

AN AFTERNOON'S DRAMA.

Grace Denio Litchfield in New York Independent. (Concluded.)

The sun was stepping in the west. The sky and the sea made one blinding sheen together. The boats had drifted quietly away out of sight, all but one that lingered as if for some last message. The water was very still. It would have seemed a painted sea except for a little lapping sound it made from time to time against the rocks, as of some gentle creature drinking.

Mary deliberately put her hand behind her as she confronted him. Her eyes looked through and through him. The scorn in her face lent its commonplaceness dignity. "Stop! Not a step nearer!" she said imperiously, though so low that only he could hear. "You were to come to-day for my answer. I wanted time to decide. I have decided. Thank Heaven I know you in time. It is no! It is no--no--no, as long as life lasts! Go now. Go at once and never dare to come back to me!"

ALDERMANIC SHARKS.

A MOST SINGULAR STORY.

TWO CITY FATHERS LOOKING AFTER "THEIR INTERESTS."

How some of these aldermen love their city! How they guard its interests in preference to their own? One of the latest instances of aldermanic devotion occurred before certain expropriation commissioners, where one Alderman's property was under consideration, his claim being defended by another alderman, a lawyer, a building man in dispute, it had already been expropriated and paid for in a previous expropriation.

The city's representative objected. He insisted that the fact that the house had been paid for in a former expropriation, was told by the legal alderman that former expropriations could not be taken into consideration. There were arguments and counter-arguments, quite a scene in fact. Finally the city's representative left in disgust and the commissioners took the case on $6,000 and $7,000, a mere song when it is the people's pocket. There is a touching and beautiful moral in such occurrences.

ST. GABRIEL CHURCH TROUBLE.

The dispute in the St. Gabriel Church, Point St. Charles, dispute, in which the trustees are being prosecuted by the contractor, began in the Messager du Soir editorially mentioned. Provost, contractor, who is building the church, was the first witness. He said he had furnished the materials to build the church. His watchman told him of a dispute between the contractor and the trustees. He said he had furnished the materials to build the church. His watchman told him of a dispute between the contractor and the trustees.

THE STREET RAILWAY ROUTES.

TO SUCCEED MR. FERRIGO.

HOW THE BONSACOURS MARKET CLERK WILL BE APPOINTED.

The appointment of a clerk at Bonsacours Market will be accomplished, it is understood, by the Market Committee without referring the matter to Council. These appointments belong to the Council, but he has found a way of not going there. It will appoint one of its present clerks—probably Mr. Tessier, of St. Antoine—to the vacant place. Then it will shift another clerk to St. Antoine Market. After shifting the clerks, the Market Committee will recommend someone to fill the vacancy at St. James, or St. Jean Baptiste, or whichever of the smaller markets the second man is taken from. The Market Committee will recommend someone to fill the vacancy at St. James, or St. Jean Baptiste, or whichever of the smaller markets the second man is taken from.

THE RECORDER'S ADVICE.

THEIR FATHERS WILL IMPROVE THEMSE HAD NOT.

James Collins, aged 16, living on Prince Street, and Frank Davis, Coleraine street, were charged in the Recorder's Court today with loitering. The police said that the boy Collins had been months past carrying a loaded revolver, pointing it at people on the streets. He was a bad boy. Davis was also known to be bad. The father of Davis was also known to be bad. The father of Davis was also known to be bad.

SUNDAY PERFORMANCES.

IMPORTANT CITIZENS TAKING LEGAL PROCEEDINGS AGAINST SOMMER PARK.

The legality of the Sunday amusements at Sommer Park are to be tested in the courts. Although the law, to the ordinary reader, appears clear enough against such amusements on Sunday, it has taken the official legal opinion of the city several months to decide whether or not the law is worth the paper it is written on. The City Council, which formerly referred the question to the City Attorney, has shown no great eagerness for the arrival of the Attorney's decision. Leading citizens who regard the decision of the Mayor as a matter of honor, have been issued to them to the effect that notifications of delinquencies need not be made to householders. Actions are to be entered without delay in all cases against persons who allow obstructions on sidewalks; neglect to sprinkle streets; fall to remove snow or ice or allow "hogbacks" or dangerous icicles pendant from roofs; defective water pipes, and rubbish thrown in roads or gutters. Salt-lanterns are said to have a bad habit of washing spittoons into gutters. They are to be looked after.

