To ADVERTISERS.—Matter for change of advertisements must be in our hands not later than ten o'clock Monday morning to insure publication current week.

I have the facilities and the skill for making group pictures that you will like—that money could not buy from you ten years from now.

In consequence of Rev. Mr. Crane's absence at Conference on Sunday last, there were no services at the Methodist church.

The garden social advertised to be held on the rectory grounds last Friday evening, was postponed on account of unfavorable weather. It will be held later, of which notice will be given.

The potato and clover crop, were pretty severely nipped by the frost which visited this section on Thursday night last. Fortunately only a small percentage of the corn crop was above ground and thus it escaped.

Mr. Christie Hughes has beaten the best performances of all our local anglers to a standstill this season with the goods to show. These were in the form of a 14½ lb. muskonge, which was captured at the Ottawa river on Thursday night last.

In a note from Mr. John J. Eades, of Vermilion, Alta., dated May 23rd, that gentlemen says that crop prospects are good, although there had been scarcely a shower of rain since last Sept. until up to a few days previous to writing.

The want of a suitable hall, doubtless stood in the way of the Harry Lindley company fulfilling their engagement to present "East Lynne" here on Thursday evening last. The play is one which requires a good large stage, something Shawville cannot supply, unfortunately.

The new granolithic walk on Victoria avenue, connecting Main street with the railway station was completed on Saturday. The walk is 680 feet long and cost a trifle under 11 cents per square foot, which, having regard to the increased cost of cement and labor is considered a very low figure. In view of the cost of this and other work and also much needed repairs to the streets in different sections of the corporation, the council decided on Monday not to undertake the construction of any more side walk this year.

A BIG PICNIC.—June 24th promises to be a gala day at North Clarendon, weather permitting, for it has been decided on that date to bring the little business centre before public notice by holding a mammoth picnic, which is intended to be the first annual event of the kind in the history of the place. By consulting the posters, which will issue this week, details of what may be expected at this notable gathering will be found. McCord's grove, the point chosen is a most ideal spot for a picnic, and has a splendid field adjoining for all kind of athletic sports. Near the grove also there is a beautiful little lake, on which several craft will be mustered on picnic day. If you can afford the time at all, don't miss visiting McCord's grove on the 24th.

Ladysmith Picnic June 16.

The annual picnic of the Thorne Farmers' Club will be held at Bretzlaff's Grove, Ladysmith, on Thursday June 16. A fine program of sports is being arranged for, and some handsome prizes will be awarded. See posters giving particulars this week. Although the time for advertising this event is a little short, everyone who has ever attended the Ladysmith picnic, will be on the look out for the date—that's all they want to know, having already made up their minds to attend.

Interest Unabated.

Although two months have elapsed since the tragedy occurred in this village, interest in regard thereto has lessened but little among our citizens. No matter what else springs up to absorb public attention, the old subject is sure to assert its primal right to discussion and consideration.

This may be and is likely due to the fact that the case is still in an unsettled condition so far as the legal side of it is concerned. The charge against Annie Murphy, held as an accomplice in the shooting has not yet been disposed of, and doings and proceedings in relation to it have furnished fresh food for speculative talk.

With the acquittal of Mike Murphy, the lawyers who defended him decided they would have nothing more to do with the case, whereupon Mr. R. DeSalaberry stepped into the limelight as the defender of Mrs. Murphy and at the re-opening of the Court last Tuesday, projected the outlines of a new theory upon the canvas, as to the shooting, of a rather startling character. This new theory, it was explained to the court, was being worked out by certain "experts," and most important developments could be looked for. One of the details in the working out process was a request or petition for an order to have the bodies of the victims of the shooting exhumed, in order that the wounds on their bodies might be compared with other marks alleged to have been found in the neighborhood of the old building where the boys met their death. Judge Weir does not appear to have been forcibly struck by this phase of the new idea, as he at once refused the request to have the bodies raised.

Another move in support of the new theory was the filing of an affidavit from Mike Murphy, in which he declared that he had not fired the gun which shot the boys. The inference to be drawn from this is that his musket in some other hands had done the dreadful deed. But His Honor—strange as it may seem to some—was not impressed with the likelihood of this story, but on the contrary threw a bomb into the defence camp by promptly ordering that Mike Murphy be indicted on a charge of perjury, and declaring that he was astounded that Murphy should make such an affidavit.

Another affidavit was filed by a juror, which set forth that his opinion of Murphy's innocence was formed after he had visited the scene of the shooting.

All goes to show that the new theory, whatever it is, will be exploited for all it is worth when Annie Murphy's case is reached, the date of which is not yet known. No doubt its elaboration will be interesting, very.

Death of Mr. Henry Wallace.

Since our last issue another old resident of Clarendon has passed to his reward—Mr. Henry Wallace, of Morehead section, who departed this life on Thursday morning, the 2nd inst. The illness which preceded the late Mr. Wallace's death was of long duration, his condition growing gradually weaker day by day for some time past, until the end finally came as above recorded.

He is survived by three sons and two daughters, namely, William, Matthew, Thomas; Miss Isabella and Mrs. J. A. Telford.

His funeral took place on Saturday afternoon, with Orange honors, the deceased having long been a member of that institution. The Rev. Mr. Coffin conducted the funeral service assisted by Rev. Mr. Baugh of Greermount. Interment took place at St. John's church cemetery. There was a very large attendance.

Death of Arch. Leitch.

A press despatch from Cranbrook, B. C. dated May 31st says: Archie Leitch, 62 years of age, senior member and manager of the East Kootenay Lumber Company, with plants at Ryan, Cranbrook and Jaffray, one of the most prominent men in the lumber industry in British Columbia, after attending to his duties, reached his home in a suburb of Cranbrook last evening, and descending from his auto, fell into the arms of his son, expiring immediately. Deceased was the largest shareholder in the Leitch collieries, near Hillcrest, Alberta, and was one of the millionaires of the West.

The late Mr. Leitch was well known in Bryson, having resided there for several years in the seventies. About 25 years ago he removed to the West, first settling at Oak Lake, Manitoba, and some years later removed to Cranbrook, British Columbia, where he had marked success in the Lumber trade, and became one of the wealthy men of the West. He was an elder brother of the late Capt. Alex. Leitch, who with his wife and four children were killed in the rock slide at Frank, B. C. a few years ago.

The spirits of the whole party revived. I (as is often the case) was in high favor with all. Even poor Denis, who had been very much depressed, was sufficiently relieved by the news, so Charles said, to smile over his beef-tea. Lady Mary, who appeared at luncheon fine, treated me with marked consideration. I had already laid them under an obligation, she said graciously, by undertaking the care of the jewels, and now they were indebted to me a second time. Was Mr. Carr one of Lord Barrantyne's sons, or was he one of the Crampshire Carrs? She had known Lady Caroline Carr in her youth, but had not met her of late years. She seemed surprised when I told her that Carr was an American, and he sank, I could see, at once in her estimation; but she was kind enough to say that she was not a person who was prejudiced in any way by a man's nationality, and that she believed that very respectable people might be found among the Americans.

The day passed in the usual preparations for an entertainment. If I went into the hall I was sure to run against gardeners carrying in quantities of hothouse plants, with which the front of the stage was being hidden from the footlights to the floor; if I wandered into the library, I interrupted Aurelia and Ralph rehearsing their parts alone, with their heads very close together; if I hastily withdrew into the morning-room, it was only to find Charles upon his knees, luring Evelyn to immediate flight, in soul-stirring accents, before an admiring audience of not unenvious young-ladyhood.

"Now, Evelyn, I ask you as a favor," said Charles, as I came in, moving towards her on his knees, "will you come a little closer when I am down? I don't mind wearing out my knees the least in a good cause; but I owe it to myself, as a wicked baron in hired tights, not to cross the stage in that position. Any impression I make will be quite lost if I do; and unless you keep closer, I shall never be able to reach your hand and clasp it to a heart at least two yards away. Now—rising, and crossing over to the other side—"I shall begin again. Ah! but my soul's adored—"

"Is Middleton here?" asked a voice in the doorway. It was Sir George, who had put his head into the room, and I went to him. "I say, Middleton," he began, twirling his stick, and looking rather annoyed, "it is excessively provoking. I never thought of it before, but I find there is not a bed in the house. Every cranny has been filled. It never occurred to me that we had not a room for your friend, now that he is kind enough to come. And it looks so rude, when it is so exceedingly good-natured of him to come at all."

"Oh, dear; anywhere will do," I said. "There is not even room for Ralph in the house," continued Sir George. "I have put him up at the lodge"—pointing to a small house at the end of the drive, near the great entrance gates. "There is another nice little room leading out of his," he added, hesitating, "but, really, I don't like to suggest—"

"Oh, that will do perfectly!" I broke in. "Carr is not the sort of fellow to care a straw how he is put up. He will be quite content anywhere."

"Come and see it," he said, leading the way out of doors. "I would have turned out Charles in a moment, and given Carr his room; but Denis is really rather ill, and Charles sees to him, as he is next door."

I could not help saying how much I liked Charles.

"Strangers always do," he replied coldly, as we walked towards the lodge. "I constantly hear him spoken of as a most agreeable young man."

"And he is so handsome."

"Yes," replied Sir George, in the same hard tone, "handsome and agreeable. I have no doubt he appears so to others; but I, who have had to pay the debts and hush up the scandals of my handsome and agreeable son, find Ralph, who has not a feature in his face, the best-looking of the two. I know Charles is head over ears in debt at this moment, but—with sudden acrimony—"he will not get another farthing from me. It is pouring water into a sieve."

"Ralph is marrying a sweetly pretty creature," I said with warmth, desirous of changing the subject.

"Yes, she is very pretty," said Sir George without enthusiasm. "But I wish she had belonged to one of our county families. It is nothing in the way of connection. She has no relations to speak of—one uncle living in Australia, and another whom she goes to on Saturday, in Ireland. There seems to be no money either. It is Lady Mary's doing. She took a fancy to her abroad; and, to say the truth, I did not wish to object, for, at one time, there seemed to be an attraction between himself and his cousin, Evelyn Derrick, which his aunt and I were both glad to think had passed over. I do not approve of marriages between cousins."

We had reached the lodge by this time, and I was shown a tidy little room leading out of one of the one Ralph was occupying, in which I assured Sir George that Carr would be perfectly comfortable, much to the courteous old gentleman's relief, though I could see that he was evidently annoyed at not being able to put him up in the house.

In the afternoon, towards five o'clock, Carr arrived. I went into the hall to meet him, and to bring him into the drawing-room myself. Just as we came in, and while I was introducing him to Sir George, Ralph and Aurelia, who were sitting together as usual, started a lovers' squabble.

"Oh, my!" said Ralph suddenly. "It is all your fault. You jogged my elbow," came Aurelia's quick rejoinder.

"My dearest love, I did not," returned Ralph on his knees, pocket-handkerchief in hand.

It appeared that, between them, they had managed to transfer Aurelia's tea from her cup to the front of her dress.

"You did; you know you did!" she said, evidently ready to cry with vexation. "I was just going to drink, and you had your arm round the back of my—"

"Hush, Aurelia, I beg!" expostulated Charles. "Aunt Mary and I are becoming embarrassed. It is not necessary to enter into particulars as to the exact locality of Ralph's arm."

"Round the back of my chair," pouted Aurelia.

