

CAZAVILLE MAN NOT WANTED AS LOITERER

Was Found on Mr. Andrew Wilson's Farm Trapping Skunks at Midnight.

TURKEYS IN TREES.

Eddie Carrier Pleads Guilty to Loitering Charge and Pays All Costs.

Wednesday evening at a late hour when Mr. John Wilson of Glenelg was on his way home from the educational meeting in Huntingdon his attention was drawn to what he thought might lead to the catching of hen thieves. Mr. Wilson heard the turkeys at Mr. Andrew Wilson's making considerable noise and saw a car parked alongside the road. Desiring to warn Mr. Wilson he removed a license plate off the car and hurried to the Wilson home and told his story. Mr. Wilson picked up his shot gun and proceeded with Mr. John Wilson to the car. They drained out the gas line and in this way made certain that the car could not be driven away. They then found a man by the name of Eddie Carrier of Cazaville making a quick get-away from the farm.

When Carrier was questioned as to what he was doing there at that hour of night he claimed he was trapping skunks; although the turkeys were found to be in the trees in place of the shed. To substantiate Carrier's statement he proved that he was interested in the skunk trapping game as he had a number of traps in the car and had other traps set on the farm. It appears that on a previous date Mr. Wilson forbade him trespassing on his farm for the purpose of trapping. The bailiff, R. A. Small was summoned and Carrier was taken to Huntingdon. A loitering charge was taken out to which he pleaded guilty, so the matter was settled out of court, Carrier paying all the costs, including lawyer Longtin's fees.

QUEBEC'S FOREST ACREAGE SET AT 130 MILLIONS

Crown Still Owns 191,772 Sq. Miles. Estimated Value Being at Least $600,000,000.

A picture of the great forests and hydro powers of the province of Quebec is unrolled by a perusal of a publication just issued by Hon. Honore Mercier, Minister of Lands and Forests. The booklet is profusely and ably illustrated, and in a relatively short space the reader can learn much about the natural resources of Quebec. The work is divided into two sections, the first dealing with the forests and the second with the waterpowers.

The forestry resources of the province occupy more than 130 million acres, the booklet shows, and in many of the regions constitute the only possible crop, the land not being suited to agriculture. It is noted that in another way the forests mean a great deal, and that is by holding water and thereby regulating streams. It is estimated that 22,000 square miles of forest lands will in time become available for agriculture, and the extent of this is realized by pointing out that the present agricultural territory of the province is 18,000 square miles. Of the forests of the province the Crown is still the heavy owner. Individuals own 9,795 square miles, colonists have 2,023 on location tickets and the Crown has 191,772 square miles. The greater part of the privately-owned forests come from grants made in the days of the French regime, or have been conceded by the Crown to encourage colonization. The value of such privately-owned forests is around $40,000,000, and the annual production from them runs to about $10,000,000. The value of the forests that stand is estimated at 1,000,000,000, and this takes in only forests which can be reached and, therefore, are commercial. Information is given as to the forestry service, the fire prevention system, and stress is laid on the requirement that all must have permits to move through the forests.

Quebec's Waterpowers. Turning to waterpowers, it is noted that while much has been done in the way of development still much more remains to be done, for of the 15,000,000 horse power available the development has been up to 1,800,000 only, and it is estimated that this development represents a saving of 14,000,000 tons of coal, of $144,000,000.

"In what position would we be without this power?" is a question put before the reader, and the article goes on to speak of the fact that it was due to waterpower development that such places as Kenogami, Arviratville, Mercier, Shawinigan, La Tuque and Clark City had come into being. The progress of the province is intimately and proportionately allied with the development of the water powers, it is stressed.

Some valuable information as to the great dams which have been constructed by the Government is given, such as the Gouin dam at L. L. L. on the St. Maurice, the Allard dam on the St. Francois, that at Kenogami. The Gouin dam is greater even than the famous Assouan dam in Egypt. By regulating the flow of the waters of the St. Maurice it has been possible to produce the electricity which in great measure supplies Montreal. Reference is

HON. J. A. ROBB PLEASES QUEEN CITY PRESS

"We Have Promised to Ease The Burden of Irksome Taxes And We Are Prepared to do That Very Thing," Says Hon. J. A. Robb.

FURTHER BOONS IN NEXT BUDGET

Acting Prime Minister And Minister of Finance Sees Abundant Evidence of Continued Prosperity in Canada.

Good times are already here and better times are in store for the immediate future. Such was the modest, but none the less confident, pronouncement made to The Globe by Hon. James A. Robb, Dominion Minister of Finance and Acting Dominion Premier. Mr. Robb, whose name has become a household word through the famous Robb Budget, spent a very busy day in Toronto, his visit being in connection with several official and unofficial matters.

"Signs of good times are not lacking," remarked Mr. Robb, during a brief interview secured with him at the King Edward Hotel. "One at Ottawa trying to place his finger on the pulse of the country cannot help but get that impression; but aside from all that we have the same confident expression of opinion from our great bankers, the heads of our transcontinental railway systems and the press of Canada. And it seems just as certain that still better times are in store for us during the coming year."

As the author of the Budget credited with great influence in bettering things financially in Canada, he was quite unprepared to assume credit for present and coming prosperity of the country at large.

It is a Great Canada. "It is largely a natural turning of the tide," said he, quietly. "We have the country with the resources behind it to demand our share in prosperity. The Budget was just a fortunate preparation for events in their sequence."

Mr. Robb, however, did admit that he had received letters from people all over Canada, many of them Conservatives, lauding the beneficial principles of his Budget, largely in connection with the alleviation of irksome taxes. "The most pleasing feature," he remarked, "is the absence of complaints, and when we don't hear people complaining things must be improving. I don't think it is beyond the point to say that the tone of the times and the spirit of our people have both improved immensely since the Liberals went into power six years ago."

Regarding a campaign alleged to have been started, or about to be started, in the West for the complete abolition of income taxes, Mr. Robb expressed mild wonder "as to what alternative could be proposed to provide the funds necessary to carry on the nation's business. Such matters, in his opinion, would best be taken up by the elected members of the people. That was what members were sent to Parliament for."

"Still," said Mr. Robb, "we will be prepared to listen to all suggestions submitted to us—at the right time. We have promised to ease the burden of irksome taxes and we are prepared to do that very thing. At the same time, it should be remembered that in making that particular promise we did not mention any specific tax. You may be assured we are not going to fall down on that promise, but it will take time, and the public must be patient until the Budget is presented to fit out just where the reductions will come."

Short Session Predicted. As has been previously announced, the Dominion House will meet on Dec. 9th, and the Governor-General will open the House on Dec. 10th. On the following Monday the House will take up the address in reply to the Speech from the Throne. "We hope to dispose of the address by the following day," Mr. Robb told The Globe. "If that is done, it is fair to assume that considerable latitude will be allowed in discussions when the House resumes after the Christmas holidays."

The Acting Prime Minister was of the opinion that there would not be two sessions of the House this fiscal year, but he believed the House would simply agree to an adjournment after the different parties have caucused. "The last two sessions having been unusually protracted, the House ought to be in a mood to go through with this session's business in short order," concluded Mr. Robb.

ELGIN CHURCH SOCIAL NETS NEARLY $125.

Varied Programme Received Many Favorable Comments.

The Presbyterian congregation of Elgin held their annual social in the basement of Elgin Church on the evening of Nov. 18th, and were favoured with a large attendance. After a bountiful supper, at which the ladies lived up to their reputation as cooks, the meeting was called to order by the chairman, Rev. A. McK. Simpson. The choir rendered the Harvest Home very sweetly. Mr. Bryce Wilson accompanied by Miss Helen Brown gave a couple of solos. Rev. Dr. Maclean gave a short address in his usual happy manner. Recitation by Ida Kerr and also one by Vera Stark. A habitant reading by Dr. Rowat in his best style. The programme committee were indebted to Messrs Charles and Bryce Wilson, Chinoaur of Lachine and Thos Macfarlane, who contributed several selections on the piano and violin during the evening. A candy and ice cream booth conducted by Mrs. Geo. Black and Miss Lillian Murdoch netted $28.25 and the net proceeds amounted to $123.00.

PREMIERS SEE GIGANTIC NEW BRIT. AIRSHIP

Ship Will Bring Canada Within 2 1/2 Days of London.

De Luxe Accommodation Will Have Promenade Decks, Lounges, Smoking And Dining Rooms.

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The Dominion premiers today, at Cardington, inspected the structure of the new airship which is to bring Canada within two and a half days of London, as predicted by Sir Samuel Hoare, head of the Air Ministry, at the Imperial Conference about three weeks ago.

The structural work on the ship so far has only advanced sufficiently to give an idea of its immense size. Nearly by the R33, the military airship which flew above the German fleet when it surrendered on its completion in the armistice. Great as the R33 appeared it could pass within the framework of R101, the airship now under construction.

The R101, with a sister ship, will have accommodation for 100 passengers each, and their baggage, and ten tons of mail matter. They will each have sleeping cabins of two or four berths, promenade decks, lounges, smoking rooms and dining rooms capable of seating 50 people at one time.