THE MONTREAL BYRAN WINS.

Judge Teller rendered judgment, this morning, in the case of Ameen Lutfy vs. Ameen Dault. This will be remembered as a dispute between two Syrians, the present plaintiff having been arrested here on charge made against him by Batall for alleged robbery in New York. He was acquitted, Lutfy took an action for $50 damages against his competitor, and the court, this morning, maintained his action to the extent of $25.

HE DISCOURAGED THE RUNAWAY.

CONSTABLE FOUBRETT'S BUSY TIME.

There was an exciting incident a little after noon today. A team harnessed to an express wagon belonging to the Canada Meat Packing Company took flight on Fortification lane and there was the usual commotion along the route. At the corner of Victoria square and St. James the runaway bore down upon a sleigh standing in the snow. The driver, who was a constable, saw the team coming along, but had no time to get clear. He lashed out, however, with his whip, and the team diverged so that he only felt the breath of what might have been. Across St. James street dashed the runaways and down McGill street, but just where the sleigh waited and wondered a strange thing happened. A policeman appeared suddenly, as if it were out of the ground. As the team passed him he sprang at the reins and got them. The momentum, however, threw him down in the snow. He was no longer beautiful and he was dragged and dumped about through the mud. It was almost certain death to have let go and the policeman hung on for all he was worth. He was worth a great deal and his weight hung on the harness of the team, which was momentarily slackened step, he regained his footing and by sheer strength forced them to stop.

THE RICHIELIEU'S NEW BOAT.

Mr. McGreevy, President of the Richelieu & Ontario Navigation Company, in reply to a question by our reporter, said today that the new boat purchased by the Company in Baltimore, is faster than any on the line and will be used on the Saguenay or Montreal and Quebec route as occasion required. She is about twelve feet longer than "Canada," and magnificently fitted. The price and name of the boat are, however, withheld.

AN INCOERCIBLE BOY.

The Recorder, this morning, speaking about the Government's action in discharging the boy Manning from the Reformatory, said he had reason to believe that in the past the boy had been sent to the Reformatory when they should not have been, owing to false representations made by parents. To avoid this the Government had been told that the boy was a child, they had sent a child there. They had said in the letter that the Reformatory was not a refuge. This was true. At the same time the boy had been sent to the Reformatory when they should not have been, owing to false representations made by parents.

DR. LABERGE WANTS DAMAGES.

The case of Laberge vs. the Equitable Life Assurance Company was commenced before Judge Jetté, in the Superior Court, this morning. This will be remembered as an action by which Dr. Laberge, of the City Health Officer, claims $10,000 damages from the company defendant, on the ground that the examination of French-speaking applicants for insurance has been withdrawn from him without cause or reason. The doctor holds that, by its rules, the company could not dispense with its services without showing cause, and he estimates the damage caused him to the amount of $10,000.

MR. STEVENS' SIDE OF THE STORY.

Mr. Stevens, registrar at Cobain Landing, referring to his arrest for removing a highway, explains that he alone, as secretary-treasurer of the County Council of Simonsburg, had the right to grant a license to erect a road. Such a license not having been obtained from him, he was ordered to remove the road, as it was his right to do. The case has been fixed for Friday next. Mr. Stevens remarks that the party who lodged the complaint against him is the same person whom he caused to be sentenced some time ago for trespassing on his property.

Several instances were given where boys not more than fourteen years old were driving horses over which they had no control. In the public interest, as well as in their own, the carters say it is time this was stopped.

WANTS A WRIT OF CERTIORARI.

