

THIRD TWO-DAY DOLLAR DAY SALE WILL BE LAUNCHED BY NORTH END MERCHANTS, NOVEMBER 17-18, NEXT

Expected That Black-and-Red Official Dollar Sign of Business Men's Association Will Appear in Windows of Every Leading Shop—Sales Should Surpass Anything of Kind Previously Attempted—Record-Breaking Bargains Anticipated.

All arrangements for the third series of North End Dollar Days have been concluded. Final plans were laid down at a meeting of the Better Business Committee of the Business Men's Association, held last night. This committee consists of Messrs. J. Connolly, D. W. McCaughey, and L. H. Oumet, with L. Shapland, chairman. All are prominent North End business men. The same insignia will be used as marked the two previous series. This consists of the huge black or dark blue dollar sign, coupled with the official red seal of the Business Men's Association, and efforts will be made to have it displayed in every shop in the North End. The sales open on Friday, November 17th at 9 a.m. and close on Saturday night, November 18th. They have proved such tremendous successes that they will in all likelihood be perpetuated as permanent and fixed features.

These sales serve a manifold purpose. They bring the North End merchant and the public at large into closer contact, usually to the pronounced advantage of both. They afford an opportunity for inspection of merchandise in the stores, which is always interesting and oftentimes very enlightening. And they open the way for the economy-minded shopper to stock up on needed articles at prices which are in many cases almost unbelievable. As an instance of what happens during the sales, it will be recalled by womenfolk fortunate enough to secure them, that one merchant disposed of four hundred skirts singly at a price twelve cents lower than what it cost him to buy the four hundred lot, that another put out a hundred dollars' worth of goods, especially ordered for the occasion, at exactly cost price; and that a third offered a wide assortment of men's and women's shoes, for one dollar, the original selling price of which was in some cases as high as ten!

It is felt that the coming sales will fully live up to the high standard already established. So that they should be well worth waiting for.

North Branch Y Club

The North Branch High School Club with Lorne Tracy and John Hodgson, graduates of Strathcona Academy and Montreal High School respectively, as co-chairman, and Mr. I. R. Carlin of the Royal Bank, as advisor, has been one of the most active clubs in the north end this fall. The program for their weekly meetings has been in the form of Friday evening suppers with talks following by business and professional men. The talks have been of the vocational guidance nature, aiming to give the boys a clearer idea of the various types of work, and the educational background and training necessary for the various vocations.

Mr. Carlin addressed the first meeting on the subject, "You want a job. What does the employer want?" At the second meeting Mr. Harry Wormald spoke on the values of Hobbies, and indicated a number of men in these times had turned a hobby into a means of livelihood. On Oct. 20th, Mr. F. T. Parker, Canadian Industries Ltd., was the guest speaker. He pointed out some of the problems and work confronting the Traffic Manager.

The following week Mr. Eldon Wegg, Lawson Lithographing Co., told of the different types of work in the lithographing business. On Mr. Wegg's invitation a number of the boys are to visit the Lawson plant in the near future.

The speaker last week was Mr. Chesley, of the Stevenson and Scott Advertising Agency, and one of the new members of the North Branch Board. In his talk Mr. Chesley outlined the different jobs of the advertising business, indicated those most remunerative, and advised the boys of the education and training necessary for each particular division of the work.

NOTICE

Reports at hand would indicate that cases exist where in wood is being sold to householders for heating purposes by unscrupulous peddlers at what appear on the surface to be extremely low prices. Consultation with responsible dealers would indicate that that these prices are impossible of maintenance without reduction in either quality or quantity. The public is, therefore, warned to closely inspect all such offerings.

ST. MICHAELS DIVISION CHARITIES CAMPAIGN

The meeting last Monday of the Men and women workers for the collection of subscriptions to Catholic Charities, was very largely attended. The large Hall in the Lube Galleries Memorial school, being filled with a large crowd of St. Michael's people. The Chairman of the drive, Mr. James A. Sage, introduced the various speakers, whose warm reception by those present was a compliment to their ability as pleaders for unity of effort, and salesmanship in gathering funds to carry on the work of charity. The opening remarks by the Pastor, Rev. F. J. Singleton, clearly pointed out to all in the hall that the absolute necessity of raising funds to carry on the work of the many agencies of Catholic Federation, was more pronounced than even last year, as he was in close touch with hundreds of cases of actual need amongst the families in the Parish, and what would become of these women and children, if through lack of support, the agencies of help were to close down, was hard to say.

Other speakers stressed the many points of value in community effort, and the absolute dependence of the less fortunate on the good-will and practical aid of those who have not suffered through loss of employment, and the call went forth to ring every door bell in the Division, and solicit help in a full measure, from those who can easily give, and on whose door-steps rests the responsibility of aiding in every way the distressed of these unheard of times. Amongst the guest speakers were Mrs. L. N. Panneton, Chairman Womens Parish Divisions, Mrs. F. J. McAlpine, F. C. Hogan, Fred Stoeckel, J. C. Laffoley, W. Tigh, B. C. Fitzgerald and R. E. Meagher, Chairman of all the men's Parish divisions, the latter speaker giving an able exposition on the attitude of the average man to the needs of his fellowman, and rounding out an inspiring evening by the expression of unbounded confidence in the results of the drive amongst a people noted for their generosity to the less fortunate.

