Robbery at Empire Garage Nets $1,134.89 Cash, Cheques

Electric Clock Fixes Time of Actual Break-in at One Minute After Two

Burglars made a fine haul in cash and cheques from the Empire Garage, Huntingdon, on Thursday morning, when they broke into the premises and stole $688.40 in cash, and cheques to the value of $446.49, a total of $1,134.89.

Entrance was apparently made through a window at the rear of the garage workshop, the only one that had been left unlatched. Tracks were found which led to this window and this one only, so that it seemed the thief or thieves must have been aware that it would be open. Even the time was able to be fixed as the electric clock in the workshop had stopped at one minute after 2 a.m. The stoppage had been caused by the switch of the clock having been turned off. It is thought that the burglars in hunting for a light switch had turned this one off by mistake.

The burglars made way through the workshop to the doors that enter the offices and showroom and here they lifted a window and turned the latches on the door. They obtained one of the acetylene torches from the shop and used this to try and cut their way into the safe in the office. To cover the glare made by this torch they opened an umbrella in front of it and worked behind it. However, all they succeeded in doing with the safe was to break off the mechanism which sets the lock. Having failed at this, they obtained tools from the showroom stockroom and pried open the cash register in the next office. It was here they obtained their haul. Nothing else was touched or taken, and the thieves let themselves out by the front door. They also left the torch alight on the floor of the office in front of the safe and the floor was quite badly scorched.

The torch fortunately snuffed itself out, or there may have been a big fire to fight. When the workmen came in in the morning, they found the gas still escaping from the torch.

Provincial police were notified and arrived in a short time to carry on an investigation. The whole place was gone over for finger prints and possible clues as to the identity of the culprits.

There are strong indications that the burglars were situated locally and knew the layout of the garage or had been tipped off by someone. The fact that the tracks led directly to the one window and no other, the way in which the doors were opened and the way in which the tools used were found, all lead to the belief that it was done by someone in the know.

Those from whom the cheques stolen were received were: Garage J. Perron, Traders Finance, Paul Viau Ltd., Gleaner Inc., Garthshore, Dr. O. E. Caza, Perron & Frere, Garage Breault. It is not likely that any attempt will be made to cash these cheques, but proper precautions have been taken.

This is just one more in a series of breakings and robberies which have occurred since Ex-Chief Vallee left Huntingdon and so far no other appointment has been made. It is quite evident that Huntingdon does need police protection and adequate protection at that.

Heavy Enrollment in Lower Grades Huntingdon High

Total Enrollment Expected to be Higher in Next Few Weeks

Huntingdon High School opened on Tuesday morning with one of the largest enrollments in Grades 1 and 2 that have been recorded. The enrollment in each grade is 30 pupils and it is expected that this number will be added to in the matter of a few weeks. The total enrollment for the first day was 225 and this is about normal, but it is expected that this figure will be up to about 240 during the next few weeks. When the school was first built, there were many who said that there would never be sufficient children to occupy such a large school and it was ridiculous to build on such a scale. Today the capacity is fast being attained and it is expected that in the lower grades that this capacity will be almost reached this year. The intermediate grades are rather slim, but with the enrollment up in the lower grades it means that future years will see all grades fairly well filled. The children coming in are mostly local to town. It is also an indication that the population of our town is definitely on the increase.

The school during the holidays has all been very nicely cleaned and much new painting and decorating has been done so that the school almost presents a new appearance. The school board has decided to grant the children one day's holiday for Huntingdon Fair and this will be on Friday of this week.

Only a few minor changes have been made in the staff of the school: Miss Craig, B.H.Sc., teacher of Home Economics, has been engaged by Howick school, but will be shared by Huntingdon. Mr. Lionel Upton, Specialist in Manual Training, has been engaged by Huntingdon School, but will be shared by Howick. Mr. Ariano, B.A., French Specialist, will be on full time with Huntingdon School, and Mr. S. P. Liversidge will do the Choral work. Otherwise, the staff and positions will remain the same as last year. There is one change in the bus contracts and this is on the Dewittville route, which will be operated by Harrigan Brothers — Vets' Taxi.

Softball Tournament at Ormstown Another Success

Lacolle Team Wins Stalker Trophy and $100 Prize

The 16th Annual Softball Tournament of the Ormstown Curling Club on Labor Day was again very successful. Perfect weather attracted a large crowd and thirty-four teams competed in the three events. Class A attracted 10 teams, Nitro, Mallette and Legion of Valleyfield; J. H. Benoit, General Steel Wares and St. Jean Berchman of Montreal; Cornwall, Lachine, Huntingdon and Lacolle.

In a very closely contested game, Geo. Hood's Lacolle team with the strong battery of Lecavalier and O'Connor beat the J. H. Benoit team 3-1 for the Doctor Stalker Trophy and $100. prize.

Class B. had twenty-one teams with the final between two Valleyfield teams. In a very high scoring game Christins won out from the Empire Card Room.

Only 3 girls teams played with Bobby Ness' Howick team of Huntingdon, Aubrey and Howick girls trimming the Ormstown team 14-2 to win the Lewis Osmond Trophy.

The winners in the children's races were:

Quebec-Chicoutimi Road to Be Tried Out in Mid-October

QUEBEC—(CP)—An engineering feat whose authors call it the most difficult road-building project in Canada will be ready for a try-out by Quebec motorists about mid-October.

It is the 137-mile Quebec-Chicoutimi highway up among the top election issues during the recent provincial campaign though its "men working" signs were not taken down for a moment.

The road, designed to provide good, quick transport to the developing Saguenay region, was started in 1945 and neither lake nor mountain in the virgin territory was allowed to stand in its way.

Engineers who directed the work have on record cases where a lake was filled in here and a mountain was taken away there to chop out the route which will reduce to 137 the Quebec-Chicoutimi road mileage from 155, 170 or 208, as it is now by three old roads.

The finished product will have a 24-foot-wide asphalt driving surface with gravel shoulders eight to 10 feet wide on each side.

No curve will have visibility of less than 500 feet and most will give 1,000-foot visibility at least. Fifty-mile-an-hour travel will present no problem for traffic bound to the busy north country.

At present asphalting is complete for 40 miles and will be finished the full distance next year. Opening to traffic won't be held up until hard-surfacing is finished.

The road figured as an election issue when Liberals charged that its building involved waste of money.

Present estimate is that its cost will be about $150,000 a mile or $20,550,000 altogether.

Its engineers say it presented construction problems not matched even on the Alaska Highway.

Man Injures Hand at Sash and Door Factory

If it can be correctly said that there is a fortunate accident, it happened on Wednesday afternoon, at the sash and door factory of Builders' Supply and Feeds Ltd. The accident involved Mr. Alcide Galipeau, of Athelstan, while he was working with machinery in the factory, when his thumb and first finger of the right hand were badly injured. The fortunate part of the accident was the fact that it was finally decided it would not be necessary to amputate. He was taken to the Barrie Memorial Hospital, Ormstown, where, after examination and treatment for a few days, he was able to return home. The injury was bad enough and no accident can be liked, but he will retain his injured limbs.

Benefit Day Huntingdon Fair

Saturday To Be Added as Extra Day

Thursday and Friday are Fair Days in Huntingdon and with the several improvements that have been made, it is expected that there will be a much better attendance than in former years. It is hoped that the weather will hold out and not turn to rain for either of the days, as is so often the case.

A further list of specials has been sent in and appears in an advertisement in this issue. It is also the intention to hold over the midway and other attractions for the Saturday and to make this a treat for the kiddies during the afternoon by giving rides at reduced prices. Three rides are coming here with the midway so there should be plenty of fun for young and old.

Saturday is being operated as a benefit for the Fair Board to raise some extra money. An advertisement in this issue points out that this is the first time in a number of years that help has been asked for the Board. It is hoped that the public will get behind this move and make it a success. There will be an evening program starting at 7.30 and ending at midnight.

During the other days of the fair there will be plenty for everybody to see and do and entries are coming in fast to the Secretary, Mr. J. Smaill. Certainly there is no scarcity of special prizes as everyone seems to want to offer a special prize for something or other. Plan to attend the fair on both days and then again on Saturday.

Legion to Hold Decoration Day Parade

Citizens Asked to Take Active Interest

The Huntingdon Branch of the Canadian Legion is holding a Decoration Day Parade on Sunday, September 12th, for the purpose of visiting the Legion Plots in the two Huntingdon cemeteries and holding suitable ceremonies.

The parade will leave the Legion Hall, on Fairview Road, at 2 p.m. and will be led by the Black Watch Pipe Band. All members of the Legion and other ex-service men are requested to meet at the Hall and take part in the parade. During the war years the public used to take an active interest in this parade and the Legion is desirous of having all citizens take part in this event. As is well known a drive was put on several years ago to raise funds to purchase a plot each in the Protestant cemetery and in the Roman Catholic Cemetery, for the burial of Legion members whose relatives desired them buried in such plots. Since that time it has been the charge of the Legion to keep these plots in good condition and to make an annual parade to them. It is for this purpose that the parade is being held on Sunday afternoon and citizens are therefore asked to make this parade a successful one by their taking part and attending.

Quebec Secondary Wood Plants Make $64,000,000 Industry

When people start counting how many pay-envelopes are produced by forest industries, some interesting points may be easily omitted. Do you know that 61 workers in Quebec do nothing but make excelsior (shredded wood) for packing? To produce wooden handles and spools, 882 Quebecers are holding jobs with total salaries of $781,000. Veneer and plywood making uses 2562 workers utilizing $2,600,000 worth of wood and creating a product worth over $6,000,000. Making boot-trees, wood heels and lasts in Quebec takes 569 persons and their output is worth $1,644,000.

All told, Quebec has 1,042 secondary wood-using plants, with 18,000 employees getting wages of $19,537,000, using wood valued at $25,744,000 and adding to the country's wealth with essential production priced at $64,605,000. And all of this comes from the forest which forms the raw material of each day's operation.

Dr. Eduard Benes Courageous Czechoslovak Premier Dies

Suffered Much For His Beloved Country—Crowning Blow—Communism

Dr. Eduard Benes, who with Thomas Masaryk founded the Czechoslovak Republic in 1918 and fought a lifetime to keep his beloved country free from totalitarian rule, died last week, a disheartened and disillusioned man.

Twice president of a small land which echoed to the march of hobnailed Nazi boots and now is in the grip of Communist power, Benes died Friday in a coma, as quietly as if he were falling into a deep sleep. He was 64.

