Forty years of Dick Clark

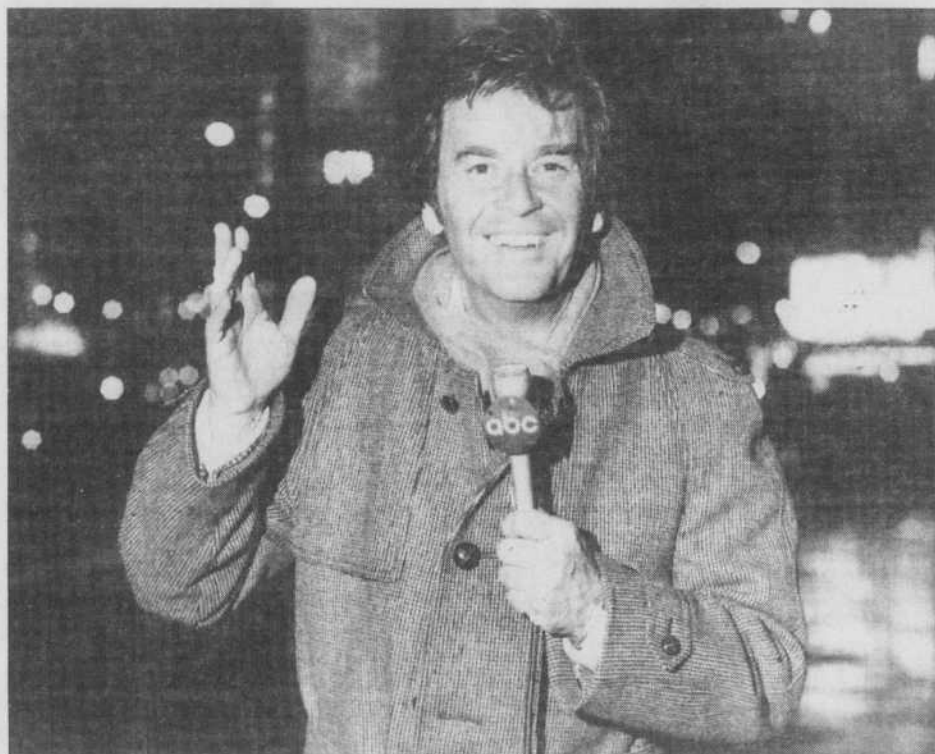

GOING VIRAL

ELLEN GOLDFINCH

This New Year's Eve will mark the 40th anniversary of ABC's Dick Clark's New Year's Rockin' Eve with Ryan Seacrest (starting at 10 p.m.). That's the name of the show now and it certainly is a mouthful. You've probably noticed that there's a lot more Seacrest and a lot less Clark as the years go by and for some of us, that's a good thing.

New Year's Eve is usually a time when I invite friends over for supper and bubbly and we toast the New Year in without a crowd around us. That's the way I like it and that's the way that I hope it will be this year. As a native New Yorker, however, I am absolutely and irrevocably compelled to watch the TV broadcast of that glittering ball dropping in Times Square and year after year, I yell out the countdown just as I did when I was a kid in our seventh floor apartment. My neighbours here are lucky that I don't bang a pot with a spoon out the window the way that I was allowed to do back then. Traditions die hard.

ABC has kept up its New Year's tradition of trotting out the miraculously preserved Dick Clark who, in spite of a stroke and enormous difficulties in speaking, is right there with effervescent Ryan Seacrest toasting the New Year from New York City to Los Angeles. Would Lady GaGa have made it on American Bandstand? Of course she would, and she will be entertaining the crowds at Times Square. Included in the broadcast is a history-making duet (that's how the promo reads) between Carlos Santana and Justin Bieber. People my age, can't you just hear Ed Sullivan introducing that act: "And now, here's something for both the youngsters and their parents."

We live in a culture that shuns old age, something that I'm getting a little uncomfortable with as I get older, so I'm not sure how I feel about having to look at the hair job and face job that Mr. Clark presents while he struggles to get a sentence out. Does this make me ageist? It's difficult to decide whether Dick Clark's annual appearance on New Year's Eve is a profile in courage or an extreme example of how celebrities such as Cher, Joan Rivers, and Dick Clark fight age with plastic surgery and present us with frighteningly expressionless faces that are far from entertaining and border on the horrific. Katherine Hepburn was a marvelous example of an actress who allowed herself to age in the public eye and did so with a style that outdid Clark, Rivers and Cher by a long shot. Seeing Dick Clark try to look forever young is comparable to spending New Year's with Great Expectations' Miss Havisham in her 40-year-old wedding dress. I only let myself peek at the "ageless one" just before midnight.

