SEARCH CONTINUES FOR BRAZEN ESCAPEE

MONTREAL (CP) — Provincial police were continuing their search early today for Yvon St. Louis, an escaped prisoner still missing after a seven-hour weekend chase that involved seven hostages and left two policemen and a police dog wounded.

A police spokesman said there have been no new developments in the search, but authorities said they believe that if the 26-year-old St. Louis has left the city, he may have travelled north to take refuge in the Laurentian Mountains.

The two policemen wounded have been released from hospital and the dog was reported in satisfactory condition.

The driver of a car commandeered by St. Louis in north-end Montreal told police the escapee had asked for quarters, fuelling speculation he was headed for the Laurentian Autoroute, a toll road and the main route north.

The chase began shortly before noon Saturday when St. Louis escaped from a provincial detention centre in Sorel, 70 kilometres northeast of the city, police said. He was due to be arraigned today on charges arising from an armed robbery.

St. Louis was also being held on charges of sexual assault, illegal possession of weapons, car theft and extortion. He was arrested in Montreal last month.

After escaping from prison armed with a .45-calibre pistol, he commandeered a car and seized the two occupants as hostages. He abandoned both car and hostages after reaching a wooded area near Contrecoeur, about halfway between Sorel and Montreal.

Police said the car was involved in an accident and the escapee commandeered a second car, taking the driver hostage. However, he was soon stopped by a Montreal motorcycle policeman after running a red light.

St. Louis switched cars again, seizing the driver as yet another hostage. After a brief spurt through the city's north end, he commandeered another vehicle, this time chasing the woman driver and passenger away at gunpoint and continuing without hostages.

ST. BARNABE, Que. (CP)

— Six people on their way to a Golden Age Club meeting died Saturday night when their car collided head-on with a 10-wheel truck on a rain-soaked highway near this village 60 kilometres east of Montreal.

The victims were identified as Cecile Page, 65, Anna Anger, 70, Yvonne Viau, 65, Adrien Broseau, 55, and Jeannette Cloutier-Lemaire, 54, all of nearby St. Jude, and Celia Morin, 87, an Arizona resident on a visit.

Police said both the car and the truck ended up in a roadside ditch, but the truck driver was not injured.

The deaths left residents of St. Jude shocked and saddened.

"It's just a small village," said Sgt. Daniel Malouin of Quebec provincial police.

"Everybody knows each other and they're all very upset about the accident."

A survey by The Canadian Press from 6 p.m. Friday to midnight Sunday night local times showed 34 other traffic deaths, six drownings, a person killed in a boat collision, a man killed when he fell from a pole, a man killed when he fell down a 15-metre embankment and a man who died after falling from a tree into a creek.

Ontario reported 14 traffic deaths, three drownings, the man killed in the fall down the embankment, the man who fell from a pole and the man who fell from a tree.

Quebec, in addition to the six persons killed in one car, reported six other traffic deaths, one drowning and the boating mishap.

Nova Scotia reported five traffic deaths and New Brunswick had two traffic deaths and a drowning.

Three persons died in traffic accidents in Manitoba and Alberta had two traffic deaths and a drowning.

Two persons died in traffic accidents in British Columbia.

No accidental deaths were reported in Saskatchewan, Newfoundland or Prince Edward Island.

The survey excludes industrial deaths, slayings and known suicides.

Ryan's Grits 'ready to fight'

MONTREAL (CP) — Claude Ryan says his Quebec Liberal party would be ready to fight a provincial election any time the Parti Quebecois government decides to stage one, even if it comes as early as this fall.

"If an election were called tomorrow, it wouldn't be on the constitutional issue," Ryan said in an interview on CFCF radio Sunday.

"It would be on the government's record—why they decided to launch an election prematurely, what they've done. I think we'd have plenty to defeat it."

The government's mandate does not run out until late in 1981, and Ryan earlier this year turned down a chance to run for the national assembly, saying he would rather spend time rebuilding the Liberal electoral machine.

Ryan said he was amazed by Premier Rene Levesque's comments on Liberal Reed Scowen's victory in last Wednesday's byelection in the Montreal riding of Notre Dame de Grace.

Levesque said he was not surprised at the result in view of a "climate of incomprehension and even hostility" in the mainly English-speaking riding.

If the premier thinks like that, he is conceding the next election to the Liberal party, Ryan said.

Ryan also said he would not intervene in a federal election, "until some issue of principle arises."

Buchanan: Polls prove public's tired of talk

OTTAWA (CP) — The public's attitude toward the two major federal political parties seems to be "a plague on both your houses and get on with the business," says Judd Buchanan, federal minister of public works, science and technology.

Public opinion polls show "neither of the two major parties being the clear choice of the electorate," Buchanan said in an interview broadcast Sunday on the CTV program question period.

The latest Gallup opinion poll, taken in early June, showed Liberal support unchanged from May at 43 per cent of the decided vote and Progressive Conservative support slipping to 37 per cent in June from 39 per cent in May. The New Democratic Party support rose one percentage point to 16.

Buchanan said the message he got from the polls was that "we should try and deal with the problems of this country, try and move it along a little further and see if we could get some sort of a decision, or be in a position to get some sort of a less equivocal decision, from the electorate of Canada."

The Liberal government headed by Pierre Trudeau won a Commons majority in the July, 1974 federal election.

In response to questions, Buchanan said polls are not the only factor considered when an election date is set.

"You will recall last fall when we could have won, according to the polls, quite handsomely."

Trudeau, leaders to talk economy

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau will sit down with the leaders of the six other top industrial democracies in Bonn next week for one more try at righting a world economy that has gotten badly out of whack in the last five years.

It is the fourth meeting of the leaders of the major capitalist countries since 1973—the third to which Canada has been invited—and they will be under heavy pressure this time to devise measures that work.

The major topic at the July 16-17 meeting of Japan, United States, Britain, West Germany, France and Canada will be world trade. As a major trading country, Canada has a lot riding on an agreement that would allow easier access to foreign markets for our products.

Synopsis

A disturbance stretching from southeastern James Bay to the lower Great Lakes will move rather quickly across Quebec today before slowing down in the vicinity of Anticosti tomorrow. Despite some good breaks at times the weather will remain today mainly cloudy with a few showers and also a few thundershowers over central regions. Temperatures will be seasonal except northwestern Quebec where it will be cool and windy. Tuesday the conditions will be fine over the west but the skies will be cloudy over the east.

St. Jude mourns victims

Prospector's quick wits mean life

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Surrey, B.C., prospector who has wandered the hills around the Chilliwack River in the Fraser Valley for 25 years resorted to a life-and-death game of possum Friday when he was confronted by an angry female black bear.

John MacAndrews, 54, was having a bath in the river when he spotted two bear cubs nearby.

"And I knew darn well that where there's two cubs, there's mom," he said.

"I had no idea she was behind me. There was a woof, and she smacked me in the head."

MacAndrews said he fell to the ground and "she nudged me in the side with her snout. . . a couple of times" as he played dead.

"It's pretty hard to hold your breath for five or 10 minutes," he said.

After about 15 minutes, he said, "I opened up the only eye I could" and found the bear had left. MacAndrews then staggered to a trail where he collapsed and was later found by two camping companions. He was treated for facial cuts at a nearby hospital and later released.

BLAMES CAMPERS

MacAndrews blamed garbage left by sloppy campers for his ordeal and, although he intends to return to the woods, he said he'll stay clear of campsites in future.

Dr. Frank Tompa, director of the carnivore management branch of the B.C. fish and wildlife department, said there is about one fatal attack by a bear every 20 years in B.C. He said the number of non-fatal maulings, both reported and unreported, is on the increase.

Although there are no known methods to prevent an attack by a bear while in the woods, Derek O'Brien, park naturalist at Mount Seymour park, said the most important thing to do is give the bears plenty of warning that you are in the vicinity.

He said bears are by nature reclusive and they will likely leave the area if they hear people approaching.

Prairies anticipate bumper harvest

OTTAWA (CP) — Prairie farmers appear on their way to a fine harvest, Statistics Canada has indicated.

In the third of seven reports on crop conditions across Canada, the federal statistics agency said Prairie crops are growing favorably.

Fair weather has helped farmers move ahead with haying while their early-seeded cereal crops burst into head.

Elsewhere in Canada, crops generally are growing well.

In the Maritimes, crops and pastures are in fine condition because of favorable weather. Irish Cobbler potatoes were in bloom after seven weeks in Prince Edward Island. A better-than-average strawberry crop is being harvested in Nova Scotia and New Brunswick has the makings of a bumper potato crop.

In Quebec, farmers have had above average rainfall in June. That has meant lush pastures, but it has also spoiled some grain and caused some fertilizer in tobacco crops to wash away.

Meanwhile, Ontario weather has been sunny and warm. Rain is needed in central and eastern regions. Yet the hay crop is in good condition. Winter wheat crops haven't fared as well. Many are patchy and uneven. Corn growth has been variable, depending on the area. Soybeans are growing well.

HAIL HITS SOME

In the Prairie grain belt, crops are growing favorably. Hail storms have flattened crops in some regions, although damage has been spotty. Moisture is reported adequate, but rain now is needed in some regions.

In Manitoba, all crops are considered fair or good. Flax and rapeseed crops are in bloom. Early cereals are in head. Grasshoppers are reported in drier areas.

In Saskatchewan, warm weather and thunderstorms have resulted in rapid crop growth. There is enough moisture to grow heavier-than-normal crops in all but the Saskatoon, Outlook and North Battleford area. Early-seeded crops are in the shotblade to heading stage and early rapeseed crops are flowering. Hail has been common, but damage has not been widespread. There are prospects for an excellent hay crop.

In Alberta, warm, sunny weather and adequate moisture have combined to produce nearly ideal growing conditions. Moisture reserves are being depleted by high temperatures and rapidly-growing crops. Rain will soon be needed. Grain, pasture and livestock are all reported in good condition.

In British Columbia, warmer temperatures have replaced cool weather in May and June. Crop development has been favorable. Forage crops on Vancouver Island and the lower mainland are well above average.

Ashland a 'good deal'

TORONTO (CP) — Analysts agree that Kaiser Resources Ltd. of Vancouver, a major western Canadian coal producer, got a good deal in buying Ashland Oil Canada Ltd. of Calgary, a medium-sized exploration and production company.

William Magee of Nesbitt Thomson Securities Ltd. of Toronto described the deal as reasonably fair although the price was slightly below the top value he placed on Ashland shares.

Kaiser announced last week an agreement with Ashland Oil Inc., of Ashland, Ky., to buy its 83 per cent interest in the Canadian subsidiary for $32.50 a share. The purchase will cost Kaiser about $470 million.

The U.S. company owns about 11 million shares of Ashland Canada. Conventures Ltd. of Calgary is the single largest Canadian shareholder with about 177,500 shares.

In Calgary, Carol O. Nickle, president of Conventures, said it appears the Kaiser offer will be accepted by minority shareholders. BOUGHT SHARES

Conventures acquired additional shares last month prior to the Kaiser offer to bring its holdings to the present level.

Denis Mote of Bach, Halsey, Stuart Canada Ltd. of Montreal, described the transaction as "a good deal, an excellent offer."

Mote said Kaiser wanted to get into the oil business in a major way and so was willing to pay more for Ashland's management than another oil company.

Edward Zederayko of Gordon Securities Ltd. of Calgary said the deal "represents quite a good offer." He said Ashland may make a better fit with Kaiser than a conventional oil company. This was a reference to Ashland's asphalt paving and materials division, based in Toronto, and its Valvoline Oil Canada Ltd. subsidiary with head office in Mississauga, Ont.

The chemical division, producing and handling resins, industrial chemicals and solvents, is also located in Ontario.