The courageous statesman who rose from the ranks of the peasants to world acclaim fought bitterly against the Munich pact which in 1938 allowed partition of his country by Hitler, and drove him into exile in the United States and Britain. Later, in the last year of his life, he suffered two more great blows: the Communist seizure of power in Czechoslovakia last February, and the mysterious death plunge of Jan Masaryk, foreign minister and son of the Republic's co-founder.

It was last Feb. 24, on the sixth day of a Communist-manoeuvred "crisis" that Benes, after a dogged attempt to stem the tide, reluctantly bowed to the Communist leader, Klement Gottwald. The anti-Communist ministers, hoping to precipitate a showdown, had offered Benes their resignations; but the Communists, cracking down on the frail and aging statesman, made a show of force and demanded that he accept the resignations and form a cabinet picked by Gottwald. After his capitulation, Benes told friends Gottwald had "talked like Hitler."

Then Masaryk died in what the Communists said was a suicide plunge from a foreign ministry window. Feeble and defeated, Benes wept bitterly at the funeral. Finally he resigned, saying his decision had been reached "in connection with the over-all political situation."

Although Benes made only one trip to Canada, he was not unfamiliar to Canadians. During his long wartime exile, he visited the Dominion in June, 1943, and stayed at Government House as the guest of the Earl of Athlone, then governor-general of Canada.

France last week entered her second week without a government in power.

Hopes that Robert Schuman, a leader of the moderate Mouvement Republicain Populaire, could form a government have been dashed with the refusal of the Socialists to participate.

It was the withdrawal of the same group that caused the downfall of the Schuman government in July.

The instability of the French government under the present distribution of political power is hampering the economic recovery of the country. Many observers feel that the only way to circumvent the present deadlock is to hold a national election.

An appeal to the people might give one faction the power to form a government strong enough to carry out measures to combat inflation and aid the economic recovery of the country.

However, hope is still being expressed that a government can be formed without resorting to a national election. To call an election the deputies, who were elected in November, 1946, would have to pass a law ending their present terms which normally would not expire until 1951.

Many observers believe that they would refuse to do this and give that fact as the reason why a compromise will have to be reached among the chief parties of the centre.

The "third force"—the group of parties which proposes to resist the extremes of the right and left—cannot operate without the support of the Socialists.

Some quarters feel that if President Vincent Auriol called on the Radical-Socialist leader Andre Marie to form a government the Socialists would accept on certain terms. They would want promise of wage increases and a hand in naming members of the cabinet.

Queen Wilhelmina abdicated at Amsterdam last Saturday in a ceremony of quiet grandeur, after 50 years of Dutch rule.

She was succeeded by her daughter, Juliana, 39, mother of four daughters.

The new queen, who already has served twice as princess regent for the tired old lady of Apeldoorn, took office immediately when Wilhelmina signed the instrument of resignation. Her 68-year-old mother plans to retire to the countryside and devote herself to gardening, painting and needle work.

Juliana thus became dowager princess of the realm—ruler of an empire of 65,000,000, including 9,000,000 homelanders. Her husband, Bernhard, German-born sportsman, had already been named Prince of the Netherlands; with the signing, their daughter, 10-year-old Princess Beatrix, became heiress presumptive.

As the four military governors of Germany, meeting in the German capital, came to grips with the Berlin currency problem and other allied issues, Berlin Communists appeared to be preparing for a possible coup.

In one move, a group of pro-Soviet political parties met at the Berlin city hall and formed a "democratic bloc." They appointed a committee to negotiate with the anti-Communist city administration "for the elimination of the present emergency."

But there was no indication that this move was the final coup. On the contrary, Communist press reports of the meeting said the bloc still recognized the elected city government and would continue to deal with it.

The Communist press, however, threatened reprisals against Germans forging a western government at Bonn, in western Germany. Delegates are meeting there in parliamentary council to draft a constitution which will bring unified government to the merged United States, British and French occupation zones.

Government Warns of Soviet Pen Pal Letter Snooping

Requests Being Made For Harbour Views and Canadian Telephone Books

OTTAWA (CP)—A strong segment of one of Canada's two major parent labor bodies was preparing today to try to dismantle the shadowy structure of Communism within the organization. In time, it may mean that the turbulent Canadian Seamen's Union will find itself without a higher affiliation.

Termed "Red-dominated" by lakes shipping companies, the C.S.U. was the main cause for the highest internal revolt in years in its parent body, the 370,000,000-Man Trades and Labor Congress, which with the Canadian Congress of Labor controls the vast majority of organized Canadian labor.

Just how this revolt, which broke ground in Ottawa last week, originated is still unknown but it was clear that much of T.L.C.'s strength was behind the move to oust Communists and Communist sympathizers.

Percy Bengough, T.L.C. president, said he didn't think the move "serious". In an interview, he said the leaders of the revolt —heads of 23 international unions — were "mesmerizing" themselves into delusions about their importance.

But he later summoned the T.L.C. executive to meet in Ottawa Sept. 10 to consider action against the insurgents.

The A.F.L.-affiliated Seafarers' International Union a day or so before absorbed the C.S.U.'s rival, the Canadian Lake Seamen's Union and thus ended its mongrel career.

This development came after the T.L.C. had denounced the C.L.S.U. members as "scabs" for manning ships which the C.S.U. men left when they staged a strike against the shipping companies.

The S.I.U. heaped another log on the fire when it announced it would seek membership on every front where the C.S.U. is organized. This indicated an extension of the rivalry to both coasts.

Mr. Bengough appeared to have the alternative of changing his views about the C.S.U. or bucking the ire of the revolters at the October convention of the T.L.C. in Victoria. He showed no signs of backing down.

Pen Pal Snoopers

Canada's external affairs department reported a new type of espionage—pen pal snoopers.

A "gentleman from Vienna" had written to a Canadian Arctic post asking for a postcard with "harbor views" in exchange for which he would return Viennese cathedral scenes.

A telephone company had received several requests from persons in the Russian-occupied sector of Germany for copies of Canadian telephone books.

Beware of "pen pals", the department said in a statement. It labelled the practice "sinister" though not "startingly serious". A spokesman said: "There obviously is something pretty sinister when someone starts asking for harbor views of Arctic posts".

The same type of Soviet snooping also was reported in the United States. There, chambers of commerce and other public bodies were getting letters asking for maps of highways, railway lines and other information. These, too, came from Soviet-dominated areas in Europe.

The government's travel bureau immediately clamped down on the shipments of literature asked by persons in Soviet-controlled areas. All replies to letters from these areas were being held up.

Ahead of Russia

Canada is ahead of Russia in one important aspect of war material it was learned last week—the field of atomic energy.

Come what may, Canadian scientists believe that this nation has spurted ahead in the race for atomic supremacy and now is shouldering the Belgian Congo for the position of the world's greatest producer of uranium.

One of these scientists is 47-year-old Arvid Thunats, Norwegian-born engineer who heads the radioactivity division of the government's mines bureau.

Without quoting "grades, production or processes", he said in an interview he is fully satisfied that Canada is "on the right road to a bright atomic future".

"Much has yet to be done, but things are thoroughly successful".

He agreed with atomic energy control board scientists in Ottawa that it is quite possible that Canada has already exceeded the Congo's known uranium production.

But of more importance in case of war, Mr. Thunats is certain that Canada exceeds Russia's rate of uranium production —an essential in the manufacture of atomic bombs.

Pole Seekers

After six weeks of hunting, a scientific expedition of 14 finally found the pole.

They are the pole-hunters who left in mid-July to seek the north magnetic pole and do a bit of hunting. Members of the party said they expended some 30 rifle shots before they bagged a bear.

However, they proudly reported to the government that Canada still is in possession of the pole—latitude 73 north, longitude 100 west—on Prince of Wales Island in Canada's Arctic zone, some 200 miles north of the point marked on most maps.

Cheques Missing in Robbery Recovered

Mr. N. Foisy, proprietor of the Empire Garage Reg'd. has reported to The Gleaner that the cheques alleged to have been stolen in the recent robbery, have been recovered. Apparently the thieves decided not to take these with them and hid them under some books and papers in the garage office. He reports that all except one are in the number found.

It is also reported that the Provincial police have rounded up four suspects in connection with this robbery and believe that they may be connected with the other robberies in town within the past few weeks. No conclusive report has been issued, but the four suspects are all local young men.

Canada Strong in Atomic Research

Specially Written For
The Huntingdon Gleaner
By HAROLD MORRISON

OTTAWA, (CP)—Canada is losing no ground in the international race for the foremost position in atomic energy research.

This was learned last week in conversation with Trade Minister Howe, member of a tri-nation commission on atomic energy, and Dr. C J. Mackenzie, head of the Canadian Atomic Energy Control Board.

Mr. Howe, who meets with United States and United Kingdom members of the Atomic Commission regularly, said that Canada's achievements were to some measure due to her own ingenuity and also to information she has received from the other two nations.

Dr. Mackenzie, who perhaps is closer to the work at the atomic project at Chalk River, Ont., and the Canadian scientists who work there, said that a great number of the Dominion's achievements were her own. The Dominion, he said, has even given instruction to a team of British scientists who came to Canada to see what Canadians had developed.

Dr. Mackenzie, although he spoke guardedly on the subject, intimated that unlike both the U.S. and the U.K., Canada's problems were not so much raw resources as large-scale utensils for the conversion of the raw material into the final product. In this, it was believed, the United States outstripped both Canada and the U.K.

But, it was not to be believed, said Dr. Mackenzie, that Canada's Chalk River project lacked formation or efficiency.

"The project affords every opportunity for atomic research." It was believed equal to anything other nations have produced.

Just how great an achievement it was, was anybody's guess. When it came to a discussion of what resources Canada had accumulated at the project, Dr. Mackenzie was silent.

Two Candidates Declared

The crop of political aspirants to the leadership of the Progressive Conservative party barely showed above ground last week but rumors of a bumper harvest still persisted.

Although Dame Rumor had at least eight or nine candidates ready at any moment to enter the field, only two candidates actually made their intentions known.

One was the 49-year-old former mayor of Owen Sound, Ont., W. Garfield Case, a comparative newcomer to the House of Commons. The other was John W. Hanna, Progressive Conservative member of the Ontario Legislature for Huron Bruce.

Mr. Case, a formidable political battler, defeated Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, a Liberal, in a February, 1945, by-election in Grey North.

