Crowd can't sway council

Librarian's firing entrenched despite residents' outrage

By LAUREEN SWEENEY

Ignoring protests of about 120 angry citizens Monday night, city council voted unanimously to dismiss Westmount Public Library's chief librarian, Rosemary Lydon, and abolish the position.

University professors, professional librarians and stalwarts of the community packed the council chamber, attacking the plan to merge the library with the department of recreation and culture under one manager to be hired by July 1.

When council refused pleas to reconsider the issue, many walked out to cries of "Shame," "Boo" and "I don't believe it."

Citizens accused the council of acting undemocratically and "in a very dishonourable way."

They said Miss Lydon's abrupt firing was "shabby" and underhanded and the elimination of her position was badly timed. It leaves the library without a chief as it undergoes automation and a $7.5 million expansion.

"It could have a very damaging effect on city council's fundraising efforts bcause it indicates they don't know what they're doing," said Westmount Municipal Association president Stanley Baker after the meeting.

"I feel let down," he said. "They could have at least delayed the decision. The mayor always prided himself on consulting the public. What could have been more of a public consultation than that?"

When citizens accepted the cost of reconstruction, said resident Norma Udy, they didn't know they were building a library without a soul, because the soul is Rosemary Lydon.

"Community trust takes years to build but only one misconstrued action to destroy," said WMA past president Tom Thompson.

He said a library of the calibre of Westmount's deserves to have a chief librarian and should not be blended with another department.

"You have made a judgment to downgrade the library," he said.

Miss Lydon was dismissed Feb. 17 in efforts, city officials said, to reduce management layers in the city administration. She worked for the library 21 years, 10 as its chief. She has until tomorrow to accept a severence package. By Tuesday, it remained unsigned.

"I'm not surprised," she said of

Johnston ruffles Berger's feathers by entering race

By ALISON RAMSEY

David Berger is not amused.

The St. Henri-Westmount MP's good humour is slipping in wake of Don Johnston's decision to contest Mr. Berger's seat at the upcoming Liberal riding convention April 19.

His decision, made while on a walk at his Glen Sutton country home on Sunday, was made public Tuesday afternoon.

Mr. Johnston, 56, no political lightweight, is not only president of the federal Liberal Party, but served as the region's MP for a decade in the 1980s.

"I don't think it makes much sense," commented Mr. Berger, who found out when a media outlet called for his comment. "It's a meshuga (insane) decision."

Mr. Johnston's declaration he will run against an incumbent is as mace in the eyes of leader Jean Chrétien, who has publicly vowed no incumbent will be challenged by Liberal candidates.

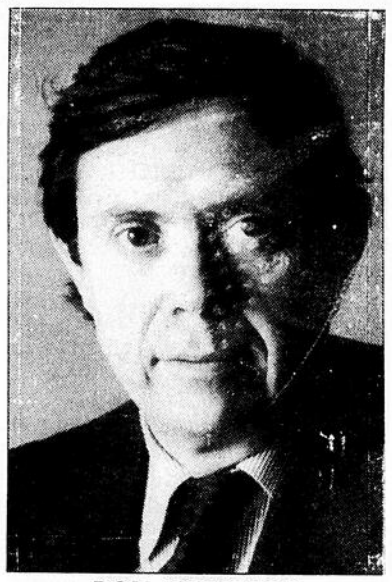

"Someone else would have run" in the riding, said Mr. Johnston. "That prodded me a good deal in being interested in getting back in."

The name Serge Joyal, a former MP and secretary of state in Pierre Trudeau's cabinet, had been bandied about.

Mr. Johnston said he chose his home riding of St. Henri-Westmount after rejecting the possibility of running on the south shore of Nova Scotia, where his wife hails from.

The decision is no harbinger of blind loyalty to the leader, who Mr. Johnston has contested for the leadership. The warmest words Mr. Johnston expressed for Mr. Chrétien during an interview Tuesday was: "I know Jean Chrétien, I've worked with Jean Chrétien, I've travelled with Jean Chrétien... we've suffered victory and defeat together and that's why I support him."

Three weeks ago, Mr. Berger said Mr. Johnston gave his word he would not contest the riding.

DON JOHNSTON
Has thrown hat in the ring for St. Henri-Westmount nomination.

"It was a long discussion," said Mr. Berger. "We discussed several scenarios, the possibility of the third candidates, running in other ridings. We talked about all kinds of damn things. Certainly what I understood is that he wouldn't run against me."

"I remember very clearly saying to him," said Mr. Johnston, "if there's a couple of dissidents, if that's the case, of course I wouldn't run. My information is that's not the case."

When asked what Mr. Johnston can offer constituents that Mr. Berger cannot, he said, "The reason I'm interested in getting back in politics — I was attracted because of fiscal issues."

Mr. Johnston, an independent thinker who broke ranks with then-leader John Turner to criticize the

No fuss on tax due day

THE FIRST installment of Westmount municipal taxes was due Monday but things were substantially quieter here than at Montreal city hall, according to city officials.

"Last year people were very upset with the surtax but this year it wasn't new, so people might have been more prepared," said Gail Cavanagh in accounts payable.

The city received many telephone calls about taxes with the usual gamut of questions ranging from the due date to the possibility of extensions. Last year the due date for the second half of the tax bill was extended to November instead of July. That reprieve — a one-time-only decision to help those hit hard by the surtax — is not in effect this year.

"I got a lot of calls about the surtax with people asking about rebates and extensions, but I had to tell them that there weren't any," said Ms. Cavanagh.

Residential and non-residential property owners who didn't pay on March 1 will find that the entire tax bill has become due immediately with subsequent interest charges.

Johnston's priority is debt

Meech Lake Accord, says the first priority for a new government is reining in the national debt.

Mr. Berger agreed the focus should be on the economy, but said the primary concern is jobs, education and training.

Mr. Johnston argues for an appointed Senate, but says appointment approval should be given by regional committees. He says the Goods and Services Tax message is "confused." It it were replaced, he says, a plan would have to be in place to recoup the tax money it reaps.

"Donald Johnston is a person of considerable ability," says Mr. Berger. "As a friend of mine put it the other day, he's a top-notch guy. The same person said he should run elsewhere... A person could be a very fine person, and be wrong."

Mr. Berger's campaign manager, Claude Longpré, says 1,200 new members have joined the party at the behest of Berger supporters in the past four months. About 400 persons joined in the past week. Mr. Johnston's camp says about 250 members have signed up on his behalf in the past few weeks, about 100 in the past week.

Fifty signed-up members by March 19 are necessary to run, and any potential candidates must declare by April 15.

Rain forest-inspired earrings win Westmounter design award

By ALISON RAMSEY

"I like jewelry that's interesting," says Patricia Viel. "It doesn't have to be something really big. I like things I can play with, things that are changeable."

The 29-year-old Westmounter knows her jewelry. It was announced yesterday that she won the prestigious Diamonds Today award for designing a one-of-a-kind pair of earrings valued at $30,000.

The Henry Birks and Sons employee is riding the high of her first kudo, the Spectrum Award, presented in Tucson Feb. 6. Unfortunately it coincided with the sale of Birks and she was not allowed to attend.

She giggles shyly when interviewed from her St. Catherine Street apartment. It is her first meeting with the press.

Her style is classical

When asked how people would recognize her work at Birks, for whom she has been designing for two years, she said, "My designs are very classical."

Considering the staid nature of Birks, that doesn't much narrow the field.

"I prefer making a line that's very wearable for the career woman of today," she elaborated.

Ms. Viel, who emigrated from Austria, won the Spectrum Award for a black onyx brooch with pink tourmaline stones.

"It looks a little bit like fireworks," she says.

Nature was the theme of the Diamond Today competition, a biennial Canadian contest. Of 200 entries, 20 were selected.

Ms. Viel's winning entry is silver-dollar-sized black onxy earrings with platinum and diamonds. The largest diamonds are 1.15 karats.

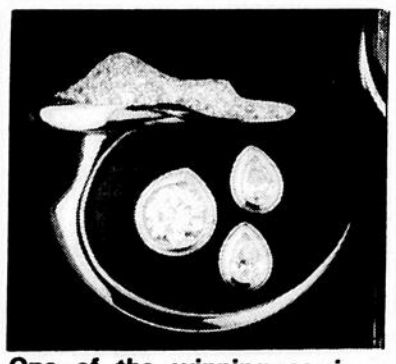

Patricia Viel in her apartment with some of her sculptures — made from two-inch-square lengths of different woods. The designer loves living in Westmount, though she's only been here two years.

"The disc is midnight, the platinum is a tree," and the diamonds are raindrops falling from the tree, she explains.

Ms. Viel uses nature as her muse.

She has worked in wood, plasticine, paint and plaster. Her apartment is full of light and vibrant with colour. Her own paintings are on the walls, her wood sculptures are on the end table.

"I'm interested in every aspect of designing," she says.

Student dies in the Metro

An 18-year-old Dawson College student from Laval des Rapides died Friday when she leaped in front of a Metro train pulling into the Atwater station, police said. The woman was described by friends as being distraught over breaking up with her boyfriend.

A witness who was standing on the platform said the train was about five meters from the platform when the woman, seated on a bench, suddenly dove onto the track.

CITY COUNCIL CLIPS

MNA Holden's $341.53 debt written off

Westmount MNA Richard Holden owes the city $341.53 in unpaid business tax, THE EXAMINER learned yesterday. His name appeared on a list of bad debts totalling $130,500 written off by city council Monday night.

The Holden bill, which dates from 1989, relates to an office at 4631 Sherbrooke St. City officials said they were under the impression it involved his election office. This was located further west, however, near Prince Albert Avenue.

Mr. Holden is not at fault, said city treasurer Luc Ménard. It was an administrative error involving the MUC rental value certificate, he said.

City officials appeared confused when contacted at press time yesterday concerning exact details of the occupancy and circumstances.

But operations manager Bruce St. Louis said the two-year prescription period for business taxes had expired when the bill was sent and the recipient felt it was not legally owed.

"I refuse to spend lawyer's time trying to recover it. However, the city would welcome any cheque that might be forthcoming."

Like the Holden account, the bulk of this year's record-breaking forgiven taxes pertains to $76,000 in business taxes, some dating back to 1988. Others are electricity accounts, in the amount of $36,134, and sundry amounts.

Among the debtors are some of the city's well-known restaurants and shops such as the Ivory Palace, $9,792; Henri Cohen Optician, $4,186; Casa Nostra, $3,330; TCBY, $3,384; Dunkin' Donuts, $963; and the Popular Shop, $117.

