

THE PAPER OF THE EASTERN TOWNSHIPS
SHERBROOKE DAILY RECORD, WEDNESDAY, MAY 1, 1957

In a busy research laboratory at Montreal University's Institute of Experimental Medicine and Surgery, a quiet genial scientist, aided by a band of assistants and an army of rats, is conducting experiments into the chemistry of life which herald a dramatic new approach to the study of disease and mental illness.

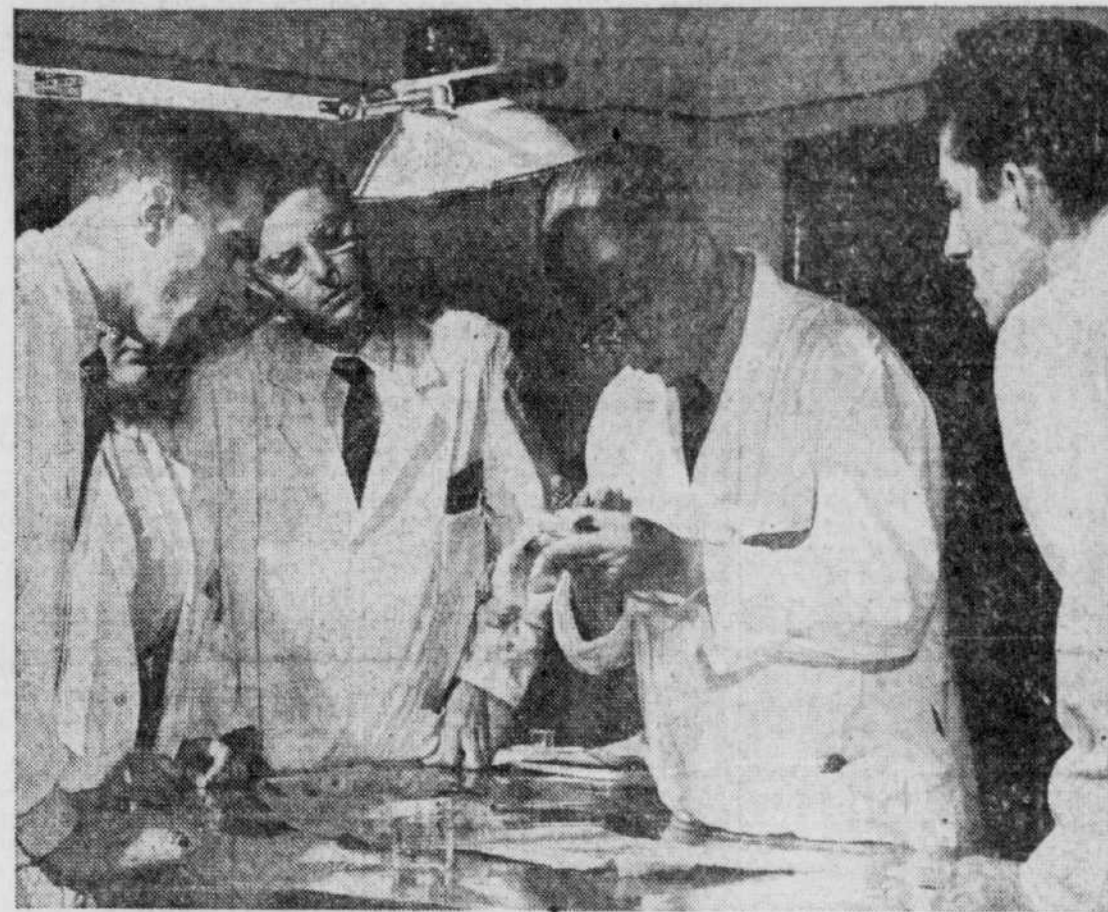

Montreal Medical Scientist Explores "Stress" Selye Gives Medicine New Direction

As a medical student at the University of Prague, Dr. Hans Selye first noticed that early symptoms of many illnesses were identical: loss of energy and appetite, general aches and pains. He pondered this fact for 10 years, then as a research endocrinologist in Canada he went to work to find out why. His discovery that "stress" can cause sickness has given medicine a new direction.