A petition for a writ of certiorari against the decision of the Recorder condemning Marie Leard to pay a fine of $150 for selling liquor without a license was presented before Judge Teller in the Practice Court, this morning. One of the principal reasons set forth in the petition is that the Recorder in not condemning the defendant to pay costs action outside of his jurisdiction, as he has no discretion to exercise in the matter.

A COSTLY PIECE OF ICE.

An interesting case was heard before Judge Teller, in the Superior Court, this morning. The action is one taken by Mr. Robert Pollock, who claims from Mr. L. Vallinette the sum of $5,000 damages, on account of injuries received by his young boy who was struck on the foot by a piece of ice falling from defendant's house, and from the effects of which, it is alleged, he will suffer for life.

CIVIL ALLEGIANCE.

AN ADDRESS BY THE REV. FATHER WHELAN, OF OTTAWA, IN WHICH HE ATTEMPTS TO PROVE THE SUPREMACY OF THE CHURCH OVER THE STATE. (Special to the Witness.)

OTTAWA, Dec. 7.—At an entertainment given by the Catholic Truth Society, last evening, the Rev. Father Whelan read a paper entitled, "Cardinal Manning on Civil Allegiance." In his introductory remarks, Father Whelan alluded to the statements made by the Rev. Dr. Campbell, who, in a recent sermon, on the occasion of the celebration of Guy Fawkes' day, told the congregation present, "a grand natured, simple list of fellows," that they ought to thank God they were not Roman Catholics and quoted an alleged statement of Cardinal Manning to the effect that he, as a Roman Catholic, acknowledged no civil power, no temporal prince, and claimed to be the chief ruler of temporality and the conscience of man. "When Dr. Campbell made this assertion he surely was like the man in the story, 'talking and not swearing,' and it being the anniversary of Guy Fawkes' day he must have thought he had tossed something 'to stir up the boys.' These words used by the doctor were the words of Pope Pius IX, in 1868, when he was both Pope and King of Rome.

He was quoted afterwards by Cardinal Manning. The words were used in the capacity of King and not as Pope." He then went on to show from the writings of Cardinal Manning that over all legislatures there was a spiritual jurisdiction to which all other was subordinate. To continue the supremacy of the spiritual order was to continue a civil and a religious liberty, and true liberty was as necessary as the maintenance of the independence and supremacy of spiritual affairs. When the State came in conflict with religion it was necessary to obey God rather than man, and when civil law came in conflict with religious law the former must give way. Every Protestant asserted the spiritual order as above the temporal, and if not they misrepresented their doctrine. They might try to use the state to oppress other religions, but they would not use themselves to modify their own. In conclusion, he said Catholics had come to this country to stay, and with the blessing of God they would work together for the triumph of their holy religion. Father Whelan had among his many auditors Sir John Thompson.

THE CANADIAN CAPITAL.

DIVISION OF THE OTTAWA ANGLICAN DIocese.—(Special to the Witness.)

OTTAWA, Dec. 7.—As a result of a meeting of the members of the Church of England of this district last evening, in the interests of the division of this diocese, over $3,000 towards the $40,000, which is the minimum amount needed as an endowment fund, was subscribed. There were about three hundred present at the meeting, which was held in St. John's Church Sunday-school hall. Dr. Lewis, the Bishop of Ontario, President, was present. Among those who were sent were His Excellency the Governor General, the Hon. F. Clowry, Mr. Justice Gwynne, Venerable Archbishop Lauder, and other Anglican clergymen of the city. Mr. Douglas Cameron, of Toronto, who for several sessions past has been acting as the several whips in the House of Commons, has been appointed assistant accountant. Mr. Ritchie, son of the late Chief Justice of Canada and well known as a dramatic writer, has been appointed to a position in the Department of Justice. The Rev. Mr. Knowles, pastor of St. Mark's Presbyterian Church, has declined the call of Fort Massey Church, Halifax, which was offered by the Ottawa Presbytery last night by the Rev. Mr. Mowat, of Montreal.

TORONTO'S WATER SUPPLY.