FAIRMOUNT-ST. GILES CHURCH NOTES

Two services of tender and unusual interest have been arranged for next Sunday, Nov. 12th.

At 11 a.m. An "Armistice Service" to commemorate the courage and sacrifice of those who gave themselves in the World War will be conducted by the minister, Rev. Burton Robinson. Both sermon and music will be appropriate to the occasion, and it is expected that a trumpeter will be present to close the service with the Last Post and Reveille.

At 7.30 p.m. The Minister will conduct a "French-Canadian Service" (bilingual) and will be assisted by Rev. H. Joliat, a French pastor of marked graciousness of character and eloquence of utterance. The church choir will be assisted by a quartette of French young ladies who will render sacred numbers in both French and English.

Both services last Sunday were splendidly attended and the morning address by Rev. James Endicott, secretary of Foreign Missions for the United Church will be long remembered as one of the very finest summaries of the present day missionary situations.

The Mission Circle of the Church met at 4.15 p.m. and listened to a most interesting address by Mrs. Burton H. Robinson on the "Life of Frances Willard."

The M. and M. Banquet for the Montreal Northern District was attended by approximately 140 office bearers of the co-operating churches and heard a splendidly informing address by Rev. Denzil Ridout of Toronto on "The Non Anglo-Saxon of the Prairies". This address was illustrated by beautifully coloured slides. The banquet was served most capably by the Mission Circle under the direction of Mrs. Dorothy Flower.

Mr. W. R. Leroux and his "White and Black Minstrels" are busily preparing for a series of concerts to be given early in December—and Miss Kitty Blackwell has started practice for a Sunday School play at the Christmas season.

Dunlop Road Race Postponed Until Saturday November 18

The five-mile Dunlop Road Race for the championship of the province has definitely been postponed from Nov. 11 until Saturday, Nov. 18 at 3.15 p.m.

This gruelling race has always been held on Armistice Day, but this year special consideration for some of the teams entered has caused a postponement of the race for a week.

McGill University has entered his request has been granted and the teams in this race since 1925 and by race this year will be held on Nov. 18, at 3.15 p.m., with a large entry from the various clubs.

Teams expected are: McGill University, 2 teams; M.A.A.A., Royal Rovers, Couers Joyeux, Whippets A.A.A., N.A.A.A., and possibly the C.P. R.A.A.A. as well as a few individual entries.

A new trophy—a silver shield—has been donated by the Dunlop Rubber and Tire Co., and to this has been added individual prizes for the first three finishing this five mile race, and six other individual prizes to those members of the winning team.

As everyone knows, each competitor runs his own race, but the trophy goes to the winning team. Each team consists of 6 runners and the first four of that team to cross the finish line add up that team's total. The team with the lowest score wins.

This year an unfortunate thing occurred when the Intercollegiate Cross Country Race was scheduled for Nov. 11, and as is only natural, McGill Harrier Club wanted to, but could not compete in both the Dunlop and the Intercollegiate on the same day.

Last week a letter was received from Mr. Van Wagner, coach of the McGill team, requesting a postponement of the race, if possible, from Nov. 11 until Nov. 18, in order to allow his teams to again compete for the new trophy.

In view of all the circumstances, his request has been granted and the race this year will be held on Nov. 18, at 3.15 p.m., with a large entry from the various clubs.

Teams expected are: McGill University, 2 teams; M.A.A.A., Royal Rovers, Couers Joyeux, Whippets A.A.A., N.A.A.A., and possibly the C.P. R.A.A.A. as well as a few individual entries.

Screen Testing Camera Lies -- And Often Too

Any Number of Stars of Today Had to Take More Than One Screen Test Before Getting Big Chance—Ruth Chatterton's Test Lay On a Shelf; Arliss' Was Destroyed.

By Carlisle Jones

"For many are called but few are chosen."

In Hollywood they paraphrase the words of St. Matthew and say: "Many are tested but few are picked."

And not infrequently the "few" whom the public finally pick have been tested and discarded once or twice or half a dozen times before they finally gained entrance to the ranks of the film great.

It was that way with Joe E. Brown. Recently he confessed that he was tested for silent pictures years before he made his first appearance on the screen and that the results were so unsatisfactory that he hasn't had a report even yet.

Joe was working in musical comedies in New York at the time. Later, when he was in Los Angeles with a musical show and anxious to get his chance at pictures, he was tested at almost every major studio. Many of those tests are stored away in film vaults, yet, no doubt, but only two of them brought nibbles to Joe. Out of the nibbles that did come, however, he has built his successful career.

Ruth Chatterton made her first test for a Hollywood studio under protest, and it was coolly received by officials there. Emil Jannings is credited with having recognized the screen ability of Miss Chatterton in that test. Except for Jannings and his instance that she play her first screen role opposite him, the "first lady" of the screen would probably have returned to the stage permanently.

Ruby Keeler made at least five different tests for at least five different producers. She believes she made more than that. At least she made so many that she has forgotten some of them. Not one of these tests brought her a definite offer except the last one—and that offer came from Warner Brothers as the result of a test made for a rival company. Warner had tests of their own of Ruby—but hadn't hired her as a result of them.

George Brent gets red under the collar every time tests are mentioned to him. He claims that during his first six months in Hollywood he made tests for at least thirty different parts and didn't get any of those parts. He got a few other parts, but not the roles he was tested in.

"They don't test your face and your voice," he declares, "they test your nerves and your temper. Screen tests are a hangover from the Spanish Inquisition."