"It is all right, Aunt Mary," called Charles cheerfully to that lady. "Only the back of her chair. We took alarm unnecessarily. Just as it should be. I have done the same myself with a different chair."

"He is always doing it," continued Aurelia, unmollified. "I have told him about it before. He made me drop a piece of bread-and-butter on the carpet only yesterday."

"I ate it afterwards," humbly suggested Ralph, still on his

"WHY BE SO THIN?"
Thinness is Embarrassing, Unhealthy and Not Natural—Formula Now Used Which Adds From One to Three Pounds a Week.

Every one ought to have some extra flesh on the bony structure of the body, both for the sake of health and self-esteem.

Most thin people are sensitive to the harsh, unfeeling criticisms which are constantly being hurled at them by the more fortunate well-figured persons.

Every one pities a thin, bony horse, but horses don't know it—while thin people are both pitied and ridiculed. It ought not to be, but it is.

A well rounded figure, be it man or woman, excites admiration; not only for the figure but for the bright eyes, pink cheeks, red lips, and vigorous carriage which accompany a well-nourished body.

Strength, health, beauty and sound flesh abound, if the blood and nerves get enough nourishment out of the food eaten.

This prescription aids nature; helps absorption, digestion and assimilation; helps distribute the blood and nerve elements which make sound flesh. Get the ingredients and make it at home, and see how very fast you gain in weight.

In a half pint bottle, obtain three ounces of essence of pepsin, three ounces syrup of rhubarb. Then add one ounce compound essence cardiol, shake and let stand two hours; then add one ounce tincture cadomene compound (not cardamom). Shake well and take a teaspoonful before meals and one after meals. Also drink plenty of water between meals and when retiring. Weigh yourself before beginning.

PAIN ALMOST DROVE HIM WILD

DISEASE DEFIED TREATMENT WAS CURED AT ONCE BY "FRUIT-A-TIVES."

Mr. H. Marchessault, High Constable of the Province of Quebec, who lives at St. Hyacinthe, thought he was going to be disabled for life.

A terrible pain in the back kept him in the house and under the doctor's care for months. Nothing seemed to give relief.

Then he tried "Fruit-a-tives," the famous fruit medicine. Note the results.

"Fruit-a-tives" cured me of chronic pain in the back that was so severe that I could not drive my horse," writes Mr. Marchessault.

If you have Weak Kidneys and that Biting Pain in the Back, by all means try "Fruit-a-tives," which is made of fruit juices.

knees, "and there were hairs in it. There were indeed, Aurelia."

"And now it is my tea-gown," continued Aurelia, giving way to the prettiest little outburst of temper imaginable. "I wish you would get up and go away, Ralph, and not come back. You are only making it worse by rubbing it in that silly way with your wet handkerchief."

"Here is another," said Charles, snatching up Lady Mary's delicate cambric one, which was lying on her worktable, while I was in the act of introducing Carr to her; and before that lady's politeness to Carr would allow her to turn from him to expostulate, Charles was no his knees beside Ralph, wiping the offending stain.

"Out, damned spot!" or rather, series of spots. What, Aurelia? you don't wish it rubbed any more? Good; I will turn my attention to the Aubusson carpet. Ha! triumph! Here, at least, I am successful. Aunt Mary, you have no conception how useful your handkerchief is. The amount of tea, or dirt, or both, which is leaving the carpet and taking refuge in your little square of cambric will surprise you when you see it. Ah!"

—rising from his knees as I brought up Carr, having, by this time, presented him to Sir George—"Very happy to see you, Mr. Carr. Most kind of you to come. Evelyn, are you pouring out some tea for Mr. Carr? Nature requires support before a last rehearsal. May I introduce you to my cousin, Miss Derrick?"

After Carr had also been introduced to Aurelia, who, however, was still too much absorbed in her tea-gown to take much notice of him, he seemed glad to retreat to a chair by Evelyn, who gave him his tea, and talked pleasantly to him. He was very shy at first, but he soon got used to us, and many were the curious glances shot at him by the rest of the party as tea went on. There was to be a last rehearsal immediately afterwards, so that he might take part in it; and there was a general unacknowledged anxiety on the part of all the actors as to how he would bear that crucial test on which so much depended. I was becoming anxious myself, being in a manner responsible for him.

"You're not nervous, are you?" I said, taking him aside when tea was over. "Only act half as well as you did on the steamer, and you will do capitally."

"Yes, I am nervous," he replied, with a short, uneasy laugh. "It is enough to make a fellow nervous to be set down among a lot of people whom he has never seen before—to act a principal part, too. I had no idea it was going to be such a grand affair, or I would not have come. I only did it to please you."

Of course, I knew that, and I tried to reassure him, reminding him that the audience would not be critical, and how grateful everyone was to him for coming.

"Tell me who some of the people are, will you?" he went on. "Who is that tall man with the fair moustache? He is looking at us now."

"That is Charles, the eldest son," I replied; "and the shorter one, with the pleasant face, near the window, is Ralph, his younger brother."

"That is a very good-looking girl he is talking to," he remarked. "I did not catch her name."

"Hush!" I said. "That is Miss Grant, to whom he is engaged. They have just had a little tiff, and are making it up. He does talk to her a good deal; I have noticed it myself. Such a sweet creature!"

"Is she going to act?"

"Yes," I replied. "They are going to begin at once. You need not dress; it is not a dress rehearsal."

"I think I will go and get my boots off, though," said Carr. "Can you show me where I am?"

"I am afraid you are not in the house at all," I said. "The fact is—did not Sir George tell you?"

And then I explained. For a moment his face fell, but it cleared instantly, though not before I had noticed it.

"You don't mind!" I said, astonished. "You quite understand—"

"Of course, of course," he interrupted. "It is all right. I have a cold, that is all; and I have to sing next week. I shall do very well. Pray don't tell your friends

I have a cold. I am sure Sir George is kindness itself, and it might make him uneasy to think I was not in the house."

The rehearsal now began, and in much trepidation I waited to see Carr come on. The moment he appeared all anxiety vanished; the other actors were reassured, and acted their best. A few passages had to be repeated, a few positions altered, but it was obvious that Carr could act, and act well, though, curiously enough, he looked less gentlemanlike and well-bred when acting with Charles than he had done when he was the best among a very mixed set on the steamer.

"You act beautifully, Mr. Carr," said Aurelia when it was over. "Doesn't he, Ralph?"

"Doesn't he?" replied Ralph, hot, but good-humored. "I am sure, Carr, we are most grateful to you."

"So am I," said Charles. "Your death agonies, Carr, are a credit to human nature. No great vulgar writhings with legs all over the stage, like Denis, but a chaste, refined wriggle, and all was over. It is a pleasure to kill a man who dies in such a gentlemanlike manner. If only Evelyn will keep a little closer to me when I am on my wicked baronial knees, I shall be quite happy. You hear, Evelyn?"

"How you can joke at this moment," said Evelyn, who looked pale and nervous. "I cannot think. I don't believe I shall be able to remember a word when it comes to the point."

LYNCH LAW IN BRITAIN THE ART OF WINNING OUT A JAPANESE MARRIAGE

THE FAMOUS PORTEOUS RIOT AT EDINBURGH.

When Populace Have Taken Administration of Justice Into Its Own Hands.

Lynch law is not unknown in Great Britain, and there have been many cases of summary justice being meted out without the formality of trial. The most famous on record was that known as the Porteous riot. On April 15, 1766, Capt. Porteous commanded the military guard at the execution at Edinburgh of the famous smuggler Wilson. Wilson was very popular, for he had given up his own liberty to save a comrade.

The infuriated spectators pelted the guard with stones, and Porteous, fearing a rescue, ordered his men to fire. Seventeen persons were killed or wounded, and Captain Porteous was arrested and lodged in jail. A huge mob collected, stormed the prison, broke down the doors, hauled the unfortunate officer out into the Grassmarket and hanged him on a dyer's sign post.

LYNCHING IN DARLINGTON.

There was a lynching episode in Darlington, Durham Co., England, about nine years ago. The trouble started with some children being made ill by ice cream sold by Italian street vendors. Later a crowd mobbed the Italian hawkers. One barrow was smashed to pieces, whereupon two of the Italians drew their knives. They were seized, disarmed, and carried away to the river, into which they were flung. It was only through the exertions of the police that they were not both drowned.

FRENCH GIANT'S FLIGHT.

A French Giant was being exhibited on the sands at Weymouth when two little children offended him by laughing. He ran at them and struck the boy and kicked the girl. Instantly the crowd made a rush at his tent and pulled it about his ears. The giant ran for his life, the crowd at his heels. There was a cab on the parade. The giant flung himself into it and shrieked to the driver to drive off. But the mob kept up the chase. Stones smashed through the windows of the cab, and had it not been for the police the giant and his agent both would have probably been killed.

SOME ANGRY WOMEN.

At Thrapston fifty women were obliged to waste their whole day at the suit of an assignee against a local draper. As hours passed and they thought of their uncooked dinners and uncare for children they got more and more angry. When the case was at last over they gathered and surrounded the draper and fell upon him furiously. Capless and coatless he escaped, but they chased him. Only the very hardest running saved their quarry.

HE KNEW SOME FRENCH.

Englishman Had a Rather Unpleasant Time in Paris.

An English "innocent abroad" had an unpleasant experience in Paris recently. A young man, aged 32, living at Lewisham, arrived for the first time at the Gare du Nord by the 4.45 p.m. train. Valise in hand, he walked up to a policeman and, politely raising his hat, said, "Mort aux vaches."

"What do you mean?" asked the astonished official, who could not believe his ears, for the gently smiling individual had really uttered the most insulting remark that the Paris Apaches have invented wherewith to accost an agent.

"Mort aux vaches," repeated the young Englishman more clearly and slowly, and this time there was no getting away from it. The horrified and indignant guardian of the peace seized him by the collar and hauled him off to the police station and there charged him with using insulting language.

With patient politeness the aggrieved young Englishman repeated his phrase to the police superintendent. An interpreter was called, and it was discovered that the visitor's knowledge of French was confined to these three words, which some wags in the train had carefully taught him, assuring him that if he wanted help or information from any policeman he would find that "Mort aux vaches" was open sesame. Needless to say, the Englishman was at once set at liberty.

A bashful suitor at last summed up enough courage to remark to the young lady: "Mary, I've been striving hard for a long time to make you care for me. Do you think I'm—making any progress?"

"Well," said the young lady, "I don't know whether you're making any progress, but I'm sure, if you care to, you can hold your own."

INVINCIBLE DETERMINATION WILL WIN OUT.

World's Great Ones Who Have Won Fame in the Face of Difficulties.

Carlyle said: "Every noble work at first seemed impossible." And the story of successful men is literally true that getting there depends on knowing how long it takes to win out.

Difficulties have yielded to perpetual pushing ever since the world began. Invincible determination puts every difficulty out of countenance and makes seeming impossibilities stepping stones to success.

Carlyle also said: "Know thy work and do it. Work at it like a Hercules. One monster there is in the world—an idle man."

ONLY HARD WORK.

Turner, the painter, said: "I have no secret, but hard work." Beethoven, the master musician, said: "The barriers have not been erected which can say to aspiring genius, 'Thus far shalt thou go and no farther.'"

Dickens, one of the world's greatest writers, said: "Whatever invention or imagination I may have been blessed with, it would never have served me as it has, but for my habit of daily toiling, drudging attention."