Firm sought to hire new manager

Council approved a sum of $20,000 to the recruiting firm of Société Jean Pierre Brisebois to search for a candidate to fill the newly created position of manager of library, recreation and culture. The city has used the services of Mr. Brisebois for finding new managers on several previous occasions.

Carifête parade issued permit

The Carifête parade will be issued a permit to calypso west through Westmount on Saturday, June 26, city council agreed. It was decided to seek a $2,000 deposit bond from the Black Community Council of Quebec, the organizer, to defray any major expense relating to damage or clean up. The parade is held annually to celebrate Canada Day Caribbean-style.

Parking rates increased

Parking will now cost more on the north side of Dorchester Boulevard. City council increased rates to 60 cents per hour from 30 cents, saying the current rate is too cheap and encourages cars to park there all day. That, the city believes, defeats the purpose of providing short-term parking.

We Say

Library demoted in city's eyes

Westmounters hurled question after question at city council Monday night about chief librarian Rosemary Lydon's firing. The capacity crowd was angry, and no answer by mayor, councillor or director general would suffice.

Some answers, however, deserved more than the short shrift they received.

For instance, residents jeered when Councillor Karin Marks said the decision to fire Miss Lydon was agonizing and Mayor Peter Trent said the decision was made in secret. Some expressed outrage Miss Lydon's job was not publicly debated.

They felt, we suppose, her job could have been saved if only the decision had been put to a vote. The idea is sentimental. It was suggested, we are sure, only because emotions were running high.

The very idea that hiring and firing decisions should be made through public consultation is ludicrous.

Imagine Miss Lydon's consternation if her fate were to be the topic of conversations in grocery store aisles, with her résumé and performance reviews being bandied about like the latest bit of gossip. It is a scenario we are sure Westmounters wouldn't wish on themselves.

The city also has the perfect right to reorganize management. In fact it has the duty to do so, if there is an unnecessary number of upper levels of management.

What we want to know, which was not answered in the mayor's preamable or the ensuing hour and a half of questions, is: did the city consider eliminating the position of recreation director instead of the chief librarian post? Was it the chief librarian's job held by Miss Lydon that came under scrutiny?

If so, why?

We ask this based on the city's stated goal, which was to reorganize — have one person manage the library and the recreation department — without hiring any more people.

As it stated in September, when the reorganization was announced, most managers would be department heads promoted to the new job. Clearly, Miss Lydon is not the city's choice and recreation director Bob Aiken, having no library degree, cannot be hired.

The overall result is that either the city has a full-time recreation director, or a full-time chief librarian. And that is where its priorities can be called into question.

There is no way a manager dividing his or her time between a recreation department and library could devote full-time care and attention to both. One is bound to suffer. Council made the judgment call that it would be the library, which is curious, considering the effort expended in recent years for a project to refurbish the building.

It should be noted that, had Mr. Aiken been fired, it would not reflect so badly on his competency as Miss Lydon's firing did on hers. There was no new $7.5-million sports complex in the works. There is $7.5 million in renovations and expansion about to be done to the library.

The implied message is that Miss Lydon is capable of handling the current library, but she would not be able to handle anything larger.

By abolishing the position of chief librarian, the city does not have to offer proof of her incompetency as head of the expanded library. She is merely damned by inference.

If city council has fired Rosemary Lydon not because the library can operate smoothly and efficiently without the time and attention of a chief librarian, but because it is the easy way out of a perceived personnel problem, it should re-examine its decision.

The city is reducing the number of managers from 12 to six. When the city had just nine managers, there was a chief librarian. What more surprises are in store?

I Say!

A MAN should kiss his wife's navel every day.

—Nell Kimball

You Say

Firing not humane

Like many other outraged Westmount citizens who attended last night's council meeting, I was seething with comments and questions concerning the library. In the end, they boiled down to three:

1. Do the mayor and council believe that the firing of Rosemary Lydon was handled professionally, humanely and with respect?
2. Do the mayor and council believe that the administrative reorganization that involves the library was well and properly communicated to the citizens of Westmount?
3. Do the mayor and council believe that the manner in which this affair has been conducted will enhance our confidence and trust in them?

Since not one voice from the packed and overflowing crowd was raised in support of the city's actions, one can only conclude that the answers to the above must be:

1. No!
2. No!
3. No!

Delay library changes for thorough review

A copy of the following letter to Mayor Peter Trent has been received by THE EXAMINER:

Dear Mayor Trent: I am writing to protest the summary dismissal of the chief librarian, Rosemary Lydon, and the proposed bureaucratic changes that would merge the administration of the library into a department of recreation and culture.

At the very least, the dismissal of the chief librarian and the pending administrative changes should immediately be placed on hold pending a thorough public review of the situation. Desirably such a review would be undertaken by an ad hoc committee of concerned but impartial citizens with no axes to grind with respect to bureaucratic politics at city hall.

The whole change in administrative structure for the library, the abrupt dismissal of Rosemary Lydon and the apparent attempt to rapidly railroad the changes through without public consultation raises doubts concerning the wisdom (and perhaps even the integrity) of the city's bureaucratic management. A thorough public review of the whole situation is obviously needed in order to clear the air. In the meantime, city council should declare a moratorium both on the dismissal of Rosemary Lydon and on taking any steps to implement administrative changes in respect of the library.

Council sold its soul

A copy of the following open letter to former librarian Rosemary Lydon has been received by THE EXAMINER:

Congratulations!

You risked your job to alert the Community to an architect's incomprehension of how a library works.

Council hesitated — "Agonized for months," then sold its soul (and the library's) for a mess of managemental bureaucratese. It's called "restructuring."

You have been "downsized" but uplifted in our eyes.

Congratulations!

Your conscience will outlive the management style of the nineties — but will the Library?

News was dismaying

A copy of the following letter to Mayor Peter Trent has been received by THE EXAMINER:

Dear Mr. Mayor: It was with a great sense of shock, disbelief and dismay that I read yesterday of the city's (read city manager's) plan to fire the head of Westmount Library and integrate its administration with that of the recreation department.

Firstly, to summarily fire Miss Lydon, after 10 years of competent service, is unjust and dispicable, no matter what financial remuneration she may be offered.

Secondly, there seems to be a great lack of understanding among city officials — and this includes you, Mr. Mayor — of the importance of an independent, progressive and well-run library. It has been said that no university is better than its library. That statement can be applied to the city of Westmount as well. The cultural importance of a proper library is far greater than that of recreational and physical activity programs.

The proposed changes threaten the library's autonomy and undoubtedly would diminish the library's ability to serve the community.

These proposed administrative changes and the firing of Miss Lydon would make the spending of millions of dollars to improve the library's physical plant a great waste of the taxpayers' money. If the library is to be run out of city hall's pocket, the present run-down building is quite adequate.

Library decision bad

A copy of the following open letter to Mayor Peter Trent has been received by THE EXAMINER:

Dear Mr. Trent: Your recent action of terminating Ms. Lydon and abolishing the position of Chief Librarian is outrageous.

You were elected to provide Westmount with responsible management combined with maintaining the quality of life that Westmount uniquely had preserved.

A very professional library managed by a very capable librarian is now in grave jeopardy due to your irresponsible decision.

Your resignation, along with those of your senior bureaucrats who advised on with matter, would be welcome.

WESTMOUNT

Public input needed

I am writing to you re: the recent troubles at the Westmount Public Library, sending you a copy of what I wrote to Mayor Trent.

Early in the morning of last Thursday, Feb. 25, I started to read The Gazette. When I reached Section G, Page 1, I was stunned by a headline: Westmount fires librarian.

This was apparently because of new policies regarding staff re-organization.

I am writing to protest the way in which this plan was implemented: no open discussion, no notification to the public of such a decision.

The Westmount Public Library means a great deal to the citizens of Westmount. To have the management cavalierly altered, with no opportunity for the citizens to hear arguments nor to participate in making a change so crucial is very disheartening.

If council deems it necessary to reorganize, why did it not open meetings to give citizens an opportunity to express their outlook? The proposed change

On the hustings

Life is full of little ironies. On Tuesday, my predecessor Don Johnston announced he would seek the Liberal nomination in this riding. You would be hard pressed to find two Liberals with views as similar as us on many questions. Rather than fighting, we should be trying to win others over.

I regret my predecessor's decision. With only several months to go to a federal election, the Liberal Party needs both vision and teamwork. As party president, he had other choices. He should have taken on the enemy in his lair.

For my part, I am very encouraged by the strong support I am receiving. Hundreds of people have said they will support me at the nomination meeting on April 19. I am working day and night to win the nomination. I also enjoy the strong support of Liberal MPs and senators.

In the weeks to come, I will have the opportunity to speak about the work I've done since the last election and my plans

A stationary target

This is a follow-up on our embattled MUC police station. The MUC voted last October in favour of the new police map, over the objections of Westmount and Outremont — cities that together have only two per cent of the vote. Our station is scheduled to disappear next year.

I have been following at least two strategies to preserve a police presence in Westmount: firstly, to see if we can have a "superstation" in Westmount; and, secondly, to try to convince the island mayors to push for a local constabulary. More on that anon.

When the MUC launched its campaign to see the idea of reducing the number of stations from 24 to 14, it invoked that nice, comforting and redundant slogan of "community policing."

involves bringing in a second organization, hoping thereby to cut costs.

Running a library calls for long training and experience. The need to incorporate under one head another department, different in character and requirements, needs much discussion and input from many citizens of varied experience and outlook. To find a wise solution of a difficult problem deserves open discussion, not a hurried announcement of a vital policy change. Citizens will co-operate if they have an opportunity to share in making fundamental decisions rather than in hearing of plans made in arbitrary fashion. Especially do they resent having an officer so casually treated after years of dedicated service.

I am not alone in the shock I received from that Gazette headline! Such handling of a problem reveals a lack of insight and tact.

Thoughts of fancy are turning to Spandex

Between the Lines

MATTHEW FRIEDMAN

It's that time of year once again. Days are getting longer. There's a vague promise of spring in the air. And adolescent boys are gathering in magazine stores around Westmount, making those guttural sounds that only they can make.

The Sports Illustrated swimsuit issue has hit the stands.

For the past quarter of a century, Sports Illustrated magazine has been beating the American sports market's post-superbowl ennui with its annual blondes-on-the-beach issue. The swimsuit issue is its best seller.