For the benefit of the visitors today R33 was taken from its shed and it made an ascent. It flew round and round, now visible like a huge silver torpedo, now hidden among the clouds. The ship was to have a coxed aeroplane while aloft, but the clouds were so low that this part of the programme had to be abandoned.

Premier Mackenzie King with the other premiers visited the mooring masts and inspected their operation both above and below. Premier King has already indicated the intention of the Canadian Government to proceed with the erection of a mooring mast in Canada for the reception of airships. "Gazette."

RAIL WORKER HURT BADLY

James Premo's Chest And Back Severely Injured in Accident at Malone Junction.

James Premo, of Malone was badly injured in an accident while working for the New York Central Railroad company at Malone Junction Friday morning. Mr. Premo was employed there as a laborer and was making repairs on the turn table in the rear of the engine house when he was hurt. The table was turning slowly at the time, an engine being turned around. In some manner Mr. Premo fell between the turn table and the side of the pit. His chest and back were crushed and he suffered other injuries. Other workmen rushed to his rescue and he was taken to the Alice Hyde Hospital, where he was attended by Dr. J. W. Kilsane. X-rays were made of his injuries. While Mr. Premo is suffering considerable pain it was said that he will recover.

H'D ON ACADEMY CROOK CAUGHT PASSING CHECKS IN MALONE

Stranger Posed as Bell Telephone Employee And Passed Checks of Small Denominations.

Village and State police are searching for an impostor who local telephone company and who made an unsuccessful attempt Thursday evening to pass checks on several local residents.

Giving his name as Fred Smith, a man apparently between 35 and 40 years, it is stated called at several Duane street homes asking to rent two rooms for four men who he claimed were working with him for the Northern New York Telephone corporation. He proffered a good sized check at each place as advance room rent expecting to get the balance of the check in cash.

Residents turned him down after a phone call to the local telephone office showed that no such man is in their employ. Turned away from one residence it is stated he sought out others and gave the name of the first well known resident as reference. After communicating with this resident and learning of the impostor, Smith was unsuccessful in his efforts to cash the check in cash.

Every possible effort is being made to round up the man and learn his identity. Friday afternoon further reports were coming in relative to Smith's activities in other sections of the village. He called at the home of Frank Randall in Pearl street and there made arrangements to rent a room. He tendered a check of ten dollars to Mrs. Randall and requested that she take out a dollar as a deposit on the room.

After deducting the dollar, Mrs. Randall gave Smith nine dollars in currency. Then when she endeavored to cash the check at the bank she learned it was worthless.

Another woman by the name of Coughlin also reports that Smith tried to engage a room from her and offered a check from which a deposit was to be taken out. He got no money at this home.

Saturday afternoon the rascal was caught twenty minutes after passing another cheque for $10.00. When apprehended he gave his name as Atkins, and was given six months in Onondaga penitentiary.

FAITHFUL DOG SAVES MASTER FROM DEATH

Master Lost Paddle And Dog Swims to Shore With Canoe in Tow.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Nov. 15.—After a terrific struggle against adverse winds, a dog as loyal as he is strong, swam to the shore of Michigan Island near here, dragging in tow his master in a canoe.

The story drifted out of the island in the Soo today, telling how Prince had put up a gallant and winning fight to save his master, George Graham, an employee of the Booth Fishing Company, who was in his canoe with his faithful dog when the latter was unable to swim and helpless, he was being blown by a stiff wind out into Lake Superior. Drifting farther and farther out toward the rough waters of the lake, he had almost given him self up for lost, when he decided to try his fate to Prince. Taking the end of the painter of the canoe, he fastened it around the dog's neck and threw the animal overboard, telling him to swim for shore, 500 yards distant. Prince did.

World's Champion Ayrshire Sold. Betsy Wylie, the world's champion Ayrshire cow in the production of butter fat, and her fifteen months old calf, Betsy Wylie's Noble, have been purchased for a sum well over the four figures by Glen Campbell Stock Farms, Dundas, Ontario, from Samuel C. Crockett, Middle Musquodoboit, N. S. Betsy Wylie lately completed an official record in the Canadian Record of Performance, conducted by the Federal Department of Agriculture, of 1103 lbs. butter from 21,805 lbs. milk, his average test for butter fat being 5.06 per cent. Betsy was a silver cup winner in the Ayrshire Association competition at four years, with a record of 18,021 lbs. milk, 854 lbs. fat. She has also a creditable three year old record. This cow was brought all the way from Nova Scotia to Toronto by Mr. Crockett to be placed on exhibition at the Royal Winter Fair.

Besides the foregoing purchases the Messrs F. C. Biggs & Sons, proprietors of Glen Campbell Stock Farm, have also purchased twenty head of high producing show quality Ayrshires from the Western Live Stock Corporation at Burlington, Ont., including the bull, Law Milton Artist, champion at the last Canadian National Exhibition at Toronto and second at the recent Royal Show. Mr. David Hunter, ex-fieldman of the Ayrshire Association, is associated with the Messrs. Biggs in these purchases.

GOOD BAZAAR AT ANOTHER CHURCH UNION VOTE IN VALLEYFIELD

Anglican Church Congregation Property Commission Issues Judgment in Last of Disputes.

2 ACCIDENTS ON BRIDGE

Ormsdown Curling Club Executives Appointed—Club has Balance of $62. in Treasury.

The bazaar and supper held in McDougall Hall by the Anglican Church on Friday evening was a decided success. Upwards of 250 took supper. The proceeds of the supper and from the sale of the many beautiful and useful articles offered for sale brought in a net profit of $230. for the church.

Sunday was a day of accidents. In the morning when Mr. and Mrs. P. N. Williams and daughter were going to church an American car ran into them on the bridge, throwing all three out of the buggy, breaking a wheel and taking the shafts off the buggy, the horse running away. Fortunately none of the three were seriously hurt more than the shaking up in the upset. An auto truck collided with the auto of Lorne Drysdale the same morning and at the same place. The auto was rather badly damaged having the windshield, top and other parts broken.

Nine packages of twelve books each have been received from the Department of Public Instruction, Quebec, to be distributed to the different schools in this section as an addition to the library of each school.

PROPERTY COMMISSION ISSUES JUDGMENT IN LAST OF DISPUTES.

The final session of the Quebec Church Property Commission was held Wednesday, and after 23 sittings the board rendered judgments in a number of cases. Sir Arthur Currie, chairman, Gregor Barclay, K.C., and Rev. Dr. Pidgeon, commissioners, paid tribute to the harmony that had prevailed during the hearings and complimented counsel J. A. Ewing, K.C., George A. Campbell, K.C., and E. C. Place, K.C., on their handling of the claims of their clients. The commissioners also congratulated Lieut.-Col. Bovey, secretary, on his assistance throughout.

In the matter of the Valleyfield union vote in which a number of Methodists who had previously joined the Presbyterians in local union, had voted, the commission decided to require another vote. The sum of $5,541 was indicated to the trustees of the non-concurring minority in the case of Calvin Westminster, on application of the minority for title to the church.

This continuing church in Hemmingford was granted title to St. Andrew's on condition of payment of $5 following a form of agreement between the Union and Presbyterians.

A recommendation in regard to St. Paul's, Ormsdown, from Mr. Barclay, that the Methodist Church be transferred to the Presbyterians, under conditions acceptable to the majority, was allowed to stand by the commission, in spite of slight disagreement from some of the other members.

A compromise as to combined use of the Scotsdown Church by both the Union and minority was accepted in principle.

The application from the minority in Montreal East was dismissed, the request for relief being considered beside the principles laid down by the commission.

Perfect Harmony. Music! How important a part of our life it is. Keep those musical faculties stimulated. But you must have real music—not jangling, discordant, tin-canney noise—that is worse than none at all.

You must have perfect harmony—from the rumble of the kettle drums to the high tremulous silver tones of the violin and flutes. Each instrument must be distinctly heard—all must be combined into one glorious, harmonious whole.

Thorla Radios because of their scientific construction, and because they embody the most advanced radio engineering, will bring to you this kind of music—at your convenience. Advt.

Water as Wealth.

"Cheap as dirt, and free as water" is an expression often used to explain how easily a thing can be had, but both dirt and water are very valuable resources of the Province of Quebec. Before long the Quebec Legislature will be meeting and it is quite possible that considerable attention will be paid to the Government's policy of building up reservoirs at the heads of the important rivers of the Province. Perhaps this policy is the most far-reaching of any practiced by the Government and already has brought definite results. Water power is the source of driving power for over 70 per cent of the factories in Canada now, twenty years ago a factory town was marked by huge stacks pouring out masses of black smoke, but year by year the cheaper and cleaner electric current has been taking the place of coal as motive power and already some paper mills are using electricity to heat the water and make the steam necessary in the manufacture of their products. Of course the railways are nearly all steam driven and, if we include the locomotives in the calculation, steam is still king in Canada, the proportion being: 55 per cent of the power from fuel and 45 per cent from water powers, but we have the water powers while we have no coal and in time the white coal of the rivers will supply the force necessary for every industry, and every home in Quebec. Norway and Sweden are the two countries of the world which lead Canada in power supplies, although as the total power which can be developed at the known sites in Canada when the rivers are at their low stage is 18,255,316 horse power. At the present time the actual development is under the four million mark.