Perseverance built the pyramids of Egypt's plains, enclosed in adamant the Chinese empire, scaled the stormy, cloud-capped Alps, opened a gateway through the watery wilderness of the Atlantic, levelled the forests of a new world.

Perseverance has wrought from the marble block the exquisite creations of genius and painted on canvas the glories of nature. It has put in motion millions of spindles, winged as many flying shuttles, harnessed thousands of flying steeds to as many freighted cars, set them flying as on the wings of the wind, tunneled mountains of granite and annihilated space with lightning speed, whitened the waters of the world with the sails of the nations, navigated every sea, and explored the remotest nooks and corners of the globe.

PERSEVERANCE VS. GENIUS.

Genius flutters, flashes and often fails, while perseverance works, wears and wins.

It is impossible to leap at once to fame. Gibbon spent twenty years on his "Rome"; Webster twenty-six years on his dictionary; Stephenson fifteen years perfecting his locomotive; Bancroft twenty-six years on his history; Harvey was ridiculed by physicians as a crack-brained impostor for twenty-five years before he was recognized by the profession.

John Ruskin said: "Never depend on your genius. If you have talent, industry will improve it; if you have none, industry will supply the deficiency."

NO TANGLING.

Walter was an important witness, and one of the lawyers, after cross-examining him severely, said:

"Your father has been talking to you and telling you how to testify, has he?"

"Yes," said the boy.

"Now," said the lawyer, "just tell us how your father told you to testify."

"Well," said the boy modestly, "father told me that the lawyers would try and tangle me, but if I would just be careful and tell the truth I could tell the same thing every time."

The lawyer didn't try to tangle that boy any more.

"Gee! I wouldn't want to have to bite that man!"—Life.

Ethel, aged three, had been to visit her cousins, two fun-loving and romping boys. She had climbed upon her father's knee, and was telling him of her visit. "Papa, every night John and George say their prayers they ask God to make them good boys," said she. "That's nice," said papa. Then, thinking soberly for a few minutes, she said, "He ain't done it yet."

TAKES PLACE IN "SANCTUARY" OF BRIDE'S HOME.

Broker Who Has Brought Couple Together Makes Announcement of Marriage.

A Japanese wedding always takes place in the "sanctuary" which is to be found in every Japanese home—the tokonoma, or elevated place of honor. This is decorated for the occasion with symbolic articles, such as pine, plum tree and bamboo, signifying long life, peace and honesty; rice, always offered to the gods; and the sake jugs from which the "butterflies" (bridesmaids) pour out drink for the happy couple.

Only ten persons are present at the marriage—the bride and bridegroom, their parents, the go-between and his wife, and two "butterflies." The bride takes her place near the bridegroom, but, as befits her inferior state, on a lower level. Her veil conceals her face till the ceremony is completed.

Presently the "broker" (the man who has brought the couple together) makes formal announcement of the marriage, to the low-toned accompaniment of singers, without instrumental accompaniment, in

AN ADJOINING ROOM.

Ordinarily the Japanese wedding ceremony has neither religious nor legal formality; it is an affair of the families entirely. In former times, however, the priests took a large part in the function, and there are indications of a return to this custom. In 1900, for instance, at the marriage of the Crown Prince, a solemn Shinto service was held within the sanctuary of the imperial palace. Usually, however, the wedding ceremony is simply a formal drinking of sake by bride and bridegroom from the same cup. This partaking of the rice wine together is an act as solemn as drinking from the communion cup among the Christians.

Presently the "butterflies" prepare to fulfill their office, and on bended knee present the two-spouted cup of sake to the mouths of the bride and bridegroom alternately, the drinking from one cup signifying their future unity in joy and sorrow. From each of three tiny cups of different sizes the bride and bridegroom each take three sips. After the third cup the "go-between" announces that the ceremony is ended. "Orion" and "Chrysanthemum" are now Mr. and Mrs. Tamura, and congratulations and feasting are the order of the day. The bridegroom does not kiss his bride in public, that, in Japanese eyes, would be unpardonably

COARSE AND VULGAR.

Removing her white silk veil, the young wife rises from her seat beside the bridegroom and passes the wine cup to the assembled friends. Before the banquet she retires, and reappears in a different dress, repeating this three or four times during the dinner, if she comes from a rich home. After the bride and bridegroom have taken their places everybody present approaches, bows to them, and offers congratulations. With each guest the happy pair are supposed to drink a cup of wine, but this is only pretense.

The wedding feast itself is a splendid and costly affair, with rice served in countless different ways, oyster broth and many other elaborate dishes, washed down with hot and cold sake. But at last the guests take their leave and the young couple are left alone.

STEEL BARRELS.

Not all barrels are made of wood; there are barrels made of metal. A steel barrel that comes from Germany, used in the importation of aniline dye in powder form, is made with a flat band of the metal, perhaps eight inches in width, around the middle, at the bulge of the barrel, while the two ends of the barrel, tapering from the middle section to the heads, in the ordinary barrel fashion, are made of corrugated steel with the corrugations running lengthwise. The dye stuff is heavy, 600 or 700 pounds to the barrel; but the steel barrel remains rigid and carries its heavy load securely without racking or twisting.

BODIES IN WRONG COFFINS.

By mistake at an undertaker's establishment in Birmingham, England, the bodies of two men, removed from the workhouse infirmary, were placed in coffins bearing the wrong nameplates, and conveyed to the homes of the wrong relatives. The son of one of the dead men complained to the infirmary authorities that the body taken to his house was not that of his father, and then it was discovered that a mistake had been made. One of the widows was so distressed that she had to be medically treated.

PERSONAL POINTERS.

Gossip About Some of the World's Prominent People.

Prince Nicholas of Montenegro, is the most picturesque of living sovereigns. Keen on the preservation of national characteristics, his apparel is gorgeous. He wears a white surcoat, over which is a sleeveless jacket of black silk stiffly embroidered with gold; a scarlet undercoat covers his broad chest, also rich in gold-work; a multi-colored sash holds the inevitable revolver, and wide trousers are gathered at the knee into a pair of patent leather boots.

Herr Bebel, the leader of the German Socialists, who recently celebrated his seventieth birthday, is a wheelwright by trade. Although entirely self-educated, he is one of the finest orators and debaters in the Fatherland; and whenever he addresses the Reichstag he is certain of having a large and attentive audience. In such esteem is he held by the Socialists that millions will obey his will because they have implicit trust in his integrity. Herr Bebel neither drinks nor smokes, and, besides being a celebrity in the political world, has gained fame as a writer.

The Duke of Connaught possesses a unique collection of pipes. On one occasion an American billionaire asked him to do him the honor of presenting him with one of his treasures. If such a favor were conferred upon him, he added, he would never smoke another pipe till the day of his death. The Duke was a little amused, but he gave the pipe. Some time after His Royal Highness again met the American, who assured him that his pipe was the sweetest he had ever smoked. "I'm awfully pleased to hear that," replied the Duke, "because I found, after I had given you the pipe, it was not one of mine at all."

One of the largest coal-owners in England is the Marquess of Londonderry, who has been disputing a statement made by the Chancellor of the Exchequer about the profits of coal-mining. Practically the whole of his huge income is derived from coal. As a landowner he draws royalties and wayleaves, and as railway shareholder he takes his percentage of the cost of sending the coal from the mines. Much of the product of his seams is brought to London in ships owned by himself, to be discharged at wharves which are his own property, and from there to be distributed in carts which bear his coronet. As a matter of fact, there is no profit in the business of marketing coal of which he does not obtain a share.

There is not the slightest loss of girlishness in Queen Alexandra's figure. Walking with the dowager empress of Russia, she appears as youthful as a schoolgirl. Her step is light, her carriage erect and her form is lithe and graceful. In the preservation of youth she far surpasses Bernhardt, looked upon in this respect the world over as a wonderful example of physical youth carried into old age. Alexandra's face is without a line. Her cheeks are rounded and almost plump. Her chin is as smooth as if she were 16. She attributes her perfection of complexion to a cold cream, the preparation of which is carefully kept secret. Many times she has been inclined to give the preparation to the women of the fashionable world, but so far she has contented herself with doing out only enough for a few intimate women friends.

The only Royal doctor in the world is Duke Karl Theodore of Bavaria, who is celebrating his seventeenth birthday. He was intended for the army, but being fascinated by the study of medicine he abandoned military life for the hospital ward. He devoted himself particularly to studying diseases of the eye, and soon became one of the most successful oculists of the day. About two years ago he performed, with the assistance of his wife, his five-thousandth operation for cataract. The Duke makes no charge for attending poor people, and only asks payment from those who can easily afford it. His fame has spread all over Europe, and he demands for his assistance are so numerous that he has been obliged to erect a large hospital at Tegernsee, where he visits patients.

A HEROIC PRIEST.

Risked Life to Administer Last Rites to Miner.

A pathetic incident, full of touching heroism is reported in connection with the Woodlesford pit disaster, in England, by which six men have lost their lives.

The story is connected with the sixth man, Patrick McCarthy, who fell beneath the scaffolding on which he and his companions had been working when the pit side collapsed.

The poor fellow, a stalwart Irishman, bore his excruciating pain bravely for several hours, although piteously imploring help. He was supplied with water and stimulants, but finally lapsed into delirium.

Father Wright, of Hunslet, a Roman Catholic priest, who had been on the scene some hours, implored permission to descend and administer the last rites of his Church to the imprisoned man. Finally the priest's request was granted and, accompanied by Mr. Pickering, his Majesty's inspector of mines, he descended the shaft at great risk from falling stones.

They found that, besides being packed with masonry to his waist, McCarthy was enveloped to the chin in water which had accumulated, and with his dying breath he was trying to blow it away. Mr. Pickering affectionately placed his arms round the man's neck, drew his head on to his breast, and thus McCarthy died before the heroic priest could execute his mission.

FIREWORKS PROTECT CROPS.

The great grain fields of the Sandborn ranch in Shasta county, Cal., are ingeniously protected at night from the vast flocks of wild geese and other aquatic fowl that do immense damage to crops, by means of a display of fireworks. Skyrockets and Roman candles were bought in large quantities by the management of the ranch, and were stationed at various points. Whenever a flock is heard skimming in the distance several skyrockets or a shower of colored balls from a Roman candle are sent upward, and as a result the birds give the ranch a wide berth.

NEW HOUSES IN BERLIN

THEY ARE NOW BUILT WITH ALL THE COMFORTS.

German City Now Offers Every Luxury and Convenience in Them.

"With all the comfort of the day" is the announcement invariably made on the advertisement boards of every newly-built house in Berlin, and the house or flat as invariably bears out the promise. Indeed, in nothing has Berlin so much changed as in this matter of "comfort."

Time was when the word had something peculiarly English about it and conveyed to the German mind a suggestion of unnecessary luxury bordering on sybaritism. Except in Berlin proper, the very centre of the city, the suggestion has completely passed away, and no house or flat outside of a mile radius from the Kaiser's palace would now obtain a tenant if it had not the comforts demanded as quite ordinary in America and to some extent in Great Britain.

MANY CONVENIENCES.

How many elements go to make up this comfort may be known by an enumeration of the conveniences with which all new Berlin houses are supplied. Central heating, warm water supply, elevator, large and technically perfect bathroom, gas cooking stove and electric lighting are installations that go without saying, but in not a few of the newest buildings are now added motor garage, vacuum cleaning, thief-proof safe, photographic dark room, and even a roof garden, with sun bath. The last comforts are only offered with flats of from ten to fifteen rooms, but the modern Berlin flat of from five to seven or eight rooms is pretty certain to have its vacuum cleaner and iron safe.