Judging by activity around local newsstands, the swimsuit issue is particularly popular among adolescent boys. Unable or unwilling to reach to the top racks for Hustler and Penthouse, lest they're humiliated by the news agent or a passerby, they can stand and ohh-and-ahh in the sports section without fear of reproach.

Sports Illustrated's paean to tanned skin, strips of Spandex and silicone implants is the most accessible and irresistible pornography for adolescent boys. Entertainment programs promote the magazine with in-depth interviews with featured supermodels. Newsmagazines feature titillating teaser photos, and, at every newsstand, the cover model — with her swimsuit apparently about to split at its infinitesimal seams — beckons with come-hither eyes.

This may well be the softest kind of soft-core pornography on the market. Compared to Playboy's playmates, Sports Illustrated models are distinctly over-dressed. However, Sports Illustrated preaches the same ideology of sexual domination, albeit with slightly more tasteful pictures. Indeed, the magazine, and its accompanying video advertise a fantasy world even more effectively than most pornography.

Sports Illustrated, whose readership is overwhelmingly male, is not a fashion magazine. Two years ago, a reporter for the Village Voice set out to find just where one could buy one of these swimsuits and discovered that the vast majority were commercially unavailable in any form. The swimsuit issue does not display swimsuits. It displays almost naked female bodies.

This isn't lost on the boys enthralled by the magazine's glossy beauties. These two-dimensional models are a kind of ideal. They are quiet, pliant and available for only a few dollars. Boys subject female classmates to rigorous comparisons with Kathy Ireland and Elle MacPherson. Not surprisingly, the real, flesh and blood girls fail to measure up.

Adolescent boys are learning to favor the two dimensional image of a woman who does not exist over a woman who does. Women are stripped-down and displayed as though they were just another sporting event.

This is pornography in a form both blatant and insidious, where not only are the models objectified in their oh-so-perfect deshabillage, but 13-year-old girls are dehumanized in the process as well.

The consumption of pornography even as apparently benign as the Sports Illustrated swimsuit issue is more than a question of boys being boys. The purveyors of cheap thrills and fantasies prey on boys at just the point where they are beginning to learn about their own sexuality and the opposite sex.

The question, however, is whether Sports Illustrated, or pornography of any other kind, teaches our young men the kinds of lessons that we want them to learn.

Recognition is due to Cosgrove

Someone should give Bill Cosgrove a medal; preferably one that is bestowed upon those individuals who always do the right thing and whose reward never seems adequate to the amount of energy and commitment expended.

Bill arrived in town during the summer of 1989.

He recently reminded us of his introductory press conference, where, in the presence of the premier, he was asked for his views on Bill 142 (an amendment to the Health Act providing for services in English in various institutions near and dear to anglo Quebecers).

Leaping into the shark-infested waters, Bill, very candidly, said, "I'm afraid you've got me; what's Bill 142?" Sensing blood, the barracudas in our local press corps moved in for the kill. Finally Mr. Bourassa had to throw in a lifejacket to save his drowning candidate.

At that point, one would have understood if our Bill had taken a few days to dry his underwear and treat his wounds, but no, he insisted on doing his duty as a good Liberal. He accepted a request from the CBC to film him as he went door to door in lower Westmount. The doors he knocked on hadn't been previously vetted, and the result the evening news viewers saw and heard was a series of confrontational harangues with irate Westmounters. One of them later told me that he felt so sorry for Bill, after chewing him out publicly in living colour, he actually voted for him on election day.

The rest is history.

Now Bill has decided not to run in next year's provincial election... at least, not in the new Westmount-St. Louis riding. If Jacques Chagnon has any pull in the Quebec Liberal Party, he should see to it that Bill is given the recognition that is due him. I hope I'll be invited to attend the ceremony.

Pineapple becomes weapon for thief

A shoplifter at the Metro store, 4840 Sherbrooke St., shoved a can of pineapple in the face of a store detective, sending him to hospital with a "very bad cut," police said. The thief escaped as a butcher tried in vain to hold him, leaving behind his black leather jacket as well as the stolen goods.

The suspect had been seen about 2:50 p.m. stealing Boston bluefish, Cloverleaf salmon and crab substitute totalling $10.37. Once outside the store, he was stopped by the security agent and taken to the back of the store to make a report. Becoming aggressive, the shoplifter picked up the can and hit the 32-year-old detective. The victim required stitches and was taken to Queen Elizabeth Hospital by Urgences Santé.

Car nicked while woman at worship

While a woman attended a children's service at the Westmount Baptist Church Wednesday last week, someone stole keys from her coat pocket, used them to break into her car parked outside and then into her home, police said. Confronted by the family dog, the burglar fled before being seen by a babysitter inside.

Car papers stolen from the woman's 1988 Jeep were believed to have provided the thief with the address of the home. They were later found in the entrance of the home.

Shoppers, beware

Shoppers are reminded to keep a close watch on handbags while shopping, in wake of four thefts at the Metro store at Sherbrooke and Victoria. Police said two women lost wallets from purses in the supermarket last week and two the week before. In the more recent incidents, a 51-year-old N.D.G. woman had her purse stolen from the grocery cart Feb. 22 between 4:30 and 5 p.m. while the next day, a 60-year-old resident of The Boulevard discovered her bag open and wallet gone at 2:15 p.m.

Olds recovered

A car stolen in St. Jean sur Richelieu was recovered in Place Alexis Nihon Tuesday last week after local detectives received a tip concerning its whereabouts, police said. The 1987 Oldsmobile had been missing for six days. The lock on the driver's door had been forced and the steering column was broken.

Clearance mistake

The top of a delivery truck was crushed Wednesday last week as the vehicle tried to squeeze under the railway overpass at Greene Avenue and Selby Street, police said. Making the same mistake as many other truck drivers over the past few years, the 58-year-old trucker from St. Calix underestimated the clearance while travelling northbound.

Condom thief is 70

A 70-year-old man was arrested for allegedly stealing condoms and corned beef among $21 worth of items at the Pharmaprix store in Place Alexis Nihon Saturday, police said. He lives in Ste. Geneviève. He was seen putting the items in his pockets by store security, who detained him as he tried to leave without paying.

Cars rifled

Two cars parked in the summit area had windows smashed and articles stolen from the back seats. Police said thieves took a purse and a sports bag containing athletic equipment from a 1992 Mercedes parked Friday afternoon at 21 Shorncliffe Ave. Sunday evening, a bag containing a wallet, credit cards, money and other personal papers was taken from a 1988 Saab 9000 outside 48 Roxborough Ave.

Rockers impatient

After the Jon Bon Jovi rock concert at the Forum Wednesday last week, a group of three or four young men piled out of a car in the garage at Place Alexis Nihon and began pounding the car ahead in a lineup to leave, police said. The youths, in an older model Monte Carlo, did not want to wait their turn in the exit line and tried to squeeze past others. The victim's car, a Dodge Colt, sustained $500 damage to the left rear bumper.

Tenders show electrical upgrading

By J. MARION FEINBERG

Three of the four sets of tenders approved at the last council meeting were part of light and power's circuit upgrading program, according to director Danny Ponzo.

The price of $49,230 was accepted for the supply of a line crew and truck to change electrical poles, wiring and hardware from F.A. Tucker (Canada) Ltée, the lowest of three contractors bidding.

Tree pruning, to be done before the poles are changed, will be carried out by Clinique des Arbres Ltée., which submitted the lowest bid of $18,160, well below Trans-Selec's bid of $28,5765 and F.A. Tucker's $29,644.

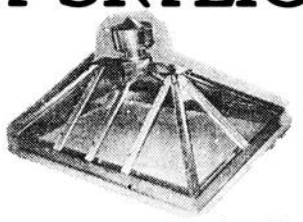

"There's fierce competition out there due to the market conditions," said Mr. Ponzo.

Domtar Forest Products Inc. will supply 45 wooden poles for $12,908 that are to replace the existing worn out ones.

Also, three Chrysler dealerships submitted tenders for the supply of a Plymouth or Dodge Caravan 1993 for the fire department. Des Sources Dodge Chrysler Ltée was the low bidder with a price of $18,239, compared to $19,681 from Champlain Dodge Chrysler and $20,120 from Laurentien Plymouth Chrysler.

The Visual Arts Centre, 350 Victoria Ave., has been part of Westmount's cultural heritage since it was founded more than 40 years ago. 488-9558.

GAPING HEAT WASTER

The judicious use of doors in your home can save you enough money during a cold winter season to buy Christmas presents for the whole family. Here are some tips:

Don't leave the room without closing the closet door. There's no need to spend hard-earned money heating storage spaces.

Think about an outdoor doghouse. Your pup's ancestors lived outdoors for centuries and he can adapt to being outdoors all year round. You'll lose a lot of the heat opening and closing the door umpteen times a day to let him in and out.

If you have unused rooms, close the doors and stop heating rooms that are not used.

Having a garage within your house framework is convenient, but be sure to have a separate door for going in and out to the driveway – especially for kids with bikes. Every time you open the mammoth garage door it's like taking off the side of your house, and costs plenty in heat loss.