Other New Year's Eve options: If another New Year's with Clark and Seacrest doesn't appeal, PBS is broadcasting two specials, Hugh Laurie/Let Them Talk: A Celebration of New Orleans Blues (including Dr. John, Tom Jones, and Allan Toussaint) at 9 p.m. and at 10, Coldplay with a special New Year's Eve Austin City Limits that features songs from their latest album. For country music lovers, Fox is broadcasting American Country New Year's Eve Live, beginning at 11 p.m. Here's to a great New Year, readers, and happy watching.

QNEK 2012 auditions for the 19th theatrical season

Award-winning QNEK Productions, international theatre company in residence at the Haskell Opera House, will be holding auditions for the 19th season entitled "Good Things Come in Small Packages."

On January 6, Friday, 7 to 9 p.m. auditions for Ruthless! The Musical, by Marvin Laird and Joel Paley, directed by Susan-Lynn Johns and the iconic musical The Fantasticks by Tom Jones and Harvey Schmidt, directed by guest director from NYC, Phil Gosselin, will be held at the First Universalist Church hall, Main Street, Derby Line (across from the Irving gas station). QNEK Artistic Director, Lynn Leimer will not be directing this season. Anita Morin, QNEK music director and Janice Gluck, QNEK pianist and conductor will be affiliated with both musical productions. The third show, GORGONS, was moved to the 2012 season from 2011.

Ruthless! The Musical spoofs Broadway musicals, like Gypsy and Mame, and movies such as The Bad Seed and All About Eve. The musical premiered off-Broadway in 1992. Available remaining roles for Ruthless! are: Miss Thorn (Mezzo); Louise/Eve (Belting Voice); Emily Block (non-singing). All other roles have been cast by advance auditions. Show dates are July 13, 14, 15, 20, 21.

The Fantasticks tells an allegorical story, loosely based on the play "The Romancers" ("Les Romanesques") by Edmond Rostand, concerning two neighbouring fathers who trick their children, Luisa and Matt, into falling in love by pretending to feud and erecting a wall between their houses. The fathers then hire traveling actors to stage a mock abduction, so that Matt can heroically seem to save Luisa, settling the supposed feud and securing their fathers' blessings (which the young lovers have really had all along). When the children discover the deception, they reject the arranged love match and separate. Each then gains disillusioning experiences of the real world, seen in parallel fantasy sequences. They return to each other bruised but enlightened, and they renew their vows with more maturity. Elements of the play are also drawn from the story of Pyramus and Thisbe, Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet and A Midsummer Night's Dream, and Donizetti's L'Elisir d'Amore.

Available roles for The Fantasticks are: Luisa (ingénue, Soprano - high G); El Gallo - Narrator (Baritone, high G); Hucklebee - Father or Mother (Baritone or Mezzo); Bellomy - Mother or Father (Baritone or Mezzo); Henry - over-the-top aging actor (non-singing); Mortimer - Comic relief (male or female - non-singing); Mute - male or female (non-singing - must move well). Show dates are August 10, 11, 17, 18 (two performances on the 11th); the role of Matt is precast.

It is recommended that those auditioning have a prepared song, no a Capella singing. A pianist will be available on-site. Please familiarize yourself with the shows before you audition. It is also recommended that

OUTSIDE THE BOX

KELLY McDEVITT

This year will be remembered as a year of revolutions and protests, the orange wave of the NDP, the black wave of the Japanese tsunami, of Royal weddings and retired space shuttles, of toppled tyrants, of flooded farmlands from Australia to Pakistan to the Richelieu valley. Thinking back on all this, it's hard not to marvel at how much can happen in one trip around the sun.

In the grand scheme of things, a few videos on a computer don't add up to much. But sometimes it's the little things that bring us joy, or at least a little distraction, in the midst of all these big, yearly changes (Ch-ch-changes! C'mon, I know you were singing it in your head). The following is a list of the web series and online films that stood out to me over the past year. Sometimes riotously funny, sometimes heartbreaking and thought-provoking, these videos entertained me and I'm only too happy to share them with you again.