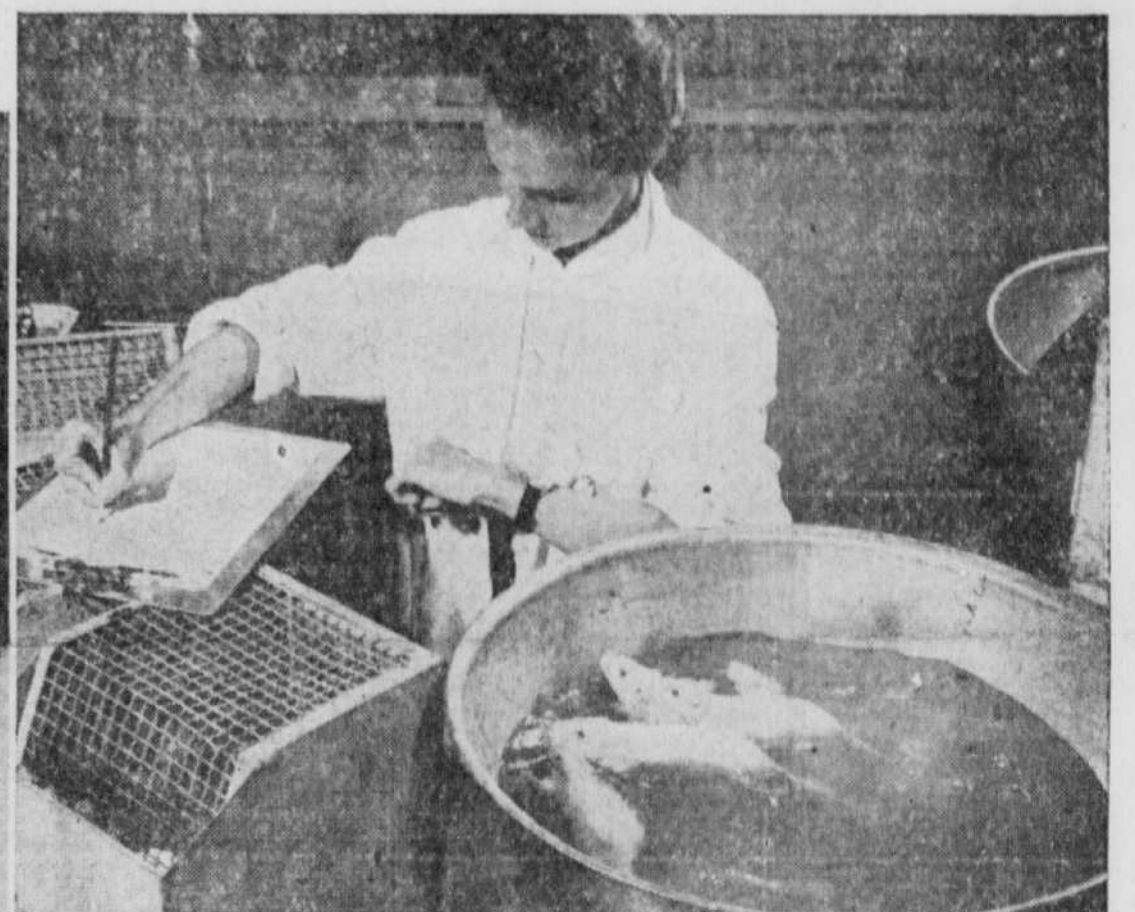

A technician prepares rat organs for histological study. The key to the mystery of "stress" says Selye are the hormones... chemical regulators of growth, sex, health and perhaps, disease. Every attack on the body upsets its chemical balance. By restoring hormone balance man can be helped to a longer, fuller life.