IMPURETIES DISCOVERED BY DR. FINE—IT IS POLLUTED BY SEWAAGE. (Special to the Witness.)

TORONTO, Dec. 7.—Much grumbling is heard to-day about the report of Dr. Fine on the analysis of the city water, showing that one-fifth of the supply was sewage polluted water from the Bay that leaks into the main water supply. Lake Ontario has spent three-quarters of a million dollars on a pumping plant to get water from Lake Ontario, and Dr. Fine's analysis of the water is doing more than that. It is further to the old project of getting the supply by gravitation from Lake Simcoe, the cost of which some maintain would be defrayed by the returns for water power supplied.

GRAIN SHIPPED FROM AMERICAN PORTS TO MONTREAL DURING THE PAST SEASON. (Special to the Witness.)

KINROSS, Dec. 7.—As navigation has practically closed, a statement from the Customs House reports the quantities of grain as received from the United States during the past season and transhipped for Montreal.—Wheat, 345,825 bushels; corn, 2,075,728 bushels; rye, 3,265,265 bushels; total, 4,687,818 bushels.

BRITISH AGRICULTURISTS MEET.

THE PRESENT CRITICAL CONDITION OF AFFAIRS DISCUSSED.

LONDON, Dec. 7.—The National Agricultural Conference, called for the purpose of drawing public attention in an emphatic manner to the present grave condition of agricultural affairs and of ventilating the grievances under which agriculture labours and considering suggestions for their removal, met to-day. Fifty-eight delegates from over 250 agricultural associations were present. Many members of the House of Commons were also present. Mr. James Lowther, M.P., made the opening speech. Mr. Henry Chaplin then moved the adoption of a resolution declaring that the critical condition of agriculture was a matter of national concern. Lord Chelmsford then declared that the resolution was the remedy favored by many persons, but Mr. Chaplin said that any proposal to return to protection which included a duty upon food would meet with serious opposition. The resolution, which was very general in its character, was adopted. A general discussion of the effect of foreign competition followed.

POKES FUN AT KIPLING.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—The Times to-day gives prominence to a long and clever letter written by Elizabeth Banks in reply to the letters of Edward Kipling, who continues to stir up the criticisms of all things American. In the letter the writer tells Mr. Kipling that the typical American is found in the cities of Chicago and St. Paul, and in Montana and Dakota. "I don't," she says, "did not Mr. Kipling see him in New York, when he dined and vined at his expense?" Referring to Mr. Kipling's pretended sympathy with Americans on account of the inefficient service rendered by servants, the writer says: "This is very hard to believe, but you will try to patiently endure the life that Providence and the Emerald Isle see it to send us."

A BRITISH HIGH SHERIFF FINED.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—Sir Henry Tabor, High Sheriff of Hereford, recently went on a hunting expedition to Africa, leaving the duties of his office to care for himself. Court proceedings against other legal matters suffered, and the courts were compelled to take action. To-day Judge Collins, at the Winchester Assizes, imposed a fine of £425 upon the delinquent High Sheriff.

LEPROSY IN SIBERIA.

ST. PETERSBURG, Dec. 6.—The Russian newspaper reports from Miss Kate Marston, the first nurse to leave for Siberia, in relation to the relief of leprosy in Siberia, of exaggeration in her accounts of the ravages of leprosy in that portion of the empire. The papers state that instead of 10,000 leprosy victims in the Province of Yakutsk, in Eastern Siberia, there are only about 100 persons suffering with the disease in the whole Province.

LONDON TRAGEDY.

LONDON TRAGEDY says the Duke of Edinburgh will vacate his post as Naval Commander-in-Chief in Davenport in August next and that he will henceforth permanently reside at Edinburgh. The report is generally believed that two of the Duke's daughters will be married abroad before then. His son, Prince Alfred, is serving in a German regiment. The Duke is very popular in the navy, in which he holds the rank of admiral.

THE BALACLAVA SURVIVORS.