My Drunk Kitchen - I don't think there is a single YouTube personality I like more than Hannah Hart. This witty, hilarious, gastronomically-challenged New Yorker captured my heart and split my sides with her inebriated online cooking show throughout the year. I defy you to resist her quirky charms, her terrible puns and the strength of her iron liver. Watch this delightful show at <http://hartoandco.com>.

Gray Matters - Mental illness is a hard subject to broach, harder still to make funny without belittling or stereotyping those who suffer from it. Gray Matters strikes a delicate balance between comedy, poignancy and the frustrating - at times highly disturbing - realities of Obsessive-Compulsive Disorder. Follow up-and-coming architect Leo as she struggles to overcome her mental illness in the face of personal tragedy, career opportunities and romance at <http://gray-mattersseries.weebly.com>.

Whitestone Motion Pictures - Dark, cautionary fairy tales and fables are the main offerings from this Atlanta-based production company, that hosts many of its amazing short films on its website. From the light-hearted tale of Bobby Watkins (who steals his mother's day planner so everyday can be his birthday), to Heartless - the sad origin story of the Tin Man, to the distressing fable of human trafficking and the child sex trade told through The Candy Shop, the short films from this company are some of the best I've seen in years. Do yourself a favour and visit www.whitestonemotionpictures.com.

The Covies - The residents of the sleepy Irish coastal town of Westport experience miracles, tragedies, hallucinations and other odd events when a naked stranger named Patrick washes ashore. Is he the iconic Saint Pat reincarnate? Are the people in this town going mad, are there truly miracles at hand or is there something sinister going on? This bizarre series is at times funny, quirky, touching and downright freaky, but it's a great story. Check it out at www.youtube.com/TheCovies.

Take Me Back - This Montreal-made science fiction series from Seth Mendelson and Joe Baron won me over not only for its homegrown talent, but also its great storytelling. Yet another dark, quirky and mysterious series - I realize now that I've given you a few and that you may be judging my tastes - the series follows young Al who is abducted by a strange man in a mask, and seemingly replaced by a double. Time gets a little wonky, and you're never quite sure what you're seeing in this series, but it all plays out beautifully in a series whose quality belies its modest NFB budget. This series, along with many others I've discovered from Montreal, has made me optimistic about local talent. Theater and film students especially, take heed! And tune in at <http://www.tmbtheseries.com>.

With these end-of-the-year offerings I wish you all a very Happy New Year, and hope that together there'll be plenty more online goodies for us in 2012.

Air Farce gang returns for New Year special without Roger Abbott

By Bill Brioux
The Canadian Press

When the Air Farce gang returns with their latest year-end special this Sunday night on CBC, viewers will notice some key changes to the troupe.

Gone is beloved co-founder Roger Abbott, who passed away last March from complications with leukemia. He was 64.

Fellow founder Don Ferguson had already discussed carrying on the 40-year-old comedy troupe's tradition of creating New Year's specials when Abbott's death brought urgency to those plans.

"We wanted to give the new guys - Alan Park, Craig Lauzon and Penelope Corrin - the opportunity to carry on with the Farce and shine at least once a year on television," says Ferguson.

Joining Air Farce's comedy cast for the first time Sunday night is Arnold Pinnock, an actor known for dramatic parts on Canadian series such as "Combat Hospital" and "The Listener." He also boasts Second City, "Life with Derek" and other comedy credits on his resume.

A visit to the Toronto set two weeks ago to witness the taping of the New Year's special found Pinnock fitting in nicely. He was busy playing a 6-foot-2 Oprah Winfrey, and, in another sketch, getting even crazier as Mike Tyson.

"We all remember Tom Cruise jumping up and down on the couch but Oprah lets it go too," says Pinnock.

In one of those crazy showbiz twists, the actor has actually been with the Farce before. Born in England but raised in Scarborough, Ont., he studied radio and television arts in college and landed a gig as an intern at CBC while still in his teens. One of the first shows he was assigned to as a production assistant was "Air Farce," then just beginning a 16-year run as a weekly CBC comedy series.