"ZIMMER" UNKNOWN.

In the new houses the old Berliner zimmer is unknown—that vast and sombre chamber leading to the kitchen and back premises and only dimly lighted at one end, where a solitary window opened on an equally dim and dismal court yard. One German characteristic, however, even the newest flats retain. As many rooms as possible are made to communicate with each other by doors and thus afford the opportunity of conveniently entertaining a numerous company of guests.

THE EQUITY.

SHAWVILLE, JUNE 9, 1910.

It is stated that the Manitoba elections are to come off on July 20th.

The Rev. C.S. Deeprose, of Sherbrooke, has been elected President of Montreal Conference, over Dr. Young of Montreal.

The Hon. L. P. Brodeur was sworn in last Friday as minister of the newly created naval branch of the Department of Marine. The organization of the service is to begin at once.

The Legislature of Quebec was prorogued on Saturday night at nine o'clock by His Honor Lieut. Governor Pelletier, after a session which lasted three months.

Alberta has a brand new cabinet as the result of the recently ventilated scandal which put the Rutherford Government on the rocks. The new ministers are: Hon. Arthur Sifton, premier, minister of public works and treasurer; Hon. C. R. Mitchell, minister of education; Hon. Duncan Marshall, minister of agriculture.

The Lavergne bill, obliging public utility companies to print their bills of lading and other blank forms in both the English and French language, passed through both branches of the Legislature last week. The bill applies to railway tickets issued in the province, telephone and telegraph blanks, etc. Its effect will be to create a good many puzzling, cumbersome documents. Business men as a rule regard it with disfavour.

The British Government has made formal protest against the new immigration regulation of the Dominion Government, which requires that all immigrants, save those destined for farm employment, shall have, in addition to being ticketed, $25 in cash and a proportionate amount for each member of their families. The object of this regulation, the department explains, is to keep people from coming to Canada and becoming a charge on the country.

CALDWELL NOTES.

June 4.—Fishing is the order of the evenings. Sometimes they get fish, too. The recent showers of rain has improved the appearance of crops and vegetation greatly.

Mr. John McDowell, of Massey, was the guest of his sister, Mrs. John Renick, the first of the week.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Horner and little baby Gertrude, spent Sunday at the latter's home, Mrs. James Morrison's.

Miss Margaret Storie, of Sand Point, spent a few days with her sister, Mrs. John Caldwell.

Mr. H. Doherty paid a flying visit to friends at Annesley. What is the attraction Henry?

Now that the critical stage of the comet has passed, peace of mind is reigning throughout our community, and everyone is feeling quite cheerful again.

Quite a number of our young people took in the picnic at Campbell's Bay, and had an enjoyable time thereat.

Mr. W. Helmer and the Misses McCarriston, of Weirstead, spent Sunday with their friend, Mrs. Sam Horner.

Mrs. Tom Sharpe was the guest of her daughter, Mrs. S. Armstrong, of Quyon, this week.

Insure Your Digestion

Do you find that occasionally an extra hearty meal, or an indulgence in some favorite but forbidden dish, makes you feel as if you had swallowed a flat-iron?

It's simply that your stomach, however well it may digest ordinary meals, balks at the overload.

A single one of

Rev. Father Morrissey

Father Morrissey's No. 11 Tablets

would set you right in about fifteen minutes. As each tablet is capable in itself of digesting one and three-quarter pounds of food, it helps the stomach out most effectively.

Even if your indigestion has become chronic—if you are a confirmed dyspeptic—always dieting, always miserable—Father Morrissey's No. 11 tablets will remove the most distressing symptoms at once, will enable you to get the benefit of the food you eat, and will restore your stomach to healthy vigor.

No. 11 Tablets insure you against heartburn, sourness and gas in the stomach as well as against all other forms of indigestion. 50c. a box—at your dealer's.

WOMEN'S BEAUTY.

It Can Never be Perfect Without Luxuriant Hair.

A head of luxuriant hair is sure to be attractive. But nature has not crowned every woman with glorious hair. Some very lovable women she has treated rather scantily in this respect.

For instance, there are tens of thousands of women in Canada today, who have harsh, faded and lusterless hair, who are unattractive simply because they do not know that nowadays even the whims of nature can be overruled by the genius of science.

If you are a woman without beautiful hair, do not permit your attractions to be hidden because of this slight misfortune.

Go today to the Shawville Drug Company and buy a large bottle of Parisian Sage for 50 cents, use it each night, and you will notice the harsh, repulsive hair disappear, and in its place will come soft, silky, bright and luxuriant hair. Parisian Sage is guaranteed by the Shawville Drug Company to cure dandruff, itching of the scalp, and stop falling hair in two weeks, or money back.

NOBODY SPARED.

Kidney Troubles Attack Shawville Men and Women—Old and Young.

Kidney ills seize old and young. Come quickly with little warning. Children suffer in their early years. Can't control the kidney secretions. Girls are languid, nervous, suffer pain. Women worry, can't do daily work. Men have lame and aching backs. The cure for man, woman or child is to cure the cause—the kidneys. Booth's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys. Cures all form of kidney suffering.

Mrs. N. Good, of 70 Stadacona street, Moose Jaw, Sask., says:

"I am pleased to state for the benefit of any person suffering with a weak and painful back that they will find Booth's Kidney Pills a most excellent remedy. I have suffered for months with a very weak back and severe pains and aches in the kidneys, and felt very much depressed. There was also a swelling under my eyes. When I learned of Booth's Kidney Pills, I procured a box and found them the best remedy I have ever used, as they were very quick in giving me relief. The pains have left my back and it has strengthened. They have also helped to build up my health."

The Manufacture of Pins.

In 1775 a prize was given to the colonist of Carolina who produced the first native pins and needles. During the war of 1812, when, owing to restrictions upon commerce, the price of pins rose to the enormous sum of $1 per paper, the manufacture was actually started in the United States, but does not seem to have met with success, as the enterprise was soon abandoned. The industry was not fairly started in this country until the year 1836. The early pins in this country, as in England, were made with globular heads of fine twisted wire, made separately, and secured to the shank by compression from a falling block and die. These old pins had the misfortune of often parting with their heads. It was to overcome this difficulty that the attention of early inventors was directed. The solid headed pin, in common use today, took the place of the old form about 1840.

The Malay Shark.

The Malay shark, called the "ikan yu," is the one most dreaded by the natives. During the terrible disaster of the French steamer La Seyne from its collision with the British ship Ouda in the strait of Rhio last November, many of the ninety passengers lost were, as soon as they reached the waters of the strait, seized by the sharks and dragged beneath the surface to be devoured by these fierce Malayan fish, which are especially feared by the native fishers and pearl divers. Seventeen species inhabit the far eastern seas, some of them attaining a length of twenty-five feet. It is reported that a black fin shark was captured some time ago whose liver weighed 250 pounds. The largest is the basking shark, which ranges from the Cape of Good Hope to Ceylon and often exceeds fifty feet in length.

The Heckler Won.

At the Canadian Club in Toronto the other day Rev. Dr. J. A. Macdonald told a story which he heard from Hamar Greenwood at the banquet to Premier Asquith in England last summer. Greenwood had been heckled beyond endurance at a meeting by a professional who had been fortified in the accustomed way. A sympathizer in the audience finally called out to Greenwood:

"Don't mind 'im. 'E's no good, 'E let 'is wife go the work 'us today."

The drunken heckler was equal to the occasion.

"Don't you blame me, guv'nor, till you see the missus."

Dr. Macdonald declared that the land question was at the root of all Britain's economic troubles. With the land so limited and the people so many it would require the utmost wisdom in economics to divide it fairly, instead of wisdom there had been folly colossal for centuries past.

An Engineer in a Studio.

Of Sir Edward Poynter, to whom the King is giving another sitting for his Academy portrait, a good story is told. While painting his first success, "Israel in Egypt," which represents a crowd of Israelites dragging a huge statue of a sphinx across a desert, Sir John Hawkshaw, the famous engineer, looked in and, after puzzling Sir Edward considerably by dotting down figures on a scrap of paper, exclaimed, "My dear fellow, this will never do; the weight of the sphinx is so much, but your Israelites are not developing nearly enough horse-power to drag it! You must double the number of your Jews." And so he did.

Daughter of India's Viceroy.

Lady Charles Fitzmaurice, who is well remembered in Canada, was Lady Violet Elliot, youngest daughter of Lord Minto. Her marriage, which took place in India, was a very grand affair. Her husband, Lord Charles Fitzmaurice, is a son of Lord Lansdowne, and has also resided in the Dominion. Lady Charles has a little daughter whose christening took place the other day in London when several important people stood as sponsors.

Cross Purposes.
An asylum for the deaf and dumb, being sadly in need of funds, gave a dance. Among the many outsiders present were two good looking men. As they were talking together one of them suddenly exclaimed: "By Jove, there's a pretty girl! I would like to dance with her."
"Why don't you ask her?" responded his companion.
"How?"
"Why, by signs, of course."
So he crossed the hall and, placing himself in front of the girl, pointed with his index finger to her, then to himself and then whirled the finger round and round to indicate dancing. The girl smilingly nodded an assent.
Finding that her dancing was as perfect as her figure, he went through the same operation a little later in the evening. Again she nodded assent. As they were waiting for the music to start another gentleman approached the girl and asked for the next dance.
"I am sorry," she replied in the sweetest tones, nodding toward her silent partner, "but I have this dance with the dummy."—Cosmopolitan Magazine.

A Will on a Postcard.
The German courts have just had a curious case before them. A trader died at a health resort, and three days before his death he sent a postcard to a lady friend on her birthday deploring that he was ill and so far away from her. He also said, "For a good birthday present I am leaving you my fortune." The lady to whom this postcard was sent claimed that this missive constituted a will in her favor. She claimed the estate, which was valued at about 200,000 marks. In the first court the decision went against her, and on appeal the findings of the court below were upheld. The grounds of the decision were that by German law when a person draws up his own will it is necessary for the document to state where it was written. The trader, although he had duly signed the card, omitted to place his address upon it.

At the Door.
One day the front doorbell at our house rang loudly. Aunt Sabriny, colored, who has lived with us for more than three decades and knows all our visitors, hurried off to the door. We heard her in conversation a moment, and then she came back, vouchsafing no explanation.
"Who was it, Aunt Sabriny?" I inquired.
"Aw, jus' some fool pusson lookin' fer the wrong number," she said.—Woman's Home Companion.

Ancient Masonic Apron.
Stipendiary J. C. Townsend of Sydney, Nova Scotia, has in his possession probably the oldest Masonic apron in that city, if not in Nova Scotia. It is dated 1792 and was the property of John Muggah, who was made a Mason in that year by the military lodge then working in Sydney. The apron is of sheepskin and the devices are wrought in silk.

NEW C. P. R. SCHEME.
Improved Lands in West Prove a Big Inducement.

The first active step in the settlement of farmers from Great Britain on the improved farms of the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. in Alberta, under the new policy inaugurated by Sir Thomas Shaughnessy during his visit to Great Britain in the early part of the year, was realized by the arrival on the Empress of Britain at St. John with a party of 170 people from Great Britain to go into occupation on these farms.