Mr. Hanna, a former mayor of Wingham, Ont., is an unknown factor—a "dark horse"—when compared with Premier George Drew of Ontario and John Diefenbaker, the Progressive Conservative's "oratorical genius" from Lake Centre, Sask.

It was these latter two men that Dame Rumor mostly spoke about. She expects, as do a lot of observers in Ottawa, that the political tilt for the leadership to be vacated by John Bracken, will centre around these two well-grounded political campaigners.

Oddly enough, Mr. Case is a former Liberal, and as a Liberal was an unsuccessful candidate for the House of Commons in the 1930 general election.

The intentions of Mr. Drew and Mr. Diefenbaker last week were still unannounced.

Large Attendance Taxpayers At Town Council Meeting

Matter of Police Protection Main Business Before Council

One of the largest gatherings of ratepayers and other interested audiences attended the Huntingdon Town Council meeting on Tuesday evening, at the County Building. This was the regular meeting for September and the main topic of interest was police protection. After reading the minutes of the previous meetings, Mayor A. C. H. Picard asked the gathering if they had any matter to bring before the meeting.

Mr. A. Fawcett, President of the Huntingdon Board of Trade, addressed the Mayor and stated that he was present with a large number of members of the Board of Trade, to ask what the council intended to do regarding police protection. He said that it had got so that people were afraid to leave the properties unattended for fear that they would be broken into. He said he did not want to criticize the council on letting Mr. Vallee go, but he understood the main reason was the refusal of the council to grant Mr. Vallee a raise in pay. He felt that the town had lost a good man through this action and reminded the council that they were the servants of the ratepayers and the ratepayers were asking that police protection be provided.

Mr. F. Cleyn followed Mr. Fawcett and said he was representing the taxpayers in so far as the mills and other manufacturers were concerned and that he backed up the Board of Trade. He said he was going to put his complaint into stronger words and demand that the council provide adequate police protection. He said that apparently there was more to Mr. Vallee leaving than appeared on the surface, but he was sure that he was worthy of the raise asked and it should have been granted because he had done good work. He asked the Mayor if he would give the reasons why the raise was not granted.

Mayor Picard was apparently quite disturbed and he rose to his feet and thanked the Board of Trade and Mr. Cleyn for coming to the council regarding the matter of police protection and complimented the Board of Trade for appearing in a body. He said the business men wanted police protection, but this costs money, yet when the town tried to raise the business tax, the Board of Trade organized and defeated the purpose in mind. He did not consider this the way to gain services and everyone knew that what cost $10.00 a few years ago now costs $20.00. The town must raise money to pay for the services and to do this, must get the revenue from the taxes. It was not very nice of them to do these things. But he was glad that they were all together on this matter.

Mr. Fawcett rose and addressed the Mayor and told him that the Board of Trade was not responsible for the accusation levelled against it by the Mayor, it was purely a matter of the business men getting together themselves and deciding on the action that was taken. The Board of Trade had nothing to do with it.

Mr. Cleyn asked the Mayor if he would give any other reason why Mr. Vallee resigned and if the Council had been satisfied with the work done by him. The Mayor replied that if those interested would come to him privately he would give them other reasons as he did not want it published.

He was pressed from various members of the audience for the reasons and he got up quite apparently in a temper and shouted: "Do you want to know? Alright, I will tell you although I did not want to do so publicly". Mayor Picard then said that Mr. Vallee had been to the Chateau and had taken a drink while on duty. He had warned him against doing such things while on duty, but it had happened on several occasions. On one of the occasions damage had occurred to the town truck which had cost the town a large sum. Mr. Cleyn said that there was no doubt that Mr. Vallee had done good work and that persons had been caught and justice done while he was here. Mayor Picard said that he had not been responsible for so much as the newspapers had said. He went on to quote about the robbery at the Ouimet restaurant and said that the woman had raised the alarm and Mr. Ouimet had been responsible for the capture. Alderman Collum rose to his feet and told the Mayor who was still up on his feet, that this was not true, for Mr. Vallee had captured the man after a chase across country and having fired several shots. If Mr. Ouimet had made the capture why had the shots been fired after? The Mayor could not answer this one. He then went on to tell of other instances and said either the Provincial or the R.C.M.P. had warned Mr. Vallee that robberies were taking place or about to take place. In one instance the robbers fell right into the hands of patrolling provincial policemen.

Alderman Galipeau rose to his feet and as Chairman of the Police Committee said that the man did not want to work and would not collect the water taxes or do several other jobs that the committee wanted him to do. He said too much was put into the Gleaner and he was given lots of publicity through the Gleaner on several occasions and one did not have to believe all that was printed in the newspapers.

One of the audience asked if all these things were known to the other members of the council.

Alderman Tinker said he did not know of them and Alderman Collum said they had never been discussed at any of the meetings. Alderman Tinker told the Mayor that these things should have been brought before the meetings and properly discussed and that Mr. Vallee should have been present to defend himself. Such things should not be allowed to go on if they were known and then adjustments could be made.

Mr. D. Stephens said that the argument was not getting police protection and that what was done is past. The question was is the town going to have another policeman. The Mayor said that the people should look after their own protection and not leave windows and doors easy to open so that anyone can get in. He said it would be a hard job for anyone to open any of the windows on his house and that they would have to break in.

Alderman McWhinnie said that he was sure there would be police protection as there was an application in for the meeting to consider, from

Formal Opening New Howick High School Tuesday Night

Large Number of People Attend Official Opening And View School

This morning Howick High School scholars and staff enter a new school building that was dedicated last evening as the hallowed place of learning for the Protestant boys and girls of Howick and community, by the Rev. W. C. McBride. The large auditorium and gymnasium of the school were filled with adults of the community who had been inspecting the new school in its completed manner for the first time.

Chairman Russel Kerr, the present School Board and the members of the previous School Board, who had so much to do with the building of this new house of learning, have certainly put their all into seeing it built and be made a lasting structure. It is as near fireproof as one could expect and this is very important, as Dr. W. P. Percival stated 11 schools had been burnt down during the past 16 years.

During the school year 1947-48, the enrollment at Howick High School was 180. It is expected the enrollment for 1948-49 will be near that same figure. The teaching staff for the year is composed of the following: Miss June McGerrigle, Grade 1; Miss Margaret Wickens, Grades 2 and 3; Miss C. Robinson, Grades 4 and 5; Miss Audrey Yuile, Grades 6 and 7; Miss Macdonald, Grades 8 and 9; Mr. Keith Farquharson, Principal, Grades 10 and 11; Mr. Henry Welburn is the French Specialist; Miss Shirley Craig will teach the Household Science classes, Mr. Lionel Upton the Manual Training and Mr. S. P. Liversidge is to teach music one day a week.

Mr. E. R. Casey of the E. R. Casey Construction Co. Limited, who built the Howick School gave out a lot of statistical information as to the materials that entered into the construction of the school. He further stated that although the costs of materials had advanced since the contract for the building was let, two revisions of an upward nature had been made but that some deduction had been made to the original plan that meant the school was erected at no additional cost to the original price quoted. The school cost $183,397.00. Mr. Casey paid high tribute to Mr. Melville Brown, the former chairman of the School Board, who he said was at the school during building operation for perhaps 90% of the time and for all the valued services and supervision he accorded in behalf of the School Board he never received a single penny for himself or from the R. R. Casey Construction Company even though some people had said such was being done. The school board members, former and present, have indeed been faithful to their duty as far as the building supervision work was concerned and none of them ever so much as suggested they be recompensed by him for services but gave of their time and ability for the welfare of the new school. The school boards and the secretary-treasurer, Mr. T. T. Gebbie, have been fine people to work for, for they really worked with us to bring about this fine school into reality. (Applause).

Mr. E. Leslie Perry, consulting architect, saw to it that the latest innovations for the interior of the school were included in the building. He has achieved much for the betterment of the school over those built even in recent years. (Applause).

Mr. Casey concluded his remarks through stating he hoped to again be doing construction work in this district. He thereupon called for Miss Thyra McKell to come forward and receive a gift from him in appreciation of her having scored the highest average marks amongst the graduating class of 1948 in Howick High School. Mr. Casey also presented the Howick School with a public address system.

Mr. E. Leslie Perry, architect, thanked Mr. Casey for the complimentary remarks he had made toward him and at the same time congratulated Howick School Board upon its new school.

Predicted Butter Shortage

MEMORIES of the butter shortage still linger in the minds of most people today and according to reports another shortage is looming on the horizon.

The so-called butter shortage is aggravated by repeated scare announcements which prompt consumers to hoard. Consumer confidence would be quickly restored by an announcement from the Government that sufficient butter would be imported to meet Canadians needs. If that is not done the situation will continue to worsen.

There was a big hue and cry when it was suggested that the ban on margarine should be lifted and all kinds of excuses were found to keep the ban existent. Excuses were also forthcoming that the shortage was abnormal and that in time the supply would be greater than the demand. On the other hand it was pointed out that Canadians are large butter consumers and that none was allowed for export and also that a larger number of people had become consumers of butter. This being so, it was not considered possible that the supply could reach the demand and therefore it was argued that a substitute should be allowed, or butter imported into the country from other sources.

This latter argument seems to have been proven at this time in face of the reported shortage that now looms for the latter part of the year and beginning of next. Some of the producers themselves are now convinced that they cannot cope with the demand and that either butter from some other source should be brought into Canada or a substitute allowed. It has taken time for this admission, but at last it has been made. The government has referred the margarine question to the Superior Court for a ruling as to the legality of the ban and declares it will do nothing until this ruling is handed down. Meantime the people are anxious as to what will happen to their most important spread.

One thing is certain, dairy producers have lost their argument that the importation of butter or the manufacturing of a substitute would be harmful to their position as producers. In the first place as producers they have shown over several years that they cannot produce enough of their product to satisfy the demand. This year the shortage, if reports are correct, will appear earlier than ever before. Thus it will be a longer period before adjustment can be brought about and therefore dissatisfaction will be on a higher plane. Having shown that they cannot produce in sufficient quantity and that all they produce is taken by the demand, it is obvious that a further source of supply whether it be the real thing or a substitute, cannot injure their livelihood. It is not likely that the demand will slump when figures published indicate that the population of Canada has increased by almost a million people. There is only one other way that the producer can vindicate himself in the argument and that is to see that the production is increased to such amount so as the present predicted shortage will not occur.