"Don and Luba and Roger and all the gang were so kind to me," says Pinnock. Ferguson remembers him back then as "a bright light and a welcome sight on the floor." Dietmar Niemetz, still an Air Farce technical producer after 18 years, told Ferguson at the recent tapings that "Arnold always did a terrific job, whatever it was he had to do."

When Pinnock left his bottom rung CBC gig after a year to pursue his dream of acting and comedy, he kept in touch

An eventful year for country music artists

COUNTRY CONNECTION

JESSIE AULIS

We will soon turn the page on 2011 and a recap of the year's great moments is an easy way to get the complete picture. It was a remarkable year for country music; many artists released some incredibly good music.

We'll take an overview of the whole year and then we'll get down to the details.

On January 1, Shania Twain got married to Swiss businessman Frédéric Thiébaud in Puerto Rico. On the same day, Kellie Pickler and songwriter Kyle Jacobs got married in the Caribbean.

Also in January, Jewel announced that she and her husband, Ty Murray were expecting their first child. On July 11, Jewel gave birth to Kase Townes Murray in Texas. He weighed seven pounds and six ounces.

In February, Glen Campbell announced he would release his final studio album in 2011 with a farewell tour to follow. Billy Ray Cyrus confirmed in March on The View that he had dropped his divorce and was working things out.

In April, actor Jeff Bridges signed a recording contract with jazz music label Blue Note Records. He has released his debut album this year. Bridges previously won an Oscar for his portrayal of a country music singer-songwriter.

On May 14, Blake Shelton and Miranda Lambert got married at Don Strange Ranch in Boerne, Texas while John Rich was selected on May 23 as the winner of the fourth season of the Celebrity Apprentice over actress Marlee Matlin.

Also in May, Scotty McCreery won the tenth-season competition of American Idol, becoming the second country music-focused artist (behind Carrie Underwood) to win. Runner-up Lauren Alaina is also rooted in country music. Both signed lucrative contracts with Mercury Nashville Records.

In June, a house fire destroyed the home of Trace Adkins and his family; his three daughters and the dog, who were home when the fire started, escaped safely.

Glen Campbell announced in June that he was diagnosed with Alzheimer's disease. This news came five months after Campbell announced his retirement from the music business.

Seven people were killed and more than 45 people were injured in August, when an outdoor stage collapsed at the Indiana State Fair due to high winds at a concert featuring Sugarland.

Keith Urban announced in November that he had to have throat surgery to remove a polyp in his vocal cords. He cancelled or postponed all public appearances until 2012.

Country stars on TV in 2011

Country stars have been shining on television. The biggest reality star from the country music scene ended up being Blake Shelton who took on the role as a coach on NBC's The Voice.

The country music singer coached team member Dia Frampton to a second-place finish. Shelton will take Frampton on tour with him in 2012. He will return to the coach's chair when the second season of The Voice premieres on NBC January 5.

American Idol has been known to launch the careers of several country artists and this last season (the 10th) proved no different. It was really a

Outstanding crime fiction of 2011

SUSPENDED SENTENCES

JIM NAPIER

It's been a great year for crime writers — and readers! Putting a figurative gun to my head I've selected the following works as outstanding, both for their writing and for the stories they tell. Collectively these novels attest to the thriving state of contemporary crime fiction. If you missed them earlier, here's a chance to catch up.

Philip Kerr
Field Gray

Building on his fine Berlin Noir series, Philip Kerr's latest work, Field Gray, features German ex-cop and PI Bernie Gunther. Not surprisingly, as the book opens Bernie is already in trouble, arrested by Americans looking for gun smugglers off the shores of pre-Castro Cuba. Returned to Germany to face investigation for war crimes, Bernie's actions will be scrutinized by a pair of American prosecutors who have little sympathy for, and apparently even less understanding of, the exigencies of war. The balance of the tale spans a twenty-year period from the mid-30s to the mid-50s, covering the buildup to World War II, the war itself and finally its aftermath. Layer by layer, Bernie's actions during the war are laid bare to the reader, who cannot help but ask himself, what would I have done in that situation?

Peppered with dark humour, Field Gray explores the moral landscape of the Second World War, where it seems no one can lay claim to the high ground. Bernie's character may be ambiguous, but his questions are probing and he is not easily put off from examining in painful detail the intersection where conscience and compromise collide. Kerr explores this moral no-man's-land, offering penetrating insights without ever lapsing into an apologia.