The new policy of the company involves the improvement of farms varying in size from 80 to 100 acres. On each of these farms the company breaks and cultivates 50 acres and puts it in crop, fences the farm, puts down a well and erects a small house and barn, the cost of these improvements being added to the list price of the land, and the purchasers given ten years in which to pay for the land and improvements.

In the colonization of the West, it has been found that the American or Canadian farmer is not afraid of pioneer conditions, and is prepared to take possession of a prairie farm and immediately proceed to make his own improvements, living in a tent or temporary shelter until he can get a house erected.

Settlers from Great Britain and Northern Europe are not accustomed to pioneer conditions in the West, and settlement by this class has been deterred owing to the fact that they were unacquainted with these conditions, and were afraid of the hardships resulting therefrom. To meet this condition, the new policy of the company has been organized, and the success so far met with indicate that the number of people who can be brought out to occupy improved farms is only limited by the number of farms which can be got ready for them.

Anyone who had seen the first party which arrived on the Empress of Britain would have been struck by the appearance of these people, and by the fact that they are of a class which, up to date, Canada has been obtaining a very small number.

The company makes it a rule that these improved farms are only sold to married men who have had previous experience, and the fact that on their arrival in Alberta they can at once move on to a farm with some crop in the ground, and with a comfortable house in which to settle their belongings, as well as a barn for stabling the horses and cattle that they will immediately buy, makes their chances of success very much greater than it would be were they simply turned loose on unimproved land.

The new policy of the company is the first of its kind which has been tried in connection with the colonization of railway land in America, and its inauguration has probably attracted more attention than any scheme since the tide of immigration began.

Toronto Boy for South Pole.
One of the physicists who will accompany Capt. Scott on his British expedition in search of the South Pole this year is Mr. C. S. Wright, an old Toronto boy, who has been working the last two years in Cambridge under Prof. Sir J. J. Thomson in the famous Cavendish Laboratory. Mr. Wright was educated at Upper Canada College (head boy 1904) and the University of Toronto, where he took first-class honors each year, and finally won the 1881 exhibition scholarship. He is the second son of Mr. Alfred Wright, Canadian manager of the London & Lancashire Fire Insurance Co. The work of the physicists, Dr. Simpson and Mr. Wright, will comprise the usual meteorological and magnetic work, and in addition a survey of the currents and conditions in the upper atmosphere will be attempted by sending up specially constructed balloons carrying instruments for registering the temperature and height. Work on ocean currents, atmospheric electricity, radioactivity of the sea and air, salinity of sea water and analysis of the atmosphere will also be undertaken.

Another point to which Mr. Wright intends to devote considerable attention is the investigation of the crystal structure of ice from the point of view of its age and past history. Should any simple relation be found connecting the crystal structure and the age of ice considerable light would at once be thrown upon the origin of the great ice barrier—that vast floating ice sheet, 200 feet high, 200 miles long and of unknown width, which has so long puzzled the mind of the geologist.

Where Girls Marry Quickly.
On the prairies of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, and Alberta are hundreds of settlers who are eager to secure wives from the Old Country, but who, owing to the necessity of tending their farms, have been prevented from visiting the populous centres in search of marriageable girls.
To meet this requirement, the Salvation Army Emigration Department has established a marriage bureau, and Army parties are personally conducted by an official, who, while he does not act as matchmaker, gives valuable advice on matrimonial affairs. Out of a party of fifty recently sent out to British Columbia, more than half were wedded in a little over a year. The age of the lady emigrants ranges from eighteen to forty, and they are drawn from all classes—from the factory girl to the lady with a small private income.—London Answers.

Stopping Undesirables.
Since the beginning of the year 1910 75 persons have been picked up at the frontier as undesirables, according to the report of the Ontario police. The provincial authorities claim that many of the lowest crimes committed are the work of just such people, who are ejected from other countries. Two of these undesirables were wanted by the United States authorities for murder and another for rape.

AN ATHLETE BARRISTER.

"Pat" Manning of Winnipeg is Veteran of Three Lines of Sport.

Mr. R. A. C. Manning, a well-known Winnipeg barrister, has been selected chairman of the Manitoba Beef Commission which has been appointed to investigate the whole problem of the establishment of a municipal abattoir and public market for the west. Mr. Manning, who has been solicitor for the Western Live Stock Association for several years, has been a prominent figure in western sports and politics.

"Pat" Manning, as he is better known in Winnipeg, is a "rara avis" in the Manitoba capital—a native-born. During his younger days—he is now barely thirty—he was one of the best known athletes in the west. He has an enviable record, for there are few men who have figured in three championship teams. As a hockey player, he was one of the best west ever produced, and figured in the line-up of the famous Victorias, holders of the Stanley cup in the days before the arrival of professionalism. He was also an enthusiastic and brilliant oarsman, one of the best Winnipeg has ever had. He was a member for years of the Winnipeg Rowing Club's championship crews, and time and again figured in the eastern trips of the western crews. Not content with these two sports, he also took up with vigor Rugby and had much to do with the founding of the game in the west. He was captain for several years of the Winnipeg Rowing Club's Rugby team. Mr. Manning has always been an ardent supporter of amateur sport in every form.

A few years ago "Pat" entered municipal politics and was elected alderman for his ward, serving two years. A year ago he ran against W. Sanford Evans for mayor and met his first defeat. He has been a prominent worker for the Conservatives in elections and has been even spoken of as a possible candidate.

THE FIRE RANGER.

Time is Coming For Him to Resume His Woodland Shack.

The early departure of winter and the premature coming of the warm winds and sunshine mean early work for the Government fire-ranger in those vast forest reserves of northern Ontario. The green color which is now beginning to creep over the woods and plains of old Ontario as a result of the rejuvenating forces of the springtime is absent in the new land to the north. There the mosses and fibrous undergrowth, from which spring wide stretches of virgin pine, will soon be brown and sear under the drying influence of those early spring days, and the demon fire will be ready to find his prey amongst such inflammable material. Larger than ever will be the force of rangers this season to go as fire-fighters, and as protectors of the country's valuable heritage in New Ontario. These worthy officials will begin to seek their lodgings in the wilderness of lake and forest this month, and will remain there until the frost and snow come again in the late autumn. The pair of youths on the job patrol the particular route which is their chief care during their months of office. They carry all personal and household effects with them in their canoe, and, being lightly burdened, they travel quickly, preserving the peace of the forest land. Amongst the American tourists who infest the Ontario reserves, the representative of the Government is known as "that ubiquitous fire-ranger." The life of the ranger is one of mingled pleasure and pain, and, on the whole, is very agreeable. Hardship and dangers which are incident to a lonely existence in the wilds are more than counteracted by the joys derived from a perfectly natural life amidst surroundings that have none of the touches of "the strenuous life" of towns and cities.

C. M. DONALDSON - SHAWVILLE

Italian justice is slow and none too sure; but it appears to have dealt competently, at last, with the Countess Tarnovska and her associates, whose ten weeks' trial at Venice for murder has just ended in conviction. The countess, an astounding product of Russian "civilization," possessed a magnetic charm and began to exercise it early. She eloped at 17. Her husband disappointing her ideals, she took up with a relative of his, Count Borgetski. The husband shot the intruder, was acquitted of murder, and divorced his wife. She next fascinated her lawyer, who deserted his family and career to follow her to Italy. Presently she picked up a young doctor, named Naumoff; later she added a wealthy young noble, Count Kamarovski, to whom she became engaged after he had taken out an insurance policy for $100,000 in her favor. The tragedy followed. Prilukoff and the countess worked on the jealousy of Naumoff, a morbid, weak-willed boy. He shot Kamarovski. This was in 1907. Now the conspirators go to prison—La Tarnovska herself for eight years; Prilukoff, the confederate, for ten; Naumoff, the instrument, for three. There is no death penalty in Italy.

La Tarnovska who is 30, is armed with a fatal fascination. Only five victims have been named thus far, but there have been dozens of others, and many of them have committed suicide for her. Even at the trial one of the jurymen succumbed to her uncanny influence. To obviate a similar effect among the carabinieri who guarded her in court the watch was changed every few hours. In the patter employed by the emotional Italian public, La Tarnovska is a "fatal woman" and exercises an "hypnotic spell."

Puzzled Italy has had to deal as best she could with a strange group of creatures, products of the land where East meets West and where the mingled passions of both combine to produce abnormal specimens of humanity and baffling psychological enigmas. Perhaps the day is not far distant when this country will have to handle problems of a similar sort from a like quarter.

The application of English law is stringent but tonic. One of the law's provisions requires candidates to furnish full accounts of election expenses. Two recent candidates have failed to do this satisfactorily and have been unseated. The first victim was Sir Christopher Furness, the well-known shipbuilder. Observe where he slipped. He employed a special train to take carriages to the scene of action for the conveyance of voters—but that was allowed. He used local "guides" to accompany automobiles in the work of getting the voters out—but that was passed. He used his secretary and some of his firm's clerks as agents without charging their services in the electoral account—but the judges permitted even that. Yet when a business associate organized a parade of miners from outside, paid the railroad fares and provided badges and meal tickets, the line was drawn. The judges regarded the proceeding as an act of intimidation, and when, on top of that, the cost of the parade was omitted from the candidate's accounts, Sir Christopher found himself down and out.

The other victim was Captain Guest, private secretary to Winston Churchill and son-in-law of Henry Phipps of Pittsburg, Penn. Mr. Phipps, rather than damage his own automobiles, hired eight and placed them at Guest's disposal. Thus he became, in the eye of the law, Guest's agent, and the automobiles should have figured in the candidate's expense account. But they were omitted, and the candidate was unseated.

"If you'd assume a more genial manner you'd get along better in business," remarked a wife to her husband. "Rot!" rejoined the man. "I tried the genial tack once, and everybody I met wanted to borrow money!"

HOME.

STRAWBERRIES.

Sun Cooked Strawberries.—Pick over berries, carefully select sound ones and place others aside for jam. Weigh fruit and sugar as for preserves and add enough water to sugar to dissolve; cook syrup and when boiling hard drop in berries carefully. Cook just long enough to thoroughly heat berries; remove from fire and pour in shallow platters and dishes; set on table or bench in bright sunshine for two or three days, or until juice is thick as desired; cover with mosquito netting and when done place in jars and seal tightly.

Strawberry Hint.—If strawberries are washed carefully before they are hulled, their juice will not gather in the bottom of the dish in which they are placed. Berries can be kept in this way for a day and a half without a bit of the juice leaving the fruit.

Strawberry Shortcake.—Sift together two cups of flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful of salt. Rub one-half cupful of lard in flour and add enough cold water to form soft dough. Divide in two portions, roll out one portion, and place in pan, allowing dough to come half way up side of pan. Roll out remainder of dough, spread with soft butter, and place on first portion. Bake about twenty minutes in a moderate oven. Stem, wash, and drain one quart of berries, add one and a half cups of sugar; crush with potato masher. As soon as cake comes from oven remove top crust, butter both top and bottom crusts, use half the berries between cakes and the remainder for top.

Strawberry Shortcake.—Put in the mixing bowl two and one-half cups of flour, one teaspoonful of salt, three teaspoonfuls of baking powder, two tablespoonfuls of shortening. Mix all together, then add just enough sweet milk to moisten. Divide this dough into two equal parts, roll out both parts to one-half inch thickness, spread butter on each, then lay one part on top of the other and bake. When taken out of the oven it will fall apart, beautiful, flaky and short. Cut berries in half and just before serving mix in a cup or more powdered sugar and put between layers.