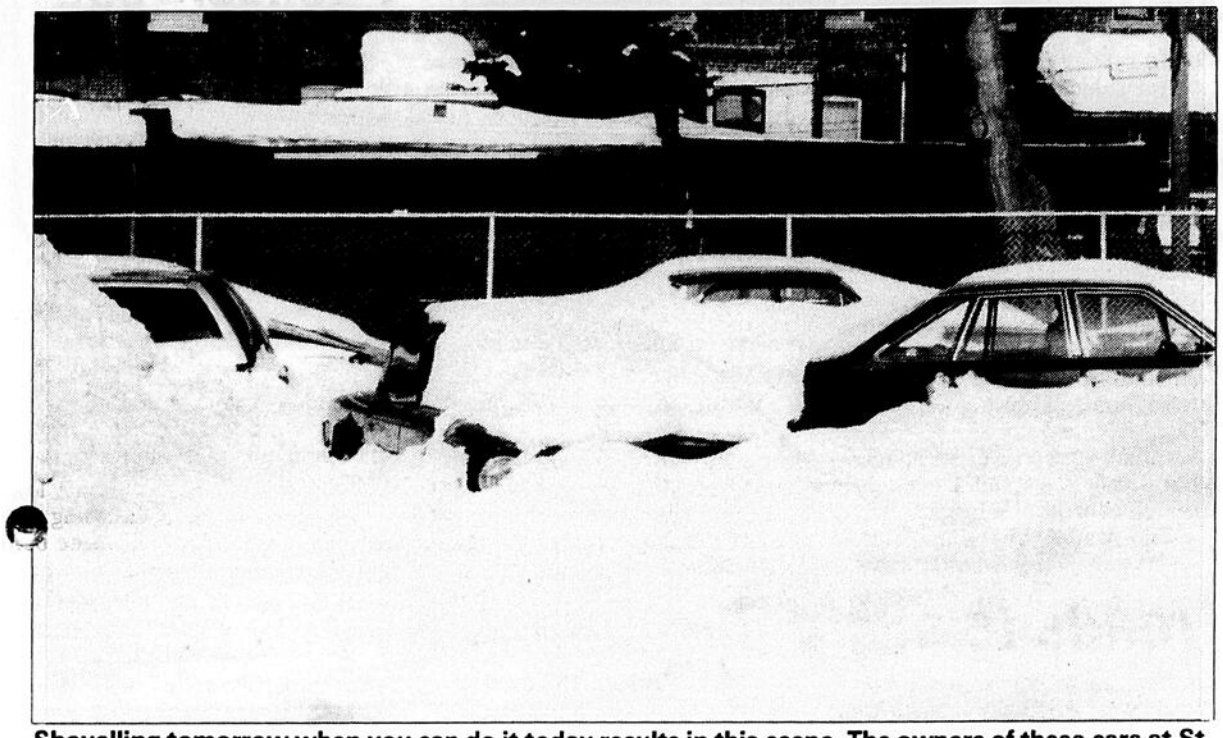

Double doors at the principal entryway make a convenient foyer for winter boots and also cut heat loss as people go in and out.

Falling icicle almost impales pregnant woman

A pregnant woman narrowly missed being impaled by a large icicle as it crashed from the roof of a building at 1357 Greene Ave. Saturday, said a local merchant whose store is there.

Kathryn Osborne told THE EXAMINER she immediately called public safety officers and the area was barricaded until the building owner could be reached.

Warming temperatures solved the problem, melting snow and ice from the rooftop by Monday, but the owner of the building was very co-operative in case the problem should recur, she said.

Healthy cities seeks to toughen Westmount pesticide bylaw

By J. MARION FEINBERG

Beefing up Westmount's pesticide legislation is on the healthy cities' spring agenda, said environment committee chair Toni Braide.

The existing bylaw's only requirement is the posting of a warning sign after the spraying of lawns and other greenery to inform the public when the pesticide was applied and what substance was used. The sign must be in place for 48 hours and must be positioned at least one metre about the ground, said city horticulturist Claudette Savaria.

"The work on the pesticides bylaw together with the lawn care workshops we're planning for next month should start moving this community...toward more natural lawn care," said Ms. Braide.

Getting the community and business sector involved as well is another part of the plan, she said.

Westmount became a leader among municipalities in the mid-1980s with the work of the Pesticides Task Force, made up of medical experts, researchers, professors, toxicologists and environmentalists.

Led by Mount Stephen Avenue resident Esther Goldenberg, the task force has been credited with being the catalyst for drafting Quebec's first-ever Quebec legislation on the subject in 1987.

Former city councillor Sally Aitken and environmental health physician Catherine Commandeur, as members of the healthy cities' environment committee, are trying to continue where Mrs. Goldenberg left off.

"The only way to improve the situation and give more strength to the bylaw is to make the process more difficult so that people think twice before applying pesticides," said Ms. Commandeur. "There are so many alternatives to spraying, but people are spoiled and dependent on chemical solutions."

The draft proposal up for consideration might include:

- the provision that warning signs be posted before as well as after spraying;
- the idea that some attention must be paid to weather and wind conditions, which can carry the pesticides in the air;
- limiting spraying times to weekdays before 5 p.m.;
- a ban on commercial dumping of pesticides in Westmount sewers.

"We also want to make sure that people don't smoke, eat, drink or bring animals in recently sprayed areas," said Ms. Braide. "It sounds basic but that doesn't mean that these things aren't common occurences."

She gives the hypothetical example of children's toys left out in the yard to show the potential benefits of knowing when nearby spraying is under way.

"Then you'd be able to bring them in so they don't get coated in the spray," she said. "It's going to be hard to put some teeth into the law. It's one thing to make recommendations and another to enforce."

The idea of time limitations and weather consideration came from other municipalities' efforts on the subject.

"We were inspired by Beloeil and the Town of Mount Royal," said Ms. Commandeur.

These are the roads to avoid this summer

By J. MARION FEINBERG

Westmount adopted resolutions this week earmarking $1.9 million in loans to reconstruct several roads and sidewalks this year as well as install new street lighting.

Sydenham, Lansdowne and Montrose avenues as well as Summit Road are slated to get facelifts as part of the city's ongoing street reconstruction program, said public works director Fred Caluori.

The biggest chunk of funding is $913,000 the city will borrow to redo Montrose Avenue from Murray Avenue to Ramezay Road. The road was originally constructed between 1911 and 1923 and the city plans to realign the intersection of Montrose and Clarke Avenues.

"This area has been the source of some complaints as the island causes conflict with the traffic," said Mr. Caluori. "We'll redesign the intersection and eliminate the island to make it less of a problem."

Lansdowne Avenue between Sherbrooke and Côte St. Antoine will be redone to the tune of $396,000 because parts of the road date back to 1911, are badly deteriorated and the sidewalks are sloping back, he said.

Summit Road between Belvedere Road and Summit Circle will be totally reconstructed this summer with a 20-centimetre-thick concrete base for $88,000.

"The last reconstruction on Summit Road was carried out in 1971," said Mr. Caluori. "We're going to make sure that we have a 12-inch (30 cm) stone base for proper drainage. The problem now is that in a lot of locations the rock is very close to the concrete base so water gets trapped and then we have heaving when it freezes."

The complete reconstruction of Sydenham Avenue will cost $220,000. It was last reconstructed in 1972 and now it will be redone with a 20 centimetre concrete base and with wider sidewalks in keeping with Westmount's policy.

"It's in very bad condition and has been rated poor for a number of years," he said. "Because part of the street is on the fire route it's good that we're doing it."

The work will begin in the summer months but the city has some sewer repairs to carry out before work can begin, he said.

New street lighting in various locations in the city will cost $330,000.

Trio arrested for break-in Three young men were arrested Sunday at 2:45 a.m. in Verdun with a car full of items from the Westmount recreation office, police said. The articles included a cheque which lead to discovery of the break-in because it had the recreation department's address on it.

Recreation and culture director Robert Aitken said a bathroom window near the pool was found to have been forced open. Burglars got into the office and stole equipment including a fax machine, laminating machine and a small heater. The cheque was stolen from the office mail box.

The suspects were arrested after police from Verdun's Station 22 stopped a car whose temporary licence was not prominently displayed.

Two 19-year-old men from Dollard des Ormeaux and St. Henri are charged with break and enter.

A 16-year-old Dorval boy was released to his mother's custody.

Jardin Direct goes for the everyday flowers, not the exotic

Business briefs

By J. MARION FEINBERG

Eda Piyale wants to make fresh-cut flowers an everyday event for Westmounters.

The four-week old Jardin Direct franchise, located next to Marché Clément at Sherbrooke and Victoria, specializes in sales and delivery of basic flowers such as roses, carnations, freesia, tulips and more.

A basketful of rose petals gently scents the bright peach and forest green store. The flower cooler is walled with windows displaying multi-coloured blooms.

"We don't offer exotic flowers or plants but the mini-carnations and tulips have been doing particularly well here so far," said Ms. Piyale. "I can offer the flowers at competitive prices because I get them directly from the growers."

A dozen Visa roses goes for $9.99 and a bouquet of 10 alstromeria can be had for $7.99.

The former fashion merchandiser and Thornhill Avenue resident said customers can count on freshness.

"Most of the flowers are cut just days before I sell them and we take care of them once they get here by providing a bacteria-free environment and food to make them last as long as possible."

Agonizingly adorable cards sporting kids and flowers are handpicked to go with bouquets, along with a small variety of vases which are for sale.

First-time customer Myron Syms dropped by Monday to pick up a little something for the one-year memorial of his late in-laws.

"I'm getting two white roses. That was their favourite," he said.

Jardin Direct is the fourth flower shop within two blocks.

Eda Piyale, franchise owner of the newest flower shop in Westmount, Jardin Direct, says Europeans buy flowers on a daily basis to brighten up their lives and she hopes the trend will start here.

Pot-repairer shop opens branch here

What do you do if the handle of your favourite pot breaks off?

Until now, most people would chuck the whole thing in the trash. But as of tommorrow, Westmounters will have access to a special service that will give longer life to their prized cookware.

Clinique de la Casserole at 4134 St. Catherine St. will replace and weld handles, polish damaged pots and even check the safety of pressure cookers, said owner Jean-Paul Azar.

"Ever since Pascal's closed, most people find it difficult to find parts for pressure cookers or things like lids for Corning Ware and other cookware," he said. "We're the only ones in Canada that carry Wearever handles."

He said he knows that is true because he bought the mold.

"I serve people from St. John's to Victoria," he said, adding that many Westmounters might remember him when he delivered groceries from his father's general store in 16-Island Lake, near Morin Heights.

The Westmount counter will be the third branch of the Clinique and will be run by daughter Diane Azar. Mr. Azar said after selling pots and pans for more than 35 years, he decided to go into pot repair about 10 years ago.

"I would carry the extra handles in my car to provide that little extra service," he said. "In general pressure cookers are not dangerous as long as they are in good condition but some people have had them over 40 years. Sometimes all it takes is a new part."

Jeans store opens

One of the latest stores to throw open its doors in Place Alexis Nihon is Broadway Mode, a one-of-a-kind jeans and streetwear boutique positioned on Metro level near the dollar store.

"We sat down and decided that what the mall needed was a better jeans store," said manager John Campbell about the seven-week-old venture. "Our prices are good and we stock hard-to-find merchandise.

Levis jeans, bomber jackets, T-shirts and boots as well as suede and leather bags are examples of the stock that is changed on a weekly basis.

Co-manager Guylaine Cadorette says customers will find their clothing has a "taste of New York."

"Considering that we opened the store at a time that is often quiet for retail sales, we're doing quite well," she said.

The store is also stocked up on the Rugby, Timberland and Champion lines of clothing and footwear.