Zederayko said Ashland got a bid 10 per cent better than if it had gone into the market place.

The deal may benefit Ashland which "has not been as aggressive as it should have been considering its financial capabilities."

He said Ashland has lacked direction because management knew the company was up for sale.

Kaiser has major coal mines and deposits of high-grade metallurgical coal in the Crownsnest region of southeastern British Columbia.

Junior Achievement

Cliff Walker, newly-elected chairman of the board, Junior Achievement of Canada, and vice-president, Gulf Canada Limited, indicates the national youth organization's goal of bringing the knowledge and resources of Canada's business system to more than 9,000 secondary school students and 3,000 junior high school students by 1982. More than 2,000 companies support the JA economic education program that operates in 54 communities in Canada.

UK: Onshore oil wells

GAINSBOROUGH, England (CP) — In a quiet suburb of this town, tucked away in the rural county of Lincolnshire, there are oil wells in the bottom of the garden.

For some 40 years, long before the excitement of the North Sea discoveries, modest quantities of oil have been flowing from tiny fields in the Midlands areas of Lincolnshire, Nottinghamshire and Leicestershire and in Dorset in southwestern England.

The potential for increased oil and possible gas development onshore has been dramatically highlighted by the discovery of sizable additional reserves on a farm near the ancient Corfe Castle in Dorset.

This oilfield, called Wytch Farm, is much bigger than the other oil reservoirs identified so far on land in Britain, possibly bigger than Hamilton Brothers' Argyll Field in the North Sea and probably about the size of the Auk Field, being developed jointly by Shell and Esso.

Its estimated recoverable reserves are about 50 million barrels, although further exploration wells are to be drilled this year.

COSTS MUCH LOWER

Development costs are the big attraction of Wytch Farm, which will cost about 10 million pounds as compared with 500 million pounds for a reasonably-sized offshore field.

The British Gas Corp., the operator in association with British Petroleum, hopes to start producing oil from Wytch Farm this autumn, aiming at between 5,000 and 10,000 barrels a day by the late summer of 1979.

The oil will be carried by pipeline to a nearby rail terminal and from there by rail tankers to BP's Llandarcy refinery in south Wales.

Apart from its simplicity, the land-based operation is unaffected by weather problems. Some of the North Sea fields were shut down more than half the time last winter when galeforce winds whipped up heavy seas and prevented the loading of crude oil into tankers.

AIB plans study of profit margin

OTTAWA (CP) — The anti-inflation board has decided to carry out a three-month special study of the profit margins of large food retailing and processing firms, the finance department said last week.

The study follows a request from Finance Minister Jean Chretien who had faced criticism recently because of spiralling food price increases, especially for beef and fresh vegetables.

The board is to co-operate with the consumer affairs and agriculture departments.

Harry Stevenson, the board's director-general of prices and profits, said the board had been asked to look at beef prices and might also study fresh vegetables and fruit and beverages such as coffee and tea.

The examination of beef prices could be expanded to cover all meat, he said.

Stevenson said the board is hoping for fast co-operation from companies so the study can be completed in three months. The information supplied would be confidential to the board.

There have been recent allegations that some food companies have been taking undue advantage of recent increases in beef prices. Farm spokesmen say the increased income they are getting for beef is not as high as the rises in supermarket prices.

Swedish economy subject to bad press

WASHINGTON (CP) — The innovative, sometimes-controversial Swedish economy has been getting a bad press, U.S. analysts say.

"The casual reader of the world press must by now have concluded that the Swedish economy is on its last legs," the U.S. embassy in Stockholm states in a semi-annual report.

But, the embassy concludes, "as Mark Twain might have put it, reports of the demise of the Swedish economy have been grossly exaggerated."

With one of the Western world's most comprehensive welfare systems, Sweden has been a favorite target for conservative critics who see the philosophy of interventionist government as suffocating the economy.

Unabashed, Sweden continues to push ahead with such innovative social programs as the recently-expanded paternity leave.

Under the Swedish system, the social affairs ministry forces often-reluctant employers to grant the two parents a total of up to nine months off. During the time off, the government pays 90 per cent of the parents' normal salaries.

FATHERS STAY HOME

The nine months can be split in any fashion among the two parents, or allocated all to one parent. But the ministry has an elaborate public relations campaign to get fathers to stay home for about one-half the period.

An increasing number of parents—now 12 per cent of the 90,000 couples who have children each year—are adopting the practice of having the wife stay home for four months after birth, then return to work while the husband stays home for four months.

The ministry clearly states the purpose of the program: to change sex roles in society. Critics of the Swedish system, however, see such programs as nine-month paternity-maternity leave as handicaps to business.

The U.S. embassy report acknowledges that Sweden, like most European countries, has had severe economic problems and will continue to have difficulties the rest of this year.

But, the report says, "clear signs of improvement are visible." Inflation, above 10 per cent each of the past four years, may be less than eight per cent for 1978, the embassy says.

After three years of stagnation, productivity is expected to rise by 2.5 to five per cent this year.

AGRICULTURE NOTES

Faculty moves

The Faculty of Agriculture is now well established in its new quarters in the Macdonald-Stewart Building on the Macdonald Campus. When the move is completed later this year, all departments of the Faculty will be housed under a single roof. The new Macdonald-Stewart building is now completed, and renovations to the old Agriculture Building are now under way. These will be completed in time to receive students in the fall.

New telephone number for College

The new general telephone number for Macdonald College is 457-2000. As well, all departments have been assigned new local numbers. People phoning the college are requested to ask the college operator for the new local of the person they are calling.

Agriculture Building renamed

The Agriculture Building has been renamed the Raymond Building, in honour of Professor Lee Carleton Raymond. Professor Raymond was a graduate of the second Macdonald graduating class in 1912, and spent his entire professional career in the service of Macdonald College. He began as a College farm demonstrator, joining the Department of Cereal Husbandry (Agronomy Department) in 1914. After serving overseas, he returned to that Department in 1918 as a Lecturer. Following post-graduate work at the University of Wisconsin, Professor Raymond was named an Assistant Professor. He was made full Professor in 1947, and had become Chairman of the Department of Agronomy the year before. He retired from this post in 1954 and in 1959, the University named him Professor Emeritus of Agronomy. Professor Raymond was involved with other organizations, as well. Among these were the Ministère de l'Agriculture du Québec, the Canadian Seed Growers' Association, the Agricultural Institute of Canada, and the Canadian Society of Agronomy. It was in honour of his significant contribution to Macdonald College, in particular, and to agriculture, in general, that the Agriculture Building has been renamed the Raymond Building.

Holstein fieldman at MAQ

Mr. Brian Oumet, a 1978 graduate of Macdonald College, is the newest fieldman for the Quebec Branch of the Holstein-Friesian Association of Canada. He will be working with Holstein breeders in the Northwest region of Quebec, and his office will be located at Macdonald College. His address will be Box 237, Extension

News from the QPPA

At the annual meeting of the Quebec Provincial Plowmen's Association on April 26, Jean-Charles Maril was elected President. Mr. Maril is the current Quebec and Canadian plowing champion, and will represent Quebec at the national competition in Peace River, Alberta, this summer. He will also represent Canada at the international match in Germany in September.

This year, The Provincial Plowing Match will be held at the Deschambault Research Station on Sept. 6, 7, 8 and 9. The plowing match coincides with the 60th anniversary of the research station at Deschambault, therefore making the occasion particularly interesting for visitors. The QPPA is again offering plowing clinics to groups interested in learning more about competition plowing. Contact the QPPA provincial office at the Extension Department of Macdonald College for more details.

Following the Show, there will be an awards banquet and dance open to all the exhibitors. Between 150 and 175 calves are expected to be entered in the Rally. Spectators are welcome.

Thirty-two young farmers from southwestern Alberta will be arriving in Quebec on Saturday, July 1st for a one-week stay. The following week, an equal number of young farmers from the Eastern Townships area will be travelling to the Western Lakes National Park and visiting farms.

A group of young farmers from the Chateaugay Valley will be off to Pennsylvania on July 15th for the second stage of an exchange program with a group of 4H'ers from Lancaster County, Penn.

Some 843,000 tons were produced, up 11.6 per cent from May, 1977.

But shipments totalled 895,000 tons, with 88,000 tons sent to Canadian customers and 558,000 going to the United States.

Total Canadian newsprint production for the first five months of 1978 was 4.08 million tons, up 12.2 per cent from 3.636 million tons for the same period the previous year.

Garon urges milk action

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec Agriculture Minister Jean Garon attacked the federal government last week for delays in setting up a program to promote the use of skim milk powder as livestock feed. He cited "the artificially high" price of 74 cents per pound of milk powder set by the Canadian milk marketing board as an important obstacle.

Farm loans climb

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec Farm Credit Bureau provided 491 loans totalling $36.5 million in the second quarter of 1978, up from $22.6 million in the same period last year.

Telecom increases bid

MONTREAL (CP) — Northern Telecom Ltd. of Montreal announced recently that it has increased its bid for outstanding shares of Data 100 Corp. of Minneapolis to $20 U.S. a share, up 75 cents from an offer last week. The Data 100 board of directors said following a special meeting that it would urge shareholders to accept the $20 offer.

U.S. unemployment drops

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Unemployment in the United States dropped last month to its lowest level in nearly four years but wholesale prices continued to rise, government figures show.

The labor department reported the jobless rate fell to 5.7 per cent in June after hovering at about 6.1 per cent for the previous four months.

At the same time wholesale prices, which tend to foreshadow trends at the consumer level, continued to move ahead in June at the same 0.7-per-cent rate as the previous month.

Wholesale food prices, pushed by a jump in meat, moved upward at more than double the rate for May.

Food prices over-all were up 1.1 per cent in the latest month compared with 0.5 per cent in May and 1.9 per cent in April, the labor department said.

Chicago bans Concordes

CHICAGO (Reuter) — The mayor of Chicago called the Concorde supersonic jetliner an environmental insult and banned it from landing at America's second largest city.

Michael Bilandic told a news conference that the noise produced by the British-French jet would jeopardize the health, safety and comfort of residents around O'Hare airport, the world's busiest.

He noted that the transport department had given local governments the power to regulate airport noise.

Bilandic said the Concorde carries too few passengers to justify the environmental harm it causes, adding that he was confident engineers could overcome the aircraft's noise problem if they tried hard enough.

Auto companies see record sales

General Motors of Canada Ltd. and Ford Motor Co. of Canada Ltd. set company sales records last month as many Canadians seemed to welcome the summer season with new cars and trucks.

Meanwhile, American Motors (Canada) Ltd., which does not sell trucks, had a record month for Jeeps while Chrysler Canada Ltd.'s fortunes continued to fall.

General Motors, with total sales of 64,673 units, set a record for any month with 47,067 cars, up from 38,706 in June, 1977, and 1.6-per-cent higher than the previous record set in May this year.

GM also sold 17,606 trucks, a June record, up from 13,935 in June, 1977, and 11.7-per-cent higher than the previous record for the month set in 1975.

Ford sold 37,682 cars and trucks, highest June total and its 74-year history and up from 31,484 a year earlier.

Crossroads claims three more

SHERBROOKE (PT) — Three more people were killed when their car collided with a truck at the intersection of the Trans Quebec highway and Scotch Road on Friday. Dead are Deneri Bruillett, 79, Eva Bruillett, 61 and Simon Camire, 69, all of Windywood, in Barre, Vermont.

The three victims were all taken to the Hotel Dieu where they were pronounced dead.

Although a spokesman for the Sherbrooke Police could not estimate how many accidents there had been at this intersection, he did say that at least four or five had occurred in 1978. Gerard Gosselin, deputy for Sherbrooke expressed displeasure that nothing had been done about the roads, which he termed a "Carefour de la mort."