There is now another factor to be considered. In a matter of months Newfoundland will be included as the tenth province of Canada. In this new province margarine is bought far more than butter as this new province has no powerful dairying industry. There are no customs regulations as between the provinces and therefore inter-provincial trade is not restricted by regulations. Yet there is in existence a country-wide ban on the importation or manufacture of margarine in this Dominion. Is it likely that Newfoundland will agree to the closing down of all its manufactures of margarine and take its chance of getting butter from Canada's already short supply? If Newfoundland is permitted to carry on with its manufacture and sale of margarine, it would be a contravention of the laws of the country of which it has become a part. We believe that the population of Newfoundland would add a further increase to the demand for butter of something over 300,000 persons. This added drain on our already inadequate supply would be the straw to break the camel's back. Yet if Newfoundland is allowed to manufacture and sell margarine would it not be fair that other provinces should be given a likewise privilege? Then again if someone in Newfoundland sends someone in another province a gift of a box of margarine, what could be done about it. The government could hardly say that the margarine was smuggled into the country when it is from one of its own provinces. The ban forbids its manufacture, sale or importation into this country, but when Newfoundland is taken officially in as part of the country, what will happen then.

This is truly something that the producer of dairy products must consider as well as the government and some measure must be taken to overcome the implications. We have no wish to see the Dairy Producer the loser on his own product, for we fully realize that he has a valuable product and one that we could not get along without. If he was over-producing this product and then someone wanted to introduce a substitute, we would regard that as an unfair intrusion. But under the circumstances when it is known that sufficient of his product cannot be produced to meet the demand and the likelihood is that it may be some years, if ever, that he can, then we believe it is an entirely different matter. The people should not be allowed to suffer shortages that could be remedied by another source.

National Immunization Week

CANADA'S sixth National Immunization Week will be observed this year during the week of September 12th, sponsored by the Health League of Canada in co-operation with Dominion, provincial and municipal health departments throughout Canada. This week is devoted to the intensifying of the all-year efforts of health departments and the Health League of Canada to call to public attention the need for protecting children against such diseases as diphtheria, smallpox and whooping cough by immunization.

These diseases are largely preventable by adequate immunization. They attack all ages, but babies and little children are easy victims of these contagious maladies.

Medical science has discovered and produced immunizing agents such as diphtheria toxoid to prevent diphtheria, whooping cough vaccine to prevent whooping cough and smallpox vaccine to prevent smallpox. Vaccination has practically eliminated smallpox in Canada and diphtheria toxoid can do the same with diphtheria if it is given a chance. Whooping cough, which kills more young children than all the other so-called children's diseases combined, can be prevented by use of whooping cough vaccine. However, despite the availability of these protective measures, these disease still menace the health of Canada's population.

It is pointed out that thousands of lives have been saved by the use of toxoid in the prevention of diphtheria, yet last year there were 139 deaths from diphtheria in Canada as compared to 90 deaths from poliomyelitis. Whooping cough, which also can be prevented, took the lives of 221 Canadians in 1947.

In order to make an immunization program effective, the cooperation of parents, teachers, clergymen and citizens is needed in seeing that every Canadian youngster is protected with the inexpensive, efficient and painless protection offered by doctors and public health officials. Immunization is more than a medical problem. It is first and foremost a community problem and it requires the support of the whole community.

The inoculation procedure employed in immunization against the common childhood diseases is about as painful as a mosquito bite and, ordinarily, the ensuing reaction, if there is any, consists of nothing more that some redness and a bit of local swelling. There is no cheaper protection than immunization. It can be done for a small fee by a family doctor or at a free immunization clinic.

It Is Fair Time In Huntingdon County

HUNTINGDON Agricultural Fair takes place this week on Thursday and Friday, with an extra day thrown in on Saturday as a special Benefit Feature. Next week, on Wednesday, September 15th, the Havelock Fair will be held and prize lists for this event have been distributed and exhibitors are already planning what they intend to exhibit.

Havelock Fair is for one day only and quite an amount is crowded into this one day. This year further improvements have been made in the showgrounds and buildings and this feature alone is expected to be an attraction to both the regular patrons and to any new patrons that may be added. There is a fine list of specials which are in addition to those published in the prize list. Such will make for greater competition among the large number of exhibitors who annually enter their exhibits in this great little fair. Better accommodation is being afforded cattle exhibitors this year as stalls have been made on the grounds and instead of having to tie the animals in all kinds of places, they will now have a specified space. Some of the buildings have been painted and renovated and present a much better appearance. This work was enabled to be done on account of a special grant received from the Provincial Government through the efforts of Mr. J. G. Rennie, M.L.A. Good use of the grant has been made as patrons to the fair will quickly realize. It is hoped that such grants will be a yearly feature and thus help the fairs to improve their grounds and equipment for the benefit of the exhibitors and others interested. Perhaps at a later date the cattle stalls will be able to have a roof over them and thus protect the animals from the weather elements.

Havelock Fair usually enjoys fine, hot weather and is largely attended by visitors from all over the county as well as farther afield. Much of the produce is sold after it has been judged to people who take a particular fancy to such prize winning varieties. There is not much time for extra activities, but last year a baseball game in the morning attracted a lot of attention, thus showing that something of this nature would prove an added attraction. It has an advantage in the fact that the fairgrounds are so situated that there are no counter attractions to draw the attention of the patrons and all must obtain their enjoyment at the fair. To this end the officials have always catered in seeing that patrons can obtain most all they need right at the grounds. Probably the most important item is the fact that one can always depend on obtaining a dinner at a reasonable price —to many this is a main attraction and provides an opportunity of sitting at a table with many of their old acquaintances.

We can only say that following Huntingdon Fair this week, Havelock Fair next week, is a must on everybody's list. If you have not been in the habit of attending, or have missed it for some years, plan to place this on your lists of visits for this year.

NOT GOOD LUCK BUT GOOD DRIVING ...

THE Connecticut Department of Highways has been making a survey of traffic accidents and drivers, and reports that most "repeaters", or accident-addicts, insist that accidents are the result more of bad luck than bad driving. That is, of course, a theory quite without foundation.

A safe driver may come to grief through the fault of another, but a driver who tries deliberately and constantly to avoid accidents seldom interrupts a journey with a stay in hospital or a sojourn at a strange hotel while his car is repaired.

There are many men and women who have driven for years, and tens of thousands of miles, without being involved in an accident, and this does not come about from good luck. It comes from competent driving and ceaseless vigilance, from a deliberate policy of not taking chances.

Those whose records show accident after accident cannot convince any traffic expert that it's just bad luck. It's bad driving, more often than not.—(Ottawa Journal).

A MIDNIGHT ADVENTURE

By LEWIS MILLIGAN

What would you do if you suddenly found yourself at black midnight on a lonely country road, with the bus from which you had alighted disappearing in the distance, and with no place to go? That was the situation in which I found myself at the first stop by mistake on my tour of the coast of Nova Scotia. There I was standing alone with a "grip", gazing around in the darkness for some sign of life or human habitation. No such sign appeared, and all was silent as the grave. I began to sing, "Here's a pretty how-do-you-do," when I espied a dim light through the distant trees and straightway made a circuitious line for it as fast as I could with my baggage.

The light proved to be no will-o'-the-wisp, for it brought me to a rather large house with a long veranda, and I felt sure of at least a shakedown for the night. I knocked on the door and waited. The door opened and the form of a woman appeared against a light in a room beyond. I apologized for disturbing her at such an hour, and explained my dilemma. She said she was sorry, but that all her rooms were taken up with summer boarders. There was no hotel at that point and she did not know of anyone who could put me up. My heart sank, and her heart seemed to soften toward me when I suggested that I might sleep on the veranda. She thought they might take me in at a house somewhere down the road, and she offered to lend me a flashlight to find my way. I hesitated and imagined myself wandering round from house to house all night with my heavy burden. She the darkness. "Perhaps," she said, "Mrs. So-and-so, who runs the telephone service, could put you up. Wait a moment and I will show you the way there."

Leaving my bagage on the veranda, she led me up a steep grade to a small house and introduced me to a pale, elderly lady who had evidently retired for the night. She surveyed me with wide eyes, and her face beamed with a smile of welcome. "Yes," she said, "I can put you up. My niece left this morning. Sit down in the parlor while I prepare the room." At which she disappeared upstairs. I fervently thanked my lady guide for saving my life.

The next thing was to redeem my baggage, and I did not feel equal to carrying it up the hill. But a kindly fate had provided for this in the person of a young man who emerged from the deeper shadows of the veranda and offered to fetch my bag. The which he did in short order, refusing to accept any pay, and returning to his conference with a dim feminine form in the shadows.

While my new landlady was preparing the room, I sat on an old-fashioned sofa surveying the contents of the parlor. It was typical of thousands of country homes throughout the older parts of Canada. On the walls there were family portraits, a picture of Queen Victoria and colored prints; and on the table the family Bible and the family album. In one corner was the organ of old-time family singing days, and I had an impulse to get up and play the Doxology, but I noticed that one of the pedals was out of line with the other, and decided to pronounce the Benediction instead ... And so to bed.

There never was a cleaner and more comfortable bed in Christendom, or any other dom. I felt like Bunyan's Pilgrim when he found refuge in that "very stately palace, the name of which was Beautiful." I slept like a tired child, and awoke next morning refreshed — and behold it was not a dream. I found my landlady busy plugging in calls on the telephone switchboard. She said she could not give me my breakfast, but that I could have it at a boarding house over the way. Opposite to me at the breakfast table were two Navy lads, one of whom was the young man who had carried my baggage the night before. They told me they were spending their leave in the village and were having a good time.

Later on my journey I met with several young naval veterans whose original homes were in Ontario, but who after their discharge returned to those coastal towns to marry and settle down with girls they had courted during their period of training at Cornwallis. Such is the attractive power of those Nova Scotia sirens. And these enchantresses do not confine their attentions to naval men. On the train from Toronto to Halifax I met a young woman who was returning to her home in a small town after two years in Vancouver, where she had become engaged to a young man from Seattle. The young man was following her by the southern route to marry her and carry her back to his home city on the far Pacific coast. Thus Nova Scotia is not only a Land of Old Romance; its romantic spirit is ever young, and its fair charmers are diffusing that spirit far and wide.

Saving Time Doing Chores

A useful and interesting bulletin was published in 1946 by the Vermont Agricultural Experiment Station, Burlington, Vermont, entitled "Labour Saving Through Farm Job Analysis—1. Dairy Barn Chores." This bulletin (No. 503) by R. M. Carter has been read and quoted throughout the world of agriculture It is packed with useful ideas and suggestions.