Brent was so incensed over his lack of luck with tests that he refused at first to make another one when his agent told him one had been arranged at the First National Studios. He finally consented, however. That test he made with Ruth Chatterton reading lines to him—and it led directly to his Warner Brothers contract and his marriage to the lady who read the lines.

It is not generally known that Al Jolson got part way through a silent picture, a number of years before he made "The Jazz Singer," saw himself on the screen and bought back his contract and the partially completed film. Barbara Stanwyck's early tests, both in New York and Hollywood were considered so lacking in promise that she waited in the film city for months without receiving a single worthwhile offer.

Edward G. Robinson made his bow in pictures a good many years before the eventual release of "Little Caesar." He played with Richard Barthelmess and William Powell in "The Bright Shawl" and was then so completely forgotten by producers that he returned to the stage for several years without thought of turning eventually to pictures.

Bette Davis shared the experience George Brent had in Hollywood.

"I was tested for dozens of roles and with half a dozen different make-ups," she recalls. "They shook their heads after each test and declared I lacked this or that. Most often it was sex-appeal, they said I didn't have."

"We have trouble like that with Slim Summerville," someone explained, and I was called "Slim" for months after that. Her final test—just before her planned return to New York—was made for the benefit of George Arliss—who liked her and her test and asked for Bette in a supporting role in "The Man Who Played God."

Probably a million feet of film a year is used for screen tests. Much of it is wasted but the few thousand feet of film that impress producers favorably mean fortunes to the lucky ones tested and profits to the testers. As long as it pays the screen test will be continued. It is true, however, that very few of the present day stars in pictures were chosen as a result of their first screen test.

Somewhere in the film archives of Hollywood was placed the first test George Arliss made. It was unsatisfactory to everybody, particularly Mr. Arliss. He would probably like to know that it is destroyed.

Exhibition Completes Zoological Display

The above pictures, just received in Canada, were taken by the Cambridge Zoological Expedition which has just completed a five months' journey to East Greenland. The object of the expedition was to study the land and fresh water animals in the country around Hurray Inlet, a subsidiary fjord, where the vegetation is said to be the richest in East Greenland. The main picture shows a view of the Stor Brae, one of the great glaciers debouching into the sea on the Bloesville Coast, while the lower picture records an interesting event in the life of a polar bear. The mother is giving her cubs a swimming lesson after rolling them in the black mud of a bog. Although one of the little fellows tried to climb on her back when he became tired, she refused to help him. Inset is a picture of the vessel "Porquoi Pas" which took the expedition to Greenland.

Bathroom Reflections

By R. A. SLEIGH

"The trouble with you," said the doctor, reaching for his hat, "is that you need bracing up. Exercise—that's what you want."

"Exercise, doctor?" I faltered. "Exercise," he repeated, firmly, "and try taking a cold bath every morning."

"A cold bath, doctor?" "Every morning. It's the finest thing in the world for you in your condition. Good-morning!"

And the heartless which went out, Angela and I looked at each other as the door closed behind him. "Poor darling!" Angela murmured. "What do you mean—poor darling?" I said testily.

"Why, you know you hate cold water. That time at the beach—" "Rubbish! I simply didn't care to be seen in that silly little bathing suit, that was all. Besides, the beach was full of stones."

"Well, never mind," Angela waived the point gracefully. "Are you going to?"

"Am I going to what?" "Why, take a cold bath every morning." "The fellow ought to know what he's talking about. I shall start tomorrow morning."

"You'll never keep it up, you know." "That's the trouble with Angela. She thinks nobody has a will of their own. Just because of that time at Atlantic City four summers ago her idea that I am scared of cold water. And to be quite frank, I never have thought much of the business."

How can people take a delight in shivering, at some hideously objectionable hour of the morning, in icy water is a thing I've never been able to understand. But I wasn't going to let Angela know that.

"Of course I will keep it up," I said, stiffly. "Well, I'll just bet you a quarter you don't," she countered, unexpectedly.

No-self respecting individual could back down now. To do so would have been to admit that Angela was, as usual, right.

"All right," I said, airily, "I'll bet you I do. I'll keep it up for—My heart suddenly went back on me. "Well, let's say just for three mornings."

"Done!" said Angela, promptly. Sharp at seven next morning I felt her elbow at work in my ribs. I opened one sleepy eye.

"Come on, lazybones," she exclaimed. "Time for your tub."

I muttered drowsily that it was early yet, and closed my eyes once again. Angela nudged me once more. "Come along. Get up—or pay up." Smothering a groan, I put my nose outside the blankets. The room was freezing cold. It was one of those chilly mornings when even the most hardened tubber would hesitate, I felt sure. I gave a sepulchral cough—the kind of a cough that should inspire sympathy in any ordinary woman's breast—and snuggled down again.

But Angela isn't an ordinary woman.

"Shicker!" she jeered, prodding me a third time, "I knew you'd never do

"I believe," I declared, with sudden suspicion, "that I've got a chill coming on. Was that window open all night?"

"It's never anything else, and you know it. Are you going to get out of bed?"

"I think I'll—er—start tomorrow instead," I said, weakly, "I need some extra rest—we were up late last night, you know."

"I do believe you're afraid of it," she accused.

"Nonsense!" I answered, with dignity. "It's just that I'm tired, that's all."

And I pulled the bedclothes over my head. Angela promptly pulled them off again.