According to Gosselin, plans to improve the intersection have not been completed and offers for construction will not begin until next October. The deputy stated that he will attempt to make this project one of the top priorities for the Ministry of Transport in the upcoming year.

Friday's accident, the most tragic to date at the intersection, occurred when the car driven by the victims attempted to turn onto Scotch Road and collided with the truck. The driver of the truck escaped uninjured.

Bedford CLSC increases service

The Board of Directors of the Bedford C.L.S.C. have placed special attention on offering more services for shut-ins in planning their future action.

At recent board meetings, the members unanimously decided to continue steps to finalize in the shortest possible delay the project of new construction of the C.L.S.C. of Bedford.

In addition, another of the board's priorities is to increase the services at the office in Venise-en-Quebec and to insure the presence of a doctor all week and on weekends during the summer months.

Fleet of foot

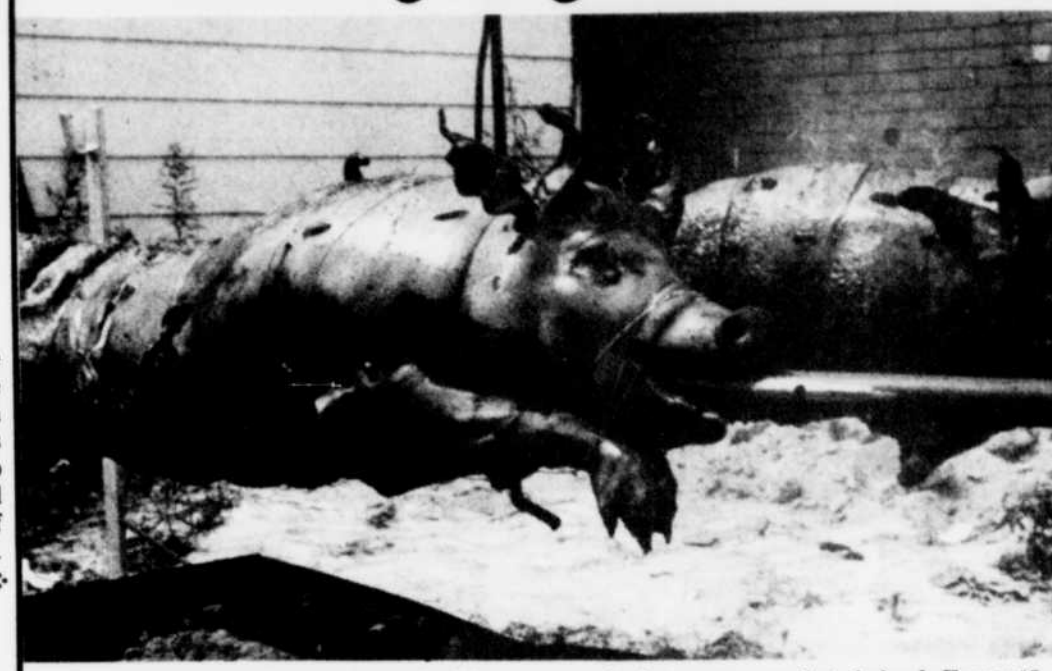

Saturday's heat didn't faze this young lad as he went stumbling through the obstacle race during the CKTS Bike-athon. Part of the local radio station's Summer Sensation program, the event attracted at least 35 participants. Winners of the various events were: 8 and 9-year-olds - Martin Roy; 10 and 11-year-olds - Eric Marquis; 12 and 13-year-olds - Luc Bisailon and 14 and over - Sylvain Fortin. Fortin recorded the best time of the day.

Two Sherbrooke residents, Cecile Theberge and Guy Smith were awarded 10-speed bicycles as participation prizes.

No laughing matter

Talk about feasts -- they sure tucked in at the Army, Navy and Air Force Hut in Lennoxville Saturday night. Cook Walter Dolenac and a score of helpers spent most of the day in blazing hot, humid conditions turning and basting these two porkers over coals that were very hot, indeed. Every 15 minutes or so, they poured red wine over the pair, culminating in an epicurean meal for 102 people. It was the first time the Hut gave the spit a whirl on this scale, but from the reaction, they'll be trying it again.

Come fly with us, TM group urges ET

By PAT TRACY
Paula Bright claims she flies twice a day. She is neither a pilot nor a marijuana smoker. Paula and her husband Harry are members of the Association for World Governments, an international group that believes Transcendental Meditation will cure the ills of our society.

The Brights, who teach TM in London, Ontario, are in Sherbrooke to spread their message. The couple, who are accompanied by Des and Sue Payne of Hamilton and Paul Drapeau of Quebec, are participating in a pilot project designed to monitor the effects of TM on the city. Identical projects are taking place simultaneously in 108 other countries.

During their stay in the Townships, they will be asking local mayors, police chiefs, hospital officials, and community leaders for their definition of an ideal society. The group claims that, through TM, the ideal society as defined by responsible leaders can be achieved.

The main emphasis of TM is on elevating the individual consciousness. According to Des Payne, the practice of TM by even a small minority of the population will cure everything from the rising crime rate to inflation. Fewer people will be sick and the unemployment rate will decrease. They go so far as to claim that the weather will be right and the crops will grow on time for someone who uses the technique.

Essentially, TM involves transcending reality and becoming one with nature through meditation. Stress is reduced and worldly things become less important.

Eventually, through complete control of mind over body, the sidhis, or special-abilities effect can be obtained. Group members explained this as an indication of increased invincibility leading to levitation and 'flying'.

In Sherbrooke several hundred citizens practice TM. Des Payne attributes the 38 per cent decrease in the city's crime rate to this. If more people become interested, he said, the crime rate will decline even further.

The group had spoken to Premier Rene Levesque's aides about the program, and in the next few weeks, they plan to approach local mayors and community leaders about their project.

Sherbrooke is but a small part of their program. Des Paynes explained that the pilot programs will be conducted in both British Columbia and Quebec, with the hope that the elevated individual consciousness will spread across the country.

The group says they will stay in the area until officials are satisfied with their accomplishments. They have invited all serious and reputable researchers to monitor and evaluate their performance. To date 300 independent research studies around the world have validated the program and 600 other studies are in progress.

While in the Eastern Townships, the group plan to visit all municipalities to lecture and give courses. The local crusade represents the second month of the three-month-long pilot project.

TOWNSHIPS 4-HERS SEEK NEW MEMBERS

By TERRY SCOTT

If you're like me, you probably aren't even aware what the H's in a 4-H Club stand for, in spite of the fact it's one of the Township's older organizations.

For the uninitiated, then, the four letters stand for "heart, hands, health, and honesty" but there's much more to be learned about the club than a simple piece of trivia.

meet other people and we're looking forward to it," Sheila remarked.

They'll return in time for the greatly anticipated Achievement Day, which begins at 10:30 a.m. on the fairgrounds. The calves will be judged according to classes, with both dairy and beef breeds entering the competition.

In the meantime, if you're interested in joining any of the 4H Clubs operating locally, the following branch secretaries would be more than willing to inscribe you as a member:

Waterloo: Theresa Enright, Gale Pond Rd., Bromont, Tel. 534-2281; Cowansville: Marina Steiner, R.R. 3, Cowansville, Tel. 263-2919; Brome: Gary Tracy, West Brome, J0E 2P0, Tel. 263-1979.

According to Kenda MacGillivray, a director of the Brome chapter, the links are weakening inside local 4-H Clubs and a drive is underway to acquire new members.

When she first joined the Brome club there were between 50 and 60 active members but that has dwindled to 26, while 4H groups in Waterloo and Cowansville show even less young people on membership rolls.

"We want to make people aware of us again," explained the Brome director. "Joining 4H clubs has been a tradition in the Eastern Townships. Our parents belonged to one when they were young and from the time we were little it seemed like the thing to do."

The Brome chapter, for example, has existed for nearly 40 years, as members ranging in age from 8 years to 25 learn the finer points of beef and dairy farming while participating in a wide range of club outings.

Apart from showing their calves at a number of county fairs throughout the summer, the Brome 4H's will hold an Achievement Day at the Brome fairgrounds July 23 and operate their familiar dairy bar at Brome Fair in order to raise funds for the club.

The club previously received a small grant from the provincial government but it was discontinued about five years ago and now it must count on a sleigh-rides and various activities to fill the coffers.

MacGillivray has a few theories for the decline in membership.

"A lot of kids don't feel they should go into farming because of the economic situation. Another reason is that farmers don't have as many children as they used to, consequently there aren't too many around to join the club."

She said the Brome 4H Club has to rely on the summer people who flock to the Townships, adding that "you don't have to be a farmer to join the group".

"There are plenty of farmers around who would be more than happy to lend their calves."

The young director, along with a pair of sisters, Sheila and Kathy Beerwort, have parlayed their knowledge of cattle into a number of first-place prizes at the fair, as well as a fourth-place finish at Toronto.

"I can usually tell whether a calf will become a good milking cow just by the way it stands," explained Sheila, also a club director. "You get a good indication by checking the legs and udder."

The two girls will participate in an exchange program this week when they visit 4H members in Alberta after hosting a group from that province for much of the past week.

Noise pollution

The organizers of the Cowansville sidewalk sale should be presented with the Alan Eagleson "International Salute Award" for the debacle which plagued the ears of citizens here last week. The 'festival' was sponsored by the merchants in the Domaine du Parc shopping centre and the Main Street Merchants' association.

Unfortunately they chose to erect a beer tent — which only sold the products of one brewery — and a disco sound system within a hundred yards of an old folks home which blasted on until the wee hours of the morning.

It wasn't bad enough that the humidity and high temperatures of last week made sleep almost impossible, but imagine the cacophony of noise which assailed the ears of the elderly who had little choice due to the proximity of the disco sound.

We cannot but agree with the idea of pulling out all stops in today's sagging economy to promote sales, however when one can hear blaring music over a mile away one can only wonder if their tactics bore fruit at the cash registers.

Then there were the yahoos on unmuffled motorcycles blasting through the streets at all hours. Shades of the Tower of Babel!

The organizers might have considered holding the beer drinking and musical activities at the municipal beach, away from the core of the town, but that move would have meant the citizens of Sweetsburg Ward would have been the victims of the noise assault.

Common sense must prevail during any future displays of a similar nature. Profit for the sake of profit is an unenviable motive and such were the actions of some of the participating merchants who sold goods at marked-up prices during the four "festive" days.

Such actions can only create apprehension among the public as well as cast a pall of distrust of all participating merchants through the acts of their unscrupulous members.

If the organizers decide they really want a successful festival, they will have to provide the shoppers with true bargains and also remember to consider the rights of citizens to an uninterrupted night's sleep.

JOHN McCAGHEY

Tit for tat

More and more these days, we see doors being closed to the press as various governments decide that free speech is less important than free reign.

Take the trials of the two prominent Jewish activists in Moscow; Tass accuses western journalists of prejudging the case before it opens. Of course, nothing is said about the fact that Soviet propaganda organs have been churning out accusations against both Scharansky and Ginzburg as regularly as the U.S. media ever did during the treason cases against Julius and Ethel Rosenberg way back when Joe McCarthy was king.

It's good to see the Soviets squirm; the truth hurts. In our society, propaganda is used to further everything from laundry detergent to politicians, but it's done with everybody knowing the score, and a set of rules that keep the broadcast bureaucrats hopping. Furthermore bluffs may be called at any time.

The Soviets don't have any rules for lying; rather they make them as they go along. As dissident-turned-author Arthur Koestler points out, everything is done in the name of the State; what the State says is the truth must be so, even if it isn't. Fitzroy Maclean noticed the same thing during Stalin's era; those purged would confess to the most ridiculous crimes because they believed as strongly in the State as their prosecutors.