The survivors of the immortal charge "in the valley of death" thirty-eight years ago, sat down this afternoon, a small company of grizzled, battle-scarred veterans, to a banquet in the banquet room of St. James Hall. In the chair was Sergt. Herbert of the 4th Light Dragoons; while Lieut. Wightman of the 17th Lancers occupied the vice-chair. The committee by the arrangements for the banquet, and the United Kingdom for survivors, and the result was the appearance of twenty-seven men only. As they met, hearty grasps were given, and the old names called out, "Jimmy," "Pete," "Harry." The veterans, who were mostly in hands were wrung out grey-haired veterans would say to another, "Good old chum, we managed to wriggle together for many a year." The medals which were worn, spoke of service in India during the mutiny, or in the Crimea, and though the veterans, with one exception, wore plain clothes, on every breast the medals were conspicuously displayed. There were over thirty medals present, non-commissioned officers in the old regiments, and the old and the new life mingled together.

Of those present in the charge, there were nine of the 13th Lancers, nine of the 17th Lancers, eight of the 4th Light Dragoons, one of the Scots Greys, and two of the 8th Royal Irish Hussars. The single survivor who wore his uniform, and probably the finest man in the company, was Sergt. Fawkes, by an accident in height, and measured forty-four inches around the chest. He was twenty-two years of age when he rode with the Scots Greys in the famous charge immortalized by the dead Lauriston. He is not a white-haired old man, as he is in his closely-cut black crop; his cheeks are clean shaven, and his black moustache pointed a la militaire. His man of sixty not only looks erect and firm upon his legs, but rejoices in his strength, and in proof thereof he cut bars of lead through with one sweep of his sword, and played with a forty-pound club in a way to astonish every one. The gallant Sergt. Fawkes wears a British War Medal, a medal with three clasps for Balclava, Inkerman and Sebastopol, and also the Turkish medal, and his forehead and cheeks show now the after passing through the battle of Balclava, he tells with great energy of the incidents which befell himself, how, in the mad mixing up of Russian and English, one enemy ran through and cut off his head when Sergt. Major George Timpany ran the fellow through with his sword, which he subsequently gave to Sergt. Fawkes. Bidding back the Sergeant tells how a shell came skipping along, and after passing through the air, he was struck the snow-white Canadian charger on which he was mounted, killing it on the spot. When he fell came the supreme moment of danger, but his companions rescued him, and a sergeant-major of the Dragoon Guards saw him the bride of a riderless charger of the 13th Light Dragoons, and mounted upon him, he escaped out of the valley. When about to dismount, he was rescued by the white charger on which the saddle rested was covered with the brains of the dragon to whom the horse belonged, and filled with nausea, he let the animal go free. There were several wounds in all received by Fawkes on the eventful day, three of which were on his legs. Sergt. Fawkes rode in the Lord Mayor's show last year, and earns a livelihood as a teacher of physical exercises in colleges and schools. His residence is at Bromsgrove, Worcestershire.

Among others present were representatives of the 13th Light Dragoons; Private Lamb, who was wounded in the Crimea, and who was killed and had his horse killed under him; Sergt. Peck, who had the bars shot off his jacket, but escaped unhurt; Sergt. Allen, whose horse was shot, but who was unhurt himself; and Private William Sewell, who was wounded in the Crimea, and whose saddle was struck by a shell. After the usual toasts were given, Sergt.-Major Smith, of the 3rd Surrey, recited "The Charge of the Light Brigade," with a drum accompaniment, which went well. "Our Dead Comrades" was drunk

HE RESTS IN HIS OWN LAND.

There was a touching sequel to the death of poor Willie MacLennan. Those who followed the hearse upon the day of the funeral thought he would be buried in Mount Royal. Such was not the case. That was the intention, indeed. The members of his company were content with that arrangement. But the Highland folk love their dead with a love which is at once reverent and affectionate, and the friends who had charge of the funeral arrangements received a cablegram from the dead man's friends asking after the body. This was interpreted to mean a desire that the body should be sent over.

