ideas and diverse personalities, the commitment to something beyond self I cannot, would not accomplish alone.

Other meetings are less formal - countless daily encounters we have with family in passing each other or negotiating the simple details of shared a household, friends and neighbours greeting each other coming and going about our lives. Even at a distance we can now meet, "touch base" and "keep in touch" via Facetime or Skype.

Meetings remind us our lives are continually interconnected and interdependent. Yet how often in our daily encounters do we even scratch the surface much less plumb the depths of who we truly are in all our richness? When that happens, it can almost magical - memorable, profound, even life-changing.

For Buber, meeting is the opportunity to experience a sacred I/THOU relationship, a mutual recognition of shared humanity between unique beings of infinite worth. How many of our meetings, even in the context of church, provide such spiritual connection, moving us beyond the circumstances of our meeting? One of my goals lately is to be more mindful whenever we gather, that who we are is as important as what we do together. The sacred dimension exists as a hidden potential in any encounter. Awareness of this can transform meeting into everyday spiritual practice.

4) In order to really meet anyone, both people need to show up. Granted, many meetings are super-official. Picture yourself at a party, with someone asking you "Have you met so and so?" These meetings may be brief and unrevealing. Now, picture yourself in the memory of meeting someone and really meeting. Sometimes these encounters are brief, too but an important exchange really happens.

Meetings in which we encounter new people and new ideas are full of potential. You would not be who or where you are but for these meetings. Couples love to tell the stories about how they met, and most inspirational ideas and movements began with a meeting of two or three people with like minds.

Think about the people you have met - I mean really met, with a sharing of yourselves with each other - and think about the good that has come from this.

Sadly, sometimes people are afraid to put themselves out there. Through holding back they can prevent these deeper meetings from happening. Probably, they showed up and were hurt. Probably, they think they will be rejected if people saw "who they really are", believing this is somehow worse than everyone else. Please be patient with these people. We are changed by every encounter. Please meet the people around you with patience and with kindness. You may be very pleasantly surprised by who shows up.

Naomi Bristow is a true yodelin' cowgirl

Performing at The Piggery in North Hatley July 2

COUNTRY CONNECTION

JESSIE AULIS

The Piggery in North Hatley has always gone out of their way to provide great country entertainment with top-notch artists through the years. Many of our Canadian singers such as Johnny Reid, George Canyon, Brett Kissel, (just to name a few), had their first experience of the Townships right there.

The Piggery offers a beautiful setting for summer shows, and the perfect conditions, including great acoustics, for an intimate performance. Naomi Bristow, a young lady with a great love for traditional country music and talent for singing, will be performing on their stage on July 2, 2016.

In the past few years, Bristow has traveled across the countryside in Canada and the United States performing for thousands and sharing the music she loves. It is her love for old time traditional country music that led her to self-taught yodeling, which she incorporates into her performances.

"I started singing when I was five years old at small fairs and church and I began performing professionally when I was 10 years old," she told me in an interview. The young woman, who is now 18, already has nine albums under her belt.

Most kids who are drawn towards music come from a musically incline family but this is not Bristow's case.

"My family is not musical, my music is a gift from God," she shares. "I play guitar and a little piano and banjo as well."

The young woman was featured in the top 200 across Canada for the Canada's Got Talent 2012 season. She gained exposure and notoriety from the amazing experience. Also among the many accolades received the past years, she cherishes the "Havelock Fans Choice Award," the BC Cowboy Heritage Rising Star, and The Western Music Association, twice the "Youth Yodeler of the Year."

"I have been recording albums since I was 10 years old. My most recent albums have been recorded in Nashville," she explained. Modern country is certainly not her first choice.

"I love Carrie Underwood and Garth Brooks, but my favourite artists are the old ones, Loretta Lynn, Dolly Parton, Hank Snow," she stressed.

Most of her albums are a mixture of traditional country yodeling and Gospel.

"I also have an album that is all yodeling," she said. But she was lucky enough to record a gospel album with Nashville superstar Vince Gill. Quite an accomplishment for anyone who sings. An experience she will never forget.

"So many people ask me how I managed to record with Vince, and it was actually pretty simple," said Bristow. "I was down in Nashville recording my gospel album, and one evening, I went to the Vince Gill show with the Time Jumpers. During the break I went up to Vince Gill and said Mr. Vince I am working on a gospel album, would you like to sing with me? He looked me straight in the eyes and said, 'I'd love to darling.' I really couldn't believe it. And he still refers to me as the 'little Canadian girl.' Truly I was so blessed!"