Neither of those on trial in Moscow believes in the State's sanctity; they've become too used to seeing truth bent to serve the idle, fat, Kremlin capitalist-roaders and neo-imperialists who spend their days worrying about what kind of car to buy their kids. Little wonder, therefore, that the trials will be barred to all but a crowd of hand-picked party-liners guaranteed to jeer and applaud on cue like a bunch of trained seals.

Yes, it's good to see the Soviets squirm, marinated in their own lies, hoist with their own canard. The North American media has never known a brighter hour as the ethics they discovered they had during the Watergate affair are being used on an international scale.

If the Soviets see fit to prosecute journalists for doing the same thing as Tass, we feel the strongest answer would be to supply a little of the same to the Soviet press contingent here in Canada — they've gotten away with some real whoppers in the last two or three years, and we could easily prove it.

Soviet flexibility emerges in satellite affair

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — The Soviet Union has changed the atmosphere in the UN outer space body with a new sign of flexibility including an unprecedented explanation of its own use of nuclear power sources for space projects.

The Canadian delegation at the UN committee on the peaceful uses of outer space sees Soviet acceptance of the idea of a working group of experts within the UN space framework as a positive step.

The Soviet government accepted a compromise proposal calling for the creation next year of a working group of experts to study the technical aspects and safety measures relating to the use of nuclear power sources in space.

Since all UN space bodies work in the basis of consensus, progress in this field was impossible last February when the Soviet Union and its allies wanted no part of such a working group.

HOSTILITY SHOWN

At that time, the climate during the session of the main space body's technical and scientific sub-committee was often hostile, coming so soon after a nuclear-powered Soviet satellite carrying 100 pounds of uranium for fuel, disintegrated over the Northwest Territories on Jan. 24.

As the injured party, Canada put forward proposals centring on the creation of a group of experts when the scientific and technical sub-committee met in February. The Soviet Union balked at the idea because it felt the UN really had no business looking into such a situation.

Similar feelings were detected early in the current two-week session. But after long informal consultations among members of the main committee, the Soviet Union became more flexible.

In the general debate, Boris Maiorski of the Soviet Union gave a detailed scientific account of Soviet use of nuclear power sources in space.

He described different types of reactors and radioactive isotope generators which the Soviet Union has developed for space, giving weights and the type of materials used.

PRAISES DEVICE

Maiorski said that nuclear power sources were superior to other kinds for some purposes in space, mentioning enhanced power and reliability, among other factors.

The Soviet delegate also described different methods used to ensure safety of nuclear-powered satellites of various types and in various orbits.

Maiorski said the Soviet Union is willing to provide other states with assistance in the search and, if needed, the deactivation of components of space objects with nuclear power sources in the event of accidental re-entry to earth.

A Canadian official said the Soviet Union's detailed report coming at this time was an encouraging and positive sign. Up to now, the Russians have been very guarded in sharing information with other countries about their own internal activities in relation to their space program.

SHOWS PROGRESS

"It really represents the first time the Soviets have gone on record on such detail on their nuclear power source program in outer space," the official said.

Another Canadian delegate it struck him that the Soviet Union now was acknowledging that the UN should have a role to play and it was willing to co-operate with the UN.

When you have a working group of experts, you have a basis for a greater in-depth study of such a difficult subject as nuclear power sources in space and safeguards.

Governments are invited to send experts to that working group under the terms of its mandate.

Church on unity:

'Delight in human diversity'

What does the church say or do about the threat of separation posed by the province of Quebec? When this question came before the Presbyterian General Assembly in June, 1977, it was put in the hands of a special committee chosen to represent all parts of Canada and a diversity of Canadian opinion.

This year, at the assembly in Hamilton June 4-9, that committee on national unity presented its findings in the only report that was printed in both French and English. It was largely a theological statement, based on "the Declaration of Faith Concerning Church and Nation," a subordinate doctrinal standard of the Presbyterian Church in Canada.

"God delights in the variety of humankind; and differences are not to be barriers between people, but to enhance true human community," states the committee's report.

"Rather than being a cause of division, our differences of language and culture are deeply enriching to our mutual experience and to the country. . . . All too often we have allowed our racial and linguistic allegiances to foster suspicion of the other, rather than allowing our attitudes to be informed and broadened by Christian faith.

"Christ calls His Church to a ministry of reconciliation. By its preaching, teaching and living, the Church must therefore seek to break down every form of discrimination or antagonism based on race, color, culture or language. . . . French-Canadians are not to become English-Canadians; nor are English-Canadians to become French-Canadians; both are called by God to recognize each other's rights to full cultural, linguistic and economic identity."

TAKES STAND

The committee on national unity declared that "no Christians have the right collectively . . . to assert that any specific constitutional arrangement, past, present or future, possesses divine approval; all constitutions are basically human inventions. Nevertheless, in its divinely appointed mission as the conscience of the state, the Church has the responsibility to speak out on behalf of unity in difference. This principle is implicit in the Christian understanding of human relationships."

Concerning the principle of self-determination for Quebec or any other part of Canada, the committee said that the declaration referred to above does not provide any basic answer. It called upon the Church to be sensitive to the rights of groups and individuals and to avoid an atmosphere of confrontation. "The Christian response is to continue an active presence and witness in every jurisdiction, and to shun the use of force of arms or any other means of coercion."

CALLS IT POLITICAL

By adopting the committee's report, the General Assembly declared that the Presbyterian Church in Canada neither affirms nor denies the right of self-determination for the province of Quebec, or any other part of Canada. That is a political decision to be determined through democratic processes in a climate where debate and public discussion is marked by fairness, justice and mutual respect.

Although the special committee considered that its work was done and asked to be dismissed, the General Assembly voted to appoint a small committee to keep the Church in touch with developments on national unity.

A people-to-people petition for Canadian unity was brought before the Assembly by Rev. John R. Cameron of Charlottetown, where the petition originated with a service club. While the assembly refused to endorse the petition, it offered no objection to it being circulated among Presbyterians with a request for signatures.

Sickening

Editor:

If Joe Clark and Rene Levesque are an example of Leadership we are scraping the bottom of the intellectual peace time barrel. To watch our leaders on TV and listen to their ravings is enough to make grade school kids take to smoking pot.

Don't think that people at the head of nations today are clever enough to prevent another, more devastating world conflict.

We cannot have the best thinkers at the helm if they are religious — no matter what the religion is. All religions are biased in favor of their own narrow beliefs.

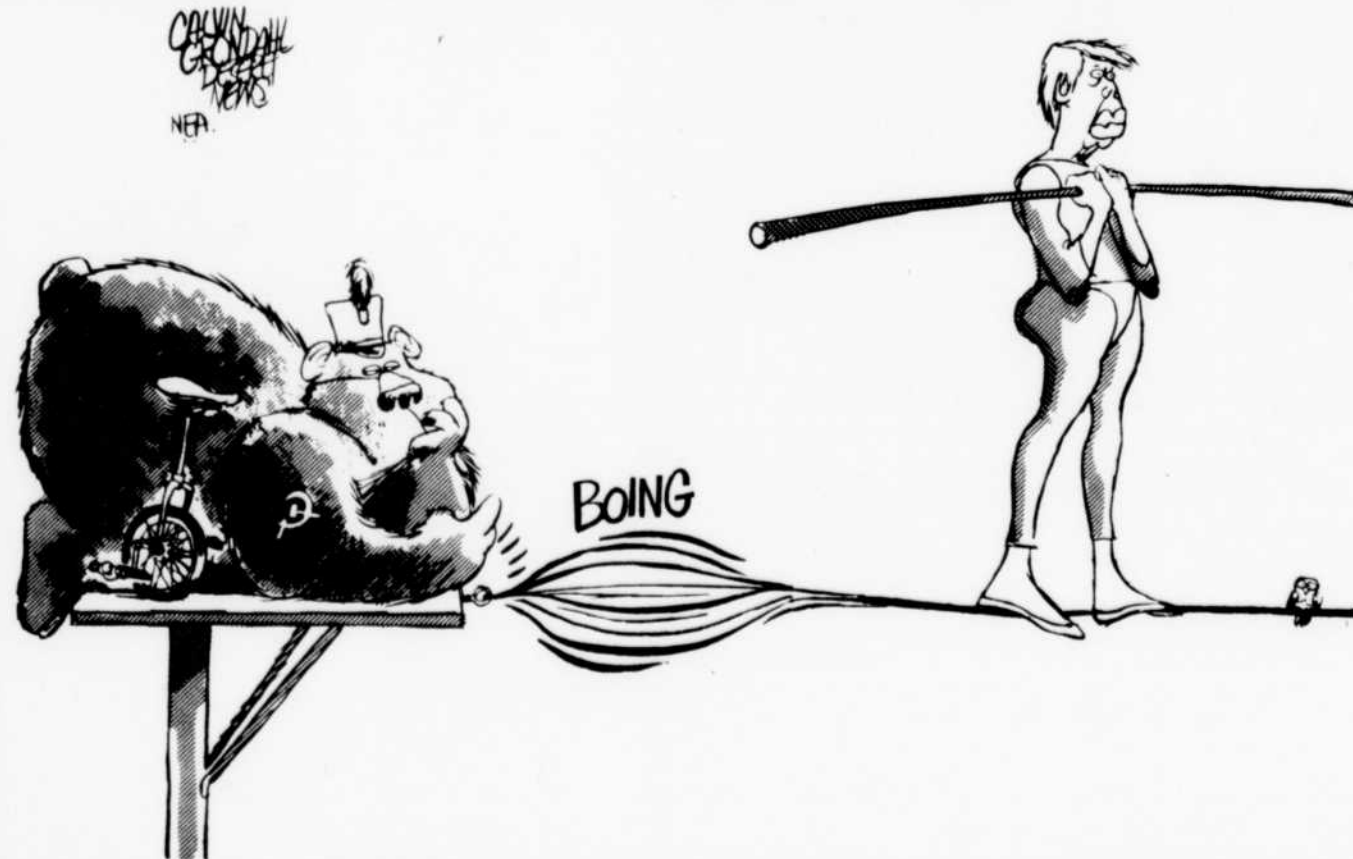

For instance, our Canadian leader today would like nothing more than to turn Canada into a Roman Catholic nation. It is my own fundamental belief that no leader of any nation should be allowed to lead if he or she is religious minded.

In World War I and II, these narrow minds sent the cream of the white race to their death.

At the end of World War I, England and Germany were scraping the bottom of the barrel for men to send to the slaughterhouse in France. I saw this going on with my own eyes. We continue to kill from the top and breed from what is leftover. If a dairy farmer used that method with his milking cows he would soon have a useless herd of cattle.

It's becoming more difficult all the time to find brilliant leaders. We haven't one leader clever enough to deliver a great speech without reading what somebody else has written.

It's sickening, to say the least.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

Heroin addicts cajoled into guinea-pig roles

by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

WASHINGTON — Desperate heroin addicts, who sought help at drug treatment centers, have charged they were coerced into serving as guinea pigs to test a new heroin substitute.

The addicts, according to sworn affidavits in our possession, allegedly were pressured into signing consent forms without a full understanding of the drug's risks. Then they were harassed, they claim, if they tried to back out.

The new drug, a heroin substitute called L-Alpha-Acetylmethadol but popularly known as LAAM, is being tested at 50 clinics around the country. The testing is sponsored by the National Institute on Drug Abuse (NIDA), a federal agency that we have exposed as being plagued with conflicts and cronyism.

LAAM may be more effective than methadone in helping addicts kick the heroin habit. But some officials at drug clinics may be trying a little too hard to push LAAM on their reluctant patients.