It is not easy to send a corpse across the Atlantic. Sailors, in spite of the steam engine, are superstitious. They think a corpse on board presages storms and wrecks. But the dead man's friends made an effort, and they had sympathy and willingness on the part of Messrs. McLean and Kennedy, shipping agents, who agreed to carry the body across on the steamer "Straits of Magellan," belonging to the McLean line, for which these gentlemen are agents.

The coffin was taken from the vault. It was opened. A few sprigs of heather were gently laid on the breast. It may be a solace to the poor mother when she looks upon the face of her dead son, to think that away across the sea he had friends who were not neglectful of small offices of love in his behalf. That is what the friends thought. That is what the friends thought. That is what the friends thought.

When good Captain Clark heard the story of the poor fellow's death, and that he was a Highlander—Why, I'm a Highlander, too," he said simply. "And here is Mr. McLeod, my first mate, who is a Highlander. And here are six men of my crew who are all Macs. We are all Highlanders, and we'll speak Gaelic."

"This is rare good luck," said the friends. The captain called six men into his cabin, and thus addressed them—"Boys, we are going to carry the body of a clansman home to Glasgow to his poor old mother. There is to be no blabbing. We don't want the fishermen and the others to know it. They would say we were bad luck; that we would never reach the other side. That is all nonsense. We will reach the other side, and this poor fellow will be buried in his own land. Now, do your duty by this body like true clansmen. And keep your own counsel."

The men said, "Yes, sir," like children to a father, or like clansmen to their chieftain, obedience to whom is part of the Highland man's creed. Then they took charge of the body, brought it on board, and, with the utmost tenderness, lowered it into the heart of the ship. The night was intensely dark. Rain and sleet were falling. A cutting wind blew across the deck. The scene was weird and gruesome. There was a pathos, too, in it which brought the mist to the eye. As the body descended that dark, gapping ship's month, it seemed as though the dead man was having a second burial. The friends thought that, and were much moved.

But there they took a final farewell, and the ship went on her way, and the storm beat upon her, but the desired result was achieved. The first of this month, and friends took their loved one, and now poor MacLennan sleeps in the land he loved so well, and which he never mentioned without a sparkle in the eye and a proud flush on the face.

THE RESULTS OF LITIGATION. A FARM SOLD TO PAY A DEBT OF 411 CENTS. The Courrier de St. Hyacinthe mentions a striking instance of the many ruinous results of litigation. A farmer of St. Jude whose property extended into the parish of St. Ours refused to pay the taxes claimed by the last mentioned municipality.

He was sued for the amount, 411 cents, and judgment went in his favor. The action had been taken in the Superior Court, as a test case, and the costs were about $400. The Corporation of St. Ours appealed from this judgment, and was successful in having it reversed. The costs then reached between $1,200 and $1,500, and the farm had to be sold. All this for a debt of 411 cents.

"SANCTUS ANDREAS PATRONUS RUSLIE." (To the Editor of the Witness.) Sir,—Mr. Norman Murray's innocuous letter, published in your issue of the 1st instant, will suggest to many readers the questions—What happened Andrew, Christ's first disciple, after his Master's death? Tradition only—not the most reliable teacher—tells us that he (Andrew) suffered martyrdom at Patra, some time between 62 and 70 A.D. This was more than a quarter of a century after Christ's death, by Andrew's own admission. Mark Lane, English and foreign wheat, quiet; do. Danubian and American, turn easier; do. FAST TRAVELLING. A gentleman connected with the Canadian Pacific Railway, on reading Fred Atterton's message to Congress, said: "The United States Government and people may do all they can, but there are certain advantages possessed by the C.P.R. which no human power can overcome. In the first place, the C.P.R. has lines clean across the continent, from ocean to ocean, under one management. In the next place, its line on a northern arc which makes it much shorter than any other American route, and when we get our fast Atlantic service going, we will astonish the Yankees with what we will do. For instance, we will take a passenger from London and set him down in Chicago, a day ahead of any other route. If the objective point is Chicago, or any other western city, we will be two days ahead, in fact, so great are our advantages that we look forward to the time when we can place a traveller from Europe in Chicago in the same number of hours that competing American lines could place him in New York. This may seem extravagant, but, as I told you, it has all been figured out, and if it can be done it will be done. The only thing we regret is that we may not be able to demonstrate this before the close of the World's Fair."