So young but already honoured in many ways for her work. In the spring of 2008, she recorded her first album titled Cowboy Sweetheart, followed by The Yodelin' Cowgirl in November 2008, then Ridin' High, which came out in July 2009.

Ridin' High was awarded the Best Traditional Yodel Album of the Year 2010 by the National Traditional Country Music Association in the United States. She recorded her first three albums at Ambassador Records in Oshawa, Ontario.

Her fourth CD, Lookin' Back, was recorded in Nashville, where she had the honor and privilege to sing two duets with Grand Ole Opry member Jim Ed Brown. In the spring of 2011, Naomi once again recorded in Nashville her fifth album, titled Lovin' the Ride, featuring again Jim Ed Brown and Richard Sterban from the Oakridge Boys.

In March of 2012, the singer's path took another direction. She recorded her most memorable CD titled Blessed Trails. A lovely selection of gospel songs which featured Vince Gill.

She released her seventh album with a collection of all her yodeling songs, titled Yee Haw Yodelin'. In 2013, Naomi released her first DVD, The Heart of a Cowgirl, which includes live performances and tapings from television shows she had appeared on.

A great mixture of traditional country music is featured on Stayin' On Track, which was released in the summer of 2014.

Naomi decided to release another album in 2015 with

Fans shocked as CTV announces 'Canada AM' to suddenly end 43-season run

By Victoria Ahearn
THE CANADIAN PRESS

"Canada AM" fans expressed shock on Thursday as CTV announced the seminal morning program would be ending its 43-year run just a day later.

"There was no warning," said Elaine Uskoski, a holistic health practitioner in Caledon, Ont. "I don't think that's fair to the fans."

"I'm just stunned," added Katia Ulysse Saint Vil, a political communications professional in Ottawa, who watched the show nearly every day.

Beverly Thomson

"I would never think that the show would be ending just like that."

CTV declined a request for interviews on Thursday but said in a statement that it was making the move in order to evolve its programming.

"As the television landscape continues to evolve, so too must our programming. We look forward to building upon the success of 'Canada AM' as we move forward," said Randy Lennox, president of entertainment production and broadcasting at Bell Media.

"We invite viewers and fans to join us as we say goodbye tomorrow and acknowledge the lasting legacy this series and its talent — both now and in the past — have had on Canada's broadcasting industry."

CTV said co-hosts Beverly Thomson and Marci Ien will continue to stay with Bell Media while Jeff Hutcheson will begin his previously announced retirement.

Thomson will move to CTV News Channel while Ien will develop new projects with Bell Media In-House Productions.

Billed as "Canada's most-watched national morning newsmagazine," "Canada AM" has been airing since 1972, providing news and lifestyle headlines as well as interviews with stars and newsmakers.

CTV said it will announce a new program for the 6 to 9 a.m. timeslot next week. A simulcast of live CTV News Channel programming will air in the timeslot on CTV beginning Monday.

Seamus O'Regan and Marci Ien

Friday's episode will be a tribute to both the program and its hosts.

The show has been home to many of CTV's broadcasting greats, including Craig Oliver, Sandie Rinaldo, Tom Clark, Lisa LaFlamme and Seamus O'Regan.

"I really liked the way they reported the news," said Ulysse Saint Vil.

"One of the things I also like about is that, I think that in Canada, black people are not very well represented in the media and seeing Marci Ien was also one of the reasons why I was watching every morning."

Uskoski said she enjoyed the team's "sense of humour, their relevancy to what's going on, their interviews."

"I liked that they had entertainment on the show. It's probably more about Jeff's sense of humour. I liked the camaraderie between them. It was fun to watch."

rector designate in 2017-18 and start to collaborate on planning the company's schedule, often done five years in advance or more. He will conduct two operas per season as music director designate and five operas per season once he assumes the role.

The 41-year-old Canadian, considered the favourite to replace Levine, has been music director of the Philadelphia Orchestra since the 2012-13 season and of Montreal's Orchestre Métropolitain since 2000. He has been chief conductor of the Rotterdam Philharmonic since 2008-09 and intends to give up that role at the end of the 2017-18 season.

"Yannick was the clear choice of the company," Met general manager Peter Gelb said in a statement. "He is the right artist at the right time to lead us forward."

Nezet-Seguín made his Met debut in the 2009-10 season conducting a new production of Bizet's "Carmen." He will become the third person with the music director title at the Met following Rafael another great collection of yodeling songs titled, Just Yodelin'. All her albums are available on her website or at concerts.