"You're nothing but a great humbug! I dare you to get up and take a cold bath this instant, you coward!"

I suddenly realized what an extremely poor show I was putting up. After all, a man must preserve a little dignity.

"All right," I said, throwing back the clothes, "I'm tired, and I've got a chill. If I catch pneumonia and die, you'll be to blame. But I won't refuse a dare."

And I talked off to the bathroom determinedly.

"There!" I said, when I returned ten minutes later, "Perhaps that will satisfy you. But if anything happens—"

Angela looked at me suspiciously. Then she went deliberately to the bathroom door—which had carefully closed—opened it, and peeped inside. There was an ominous silence. Then she came back, and tried to catch my eye.

"Well, you wash-out!" she said, guardedly.

"Pay me that quarter, you fraud. You've forgotten something."

"What have I forgotten?" "Why, the mirror. Just go and look at it."

I went. Then I came back and handed over the quarter!

I have decided to ignore the doctor's advice—at least, until somebody can manufacture a bathroom mirror that doesn't get all steamed over when a man takes a hot bath!

OBERAMMERGAU PASSION PLAY

Preparations Already on Foot for Accommodation of Canadian Visitors

"Canadians who travel to Europe in 1934 will have, in addition to the usual attractions, still another thrill in store for them, and that is witnessing the famous Passion Play enacted in the Bavarian village of Oberammergau. It is only given to the world to see this inspiring spectacle once every decade, but performances will be given in 1934 because it is the 300th anniversary of the first Oberammergau Passion Play, perpetuating a vow made by the forbears of the villagers in 1633."

Last time the great drama was portrayed in this historic European Village was in 1930.

It is customary for visitors to spend two nights in Oberammergau, so that they may enter into the spirit of the presentation; at least one overnight stay is obligatory. There are several inns in the village, but the larger number of visitors stay in the homes of the townsfolk which are thrown open for their accommodation.

Because the Passion Play is regarded as a religious ceremony rather than a money-making project, the prices for the tickets and lodging are very moderate.

Twenty-eight performances in all will be given next summer, on these dates: May 27, June 3, 11, 17 and 25, July 1, 4, 8, 11, 15, 18, 22, 25 and 29; August 1, 5, 8, 12, 19, 22, 26 and 29, and September 3, 5, 10, 12 and 15. Itineraries of Europe which include a visit to Oberammergau and attendance at the Play will be included in European Itineraries for 1934.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS

The Gift of Time
On past days refuse to ponder,
But this day, just breaking yonder,
you have still.
Seize it, then, and closely hold it,
Take it in your hands and mould it
To your will.

Other days? You may repent them
And the deeds that folly lent them.
But today
Is the gift of time, untarnished,
Keep it spotless, keep it garnished
While you may.

Pour into each golden hour
All your wisdom, all your power,
Till day's close.
So its happiness may linger
Like song's echoes, when the singer
Onward goes!

Canape and Hors d'Oeuvres Recipes

Several Practical Suggestions You May Use When You Plan To Entertain

Modern hostesses—lending serious thought to the subject of weight control—are gradually turning from sweet and rich party foods and are substituting simple, savory snacks.

Cocktails and canapes are increasing in popularity. They are attractive in appearance, appetizing in flavor, and make entertaining much easier.

Fruit cocktails that are to be used to open the party luncheon or dinner should be tart rather than sweet; vegetable cocktails should possess distinctive flavor. Both should be served ice-cold.

Canapes are infinite in their variety. The base is usually a small slice of bread cut in fancy shape, lightly fried in hot fat, then spread with an appetizing mixture. This spread may be one of the fish pastes, any kind of fish salad, a bit of smoked salmon or some chopped, crisp bacon mixed with relish. The canape may be garnished with olive slices, or a border of chopped egg white and a centre of yolk pressed through a fine sieve. Beet rosettes, pimiento tulips with stem of green pepper, or a fine piping of well-seasoned cream cheese add to the flavor and attractiveness of the canape.

Here are several suggestions that may be of use when you plan to entertain.

Three Melon Cocktail

¾ cup balls or cubes of cantaloupe

(salmon flesh).
¾ cup balls or cubes of honeydew melon.
½ cup balls or cubes of water-melon

1-3 cup sugar
Juice of 1 lemon

Dissolve the sugar in the water, add the lemon juice and combine with the melon. Chill several hours and serve in sherbet glasses.

Grape-Grapefruit Cocktail
½ cup grape juice.

2½ cupfuls grapefruit sections
¾ cup powdered sugar
Mix together and let stand in a cold place for 12 hours. Serves 8.

Amber Cocktail

1 tin grapefruit
1 tablespoon pineapple juice
2 slices canned pineapple
1 tablespoon juice from maraschino cherries.

Sugar
Green grapes

Mix grapefruit, diced pineapple, pineapple juice and maraschino syrup together in a basin. Sprinkle with sugar. Divide between individual glasses. Chill. Garnish with preserved green grapes.

Easy Hors D'Oeuvres

Use pate de fois gras as it is, or caviar seasoned with lemon juice, or chopped hard-cooked eggs, shellfish, or cooked rice mixed with mayonnaise dressing. Serve on toast or in the new tiny canape wafers, or in a heart of lettuce or a celery stalk or in cucumber slices one inch thick, from which the centre has been removed.