Strawberry Cheese.—Line little patty pans with puff paste and fill with uncooked rice; bake in a hot oven; cook in a double boiler until the mixture thickens the yolks of three eggs, the grated rind and juice of half a lemon, one cupful of granulated sugar, and a half a cupful of butter; remove from the fire, and when partially cooled stir in one cupful of crushed strawberries; when cool, fill into the pastry shells and cover with a soft boiled icing. These are delicious, but must be eaten fresh.

Strawberry Nests.—Fill an ice cup one-third full of ice cream; hollow the center, in which place three or four ripe strawberries, previously sweetened, and a little juice; cover with a pyramid of slightly sweetened whipped cream and dust over with ground pecan meats. Maraschino cherries may be used in place of berries. Very pretty and delicious.

Preserving Hint.—To keep small fruit, such as strawberries, from rising to the top after canning, and thus becoming tasteless, turn the cans three times a week till the fruit is saturated with the syrup and will remain in the bottom of the can.

BREAKFAST HELPS.

Cornmeal Mush.—Bring one quart of salted water to the boiling. While this is doing, mix one pint of meal, one pint of milk and a tablespoonful of sugar. Pour this gradually into the boiling water. Let cook slowly twenty minutes. Set in square mold to harden. In the morning slice about an inch thick, roll in flour and fry in deep fat (like doughnuts). The mush, if properly made, should "puff," and be a dish fit for a king. The trouble will be to get enough. If the recipe is doubled 30 minutes' steady cooking will be enough, as it will be too solid if cooked too long. Be sure to have the fat hot enough or the mush will fall to pieces.

Homemade Breakfast Food.—Grind dry, stale bread; sift out the fine for breading chops, etc.; use only the coarse; toast or brown in the oven; serve with (hot, not cold) cream or milk and sugar. Nutmeg or cinnamon if desired.

VEGETABLES.

Spinach with Crackers.—Boil half peck of spinach until tender, drain and chop fine; have eight crackers soaked in milk, two onions; fry in a tablespoonful of butter a few minutes, but do not brown; add crackers and spinach, pepper, salt; let simmer over a slow fire ten minutes; if too thick add milk or water.

Potato Pancake.—Peel and grate three large potatoes, together with one good sized onion; soak one slice of stale white bread in milk; add to potatoes two whole eggs, one teaspoonful salt, one-half a cupful of flour; mix all together and fry in pan filled with hot lard, taking a tablespoonful of batter for each pancake; fry until crisp and brown. Delicious.

Potatoes au Gratin.—Slice one quart of cold boiled potatoes. Put layer of potatoes in a baking dish, season with salt and pepper and grated cheese. Make a sauce of one pint of milk and one tablespoonful of flour. When this reaches the boiling point or becomes thick pour over the potatoes and bake for half an hour.

SALADS.

Golden Dressing.—Pineapple juice, one-half cupful; lemon juice, one-quarter cupful; beaten eggs, two; sugar, one-third cupful. After beating the eggs well add the pineapple juice, lemon juice, sugar, and a small pinch of salt. Beat together and cook in double boiler. Let boil about two minutes.

Oil Salad Dressing.—Lemon juice, two teaspoonfuls; olive oil, one-quarter cupful; salt, one-half teaspoonful; water, two teaspoonfuls; eggs, two. Heat together in double boiler, stirring constantly. When it begins to thicken place in cold water and stir until cold.

Fruit Salad.—Yolks four eggs, quarter teaspoonful of paprika, three-quarters teaspoonful of salt, one-half cupful butter, three-quarters cupful milk, one-half cupful pineapple juice from canned fruit, one-half tablespoonful cornstarch, one-half cupful vinegar. Mix and boil until thick. This can be made in the morning. Peel two apples and slice, three bananas, one cupful pineapple that has been drained of all juices, seven grapes (white), halved. When dressing is mixed through fruit, then mix through as much whipped cream as desired; about one pint. Serve on lettuce leaf and garnish with English walnuts and maraschino cherries. This serves twelve and is simply delicious.

MEATS.

Substitute for Bacon.—An excellent substitute for breakfast bacon is salted pork. Have the butcher slice it thin, trim and pour boiling water over, letting it stand a few minutes. Drain and wipe dry, sprinkle with a little pepper, roll in flour and fry a light brown. It is preferred to bacon.

Tongue with Tomato Sauce.—Cut cooked corned tongue in slices a little less than one-half inch thick, dip in bread crumbs, egg and crumbs; brown in butter, place on a dish; pour around this sauce; cook one-half can of tomatoes with one onion, two peppers; cook five minutes, strain, add two tablespoonfuls butter, two tablespoonfuls flour cooked together. Salt to taste.

Pork Chops with Lemons.—Grate a small quantity of lemon rind, enough to cover one side lightly, on each chop. Stack them on a plate and let set an hour before cooking. Cook with the lemon still on and you will find them delicious.

LITTLE HELPS.

Turban Pad.—From a discarded hat take the wire crown, cover it with brown silk, and net over this to match the hair, leaving a round hole in the lower part to bring the hair through. Then fasten it on with wire hairpins, and it works like a charm, without the outlay of one penny for materials.

Old Sheets.—Old cotton sheets make good bags for inclosing gowns and coats in the wardrobe, one large sheet being enough for two bags. An old sheet will cut up into several slips for use on the pillows over the ticking. Another plan is to take the best parts for making sheets for cots and cribs, where there are children, saving the very thin parts for dusters.

In the sickroom there is no end to the possibilities of an old sheet. One-half laid across the bed under the patient will serve as a draw sheet. If the sides are sewed together and the sheets cut through the center it will be given a new lease of life.

Twilled sheets, by reason of their softness and substantial weave, make excellent polishing cloths and good undercoating for ironing boards.

A large apron for covering the skirt to be used for bedmaking can be made from half a discarded sheet.

Cutting Vegetables.—Cutting onions, turnips, and carrots across the fiber makes them more tender when cooked.

AN ELECTRIC RAT TRAP.

An electric rat trap has been invented by a Viennese, which has met with considerable success in Germany. Wires are connected with the top and bottom of the box, and the rat, on pushing open the trap-door, closes the circuit by touching the wires, and is immediately killed by the current. A voltage of less than 50 suffices, and this allows the trap to be installed everywhere without danger to persons.

SCOURGE OF PNEUMONIA

CAUSE AT TIMES OF MORE DEATHS THAN CONSUMPTION

Aggravates Other Diseases — The Young and the Aged are Most Susceptible.

The death rate of pneumonia is really dreadful; sometimes it exceeds even that of consumption. The difference is that in pneumonia the very young and the aged succumb most readily, and consumption gets its greatest harvest from those in the prime of life, says the Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette.

Pneumonia, or lung fever, was formerly considered to affect only the lungs, but of recent years we have found it to be a general infection, such as develops from the growth and multiplication of disease engendering germs.

In pneumonia these germs have the lungs for their principal camping ground, though other organs and parts of the body are affected, sometimes even more seriously.

Here, as in all infections, two kinds of causes have to be taken into account: First, the specific cause, the germ; and then the predisposing causes, which weaken the body and so make it congenial soil for the germ to thrive in.

The germ of pneumonia hunts in couples. This germ is fairly resistant to drying and sunshine, when it is embedded in protective sputum, but when dried and powdered an hour's direct sunshine will kill it; it resists diffused sunshine better than direct, for it can live in the former fifty-five days; it has been found in at least 90 per cent. of the cases of pneumonia in which it has been sought.

It is found in the upper air passages—the mouth, the nose, the throat and the bronchial tubes.

EVEN IN THE EYELIDS;

of course the "rusty sputum" of pneumonia patients contains it, and sometimes also even their blood; it persists for weeks or months in the mouths of pneumonia convalescents.

Infection comes usually through inhaling the germs, which get into the lymph and blood channels, and this is why pneumonia is a general and not a local disease. So besides being responsible for lobar pneumonia the pneumococcus may set up inflammation in many other parts of the body than the lungs—the heart, the spleen, the stomach, the kidneys.

An important consideration just here is that of mixed infection; in many infections, such as pneumonia, a number of different microbes may be found active in addition to the one which is the essential cause. And this mixed infection will oftentimes make fatal a disease which would otherwise not prove so. Thus some cases of pneumonia are very grave indeed and quite hopeless, while others recover most satisfactorily; in the former germs are more virulent and deadly than the pneumococcus allied with it.

Infection in pneumonia was recognized long before we knew the essential germ; it was generations ago, known to be prevalent in certain given houses, barracks, jails, schools; epidemics were recognized; in hospitals direct infection was easily traced. Nurses and doctors seldom succumb to pneumonia, infectious as it is; one among several good reasons for this is that they know precisely what means of prevention they must employ; they do not (or should not) see cases when they might become susceptible by reason of bodily weakness or ill health, and which is a potent factor in the development of any infection.

As has been stated, after the pneumococcus we have to consider predispositions, which in the physician's experience loom up very large indeed. Take, for example, a family of five or six. One or two among them will succumb to pneumonia, while the others will escape. Why don't they all suffer, since in the family relation they must all have been about equally subject to the germinal attack? The reason lies in that the bodies of those who have contracted the disease were predisposed, while in the bodies of those who have escaped the organs and tissues were sufficiently vital to triumph over the infection.

Resistance to the pneumococcus is decreased under various conditions. Children under 6 are very prone to pneumonia; the tendency then diminishes up to the fifteenth year; then for each subsequent decade it progressively increases. Venerable people are very prone to pneumonia and are very likely to die of it; from the forty-fifth year to the sixty-fifth year the death rate per 100,000 is 263; from 65 on it is 733 per 100,000.

The colored man is more likely than the white to suffer. Men are more prone than women, undoubtedly by reason of the greater hardships and exposure the family's breadwinner has to suffer. The winter months, but especially in those times in winter when the weather is changeable and unsettled—as in December and March—there is likely to be much pneumonia.

COLD AND WET.

especially when the extremities are chilled and wet, predispose decidedly by lowering resistance. The cold alone is not responsible for this; Arctic explorers are amazingly free from such affections as pneumonia, though when they return to civilization they are as likely as any one else to succumb. The reason lies in that the pneumococcus is unknown—as yet—in the rare, clean, pure Arctic air, whereas it is all too prevalent among us.

Taking cold is rarely oftentimes taking heat; there is here at bottom a disturbance of the bodily equilibrium. Chilling of the skin brings about a disturbance of the normal equilibrium of the general circulation; some organs—as the lungs—will have an excess of blood, while elsewhere there will be an anemia, a depletion. And this instability disturbs and decreases the body's antibacterial activities.

Fatigue very decidedly predisposes the body to pneumonia; men who must work arduously through long hours and in inclement weather are apt to come down with it. Medical men of large practice, who become exhausted through much work day and night, often succumb by reason of this.

Unhealthy conditions of the upper air passages—"respiratory catarrhs"—lead to pneumonia. There are chronic diseases of the heart, kidneys and the digestive tract upon which pneumonia is oftentimes superimposed, and then there is likely to be a fatal result. Most people, by way, do not die of the disease which has most persistently and most seriously affected them; it is some such "terminal affection" as pneumonia that brings about the end.