A large part of Naomi's performances the past few years have been with the CKNX Barn Dance, which is where Shania Twain cut her teeth and where she is now included in their museum, located in Wingham, Ontario.

She has opened for Gene Watson, Johnny Reid, David Frizzell, Moe Bandy, Ronda Vincent, Charlie Daniels, Marty Stuart, Jim Ed Brown, George Canyon, Bobby Bare, Dean Brody, and many other established country artists.

The singer is currently in college taking general Arts and Science to use as plan B, although her future plans are to continue to pay her dues until she graduates. She also spends time writing songs, but for now she mostly sing cover songs during her shows. She loves to honor the greats like Loretta Lynn, Patsy Cline, Dolly Parton, and other country music legends.

"I was raised in a rodeo family, which is how I got involved in country and western music. When I was 10 years old, I saw a little girl on TV yodeling and I thought I might like to try it so I sent away to Nashville for the book and tape and I taught myself how to yodel," she explained.

"I am touring all summer long with performances almost every weekend across Canada and into the United States," she said about her plans for summer.

In the meantime, she lives on a small horse farm in Beeton, Ontario with her mom, Lynda and her dad, Eugene. She has a sister, Amber and two brothers, Hayden and Westin.

Raised in a rodeo family she, of course, has a great love for animals and enjoys riding at any opportunity. She has a great appreciation for western cowboy music, enjoying its storytelling and simplicity. Her strong faith has guided her to gospel music and she loves to sing with her church band.

Here's a very hot show for a very hot summer night! You can reserve your tickets or get some information by calling 819-842-2431 (Visa or MC).

A $2 convenience charge is applicable to each ticket purchased by telephone. Tickets may be purchased during regular box office hours using Cash, Visa, MC or Debit. Tickets will be held at the box office under your name and will be available for pick up on the day of the performance.

Tickets purchased through the box office can be mailed to you, upon request for an additional charge of $3.50 per order.

A few classic romantic tearjerkers

By Lindsey Bahr
THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

When was the last time you had a good cry at the movies? Call it emotional blackmail or just good storytelling, but there's nothing quite like a romantic tearjerker, whether it's a forbidden love, a terminal illness or just bad timing that conspires to keep our on-screen lovers apart, and us sobbing.

The filmmakers behind "Me Before You," out Friday, hope that their film about a working-class girl and the wealthy quadriplegic she falls for might just be a worthy addition to the canon.

While we wait to indulge in the saga of Lou and Will, here are some romantic classics to prepare those tear ducts for maximum waterworks. So stock up on your tissues and get ready for the feels-so-good despair.

Love Story (1970)

"Love Story" didn't invent the tearjerker, but Erich Segal certainly indulged in the melodrama of it all to great effect in this story of a preppy Harvard guy and the feisty, not-so-wealthy Radcliffe girl of his dreams, who finds out she's dying. Not only is it touted as being one of the first modern-day blockbusters and the film that saved Paramount, but, it's also the one that, for better or worse, taught us the catchy, if questionable, advice that love means never having to say you're sorry.

An Affair To Remember (1957)

An intoxicating rendezvous between Cary Grant and Deborah Kerr on a cross-Atlantic cruiser, the promise of a reunion atop the Empire State Building, and a series of some of the more infuriating missed connections that ever befell two human beings has made this remake an enduring classic.

The Way We Were (1973)

Is it just more tragic when opposites attract and then implode? Katie (Barbra Streisand) and Hubbell (Robert Redford) had the passion, but not the staying power in Sydney Pollack's film. Maybe an apathetic pretty-boy and an impassioned activist weren't meant to be after all, but it doesn't make that goodbye any less heart wrenching.

Brokeback Mountain (2005)

Ang Lee's adaptation of Annie Proulx's short story is one of the rare films that's heartbreaking from the start in telling the saga of a forbidden love between cowboys Jack (Jake Gyllenhaal) and Ennis (Heath Ledger) and the public lies and lives they continue to lead while yearning for one another.

The Umbrellas Of Cherbourg (1964)

It might look like a candy-colored musical dream, but Jacques Demy's "Umbrellas of Cherbourg" packs quite a punch with its tale of a beautiful shopgirl (Catherine Deneuve) and a handsome mechanic (Nino Castelnuovo), torn apart by timing and circumstance. The tragedy is in the banality of the aftermath and the ordinariness of moving on and growing up. Michel Legrand's luxurious score doesn't hurt either.