Realty veteran in hall of fame

Six-year Westmount real estate veteran Julia Daniels joined the Re/Max International hall of fame last month by hitting the magical number of 350 sales.

She was honoured at a recent convention in Las Vegas marking the real estate company's 20th anniversary. Only 825 of the more than 32,000 sales people have qualified for the prestigious award.

The five-day convention included educational workshops focusing on ways to improve customer service, marketing techniques, computerization and real estate industry trends.

Antique store expands

Jennifer Rowntree couldn't wait to get into the space occupied by former next-door neighbours Safari Masque, so she cut the archway between the two stores all by herself last month.

"When the store came up, I decided it would be a good idea to expand," said the owner of the four-year-old Rowntree Antiques at 4431 St. Catherine St, corner Kensington Avenue.

She used to rent locker space in St. Henri to house her hand-picked English country-style pieces but now has more room to spread out and display her wares.

"I go across to England three times a year looking for my customers' favourites, whether it be light or dark wood, pine, oak or mahogany," said the British-born merchant. "I often shop with an eye out for what I know people are looking for."

Lydon not qualified to take on job of overall manager: Trent

the council decision. "But I'm very grateful to all the people who supported me."

The firing came as the public library, one of the oldest in Canada, completed a record year under Miss Lydon's leadership.

'No way to treat a human being'

"You have robbed her of her professional identity," charged Concordia communications professor Alex Newell, one of 20 citizens who addressed council. "You have no idea what that can do to a person... it is no way to treat a human being."

Barbara Moore, widow of Herbert Moore — who chaired the library's board of trustees from 1978 to 1983 — choked back tears when she said she was thankful he wasn't at the meeting to hear the decision.

Trustee Louise Agar, who was out of town when the plan was presented to other trustees only a few hours before the dismissal, told THE EXAMINER she joins trustee Gertrude Robinson in opposition. She feels "very disturbed" by the way the decision was presented "as a fait accompli."

The timing also worries her.

"I can assure you I plan to stay on and maintain vigilance," she said.

Professional librarians said the plan to create a joint manager for the library and recreation and culture would not work. It might not be possible to find a professional librarian with expertise in all the required areas, nor one who would work in Westmount based on the way Miss Lydon was treated, they said.

They also asked why there was no management plan for the library until a new manager could be hired.

Citizens pressed council for assurances the new manager would be a professional librarian and asked that a professional librarian be included on the steering committee for the building project. They also wanted a management plan for the library.

Council 'agonized' over decision

Councillors said they spent hours "agonizing" over the decision to dismiss Miss Lydon. John Bridgman said it was a "lose-lose" situation but Herbert Bercovitz vowed it was "not a conspiracy."

City director-general Manley Schultz insisted the firing was solely to streamline the city structure and had nothing to do with Miss Lydon's qualifications.

Some citizens, however, suggested it resulted from a personality conflict with architect Peter Rose. If it's a choice between the two of them "you know we'd choose Rosemary Lydon," said Norma Udy to deafening applause.

Mr. Rose, when contacted yesterday, rejected the idea. "It don't think that's an issue, or should be."

Mr. Schultz stated that Miss Lydon could apply for the new position as manager of library and recreation, but Mr. Trent interjected, "She doesn't have the expertise."

Leaves library unready for demand

Bev Chandler, who heads Vanier College libraries, said she did not understand the reason for the change. It seemed the city was abolishing the position of chief librarian to be able to pay for another management position that would leave the library inadequately staffed to meet increased demands of an expanded building, she said. She estimated library activity would grow by 50 per cent.

"You may be penalizing your project," she said. "It really bothers me a lot."

Citizens questioned the legality of the decision under the city's library bylaw and doubted the human rights commission would consider the restructuring sufficient cause to fire Miss Lydon.

Bill Weintraub asked how much money might be saved by the change. He received no answer.

Jeanne Randle, retired chief librarian of the Fraser Hickson Institute, asked if proper firing procedures were followed. Had Miss Lydon received written warnings based on performance evaluation, she asked. Mr. Schultz said she had. But Tuesday Miss Lydon told THE EXAMINER she received only one letter "early in February" that was "full of errors" which she immediately corrected.

Mrs. Randle also asked if Miss Lydon had been offered training to qualify her for the new management position. Miss Lydon told THE EXAMINER: "Never."

Mr. Trent said he wanted to correct last week's media reports which stated the library was being combined with the department of recreation and culture, that the library was being downgraded and its intellectual autonomy threatened. "They're wrong, dead wrong," he said. "We have not taken leave of our senses. We're not mixing books with basketball. The recreation department remains as a stand-alone department."

But organizational charts, effective July 1993 and released at a previous council session, lump the library with recreation and culture as equal partners in a new department called "culture and recreation."

The impact Miss Lydon had in serving the public was outlined by teenager Anitra Bostock.

"I've been going to the library since I could read," she explained. "Rosemary Lydon is the library to me. She treated the library with respect and I think she should be treated with respect. Why bother firing her? Why not keep everybody the same?"

This resident waited patiently with her list of complaints clasped behind her back for a chance to lambast council.

Man dangles from balcony

A man was rescued dangling from the balcony on his home at 607 Victoria Ave. by a lifeline attached to his wrist Saturday afternoon, fire officials said. He had slipped while shovelling snow.

Montreal Urban Community police cut the man free before firefighters arrived. Before undertaking the work, the man had tied a piece of electrical wire attached to the house to his wrist in case he fell.

Witty Playing Bare is not for first-timers

Playing Bare by Montrealer Dominic Champagne is a witty play presented by Westmount-based Street People Theatre. Everyone who loves theatre should rush to see it, though I don't think it is a suitable vehicle to introduce someone to the genre. It has too many theatre-based references.

Developing a play is a long process. The result here shows that the process can pay off handsomely.

The story of a director/actor who feels she has nothing left, but decides to stage Beckett's Waiting for Godot using non-actors, was written by Mr. Champagne in French as La Répetition and premiered in 1990. It was awarded the Quebec Theatre Critics' Association Prize for best new play of the 1989-90 season. It was published and shortlisted for the Governor General's Award, was remounted in 1992, and a television adaptation of the play was aired last month.

In the meantime, Shelly Tepperman translated the play to English and it was developed by Street People in co-operation with the author. The play was first staged in English at Les 20 jours du théâtre à risque in Montreal in 1992. The company, with some assistance from the translator and the playwright, took what they learned from this first production and came up with the finished product, pared down, faster-paced, now at Théâtre La Chapelle.

Westmounter Paulina Abarca, founder and artistic director of the company, plays Luce, the director.

The two actors playing non-actors are Chris Heyerdahl and Bruce Dinsmore. They do it beautifully, and Mr. Dinsmore might even be called brilliant. The redoubtable Sheena Larkin plays the blind founder of the theatre company with her accustomed élan.

Ms. Abarca, who in real life is a director/actor, avoids the trap of playing herself and gives the tortured Luce scope and depth. Lynne Adams hits all the right notes as her assistant/keeper/friend and Nicholas K. Pynes reacts perfectly to all the action and moods with his music, played in the theatre-within-a-theatre.

I laughed a lot, but this is not merely comedy. It is, indeed, about Playing Bare. P.S. If you love the play, watch for its final version to be published by Talonbooks.

Playing Bare* is at Théâtre La Chapelle, 3700 St. Dominique, until March 7. Performances are Wednesday to Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday at 3 p.m. Box office: 843-7738.

Torch ignites

A plumber's propane torch caught fire Feb 16 while he soldered pipes under a sink in an apartment on the sixth floor of Château Maisonneuve, fire officials said. He threw the burning torch out the window onto the parking lot.

The incident was not reported to the fire department until the next day when firefighters arrived to find a cupboard above the sink burned and soot covering the walls of the apartment at 4998 de Maisonneuve Blvd. Damage was estimated at $3,500.

munity policing" you might ask? Well, the MUC justified this little gem of newspeak because of its idea of importing the mini-station concept from Detroit — the city all of us are dying to emulate. Westmount would get a two-man mini-station as a consolation prize for losing our full-service station.

It's really a case of the devil citing scripture for his purpose. The term "community policing" was given wide currency because of an influential report called Police-Challenge 2000, written in 1990. This report, as the title would suggest, is replete with clichés about pursuing excellence (as opposed to mediocrity?) but it does manage to make some good points. The MUCPD obviously chose to ignore the following observation on page 137. Or perhaps they didn't get that far:

"The impersonal style of policing in patrol cars, of rotating officers continuously in a beat, and of dismantling neighbourhood police stations in favour of lavish centralized quarters certainly contributes to the sense of isolation from the police felt by many citizens."

Anyway, short of barricading our Station 23 front door with my body, there's not much hope of keeping the status quo. This is why I've been negotiating with the MUC to see if the superstation combining Westmount and downtown could be in eastern Westmount. We would give them land as an incentive.

The station would be built in such a way that if we ever got back local police, the Westmount portion could easily be split off. Any deal would be subject to citizen approval.

Watch this space for details on the local constabulary idea. And what we should do with our existing station.

for the future. I take pride in being accessible. In the last four years, apart from regular meetings with constituents in my office, I have circulated questionnaires, organized public meetings and an annual tournée of the riding.

I have also continued my work in the important area of science and technology.

In this campaign, I will speak about education and training, which also will be a major theme of the Liberal Party's election platform. I recently had the opportunity to speak to a number of francophone CEGEP students. I asked them what they considered to be the biggest change they experienced from high school to CEGEP. One replied that in high school she was given no homework or papers to prepare. In CEGEP she is required to submit papers of five to six pages. Another student told me that in four years of high school she was given only two books to read. In today's economy, when education is increasingly the passport to success, it is a tragedy that many young people in our riding are not getting a good education.

In a speech on Jan. 27, Jean Chrétien stated that a Liberal government would establish a National Apprenticeship Training Program in co-operation with the provinces, business, labour and educators. Just a few weeks ago, The Globe and Mail published yet another report on Germany's apprenticeship training program. It is expensive and requires a substantial commitment from all involved. Yet it is widely regarded as the conerstone of Germany's economic success.

My immediate plans are to win the Liberal nomination in St. Henri-Westmount, help to elect a Liberal government led by Jean Chrétien, and beginning work on implementing our agenda.

An affair of the heart and of common sense

A wedding is not only an affair of the heart. There are a great many steps to be taken in arranging a wedding, and they need to be taken in a way that will preclude any last-minute uncertainties.