We have examined the situation at two clinics in Los Angeles — the West Los Angeles Drug Treatment Center and the Sepulveda V.A. (Veterans Administration) Methadone Clinic — whose patients were urged to participate in the LAAM experiments.

Several patients have sworn they were subjected to harassment and coercion. Some said they reluctantly signed up for the program only after they were given a choice of LAAM or no treatment at all. Subjects who have asked to stop the experiments said they encountered resistance.

One patient who tried to back out of the program was told he would have to wait until certain laboratory work was completed. He swore in an affidavit: "I was questioned, harassed and felt a complete shift of attitude towards me from the staff and doctor. I felt threatened." Only after he started to contact a lawyer was the addict allowed to stop taking LAAM.

Another addict on probation feared he would be jailed if he didn't get into a methadone program. Yet he swore he was given the choice of experimental LAAM or no treatment. Unhappily, he signed the consent form.

Recalled another addict: "(The doctor) gave me a consent form and told me to sign at the bottom. I said I wanted to read it. . . . He told me it was a standard form and that I didn't need to read it. . . . I felt him hurrying me through it, so I only scanned it."

When the patient became ill and tried to drop out of the program, "the doctor tried various tactics to convince me to stay on the program." Similar allegations are repeated in several other affidavits.

But there's another twist to the LAAM story that shouldn't surprise anyone familiar with our past exposes of NIDA. The awarding of the LAAM contract apparently was another insider deal typical of so many NIDA contracts.

John Whysner helped to develop the LAAM program as a consultant to the drug abuse agency. Then he formed his own consulting firm to bid for the contract. This gave him an inside track, which only one other firm bothered to contest. Its proposal was thrown out, and Whysner Associates was awarded the $1.5 million plum.

Already, the contract has doubled to $3.2 million. Whysner, meanwhile, has also been granted the exclusive patent rights to LAAM for eight years, even though it was developed at the taxpayer's expense.

Footnote: A NIDA spokesman said he was unaware of the allegations of coercion. Drug clinics, he stressed, have no financial incentive to recruit addicts for the LAAM tests. A spokesman for the V.A. Clinic told us there had been no coercion or harassment. Our calls to the Los Angeles

Drug Treatment Center were not returned. Whysner declined to comment. The Los Angeles-based Institute for the Study of Medical Ethics, meanwhile, is preparing to file a formal complaint with NIDA about the coercion charges.

Cuban Sanctions: The dialogue between Washington and Havana has been heating up, but it hasn't affected the economic detente. A State Department cable notified "all diplomatic and consular posts" last January that Treasury regulations had been changed "to permit oil installations in foreign countries owned or controlled by U.S. persons to bunker Cuban vessels and fuel Cuban aircraft." A Treasury official said that Cuba's African adventures have had no effect on the U.S. decision to relax economic sanctions against Fidel Castro.

Frank's Fate: We recently reported that the same officials control both Indiana Blue Shield and the bank that handles its funds. After our story appeared, Indiana insurance authorities ordered Frank McKinney, president of the American Fletcher National Bank, to get off Blue Shield's board. They instructed Blue Shield "to remove Mr. McKinney as treasurer within 60 days" because he can't serve both the firm and his bank "in a truly arm's length fashion."

18 Wheels: A rollicking good time

By JAMES DUFF

You want to wear your jeans to 18 Wheels. You want to stomp and clap and get maudlin and hug your buddy's wife and head over to the local dive to hang around and listen to C and W. I don't know about anyone else there Friday night, but I had an insatiable thirst for beer out of a bottle at intermission, and it wasn't just the heat.

John Gray's rollicking parables of the cross-Canada trucker's life were hits even before opening night, at the pre-show media-and-directors bash at the Outside Inn, Dave Rittenhouse told the story about the Bishop's University maintenance man, one of the Festival's long-time faithfuls who get to see pre-opening stagings.

"He's a big fellow — he paints. After the show, we're in the can, he turns to me and says 'six years now, I've been going to Festival Lennoxville openers, 24 shows, and they've finally done one for me'."

If any show F.L.'s ever done will drag the locals into the Centennial Theatre, it'll be 18 Wheels. They're all there, Sadie from Stellarton, the big, beautiful babe who stars at the Hollywood Grill and Truck Stop outside Kenora, James New, the driver of the lumber-lugging semi that jackknifed on Highway 400 in a blizzard, triggering a chain-reaction crash that ended up wiping out a dozen people. True story, too.

Wayne Robson just loves playing Jimmy New; he's the road jockey with white-line fever, he's the Four-Lane Philosopher still wondering why he walked away from that Horrible Crash on Highway 400, he's the pill poppin' all-night ghost of the road.

He can even sing. Perched at the left of Guido Tondino's magnificent set is a band, the tight rockabilly trio of John Gray, Ed Henderson and Lennoxville's own Perry Beaton; when combined with the vocals of Robson and Wright, they turn out some fine country-and-western music. At least I'd buy the album. I'm not sure I'd buy it if the other three Wheel characters had equal time. Sure, Janet Laine-Green is nubile as Molly the cheatin' housewife-turned-trucker who finally takes off to become the finest truck driver in the continent 'cause her spouse, Lloyd (Booth Savage) is a lazy, chauvinistic oaf. And Miguel Fernandes isn't into truckabilly Merle Haggard, which is a crying shame because he gets to sing the funniest song in the show, something about hauling Colonel Sanders' chicken guts in the hot August sun — and nobody can hear anything he's singing.

Just because country music sounds simple doesn't mean just anyone can sing it. John Gray hails from Truro, Nova Scotia, which may be why he writes a helluva trucking song and he's asking his actors to be country singers. Two of them made the grade Friday. It'll be a great show when the other three can belt 'em out just as enthusiastically; it's a good show even if they can't.

If you drive a pickup truck with a CB radio and have a touch of dirt under your fingernails, if you have Johnny Cash and Dolly Parton tapes goin' on the old tape deck, you'll clap along with 18 Wheels. If you drive a Buick and show up in a three-piece suit, you'll probably join in — it's catching stuff.

Herringbone: Fun and funny

By MARILYN MILL

"If you make a fool of yourself in front of the Lord, he's bound to make a fool out of you one day."

Rapid-fire lines and a little of that ol' soft shoe, backed up by bright ragtime music, combine to make Tom Cone's "Herringbone" an up-tempo, hilarious show.

The one-man comedy, starring Eric Peterson and directed by John Gray — who also wrote the music and lyrics for the play, and appears as Thumbs Dubois on piano — opened at Centennial Theatre on Saturday afternoon.

Peterson's virtuoso performance as George Herringbone had the audience laughing often, clapping and whistling, and at times spellbound.

George reminisces about his childhood, assuming the roles of his 10-year-old self and his parents, Arthur and Louise, who continually push him towards becoming either a child star or a 35-year-old "multi-performing midget" — a schizophrenic situation delivered with side-splitting style.

Portraying more than 10 very different personalities during the course of the two-act play, Peterson transforms himself from hysterical mother to indifferent child, from a flighty waitress to an overwrought agent and back again, establishing immediate interaction between the characters. The metamorphoses are quick and convincing.

When the script lags at times during the second act, Gray's music saves the day. Dressed in black, he sits at an upright piano with his back to the audience, almost merging with the set but at the same time breathing life and spirit into the show.

On the tri-level stage are two white chairs. The backdrop is six black and silver panels, each containing a rectangle of lights; light bulbs dot the perimeter of the stage.

Guido Tondino's set design works perfectly and the lighting, by Vladimir Svetlovsky, adds to the razzle-dazzle carnival atmosphere.

"Herringbone" is brilliant and fun.

Three curtain calls and a standing ovation later, the crowd was still smiling as they filtered their way out of the theatre.

Jean Archambault (right) and Miguel Fernandes star in Michel Tremblay's Hosanna.

Hosanna: A tour-de-force

Festival Lennoxville seems intent upon repeating its success formula of the previous season, offering a play for every taste, "Hosanna", playing the part of mandatory drama, succeeds admirably, but as the precaution of spreading the wealth suggests, it may not please everyone.

There is nothing "gay" about the play, written by Michel Tremblay, except that the word happens to be one of the many misnomers synonymous with homosexuality. "Hosanna" tells the story of an aging transvestite of the same name, played by Jean Archambault, who appeared in the original French title role in 1973.

Not only was the performance a personal tour-de-force for Archambault, but the occasion also marked the first English production of Hosanna in Quebec.

Miguel Fernandes plays Cuirette, Hosanna's slow-witted boy-friend who cruises around on a motorcycle while Hosanna works as a hairdresser. The play is directed by Michael Mawson, who teaches drama at Bishop's, and Hosanna's appropriately tacky east-end Montreal apartment has been created by Canadian theatrical designer Michael Eagan.

Archambault presents a more pitiable portrayal of Hosanna than did Canadian actor Richard Monette, whose performance was seen in English Canada and on Broadway several years ago.

Tremblay, casually clad in white shorts and an Indian shirt, said in an interview after the performance that he was immensely pleased with the Lennoxville production, particularly Archambault's performance.

"I wrote the play for him," said Tremblay.

By the end of the play the audience is responding to Hosanna's seemingly unconscious coqueteries, and she conveys her humiliation and shame so well that the eyes fill with tears. "Hosanna" has trouble getting across the subtleties that thread themselves throughout the course of the play.

"Hosanna" appears to be a play that will improve with age, as the two actors become more accustomed to their roles, to each other and the response of the audience.

One Night Stand:
A tale of
'bar-crossed' lovers

By RICHARD LONEY

"One Night Stand" is a two-act trip into the fast and loose, schizoid world of "Looking For Mr. Goodbar", which recently revealed the acting talents of Diane Keaton. In Carol Bolt's play, at Festival Lennoxville, the dramatic possibilities afforded Susan Wright, as Daisy, and Booth Savage, as Rafe, are limited by the nature of the play's sophomore text.

Playwright Bolt and director Richard Ouzounian attempt to present an innocent, yet fatal one-night stand at the high-rise Toronto apartment of Daisy, as she has succeeded in snaring the guitar-toting Rafe into a midnight rendezvous high above the glass cubicles of Yonge and St. Clair. The play is not five minutes old before the sexual tryst appears to be doomed, or at best perverted, by the schizophrenic antics of Rafe, who is strange to put it mildly.

Wright and Savage are believable as the bar-crossed lovers, but Bolt's text, or Ouzounian's direction betrays them. Daisy is naive and yet determined that this will be a special birthday night for her. Susan Wright plays Daisy with a pert, coy simplicity, but until the second act she is never allowed to display the sheer terror that seizes her so entirely in the last 10 minutes of the play.

Savage's Rafe is played with a rather frantic, excessive tendency to break into the decidedly pathological behavior that should prepare the audience for the horror and panic of the second act. At times Rafe's outbursts are so frenzied as to obscure some of his lines, which are lost in the angry invective that is alternated with his cool, even boyish moments, as the first act probes the psychological makeup of these two young moderns.

By the end of Act One, there have been some comic moments that help to dispel the aura of doom that a post-Manson generation of viewers might begin to feel: the eccentric frenzy of Rafe's Christmas tree decorating; the bizarre telephone conversations exchanged between Daisy, her lover Nick, her roommate Sharon, and the irrepressible Rafe, who blurts out all of his rage and hostility in the comic slang and laugh-gathering antics of the perfect social scourge.

Throughout the first act, Barbara Matis's set is functional, and simple — the bare essentials of a living room hide-a-bed sofa, kitchenette to the right, stereo tape to the left, bathroom door at the back, and an ominous, windowed view of the Houghton skyline. As the act closes, the seduction of Rafe by Daisy is complete, and the terror has been continually undercut by Rafe's throwaway lines and the comic changes in personality.