The Notebook (2004)

Nicholas Sparks has made a cottage industry out of the romantic tearjerker, but Nick Cassavetes' 2004 adaptation of his novel about a rich girl (Rachel McAdams) falling for a poor boy (Ryan Gosling) in the 1940s somehow transcended his own worst tendencies of schlocky sentimentality.

Kubelik in 1973-74 and Levine.

"Becoming the music director of the Metropolitan Opera is the fulfilment of a lifelong dream for me," Nezet-Seguin said in a statement. "I am truly honoured and humbled by the opportunity to succeed the legendary James Levine and to work with the extraordinary orchestra, chorus, and staff of what I believe is the greatest opera company in the world. I will make it my mission to passionately preserve the highest artistic standards while imagining a new, bright future for our art form."

Levine, who turns 73 on June 23, was music director or artistic director of the company from the 1976-77 season until the company announced in April he was stepping down because of Parkinson's disease. He is now music director emeritus.

Golden Olympian Catriona Le May Doan shares her healthy living tips

A RUNNER'S MIND

CHRISTINE BLANCHETTE

Catriona Le May Doan is a two-time Gold Medal Olympian, sports broadcaster, mother of two and now, a health ambassador for the innoviCares card, a free card that helps Canadians save money on select brand name prescriptions. After years of pushing herself to the limit, the Calgary resident, like many athletes, now suffers from arthritis and chronic pain in her feet and lower back. She shared with me in a recent Q and A, some tips on how she continues to live a healthy life and remain active with her family, despite enduring chronic pain and arthritis.

Q: As a double Olympic Gold medalist in speed skating - 500m, first at Nagano in '98 and again in '02 at Salt Lake City, what do you miss most about the Olympics?

A: I miss the sense of team. I don't miss the discipline of training, yet a part of me misses the simplicity of that life. Please note I didn't have kids then, so now with kids at school, activities, etc, life is way less scheduled and more chaotic. I am fortunate to still be a part of the Olympics in various ways, but there is nothing better than being a spectator watching the Olympics cheering on Team Canada and not having the same stress!

Q: Given your busy schedule as a broadcaster, motivational speaker and mother of two, how do you stay active and maintain a healthy lifestyle?

A: I try to fit in a work out or activity whenever I can. Sometimes it means waking up a bit earlier (before the kids) and taking the dogs for a run. Sometimes it is when we are at home and I do some weights in the garage. During the winter I play ringette and hockey and my games are usually later at night. It is a struggle sometimes, but I know I need to take some time for me and try to fit in some physical activity as it makes me a better mum and happier in all I do! I also try to make sure and have some fruit and veggies handy for snacking. Nothing like running from activity to activity and knowing the drive-thrus are faster, but as long as you take a few extra minutes before, you can prepare food and bring it! Time management is key (I am always trying to get better at it).

Q: What tips do you have for other busy families like yours on keeping active and healthy?

A: Just as I mentioned, it is not worrying if you don't have an extra hour (most of us don't), but make an extra 20 or 30 minutes, just for you. You can walk, do some sit-ups, and many of the things can include the kids after school or in the evening. Same with snacks and food - include the kids and take an extra few minutes to get organized!

Q: What is the innoviCares card and how does it work?

A: The innoviCares card is available to all Canadians and best of all, it's free! It's a card that allows Canadians to continue with their brand-name prescription medication that they trust, at a price that's similar to the generic alternative(s). In most cases, the innoviCares card covers the difference in pricing between a brand name medication and its generic alternative and in other cases; it will cover some or all of the cost of a participating product.

Catriona Le May Doan and Christine Blanchette

Q: If people want more information or would like to sign up for the innoviCares card, where can they go?

A: Anyone can sign up for free at www.innovicares.ca. When you sign up for the card you will receive your innoviCares card number and can use it immediately. Your innoviCares card will arrive in the mail shortly thereafter.

Evelyn May
PLANCHE (Henderson)
August 22, 1921 - May 25, 2016

It is with deep sadness that we announce the passing of Evelyn. Beloved wife for 68 years to Bill Planche; cherished mom of Jane (Fred Lazier) and Don (Susan Towne), and devoted grandmother (Nanny) to Lindsay, Tim, Sean, Sabrina, Mackenzie (deceased), and Alex. She will be missed by her sisters; Eileen, Lois, and Helen. Predeceased by brothers Billy (Jean) and Delbert.