James Lee Burke
Feast Day of Fools

In a sleepy Southwest border town, aging sheriff Hack Holland is confronted by an account of a man tortured to death in the desert. The evidence is shaky: the sole alleged eyewitness is an alcoholic ex-boxer known for having visions. But Holland is old school, and reluctantly drives out to look into things for himself. The barren landscape harbours a rogues' gallery of misfits and miscreants, including a mysterious Chinese woman known for sheltering illegals and a born-again lay preacher wrestling with demons of his own, and other, even less-welcome species inhabiting the remote region. To make matters worse, Holland's female deputy is making unmistakable moves on the aging law officer. All in all, it's shaping up as a really bad week.

We have come to expect finely crafted suspense tales from this award-winning author, and his latest work is no exception. Gritty, graphic and intense, Feast Day of Fools is a powerful, unforgettable tale of a man who, haunted by his late wife's death, is unable to forge close relationships with the living. Burke expertly mines his own considerable knowledge of the American Southwest to create a stark backdrop for a chilling tale that will remain with readers long after they've finished this book.

Val McDermid
The Retribution

Jacko Vance is a brutal psychopath who murdered seventeen girls and a police officer years earlier, and forensic profiler Dr. Tony Hill and DCI Carol Jordan helped put him in prison. Facing a lifetime behind bars with no chance of parole, Vance promised himself he would escape. Now he has made good on his word and is looking to take revenge on Hill and Jordan. Factor in the inevitable screw-ups, a crime reporter determined to get a scoop, and obstructive senior officers more interested in departmental budgets and image than keeping the streets safe, and you have a lethal mix.

The Retribution is a superbly textured novel, as good or better than any crime thriller since Thomas Harris's The Silence of the Lambs. An exquisite blend of pure thriller and an evocative tale of the nuanced relationship between Hill and Jordan, who cannot put to rest the differences — and attractions — between them, even as their lives are on the line. The characterizations are spot on, the dialogue is utterly believable, and the plotting is intense, with enough suspense to satisfy even the most jaded thriller fan. A riveting tale by a master of the genre.

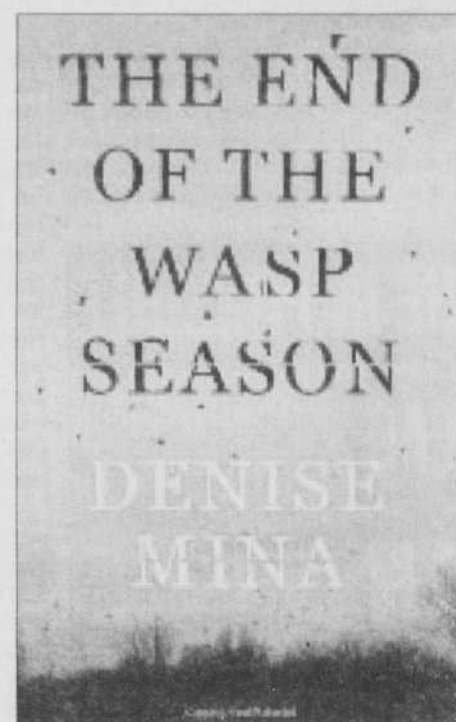

Carl Hiaasen
Star Island

How do you spell bizarre? Twenty-two-year-old pop star Cherry Pye is attempting to resurrect her flagging career after her latest round of drug and alcohol abuse. But things go wrong when her look-alike stand-in is mistakenly kidnapped by an obsessed paparazzo seeking a private photo session. The task facing Cherry's handlers is somehow to get her back without the public — or Cherry — tweaking to her existence.

Fresh, in-your-face, and definitely over the top, Star Island is an example of Carl Hiaasen at his best. A deft blend of farce with social satire, if your idea of a fun read is a bit of madcap mayhem you'll find his writing as addictive as a bowl of potato chips.

Denise Mina
The End of the Wasp Season

In a story that could have been ripped from the headlines, investment banker Lars Anderson hangs himself at the family home as his shaky investment empire comes crumbling down. He leaves behind a neurotic, drug-dependent wife, a daughter curiously detached from reality, and a neglected, bitter son who's fallen in with very bad company at a private school in Scotland. An attempted burglary results in a woman being savagely beaten to death in her home, and it falls on DS Alex Morrow, pregnant with twins, to solve both cases. Complicating things, the sons of an old friend of Morrow's may be involved. An intricate tale of abandoned dreams and bitterness, and neglect, avarice, and deceit unfolds. There are no heroes in this story, and few villains; but there are many victims. A cautionary tale, not so far removed from everyday reality as one might hope.