Dill pickles, shaped like boats and hollowed out in the centre, hard-cooked eggs cut in halves and the yolks removed, or pimiento cups may also be used. Arrange on a tray with sprays of watercress. Garnish with anchovy fillets, tiny Dutch onions, olives or tiny pickled artichokes.

Fruit Cocktails May Be Tart Rather Than Sweet—All Easy To Prepare

Tomato-Anchovy Canape

Toast a slice of bread one-fourth inch thick, on one side, and spread the untoasted side with creamed butter seasoned with anchovy paste. Cover each with one-third slice of tomato. Spread with mayonnaise, sprinkle with the yolk of a hard-cooked egg forced through a potato ricer or sieve, and with the white of egg finely chopped. Garnish the eggs with a ring cut from green pepper, and centre with a piece of olive and a sprig of parsley.

New York Canape

Divide caviar canapes ¾ inches long by 1½ inches wide diagonally into three sections. Sprinkle centre with finely chopped cucumber pickles and the ends with finely chopped sweet red pepper.

Rolls For Dinner Make Hubby Happy

By Katherine Baker

Rolls, fresh from the home oven, are a novelty these days, days of efficient bakery service, but they are very nice for a change. Chilly evenings suggest steaming dishes, and fragrant breads. Quick breads are not difficult to make, and may be baked in the oven when the meat is roasting.

One of the most attractive quick breads is pocketbook rolls. They are called pocketbook not only because they are small, dainty affairs, but because they are very easy on that money bag. They are easily made from the tested recipe given here.

2 cups sifted cake flour
½ teaspoon salt
2 teaspoons baking powder
1 tablespoon shortening
¾ cup milk (about)

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift again. Cut in shortening. Add milk gradually until soft dough is formed. Knead lightly two to three minutes. Roll ¼ inch thick on slightly floured board. Cut with 2 inch floured cutter. Fold double and press edges together lightly. Place in greased pan; brush tops with melted butter. Cover and let rise in warm place 20 minutes and choose a warm place without draughts. Bake in hot oven (425F.) 10 minutes. Again brush tops with melted butter and finish baking. Remove from oven. Brush tops again with melted butter. Makes 16 delicious rolls.

Parker House Rolls
These rolls, although made with yeast, do not need to stand overnight and they are very popular for luncheon, dinner, or late supper party with all sorts of interesting stuffings.

1 tablespoon sugar
¾ cups sifted cake flour (about)
¾ teaspoon salt
1 cup milk, scalded
1 cake compressed yeast
1 tablespoon soft butter

Add sugar to milk, cool to lukewarm, add yeast and stir until smooth. Add one half the flour then salt and butter, beating well. Add remaining flour, enough to make as soft a dough as can be handled. Knead gently until smooth. Place in greased bowl, cover, and let rise in warm place, away from draughts, until double in bulk. Roll one third of an inch thick. Cut with floured cutter 1 to 2½ inch circles and brush with melted butter. Mark through centre and fold over. Brush with butter. Place in greased pan and let rise again until double in bulk. Bake in hot oven (400 F) 25 minutes or until done. Makes 12 rolls.

MONTREAL, FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 10, 1933

ARMISTICE DAY

Saturday is Armistice Day; on that day, fifteen years ago, the most destructive war in the world's history was brought to a close. The lessons it taught were: (1) nobody wins in modern warfare. The terrible disruption in world economies today is due to two factors resulting from the war—destruction of untold material and human wealth, and development of a so-called spirit of "patriotism" which in reality is nothing but a selfish, narrow, destructive spirit of nationalism. (2) Heavy armaments do not guarantee security (the world is slow in taking this lesson to heart). There are encouraging signs, however, and it may be that in spite of the incurable jealousies, hatreds and suspicions of continental Europe, we are on the threshold of a long if not permanent era of peace. The encouraging signs are the growing evidences of the great Anglo-Saxon nations of the world to keep outside Europe's troubles at all costs. The people of Britain and the United States, determined for peace, could practically guarantee the peace of the world. Only adequate defensive armaments are necessary (about half the strength required for offensive warfare). Without financial or other assistance from these two great countries, no nation in the world could endure long warfare, and after the sad experiences of the last war neither will be disposed to lend money or materials for purposes of war. Most of us will observe tomorrow, not in a spirit of militarism, but in fond remembrance of those loved ones who gave their lives that our country might work out its destiny free from foreign domination or interference. Our troubles today are many; more than one-tenth of our brother and sister Canadians are dependent on public charity for their food because in our land there is the absurdity of too much of everything that makes life possible; many of those who risked their lives for our country fifteen years ago, now find it difficult even to get enough to feed their children. We are living in a strange world, but we can be thankful that great changes are coming, and as these are in part at least the consequence of the war, it may be that our sacrifices of 1914-1918 will not have been in vain.

The attempt to have inflation without giving it that name does not change the proceeding in the least—except that it mollifies timid minds.

Medical experts studying the portrait of Henry VIII, have decided that he was afflicted with a progressive disease of the thyroid gland which accounts for his suspicious and ruthless nature. But diagnosing a case from a portrait is a bit risky since some of the apparent symptoms may be due to the painter, not the patient.