INJURIES TO THE CHEST

will frequently predispose to pneumonia; the external wound may be very slight, while the internal injury may be extensive. Alcoholism is an enormously predisposing factor; this is especially so by reason of the dreadful stuff which poor men are apt to consume.

Pneumonia is more frequent in cities than in the country because of the more strenuous life and irregular life in the cities, the germ laden dust, the tenement life, the overcrowding and consequent increased liability to the infection. It is considered that newcomers to cities are less prone to pneumonia than the city born, no doubt because such newcomers have not yet become enervated by city life.

The measures against infection should be very much as in tuberculosis—such measures as the anti-tuberculosis propaganda has popularized. The sputum is disinfected; attendants upon pneumonia cases keep their own mouths and throats very clean by means of dentifrices and gargles; they wash their hands very frequently in disinfectants. After the patient's recovery or removal his room is fumigated, as for any infectious disease; if there have been several cases of pneumonia we had best fumigate the whole house.

At any rate we should clean such rooms with wet cloths instead of by dusting and sweeping. Those who have no occasion had best keep away from pneumonia patients, though there is of course no occasion to be frightened by them as if they had the plague.

Certainly people who are susceptible because of predisposing factors should not unnecessarily expose themselves to infection. Expectations in public places should be prohibited. Immunization against pneumonia, such as is now so effective against diphtheria, is likely to become a successful procedure. In a number of cases it already has proved effective.

"A TRASHY TRINKET."

Pearl Necklace Worth $15,000 Found in Button Box.

A member of a well-known aristocratic French family, while stopping for a few days at a hotel in the Rue de la Paix, Paris, discovered that her $15,000 pearl necklace had disappeared from her room. A messenger boy was suspected. He admitted his guilt, but said that he had given the necklace to his mother. The latter when questioned, expressed astonishment that so much trouble should be taken for a "trashy little trinket," and said she had given it to her daughter-in-law. The younger woman also seemed surprised that the "string of glass beads" should interest the police. She had given them to her little daughter, who, finding the necklace too large, had taken about half the beads off. These were found in a box containing an assortment of buttons, hooks and eyes, etc. The owner of the necklace was so pleased with its recovery that she would not prosecute the family, but the boy has been discharged.

REEKING WITH SÉDITION

EUROPEAN CITIES WHICH ARE PLAGUE-SPOTS.

Spain is Not the Only Country Where There is Great Unrest.

Barcelona has for some years had a notorious name as a very hotbed of Anarchists, Nihilists, and Seditious, and unrest; and it must be confessed the Spanish town, which has recently been the scene of so much trouble, following the execution of Ferrer, has well earned its unenviable renown.

But there are other "Barcelonas" in Europe, almost, if not quite, as full of restless folk as is the Spanish city on the shores of the Gulf of Lyons. And most countries have one or more of these plague-spots.

Lately, when the writer landed at Palermo, he saw on the quay a troop of soldiers. They were kept in a sort of big cage, behind iron bars. They were laughing, singing, and jeering in many cases, at the passers-by. And the said strollers along the quay reciprocated their attentions with interest, so that there was certainly no love lost.

TURBULENT PALERMO.

The soldiers were from an Italian regiment, sent to be ready for use in Palermo if necessary. You may remember that there have been two or three assassinations of important officials in the fair Sicilian city only recently, and your native of Palermo is as continually restless as a bear with a sore ear. The town is simply seething with desperadoes and members of various terrible societies, and you need never be surprised any morning to read serious news from beautiful Palermo.

Hardly second to Barcelona itself, and certainly not to Palermo, for its constant unrest and upheavals, is Lisbon, surely one of the fair cities on earth! Its situation is glorious, its environment lovely beyond description, its main streets are among the finest in the world. Yet this town is ever reeking with sedition and people who may break out any morning quite unexpectedly, with such terrible, staggering results as startled the world in January, 1908.

France always has to keep its eye on Marseilles. Here, again, it is difficult to say why this fine and flourishing port, facing the delightful Mediterranean, should be such a very hotbed of men whose hand is ever against society and their fellows. The least cause, the slightest spark, and Marseilles is on fire in a minute.

ITALIAN UNREST.

Italy is troubled terribly with the unrest always simmering at both Rome and Naples. The extraordinary ascendancy and dreadful power of such societies as the Mafia, the Camorra, and others, have made the terrors of Rome and Naples almost as full of fear to the State officials and foreign visitors as they are to the humbler instruments of the vengeance of those societies in Italy.

There has always been a great horde of half-wild democracy in Rome and Naples which is ever ready to rush forth to loot, plunder, and destroy either property or life; and the two cities never seem to become utterly at peace, or to be thoroughly trusted by the ruler of the State or by visitors.

As for that island which has been well called "The Isle of Unrest"—the notorious Corsica—the writer had proof enough during a recent visit to it that its people have lost none of those qualities which have given their land its name.

Brigands and robbers still flourish within a very few miles of Ajaccio, the capital, and you will not go far through Corsica without soon seeing that you need better protection than the Government can give you if you are to enjoy a quiet frame of mind as regards your safety in the event of any disturbance.

Ajaccio may not be as big as Barcelona, nor as important as Palermo, but it contains more desperate folk than either in proportion to the population.—London Answers

HIS ALTERNATIVE.

Even at the tender age of four little Bennie was considering his future occupation. "Mamma," he said, "when I'm a man, I'm going to have a wagon and drive around collecting ashes." "Why, Bennie," exclaimed his mother in horror, "mamma doesn't want her little boy to be an ash-man."

"Well, then," replied Bennie with a very self-sacrificing air, "I suppose I could collect swill."

WOES OF WOMANHOOD

Weakness and Suffering Banished by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills.

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are good for men and women, and growing boys and girls, but they are good in a special way for women. At special times a woman needs a medicine to enrich and regulate her blood supply, or her life will be one round of suffering. That is when Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are worth their weight in gold, for they actually make new blood. There is not a month in her life from fifteen to fifty that Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are not a boon to every woman. They help the growing girl safely over the critical time when her blood is overtaken by new demands. To the woman of middle life they bring relief and bring her strength for her time of change. And during the thirty odd years that lie between Dr. Williams' Pink Pills fill a woman's life with the happiness of health, giving her strength and energy for every function. A woman's surest protection against all the ills that come to her because of her sex, is to set her blood right at once by a course of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills—and then to keep the blood right by taking the Pills occasionally. Mrs. Eliza Clouthier, St. Jerome, Que., is one of the many unfortunate sufferers restored to health by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. She says: "It would be difficult for me to say how much I suffered. I was tormented by headaches and backaches; my appetite failed and I wasted away to such an extent that I was unable to do housework. I was constantly taking medicine, but it did not help me any. One day a friend urged me to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and I procured a couple of boxes. By the time these were done I felt some improvement, and thus encouraged I continued the use of the Pills, gaining strength day by day, until after I had taken six or seven boxes. I was again well and strong, and I have since continued in the best of health. I can strongly recommend these Pills to all weak and ailing women."

Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50, from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

THE DEBT OF FRANCE.

It Now Amounts to Seven Billion Dollars.

Alarm at the formidable growth of the public debt of France, its departments, and the colonies is increasing. Auguste Gervais, Senator of the Department of the Seine, has already sounded a warning.

The debt now amounting to more than $7,000,000,000 and exceeding that of any other country, he says, is too easily lost sight of by the common people. They should remember that the interest and other annual charges to which it subjects them exceed $300,000,000, or one-quarter of the total Government expenses, and that the debt itself is rapidly increasing.

From the total, as estimated, are expressly excluded both the capital of the annuities payable by the State, amounting to about $2,000,000,000, and some $30,000,000 which the State owes to railway companies for lines recently purchased.

CURED HER KIDNEYS.
Mrs. John Pettigrew, of Central Economy, N.S., was practically helpless from rheumatism.

She could not stoop, and her limbs ached so that it was torture for her to be up and around the house.

As Mrs. Pettigrew put it, "I was all crippled up. I saw Gin Pills advertised and sent for some, and after taking only two boxes, a different woman. Gin Pills are the only things that helped me, and I cannot say too much for them."

ESKIMO'S SNOW HOUSE.

How It is Built—The Peculiar Spiral Arch.

The Eskimo vault is a true dome; it exerts no outward thrust and requires no temporary scaffolding. It is also unique in that its material is not brick or stone but snow, says the Scientific American.

The construction is used for the beehive shaped winter houses of these so-called savages and is spiral in plan. A row of blocks is first laid on the ground in a circle—or more exactly a polygon. Each of these has a slightly slant top and each thus raises its surface a little beyond the last, until when the circle is completed the gap in height between the last and first blocks gives the thickness for the following courses. In these the upper and lower surfaces of each block are parallel, as in a brick, but the gradual upward trend given by the first course is of necessity maintained.

In each successive round the snow bricks are leaned inward more by having their lower surfaces sliced off to a bevel. If set squarely end to end they would before long lean inward so far that they would tumble. For this reason the end of the block last laid is cut at an angle. The next following block has the joining end slanted at the reverse angle. Thus it fits in behind the preceding and is prevented by it from slipping inward.

As the house grows the circles become smaller, until at last only an irregular polygonal opening is left. This is filled with a wedge shaped block cut to shape. It is, however, not a keystone, as the remainder of the structure supports itself.

The blocks of firm snow are usually dressed outside and handed for placing to the man on the inside. The last block he holds up with one hand, slices to shape with his ivory knife in the other and drops into position. He is then entirely enclosed in the vault. Only after the house itself is entirely completed does he cut out the low door, which to keep out the cold as much as possible is only big enough to crawl through.

A long, low tunnel is then built in front of the door to break the force of the Arctic's icy blasts. Even the window is present. A small aperture is cut out over the door and filled with a pane of clear, thin ice. All that is omitted is the fire or chimney. Whatever heat is produced by the seal oil lamps is wanted inside, warmth being a more serious necessity in the climate than ventilation or freedom from smoke.

DON'T DRUG CHILDREN.

When you give your child a so-called "soothing" medicine you are not curing its sickness. You are merely drugging it into temporary insensibility. The so-called soothing medicines contain opiates, and an overdose may kill the child. When you give little ones Baby's Own Tablets you have the guarantee of a government analyst that this medicine is safe. And you have the word of thousands of grateful mothers that this medicine will promptly cure all minor ailments of childhood. Mrs. Alphonse Roy, Scott Junction, Que., says: "My little one was weak and sickly and used to cry day and night, but since giving him Baby's Own Tablets he has thrived splendidly, and is as good-natured and happy as I could wish." ONE WOMAN'S

STATEMENT

TELLS HER SUFFERING SISTERS TO USE DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

They Proved a Blessing to Her When Her Pains and Weakness Were Almost More Than She Could Bear.

St. George's Man, May 30 (Special).—Hoping to save her sister women in the West from pains and aches which come at the critical times in a woman's life, Mrs. Arsene Vinet of this place has given the following statement for publication:—

"I have brought up a large family and have always enjoyed good health until the last two years. I am fifty-four years of age and at the critical time of life that comes to every woman, I had pains in my right hip and shoulder. I could not lie down two minutes at a time without suffering the greatest agony. Sometimes I awakened with a feeling as if one had laid a piece of ice on my head. Another time it would be a burning pain under the left shoulder.

"I took many medicines but could get no relief, till reading of cures of similar cases to my own by Dodd's Kidney Pills, led me to try them. They did wonders for me.