The problem of doing chores is one that every daily farmer faces daily throughout the year. The reading of this bulletin should help to make some work easier. In this particular instance a detailed record was made of the time taken, the distance walked, and the routes travelled by Leonard Clark in doing the barn chores for his 22-cow dairy. After careful study of the problem a series of changes, designed to make the work easier and more efficient and to save time were made. These changes were of four general types:

1. Rearrangement of the stables;
2. Improvement of work routine;
3. Provision of adequate and suitable equipment; and
4. Convenient location of tools and supplies.

As a result the time spent on chores was reduced from 5 hours 44 minutes to 3 hours 39 minutes, daily, a saving of 2 hours 5 minutes, and travel was reduced from 3¼ to 1¼ miles daily, a saving of 2 miles. Two hours a day is equivalent to more than 60, 12 hour days, a good 2 months work, in a year; 2 miles daily is equivalent to 730 miles in twelve months.

The money cost of the changes made was small. What Mr. Clark did can be done by any dairy farmer who will undertake the task seriously. Many of the ideas worked out on his farm can be applied on other farms without change. In other cases some modification may be necessary to make them workable. In still others new schemes may be needed to be devised to solve particular problems. But the method here used of observing the chores, studying the problem, and working out improvements can be applied anywhere.

If time is to be saved in doing chores there is almost everywhere an urgent necessity to study and restudy the farm buildings on any dairy farm. If the barns and stabling are suitable in every way and are economical from the standpoint of the services required then there is nothing to worry about; but in so many instances this is not the case. A saving in time doing chores is a matter of movement on any farm. seemed to sense my hopelessness in

By DOUGLAS MURRAY

All Olympic Games seem to have outstanding features. Sometimes it is an outstanding individual performance, sometimes an accident is highlighted by the world situation and sometimes it is a great display of sportsmanship. Now that we are reading of present-day efforts, it seems to be a good time to bring up a few highlights of the past.

Probably the greatest individual athlete in the history of the Games was Paavo Johannes Nurmi, called the "Flying Finn," or the "Phantom Finn." "Peerless" Paavo competed in three Olympics—1920, 1924 and 1928. During that time he was in 10 finals and was never placed lower than second. Seven times he carried off the winning gold medal, Nurmi also set up 10 world's records from two to 10 miles.

At the Paris Games in 1924 the 5,000-metre race was run on a furnace-like day with the mercury touching 105 degrees. Runners fell and fainted all along the course, but Nurmi, running easily and smoothly, won the race by about 600 yards to set a world's record.

Then there was the famous fouling incident of the 1932 games at Los Angeles. Ralph Hill of the United States, to everyone's amazement, was leading the much-vaunted Finn, Lauri Lehtinene, coming into the stretch of the 5,000 metre run. Lehtinene put on an unbelievable burst of speed, but as he passed the American he bumped him and knocked him off stride. The judges were about to disqualify the Finn for a foul when Hill protested. He said that Lehtinene had nudged him purely by accident and insisted on retaining second place.

Naturally Hill, remained a hero of Olympic sportsmanship.

Lovelocks Great Feat

The 1,500-metre race, or as it is often called, the metric mile, is the classic event of the Games. An outstanding performance in this classic was built up over a period of four years. Jack Lovelock of New Zealand was beaten in the race at Los Angeles Olympics in 1932 and immediately set about to train himself physically and mentally to achieve his great ambition.

At the next Olympics, in 1936 at Berlin, the United States was making a strong bid for the mile on the piston-like legs of Glenn Cunningham. But Lovelock's superb training came through and he coasted to victory, setting a world's and Olympic record.

The feature of the Berlin Games was due partly to individual performance, and partly to the world situation. That was in Hitler's heyday when his controlled press was calling Negro athletes "Black Auxiliaries", with the insinuation that they couldn't beat the Aryan "supermen." Hitler's astronomers hadn't told him about Jesse Owens, hadn't told him about Jesse Onwes, the "Brown Bullet" from Ohio. When Owens left Berlin he took with him four gold medals. He won the 100-and 200-metre sprints and the broad jump, as well as being a member of United States' winning relay team.

What made things more interesting was that Owen stole what seemed a certain victory for Germany in the broad jump, right from under "der fuehrer's face." The event took place directly in front of the dictator's box.

The best man who acted as Master of Ceremonies asked the bride and groom to lead the grand march, with everyone following in. Congratulations and best wishes were extended to the happy couple by everyone present.

The hall was very prettily decorated in pastel shade streamers in rainbow effect, with multi colored balloons adding to the color scheme. The arch way was decorated in white and blue, above which was concealed a confetti shower, which was showered upon the bridal couple as the congratulations were received.

Dancing was enjoyed to the music of Mr. and Mrs. James Cullen, Messrs. Duheme and T. Bell and Miss Dorothy Hooker.

At midnight delicious sandwiches, coffee, cake, cookies and ice cream were served by the groom's father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. A. A. Tannahill.

The bride and groom expressed their gratitude and welcomed everyone to visit them in their new home. Messrs. WEDDING

Tannahill-Hooker

The Ormstown Presbyterian Church was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Saturday, August 21st, at 3 p.m., when Ruth Mayford Hooker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edwin J. Hooker, became the bride of Merrill Archibald Tannahill, son of Mr. and Mrs. Archibald A. Tannahill, of Allan's Corners, Que.

The church was beautifully decorated with lighted candles, while evergreens formed a background for hydranger and pastel colors of astors and gladioli. The pew decorations were of sweet peas, also in pastel shades, and held in place with bows of white satin.

As the guests were being seated before the ceremony, Miss Jean Thompson rendered a solo "O Perfect Love."

The wedding music was played by Miss Genevieve Cullen.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of brocaded satin with sweetheart neckline and long sleeves. Her floor-length veil was held in place by her head dress with clusters of forget-me-nots. She carried a cascade bouquet of American Beauty roses and white gladioli, and wore as her only ornament a double strand of pearls, being a gift of the groom. The bride's gift to the groom was a gold signet ring.

Miss Dorothy Hooker acted as maid of honor for her sister and wore a gown of pink taffeta and net, she carried a bouquet of gladioli in pastel shades.

Miss Esther Reddick of Montreal, acted as brides-maid and wore a gown of torquoise and net and also carried a pastel shaded bouquet of gladioli, both attendants wore dresses paterned alike, with head dresses and mitts to match.

Mr. Erskine McClintock acted as best man for the groom, each wearing a navy blue suit.

Mr. William Hooker, brother of the bride and Mr. Nelson Tannahill, brother of the groom were ushers.

Rev. Hugh A. Pritchard of Atwood, Ont., officiated, assisted by Rev. Allen S. Reid, D.D., of Montreal, and Rev. A. E. Hutchinson of Ormstown.

During the signing of the register Miss Jean Thompson very sweetly sang "I'll Walk Beside You".

The bride's mother wore a dress of fuchsia crepe with black accesories and wore a corsage of Talisman roses. The mother of the groom wore a black dress with blue trimming and matching accessories; she wore a corsage of sweetheart roses.

The happy couple had pictures taken at the church, then all were entertained at the home of the bride's parents to a buffet luncheon.

The bride and groom received congratulations on the lawn and were recipients of many lovely gifts.

They left by car amid showers of good wishes for a trip down Gaspe and the Maritimes. For travelling the bride wore a flowered navy blue dress with matching accessories, and a corsage of white gladioli.

Since their return they have taken up residence in Allan's Corners, Que.

A CORRECTION

Dundee, Que.,
Sept. 6th, 1948

Editor, The Gleaner.
Sir:—

Due to my error a misstatement was made in my "Letter to the Editor" issue Sept. 1st.

In the paragraph relating to the bye-election in Britain it was stated that the returns stood at 27 to 29 in favor of Labour. I should have said 27 out of 29 seats to Labour.

While I have not the exact data to hand and am subject to correction I believe the score to be in that ratio.

Thank you,
JAS. W. STEWART

The Saucepan

Never scrape a saucepan with a knife. This tends to make the pan burn quickly the next time it is used, to say nothing of injuring the knife.

Table Decoration

Always keep a small fern growing in a low, attractive bowl, and it will serve as a table decoration when there are no cut flowers.

Room Fragrance

Try burning an orange peel on a shovel or tin pan, and see how it sweetens the atmosphere of the room, and the pleasant fragrance it produces.

Washing Glass

When washing a glass, dip both the inside and the outside in hot water at the same time. It is the heating of one side too suddenly that causes a glass to crack.

Wedding at Odelltown United Church

Hamilton-Robinson

In the historic church at Odelltown, Quebec, the marriage took place on Saturday, September fourth, of Irene Emmaline Robinson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Robinson, of Lacolle, to Willand Geddes Hamilton, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Hamilton, of Ormstown. The ceremony was conducted by Rev. R. W. Carr, pastor of the church, which was decorated with a profusion of gladioli, asters, and greenery. In addition, candles lighted the chancel. Of special interest is the fact that the maternal grandparents and great-grandparents of the bride and of the groom had been members of this church, both the old Odell and Geddes families having been pioneer settlers in this locality.

The bride who was given away by her father, was attended by her sisters, Miss Alice Robinson as maid of honour, and Miss Anne Robinson, as bridesmaid. The gromsman was Mr. Erskine McClintock. Mr. Charles Robinson, brother of the bride, and Mr. Purvis Hamilton, brother of the groom, were the ushers. Miss Myrtle Cullen presided at the organ, and during the signing of the register, Miss Audrey McCaig sang "I Love You Truly".

The bride wore a floor-length gown of white brocaded nylon over satin, the tight-fitting bodice having a draped off-shoulder bertha, net yoke and long sleeves pointed over the hand. Her fingertip veil of embroidered net was held in place by a bandeau of orange blossoms, and her only ornament was a string of pearls, the gift of the groom. She carried a white crescent bouquet of Maid of Orleans gladioli. The bride's attendants also wore period gowns with fitted bodice and full skirts, their bonnet-shaped halo hats and long mitts being of the same material as their gowns. The maid of honour, Miss Alice Robinson, was dressed in yellow taffeta and carried a crescent bouquet of orchid gladioli. Miss Anne Robinson wore green taffeta and carried Picardy gladioli. The bride's mother, Mrs. James A. Robinson, was dressed in navy blue crepe and wore a corsage of Rose de Lima gladioli. Mrs. James Robinson, her grandmother, was in black crepe with a corsage of white gladioli. The groom's mother, Mrs. Hamilton, wore black crepe with gold accessories and a corsage of Betty Nuthall gladioli.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robinson, the bridal party receiving on the lawn. Refreshments were served at small tables in the house, which was tastefully decorated with sweet peas in pastel shades.