A guiding theme underlying Denise Mina's fine crime novels is why people, especially damaged people, are who they are and do what they do. The End of the Wasp Season is another fine addition to her already impressive portraits of life on the margins of society.

At times gritty and intense, Mina's insights are penetrating and evocative, and few readers will come away unmoved.

Ian Rankin
The Impossible Dead

Detective Inspector Malcolm Fox and his team from Professional Ethics and Standards find themselves in the coastal town of Kirkcaldy, investigating some of their own. Days earlier DC Paul Carter had been found guilty of demanding sexual favours from several women and then turning a blind eye to their actions. What made the case unusual is that the complaint had been lodged by the copper's uncle, Alan Carter, a retired officer himself. In the wake of Carter's conviction several fellow officers now find themselves suspected of helping to mount a cover-up, and Fox and his team get the predictable run-around from everyone at the station.

Not long after Fox speaks with the uncle, the man is found shot. The locals chalk it up to suicide, but Fox isn't buying it. Carter had been working on a cold case in which a lawyer had been killed in 1985: assumed to be the victim of a car crash on a lonely rural road, a bullet hole had been found in the lawyer's head at the hospital. Too many coincidences for Fox. His investigation will take him back to a different era, in which paramilitary groups were plotting Scottish independence, and carry forward again to the present day, when militants have moved on and established other, more respectable lives.

The Impossible Dead is like a Chinese puzzle in 3D, intricate and layered and as good as it gets. As Fox works his way through a labyrinth of lies and deceptions he teases out the relation between a gun that should not exist and a young woman who was never alive. Once again Rankin demonstrates how, in the hands of a master storyteller, nuanced characters and a finely paced plot can hold its own against nonstop, mindless violence any day.

Other weddings

Jennifer Nettles of Sugarland quietly married longtime boyfriend Justin Miller at a chapel in the foothills of the Smoky Mountains on November 26. It was a very intimate celebration with family and just a few friends.

Chely Wright, who made headlines in 2010 when she came out, married her partner, Lauren Blitzer, during a ceremony at Blitzer's aunt's home in Connecticut on August 20.

Another wedding took place in the tropics this year when Randy Houser married Jessa Lee Yantz in an intimate ceremony which included 20 close family members on September 2 in Punta Cana, Dominican Republic.

LeAnn Rimes married actor Eddie Cibrian on April 22 in California. The 40 guests invited believed they were attending an engagement party but it was the wedding ceremony. The couple exchanged personalized vows.

Move over Spielberg: Retired officer unearths story of Canada's own warhorse

By Richard Foot
For Postmedia News

On a farm in Paradise, NS, lies the grave of a horse named Fritz - a warhorse, it turns out, that survived the horrors of the First World War and lived out his final days in peace in Canada.

As the fictional tale of the Steven Spielberg film War Horse appears on movie screens across North America, and as a stage version of the novel by the same name opens in Toronto, the real-life saga of a true Canadian warhorse is now emerging out of the past.

The details of Fritz's story have been investigated for several years by retired Toronto brigadier-general Greg Young - an Afghanistan veteran and former reservist with Toronto's 48th Highlanders regiment.

From 1914 to 1918 the regiment fought as part of Canada's 15th Battalion, and Young now heads up the 15th Battalion Memorial Project, which preserves and promotes the unit's wartime history.

For most of the First World War the battalion was led by Lt.-Col. Charles Bent, a Nova Scotian who, despite his slight frame and bookish looks, was in fact a highly competent field commander who was widely respected by his men.

In 1918, as the war was winding down and Allied forces were finally pursuing the German army out of France, Bent and his unit were ordered to assault a German strongpoint called the Crow's Nest.

"They captured the Crow's Nest in the early morning of Sept. 1," says Young. "The Germans did three counter-attacks to take it back, but the Canadians held it. Afterwards, during a lull in the fighting, in rides this German officer on horseback, who obviously wasn't aware what the hell had happened, and that the ground had changed hands."