RELIGIOUS ORDERS INVESTING IN MONTREAL. "Another large block of buildings on Dorchester street has passed into the hands of an order of nuns," remarked a leading citizen yesterday. The price paid was $160,000. As the property will be devoted to conventional purposes, it will pay no more city taxes, though I believe it will have a money-making institution all the same. The person who negotiated the purchase told me that the money to buy the property came from France. The religious orders are getting scared of confiscation, and are investing their money in safer countries. This province owing to the treaty guarantees entered into by the British Government at the time of the conquest is regarded as the safest spot on earth for religious orders to invest their money. If they keep on as they are doing, Dorchester street, west of the Windsor Hotel, will be an avenue of convents and friaries, and by-and-by those people will own the city. It is the wisest thing to exempt these investors from taxation. They should be made to pay like other people. In fact, they should be made to pay very soon, for the city cannot stand the rate at which these exemptions are increasing."

THE OTTAWA RIVER AND THE GREAT LAKES.

(Prof. Geo. F. Wright in N.Y. Independent.) In a recent communication to the New York Evening Post I have given an account of my discovery this summer of a former outlet of the Great Lakes by way of the Ottawa River. This discovery will at once raise in many inquiries as to its bearing upon the age of the Niagara gorge, which has been generally accepted as a chronometer of the post-glacial period, that it may be profitable to meet the question at once.

The new facts discovered are extremely interesting in themselves, and doubly so on account of their bearing upon the age of the Niagara gorge. Briefly stated, they are these: A low pass in the Canadian Highlands has long been known, leading from Lake Nipissing, which is only about seventy feet above Lake Huron, into the Mattawan River, which is tributary to the Ottawa. The Canadian Pacific Railway has taken advantage of this pass and constructed its roadbed through it, but, in doing this, the engineers were simply following the Indian trail which had been in use from time immemorial, and which was passed over by Champlain on his memorable visit to Lake Huron in 1615. The height of the water-level above Lake Huron and the Ottawa River in this pass is but little more than 100 feet in the level of Lake Erie. Here, therefore, was the natural place in which to look for the pre-Niagara outlet.

There was some such outlet has been surmised for some time from the familiar facts concerning the post-glacial subsidence of the land to the north-east of Lake Ontario. Sea shells are found in Montreal superimposed upon glacial deposits about 500 feet above the sea, which would indicate a subsidence at the close of the glacial period equal to that amount. Furthermore, however, the subsidence was considerably less. In the valley of Lake Champlain and on the coast of Maine it amounted to only 200 feet, while at New York there is supposed to have been scarcely any change at all. The result of such a differential subsidence of the land upon the basin of the Great Lakes would be to depress the northern border sufficiently to allow the water to flow off through the Ottawa River rather than over Niagara, as Lake Nipissing is 250 miles north of Niagara, the downward tilting necessary to turn the water in that direction would amount to only about six feet. The result of such a differential subsidence would be almost imperceptible in a successful water level in so large a body as that which fills the Great Lakes would have all the significance imparted to it by the fact that it would be a direct indication of the actual amount of the broad river extending across from one watershed to the other, and marked by a clear, shore line of well-sorted boulders arranged in a level-topped terrace about fifty feet above the bottom of the trough. On visiting the junction of this outlet with the Ottawa river forty miles below, we found without a doubt, that the outlet was not only present, but that it pushed a bar of this coarse material entirely across the Ottawa, so as to prevent back-water navigation for some distance above.

Our discovery consisted in finding the actual evidence of this outlet, consisting of a broad river extending across from one watershed to the other, and marked by a clear, shore line of well-sorted boulders arranged in a level-topped terrace about fifty feet above the bottom of the trough.