Dr. Selye shows organ changes in rat suffering from "stress": swollen adrenal glands, shrunken thymus, stomach ulcers. In countless experiments where rats were subjected to myriad forms of stress, both physical and emotional, the results were provocatively similar.

Was there a parallel between the reaction of the rats and the way in which the human body responds to attack? Dr. Selye believed there was and he formulated his now widely-acclaimed theory of stress to show why.

Raymonde Paradis supervises a "frustration" test in which enforced swimming is used as a "stressor". Dr. Selye has shown pressures of modern living build up stress in the human body in much the same way as germs and injuries do. It is impossible to avoid stress, but Selye hopes to minimize its dangers, control its harmful effects.

Truckers Emphasize Courtesy And Safety

Intensive Courses Instil The Three C's Of Driving; Concentration, Control, Courtesy

Truck drivers have long been famed for their general excellence and road courtesy. This is the result of an intensive effort on the part of trucking concerns, and companies that use trucks to train their drivers in truck driving skills and good manners on the road frequently much higher than those of the average motorist.

One of the best programs developed by one company that uses trucks extensively demonstrates the thoroughness with which the task of training is carried out. The program is based on defensive driving. Drivers at all times must be conscious of the three C's of safe driving: Concentration, Courtesy and Control. The safety creed emphasizes "No job is so important and no service is so urgent that we cannot take time to drive safely."

The greatest weakness of so many driving training programs is that they have been too sporadic. But this particular program is applied so consistently that no driver escapes it.

Further, it is taught by experts on a year around scheduled basis. Driver training is an integral part of the general school training given various classifications of company employees.

Eight full-time driver training instructors were appointed. Partitioning Ontario and Quebec between them, they travel the year around bringing the course to every company driver, new or old. Every new driver takes the complete course. An old driver who has taken the course before, takes a refresher course every three years. Drivers are not allowed to forget their lessons.

It was also realized that much of the good accruing from the course would rest upon the calibre of the instructors. These were chosen with extreme care. Instructors possess all the desirable qualifications. They are, first, excellent mechanics; second, trained to address classes or lead open discussions and, finally, well educated in modern safe driving practices. They know the answers to all the questions. To gain the greatest effectiveness, size of the driver training classes are carefully regulated. No less than four and no more than six trainees are in any one class. An entire day is devoted to giving the course to new drivers and a half-day to repeaters in the refresher course. Lectures are usually omitted in the refresher course with the time being used in giving the various psycho-physical tests.

Depending upon the number of drivers to be processed the instructor may spend anywhere from three days to three weeks at any one location. The big idea is not to miss a single driver.

In many respects the course follows the path of other safety courses. There are the usual lectures, statistical charts, magnetic board demonstrations employing toy vehicles, psycho-physical tests and then the actual road test.

To encourage interest and to create a feeling of ease among the trainees there is open discussion. Right from the start of the course it is encouraged. In the very first ten minutes the instructor shows a chart of company accident statistics and asks the trainees what they think caused them. Answers are written on the blackboard and discussed.

It is the invariable consensus that traffic congestion is the main contributory cause of accidents and the training instructor will say: "That's right. So the thing to do is to plan an alternate route, if you can, which avoids heavily-trafficked streets and busy corners. "Always make allowances for lack of skill in others. Take into account weather and road conditions. Drive defensively at all times." Thus early in the course a start is made toward reducing accidents.

The lecture section of the course consists of talks, followed by quizzes with open discussion on knotty problems. An important quiz concerns the training booklet of guidance which sets out the multiple things drivers should know to be good drivers. Trainees, new or old, are expected to know the contents of this book before taking the training course. Instructors quiz them on various sections of the book to make sure they do.

Another quiz is the 50-question Knowledge test for drivers which is based upon the most common mechanical failures and their causes, and what to do about them. Also the most common human failures and what to do to correct these.

The trainees answer the first 25 questions on a True or False basis and the remaining 25 questions upon a choice of one of four alternative answers. This test furnishes instructors with an excellent picture of the driver's general knowledge, or lack of knowledge.