It is important to request a written confirmation or a contract stipulating arrangements made with any supplier. One should note the type of service being supplied, the specific costs attached and payment terms. Where necessary, the number of employees needed for a certain function should be specified, as well as any terms regarding overtime work. Details such as time of delivery, modification or cancellation of services should be put in writing.

To avoid any possible confusion, reconfirm all details with suppliers and professionals at least 48 hours before the wedding.

Ensure confirmation of arrangements, timing and place of delivery. For example, it is critical that details of timing be worked out in advance with the photographer who has been booked for the wedding. Do not hesitate to leave a name and telephone number with suppliers and professionals so they can make contact if necessary.

If a home reception is being planned, consider using a rental store to supply some of the items necessary to take care of the guests at the reception. A catering service is often a solution for a home reception or a reception taking place in a hall where the serving facilities are inadequate. If a catering service is used make sure that the caterer is engaged before reception invitations are ordered.

Many department stores and specialty shops have bridal consultants to assist couples and their families. In larger communities there are wedding co-ordinators who will make arrangements for every detail of a wedding or reception. They usually charge a percentage of the total cost. Some charge a flat fee and others charge by the hour. A bride living some distance from her family might find this type of service useful.

Little extras add big deal

When you are ordering invitations you have an opportunity to choose some extras that can be added to the reception. These include such things as personalized napkins, personalized matches, table cards and parchment scrolls. Thought should be given to how they integrate with the rest of the wedding decor.

If personalized napkins are purchased, you should order at least twice as many as the number of wedding invitations sent out. That's because a large number of invitations are sent to couples and families. On personalized napkins can be found the first names of the bride and groom, the date of the wedding and some design that is significant to the newlyweds.

Parchment scrolls are becoming more popular at receptions. As well as some motif, there is usually a gracious inscription thanking the guests for sharing the happiness of the bride and groom.

Food, drink and good gifts are musts

To have a good time at a wedding reception it is essential to eat well.

The quality of the food is often the critical difference in a successful reception.

For that reason the caterer, restaurant or banquet hall should be chosen with care.

Discussions should be held with several suppliers to go over proposed menus, services and costs before making this important decision.

Receptions for formal, semi-formal and informal weddings may be held at home, in the garden, in a hotel or private club, or at a reception hall.

Generally the cost of the reception meal is calculated by person.

It is worth the time to sample the suggested menu to be assured of its quality.

Champagne and wine are often part of the reception. Their selection will also be made with care.

Quality is often preferable to quantity.

The room itself is also an important consideration, and should be chosen so that everyone feels at ease and there is a welcoming ambiance.

It is a nice gesture for the bride and groom to offer a gift to each member of the wedding party.

They can choose a modest gift or something more luxurious depending on the nature of the wedding and their own means.

They have the choice of selecting an identical gift for each woman and for each man in the wedding party, or they can choose a gift tailored to the tastes of each individual.

The bride underwrites the cost of the gifts for the maid of honor and the bridesmaids. The groom does likewise for his best man and ushers.

Generally the bride and groom give each other a gift. Normally they choose a gift that will be long lasting. A beautiful watch of good quality is an example of such a gift.

Members of the wedding party, either individually or as a group, customarily offer gifts to the bride and groom.

Choosing a dress and headdress right

A bride chooses her wedding dress with care. Often she will have the assistance of her mother, although the final decision should be the bride's.

Important criteria to consider are budget, the shape of the bride and her personal taste. The wedding dress should be just right for the bride and at the same time its cost should not exceed the budget that has been established.

To find that dress of the bride's dreams the first step should be to peruse various bridal publications to determine what styles the bride thinks are most attractive. She should then visit different retailers to try on some of these models. It is a good idea to shop around to find the right dress at the right price.

If the bride's mother is not available it is advisable for the bride to take along someone else with taste and an objective opinion before making the final decision. A wedding dress should not only please the bride, it should show her to her best advantage.

Some styles suit large women and some flatter small women, and independent advice can be helpful in this regard.

If the wedding gown is being ordered then it is important that it be ordered well in advance of the date of the wedding.

A bride's headwear should complement her wedding dress and suit her face and shape.

There is a wide choice of headdresses available. They can be worn with or without a veil. A bride generally will select her headdress and her veil, if she is going to wear one, at the same time she chooses her wedding dress.

Some styles of headdress have been designed to be worn on the back or the side of the head. Others are designed as headbands.

A range of materials can be found in a headdress. These can include artificial flowers and very small flowers made of fabric and round or tear-shaped pearls.

Today veils are often short to medium length. The length often depends on the formality of the wedding. Before falling to the shoulders of the bride a veil can be arranged in a manner that complements the headdress.

A diadem, or small crown, is an interesting alternative for the bride who prefers a 'queen for a day' look.

How to have an enjoyable honeymoon

To have an enjoyable honeymoon doesn't demand excessive effort, just good planning. It is always a good idea to consult a travel agent who will be able to advise you on questions of destination and lodging.

The travel agent will take into consideration your budget, your tastes and what you hope to find in the way of ambiance, climate and activities. He or she will recommend some alternatives. What's more, the agent can help you obtain any necessary documentation.

Conventional honeymoon destinations are those places in the sun that spring immediately to mind. Cruises are popular. There are exciting big cities to visit in North America. And of course there are many fine resorts across Canada for those who wish some peace and quiet on their honeymoon.

There are many brochures available from your travel agent, and public librairies usually offer a wealth of travel guides.

Westmounter's vast collection of Judaica donated to library

It will take the Jewish Public Library at least six months to deal with one donation by Allan Raymond.

That's because the donation comprises more than 100 boxes of Judaica in the form of newspaper clippings, letters, postcards and artifacts.

"There are hundreds and hundreds of items," said librarian Carol Katz.

Among them is the courtship correspondance between Shaar Hashomayim's former Rabbi Herman Abramowitz and his future wife. The rabbi arrived at the synagogue in 1902. He was already infatuated with a 16-year-old girl who lived in the United States. Despite the 12-year age difference, he wooed her with letters and they married in 1911.

"June 28, 1911," said Mr. Raymond. "I have the wedding invitation."

The library has cleared one wall of the archives for the material, and plans rotating displays in the library and Cummings House. There is plenty to choose from.

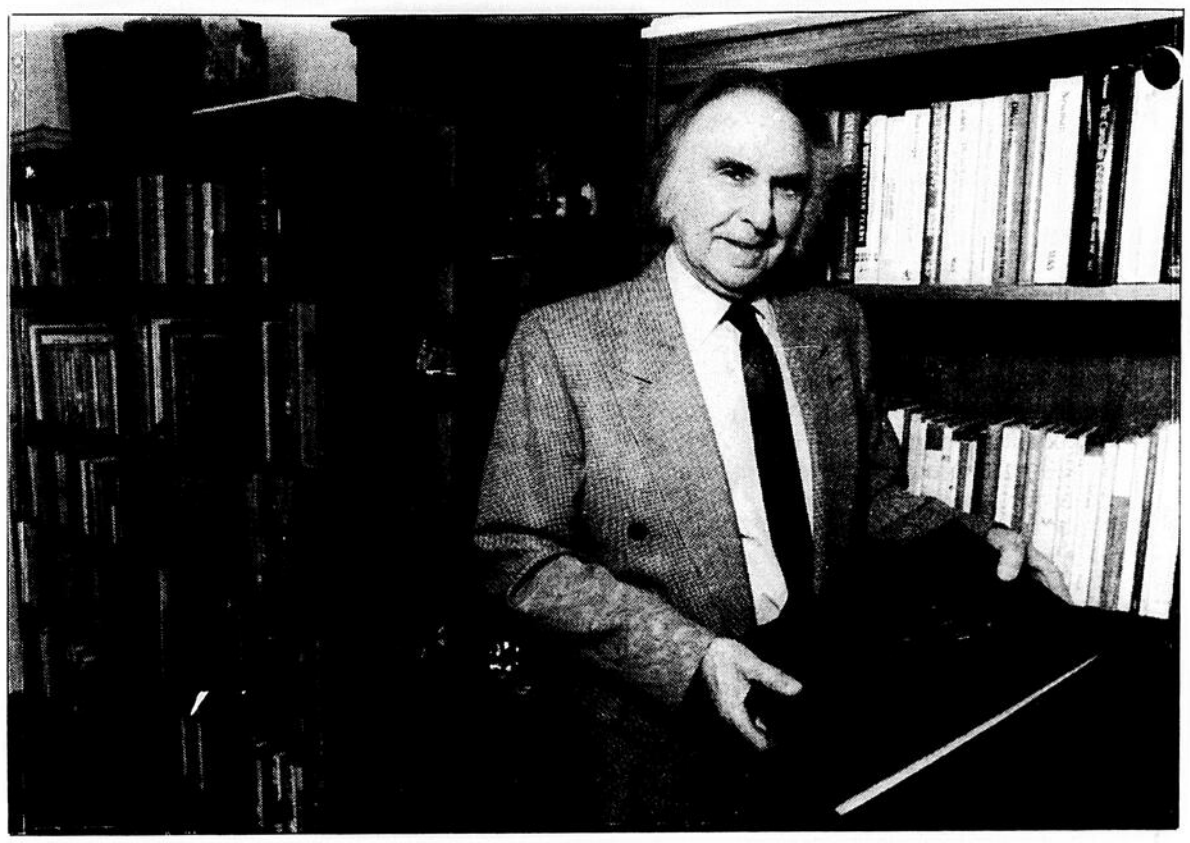

The collection was gleaned in more than 35 years of collecting while living in Westmount, mainly from Montreal sources, said Mr. Raymond, who moved to Hampstead in November. It includes a rare set of cupping glasses, which were used about 60 years ago — with leeches — as a curative, and legal documents proving King William III granted Labrador to a Spanish Jews living in Holland, who claimed the land for England in 1667.

The collection was so vast, it did not fit in Mr. Raymond's home. "It was probably the largest collection of private Judaica in Canada."

He offered it to the library because "it would be much more useful (there) to students and scholars." He delivered half the collection in September, and the library is just starting to process it.

"If people didn't save things," said Mr. Raymond, "then we wouldn't realize our history."

Allan Raymond's home is a lot less crowded since he donated more than 100 boxes of Judaica. Still, here is proof he couldn't part with it all. Photo by OWEN EGAN

Goldfish bowl view of life wins ECS speaker a first

SARAH ROSZLER

By J. MARION FEINBERG

Clarke Avenue resident Sarah Roszler thought she would be the comic relief at the recent public speaking competition at Miss Edgar's and Miss Cramp's School.