LESSONS OF THE ELECTIONS

With another provincial election completed, and British Columbia endorsing overwhelmingly the choice of the electors in Nova Scotia, Madawaska-Restigouche, Yamaska and Mackenzie for a Liberal administration, the coming session of parliament will be anything but pleasant for the Bennett administration. Beaten five times in a row at the polls, assailed by a large proportion of both the Canadian and British press, Mr. Bennett is going to find the task of government extremely difficult, and the public interest is certain to suffer. Needed legislation is certain to be delayed or thrown out altogether, but the attitude of the opposition may be excused on the grounds that recent election results indicate a strong public desire for defeat of the present ministry. The Financial Post of Toronto lists the following five outstanding conclusions of the recent elections in all parts of the country: "(1) National government is now conceded to be impossible. Nobody with the slightest grasp of public affairs now believes there is the remotest chance of fusing federal parties. (2) The ambitions of the C.C.F. have received almost a death blow. The menace of the third party has temporarily vanished. (3) The task of government so far as the present administration is concerned has been made more difficult and in this respect the public interest can scarcely fail to suffer. (4) The alternative to the present government is clearly revealed as... a Liberal administration. (5) The Liberal opposition has received a public mandate to exercise its critical faculties without stint, and hereafter Parliament will be ridden by party strife. The scarcely limited opportunities afforded by our parliamentary system to badger, embarrass, harass a government will be exploited to the limit, thus discouraging the government from essaying necessary legislative programmes."

A committee has been formed in London with the purpose of representing in Parliament the interest of pedestrians. It would seem, however, that many motorists are willing to give a pedestrian a boost.

The university of these days is a living place. Dr. Harry W. Chase, chancellor of the New York university, says: "The campus is no longer a cloister nor is the university any more a retreat from the world. It is in the world and of the world."

Another evidence of a century of progress: Cartagena, Colombia, where buccaneers docked occasionally a little more than a hundred years ago, is spending $3,000,000 to modernize its port.

Now that a device has been invented which automatically shuts the radio off when the telephone receiver is lifted, perhaps the telephone company can look for a marked upturn in business.

"Over the River," the last Galsworthy book to appear, contains an interesting definition of the gold standard: "It's what you want to be on when you're off, and to be off when you're on."

And did you notice the published pictures a few weeks ago of those representatives of Germany who walked out of the Geneva Disarmament Conference. They seemed nearly all to have been German generals and admirals!

"LAW AND JUSTICE"

By LYON W. JACOBS, K.C.

One who acts as a mere conduit pipe for making bets between a bookmaker and his customers — though the one who so acts has no pecuniary interest in the transactions—may be guilty of using the premises where he is employed for the purpose of betting with persons resorting thereto. It has been held that an archway in a street habitually resorted to by a bookmaker for the purpose of betting with all comers upon certain events relating to horse-races is a "place" within the English Betting Act.

In order to constitute a "place" within the meaning of the English Betting Act, there must be a definite localization of the business or betting. It is a question of fact whether there is a user of a place analogous to that of an occupier occupying a place at which he is prepared to bet with persons who come there to bet with him.

Where a bookmaker uses a box or a stool with his name or other words upon it, not merely to indicate that he is a betting man prepared to bet, but to indicate that he is using the place for carrying on his business at which persons may find him, there is a definite localization of the business of betting, and he is thus using a "place" within the meaning of the Betting Act.

A police constable (acting under instructions), went into a bookmaker's house and there made a bet with him of two shillings on a horse race. He gave, to the bookmaker, the money and a piece of paper on which was written the amount and the name of the horse: Held not sufficient evidence to justify conviction under the English Betting Houses Act, 1853—the mere fact of a bookmaker making one bet in a house in which he resided not being enough to attach to the house the character of a betting establishment.

It has been held, by the Supreme Court of Canada, that a moveable booth used on the race-course of an incorporated racing association for the purpose of making bets is an "office" or "place" used for betting between persons resorting thereto and the keeper thereof, and that the bookmaker using it is properly convicted of keeping a common betting-house, as defined in section 227, and that sub-section 2 of section 235, post—which exempts (from the provisions of the main section) bets made on the race-course of an incorporated association—does not apply to the offence of keeping a common betting-house.

It has been since held, by the Ontario Court of Appeal, that bookmakers who conduct betting operations with the public, upon horse races, at the race-course of an incorporated racing association, and who, in doing so, move around with the public and have no exclusive rights to any portion of the grounds, nor any booth, tent, stand, or other fixed place of business, are not there-by guilty of keeping a common betting-house under sections 227 and 228 of the Code; there being a distinction drawn between this case and the case of R. C. Saunders, in which the bookmakers used a wooden box or booth moved about on castors from one part of the grounds to another during the progress of the race meeting.

WHO IS TO BLAME?

BY
A. CUDDON-WOODTHORPE

Grapho-Analyst
Copyright, 1933

This week I have an answer for one of my correspondents who requests that she be referred to by the pen name MacL. The letter consists of five written pages detailing a great variety of special questions to which answers are desired. It is impossible to deal with them all in the space allotted, but the general condition in which my correspondent finds herself is one that is so frequent that I have chosen to explain the fundamental condition from which most of her troubles arise, either directly or indirectly.

Knowledge of the theory is necessary in order to understand the basic trouble, but the trouble itself is not cured by knowledge. It requires personal application and constructive methods of thinking and acting.

If what you say in your letter accurately describes your present condition, Mrs. MacL, then you have become the victim of a psychic conflict resulting from habitual repression. This in itself increases the difficulty of adjusting yourself successfully to your surroundings. I want you to read again very carefully what was said about Twins and Thingumajigs in last week's Monitor.