Act Two is really an extended climax, as the play moves rapidly to the type of gruesome finale the TV generation expects. The outcome of the dramatic situation developed by Bolt is not difficult to predict, nor is there as much suspense regarding the fate of Daisy, as might have been realized. Some of the last act's wildness degenerates to almost slapstick proportions, but Wright and Savage do conduct themselves with aplomb, despite the demands of their frantic situation in the play's last five minutes.

The opening night audience greeted both the play, and Ms. Wright's and Mr. Savage's performances with open approval and congratulatory applause.

Golden Age Club

LENNOXVILLE — The Golden Age Club held its last meeting for the summer on June 27 with a very good attendance. The afternoon was spent in playing cards and crokinole.

Due to the illness of the President, Helen McElrea, the Vice-President, Myrtle Knutson was in charge of the business meeting.

After the meeting was adjourned, a most delicious supper was served and enjoyed by all.

The Club will resume its meetings on September 12.

40th anniversary

On the occasion of their 40th anniversary, Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Harkness were guests of honor at an "Open House" held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Wyatt Savage in Lennoxville, on Sunday evening, June 25. Alene Morrison assisted in planning this happy event.

The Harknesses had been invited for supper and were unaware that anything special was going on until Janice Vaudry met them and pinned a corsage of half a dozen ruby red roses on Lillian and a white carnation boutonniere on Bruce, compliments of her parents.

Soon friends from St. Andrew's began arriving to extend congratulations and to partake of refreshments being served by the hostesses, assisted by several ladies from the congregation.

Mrs. Elma Jobel poured tea and coffee from a table centered by the anniversary layer cake, which was iced in white and daintily decorated in ruby as were the numerals "40" standing on a frame at the back of the cake. White candles in silver candlesticks flanked the cake.

An enjoyable time was spent in visiting, reminiscing, and picture taking. The goodly number of people who signed the Guest Book showed the esteem and affection felt for Lillian and Bruce. They were wished many more years of happily married life.

Ann Landers says

You're a chump, dear

Dear Ann: I was infuriated by the letter from "Up Front" about working mothers. I am the working mother of four children. I do not work so I can give my children "nicer things." I work because I don't want to go on public assistance.

No one except a paid babysitter ever took care of my children, but I have taken care of the children of non-working mothers on weekends while they goofed off. One neighbor sent her kids to my house with strict orders not to come home till suppertime. (At the time I was on a leave of absence to have my fourth child.) When I returned to my job she continued to send her kids over for my babysitter to take care of. I telephoned her and suggested she make other plans, whereupon she told me she thought it was awful that I was not at home taking care of my kids. I told her I was not at home to take care of HER kids either — and hung up.

I am sick of being put on the defensive about my unchosen career. I would love to be a full-time mother and homemaker, but I can't. In the meantime, I seem to be doing a better job on a part-time basis than some of my friends and neighbors who make snide remarks. —

25th anniversary

WINDSOR — On Saturday evening, June 17, more than eighty relatives and friends from far and near gathered at the Langlois Hall to honour Mr. and Mrs. Robert MacDonald on the occasion of their twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. The party had been arranged by their daughter Sandra and son, Bruce, along with help from relatives and friends.

The family had been taken out to supper that evening by their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon MacDonald from Dodsland, Sask. On their way home they were surprised to be driven into the Langlois yard.

On entering the hall they were really surprised to see so many present, especially those who had come a great distance. Congratulations and best wishes were extended to the couple by all. Pretty corsages of roses and carnation boutonnieres were received by them and by other members of the original wedding party present.

Among the many attending were their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Ross MacDonald, formerly of Scotstown and now residents at the Wales Home, and Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Buchanan of Bury.

The hall was attractively decorated with white streamers, wedding bells and silver numerals. Two large baskets of summer flowers from the garden of Mr. and Mrs. Doug. Jondreville completed the decorations.

The head table was covered with a white linen cloth and center with a three-tiered fruited wedding cake, made and decorated by Jean's mother, Mrs. W. Buchanan. The cake was later cut and served by the couple. The lovely floral arrangement on the table was a gift from Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Bevan of Brooks, Alberta.

An evening of dancing was enjoyed with music furnished by Messrs. Herbie Stevens, Bud Paterson and Vincent Farant. Norma Perkins called the changes for a square dance.

Later delicious refreshments were served buffet style from a linen-covered table. Mrs. Fred Hess, Mrs. Joan McGillivray, Mrs. Angus Buchanan, Mrs. Irving Willard and Sandra assisted in replenishing plates.

Seated at the head table along with the honored guests and their parents were others who had been in the wedding party twenty-five years ago. The bridesmaid, Caroline (Harrison) Lawrence and her husband, Thomas; an usher Gordon MacDonald and his wife Pat; and Mrs. C.S. Blenkinship, paternal aunt of the bride. The junior bridesmaid, Mrs. Joan McGillivray was present but assisted in serving the refreshments.

Mr. Irving Willard acted as M.C. and gave a short run down of the couple's twenty-five years together. On behalf of the guests, he presented Bob and Jean with a number of gifts, many cards and the best wishes of all.

Bob expressed thanks and appreciation to all who had come from both far and near to celebrate this special occasion with them, and for the gifts and currency received. After a little persuasion from Uncle Irving, Jean also voiced her thanks at seeing so many relatives and friends together.

Relatives attending included Mr. and Mrs. Ross MacDonald, Richmond, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbert Buchanan, Bury, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon MacDonald, Dodsland, Sask., Mr. and Mrs. Angus Buchanan and children, Kim and Chris, Baltimore, Ont., Mrs. C.S. Blenkinship, Toronto; Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay Groom and Mr. Larry Groom, Canterbury; Mr. and Mrs. Irving Willard, Bishopton; Mr. Herman Parsons, Alexandria, Ont., Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Main and family, Bishopton, Mr. and Mrs. Graydon Main and family, East Angus, and Mrs. Joan McGillivray, Cobourg, Ont., Ottawa, Montreal, Drummondville, Waterloo, Danville, Richmond, Melbourne, and the local area.

Cortisone: Response and side effects

NEW YORK (AP) — It was 30 years ago that Dr. Philip Hench tried a new drug on patients badly crippled with rheumatoid arthritis in the Mayo Clinic. The substance was cortisone.

Today, tennis players with bursitis, arthritis and asthma patients are familiar with the artificial hormone that puts out painful fires in the body.

Cortisone is a steroid, one of the broader group of corticosteroids. They can attack a wide variety of diseases, but they also can produce potent, disagreeable side effects.

"This is an excellent example of a drug you think is going to be a panacea," says Dr. Carol Proudfit, senior scientist in the American Medical Association's department of drugs.

"There is a tremendously wide range of usefulness and problems associated with them. Corticosteroids serve as an example of the things you learn about drugs only with use."

In September, 1948, as Donald Robinson recalls in The Miracle Finders, an account of key developments in modern medicine, Hench injected cortisone into a 29-year-old woman who had been bed-ridden for four years with crippling rheumatoid arthritis.

IMPROVED RAPIDLY

Two days later, on Sept. 23, "for the first time in several weeks, she could roll over in bed easily. On Sept. 24, she was able to get out of bed and exercise. She could raise her arms over her head. By Oct. 1, her pain and stiffness were almost completely gone."

"Other patients who were in grisly shape with rheumatoid arthritis were given Compound E (cortisone). They all responded excellently."

But cortisone did not cure arthritis or any other disease. It just controlled the symptoms. And a range of side effects began to appear with prolonged use. Sometimes the early improvement was not maintained.

Doctors found they had been giving too much and later lowered the dosages of cortisone and a related hormone, ACTH, to achieve a more moderate improvement.

Most of the cortisone-like drugs now in use are synthetic agents that have replaced cortisone and have been tailored in the laboratory for more specific uses.

PROVIDE RESISTANCE

Unlike antibiotics, which kill disease-causing bacteria in the body, the steroids provide the body tissue with a resistance, a protective mantle, against inflammation. But at the same time, they let bacteria or viruses—if they are causing the inflammation—multiply. In such cases, steroids mask the symptom but allow the progress of the infectious agent, and steroids are usually avoided in these circumstances.

Steroids provide relief from bronchial asthma, severe psoriasis, allergic and inflammatory eye disease, other respiratory diseases, hemolytic anemia, acute leukemia, ulcerative colitis and some liver diseases. Steroids are also vital to the body's acceptance of a transplanted organ, by suppressing the rejection mechanism.

Among the many problems associated with steroid use: they can cause cataracts, glaucoma, peptic ulcer and diabetes; produce high blood pressure; mask some signs of infection; increase salt and water retention; cause potassium loss which can lead to heart trouble; promote calcium loss; produce a puffy moon face appearance; suppress a child's growth and cause menstrual irregularities and neurological disorders.

Annual picnic

STANBRIDGE EAST (NM) — Stanbridge had its annual field day and picnic once again on July 1st. We've been celebrating this day annually since 1967.

There were races for all ages, tug of war, egg throwing of which quite a few broke, cross-cut sawing, rope ladder climbing which no one seemed able to do and pony rides for the youngsters. There was also a wiener roast and fireworks at dusk.

At the end of the fun-filled day, a dance was held in the Memorial Hall, which was very well attended. Music supplied by "The New Thyme."

Firemen and their wives are to be congratulated for a job well done, also the Lady Bugs.

Social and Personal

The many friends of David Rider of Lake Megantic, Que. will be sorry to learn that he is a patient in the surgical ward of the Sherbrooke Hospital, Room 213.

Kay's Kitchen Korner

By Kay Taylor

In response to a reader's request, here is a repeat of a recipe that appeared a couple of years ago. It is really rather special and was sent originally from Waterloo.

MARSHMALLOW SQUARES

Use a large pan 10 x 10" or 9 x 9" — nothing smaller.

BASE: Bake 15 minutes (not too brown in 350 degrees oven).

1/2 cup butter,
1/2 cup brown sugar,
1 cup flour.

Rub together and pack in pan. Cool before adding topping.

TOPPING: Do not make unless you have an electric mixer — it would be too hard and tiring.

In pyrex measuring cup, put 3 good teaspoons plain gelatin (almost 2 packets) with 1/4 cup cold water. Let stand and then add 1/2 cup hot water and stir. In a large mixer bowl, put 1 1/2 cups white sugar, pinch of salt, 1 teaspoon vanilla (or almond), add the softened gelatin, and then beat. This takes a lot of beating — 20 minutes at least.

Add a few drops of food coloring to tint and this can be divided into 2 or 3 parts, colouring each differently, so that when finished and put on the base it will look like ribbons of colour. One needs a lot of free time for this, and, something like making candy, the bright days with little humidity will make better and higher marshmallows. It should stand in peaks. Do not put in refrigerator — it weeps if you do.

Chopped maraschino cherries may be put on after coloring a pale pink — it looks nice — or chopped nuts may be used whatever you fancy. Good luck!

Here is a favorite pound cake which freezes well and is very nice to serve instead of regular fruit cake in the summer.

CHERRY CAKE

1/2 cup butter or margarine
1 cup white sugar
2 eggs, separated
6 oz. bottle maraschino cherries
2 cups all purpose flour
1/4 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 cup cold milk.

Cream butter and sugar. Beat egg yolks. Add with cherries and juice. Sift dry ingredients. Add alternately with milk, a little at a time. Beat egg whites stiff and fold in.

Bake about 1 hour in 9 x 5 inch pan at 350 degrees.

Beer lacks cholesterol

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I am 54 and weigh 184 pounds. I would like to know what my cholesterol should be. Also, when it comes to beer I'm sure there is cholesterol in it but I would like to know how much per 12 ounce bottle. Any help you can give would be appreciated.