Quebec has a possible development, according to the most recent data, of 6,915,244 horse power and about one-sixth has already been developed, and a great part of the remainder is within reach of our industrial centres. The Natural Resources Intelligence Service of the Dominion in a recent booklet which deals with the natural resources of Quebec says:

"The Montreal district is generously supplied with hydro-electric power from a number of plants in the vicinity, including the large Cedars plants on the St. Lawrence river. A certain amount is also received from Shawinigan Falls. Augmentation of the present supply is to be had from the further utilization of the rapids of the St. Lawrence between the city and lake St. Francis, the total available being approximately 2,000,000 horse power."

That power is today flowing to the sea without rendering the service it could to man, but it will be harnessed in time to our uses, and when it is a tremendous industrial expansion will take place in the St. Lawrence valley. The same booklet says:

"Great quantities of cheap power are known to attract various branches of the electro-chemical industry and thus important electro-chemical centres such as now exist at Shawinigan Falls may be expected to develop at other large power sites of the province. Some of the products requiring cheap power and which, therefore, can be best and most economically manufactured by hydro-electric energy are the following: aluminum, magnesium, carbon electrodes, ferro-alloys, carborundum, caustic soda, chlorine, cyanamide, silicon, calcium carbide graphite and electrolytic zinc. Most of these are at present being manufactured at the large Canadian electro-chemical centres at Niagara and Shawinigan Falls."

Shawinigan Falls is a name frequently mentioned whenever discussions arise over power development and the influence of Government policy plays a part in the development of the St. Maurice valley. The Quebec Steams Commission is a most important branch of the public services of the Province. Its activities are directed by the Minister of Lands and Forests, Hon. Honoré Mercier, and during recent years it has made tremendous strides forward in conserving the water power resources of the province. Acting on the fundamental principle that a water wheel capable of producing 1000 horse power is only worth 500 horse power if there is only enough water flowing down in the summer months to keep it turning at half speed, the Commission has made a survey of the sources of supply at the head of the rivers, and the first gigantic storage reservoir to be constructed was at La Loutre. This reservoir, which is the largest in the world, has a capacity of 160 billion cubic feet and this supply has enabled the Commission to double the power possibilities of the St. Maurice river and yet maintain an even flow. The same policy was followed on the St. Francois, where an additional 40,000 horse power became available, on the Ste. Anne de Beaupre, on the Metis and at Lake Kenogami near Chicoutimi. Others are under way, and thus the power resources of the Province are growing in proportions and value, attracting new businesses to the Province, and giving the whole of the St. Lawrence valley a more balanced business and industrial division.

Primarily these dams are built to aid the pulp and paper industry, but the developments at Shawinigan and those now under way at Arvida show that power in time will drive the pulp and paper business into a secondary place. Moreover the construction of dams will compensate for the losses caused by the cutting off of the trees. The timber limits of the province have an estimated value of $600,000,000 and consist of 310 billion feet, covering 130,000,000 acres of land. Millions of feet of lumber are being cut off, and as the soil is frequently very light, rapid erosion takes place with the consequent result that the water flows off quickly after rains, and in torrents in the seasons of freshets. This water would flow quickly down to the sea, were it not for the artificial storage basins erected at the head of the rivers and once caught, the flow can be regulated by machines.

One of the off-shoots of the development of electric power in the Province has an international turn to it, for we all know that Canada is a tremendous buyer of coal from the United States and also from Great Britain. Some say that we should burn only Canadian coal, but the cost of transportation makes it cheaper to buy the United States article and so it is bought, despite the fact that the purchases made in that country influence the exchange rates on the Canadian dollar. It is, therefore, worth remembering that the present development of electric power in Canada is equivalent to an annual saving of 27 million tons of coal, while the exports of power to the United States compensate for the purchase of 1,500,000 more tons. Had we to buy these additional amounts of coal from the United States during the past few years it would have resulted in depressing the value of our money to a considerable extent.

In business foresight and sound economics the Quebec government has not been remiss in protecting the water power developments of the Province and it is to be hoped that in any discussions that take place this winter the rights and needs of the other rivers will receive fair and just consideration, and that party spleen will not be allowed to interfere with the policy of utilizing our power resources for the benefit of the province and its people.

FATTENING FOODS FOR FOLKS WHO ARE THIN

People Who Use up Their Energy in Waste Movement Should Learn How to Rest—No One Can Expect to Maintain Health Without Observing Rules of Sane Living.

"The first thing to consider when you are under weight is whether you are too much underweight," says an article on diet. Thin people, if they are well, are apt to feel better than those who are over-weight.

"If you are considerably below the ordinary standard in weight it is important to be examined by a good physician, to find out whether or no there is any abnormal or diseased condition which is the cause of your thinness. If any such condition is found it should be treated by the physician.

"Thin persons whose physicians can find nothing wrong with them may be so because of their bad habits of living. Perhaps they work all day, go to bed late, sleep until the last minute, eat a hurried breakfast and do not take sufficient time for lunch. They frequently form the habit of tasting a little food between meals to allay hunger, and so spoil their appetite for their regular meals. Those who actually consume little food during the day their digestive apparatus is kept at work all the time, and so becomes jaded. It should be allowed to rest between meals.

Other persons are under-weight merely because of their working habits. One seldom sees a fat farmer, unless he is prosperous enough to employ others to do his work. The working farmer requires about twice as much food as the professional man, yet he can eat scarcely enough to keep him from being raw-boned.

"Thin people of the nervous type are frequently so active that they use, in waste movement, all the extra food they eat. Their problem is to learn how to rest. Even though they are taking the right kinds of food to gain weight, they must rest in order to store away extra energy.

"Many persons regard the time spent in bed as time lost, but this is not true. No one can expect to maintain health, strength and efficiency unless he is willing to adopt rules for sane living.

"Some eat large quantities of food, yet remain thin. The trouble is that their appetites are not for the right kinds of food. Others are thin because they eat too little food.

"Putting on weight involves only a simple mathematical equation—eat and assimilate more than the daily requirements for energy. The rest will be stored away by the body as fat, and the weight will increase accordingly. You must do two things to gain: one is to rest more, thus reducing your expenditure of energy; the other is to eat easily digested foods which will furnish energy or calories in concentrated form. To calculate how many calories you are eating get a good book giving caloric values of food.

"A good breakfast for increasing weight would be made up of fruit of any kind, buckwheat or other cakes, sirup, plenty of butter and a pint of milk. A third could be fruit, bacon and eggs, cereal and cream, bread and butter. Coffee can be included in the habit, for it is established, but if you are highly nervous break off the habit, or take it weak and with much cream.

"For luncheon, select creamed soups, salads with oil, or rich whipped cream dressings, and include a bottle of milk.

Renovating Felt Hat.

Unless the hat is so dilapidated the following process will improve its appearance: With a little cold water to which a few drops of ammonia have been added, sponge the hat thoroughly, after first brushing to remove all dust. Then wring a fairly thick cloth out of cold water, lay it over the hat, and iron it with a moderately hot iron till dry. Put something stiff inside the hat to give a firm surface for ironing. Pull the cloth away quickly and the nap will be raised.

What British Connection Means For Us.

"Saturday Night" is occasionally accused of being too British in its sympathies by those "little Canadians" who secretly or openly advocate anything which may assist the severance of the British connection. This journal believes that those who advocate this course are not fully cognizant of the extent and importance of the benefits that Canada derives from its membership in the British Commonwealth. The truth is that if, as we are told, it is more blessed to give than to receive, Great Britain has a better claim than Canada to a place in the Heavenly Kingdom. British taxpayers are now, and have been for many years, annually providing immense sums of money that would have to be raised here in Canada if British support were withdrawn. Consider, for example, the matter of naval defence. This is surely as relatively important to Canada, with its Pacific coast just across the street, as it were, from the teeming millions of China and Japan, whose most urgent need is room for expansion, as it is to Great Britain herself. Canada would not survive many decades without adequate protection. Furthermore, sea power is obviously needed to protect Canada's ever-growing overseas trade.

And who now pays the cost of this protection? Figures published by the Federation of British Industries show that the estimated expenditure by Great Britain on naval defence of the Empire during the fiscal year 1925-26, was approximately $302,500,000, by Canada $1,500,000, by Australia $19,605,725 plus a special appropriation of $5,000,000, by New Zealand $2,691,625, and by South Africa $699,465. The payment per capita of population in Great Britain was approximately $6.69, in Canada 16 cents, in Australia $3.16, in New Zealand $1.92, and in South Africa 42 cents. Thus it is obvious that the overwhelming proportion of the cost of the naval defence of the British Commonwealths is borne by Great Britain.