But the fifteen-year-old Grade 10 ECS student won first prize with her humourous look at the abusive living conditions of goldfish.

"I was like the ambassador to humans from goldfish," she said. "I adore humour and off-the-wall wit."

Sponsored by the Quebec Association of Independent Schools, the competition's theme was "taking a stand." The diverse topics ranged from racism, violence and homosexuality to abortion, condoms and more.

"I like the ones done by teenagers where the topics came from the heart," she said. "The sincerity came across."

Westmounters Peter Blaikie and Rhoda Vineberg as well as ECS old girl Louise Penny judged the speakers from 15 participating independent schools.

Ms. Roszler said she is at ease in front of a crowd because she has played violin since she was four years old. She said she was told by the judges that she seemed relaxed and comfortable.

"I love the crowds. There was a lot of tension in the room because of the competition. I got more laughs when I gave the speech at a school competition though," she said.

Calling the goldfish bowl a "fresh water purgatory," her talk focused on how the life of a goldfish is not just a bowl of red pebbles.

"I really didn't think I'd win," she said.

Second prize went to Selwyn House student Patrick Brown. Third prize was a tie between Trafalgar student Nicole Sylvester and LCC student Jesse Shustik.

Banned book display includes Roch Carrier's Hockey Sweater

The Atwater Library, 1200 Atwater Ave., is marking Freedom to Read Week, March 1 to 8, with a display of books that have been banned or challenged.

It is the fourth year the display has been set up.

Forty books, including the beloved children's book The Hockey Sweater by Westmount resident Roch Carrier, went on display on Friday. Curious library users had checked out most of the titles by the following day.

Anne Pasold, who chairs the library board, says there are several levels of censorship — the government, including Customs; parents and community groups; and special-interest groups that want specific passages removed. The Hockey Sweater was challenged by a group that wrote to the publisher asking that reference to God be deleted because it defined a specific religion. Needless to say, it remains untouched.

Highly respected Canadian writer Jane Rule published The Young in One Another's Arms in 1977. It moved unrestricted across the border until 1990, when Customs held up its shipment to two gay bookstores.

Protesters in the past have objected to Margaret Lawrence's The Diviners, Alice Munroe's The Lives of Girls and Women, among many others. Today, they are targeting New Age books and books on witchcraft.

The library is adamantly remains against censorship of books; its goal is to promote readership.

The public is invited to view the display, try a short censorship quiz and join the library. The library opens at 10 a.m. Monday to Saturday. It closes at 8 p.m. Monday and Wednesday, at 6 p.m. Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, and at 5 p.m. on Saturday.

Holocaust denial topic at Temple

The Montreal Holocaust Centre is co-ordinating a three-part series, Lest We Forget: Remembering the Warsaw Ghetto Uprising 50 Years Later. One of the events, the second in the series, will take place at Temple Emanu-El-Beth Sholom, 4100 Sherbrooke St. On March 21 at 8 p.m., McGill University law professor Irwin Cotler will speak on "Holocaust Denial and the New Antisemitism."

The first lecture in the series, at 8 p.m. on Wednesday, March 10, will be given by Chaika Spiegel, one of the 10 remaining survivors of the uprising. She will be joined by her daughter and granddaughters and students from Jewish schools, who will read from writings preserved from the Warsaw ghetto. This keynote event is at the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue, 4894 St. Kevin St.

The series ends Wednesday, March 31, at 8 p.m. at Tiferekth Beth David Jerusalem Congregation, 6519 Baily St., with readings and songs. Survivors, their children and Montreal Jewish youth will participate.

The series is free and the general public is welcome.

IN WESTMOUNT
(VICTORIA AND SHERBROOKE)

June Mace — travel agent

June Mace got into the travel business on the recommendation of a Westmounter.

"Twelve years ago Jane Harris-Putnam suggested it might be something interesting for me to do. I had been at home with my children when they were small and was looking around for something. She sent me to a friend who had a travel agency, and I started by going in one day a week to learn the business. I had done a couple of tours for the English-Speaking Union, and thought I would like it.

"I started working two days a week, then three...

"When my boss and his wife bought into Westmount Travel, they took me with them."

Grasp of detail, endless patience

Ms. Mace is a registered travel agent ("travel consultant, if you want to use the fancy name") at Westmount Travel. She handles all group travel, and acts as an escort on some group tours.

"We have a lot of clients in Westmount. I take it as a great compliment that I get a lot of word-of-mouth referrals. And a lot of people who travel with me do it again. Last year, I took 27 people to Australia, and 21 of them had travelled with me before."

She says that being a travel agent takes "a grasp of detail work, endless patience, a liking for people, enjoyment of travel — this is not a high-paying job, but you are selling a product that makes people happy."

Ms. Mace admits to being a workaholic, but feels that her job requires long hours.

"I'm in by 7:30 a.m. and never leave before 5:30, and sometimes work until 8 p.m. I take every Thursday off, but work Saturday if it's busy."

She was interviewed on a Sunday, when she came into the office to catch up on filing.

"I'm a perfectionist, but I would rather get it done than have to worry about it next day."

Ms. Mace was born and educated in England and came for a visit to Montreal as a young woman, and just never went back. She was working as a office secretary when she met and married Richard, now a retired insurance consultant.

They have two grown children who live with them in Beaconsfield: Julie Rose, 20, studying early childhood education at Vanier College, and Peter, 23, "Mr. Fix-It," a plumber and handiman.

Fitness for fun

In spite of her love of her job, Ms. Mace does have other interests.

"I play golf in summer and swim. I go to Aquafitness twice a week year round. I like movies and have season tickets for Lakeshore Players. I like to cook and fancy myself a good cook. I used to garden, but I have turned that all over to my husband."

In the neighborhood

Mr. Mace was forced to retire by a rare condition that has caused him to lose all but peripheral sight, leaving him legally blind.

However, the Maces still travel together (not on business) and he has adjusted many other activities, such as listening to talking books instead of reading.

"I love to read — thick books," Ms. Mace adds. "Suspense is my favourite. I like Evelyn Anthony and Robert Ludlum. I am a rapid reader."

This is a good thing, because the travel business generates a lot of paper, and Ms. Mace often takes a good deal of it home with her to read.

"I can relax when I read. I never hear anything, and have missed stops on trains, and even my flight being called. But reading is a way to relax and escape.

"And of course I write to people all over the world when I have time."

If she won the Loto, and suddenly found herself rich, what would she do?

"I would buy a place in England — to travel to, near my family. I never want to live anywhere but Canada. I love the winter sunshine and have travelled across Canada to Vancouver and Victoria. So I would keep living here. I like to stay in a flat when I travel, though. It is the ideal way to see a country."

And does she have a favourite travel destination? She looks — stunned is the only word for it.

"I like everywhere," she says, amazed.

Blood clinics come to universities

Many Westmount students and professors will have an opportunity to donate blood in the next weeks.

From Monday, March 8, through Friday, March 12, a mobile Red Cross clinic will be held in McGill University's McIntyre Medical Sciences Building, 3655 Drummond Street, in the sixth-floor foyer. The clinics run from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m. each day.

On Monday and Tuesday, March 15 and 16, clinics will be held from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. on the mezzanine of Concordia University's Hall Building.

On Wednesday, March 17, a clinic will be held at Université de Montréal's Hautes Etudes Commercial, 5255 Decelles Ave., in the second floor students' lounge.

On Thursday, March 18, from 9:30 a.m. to 4 p.m., a clinic will be held in Room 102 of Marianopolis College, 3880 Côte des Neiges.

Organ recital at St. Matthias'

Organist Scott Bradford will perform a recital of works by Bach, Schumann, Langlais and Albright at St. Matthias' Church, 10 Church Hill, at 8 p.m. on Wednesday, March 10. Admission is $5.

Mr. Bradford is director of music at the Church of St. James the Apostle. He is a graduate of University of Toronto and McGill University, with a performance history here and in Europe, including many concerts on CBC and Radio Canada.

Locals to transform ballroom for St. Pat's

By LAUREEN SWEENEY

Westmounter Karin Austin, whose husband Dr. Gus O'Gorman is president of the St. Patrick's Society, is raving about decorations planned for this year's charity ball on Friday, March 12. Westmounters Betty and Peter Scott, who come up with something different every year, are planning to transform the Château Champlain ballroom into something really dramatic.

"They'll be the best of any ball this year," promises Mrs. Scott. Each of the 40 or 50 dinner tables will have a unique centrepiece.

The O'Gorman children, Aisling, 9, and Michael, 11, are participating in the traditional set dancing. Locals Alister Sinclair and his wife Dr. Mary Gillen are also on the committee. Guest of honour is Msgr. Russell Breen, pastor of St. Patrick's Basilica, who'll receive the society's first annual community award. Former Westmount mayor Brian Gallery plans to be at the ball as usual convinced it's "the biggest and best ever." He's the reviewing officer for the big parade two days later. Tickets cost $125 per person or $65 if you're under 25. To obtain them call 481-1346.

The names of five recipients of this year's Westmount civic honours announced Monday are: architect J. Omer Marchand (1873-1936), who designed the C.N.D. Mother House, which is now Dawson College; broadcaster and writer Leslie Roberts (1898-1980); artist and Westmount High teacher Douglas Lawley (1905-1971); general practitioner Dr. Francis Malcolm Alexander McNaughton (1874-1968) and his son, neurologist Dr. Francis L. McNaughton (1906-1986). The awards will be presented to family members at the city's annual Vin d'Honneur at Victoria Hall on March 31.

Selena Beattie, 16, has been selected to participate in a week-long session April 17 of the Forum of Young Canadians in Ottawa, a non-profit organization to teach students about government. The Grade 11 student at Trafalgar is an excellent history student who's interested in politics and is the founder of a school jazz club. "She's one of those kids who's a bright light in a class," says vice-principal Jane Bourne Wightman, who also grew up in Westmount.

"It's an incredible opportunity to see how government works," Selena says. The constitutional issue whetted her appetite for politics. "Growing up in a bilingual part of the country, it's impossible not to be affected by it."