The young couple left for a motor trip through Southern Ontario and other points, the bride travelling in a navy blue crepe dress with white accessories, and wearing a corsage of white gladioli. On their return they will reside at "The Maples", Ormstown.

Guests from a distance included Mrs. Beulah Dawson, and son, Mr. George Dawson, of Ottawa; Major and Mrs. W. Dean O'Connor and daughter, Miss Betty O'Connor, the Misses Annie Hamilton, Janie I. Norris and Jessie M. Norris of Montreal.

THE NATION'S BUSINESS
by ottawa observer

This year's September 1st, aside from being the annual ending of the holiday season and being the usual forerunner of Labour Day, will be a date of importance in Canadian Labour's history. The National Labour Code came into effect on that day. Replacing the Industrial Disputes Investigation Act, this new legislation was formulated after many hotly contested debates had been held on the subject. While the controversy has not yet abated, some quarters claiming it does not go far enough, others disagreeing on minor questions, it is generally admitted that this new Labour Code is the best legislation of its kind ever to be enacted in Canada.

The Industrial Relations and Disputes Investigation Act, as it is officially known, applies within the limits of the jurisdiction of the Federal Government. That is to transportation, railroads, shipping, aviation, canals; to communications, radio, telegraph; to such undertakings as are not under the exclusive authority of any province or such undertakings as may be declared by the Parliament of Canada to be for the general advantage of Canada or of two or more provinces. It also applies to corporations established to perform functions or duties on behalf of the Government of Canada.

The I.R. & D.I. Act establishes the right to trade union membership, defines unfair labour practices, endorses collective bargaining and collective agreements, sets out conditions for the legality of strikes and lock-outs, procedure for conciliation, arbitration, etc. Its provision for a cooling off period before any strike or lock-out may be effected is probably its outstanding point.

Basis for Provincial Acts

The Act was intended to serve as a basis for similar Acts to be adopted by the provinces. Several of them have already manifested their intentions of doing so while in others existing legislation may differ on minor points only. Such adoption of the Act itself, or of the Act as a model for provincial legislation, by all provinces of Canada would probably be the most effective way of attaining uniformity of labour legislation in Canada. This would remove the grievance expressed in some quarters that as it is now, the National Labour Code should be extended to other industries operating in several provinces or industries in which labour difficulties could affect our national economy. The provinces however have the necessary jurisdiction in those industries such as steel, meat packing, etc., and that jurisdiction has to be respected by the federal government.

At any rate, the initial step has been taken by the federal government. After this new legislation has been in effect for some time and has proven itself effective to interested parties, most provincial legislatures will probably collaborate towards uniformity of labour legislation.

P.C. Convention Coming Up

With the results and resolutions of the Liberal and C.C.F. conventions having been given wide publicity and having been fully digested by the press in countless editorials, the field is now clear for the P.C.'s advance publicity. Early releases from the organization committee stressed that the procedure planned would allow each delegate to have his voice without being influenced, this convention would be "democratic".

Serious observers from all parts of the country however, express some doubts as to the possibility of "the process of democracy" being that much in evidence when the Tories congregate in Ottawa. It is pointed out that Ontario has a number of delegates out of all proportions to any other province and also that in a large number of constituencies where there has not been any progressive or conservative organization for a number of years, delegates will be appointed. In this latter respect, careful selection of said delegates will no doubt be made.

Main contenders for the vacant post of leader of the Opposition still are at this date Ontario's George Drew, who has not yet resigned the premiership of his province nor has he manifested the intention of going before the electorate of a provincial constituency; the other is John Diefenbaker, M.P. from Saskatchewan who has of late been gathering considerable support in Drew's own province. Quebec's Premier Duplessis has been unusually silent on this subject and the pro-Drew element expected from Quebec may well be considerably small. It must of course be remembered that the great majority of Quebec constituencies are in that category where there has been no permanent P.C. organization for years, there being only a Union Nationale organization which is Duplessis' own.

Recipes

PEACHES ARE PLENTIFUL

Every year when September rolls around the home economists of the Consumer Section, Dominion Department of Agriculture, are besieged with requests for ways of using peaches fresh and methods of storing them away for winter use.

This year is no exception. Nature has provided a bounteous crop to be enjoyed now and later, so every home-maker is "doing up" peaches.

Peaches require a little extra care in preserving since they discolour very easily when peeled. The moment they are peeled, the halves should be dropped into a cold brine bath, using 1 teaspoon of salt to 1 quart of water. Only enough peaches to fill two or three containers should be put into the bath at one time. If the fruit stands in the brine it will acquire a definitely salty taste.

The hot pack method of canning is considered most satisfactory.

Hot Pack Canning of Peaches

Blanch peaches 15 to 60 seconds, cold dip, remove skins, cut in halves and remove pit. Leave in halves or slice. Drop in brine bath. Drain and bring to boil in thin or moderately thin syrup and simmer 3 minutes. Pack hot, covering the peaches with the syrup. Leave ½ inch headspace in glass sealers and ¼ inch in tin cans. Process pint or quart sealers or 20 and 28 oz. cans 15 minutes in the boiling water bath. Sealers may be processed in a thermostatically controlled oven 275°F., for 25 minutes but tin cans must never be processed in the oven.

Peach Jam

12 cups peaches, cut in pieces
6 cups sugar
1 tablespoon vinegar or lemon juice.

Wash, remove skins, pit and cut peaches into pieces before measuring. Add sugar and let stand 1 hour. Add vinegar or lemon juice. Bring to boil and boil, uncovered, for 15 to 20 minutes until it reaches the jam stage. Pour into hot, sterilized glasses, cool slightly then cover with paraffin. When cool, add a second thin layer of paraffin rotating the glass so the wax will adhere to the side of the glass. Cover with paper or metal lid. Yield: about 9 cups.

Peach and Cantaloupe Jam continues to be a favourite in many homes. Here is the recipe:

Peach and Cantaloupe Jam

5 cups peeled, diced cantaloupe
5 cups peeled, diced peaches
3 medium oranges, grated rind and juice
5 cups sugar

Mix all ingredients and let stand until sugar is dissolved, about 1 hour. Bring to boil and boil, uncovered, to jam stage, about 30 minutes. Pour into hot, sterilized jars, cool and seal. Yield: about 6½ cups.

During the business meeting plans for the coming Sectional Meeting were discussed. There are to be two sessions, the morning session to open at 10.30. Group II of the W.A. met at the home of Mrs. A. M. Wilden when arrangements were completed for the exhibition of dolls. After the business meeting a social time was enjoyed. Refreshments were served by the hostess.

Tarlton of Outremont, who with her helpers, Mrs. H. Rough and Mrs. A. M. Stewart explained the various types of dolls with interesting sidelights as to their history. One could not begin to enumerate all the dolls, as every country was represented, including Europe, China, India, Japan, Africa, Java, Ceylon and Mexico. On the first table were the International Dolls, dressed in their native costumes. Queen Victoria in her widow's weeds was there, standing by was George Washington with his historic Axe and Cherry Tree, nearby was Neville Chamberlain dressed for a fishing trip, Scotch Jean in her Highland plaid, a Philippine Island lady whose dress was made from the fibres of the pineapple and many others. On the second table was a Bridal group, complete with bride and groom, flower girl and bridal attendants. On this table also were a group of Service Dolls (army, navy and air force). On the third table were the Lux family, whose costumes were made out of scraps of yarn. There was also a wonderful display of miniature dolls from France, Hungary and Barbados. The fourth table showed Mother Goose and her numerous family and the animals, dear to the hearts of children, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Rabbit, Mother Bear and Tiny Bear, Little Red Riding Hood and Santa Claus and half-a-dozen old-fashioned China Dolls, one of which bore the date 1860. There was an interesting collection of fans, made of sandalwood, bamboo and one of peacock feathers. A dress of an Indian Child Bride with mirror embroidery, a ring shawl from India, a sarong from Java, and a hand embroidered bedspread from India were also displayed.

During the afternoon Mrs. Howard Cobb rendered piano selections. The guests were received by Mrs. W. E. Pilborough and Mrs. I. W. Gilbert. The committee in charge being composed of Mrs. Ivor Jones, Mrs. D. H. Gilmour, Mrs. Don Davies and Mrs. James Webster. Members of Group II assisted in serving refreshments. Today we Live in a Greater Canada

MORE JOBS for Young Canadians

TODAY CANADA'S manufacturing capacity has been increased—and diversified—to an extent never thought possible in pre-war years. Now Canada can do more — can make more — offers far more opportunities to young Canadians commencing their careers today. While established industries have been expanding, new ones have been springing up. Over 200 new products formerly imported are now being made here.

CAPACITY for steel production doubled; chemical output more than twice 1939 level; pulp and paper mills operating at 50% above pre-war: everywhere the magnitude of the advance is evident.

EMPLOYMENT figures, too, tell the story of our emergence as one of the world's great industrial nations; today almost twice as many Canadians are engaged in manufacturing as there were before the war.

DEVELOPMENT continues: on new plant and new equipment nearly four times as much was spent by Canadian industry last year as in 1939.

"...UNTOLD OPPORTUNITIES"

"If one wants to give service and work, Canada is full of untold opportunities — greater than ever. It is well, too, for young Canadians not to overlook small towns and rural parts, because in these places the door is ajar, life can be gloriously free and very full."

...says ROY SHIELDS of Coboconk, Ontario. He and his brother Charles have, by industry and initiative, supported by loyal, hard-working employees, attained a remarkable success as General Merchants in their rural community. Their store has been referred to as the "Biggest Little Department Store" in the country.

WEDDING

ROSEVEAR-CURRIE

ROCKBURN— An extremely pretty wedding took place Saturday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Currie when Miss Eileen Currie was united in marriage with Mr. Albert Rosevear. The home and grounds lent themselves beautifully to the occasion, and immense bouquets of lavender and yellow flowers placed about the lawn against a background of tall cedars glowed brilliantly in the afternoon sunshine and formed a lovely setting for the fine wedding arch under which the actual ceremony was conducted by Rev. A. S. Reid, D.D., assisted by Rev. Hutchison, M.A.