A further illuminating comparison is afforded by the expenditure of British industries for the respective amounts spent by Great Britain and the Dominions on other services such as government, army, air force, services of the war debt, and war pensions. The total for Great Britain and Northern Ireland was $2,730,000,000, with a per capita cost of $61.98; for Canada $145,000,000, per capita $16.72; for Australia $165,000,000, per capita $30.42; for South Africa $15,000,000, per capita $2.82; and for New Zealand $30,000,000, per capita $25.42. These figures clearly show the striking disproportion between the burdens borne by the British and Dominion taxpayers.

In many respects other than national defence Canada benefits enormously by her partnership in the Empire. For example, she is given the full use of Britain's world-wide diplomatic and consular facilities and news there for not one penny. The conception that many Canadians have of Great Britain as a tottering old lady depending for support on her straggle sons is, of course, very far removed from actuality. Without the Dominion of India, Great Britain would still be one of the world's mightiest powers, with dominion over 3,800,000 square miles and one hundred millions of people. J. L. Garvin, editor of the London "Observer," wrote recently in this connection: "It is hard, and sometimes seems hopeless, to make the self-governing dominions understand that Great Britain, though never dreaming of keeping any kind of restriction upon them in its own interest, is a mighty nation on its own basis; so that if—which Heaven forbid—every single self-governing dominion were to secede tomorrow, Great Britain's remaining dependencies and protectorates would still cover millions of square miles, constituting in productive area the largest and best and most valuable colonial system in the world."

Hospitals Are Improving Standards.

Over two thousand of the leading surgeons of Canada and the United States, as well as noted guest surgeons from Great Britain and other countries across the seas held conference recently. The proceedings were made notable by the reading of several remarkable papers by experts on cancer, thyroid troubles and other mysterious ailments, but from the lay standpoint the chief interest centred in the discussions on hospital problems and hospital treatment. Hospital standardization was much to the fore and it is satisfactory that Canadian institutions of healing hold a high ranking. No less than nineteen hospitals in Quebec passed the necessary tests to be classed as highly satisfactory in every respect. Hospital standardization is a movement carried on by the American College of Surgeons and its membership so far embraces Canada and the United States mainly, although prominent surgeons in thirty-five other countries are found in its roster. It has done much to improve hospital conditions. Its progress has been phenomenal since its inauguration in 1918. At that time only twelve per cent of the hospitals of this continent met the requirements where, as today this percentage has been increased to sixty-eight.

According to a statement presented, there were 2528 hospitals surveyed this year of which 1731 were approved. The institutions under survey contain, approximately, 5,920,860 beds and care during a year for nearly 6,000,000 patients. An interesting feature of the movement is the fact that it is financed entirely by the colleges of surgeons themselves through an endowment fund and the annual dues of its members. The great congress held in Montreal indicated clearly the increasing interest in this work. Every session was well attended and among the subjects discussed of length were: the focusing of more attention on the patient; more adequate and efficient organization in hospitals; better co-operation and co-ordination; improving of hospital results; and the increasing of interest in scientific medicine.

On the first day of the conference there were assembled the three allied groups, hospital trustees and superintendents, doctors and nurses, and the problem of nursing was discussed from all angles. From this conference it is expected there will evolve a nursing standard which will be practical and of value in promoting service to the patient. An even more unique feature was a conference on the care of the industrially injured patient in the general hospital. At this meeting, for the first time on record, doctors, labor leaders, insurance and workmen's compensation representatives, hospital trustees and superintendents, nurses and others joined in a study of all the problems associated with the care of such patients.

The four great claims advanced on behalf of the hospital standardization movement are that it shortens the stay of a patient in the hospital, lowers the hospital death rate, eliminates unnecessary and incompetent surgery, and reduces infections and complications. All this is held to be due to better means of diagnosis, more scientific

VALUE OF MAN'S BODY PLACED AT 98 CENTS

Surgeon Says Materialistic Explanations of Life All Fail.

A CHEMICAL VALUATION

Montreal—"Despite all our scientific knowledge, life cannot be explained on materialistic grounds," Dr. Allan Craig, Associate Director of the American College of Surgeons, asserted during the course of a discussion of whether medical science and religion were diametrically opposing forces, before the congress of that body here to-day.

"Consider the average 150 pound body of a man from its chemical aspect," Dr. Craig continued. "It contains lime enough to whitewash a fair-sized chicken coop, phosphorus enough to make 2,200 matches and a pinch of sulphur, sugar enough to fill a small shaker, iron to make a tennenny nail, plus water. The total value of these ingredients is 98 cents, or about 60 cents per hundredweight on the hoof. Yet the insurance companies place the economic value of a man at $5,000. How do they account for the difference of $4,999.92?"

"It's the spirit within him" that makes the man supreme in the world and allows him to control materialistic things. Medical science and religion are complementary to each other. One always feels sorry for an individual who cannot visualize anything in life beyond what he can see in a test tube or under a microscope; who cannot appreciate the spirit within."

technique, more consultations and group study of clinical conditions. The hospital death rate in the two countries is lowering steadily.

AN HOUR FOR LITTLE THINGS

Squeaky doors, windows that stick, a missing castor, drawers that won't pull out—any number of little things about the house need a moment or so of attention, yet no one seems to have time to give it. The squeak annoys everyone, each time the door opens, but who gets the oil can and puts a few drops of oil on the hinges? An hour probably would be time enough to take care of every one of these sources of annoyance. Get a small supply of castors, an oil can, a bar of hard yellow soap—for drawers and windows that stick—a hammer and some small nails for the bit of molding that has pulled loose; and some paste and a clean dust-cloth for mending the torn piece of wall paper. All these in a box or basket on a tray, with perhaps a few other little lacks, constitute the "travelling equipment for a tour of the house. Visit every room and note anything which cannot be taken care of by your tray. The relief from having all the little things fixed comes from the nerve-soothing effect of quiet doors, and smoothly working household machinery.

When you wash the curtains and do not use the stretchers, try hanging them on the pole to dry. They will be straight and smooth and will also be of the same length. One woman slips a pole through the hem at the bottom also if they have a tendency to prove short. The heavier curtains that require ironing are given even, straight edges by folding lengthwise and ironing double, not ironing the center when folded but after opening flat on the board. K. M. G.

National Dairy Council Meet In Annual Session

The members of the National Dairy Council of Canada have just closed a two day meeting in Toronto which is recognized to be one of the most successful meetings yet held. The gathering was presided over by the President, Jos. A. Caulder, of Moose Jaw, Sask., while W. F. Stephen of Huntingdon, acted as Secretary in place of the late Mr. Scott. The attendance was nearly one hundred per cent. as out of thirty-three members twenty-eight were present, every Province in Canada being represented.

At the last annual meeting in February the privilege of honorary membership was extended to the Federal and Provincial Dairy Commissioners with the following present—Dr. Riddick, Ottawa, J. A. MacDonald, Charlottetown, P. E. I.; W. A. MacKay, Toronto, N. S.; J. A. Borbeau, Quebec; L. A. Gibson, Winnipeg, Man.; Percy E. Reed, Regina, Sask.; and Dr. Mar-ker, Edmonton, Alta. These men all took part in the discussions and were of valuable assistance to the Council. The President, in his address spoke of the great loss which the Council had sustained within the past year, of both its esteemed President, the late Mr. E. H. Stonehouse of Weston, Ontario, and the capable Secretary, the late D'Arcy Scott of Ottawa. Feeling reference was made by several of the other mem-bers of the Council to the splendid work of the men. The President also referred to the healthy condition of the finances; to the good work done by the late Mr. Scott and Mr. Stephen at Washington last May and trusted that Mr. Stephen could still continue to follow up the opposition put in by the Council to the Lenroot-Taber bills, framed with a view to ban Canadian milk and cream from United States. The President also referred to the good work of Mr. Scott before the Railway Commissioners last June where he made a good case in favor of lower rates on butter from the West to East. He also referred to the bonding of public warehouses so as to give security to those who deposit goods in warehouses for storage, and further he hoped that ere long the Government would remove the stamp tax from cream tickets, $8.00 and under. These and other matters were discussed later with the Hon. Mr. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture and Dr. Riddick. The Minister promised to give these matters consideration and stated that his sympathy was with the Council and its good work, in dealing with all matters connected with the dairy industry. He considered the National Dairy Council a valuable organization to the dairyman and to which they should give liberal support. Mr. Stephen, in presenting the report as Acting Secretary, referred to the financial condition of the Council as being most favourable, considering that it only includes ten months—from January 1st, to October 31st, which, according to the new constitution is not the close of the fiscal year. The total receipts including over five thousand dollars cash on hand on Jan. 1 were seventeen thousand three hundred thirty-eight dollars. The expenses for the ten months were fourteen thousand one hundred and sixty-two dollars, leaving a balance on hand of three thousand one hundred and seventy-six dollars. There is still to be received the balance of the Government Grant and over two thousand dollars in contributions from Eastern Canada. Previously many of these contributions have been paid during the latter part of the year. The Secretary's report covered educational work done in sending out sets of four posters in colors in large numbers, setting forth the value of milk as a food as well as butter, cheese and ice cream, all with a view to increased consumption of these wholesome dairy products. He also referred to the Lenroot-Taber bills, and to the fact that through our and other opposition to these bills the teeth had been drawn from them. He also referred to the tariff investigation on the cost of milk production in Canada by members of the United States Tariff Board. He told how the late Mr. Scott and he had been appointed a committee to arrange for a suitable memorial to the late E. H. Stonehouse, first President of the National Dairy Council. They had selected a beautiful trophy to be presented to the Royal Winter Fair of Toronto, to be competed for in an annual inter-college and inter-county Judging Competition of dairy cattle, the competitor making the highest score to receive a miniature of the trophy. The question of reduced express rates on ice-cream in dry containers was discussed at length and the representatives of the Express Company were invited to attend one of the gatherings, which they did. The case was presented on behalf of the Council by the President, Mr. Caulder, Mr. M. Neilson of Toronto and several others. Considerable information was brought out in the conference and Mr. Ham, Chairman of the Express Companies Association stated that the matter would be given full consideration, and which would be reported to the Secretary. The question of further argument of the Council's case before the Railway Commission, was discussed and Vice-President Stephen was instructed to appear before the Commission on November 30th and if necessary put in any further evidence. In connection with the educational work of the Council, Miss Helen G. Campbell of the Federal Dairy Branch addressed the members on this question. She exhibited several booklets and rhymes for children incorporating a "Milk Story" in each, also several posters, leaflets and book covers, all good mediums for advertising milk and milk products. The Council decided to have fifty thousand booklets printed for free distribution and in doing these are co-operating with the Federal Dairy Branch and the Child Welfare Association. While primarily the work of the Council seemed to be along lines of legislation and transportation, yet a big field has developed along educational lines. Mr. Berry of Langley Prairie and Mr. MacKay of Nova Scotia, both emphasized the need and value of co-operative cow-testing work, and suggested that the members of the Council assist this work whenever possible. The officers, who were elected last February, were re-elected and the question of filling the position of Secretary was left with the Executive, Mr. Stephen, the Vice-President to carry on in the meantime. The Council were pleased to have present the Honorable Mr. Hoadley, Minister of Agriculture of Alberta, and the Honorable Mr. Prefontaine, Minister of Agriculture of Manitoba, who both contributed to the interest of the meeting.