For thousands and thousands of years, there were few social customs or taboos to inhibit or repress the free expression of the natural instinct and emotions. Then came the time when the needs of a slowly forming community required people to consider the interests of others. With the evolution of a social system, the social self gradually evolved, and the interests of this social self were naturally opposed to the interests of the natural self. The resultant repressions caused the appearance of psychic conflicts in the mind of man.

The natural self aims to satisfy and gratify the natural urges, regardless of the demands of the social self. The social self, on the other hand, as a rule thinks only of the acquired conventions, and represses and suppresses the desires of the natural self that operate in conflict to it. This sums up the mental struggle of the individual in society.

Now, one of the results of this psychic conflict was to compress human nature into two fundamental types of habitual action — those who came to regard the world from within, according to the effect the world had upon them, and those who regarded the world from without, and according to the effects they were able to produce upon the world. The former, called introverts, find happiness or misery only within themselves, the latter, called extroverts find happiness and misery only in the things outside of themselves. Both types are in themselves the result of repression and the psychic conflict.

Because humanity never follows definite lines of demarcation, and is al-al people purely introvert or purely extrovert, but always a mixture of the two. This gives us three general types which we find in practice: the predominantly introvert, the predominantly extrovert and the more or less balanced individual in which both types appear to be fairly well proportioned.

Your writing indicates a predominantly instinctive type of mind, capable of gathering impressions quickly and with a certain amount of initiative and aggressiveness that makes you, to that extent, extrovert. On the other hand you are very prone to analyse and ponder, and have developed a distinct habit of procrastination—a lack of promptness in carrying out many of the things necessary to successful adjustment. There is an element of the introvert here.

On the other hand, your social self or conscious mind recognizes the demands of society, and often feels at variance with the natural self, although instinctively obeying the natural self.

Therefore your emotional energy which lies back of your primitive urges and instincts is not being guided into channels of the highest usefulness. Because you are magnifying your own troubles you take little interest in other people's troubles, and this is consciously or unconsciously affecting everything you do.

Now, apart from those qualities of your natural self that have direct reference to the primitive, there are always some elements of inheritance that exist as the result of recent generations of acquired habit, and, as far as you are concerned, must still be classified as inherited, although not originally part of the natural self, if we were to go back far enough.

These qualities describe the predominant characteristics of your inner self. They are not buried deep down within the field of unconscious mental activity, but they inaping upon the depths of the conscious field, and for practical purposes might be termed subconscious. These qualities in your case are those of order, method, and regular routine. Because of the influence of the social self, and its repressive effect in your case, these qualities remain within you as desires, but do not show themselves definitely enough to affect the life favorably. By concentrating upon them, they could be developed.

Moreover, the mental inharmony occasioned by the psychic conflict would tend to favour the opposite expressions, and your writing shows that to some extent, there is mental disorder, a highly scathing and critical attitude and some narrowness of viewpoint, in other words, shallow thinking.

This proves that you are living out of harmony with the spiritual power.

ADVERTISING LECTURE HELD LAST EVENING

R. L. Burdick Deals With Fundamentals of Copy Writing

THIRD IN SERIES

H. E. Stephenson Was Heard on Monday Night — Another Address Wednesday

Dealing with the fundamentals of copy writing, the third lecture in the series was delivered last night in the Mount Royal Hotel, by R. L. Burdick, account executive of Ronalds Advertising Agency.

The lectures on various phases of advertising, which are being given during November and December are under the auspices of the Advertising Club of Montreal.

In the second address, given on Monday, H. E. Stephenson, secretary-result in physical action are not always in sympathy with the lesson you need most.

This lesson you need most is to acquire an all inclusive love, and a greater breadth of mind, and a larger tolerance. To practice these things will mean to guide your emotional energy into channels of highest usefulness, and the more you succeed in doing this with earnest will and firm determination, the less your psychic conflicts will become, and finally they will lose most, if not all of their power to affect you adversely.

You see, your proper work is humanitarian, dealing on a large scale with many kinds of people. You cannot perform this work at present because you have not learned your lesson, and therefore you appear to be the very opposite of a person who could work successfully in a humanitarian way. Learn your lesson, or you will be missing the best that life has in store for you.

treasurer of A. McKim Limited, gave an analysis of a day's advertising, stressing the merchandising and typographical effect. The thing to do in an advertisement is to look a man in the eye, as you would if you were talking to him face to face, declared Mr. Stephenson.

"Readers are like shy horses, but as we cannot put blinkers on them so as to force them to read the part of our advertisement which contains the vital message, we must concentrate attention upon the important part so that they cannot help seeing it." The speaker pointed out that advertising consisted of "getting your message over," and said that really "selling yourself" constituted the whole business of life. He deplored the apparent careless haste with which many advertisements were written and laid out, as if they matters of minor importance, to be done in the brief intervals between doing really important things.

"Nothing is more important," he declared, "than the advertisements that appear in newspapers."

Mr. Stephenson dealt in detail with various methods of copy writing and lay-out, illustrating his talk with advertising in current issues of local newspapers, and pointing out the bad as well as the good points in each.

R. J. Ambler, honorary president of the Advertising Club of Montreal, was chairman for the occasion, and added a few brief remarks in which he mentioned the four important steps in advertising appeal. First, he said, attention should be caught; then interest should be aroused, confidence inspired, and finally desire created.