Evelyn was born in Inverness, Quebec. She moved to the Sherbrooke area as a young lady where she met Bill and settled down to raise a family in Belvedere Heights/Lennoxville. Later in her life, she and Bill moved to Pointe Claire, Quebec, and remained in her own home until a sudden stroke on May 8th led to her passing. Those wishing to pay their respects are invited to Cass Funeral Home, 3006 College St., Sherbrooke (Lennoxville), on Saturday, June 11th. Visitation will be from 12:30 p.m. to 2:30 p.m., followed by a funeral service and reception.

Special thanks to the staff at the Jewish General Hospital who helped to make her final days as comfortable as possible.

Follow these tips to keep your dentures in tip-top shape

ASK DOCTOR K
By Anthony L. Komaroff, M.D.

DEAR DOCTOR K: My dentist says it's time for dentures. What should I know before I get them?

DEAR READER: Nearly half of Americans ages 65 and over have lost six or more teeth because of decay or gum disease. Tooth loss can profoundly affect your health and well-being. The more teeth a person loses, the more difficult it is to chew food properly and get needed nutrients. Missing teeth can also make speaking difficult and make you self-conscious about your appearance. (On my website, AskDoctorK.com, I've put an illustration of our teeth and their functions.)

Nothing can fully take the place of healthy, natural teeth, but several replacement options are available. One such replacement is dentures.

Partial dentures are an option if you need to replace several teeth in a row. Full dentures tend to be used in older individuals who have lost many of their natural teeth.

Full dentures last five to 10 years. Their fit changes over time as the shape of the jawbone changes. If your dentures are uncomfortable, let your dentist know. He or she can make adjustments and repairs in between replacements. If the chewing surfaces become worn, your dentist can attach new teeth to the existing base.

Take proper care of your dentures to keep them looking good and fitting well. The following tips will help:

- Wash dentures in cold or warm – not hot – water.
- Try not to drop dentures on a hard surface, as they break easily. Handle them over a basin of water or a soft towel.
- Wash dentures daily with denture cleanser, hand soap or mild dish liquid. Avoid abrasive cleaners. This is really important. If dentures are not washed daily, they can become infected, usually with fungus and bacteria. When their surfaces are infected, and you wear the dentures, they can pass the infection to the lining of your mouth.

(I once had a patient whose dentures had made the roof of his mouth (his palate) so red, raw and sore that he needed to be hospitalized and given intravenous antibiotic treatments.)

– Clean denture surfaces by scrubbing thoroughly with a special denture brush or a hard toothbrush.

– After the adjustment phase, take your dentures out when you sleep to relieve pressure on your gums.

– When your dentures aren't in your mouth, soak them in a denture cleaning solution or in water. Don't let them dry out.

– Brush your mouth – including your gums, palate and tongue – with a soft-bristled toothbrush every morning before you insert your dentures.

– Minor irritation and soreness should fade away as you get used to your dentures. Call your dentist if discomfort persists, or if you notice staining, bad odor, color changes or tartar deposits on them.

– Don't try to adjust or repair your dentures on your own.

Dentures can improve your nutrition, your speech, your appearance and your happiness. Treat them with respect.

FRIDAY, JUNE 3, 2016

Annie's Mailbox

Dear Annie: My wife and I have been good friends with "Bill and June" for 30 years. Twelve years ago, my wife had surgery and lost all desire for sex. She isn't even interested in cuddling. Last year, Bill had a heart attack and is now afraid to exert himself in the bedroom.

Recently, June told me that Bill has given her permission to seek satisfaction elsewhere and asked if I was interested. I am, but I do not know how to approach the subject with my wife. Last year, when she discovered that one of our friends was cheating on his wife, she stated that if I ever did that to her, she would drop me like a hot potato and take me for everything I'm worth. I don't want June's offer to end our marriage or destroy the friendship we have with Bill.

My wife goes on a lot of overnight trips for work, so I'm sure that June and I could get together without her finding out. But I do not want to go behind her back. What do you suggest? — Confused Husband

Dear Confused: You cannot guarantee that your wife will not find out, and the worry and guilt would eat at

you. Please don't do this. Instead, have a frank discussion with your wife. Tell her that the lack of intimacy has been difficult for you and that you've had an offer for a commitment-free affair. (Do not mention June's name.) Ask her how she would feel about this. If she agrees, the rest is up to you, although sleeping with a close friend is likely to lead to all kinds of trouble.

Of course, your wife may be appalled at the suggestion, so your next step is to ask whether the two of you can do something else to regain intimacy. Ask her to discuss this with her doctor or come with you for counseling. Do whatever you can to repair the things that need fixing within your marriage before you start looking for "solutions" that could destroy it.