The day previous to the meeting—Wednesday, the Council were the guests of the De Laval Co., of Peterboro. Two special pullmans were placed at their disposal by the Company, taking the guests from Toronto to Peterboro and return. They were taken through the plant by officials of the county and the manufacture of many lines of dairy supplies were inspected. This proved of great interest to their guests and revealed what a wonderful plant this Company has in Canada. It was a surprise to many to learn that the Company manufactures all their milking machines at this Canadian plant, many of which are for export.

BROOKLET

Ottawa, November 18.—J. A. Robb, Minister of Finance, today gave notice that the two-year four per cent. notes amounting to $3,000,000, dated November 15, 1924, were on November 15 last redeemed in cash. These notes were redeemable both in Canada and in New York City. The amount of $6,950,000 was held by Canadian holders and redeemed in Canada, while the balance was presented for redemption at the Bank of Montreal, New York City.

The minister further stated that $25,000,000 of Canada's indebtedness in the hands of the public matured on October 1 last, which he was able to redeem in cash out of current revenues, thus making a total withdrawal from Canada's outstanding indebtedness since October 1, 1926, of $43,000,000.

On June 7 last, the bill giving borrowing powers to meet loans maturing in 1926 and 1927 was before the House. In reply to a question asked in this connection, the minister stated that he hoped to be in a position to take care of the loans maturing in 1926, amounting to $43,000,000, out of current revenues. This intimation has now been fulfilled; and in consequence of the withdrawal of this $43,000,000 of the outstanding indebtedness there will be a saving to Canada in annual interest charges of $1,720,000.

Hunter Lost in Woods Finds Way to Safety

Residents of Chazy Lake and vicinity spent all day Tuesday and Tuesday night searching the woods near Ellenburg Mountain for Charles Hanson, 35, of New York city, who lost his way while on a hunting trip Monday afternoon and for whose safety fear was entertained. Due to the heavy rain and wind storm which swept the north country Tuesday little hope is being held out for his being found alive as the territory in which he is lost covers an area of twenty-five miles of thick woods and swamp land. He has now been missing two nights and a day.

Hanson, accompanied by Hugh Reil, of New York city, were staying at the home of Frank Noel at Chazy Lake while on their hunting trip in the Adirondacks. Monday morning Hanson started out on the last day of the hunting season with Reil and Joseph Noel, son of Frank Noel.

After hunting all morning, the trio started for home without any luck and decided to make a drive. Hanson was detailed to go in the center of the area in which they were to cover and Reil and Noel were to go on each side of him about a quarter or half a mile away. The three were to meet at the foot of Ellenburg mountain.

When Noel and Reil reached the foot of the mountain, Hanson had not arrived and after awaiting a few minutes, Reil shot off his gun a number of times and started hollering. They received no reply. Believing that Hanson had reached the foot of the mountain first and decided not to wait for them, Reil and Noel started for Noel's home. When they reached the house, Hanson was not there and after resting for a few minutes and Hanson did not arrive, they then started out in search for him.

Both Reil and Noel searched the woods throughout the night shooting off their guns and firing brushes in the hope of attracting his attention but without avail. During the night Reil and Noel rested up at the prison lumber camp, about two miles away and then started again on their search.

When daylight came and no signs of Hanson were to be found, Reil and Noel returned to Noel's father's house and together with Frank Noel and five others started out Tuesday morning in the storm to continue their search. Throughout the heavy wind and rain storm Tuesday, the eight men searched the woods and swamp land for Hanson, braving the terrific wind and rain. Finding no trace of him, the eight men returned home at seven o'clock, exhausted and tired, and their clothing soaked through to the skin. Hugh Herron, game protector at Dannemora was notified early in the day that Hanson was missing and stated that he would summon aid and take up the search.

Tuesday night, Reil entered the woods again near Bradley Pond and started a huge brush fire near a swamp in the hope of attracting Hanson's attention. Up to midnight, no word had yet been received.

Residents of Chazy Lake are of the opinion that Hanson could not have survived the terrific storm of Tuesday and it is known that he is without supplies. Troopers at Malone barracks have been notified and it is believed that Captain Broadfield in charge of Troop B, will detail a number of picked men to assist in the search.

Mr. Noel stated that Hanson is an ex-soldier and a member of the American Legion. If he is not located soon Mr. Noel stated that he would phone Plattsburgh Barracks and ask Colonel John H. Hughes to assist the residents.

of the little hamlet in the search by sending out men. Because of the large area in which Hanson is lost, Mr. Noel stated, it would take fully from one hundred to one hundred and twenty-five men to make a thorough search of the woods and swamp land.

Hanson Emerges Safely From Woods.

Frustrated in their search for Charles Hanson, New York hunter, who had been lost in the woods around Ellenburg Mountain since Monday, by driving rains which raked the wooded mountainsides of the Adirondacks Tuesday night, members of the searching party were suddenly surprised Wednesday noon to see the New Yorker coming toward them on the cement highway at a point five miles from the slope Hanson appeared none the worse for his experience and stated that after several hours of uncertainty as to the right direction to follow in reaching the highway he had followed a mountain stream for some miles, the stream finally running to the cement highway upon which he was traveling when discovered by the searching party.

TALKING HONEY

There is as much difference in various kinds of honey as there is in the butter of different butter-makers, or the milk from different dairies.

Part of the difference is due to the skill and care with which honey is produced and marketed. Honey can readily be ruined by carelessness and indifference on the part of the bee-keeper.

The honey gathered from various flowers has all the difference in the world in flavor and eating quality. For example, honey from dandelion is so strong and yellow as only to be fit for bee feed. Honey from tobacco plants, which yield nectar abundantly, tastes of the tobacco. Buckwheat yields a heavy, dark, strong-flavored honey which many people like; others do not. Some southern flowers yield a dark honey of exceedingly fine flavor for bee feed. Honey from tobacco plants, which yield nectar abundantly, tastes of the tobacco. Buckwheat yields a heavy, dark, strong-flavored honey which many people like; others do not. Some southern flowers yield a dark honey of exceedingly fine flavor for bee feed.

You see, you can't always judge honey by color alone.

The clovers, inter-mountain alfalfa, white, sweet white, and sweet yellow, basswood and raspberry, and the California white sage, as well as orange are the finest honeys produced in the whole world.

Every locality where honey is produced has its own "best" product, which the people of that community have learned to relish, whether the honey be light or dark, mild or stronger-flavored. Such honey, if produced under favorable conditions, is good honey, regardless of color.

The two great needs of a sixteen year old girl are a mother who has sense, and a father who has same.

REV. DR. E. I. HART IN PECULIAR PREDICAMENT

Was Unable to Continue With Illustrated Temperance Lecture in Premier Ferguson's Home Town.

Dr. E. I. Hart of the Prohibition Union of this province and who has on several occasions addressed audiences here was placed in a peculiar predicament when giving an illustrated talk in Kempville, Ont., on Tuesday evening. Kempville is Premier Ferguson's home town and to support his operations Dr. Hart was giving a lecture on the Government Control in Quebec.