The fourth lecture will be a review of the fundamental principles of design and layout by Stan Engel on Monday, November 13th.

Westward Bidding For Intermediate Title In McGill Game

DOUG KERR'S SQUAD SEEK TO BREAK TIE

Triple Tie Again Possible in Big Four—Intercollegiate Also Open Arena of Battle — Wheelers Tackle Argonauts Here — McGill Travel to Toronto, Meet Varsity

Doug Kerr sends his Westward squad into action against McGill on Saturday in the last scheduled Intermediate Q.R.F.U. fixture of the season. If the Maroon forces succeed in their quest for victory, and they are high favourites, another title will have travelled the trail to the west-end grounds. A loss will leave the two teams on even footing, tied at the top of the division with eight points each.

The Rah! Rah! boys are ensconced in the league basement, have failed to win a single tussle. Although their ranks are seriously depleted by injuries, little doubt is entertained as to Westward's ability to trounce McGill. Saturday should find them division champions, ready to meet the winners of the eastern section for the Quebec title and the right to enter competition for Dominion supremacy.

After being tripped by the Railroads last week, Doug Kerr sent his squad through strenuous practice session this week and the men are now engaged in tapering off for the crucial contest ahead.

For the second consecutive week, the Big 4 games are fraught with possibilities, a triple tie being again possible. If Argonauts flash the amazing form that swamped Ottawa, and manage to defeat the Montreal Football Club and Ottawas tame the Tiger, the three teams will be deadlocked in top place with eight points each. On the other hand a Montreal win will settle the league title in favour of the homesters.

Reports from Hamilton indicate that Wheelers didn't measure up with either Ottawa or Argos last week in Tigerville but then they grabbed an early lead and there was little need of putting on pressure. This week Clarry Foran will have his men out fighting hard with plenty at stake.

A battling McGill squad led by the Shaughnessy family of Montreal West, makes its way into the Varsity camp this week as Queen's entertain Western. Like the Big 4, the Intercollegiate is a wide open arena of

Against Law To Solicit "Lift"

"It is senseless and, in some places, unlawful, for any person to stand in the roadway for the purpose of soliciting a ride from any private motor vehicle," says the Province of Quebec Safety League.

There are many persons on the highways in the country districts who try to get motorists to stop and pick them up and in cities and towns many pedestrians, particularly school children, practice this dangerous habit.

As far as the City of Montreal is concerned there is a by-law which says distinctly that this practice is unlawful. But in the Provincial Motor Vehicle Act there is nothing mentioned.

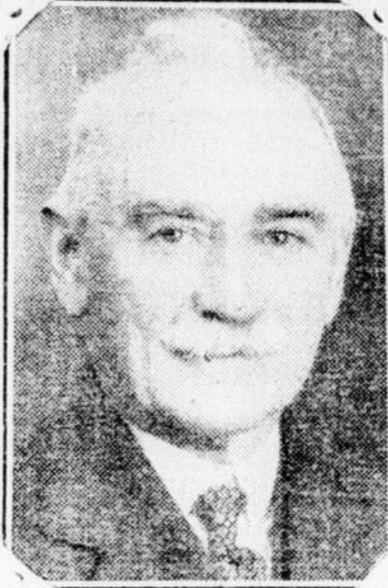

In all cases automobiles must not stop suddenly except in cases where it is necessary to avoid an accident. Secondly automobiles should always pull up at the curb before stopping and common sense suggests that such stops must be signalled by the chauffeur. Then there is a third danger and that is to the person trying to get the auto to stop. This person may get too close to a passing vehicle and may be struck. Again this person standing in the middle of the road may get in the way of another automobile which he has not seen and the driver of which has not seen him. The attention of the drivers of automobiles are drawn from the road by the motions of such ride-seeking persons and a moment's lack of attention may mean an accident.

While there is no law on the country roads the league advises its members whether they be drivers or pedestrians to do their share and put a stop to this dangerous practice.

through the atmosphere last Saturday were a marvel to behold. Shaughnessy swings his boot with the easy rhythm of a pendulum and he's deadly on the placements.

"Remembrance Day"

I stood at attention on Armistice Day And I thought of the years far away I thought of the time we marched down to the ship To embark for our part in the fray.

I thought of the time we went over the top I was so scared that I thought I would yell And when Fritz on our heads a barrage laid down I thought it a section of hell.

I thought of the fellows I knew from back home Who sleep where the Poppies grow tall Who fought a good fight for their country and flag And died with their backs to the wall.

I thought of the dirt and the vermin and stench And I thought how we slept in the muck There's a Field Marshal's baton in every soldier's knapsack But I'm back home driving a truck. T.G.

Clashes With Law

The Duke of Atholl, 62-year-old Scottish warrior and former Lord Chamberlain, who is to appear before a London court on November 10 on a charge of violation of the Lotteries Act. The peer represents one of the greatest families in the British Isles and his summons has created a national sensation.

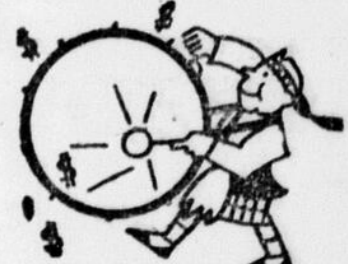

Simplicity, when you come to think of it, is the hall-mark of almost every man who achieves success.—Sir Henri Deterding.