"He and his aide rode into the middle of the Canadian position and bingo, they were snapped up."

According to the 48th Highlanders' regimental history, written after the war, the German officer "was mounted on a splendid dark bay - a typical cavalry mount, which had been captured from the Russians in the east."

The two Germans were sent to a prison camp and the horse - having survived its service with both the Russian and German armies - was taken by the Canadian soldier who captured it, Capt. Gordon Winnifrith.

Winnifrith was killed in action a few weeks later at the Battle of Canal du Nord, and the horse, renamed Fritz, was adopted by Bent.

Remarkably, both Bent and Fritz survived the war and when Bent came home to Canada he took with him not only the battalion's mascot, a stray Belgian sheepdog named Bruno, but also Fritz.

"Bringing the dog home was one thing," says Young. "But a horse? I don't know what strings he pulled. The battalion was in Belgium turning in all its heavy stuff including the unit's horses. Somehow, the CO obtained permission to bring Fritz home on the ship."

After the battalion was demobilized in Toronto, Bent returned, with Fritz and Bruno, to his family farm in Nova Scotia's Annapolis Valley.

Young's research into the story hit a dead end at that point, until this week when he discovered Bent's son - Donald Bent, now 91 - living in Nova Scotia.

"The farm is still there, although it's been divided by a highway since then," said Donald in an interview with Postmedia News on Wednesday. "We lived there for quite a few years after World War I."

He says he remembers, as a four-year-old boy, his father riding Fritz around the apple orchards on the property.

"He loved that horse and the horse loved him. They got along great."

Several years after the war Fritz grew old and sick, and Bent euthanized the animal.

"At that time there were no vets around, so Dad took him and shot him," his son says.

Fritz was buried alongside Bruno on the farm property, where the graves remain today.

Bent, who earned the Distinguished Service Order in the war, died in 1955.

with his Farce friends. When he was starring in the CBC TV-movie "It Must Be Santa" a few years later, he stopped by the Farce set. Ferguson, then casting a pilot for the CBC sitcom "XPM," created a role for Pinnock. That show didn't fly, but Ferguson kept Pinnock's name on his Rolodex.

After Abbott's passing, writer-producers Kevin Wallis, Rob Lindsay and Wayne Testori all urged Ferguson to add Pinnock to this year's cast.

"He turned out to be a perfect fit," says Ferguson. "I've already invited him to join us for next year's New Year' special and he said yes - we're very happy about that."

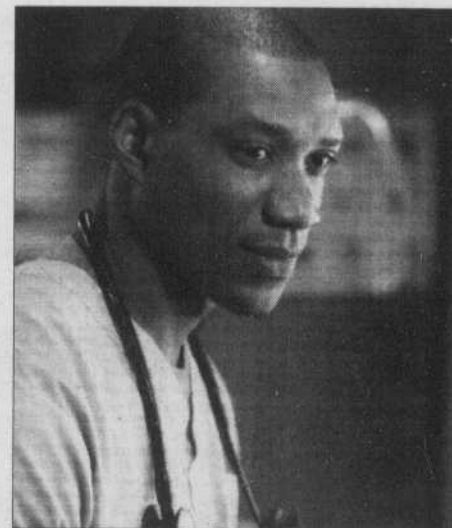

Pinnock says it is "humbling" to be part of a troupe he not only once pulled cables for, but that his parents used to listen to on the radio and laugh at on TV. He felt especially blessed to be with the Farce this winter as the experience helped him get through the death of his mother, who passed away just before Christmas.

"To be going through what I was going through at that time with my family, knowing there was another family to go to work with every day, you could push yourself, you could try new things, you could bring things to the table knowing this was a safe environment to give your best. That's not a normal in what we do in this industry and I just feel very blessed to be a part of it."

Ferguson admits it was "weird" and "there were tears occasionally backstage" as they did the show for the first time without friend and colleague Abbott. The duo were not only castmates and business partners but also best friends for over 50 years (as detailed in "Air Farce: 40 Years of Flying by the Seat of Our Pants," a book I was involved with as a contributor).

Still, as Ferguson says, "everyone backstage, as well as in front of the audience, was glad to participate." There's even a glimpse of Abbott in the show.

As his typically Canadian character Sam used to say in those doughnut shop sketches: "You got that right."