DEAR READER — In general the lower one's cholesterol level is the better off he is in terms of avoiding a heart attack, stroke or other complications of fatty-cholesterol blockage of the arteries.

For an optimal value the reading should be below 220 using some of the research methods that have been used for scientific reports. Office readings using slightly different methods of doing the test, however, may be 10 to 15 percent higher than that and still be quite normal. How the test is done makes a difference.

I am sending you The Health Letter number 1-2, Cholesterol, Triglycerides, Blood Fats, Atherosclerosis to give you more information. Others who want this issue can send 50 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Regarding beer — it doesn't contain any cholesterol. I'm continually surprised how difficult it is to get the point across that cholesterol is an animal product. There is no cholesterol in any vegetable product.

The confusion occurs because if you consume too many calories that causes you to be fat, or you eat foods that are too high in fat, particularly saturated fat, your own body may cause you to produce an excess amount of cholesterol. To the extent that drinking lots of beer or alcohol may contribute to obesity, then it can stimulate excess cholesterol production.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Could you please enlighten me as to just what polyps of the throat are and how they should be treated? I never noticed anything wrong with my throat until several weeks ago. I had my throat examined and was told I had polyps and only have to be careful about eating. If something can be done I feel it is surely worth doing.

They told me that many folks have it. I never did hear about it before and otherwise I am in good health.

DEAR READER — A polyp is a little growth somewhat like a wart or larger. The term is commonly used for such small growths that stick out from the linings of organs in the body. Thus you can have a polyp in the throat or you can have a polyp in the colon or even a polyp in the sinus.

The treatment depends entirely on what causes it. If it's a reaction to an allergy, such as you might have with a nasal polyp, the correct approach might be to start with control of the allergy. Depending on the type and location of a polyp in the colon it might be wise to remove it. The same might be said about a polyp in the throat.

Your doctor has looked at it and knows by his observation just how important it is or is not in your case. If he thought it were important he could snip it off. Apparently he doesn't think it is that significant in your case. I would guess that he has asked you to return so he can look at it again in the not too distant future. That you should be sure to do.

Neil Creller honored at farewell party

STANBRIDGE EAST (KDT) — At the conclusion of the Senior Citizens' card party held in the Masonic Hall at Stanbridge East on Friday, June 24, a farewell party was given Mr. Neil Creller who is leaving shortly to take up residence in the Wales Home, Richmond, Que.

Mr. Earl Bracey V.P. of the Senior Citizens Club, after having given out the prizes to winners of Bridge and 500 asked everyone to take their places at the tables in the adjacent Memorial Hall. The tables, appropriately decorated with pansies "for thoughts" were set for the usual after-games lunch, only this time seats were provided for a considerably larger number than usual. One hundred of Neil's friends had arrived to join in the farewell party.

Everyone being seated, Mrs. Cecile Bellingham approached the head table and pinned a boutonniere on Mr. Creller, accompanied with a hearty kiss. The chairman Earl Bracey then asked the Rev. Keith Eddy to say Grace after which everyone partook of sandwiches, cakes, doughnuts, pickles, tea or coffee.

At the conclusion of the lunch, the chairman, noting that there were a considerable number of speakers to be heard from, introduced them as representing their various societies or organizations and asked them to be rather brief in their remarks as there were so many to be heard from.

He then called upon Mrs. Doris McIntosh, President of the Missisquoi Historical Society to address the gathering. This she did by saying that Neil had been one of the most ardent hard-working members of the Society over the years, never refusing any task or office he was called upon for. Volume 15 of the Historical Society was dedicated to him in recognition of his services. Mrs. McIntosh recalled also that she had looked upon him as of "big brother", he being several years her senior, during the years that their families lived as neighbours down on Dutch Street south of Bedford. She also said that there was considerable rivalry amongst the girls at that time as to who would get Neil to take them to dances, social evenings, etc.

Neil's daughter, Martha, Mrs. Eric Jones of Bedford, was next called upon and said that she would make her remarks brief as there were so many speakers to follow and ended by saying, "Dad will miss all of you."

Next, Rev. Keith Eddy opened his remarks in French in honour of St. Jean Baptiste. After, in English he extolled upon Neil's many, many virtues and kindnesses, especially to his church, of which he was one of their most valued members. He noted that Neil was the oldest living elder of his church, Bedford United also that he was a man of many talents. On looking through church records, Rev. Eddy noted that a previous minister had written after a reference to Neil, "Do nothing else but good to help others". Neil personified this throughout his life.

Mrs. Jos. Symington, on behalf of the Eastern Star, graciously thanked Neil for the great help that he had always been to the Order, never refusing any task assigned to him and willingly helped in every way possible during the years that she had been connected with the O.E.S. Many times he had provided transportation to meetings for those who lacked it.

Mr. Philip Arpin of Philipsburg, representative of Neil's many friends throughout the district then spoke feelingly in both French and English of the respect and admiration that we all have for Neil and concluded by wishing him the best of luck in his new home, from all of us.

Mr. Roy Jenne of Frelighsburg, filling in for the Master of Lodge No. 33, brought regrets from M.W. Brother Rodney Jenne, at being unable to attend. Neil has always been a member of the Frelighsburg Lodge, retaining his membership, during the years that he resided in Bedford and Stanbridge East had always been a faithful member, most always being the first one, waiting outside the doors on lodge night even though he had a key. He wished him good luck in his new home in Richmond, a beautiful part of the country but still not Stanbridge East, where he counted so many nice friends; no better anywhere.

Mr. Clifford Rhicard, representing the old Farm Forum of which Neil had been one of the outstanding members spoke highly of the esteem with which all members of the Forum held him. He was Provincial President of the Farm Forum at one time. Clifford paid tribute to the help that Neil had given him during sugarings, that was one of the best sap gatherers that he had ever had and never spilled any sap like some of the others did. After the meeting was over Clifford recalled that after the war Neil was presented with the Military Medal by the then Prince of Wales at a ceremony at Macdonald College, it being one of the highlights of his life, especially having received it from the Prince of Wales himself.

Comrade Wesley Gage of Phillipsburg Legion No. 82 brought regrets from the President of the Legion, that he was unable to be present. Comrade Gage spoke highly of the esteem with which the members of No. 82 Branch of the Canadian Legion held for Neil. He wished that Neil would live many more years and enjoy his sojourn in his new home as he was a true Comrade, a recipient of war medals from World War One, as well as the Legion medal.

Mr. Charles Bockus who was to represent the Canadian Customs Dept. where Neil worked until his retirement was unable to be present, so King Shephardson obligingly filled in for him. He paid tribute to Neil for the many years that he had spent in Customs, remarking that no man had ever spent more effort in helping young men to advance in the Department than Neil. He said that he did not always agree with him on policy or politics (the writer did not understand which) as "Neil was too much of an angel", presumably not tough enough in some situations.

It was regrettable that the town did not see fit to send a representative as Mr. Creller had served several years on the town council.

Chairman Bracey, knowing that Neil being one of the charter members of the Senior Citizens Stanbridge East Group then asked that the six charter members be made Life Members, it was seconded by Mrs. Bertha Fortin and carried unanimously. The six charter members were as follows: Mr. Frank Senkerik Sr., Mr. Neil Creller, Mr. Theodore Loiselle, Mr. Ernest Bleau, Mr. Ernest Brown and Mr. Phillip Arpin.

Mr. Creller was the recipient of several gifts which Mr. Guy Martindale had been asked to present to him. He then asked Mrs. Ruby Moore, a long time friend of Neil's, to assist him in the first presentation. Gifts included a briar pipe and tobacco and an electric coffee maker. An additional gift from the Senior Citizens is to be presented at a later date.

Mr. Creller very capably thanked his many friends for their kind remarks and gifts. He spoke feelingly of the kindness of the people of Stanbridge East during the years that he had lived here. His first contact with the town was in 1919 while living here for a year or so and then again in 1961 for 17 years, up until the present time.

He said that it was always a pleasure to come down street amongst such friendly people, chatting with some, acknowledging hand waves from others, gestures that made living in a small town, meaning so much to him. Again he thanked them all for his gifts, the social afternoon that he enjoyed so much. He extended a cordial invitation to everyone to come and visit him in his new home. It was the consensus of everyone that he will have lots of visitors.

Chairman Earl Bracey thanked everyone who had helped in any way and for turning out in such good numbers to make this gathering such a great success.

Mr. Bracey, ably assisted by his wife Mildred, deserves great credit for the success of this tribute to Neil, through much hard work and planning. Following his remarks he called upon everyone to sing "For He's A Jolly Good Fellow". They made the rafters ring.

The writer of this article and wife, who have travelled quite extensively with Mr. Creller and his dearly departed wife Flora throughout England, Scotland and the West Indies on wonderful trips, cannot let this opportunity pass without relating the following story of one of the episodes in their travels. It all happened in Barbados W.I. in 1967. On these trips, Neil, who loved to take long walks occasionally got lost or as he would describe it, "turned around". Although Neil is a good mixer I found out that it is not always safe to let him mix your drinks.

One hot day in Barbados, after lunch, he decided to mix up a tall cool drink for the two of us. Drinks finished he went for his usual walk and I decided to take a nap. Later in the afternoon the coloured chambermaid came into the bedroom to tidy up the room. There was I sprawled across the bed, dead to the world. She evidently thought that I was dead and let out a scream that frightened me so badly I landed on all fours on the floor. So much for that. The ladies began to think that Neil was gone much longer than usual.

The suspense dragged on until near supper time, Flora was really worried and was about to call the police about a lost husband when a big shiny Cadillac drove into the yard driven by a coloured chauffeur and out stepped Neil, rather sheepishly, much to the relief of all of us. He said that he did not get lost but had got turned around so asked this chap for directions back to the hotel. The man asked him to come into his home for refreshments and said that he would drive him back. He was over three miles from our hotel and direction signs were few and far between down there in those days.

What had happened was that Neil, not being sure that he had mixed up just regular drinks, added another measure of that 100 per cent rum that Barbados is famous for. He walked his off and I tried to sleep mine off. To this day, Neil will not admit that he was lost. Thus, I will end this story with all due apologies and forgiveness to one of the finest men that I have ever known.

SWEETSBURG WARD

by John McCaghey

SWEETSBURG WARD (JM) — David Winward, of Knowlton, changed his option and pleaded guilty to two counts of breach of probation orders, one of attempted breaking and entering with intent to commit a crime, and to a count of having operated a motor vehicle when he had consumed 180 mgs. of alcohol.

Defence lawyer Donald Bissonnette told the court his client's problems stemmed from alcohol. "He has a stable job and has joined AA," said Bissonnette. "He seems to have a desire to control his intake and is living a fairly stable life. I feel the interests of justice would be well-served with three weekends in jail."

"He has an extensive record and doesn't seem to understand the meaning of probation orders," Crown attorney Yves Lagace said. "I can't be lenient with your record," Judge Gerard Normandin said. "Two months for the attempted breaking and entering, one month, concurrent on each of the breach of probation counts, $180 and costs, in default 30 days, for the operation of a motor vehicle when you had consumed 180 mgs. You must learn that you have to obey probation conditions."

Christian Gravel, of Granby, entered no plea at his arraignment on a charge of arson in Granby, June 16. Defence lawyer Pierre Gibeau chose jury trial and preliminary hearing was continued to Aug. 17. Gravel was remanded in custody for a psychiatric examination prior to the hearing.