The bride, gowned in white taffeta with overdress of white embroidered net, caught up with satin ribbon and the neckline outlined with pearls wore a bridal veil of floor-length, matching the dress, and a pearl necklet, and carried a bouquet of pink gladioli.

Mrs. Ronald Williams was matron of honor and was dressed in yellow taffeta covered with net and carried peach gladioli.

The charming young bridesmaids were dressed in ankle length gowns of taffeta, Iris Waller in deep rose and Joyce Arnold in deep blue, and carried Colonial bouquets.

The bride's mother, Mrs. Porter, was gowned in grey with black picture hat and corsage of pink flowers. Mrs. Rosevear, the groom's mother, wore blue figured taffeta with corsage of red flowers.

The groom was supported by his brother William, and the ushers were Messrs Carl Bockus, Merrill Rosevear and Walter and Stanley Currie.

During the signing of the register Mrs. Walter Currie sang very sweetly "Because" by Guy d'Hardelot.

A delicious lunch was served after the ceremony, and toasts drank to "The King", the bride and the groom and all suitably responded to. Later the happy couple left on a motor trip to Niagara Falls.

A very pleasant contribution to the gathering was the presence of the bride's aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Tunna of Liverpool, England, who have spent the past 13 months visiting their friends and relatives in Canada and now plan to return home, sailing from Montreal next Thursday. These guests remained here for the wedding and Mr. Tunna gave the bride in marriage. Mr. and Mrs. Vans of Montreal were also very welcome guests, Mrs. Vans being the bride's grandmother and a remarkably fresh and youthful person for her years. Other guests from a distance included Mr. and Mrs. Prue and Mr. and Mrs. Suter, of Montreal.

Their friends hope to see Mr. and Mrs. Tunna in Canada again in a few years and their inborn strength and faith that England will yet win through to what all hope to attain should be an inspiration to all of us who have suffered Montreal, spent the week-end with so much less.

MAY TRANSFORM BRIDGE

VANCOUVER, (CP)—The present Marpole bridge serving Vancouver airport may be transformed into a counter-balanced drawbridge. The rebuilt structure would cost approximately $500,000.

Formal Opening

ick School was quite modern as it had taken on the "New Look". The section of the school that was erected at the time of school consolidation and occupied in 1933 has been modernized and nicely tied into the structure now being officially opened. In going about this house of learning tonight it can be seen no pupil will suffer from eye strain in the class rooms. The rooms are all well lighted and blackboards arranged so that no glare will take place. Every pupil will so benefit by this High School.

Before the days of consolidation, Howick had a school enrollment of 86 with 20 pupils in the high school grades. Consolidation made it possible to erect a large school in Howick and do away with the one room schools in the surrounding community. As a result of that change you have had a school that last year had 185 scholars in attendance. Without consolidation you would not have had a school like this for an enrollment of less than 100 pupils.

My good wishes go to the faculty and may success come to one and all.

Principal David Munroe, of Ormstown, brought greetings to Howick High School. Rural scholars attending a school such as this certainly have equivalent facilities to those who attend city schools. To the faculty he urged them to show their appreciation and to teach with even greater devotion and do good work with the improved facilities here offered.

Donald E. Black, M.P. In extending words of congratulation Mr. Black felt this new school would benefit the rising generation to a point that wherever they might go in later years they would be educated to a point they would be able to measure up to their responsibilities. The idea that people on a farm do not need a high school education is not correct. All we have to do, said Mr. Black, is to look at a farm where a boy has even taken only a short course in agriculture at the Ste-Martine Agricultural school. Go to the farm where that boy now lives and you will see improved farming methods being put into practice. More education is needed as the years roll on and I wish to congratulate the Howick School Board, present and past for what they have accomplished and at the same time wish the teaching staff and scholars all success in the years to come. The people of this community who have made the school possible are deserving of many thanks for which they in turn will be richly rewarded throughout the years to come.

Mr. A. Kirk Cameron. Having been interested in school work throughout the Province of Quebec for 30 years or so, many advancements have taken place. Years ago we had 800 one-room Protestant Schools in the Province. To-day that number is reduced to 270. The reduction in these one-room schools is due to school consolidations.

Canada is a land of opportunities and promises. Truly, about the only land in the world about which such can be said. History and geography should be taught to-day as never before, and especially that pertaining to Canada. Teaching in this school will inculcate in you all sorts of education for your future welfare. The teaching scholars will get here will develop sane thinking and enable you to do more than one can estimate.

Principal Farquharson expressed words of thanks to the several speakers and for a mark of appreciation from the audience for the Chairman of the School Board, Mr. Russel Kerr and the commissioners.

Mr. Kerr in acknowledging the expression of appreciation, stated that the School had not only received a gift of a Public Address System from Mr. Casey but that Mr. George McArthur had presented the school with a fire extinguisher that will be placed in the room where chemistry is to be taught. (Applause)

Throughout the balance of the evening the hundreds of people present wended their way about the building viewing all the class rooms and voicing comparisons as to what they had as schools when they were pupils.

a very good man who was an ex-police chief. With this the meeting proceeded to other business.

Milk reports were read as follows: The reports were different samples taken on different dates, the first being—Belle Vallee, 61,000; Elmhurst, 420,000. The second report was: Belle Vallee, 14,000; Elmhurst, 20,000; Monique, 75,000; R. Goodfellow, 56,000 and Pringle Bros., 570,000.

The Huntingdon Branch of the Canadian Legion asked permission to hold a Decoration Day Parade on Sunday, September 12th. The permission was granted.

A letter was read regarding the annexation of the Barracks site to the town in which it was asked that the town approve the annexation and send a resolution to this effect. The resolution was passed to approve of acceptance of this territory into the town.

Mrs. T. W. Furey offered a piece of land as a street to connect Chalmers Street and Cemetery Street and which would also make available more building lots in that area. The secretary was instructed to get in touch with Mrs. Furey and to have a plan submitted to the Quebec Government for approval of the proposed new street.

A letter was read from Chateau Dyers Ltd. regarding the water rates set at a caucus meeting of the council. The council passed a resolution that the rate be 7c per thousand gallons and to start from October 1st.

A request was received from Mr. J. Brisbois and another party for a water connection to the ice house and proposed new residence near the ice house on the Malone-Montreal Highway near the Filter plant. The matter was left to the water committee to investigate.

Mr. Latrielle, who owns the restuarant on Chateauguay Street, applied to the council for a permit to operate a pool room on his premises. A petition was presented signed by a large number of persons expressing a wish that there be a pool room at this point. The council passed a resolution approving of the permit and this will also have to be approved by the Quebec government. The pool room if allowed will have two tables.

An application for the position of fire and police chief was read from a Mr. Joffre L'Heureux, of Deauville, Que. He asked for a wage of $40.00 per week with residence free. The police committee reported that the man had been in town and had been interviewed and they were of the opinion he would be a good man for the position. The Mayor said that if engaged he would be on duty during the nightime hours only.

Mr. N. Foisey asked the Mayor when they would have a policeman if they did not have this application. Alderman Galipeau said some time before Christmas. Mr. Foisey then explained that he asked the detectives who had investgated his robbery if they could get a man for a policeman and they said they would send a man down the next day. It is this man named in the application at the meeting. The matter was left in the hands of the police committee to decide what to do.

Four people who have not paid their water rates will have the water cut off unless paid immediately.

An argument ensued about wage rates of two laborers and it was decided to raise the rate to 55c per hour starting from September 1st.

Another argument ensued between the Mayor and interested parties in the annexation of Church Street property. This had to do with the legality of the town supplying water to these people. But the matter will have to rest until after the publication of the by-law relating to the matter. The council promised to do all that could be done to speed up the matter.

EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS

by Don Graham

How often you hear people tell about someone getting "a lucky break"! It does not seem to occur to them that often what we call good fortune is the result of intelligent planning.

Astute men do not just sit back and wait for opportunities. They improve their skills, and learn more and more about their field of work, thus paving the way for opportunities.

Some years ago a certain cellist in a noted symphony orchestra paved the way for his great opportunity by memorizing the complete score of an opera. When the orchestra's regular conductor was suddenly stricken with illness, the cellist led the performance with brilliant success. Today he is world famous!

Thousands of cases could be quoted to illustrate how men have improved their fortunes by being prepared when opportunity knocked.

So why not plan now to put a knocker on your door?

No one should rely on lucky breaks to provide a retirement income and financial protection for their family. These things can be planned now on the basis of your present income, through life insurance. Then you will be sure of your future.

Shaw Has Been a Cautious Rebel

by Lewis Milligan

George Bernard Shaw has passed his 92nd birthday, and the occasion — or rather we should perhaps say the achievement — was duly noticed and commented upon in the press. Shaw has always been good "copy" ever since he gave up trying to write novels and stepped up on to a soap-box and began to shatter the British social order to bits and try to remould to the heart's desire of Karl Marx. He has succeeded more in the shattering than in the remoulding process, for it is much easier to wreck a house than it is to rebuild it. The vandal is never a builder, and the iconoclast is never a creative artist. To smash the nose of the Sphinx or to destroy a piece of fine architecture does not call for any skill, and the only tools needed are a hammer and a stick of dynamite.

Mr. Shaw cannot claim to have lacked time in which to carry out his original plans for rebuilding the social order — he never really attempted the job, for he early lost faith in Karl Marx as a social architect. He joined the Fabians who were a more constructive body of Socialists, but he was always at odds with them as with everybody else, including himself, for his writings are a jumble of contradictions. The only thing in which Mr. Shaw has been consistent is rebellion, but he has been a very cautious rebel. I once heard him say that martyrs were fools, and that the first duty of a prophet was to preserve his own health and live as long as he could so that he could bring about the reforms which he advocated. He thought Jesus Christ made a mistake in allowing himself to be crucified. That may explain why Mr. Shaw has been so meticulously careful of his health and why he has lived so long. But it is hardly consistent with his admiration of the Russian Revolution, in which millions of people were martyred for the sake of Socialism. He was quite consistent, however, when he coolly walked away from the riot in Trafalgar Square, for which he was partly responsible. Hitler did the same thing at his Munich putsch, when he lay flat on the ground and "played dead" while his followers stood their ground and were shot or arrested by the police. If Hitler had stood up he might now have been canonized as a martyr for the German people. The saving of his life brought violent death to millions of innocent human beings and utter degradation to the German people, to say nothing of the present chaotic state of the world as a result of the war for which Hitler was chiefly responsible.