Where questions are answered wrongly, the right answer is arrived at in open discussion which is of benefit to all trainees in the class. Another written quiz is the "Self Analysis of Motor Vehicle Driver" test. This is purely a test designed to learn the trainee's general driving attitude and all 25 questions are pointed toward this objective.

Typical questions picked at random from the quiz sheet illustrate the type of question asked. For instance, question 1: "Do you use the suicide door?" Question 10: "Do you drive after imbibing a few drinks?" Question 4: "Do you try hard to be the first away on the green light?" Question 8: "Do you double park if it's only going to take a minute?"

This test has proven its ability to cause a good many trainees to stop and, possibly for the first time, take a good look at themselves as drivers. This self-analysis has helped reduce preventable accidents.

During the day the instructor gives the usual but important psycho-physical tests which determine visual acuity, reaction time and so on. Then follow one of the most important tests... the Road Driving Test. The six trainees, together with the instructor, get into a car and they are off.

Each trainee is furnished with an identifying number... either one, two, three, four, five or six. Each is furnished with a road check list divided off into 11 sections against which he checks off driving faults of the current trainee driver, by that trainee's given number.

The check list is most thorough. It covers the various phases of starting, clutching or shifting gears, speed control, parking, stopping, passing, position of ve-

If the trainees course shows that a man might suffer from some slight deficiency, not dangerous, the instructor issues a special warning to be especially careful under given conditions. This is stressed.

Has this driver training course paid off?

Company statistics show that in 1951, the Plant department had 20 accidents per 100 vehicles with 2,960 vehicles on the road. Three years after establishment of the course, in 1956, preventable accidents dropped to 17.9 per 100 vehicles with 4,108 vehicles on the road—a considerable improvement.

This has meant thousands of dollars saved in vehicle downtime and repair costs. Simultaneously customer service was improved.

Trucking Industry Growth Phenomenal

Firm Members Meeting Demands Of Shippers For More Efficient Service' In Industry

The growth of Canada's trucking industry has been phenomenal, largely as the result of the ever-widening service given by the members of the firms to meet the demands of shippers for more efficient service.

In the past 15 years the number of motor trucks registered in Canada has increased by over 200 per cent. And monthly reports indicate that growth is still continuing.

Of course, not all these trucks are commercial or "for hire" vehicles. A vast majority of them are owned independently by farmers and small businesses. But it is estimated that there are approximately 100,000 "for hire" trucks in the country, operated by more than 20,000 trucking firms and organizations.

Almost every field of industry in Canada depends partly, or largely in many cases, on automotive power for transportation in producing and distributing spheres.

With modern merchandising almost entirely relying on highway transport, some care should be given to the condition of the highways. Only by rigid attention to a long-range road preservation and building policy can Canada's economy industrial mobilization and defence efforts be ensured and un-

CENTURY OF PROGRESS

"The 20th century belongs to Canada." To underline this famous saying we could add that the truckers of this country will make it a real Canadian century of progress. Because of the economy and flexibility of highway transportation new roads will branch out into newly developed areas making the expansion of the trucking industry a must in Canada's development.

Large urban centres depend on truck transport for an important part of their food supply delivered from the surrounding country-side in staggering volume. Decentralization of industry has been made possible and manufactured articles are now subjected to processes in widely scattered centres and transported to assembly plants by truck, making the highways a sort of assembly conveyor belt.

Modern roads are essential to security because they are a requisite for industrial mobilization, civil defense and military activity.

Roads are a godsend to workers. They are carried to and from their work over the asphalt ribbons. The plants rely on road transport for up to 95 per cent of incoming and outgoing freight.

A civil defense system is worthless unless quick means of communication are available between the major centres of the nation. In military planning, movement is everything. Only by improving existing bridges and roads could defense equipment be used to the best advantage.

FEW IN 1923

In 1923, the first year for which complete figures are available, there were only 56,219 trucks of all classications in the nine provinces, the Yukon and the Northwest Territories, while only a few years before, trucks were still the object of curiosity.