"I want all women to know what Dodd's Kidney Pills did for me." Dodd's Kidney Pills cure the kidneys. The woman who has sound kidneys is safeguarded against nine-tenths of the suffering that makes life a burden to the women of Canada.

GOOD NEWS FOR THE DEAF.

A celebrated New York Aurist has been selected to demonstrate to deaf people that deafness is a disease and can be rapidly and easily cured in your own home.

He proposes to prove this fact by sending to any person having trouble with their ears a trial treatment of his new method absolutely free. We advise all people who have trouble with their ears to immediately address Dr. Edward Gardner, Suite 914, No. 49 West Thirty-third street, New York City, and we wish to assure them that they will receive by return mail, absolutely free, a "Trial Treatment."

BETWEEN THE TWO.

One day a drill-sergeant in the Army had a number of recruits to drill, and wanted the married men separated from the single ones, so he formed them in a line, and gave the word of command:

"Single men advance, and married men fall back in the rear." All took their positions except one, an Irishman, who stood still. The sergeant asked the reason why he had not moved, but no answer came from Pat.

"Come, my man, are you married?"

"No," replied Pat.

"Then you are single."

"No."

"Then what are you?"

"I am courting Sally."

The sergeant collapsed.

The World is Full of Pain.—The aches and pains that afflict humanity are many and constant, arising from a multitude of indistinguishable causes, but in the main owing to man's negligence in taking care of his health. SOME SUPERSTITIONS.

Bub a cat's back the wrong way, and if you see the sparks it is a sign of cold weather.

When you hear the first frogs in the spring you may know the frost is out of the ground.

In France it is believed that the settling of a white pigeon upon a chimney is a sign of speedy death for some one in the house.

There is a superstition among the negroes of the south that to meet a frog is a lucky incident, indicating that the one thus favored is about to receive money from some unexpected quarter.

SOUFAN RAT'S FOOD.

During the season of drouth in the arid parts of the Soudan the jerboa (a small jumping rat), lives entirely on preserved melons. He bites off the melon just as it is ripe and digs away the sand from under it, so that it sinks below the level of the ground. The wind soon covers it, and the melon is thus preserved until the jerboa is ready to eat it. One jerboa will bury 40 melons in a season.

The change of dietary that comes with spring and summer has the effect in weak stomachs of setting up inflammation, resulting in dysentery and cholera morbus. The abnormal condition will continue if not attended to and will cause an exhaustive drain on the system. The best available medicine is Dr. J. D. Kellogg's Dysentery Cordial. It clears the stomach and bowels of irritants, counteracts the inflammation and restores the organs to healthy action.

MONTREAL AND QUEBEC.

A veritable edition de luxe among railroad pamphlets has been issued by the Grand Trunk Railway System to proclaim amongst tourists the glories of the cities of Montreal and Quebec. The brochure is beautifully printed and generally arranged in the artistic style of earlier days, when the ornamentation of a volume was regarded as an important incident to its presentation of reading matter. It gives an interesting description of the two most interesting cities in Canada, with many illustrations from photographs. Sent free to any address. Apply to Mr. J. D. Pills for Nervous Troubles.—The stomach is the centre of the nervous system, and when the stomach suspends healthy action the result is manifest in disturbances of the nerves. If allowed to persist, nervous debility, a dangerous ailment, may ensue. The first consideration is to restore the stomach to proper action, and there is no readier remedy for this than Parmelee's Vegetable Pills. Thousands can attest the virtue of these pills in curing nervous disorders.

LOCAL NEWS.

The King's Birthday, (June 3) by a proclamation of the Lieut. Governor will be officially observed in this province on July 1st.

According to reports received from the experimental farm at Brandon 20 per cent of the grain crop in that district was destroyed by a heavy snow storm on May 28. Many cattle also perished.

The question of changing a portion of the Calumet road between the Orange hall at the 7th line crossing and the intersection of a sideline some distance west of that point, was up before the Clarendon Council on Monday last, but we understand no action was taken, the board no doubt inclining to the opinion that the changing of roads is a delicate matter to deal with unless all parties concerned are satisfied, which does not appear to have been the case in this instance. It is well, of course to have roads constructed on the concessions and sidelines where conditions are favorable and the public interest does not suffer; but the closing of a forced road that has been long established sometimes leads to no end of trouble and bad feeling.

The employees of the Gatiné and Pontiac divisions of the C. P. R. held their annual excursion-picnic at Campbells Bay on Wednesday last, the objective point being reached by special train of seven coaches shortly before noon. Many Ottawa people were in attendance and took all the enjoyment they could out of a rather disagreeable day. A varied program of field sports and other amusements was carried out. A detachment of the G. G. F. G. band supplied good music, and the usual stunts at waltzing and jig dancing were indulged in. The picnic ground was moved this year from the north to the south end of the village, and although more convenient was scarcely as well adapted to the purpose. The special pulled out about 6.30 in the evening on its return run to the city.

Matrimonial Event at Otter Lake.

An event of exceptional interest took place at Otter Lake on Wednesday of last week (June 1st) when Miss Lizzie Queale, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Queale, was married to Thomas P. Bennett of the J. R. Booth company, Ottawa. The bride belongs to one of the oldest and most respected families of the district and the event was fittingly recognized by a large attendance of friends and relatives both at the church and at the reception held afterwards at the home of the bride's parents. The groom was formerly a member of "D" Special Service battery in South Africa and is now a sergeant in the Second Field battery of Ottawa. Rev. C. W. P. Baugh, the energetic and popular rector of St. James' church, Otter Lake, performed the ceremony. The bride, clad in a chaste gown of white silk, with veil and wreath of orange blossoms, had as bridesmaid her sister, Miss Emma Queale, who was also gowned in white. Miss Beulah Moore, niece of the bride, made a very charming flower girl. Mr. Frederick Davy of Ottawa supported the groom. The groom's gift to the bride was a dainty pearl and ruby brooch and to the bridesmaid a pearl crescent. The church was prettily decorated for the occasion. After the wedding ceremony the congregation witnessed another of uncommon interest in the presentation of a costly and handsome silver tea service to Mrs. Bennett. It was the gift of the congregation as a token of recognition of Mrs. Bennett's faithful service to the church as organist and in many other ways. The presentation was made on behalf of the congregation by Mr. A. Sheppard, church warden, and William Farrell, sidesman of the church.

The reception at the family home was a large and notable gathering. It included all the members of the family, and the third generation was represented by no fewer than eighteen grandchildren of Mr. and Mrs. Queale. The house was filled to overflowing with happy guests and laughing children. Several tables had to be set to accommodate all at the enjoyable wedding repast. Many handsome, useful and costly gifts were presented to the bride. As is frequently the custom a christening ceremony took place at the home after the reception. The child admitted to holy baptism was Mary Grace, second child of Mr. and Mrs. John Milliken. Rev. Mr. Baugh conducted the ceremony. During the evening dancing was enjoyed by all the company and music of the finest quality was played by Mr. W. Lafleur, a very skillful musician.

The Rev. Dr. Forrest, D. D., president of Dalhousie university, has been elected moderator of the Presbyterian General Assembly of Canada.

A Wild Goose Chase.

BY M. W. N.

Herman, an old bachelor, was a great friend of mine. He was very fond of my cousin Bella who constantly treated him with the greatest coolness. Three weeks before my holidays began, I informed my aunt that Herman and I intended to spend the first month of the vacation with her. My aunt in reply said she would be delighted to have us.

When the holidays began we left the city, and after a pleasant journey of two hours on the train, we reached my aunt's beautiful home in the country. Bella was there, and gave me a very warm welcome. She gave Herman as usual the tips of her fingers.

The Rev. H. Moore, B. A., curate of the parish, paid great attention to Bella. More than once during the first week at my aunt's was Herman mortified when he met Bella and the curate walking along the quiet country road together. The sight was galling to him, and he told me he could not stand it.

One day, before we were three weeks at my aunt's home, he came to my room and said:

"I have done it!"

"Done what?" I asked.

"Proposed to your cousin," he replied, "and she has rejected me."

"I am very sorry," I said, as he handed me Bella's note, which was very brief and polite.

"I am not at all sorry," he rejoined. "She shall soon learn that I can get a girl far better and higher in society than ever she can hope to be," he said. "I will be even with her yet."

A few days after Herman was rejected he drew a sketch of Bella and the curate standing in a very comical position, and he succeeded in getting the sketch put into the local newspaper. Bella was very angry when she saw this practical joke, but she still maintained her usual coolness.

It was just nine days before the month had expired when Herman told my aunt that he had advertised for a wife. The following day he received a letter from a very rich young lady in answer to his advertisement. In her letter she said that her income was five thousand dollars per annum, and asked him to come to meet her at Zena Station at four o'clock on the third day after he had received this letter, and gave him her name and address as follows: "Miss B. K. Lee, 13 Mora's Villa, City."

When poor Herman had read Miss Lee's letter, he actually went into ecstasies of delight. Rushing into my room, half-dressed, he exclaimed:

"Congratulate me! congratulate me! I am a made man!"

Handing me Miss Lee's letter he said, "Did I not tell you that I could get a young lady far higher in society than your cousin?"

I told him I was glad he was so fortunate. He then ordered two dress suits, a silk hat and various other adornments, and set out to meet Miss Lee at the appointed time.

As Herman disappeared from the house down the avenue, I saw Bella at the dining-room window in raptures laughing. We were all anxiously waiting for his return, but he did not come back that night. He arrived on the following day and told us all about Card of Thanks.

The relatives of the late Samuel Howard, (who was drowned in the Ottawa river on May 28) desire to express their most sincere thanks for the kindness, assistance and sympathy extended to them in connection with that distressingly sad event. Especially do they feel grateful to the men engaged on both Gillies' and the Schneaux booms for the part they performed in recovering the body, and otherwise giving their timely and valuable assistance.

his experience.

Miss Lee never met him at the station although he waited for her there till 7 p. m. Then he took the train in order to call on Miss Lee at her city address. He tried and tried to ascertain it from policemen and others, but no such address was ever heard of in the city. He then quickly returned to Zena Station, but the last train for that night had already left, and he was obliged to stay at the hotel till morning, which cost him five dollars.

The next day Herman and I were sitting in the drawing room talking and laughing about the whole matter, when in came Bella, laugh and said: "That was a good practical joke, and I would not have played it on you if you had not put that nasty sketch of me and Rev. Mr. Moore in the paper."

For a few minutes he and I were dumbfounded, and could scarcely credit our ears. We then compared what purported to be Miss Lee's writing with Bella's note, which he had already received, and found that they were both in the same hand-writing. The bell soon rang and we all entered the dining room. As we sat at dinner with my uncle, aunt, cousins and friends, Herman revealed the whole plot. We all laughed and laughed, and could not cease for a long time.

The following day Herman and I returned to the city, having enjoyed our month in the country immensely.

Bella is now Mrs. Moore, and Herman is still a bachelor "inveighing," as he says, "against the plotting of women, their inconsistency and double-dealing, their absurd and misplaced affections."

Winnipeg's assessment has increased fifty million dollars during the past year.

Up to the present 352 rural mail delivery routes have been established in Canada of which number by far the largest proportion are in Ontario. In Quebec and the Maritime Provinces, it seems, very few petitions have been received asking for rural delivery. Wonder if a system of this kind could be operated successfully anywhere in Pontiac?