Better to die the heroic death of a martyr than live and become a tyrant. Most of the great martyrs were potential dictators. If Jesus had saved His life and refused to suffer the death of the cross, He might have lived to be a scheming politician or the leader of a bloody revolution. But Mr. Shaw could never have been a martyr, nor could he have been a tyrant. Referring to his action in the "Bloody Sunday" riot in Trafalgar Square, his associate, Cunningham Graham, said, "He was the first man to run away." Shaw's reply was, "He flattered me. I had not that much sense." But he admitted that he "apologized" to the police when they hustled him, and thus escaped arrest. "I am a thinker, not a fighter," he said. "When the shooting begins I shall get under the bed, and not emerge until we come to real constructive business."

All of which is typical of Mr. Shaw's cynicism toward things in general, including his own followers whom he had roused to revolt, and he has consequently been accused of insincerity and hypocricy. Indeed, he seemed to admit as much when, on one occasion, he warned his audience not to be taken by clever speechifying, and confessed that he could put up just as good a platform case for the most reactionary toryism as for socialism.

Perhaps the explanation is that Shaw is a born controversialist, and, being Irish, he is naturally "agin the government." But he is not from Tipperary, for although he dares anyone to "tread on the tail of me coat," he does not carry a shillelah. He wields a rapier, and can be said to have lived for nearly a century by his wits.

Right Way To Lift

A Canadian farmer noted for his strength and also for his unassuming wisdom, was asked how he managed to lift such heavy weights. "Well", he answered, "I am naturally strong, but a man might be as strong as an ox, and yet strain his back in lifting a comparatively light weight, if he lifts the wrong way. Don't lift with your back. Lift with your legs by bending your knees, and keep your back as straight as possible without straining to do so. That is, keep your back as vertical as possible to the ground when lifting.

"And don't show off. If you find you cannot heave a sack or anything else unaided onto your shoulders, get someone to give a hand. If the weight to be lifted is too heavy to carry alone, don't have false pride, get help. There is a limit in everyone to the amount of strain the muscles will stand, especially on your back. And the way to lift is to lift with the legs. They are the natural elevators."

If the public continues to buy its current quantity of milk and ice cream, there will be less cheese and butter made in Canada this year.

One-Arm Driving Not Safe Habit

To most people, maybe, the term "one-arm driving" means wooing at the wheel. That, we all know, doesn't give romance a fair chance to last.

But there's another form of one-arm driving that is also dangerous. We mean the practice of driving with the right hand alone on the wheel, while the left arm rests idly on the ledge of the open window and the left hand dangles uselessly or maybe clutches, for no driving purpose, the top of the window. No romance here — just false confidence in that right hand or just plain laziness.

Any experienced driver knows that he cannot control his vehicle as well with one hand as with two, and that Trouble can sometimes strike before there is time to get that other hand working. Besides, how does the guy behind know that lazy left hand isn't signaling a stop or turn?

Left-handed or right-handed, one-arm driving gives safety only half a chance.

Farm Mechanization

by Norman St. Jean, B.S.A.
ELECTRIFICATION AND ECONOMICS

The farming profession has been elevated to a very high standard through the years. Its requirements are greater than that of any other profession and, in fact, the farmer of today must be thoroughly familiar with mechanization, economics, construction, land conservation, farm management, breeding and improvement of herds, etc., etc.

In this article we will pay particular attention to rural electrification as a part of farm mechanization and point out its economic importance. The farmer of today has adapted through sound farming practices a type of production which is best suited to the climatic and soil conditions and the market requirements of the region he lives in. In order to operate efficiently, machinery was called on to help. In buying machinery the farmer must avoid getting into heavy debts and if sufficient capital is not available, he must also consider that a loan at a reasonable rate of interest will provide him with a piece of equipment which will mean realizing profits well worth while the interest paid on that loan.

The first and usually greatest item to be charged to the production of goods is labour. What the farmer too often forgets or does not realize is that 30 to 60 percent of the work on a farm is done around or in the farm buildings and that there are over 200 electric farm appliances that can be used to cut down that profit burning percentage. In specialized farming enterprises the labour required around the farm centers goes up as high as 80%.

Of those 200 electric appliances, at least 15 to 20 should be in use on any ordinary farm. What appliance to get depends on what operation it is intended to facilitate or do away with completely. In addition to providing a smooth working system electricity will eliminate back-breaking jobs and do away with sweat shop drudgery. It will mean a brighter approach to farm work for all concerned. Even in the house, electrification spells the difference between a home and just that — a house. While one offers comfort and commodities, the latter is actually unsafe to live in.

It would be too long to describe the 200 electric farm appliances but we will insist on the fact that today no one farm can operate economically and on a sound financial basis without having a number of these appliances in service. In most cases electricity is a cheaper source of power than any other kind and the trend is presently for electricity to go down while the costs of other sources of power are well on top of the inflation ladder. One can quickly grasp the importance of the use of electric appliances when it is observed that a pump and milker together will divert 1650 man-hours a year on an average farm to some other money making endeavours.

In order to find out if it is worth while to buy an electric appliance, find out first how much time it would save you in performing the task you have in mind during the year and then figure the yearly charge of the initial cost and operation cost on a 10 to 20 year basis. In the difference of these two factors lies your answer.

Singleton Retires From Dairy Post

Announcement has been made by the Department of Agriculture of the retirement on superannuation of John Franklin Singleton, C.B.E., Associate Director, Marketing Service, and Head of the Dairy Products Division. He had been with the department since January, 1914.

From 1903 to 1906 he was Provincial Cheese Instructor in the counties of Leeds, Lanark, Carleton, Renfrew and Pontiac. From 1905 to 1911 he was engaged during the winter months in instructing students at the Eastern Dairy School, Kingston, Ontario, in milk testing; while during the winters of 1912 and 1913, he gave instruction in butter making at the same school.

In January, 1914, he was appointed Chief Inspector of Dairy Products in the Dairy and Cold Storage Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, continuing in this position until June, 1920, when he became Chief, Markets Division of the Dairy Branch. In March, 1932, he was made Associate Director, Marketing Service, Dairy Products Division.

He has been Chairman of the Dairy Products Board since it was established early in the war years to implement contracts for dairy products entered into with the United Kingdom.

In July, 1946, Mr. Singleton was made a Commander of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire, Civil Division, and in February 1947, the Alberta Dairymen's Association honoured him with a life membership.

Sports Camera

Specially Written for
THE HUNTINGDON GLEANER
by Douglas Murray

Sports pages these days always contain some golf news, so we decided to dig up some inside material on the game. With our own particular drive, we couldn't break par over a putting course, but with diligent listening on the golf course and with research into our huge knowledge-filled books we came up with some interesting items.

The usual concensus has it that gold originated in Scotland, but the game became so widely played before any one country put in its bid as founder that controversy rages as to where the first slice veered off into the rough. However, credit for popularization of this ancient game goes to Scotland, whose Royal and Ancient Club of St. Andrews is generally conceded to be the governing body. St. Andrews took over this lead when certain clubs which held championships turned to it for rulings on what to do and when. The first rule book the "old club" turned out appeared in 1888 and it was the first set of rules which didn't mention local sporting points of interest.

Previously, for instance, the sporting Englishmen were "rawthaw bawthawed" when they read a rule concerning the "stationmaster's garden" at St. Andrews, and their course contained no such plot.

The word "links" is widely used when people talk of a golf course, but it isn't the proper word unless the course is near the seaside. Links land is usually the name of a sandy, grassy seaside area in Scotland, where the first courses were set out.

Soft land was preferred because players would be less likely to damage their clubs. The economic outlook is one of Scotland's claims to have originated the game.

"Average Drinkers"

Another reason for "Auld Scotia" having a claim as originator is the story behind the 18-hole course usually used. Legend says that 18-holes is the proper number because an average drinker, tippling gently, can make a pint last that far without necessitating a trip to the club house. Of course, for more than average drinkers there is always a nine-hole course.

We wonder why the first North American course, in Eastern Canada, had only three holes.

Scotland takes a bow once more when it comes to women players. This honor is generally given to Mary, Queen of Scots.

Incidentally, one of the "big books" says that when you see four persons playing golf together, each with a ball of his own, and you call it a foursome, you're wrong. The book says that's called fourball. A foursome is when four people play against each other, two to a side, with only two balls in play. Players on each side hit their ball alternately.

Golf was once banned as being detrimental to archery. By the same token one golfer we overheard said there should be no taverns or bars near golf courses.

This stalwart of the fairways commented wryly as his ball screamed into the rough: "I'd be another Bobby Locke if it weren't for the demon rum."

TREE OVERHANGING NEIGHBOR'S LAND

Question: My next-door neighbor has a fine maple tree on his land, the branches of which overhang my land and prevent my grass and flowers from growing. I have asked him (the adjoining owner) to lop off the branches which overhang my land, but he has refused to do so.

I believe that in law I can myself lop off these branches. I would be much obliged if you could give me any information on this point.

Answer: Woodland World referred this matter to counsel and he writes:

"While trees planted by a man on his own ground remain his property, all projections, whether of roots, or branches, over a neighbor's ground may be cut off by that neighbor without notice. A neighbor may not, however, appropriate to his own use the things so severed. In addition, a neighbor over whose land the branches project has no right to trespass upon the land where the tree grows for the purpose of lopping off the projections. In LEMMON vs. WEBB (1895) A. C., it was held by the House of Lords that an adjoining owner could cut back the branches which had overhung his land for many years without giving notice, but that he could not enter on the owner's land for that purpose unless he did give notice."

FRUIT OVERHANGING NEIGHBOR'S LAND:

Question: My next-door neighbor has ten apple trees, which line between his and my property. Many branches of these apple trees overhang my land and I want to know whether I can legally pick the fruit off these overhanging branches.

Answer: Although a man has the right to cut off the branches which overhang his property and, of course, the fruit thereon, he has no right to appropriate to himself either the wood so cut or the fruit thereon. Both remain the property of the owner of the tree. In Mills vs. Brooker (1919) 1 K. B., the Plaintiff's apple trees overhung the Defendant's land. The Defendant picked several bushels of apples off the overhanging branches and sold them, claiming the right to do so on the ground that he might lop off the branches on which the apples grew. It was held by the Court that the right to lop off the overhanging branches does not carry with it the right to pick and appropriate the fruit, and if this is done by the neighbor, he is liable to the tree's owner for the value of the fruit so picked.