There were more than 200 persons present at the meeting, and Rev. J. H. Miller, pastor of the United Church of Kempville, who was hitherto a lifelong Conservative, was in the chair. The meeting had just got nicely under way, the hall was in darkness to view the pictures of which Dr. Hart had shown only four or five, when a note was brought up to Rev. Miller saying Constable Gordon Ault wanted to see him at the back of the hall.

On going back Mr. Miller was asked by the policeman if Dr. Hart had an Ontario Government permit to show the pictures. The constable said that, if there were no such permit, he had authority by letter from Toronto, Ontario, to seize the slides. Dr. Hart had no such permit, but stated that he had shown the pictures at Belleville and other points in Ontario without any official interference. He declared that if the slides were seized he would go with them.

A wave of indignation swept the audience and they demanded that the constable's authority be produced. The constable handed the Chairman his letter of instructions purporting to be signed by the Inspector of Motion Pictures at Toronto. Then, true to his expressed determination not to part with his slides, Dr. Hart gathered them up and with them accompanied the constable to the Town Hall.

Motion of Protest
A strong motion of protest was then passed by the audience, on the motion of Rev. W. H. Williamson of Oxford Mills, at the action of the Provincial authorities in interfering with a prohibition meeting in the Premier's riding.

Roy Donaldson, the prohibition candidate who is opposing Premier Ferguson, and other speakers then addressed the meeting. As soon as the gathering broke up, some of the leading citizens of the community went to the Town Hall, where Dr. Hart still remained. There seemed to be some questions as to whether or not Dr. Hart was in custody, and it was proposed that bail be offered for him but Dr. Hart's refusal to part from his slides, and the official refusal to release them, left things at a deadlock.

In a statement issued on Wednesday evening, Hon. Dr. Joseph D. Monteith, Provincial Treasurer, announced that he had given instructions to permit the showing of slides by Dr. E. I. Hart, Secretary of the Prohibition Union of Quebec. He further declared that the seizure of the slides at a prohibition meeting in Kempville, Ont., on Tuesday night had been purely a departmental matter, and done without his knowledge.

Dr. Hart Happy
Ottawa, Nov. 17.—With a smile that seemed to indicate victory on his face, and the famous slides, the seizure of which at a prohibition meeting last night has aroused all Ontario, in a box in his hand, Dr. E. I. Hart alighted in Ottawa tonight from a bus on which he had journeyed from Premier Ferguson's home town.

Firm in his resolve expressed when the slides, depicting scenes under the Government "control" system in Quebec, were seized by Chief of Police Ault of Kempville, acting on instructions from Toronto, Dr. Hart had not parted from his prized possessions for a moment.

When asked how he had secured the views from the Kempville police, Dr. Hart smiled, but behind the smile there was a rather tired expression, evidence of his all-night vigil over his property after the seizure.

"They never had the slides," asserted Dr. Hart. "I stayed with them all night in the Kempville Town Clerk's office, accompanied by the Chief of Police, who was watching them in the interest of the Toronto authorities. Chief Ault had no authority whatever to seize those slides, and his act will do the cause of prohibition a world of good."

HUNTINGDON

On Friday afternoon, Miss Allison, one of the Field Secretaries of the C.G.I.T., visited the groups of Brooklet and Huntingdon. Seventy five girls and their mothers met in the Masonic Hall and spent a very enjoyable afternoon. Miss Nina MacFarlane, the president of the local group introduced the speaker, after which the girls welcomed her with a "Welcome Song." Miss Allison led them first in a singing and then gave them a splendid address in which she built her talk on the theme of "Dreams." She said we all had to have a vision before there could be reality. That we as children played in a world of make believe, we grew older and had our dreams of what we would like to do or be. Without such dreams we might never attain. They created the desire to strive and do. They were the fore-runner of achievement. Youth was the time to make our dreams come true. With high ideals and a determination to succeed there seemed no limit to the possibilities of what girls might do to better world conditions.

Her talk was emphasized by illustrations of many notable people who had made their dreams come true and thereby had benefited mankind and set us an example to follow. We must dream dreams, dress with a strong appeal to the girls to take Jesus Christ as their pattern and guide. He, too, had His dreams, but He needs the help of us to make their fulfillment complete. We must dream dreams and see visions to put our best into, and get the best out of life.

The girls served afternoon tea, and thus concluded a very pleasant afternoon.

The Ladies' Curling Club held a very successful "500" party in O'Connor Building on Thursday evening of last week. Through the courtesy of Mr. O'Connor the use of the basement was obtained and the electric lamps loaned by Mr. Bowker made the room very attractive. Cards were played at 25 tables and the prize winners were: Miss Beatrice Fallon, Mrs. Hugh McCool, Messrs. T. J. Graham and George Boyce. Refreshments were served at the close by the members of the club.

The W.C.T.U. met at Mrs. T. Kelly's on Friday afternoon. Extensive plans for Prohibition were discussed. It was decided to have a Band of Hope or some similar organization for the young. So long as liquor is manufactured for beverage purposes it will be necessary to teach the young the folly and harmfulness of its use.

St. Andrew's night, Tuesday, Nov. 30th., is to be most suitably celebrated in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. The Chateauguay Masonic Lodge have picked on this date for their annual church service. The service is to be held at 8 p.m., and the Rev. George Laughton, D. D., of Montreal will be the speaker with the Rev. J. B. Maclean, D. D., as Chaplain. Special music will be rendered by the Masonic Choir which is made up of 15 voices. Viz: D. L. Kelly, J. B. Maclean, Arthur G. C. St. John, R. Fraser, W. F. Stephen, F. G. Braithwaite, N. W. Reese, W. A. Hunter, Alex. Robb, B. W. Allan, J. R. Oney, W. G. Gibson, C. W. Wheeler and G. F. Dixon.

The public are all cordially welcome and it is hoped that the church will be taxed to its limit when one of Montreal's most eloquent pastors will be heard. The collection will be for the benefit of worthy institutions.

Every radio receiver offered for general use will intercept the radio impulses of the air and reproduce them. But how? In this most popular combination of science and art, but few apparatuses really approach the ideal of realism.

Leading the procession of the select few along that favorable pathway is the family of Thorola. With them the mechanical and technical impressions of radio listening are lost in the beauty and faithfulness with which these instruments disseminate the art of the air.

Thorola 57 is an outstanding model in this group. Its pure-tone reproducing unit and sound chamber place it far beyond the approach of any competitive receiver. Speech and music issue forth with a mellowness and clarity that do full justice to the artists in the studio.

CHATEAUGUAY BASIN

The annual Armistice dance under the auspices of the Julius Richardson Chapter I.O.D.E. was held in the school hall on Nov. 19th. The Regent Mrs. C. Pemberton Wooler and Miss Boulter received the guests. The hall was very tastefully decorated with streamers and flags and the shield of the Order. Maione's orchestra rendered the music; the piano was draped with a large Union Jack entwined with red geraniums. Dancing started at 9.30 and before one of the numbers, Mr. D. P. Dance proposed a two minute silence in memory of the termination of the great world struggle. A hush fell in the hall and complete silence reigned for the allotted time, as the entire assemblage stood at attention. This was followed by all joining in singing God Save the King. Refreshments were served at midnight. Dancing resumed until the strains of the Home Sweet Home floated through the hall.

The W.A. of St. George's Church met at the home of Mrs. D. P. Dance on Tuesday afternoon. In a brief business session final arrangements were made for the annual Church Supper. "THE HERMIT OF FAR END"

by MARGARET PEDLAR

"It amuses them," she would say blithely, "and it doesn't hurt me in the least. If Mr. Trent and I both left the neighborhood, Monkshaven would be at a loss for a topic of conversation—unless they decided, as they probably would, that we had eloped together!"

She herself was quite above the petty meanness of envying another woman's looks or clothes, and she beamed frank admiration over Molly's appearance as she led the way into the house.

"Molly, you're too beautiful to be true," she declared, pausing in the hall to inspect the girl's young loveliness in its setting of shabby hat and embroidered muslin frock. Big golden poppies on the hat, and a kirtle at her waist of the same tawny hue, emphasised the rare colour of her eyes—in shadow, brown like an autumn leaf, gold like amber when the sunlight lay in them—and the whole effect was deliciously arresting.

"You've been spending your substance in riotous purple and fine linen," pursued Audrey relentlessly. "That frock was never evolved in Oldhampton, I'm positive."

Molly blushed—not the dull, unbecoming red that most women achieve, but a delicate pink like the inside of a shell that made her look even more irresistibly distracting than before.

"No," she admitted reluctantly. "I sent for this from town."

Sara glanced at her with surprise. Entirely absorbed in her own thoughts, she had failed to observe the expensive charm of Molly's toilette and now regarded it attentively. Where had she obtained the money to pay for it? Only a very little while ago she had been in debt, and now here she was launching out into expensiveness which common sense would suggest must be quite beyond her means.

Sara frowned a little, but, recognising the impossibility of probing into the matter at the moment, she dismissed it from her mind, resolving to elucidate the mystery later on.