Ward 1 councillor Gail Johnson along with other Westmounters Geraldine Gahan, Rita Solomon and Linda Lenczner are members of the newly-expanded board of the Montreal Convalescent Hospital Foundation. Mrs. Johnson's mother, Loretta Tolhurst, was one of the founders of the hospital's women's auxiliary some 40 years ago. The foundation board will be heavily involved in planning the hospital's first capital campaign in 60 years to renovate the west wing. Eighty per cent will be paid by Quebec's Ministry of Health and Social Services.

"He was like a mother to me," said local police Station 23's crime prevention officer Lise Bergeron at a recent roast for retiring sergeant Jacques Lussier. She shared an office with the well-liked court liaison officer who says it's the "ambiance" at the station that made serving in Westmount "special for me."

Mr. Lussier was well known to local residents who appeared in court or tried to cancel MUC tickets. "I've heard all the excuses," he says. Thoughout his 32 years in blue, he also worked in N.D.G., Côte St. Luc and St. Laurent. To ensure he would never forget his Westmount friends, some of them sneaked out to Châteauguay on his last day of work, Feb. 12, and "penguined" his front yard. They topped it off with a large sign urging motorists to honk as they passed. After all, they reasoned, why should he sleep in?

Has the United Nations outlived its purpose? Should Canada withdraw from the UN? Those are the topics to be debated tomorrow by 16 schools at the annual Senior Provincial Debating Tournament hosted by Trafalgar School next week. Westmounters Robin McKenna and Lianne Pinchuk are among members of the Traf team.

Quebec Drama Federation produces a bi-monthly theatre calendar, available at Double Hook and other bookstores. 843-8698.

World Day of Prayer March 5

The World Day of Prayer service by the churches in Westmount will be held at Westmount Park Church, 4695 de Maisonneuve Blvd. at Lansdowne on Friday, March 5, at 2 p.m. Theme is "Voices of Guatemala." Guest speaker is Caryn Kewell, a member of the Social Justice Committee of Montreal, one of many support groups for Guatemala.

Kibbutz opportunity for students

Twenty-six Dawson students are in Israel as part of the college's semester in Israel program, being offered for the 15th year. The program is organized and directed by Nitza Parry.

For four months, students live, work and study on a kibbutz.

Courses include Hebrew language and literature, history, English literature, political science and sociology. Tours of Israel, including a week-long seminar in Jerusalem, are part of the program.

Dawson College receives applications from both Jewish and gentile students from several Montreal-area CEGEPS. Registration is now under way for the summer in Israel program. For information call 931-8731.

For the past year students have had the opportunity to spend two weeks, prior to the kibbutz period, studying Hebrew intensively in Ulpan Akiva. This allows them to function in Hebrew and devote some time to volunteer work with newcomers.

Course on kvetching

Temple Emanu-El-Beth Sholom, 4100 Sherbrooke St., is offering a two-week course on kvetching, starting Tuesday, March 16, at 7:30 p.m.

As the press release says, "Kvetching is an art; kvetching is often funny and sometimes bittersweet; above all, from Portnoy's Complaint to Maus, kvetching is serious business for Jews."

Edeet Ravel, a PhD candidate at McGill University who recently won a prize for her literary work in modern midrash, will use various literary works to explore the kvetch. What's behind it? Why and how is it related to the Jewish experience? Is the kvetch a worker in the repair of the world, tikkun olam, or an aggravating deterrent?

There is a $2 fee for materials. The course is open to all. Register at 937-3575.

Tickets for this occasion are $25 and a reception follows. Tuesday to Thursday and Saturday performances are at 8 p.m. and Sunday performances at 7 p.m. are $20 and $22; and $17 and $19 for seniors and students. There are no Friday performances. Box office 739-7944.

WHS students say Mulroney's record took a turn for worse

By MELANIE CURRIER

Westmount High School News

During the last few years, living in Canada has been like riding a roller coaster. First everything seems OK. Then you have the GST and a recession. When things are just starting to look better again, Prime Minister Brian Mulroney decides he wants to resign from his duties as leader of the Progressive Conservative Party.

When about 50 students were interviewed at Westmount High School about his resignation, most of the responses were the same.

A majority of the students said he did a good job at first, then he got "too adventurous," as Estrallita Sheafe put it. This was in reference to his many mistakes such as the Meech Lake accord, the decline of the economy, and a second failure of constitutional reform with the Charlottetown Accord.

A lot of the students thought that it was about time he stepped down.

"It could conduct some change and be better for the country," said Devin Smith.

Other students think the next prime minister could be even worse than Mr. Mulroney.

At Westmount High, Justice Minister Kim Campbell seems like a strong candidate to replace Mr. Mulroney. About half the students surveyed said they would definitely give the vote to a woman, and right there would be a change in the making.

"A woman could handle the job better than a man," said Estrallita.

ECS play made to measure

Akaky Akakievich (Veronica Langlois) came up with ingenious ways to save his rubles in order to buy a suit from the finest tailor (Veronica Henderson) in St. Petersburg. The painting of St. Petersburg, seen in the background, was sketched by Miss Henderson and painted by Amy Moselhi. The Overcoat played at ECS Feb. 25 to 27. The Russian play depicts a writer, called by the playwright's name Nikolai Gogol (also played by Veronica Henderson, who had five roles in all). He writes in a small space to one side of the stage while, centre stage, his fantasies are played out.

MM&M is on its way

Westmount High School's fifth annual neighbourhood party, "Muffins, Mozart and Meades" with Media, will take place Saturday, March 13, from 10:30 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The pancake breakfast, prepared in part by principal Richard Meades, also features muffins baked by Home and School members. The Mozart is provided by Penny Lewis's students. Another "M" has been added to the title this year — Maureen Baron of the National Film Board will give a presentation on "Media" from 11 a.m. to noon in Room 206. Her presentation shows how critical thinking skills are taught to children through use of various media.

The school prefects will run a Penny Fair and babysit younger children.

Tickets for the event are $12 for a family, $5 for general admission, $3 for students and seniors, and $2 for children under 10. Everyone is welcome.

Special tribute for children

The congregation of The Church of St. Andrew and St. Paul, 3415 Redpath St., (Sherbrooke at Bishop) is anxious to show solidarity with the Jewish Community, especially in light of recent events locally and worldwide.

Westmount resident Arlan Sunnarborg will direct the church choir in an extraordinary Canadian premiere on Sunday, March 7, at 4 p.m.

Songs of Children by Robert Convery, was composed in memory of all children who perished in the Holocaust. The music is composed for choir, violin, viola, cello and piano. It is a cantata of nine poems written by children at Terezin concentration camp.

The Fauré Requiem will conclude the program.

Freewill offering. Everyone is welcome.

Violence explored at St. A-D-D

A new Sunday study series for March on violence begins this week at St. Andrew's-Dominion-Douglas Church. Guest speaker is Katherine Cukier of CBC's Media Watch. Her topic is "Violence in Society through a Media Perspective." At other meetings in the month, topics will be "Violence Against Women," "Family Violence," and "A Theological Reflection."

The study series is held after service on Sunday, at about 12:15 p.m. Everyone is welcome.

A six-part course on Creative Parenting will begin March 10 and run through the month.

Westmounter's columns on hymns compiled

The late Westmounter Bishop James A. MacLean wrote a column in Montreal Churchman during the last few years of his life (he died in 1992). Twenty-one of his columns were on well-loved hymns; they have been collected and published as Living Hymns.

The book will be of interest to all Christians — not just Anglicans — as each of the hymns is sung by all denominations.

It is the wish of the Bishop's widow, Jean, that all proceeds from the sale of the book go to establish the Bishop MacLean Bursary Fund at the Montreal Diocesan Theological College.

The book is for sale at the Diocesan Book Room in Les Promenades de la Cathedrale beneath Christ Church Cathedral. The price is $7.95 plus tax.

Persons with long-term lung or heart conditions, or 65 or older, are at high risk and should receive annual influenza vaccinations.

Wacky school bus donated to hospital

As children enter the Montreal Children's Hospital, they are greeted by a brightly coloured sculpture at the entrance. The work was recently donated to the hospital by the children of Westmounters Charles and Andrea Bronfman and of Franklin Silverstone and by the Mollie Udashkin Fund. The sculpture is just the beginning of a project to refurbish some areas of the hospital.

The colourful work is an open-roofed bus created by the husband-and-wife team of Patrick Amyot and Brigitte Laurent. The Montreal School Bus is driven by Batman and the passengers are a lively and multi-cultural assortment of children and animals.

Mr. Silverstone, curator of the Claridge Collection, is working with other designers who will create murals with the same joyful feeling, to be placed in areas of the hospital that need modernization.

If you are healthy, remember to give the gift of life. Be a Red Cross blood donor.

The zany Montreal school bus is intended to take children's minds off the reasons for their being in hospital, if only for a few minutes of dreaming.

Westmount Wings forward Zachary Eberts celebrates his second goal scored against the North Shore Barons during atom CC action at Westmount arena.

Wings lord it over Barons

GAME OF THE WEEK

The atom Westmount Wings beat the North Shore Barons at a score of 6-3 at an intercity hockey game at the arena Saturday. It was a close fight far into the game due to Westmount's unfaltering defence.

The teams played it slow and cautious in early minutes, with neither side taking many risks. The aggression, however, began to mount as players such as Westmount's Zack Eberts, Justin West and David Beitel gained confidence against the North Shore. As the period's end approached, Westmount's Nick Velan put away the Wings' first goal assisted by Ben Gillis on a fine pass from the corner. The Barons, however, were not to be put off so soon. At six seconds left in the period, Montgomery, on a pass from Bazinet, slid the puck past goaler Alex Joyce, leaving the period at a 1-1 tie.

quick attack by the Wings that left the Barons somewhat fazed.

Players such as West, Justin McManus and Josh Wilner fired pucks at the Barons goaltender until he eventually relented and Beitel managed to get his team's second goal. Once again, however, the Barons were quick to retaliate and scored two goals within 30 seconds of each other.

This lead by the Barons was not taken well by Westmount fans or team members, and suspense mounted as they began to face the threat of defeat. The game intensified and Westmount seemed rejuvenated as goalie Joyce masterfully dealt with opposing shots and forwards took possession. At 4:07 left in the period, McManus tied it up with a swift shot from the side and within seconds of the second buzzer, West scored again, giving the Wings a 4-3 lead.

At 2:07 left in the game, however, Eberts, assisted by West and Mark Smith, scored on an excellent Wings play. Frustrated, the Barons lost their drive as the clock was running out, but this was not the end. At 0:17, Eberts got another goal for the Wings and the buzzer sounded with a 6-3 victory over the Barons.