Dear Annie: This is in response to "Morose Mom," whose children keep borrowing money and never pay it back. Your advice was spot on.

One of our sons is like that. It was a continual cycle of borrowing money, even though he has a well-paying job. No loan was paid back. Since he also has children, we were reluctant to say "not another dime" for fear of getting locked out of our grandchildren's lives.

One day, we decided that a financial counselor would be the answer. We selected one who understood both the problem and the fact she would most likely not be successful. We agreed ahead of time that if my son "bailed," we would be responsible for any unpaid fees. We then contacted our son and gave him the counselor's contact information with the ultimatum that there would be no more loans unless he met with the counselor and followed her financial program.

After a couple of months, the counselor billed us for the unpaid balance and said my son indicated he could not work within the terms of her findings. But it's been five years with no further requests for money and, amazingly, we still have a good relationship with our son. — Relieved Mom and Dad

Your Birthday

FRIDAY, June 3, 2016

Keep your plans and personal information a secret if you want to avoid interference. Keep your feelings tucked away and your sights set on a better future. Don't let negative people from your past re-enter your life.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Dig deep and ask questions. Someone will withhold information that you will need to know before making a decision. Deception is apparent. Take good care of your health. Avoid excess.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Use your emotional energy to do something creative. A challenge will spur you to participate in something you've never done before. An unexpected change at home will turn out to be beneficial.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — An emotional situation will get in the way of your productivity. Don't be afraid to make changes if it will help you reach your goal. Ask someone reliable to pitch in and help.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — It's a good day to address bothersome issues. An intelligent approach will put you in a good position to make a beneficial decision.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — Put greater emphasis on improving your health and visiting places that will ease your stress and help you make positive physical changes. Romance is on the rise and will improve your attitude.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — Your desire to do things differently will be met with some opposition if your plans are too costly. An emotional situation will develop if someone feels left out or neglected.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — Put more muscle into your work and stay focused until you finish what you start. Don't let anyone sidetrack you or tempt you with indulgent outings. Personal relationships will lack honesty.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Make plans to spend time with youngsters or friends who enjoy the same physical activities as you. An intelligent move will help you cut costs.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — Take on projects that will improve your environment or add to your home entertainment options. Romance will lead to a promise that is likely to lack substance. Get what you want in writing.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — Look over your personal papers and make some adjustments that will help you avoid financial stress. Don't feel bad about saying no to someone who is being unreasonable.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Your ability to adapt and move from one thing to another will impress the people you deal with today. Someone who is jealous of you will go behind your back.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — You'll capture attention with your insight, attention to detail and practicality. A short trip will help you expand your interests and push you in a direction that will lead to a positive gain.

SATURDAY, JUNE 4, 2016

It's time to size up your situation and make positive decisions. Don't let anyone dictate how you should be living your life. It's up to you to make the changes that suit you. With a little common sense and discipline, much can be accomplished.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Don't trust what people tell you. Go to the source and find out what you need to know firsthand before you make a decision or take action. Personal improvements should take top priority.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Host a gathering or ask for favors that will help you bring about positive changes to your living quarters. Collaborate with someone as passionate as you are.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — Generosity will draw attention. Before you make promises, you are best off discussing your plans with anyone who will be affected by your offerings. Charity begins at home, and loved ones should come first.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Don't make a fuss or place demands on anyone. Do something that will help you uncover information that can help you get ahead. Don't let a needy and demanding someone stand in your way.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — Trying something new or heading to a destination you've never visited before will make your day. If you add a little romance into the mix, you will improve your personal life.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) — Good fortune is within reach, but only if you do things differently. It's your unique nature that will separate you from anyone who challenges you mentally or physically.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) — Be very cautious when dealing with friends, loved ones or anyone trying to pry into your affairs. Problems will arise that can result in emotional and physical setbacks.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Express your ideas in order to drum up all the help you need to make your dreams come true. A change you make in your personal life will result in extra cash.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) — Don't let anger get the better of you. Look for the upside in everything you do and strive to turn negatives into positives. Romance should be a priority.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) — Travel, disagreements and trying to please everyone will have an adverse effect on your day. Concentrate on creative projects and taking care of your needs.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — Live in the moment. Do things that will make a difference in your life and will leave you feeling mentally, spiritually or physically accomplished.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Mingle, participate and expand your interests and friendships. It's important to keep busy, but also to include the ones you love in your plans. Don't let someone from your past disrupt your life.