Meanwhile, it was impossible to do other than acknowledge the results obtained. Molly looked more like a stately young empress than an impetuous doctor's daughter as she floated into the room to be embraced and complimented by the Lavender Lady and to receive a generous meed of admiration, seasoned with a little gentle banter, from Miss Herrick.

Sara experienced a sensation of relief on discovering Miss Lavinia and Herrick to be the only occupants of the room. Garth Trent had not yet come. Despite her longing to see him again, she was conscious of a certain diffidence, a reluctance at meeting him in the presence of others, and she wished fervently that their first meeting after the events of the previous day could have taken place anywhere rather than at this gay little lunch party of Audrey's.

As it fell out, however, she chanced to be entirely alone in the room when Trent was at length ushered in by a trim maid-servant, the rest of the party having graciously drifted out on to the veranda. While she had lingered behind, glad of a moment's solitude in which to try and steady herself!

She had never conceived it possible that so commonplace an emotion as mere nervousness could find place beside the immensities of love itself, and during the interminable moment when Garth crossed the room to her side, she was supremely aware of an absurd desire to turn and flee, and it was only by a sheer effort of will that she held her ground.

The next moment he had shaken hands with her and was making some tranquil observation upon the lateness of his arrival. His manner was quite detached, every vestige of anything beyond mere conventional politeness banished from it.

The coolly neutral inflections of his voice struck upon Sara's keyed-up consciousness as an indifferent string of a violin, producing a shuddering violation of their harmony.

She hardly knew how she answered him. She only knew with a sudden overwhelming certainty that the Garth who stood beside her now was a different man, altered out of all kinship with the man who had held her in his arms on Devil's Hood Island. The lover was gone; only the acquaintance remained.

She stammered a few halting words by way of response, and—was she mistaken, or did a sudden look of understanding, almost seemed, of compunction, leap for a moment into his eyes, only to be replaced by the brooding, bitter indifference habitual to them?

The opportune return of Audrey and her other guests, heralded by a gust of cheerful laughter, tided over the difficult moment, and Garth turned away to make his apologies to his hostess, blaming some slight mishap to his car for the tardiness of his appearance.

Throughout lunch Sara conversed mechanically, responding like an automaton when any one put a penny in the slot by asking her a question. She felt utterly bewildered, stunned by Garth's behaviour.

Had their greeting been exchanged under the observant eyes of the rest of the party, it would have been intelligible to her, for he was the last man in the world to wear his heart upon his sleeve. But they had been quite alone for the moment, and yet he had permitted no acknowledgment of the new relations between them to appear either in word or look. He had greeted her precisely as though they were no more to each other than the merest acquaintances, as though the happenings of the previous day had been wiped out of his mind. It was incomprehensible!

Sara felt almost as if some one had dealt her a physical blow, and it required all her pluck and poise to enable her to take her share of the general conversation without betraying herself.

She was thankful when at last the moment for departure arrived, and the members of the party congregated on the steps, exchanging last words and tags of conversation before wending their several ways homeward.

And we'll picnic on Devil's Hood Island!" And Sara's high, clear voice, as she chattered to Molly, characteristically propounding half a dozen plans for the immediate future floated across to Sara, where she stood waiting on the lowest step impatient to be gone. As though drawn by some invisible magnet, the swift colour rushed into her cheeks, staining them scarlet.

His expression was enigmatical. The next moment he bent forward and spoke, in a low voice that reached her ear alone.

"Much maligned place—where I tasted my one little bit of heaven!" Then, after a pause, he added deliberately: "But a black sheep has no business with heaven. He'd be turned away from the doors—and quite rightly so. That's why I shall never ask for admittance." He regarded her steadily for a moment, then quietly averted his eyes.

And Sara realised that in those few words he had revoked—repealed all that he had claimed, all that he had given, the day before.

CHAPTER XIII
Disillusion
"Letters are very unsatisfactory things at the best of times, and what we all want is to have you with us again for a little while. I am sure you must have had a surfeit of the simple life by this time, so come to us, and be luxurious and exotic in London for a change. Don't disappoint us, Sara!"

"Yours ever affectionately," "Elisabeth."

Sara, seated at the open window of her room, re-read the last paragraph of the letter, which the morning's post had brought her, and then let it fall again on to her lap, whilst she stared with sombre eyes across the bay to where the Monk's Cliff reared itself, stark and menacing, against the sky.

April had slipped into May, and the blue waters of the Channel flickered with a myriad dancing points of light reflected from an unclouded sun. The trees had clothed themselves anew in paler young green, and the whole atmosphere was redolent of spring, as she reaches her maturity before she steps aside to let the summer in.

Sara frowned a little. She was out of tune with the harmony of things. You need happiness in your heart to be at one with the eager pulsing of new life, the reaching out towards fulfilment that is the essential quality of spring. Where, as Sara's heart was empty of happiness and hope, and of all the joyous beginnings that are the glory ous appanage of youth. There could be no beginnings for her, because she had already reached the end—reached it with such a stupefying suddenness that for a time she had been hardly conscious of pain, but only of a fierce, intolerable resentment and of a pride—that "devil's own pride" which Patrick had told her was the Tennant heritage—which had been wounded to the quick.

Garth had taken that pride of hers and ground it under his heel. He had played at love, and she had been fool enough to mistake love's simulacrum for the real thing. Or, if there had been any genuine spark of love kindling the fire of passion that had blazed about her for one brief moment, then he had since chosen deliberately to disavow it.

He had indicated his intention unmistakably. Since the day of the luncheon party at Greenacres he had shunned meeting her whenever possible, and on the one or two occasions when an encounter had been unavoidable, his manner had been frigidly indifferent and impersonal.

Outwardly she had repaid him in full measure—indifference for indifference, ice for ice, gallantly matching her woman's pride against his deliberate apathy, but inwardly she writhed at the remembrance of that day on the island, when, in the stress of her terror for his safety, she had let him see into the very heart of her. Well, it was over now, and done with. The brief vision of love which had given a new, transcendent significance to the whole of life, had faded swiftly into bleak darkness. His memory marred by that bitterest of all knowledge—that a woman willing to give her love, to make the great surrender, and that it had not been required of her. All that remained was to draw a veil as decently as might be over the forgettable humiliation.

The strain of the last fortnight had left its mark on her. The angles of her face seemed to have become more sharply defined, and her eyes were too brilliant and held a look of restlessness. But her lips closed as firmly as ever, a courageous secret line denying the power of fate to thrust her under.

The Book of Garth—the book of love—was closed, but there were many other volumes in Life's library, and Sara did not propose to go through the probable remaining fifty or sixty years of her existence wearily bewailing a dead past. She would face life gamely, what ever it might bring, and as she had already sustained one of the hardest blows ever likely to befall her, she would probably make a success of it.

But, unquestionably, she would be glad to get away from Monkshaven for a time, to have leisure to re-assess her outlook on life, free from the ceaseless reminders that the place held for her.

Here in Monkshaven, it seemed as though Garth's personality informed the very air she breathed. The great cliff where he had his dwelling frowned at her from across the bay whenever she looked constantly on the lips of those who made up her little circle of friends, and every day she was haunted by the fear of meeting him. Or, worse than all else, should that fear-maternalise, the torment of the almost hostile relationship which had replaced their former friendship had to be endured.

The invitation to join the Durwards in London had come at an opportune moment, offering, as it did, a way of escape from the embarrassments inseparable from the situation. Moreover, amid the distractions and bustle of the great city it would be easier to forget for a little her burden of pain and humiliation. There is so much time for thinking—and for remembering—in the leisurely tranquillity of country life.

Sara would have accepted the invitation without hesitating, but that there seemed to her certain reasons why her absence from Sunnyside just now was inadvisable—reasons based on her loyalty to Doctor Dick and the trust he had reposed in her.

For the last few weeks she had been perplexed and not a little worried concerning Molly's apparent accession to comparative wealth. Certain small extravagances in which the latter had recently indulged must have been, Sara knew, beyond the narrow limits of her purse, and inebriety had elicited from Selwyn the fact that she had received no addition to her usual allowance.

Molly herself had light-heartedly evaded all efforts to gain her confidence, and Sara had refrained from putting any direct question since, after all, she was not the girl's guardian, and her interference might only result in her being resented.

She was uneasily conscious that for some reason or other Molly was in a state of tension, alternating between abnormally high spirits and the depths of depression, and the recollection of that unpleasant little episode of her indebtedness to Lester Kent's ingred disgrace ably in Sara's mind.

She had seen the man once, in Oldhampton High Street—Molly, at that time still clothed in penitence, had pointed him out to her—and she had received an unpleasant impression of a lean, hunched face with deep-set, dense brows.

"It certainly was great to hear Mother's voice!"

"I telephoned home a few minutes ago, Bill, and it certainly was great to hear mother's voice!"

"You telephoned to Argy! But it's well over a hundred and fifty miles isn't it?"

"Oh, sure—a hundred and sixty-five to be exact, but it was just as easy to talk as if she was only on the other side of the college grounds."