But the First World War gave trucking real impetus. By 1930 trucks totalled 167,459, and the increase continued even through the threadbare thirties as the need for economic service was underlined by the depression. When the Second World War ended, trucking had assumed king-size proportions in the nation's economy.

During the past few years the growing industry further linked the far-flung sections of the country with a Trans-Canada service, with trucks operating on scheduled runs between Western and Eastern Canada, and between the Maritimes and Central Canada.

The expanding trend is shown in tonnage carried by trucks in recent years. To handle the flow of goods, new terminals have been set up in many districts, and as roads are pushed to outlying northern districts, trucks now haul goods where a few years ago everything had to be flown in at high cost.

AGRICULTURE

Nowhere has trucking speed and adaptability been better exemplified than in agriculture. Field crops, feeds, milk and fruit produce, livestock, poultry and eggs have to be shipped frequently and rapidly. Milk truck pick-ups have revolutionized the dairy industry by giving services to individual farms and dairies. Today more than 95 per cent of the country's milk is carried by trucks and over two-thirds of Canadian livestock is brought to yards and packing plants. Behind all the commercial trucking which the farmer has come to value and expect is the work-horse farm truck owned by thousands of individual farmers. They have adapted them to a multitude of uses with tremendous savings in cost and manpower.

In the more industrialized provinces of Canada, trucks have become a vital link in the mid-century picture. Both the assembly line technique in which trucks haul parts from sub-contracting plants to assembly factories, and off highway operations depend on motor vehicle transport, oil, timber, mining and construction operations are being increasingly geared to truck capabilities.

It all adds up to a fast-improving, booming transport industry.

Plastic Pipe assures many years of dependable trouble-free service. It offers outstanding advantages for drinking water. This new pipe is absolutely guaranteed against rot, rust and corrosion. It will not accumulate scale or sediment, and is inert to the action of corrosive soils and fluids. Because Plastic Pipe is extremely light in weight (only 1/8 as much as steel) it can be handled easily and installed quickly. Join it to previously installed metallic systems. Adapters available. Plastic Pipe is readily cut to desired length with ordinary hand saw or sharp knife. The insert coupling is used to join lengths of flexible Plastic Pipe. Clamps are first slipped over ends of pipe. Fitting is inserted and then clamps tightened.

Meridians Present Fine Program To Appreciative Beebe Audience

BEEBE — A most enjoyable concert was presented in the auditorium of the Intermediate school by the Meridians, the Boundary Man's Choir.

Under the direction of Mr. Edwin Leggett the following selections were given: The Lost Chord, by A. Sullivan, in which Conrad Haselton rendered a tenor solo; "Pleading" by R. Franz and "The Lord's Prayer" by Ma-lot.

The second group of songs were "Deep River", arranged by M. T. Burke; "Shine On Me" by W. Gilbert; "The Lord is My Shepherd" by T. Mochat and the Negro Spiritual "Joshua Fought the Battle of Jericho" arranged by N. Ryder.

During intermission, the audience was entertained by Lawrence Wheeler, who, in his own inimitable style, played and sang some of the songs for which he is so well known.

In the third group of songs, well loved pieces such as "Sylvia", by O. Speakes, were "The Perfect Day" by G. Jacobs-Bond, with Conrad Haselton, soloist; "Home On The Range" arranged by D. Cullen, were enjoyed.

The final group of selections included "Cool Water" by Bob Nolan, featuring Dean Palin, soloist; "Winter Song" by F. F. Bullard; "The Whiffenpoof Song" by M. Minigrade-Pomero-roy, T. Call; "Shenandoah", the Traditional Chanty, arranged by Mr. Barth, and in conclusion, "The Song of The Jolly Roger" by C. C. Candish.

The Meridians presented the concert for the benefit of the Beebe Home and School Association and those who heard them greatly appreciate the talents and time given by these men who for the love of singing, have again formed a choir that is a pride to the Border Communities.

FAREWELL PARTY