So satisfactory is Long Distance service that talks between friends separated by hundreds of miles are daily occurrences. The practice is growing.

Have you tried the service? If not, give it a trial today. Surprise the folks at home by a telephone visit.

and of a mouth like that of a bird of prey.

She felt reluctant to go away and leave things altogether to chance, and finally, unable to come to any decision, she carried Elisabeth's letter down to Selwyn's study and explained the position.

His face clouded over at the prospect of her departure.

"We shall miss you abominably," he declared, "but of course"—ruefully—"I can quite understand Mrs. Durward's wanting you to go back to them for a time, and I suppose we must resign ourselves to being unselfish. Only you must promise to come back again—you mustn't desert us altogether."

Sara laughed, "You needn't be afraid of that. I shall turn up again like the proverbial bad penny."

"All the same, make it a promise," he urged.

"I promise, then, you distrustful man! But about Molly?"

"I don't think you need worry her," Selwyn laughed a little. "The sudden accession to wealth is accounted for. It seems that she has sold a picture."

"Oh! So that's the explanation, is it?" Sara felt unaccountably relieved.

"Yes—though goodness knows how she has beguiled any one into buying one of her dabbles!"

"Oh, they're quite good, really Doctor Dick. It's only that Futurist Art doesn't appeal to you."

"Not exactly! She showed me one of her paintings the other day. It looked like a bad motor-bus accident in a crowded street, and she told me that it represented the physical atmosphere of a woman who had just been jilted."

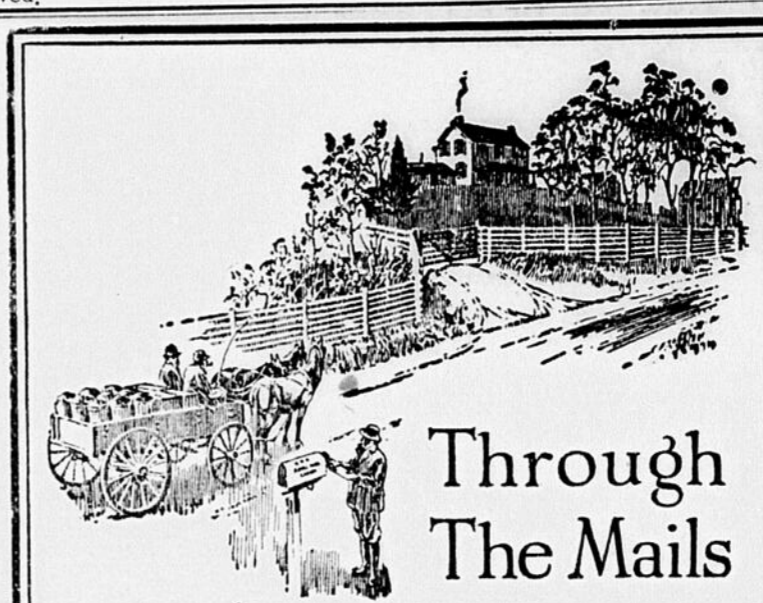

Sara laughed suddenly and hysterically. "How—how awfully funny!" she said in an odd, choked voice. Then, fearful of losing her self-command, she added hastily: "I'll write and tell Elisabeth that I'll come, then." And fled out of the room.

CHAPTER XIV
As Sara stepped out of the train at Paddington, the first person upon whom her eyes alighted was Tim Durward. He hastened up to her.

"Tim!" she exclaimed delightedly. "How dear of you to come and meet me!"

"Didn't you expect I should?" He was holding her hand and joyfully pump-handling it up and down as though he would never let go.

AN AMUSING GAME

To play this game, the players sit around the table, and the leader begins by saying, "Robins fly," at the same time raising and waving his or her hands, like the movement of wings. The other players copy their leader, who then continues, saying, "Eagles fly, moths fly, bees fly, ravens fly, feathers fly," and so on, speaking very rapidly, and each time waving hands. At length the leader says something flies that does not, and keeps his hands quite still; but if this is done sufficiently quickly, the players will continue to wave their hands, not noticing that what the leader says is untrue. Those who do not stop as the leader has done must pay a forfeit. The leader tries to confuse the players by saying "Cowards fly, plovers fly, dogs fly, grasshoppers fly," and so on. You will find this a most amusing game.—F. H.

"Supposing I decide to let you have the money, how do I know that I shall get it back at the time you mention?" asked Gee.

TOOTHsome DISHES FROM MAPLE SYRUP

Novel Recipe Makes Provision For Use of Grapefruit.

There are many toothsome dishes to be made from maple syrup. Here are a few suggestions which you may like to follow up: Cut grapefruit in halves, core the sections and take out seeds. Pour in a generous amount of maple syrup and let stand several hours before serving. For breakfast, cover with a piece of paper, and let stand over night. One cup maple syrup, three eggs, one tablespoon gelatine, one-half cup cold water, one cup whipped cream. Method: Heat the maple syrup to boiling point, and pour it over the slightly beaten egg-yolks. Place over the fire and stir until the mixture thickens (about two minutes). Add the gelatine, which has first been dissolved in cold water, and stir until it is melted. Then pour into a bowl and cool. When partially set, whip with an egg beater, add the stiffly beaten egg-whites and half of the whipped cream. Pour into a mould. Serve garnished with the remainder of the whipped cream.

DAIRY COUNCIL WORK HELPS DAIRYMEN

Praise From Federal Minister of Agriculture—Emphasize Food Value.

FIGHT U. S. LEGISLATION Mr. W. F. Stephen, Acting Secretary Gave Report on Legislation And Transportation Matters.

Work of the past year was reviewed at the annual meeting of the National Dairy Council in Toronto, President J. A. Caulder of Moose Jaw, Sask., spoke favorably of the efforts of the Council in getting better butter rates and security for deposits in public warehouses. He believed that before long the Government would remove the stamp tax from cream cheeses up to 88. Hon. W. R. Motherwell, federal Minister of Agriculture and Dr. Riddick, the Dominion Dairy Commissioner, with whom the matter was taken up later, promised consideration, and both declared the National Dairy Council a valuable organization to all dairymen.

More Educational Work.

W. F. Stephen, Huntingdon, who is acting Secretary in place of the late D'Arcy Scott, reported that while matters of legislation and transportation still constituted the big field of work for the Council, educational propaganda was taking a more important place every day.

Mr. Stephen reported that he had been spending the last few days of his vacation in Washington last summer, "the teeth had been drawn from the Lennox-Fisher bill," which, in their original form had threatened to seriously affect exports of Canadian cream to the United States.

DRESS ECONOMY It is almost always better taste and economy to buy the best possible grade of an inexpensive material than to buy a cheap grade of a more expensive material. With four or five dollars to spend on a dress, a good piece of voile, cotton crepe, tissue gingham, or pongee, at either $1.00 or $1.50 a yard, will wear longer and look more attractive than a cheap grade of georgette or crepe de chine at the same price. Good quality material not only gives distinction, but helps to express personality. The quality of material one should buy is determined not only by its intrinsic beauty and the funds available but also by the term of service it is expected to give and the amount and kind of cleaning it will need. In estimating the total cost of a garment the original cost plus the cost of upkeep should be considered and also the length of time it will be worn. A dress costing twenty-five dollars which is worn out at the end of one season is more expensive than one costing forty dollars that can be worn two seasons, or than one costing fifty dollars that lasts for three seasons.

"THE HERMIT OF FAR END."

It go, whilst the glad light in his eyes would indubitably have betrayed him to any passer-by who had chanced to glance in his direction.

Sara coloured faintly and withdrew her hands from his eager grasp. "Oh, well, you might conceivably have had something else to do," she returned evasively.

For an instant the blue eyes closed. "I never have anything to do," he said shortly. "You know that."

She laughed up at him. "Now, Tim, I won't be growled at the first minute of my arrival. You can pour out your grumble another day. Just now, I want to hear all the news. Remember, I've been vegetating in the country since the beginning of March!"

She drew him tactfully away from the old sore subject of his physical idleness, and while they car-bored them swiftly towards the Durwards' house in Green Street, she entertained him with a description of the Selwyn trio.

"I should think your 'Doctor-Dick' considers himself lucky in being got out of there—seeing that his house seems all at sixes and sevens," commented Tim rather glumly.

"He does. Oh! I'm quite appreciated. I assure you."

"Tim made no reply, but stared at the corner into Park Lane; in another moment they would reach their destination. Suddenly he turned to her, his face rather strained-looking. (To be Continued)

PURINA Cow-Chow

The best brains money can buy have been used to make Purina Chows right in every respect. There is no guess-work about PURINA. Every word is backed by actual facts. PURINA is more generally used than all other feeds because it gets results and never fails to maintain its excellent quality.

The car of Purina Chows which was to be here last week, will arrive this week.

Three cows fed this and will give as much as four fed with the ordinary feed.

Ten bags mixed with equal amount of your own grain would make a good trial.

Perfectly safe to feed. No possible chance of losing money by a trial, you are sure to make.

We have had this feed thoroughly tried before offering it to the dairyman.

Do not wear out your cows by feeding too much Glutin.