Brian Britt pleaded guilty to a charge of having been illegally at large from the Cowansville Penitentiary, Apr. 4. Defence lawyer Pierre Gibeau told the court his client had been sentenced to 18 months, consecutive to all terms he is now serving for a charge of attempted armed robbery in Gracefield while he was at large. "He is serving the equivalent of four years and any additional term should be concurrent," Gibeau said. Crown attorney Yves Lagace objected to the idea of a concurrent term and left the sentence to the discretion of the court. Judge Normandin handed Britt two months, consecutive to any terms he is now serving.

Claude Michaud, of Montreal, the former object of a bench warrant, entered no plea at his arraignment on a charge of theft of a truck valued in excess of $200 in Noyan, Aug. 7, 1977. Defence lawyer Pierre Gibeau chose jury trial and preliminary hearing was continued to June 26.

Renaud Bisson, of Farnham, who earlier pleaded guilty to two counts of having committed indecent acts with 10 and 11 year old children in Farnham during December 1977, was placed on two-years probation. Judge Normandin lauded the suggestion of defence lawyer Claude Hamann and ordered Bisson to continue his treatments with Dr. Gagne at two week intervals for a minimum of one year, and for any further period deemed necessary by the psychiatrist.

Jean Louis Ouellet changed his option and pleaded guilty to a charge of assault causing bodily harm on the person of Rejean Boucher in a hotel brawl in Noyan. He was fined $100 and costs, in default 30 days and was bound over to keep the public peace for one year.

Pierre Gauvin, of Cowansville, changed his option and pleaded guilty to a charge of having conspired with one or more persons to commit a simple theft in Sutton. He was fined $40 and costs, in default eight days, and was allowed two weeks to pay the fine and costs.

Daniel Mercier, of Farnham, who earlier pleaded guilty to two counts of breach of a probation order and one of disturbing the public peace, was handed 10 days, concurrent, on each count.

The board approved the renewal of a contract valued at $2,911.80 for the cleaning of its offices. The job requires 2.5 hours per day. A contract with Ross Barkshire for electrical and heating equipment maintenance during the summer months was also renewed. It is based on 560 hours yearly and amounts to an average of $8.92 an hour.

A motion was passed authorizing insurance agent Fred Gilman of Bedford to distribute brochures through the school offering an optional student insurance plan. Asst. Director-General Kaye Vaughan said Gilman had been doing this for the past five years and he found the rates to be very competitive.

A bus discipline problem on the Waterloo school buses appears to be resolved since the principal of the elementary school advised the board that each teacher will now be responsible for taking his or her class downstairs to the bus.

The board passed a motion forbidding future distribution of circulars on its school buses.

Chairman Lindsay said the distribution contravened board policy (though there is nothing written) and could create a mess unless regulated.

The passing of circulars to youngsters occurred frequently during the recent school board elections.

IMF urges 'vigorous' economic measures

WASHINGTON (CP) — A senior official of the International Monetary Fund (IMF) urged Western countries today to take vigorous and potentially controversial measures to put their finances in order.

In a speech prepared for the United Nations Economic and Social Council, economic counsellor J. J. Polak criticized major Western industrial countries for increasingly resorting to protectionist measures.

"The trade-impeding effect of these measures, as well as some measures by a number of developing countries, has been detrimental to the balanced growth of international trade," he said.

Although there has been some progress in adjusting trade balances, over-all economic developments in the last two years have been disappointing," Polak said.

DEFICIT IMPROVES
He said the trade surplus of major oil exporters has fallen to $20 billion this year from $68 billion in 1974, improving the collective deficit of oil-importing countries.

Nazi rally a bore-in CHICAGO (AP) — Nazi leader Frank Collin stood atop a white van and spoke passionately of a "1978 white revolution" in which he said Jews and blacks would be "wiped off the face of the earth." There was no applause.

Police say about 4,000 persons were looking on as Collin gave his "White Victory" speech in Marquette Park. The park, situated in a white working-class neighborhood, has been the scene of past racial clashes, including the stoning of Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. when he attempted to lead open-housing marches in the 1960s.

USSR dissidents face trial

MOSCOW (AP) — The U.S.S.R. government put two of its leading dissidents on trial today.

Anatoly Shcharansky, a 30-year-old Jewish computer expert, went on trial in a Moscow court on a charge of "high treason in the form of espionage."

Alexander Ginzburg, 41, went before a court in Kaluga, 160 kilometres south of Moscow, on the lesser charge of "anti-Soviet agitation and propaganda."

As Shcharansky's trial opened in a closed court, the U.S. embassy sent its second secretary, Raymond Smith, to stand with foreign reporters and members of the dissident movement behind the barriers around the court. The embassy said Smith was there "to show our concern and the concern of the people of the United States in these trials."

The U.S. state department in a statement Friday approved by President Carter warned that the fate of the two human-rights activists will have an impact on the "constructive development" of Soviet-U.S. relations.

REPORTED VIOLATIONS
Shcharansky and Ginzburg were active in the Helsinki human-rights group formed to report on Russian violations of the human-rights provisions of the 1975 Helsinki accords on European security and co-operation.

The founder of the Helsinki group, Yuri Orlov, was sentenced May 18 to seven years at hard labor plus five years of Siberian exile.

Shcharansky, who turned to active dissidence after he was denied permission to emigrate to Israel in 1973, is accused of feeding information to the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) via diplomats and news correspondents. The maximum sentence for high treason is death, but he is expected to get a long term in a labor camp.

Police barred Shcharansky's mother and brother from the Proletarsky Regional People's Court today, but when they insisted said they would transmit their request to the three-judge court.

About 100 policemen manned the barriers around the court building, keeping back about 35 reporters, a dozen members of the dissident movement and the U.S. embassy representative.

SECOND CHARGE
Ginzburg, who managed the fund exiled author Alexander Solzhenitsyn finances to aid the families of Russian political prisoners, faces a maximum sentence of 10 years plus exile because it will be his second conviction. He was convicted on the same charge in 1968 and served five years.

Tass said Ginzburg was being given an "open trial." Dissident sources said Andrei Sakharov, the physicist who won the Nobel Peace Prize for his leadership of the dissident movement, and other friends of Ginzburg are believed to have gone to Kaluga, but it was not immediately learned whether they were admitted to the courtroom.

Ginzburg was arrested in February 1977 and Shcharansky the month after. Both have been held incommunicado.

In Israel, Prime Minister Menachem Begin said Shcharansky's trial was "a great shock" and his only crime was his desire to emigrate to Israel. He appealed to "all free nations" to press for his release.

Family pleads with Brezhnev

TORONTO (CP) —

Relatives of Anatoly Shcharansky sent a telegram to Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev on Sunday pleading for the release of the Soviet dissident on the eve of his trial in Moscow.

"We, the cousins of Anatoly Shcharansky in Toronto, urge you to release him and allow Shcharansky to join his Canadian family," the telegram said.

"Canada and the rest of the world are watching to see if Russia will live up to its international agreement on human rights."

Mrs. Shcharansky has 40 cousins living in Toronto, a family spokesman said.

News Briefs

Quebec to participate

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec will participate in federal-provincial talks on constitutional reform scheduled to take place in Ottawa next September, Intergovernmental Affairs Minister Claude Morin said Friday.

Morin made the announcement, the first official confirmation Quebec would participate in the talks, shortly before leaving for Saskatoon for a meeting of provincial ministers to discuss the constitutional issue.

Italians swear in Pertini

ROME (AP) — Sandro Pertini, 81-year-old co-founder of the Italian Socialist Party, was sworn in Sunday as Italy's seventh president and vowed in his inaugural address that the country will stand firm against terrorism.

In his first official act, Pertini rejected the pro forma resignation of Prime Minister Giulio Andreotti's minority Christian Democrat government, which rules the country with the parliamentary support of the five other major political parties.

Chinese technicians leave Hanoi

BANGKOK (AP) — Vietnamese forces killed or "put out of action" two Cambodian battalions in recent border fighting in Vietnam's Tay Ninh Province, Hanoi's official news agency said Sunday.

A Japanese report from Hanoi, meanwhile, said the first group of Chinese technicians to leave Vietnam as part of China's suspension of economic assistance boarded trains in the Vietnamese capital Sunday and headed home.

Iraqi ex-premier shot in London

LONDON (AP) — An Arab identified in news reports as a former Iraqi premier under death sentence in his native country was shot and seriously wounded Sunday outside London's Intercontinental Hotel.

Scotland Yard questioned another Arab who was caught running from the scene. Police refused to identify either of the men, but the British Press Association quoted diplomatic sources as saying the victim was Abdul Razzak al Nayef, who served briefly as premier of Iraq 10 years ago.

Beirut ceasefire holds

BEIRUT (AP) — Sniper fire broke the calm in east Beirut on Sunday, killing one Syrian soldier, but the four-day-old ceasefire generally held as the Syrians refrained from resuming the heavy barrages that killed almost 200 Lebanese in a battle with Christian rightists last week.

President Elias Sarkis, meanwhile, set down four conditions for Syria and Lebanese Christians to accept or, he said, he would resign, Lebanese officials reported. Sarkis threatened to resign last week because of the bloody fighting in the capital. But Syria and the Western powers urged him to remain in office for the sake of Lebanon's stability.

Ethiopians arrive in Cuba

HAVANA (Reuters) — More than 1,200 Ethiopian children arrived in Havana on the weekend to attend primary schools in Cuba in what officials said was part of Cuba's aid to Ethiopia.

The children, aged between nine and 17, for the most part are sons and daughters of men who died in Ethiopia's war with Somalia.

They will be joining students from Angola, Mozambique and Cuba itself in countryside schools on Cuba's southern Isle of Youth. The name of the island was officially changed last month from the Isle of Pines.

Burmese Moslems to return home

DACCA (AP) — More than 206,000 Moslem refugees who fled predominantly Buddhist Burma this spring citing religious persecution will be returned to their homeland under an agreement signed Sunday by Burma and Bangladesh.

Bangladesh's foreign minister, Tabarak Husarn, said the repatriation of the refugees, now in 11 squalid camps on the Bangladesh side of the two countries' common border, will begin by the end of August.

Picassos razed in Rio

RIO DE JANEIRO (AP) — A fire that destroyed the city's Modern Art Museum wiped out a collection representing famous artists of the 20th century, from Picasso, Miro and Klee to Dali, Magritte and Dubuffet, museum officials said Sunday.

The monetary value of the 950 destroyed works has not been determined, they said. But the collection's value has been unofficially estimated at between $10 million and $15 million. It was insured for $2.6 million, officials said.

The museum's financial director, Leonidas Borio, said more than $7.5 million would be required to repair the glass-and-concrete building, including installation of an adequate sprinkler alarm system.

In Memoriam

FARTHING, Bonnie Ruth — In loving memory of our beloved mother and wife who passed away July 10, 1977. On a road that's calm and peaceful.

Guided by God's loving hand, You have gone upon a journey To a fairer, brighter land, Looking back with tenderness, Along the road you trod, We bless the years, we had with you And leave the rest to God. And when your great tomorrow dawns, And all the shadows flee, We'll meet you over yonder, Just beyond the silver sea. Sadly missed, lovingly remembered by, JACK (husband), LYNDA & SHERRI (daughters).

Knuckleballer pitches shutout

Phil Niekro is never one to turn down an opportunity to pitch.

The 39-year-old knuckleballer, who has a 9-9 record in 22 starts, volunteered his services Sunday in a relief role after pitching nine innings Thursday. Atlanta manager Bobby Cox took him up on his offer and Niekro responded by tossing three shutout innings as the Braves downed San Diego Padres 5-2 in National League baseball action.

"He wanted to pitch Saturday," said Cox, shaking his head. "He's really something."

Jeff Burroughs, who along with Niekro and catcher Biff Pocoroba, will represent the Braves in Tuesday night's all-star game, slammed a two-run, fifth-inning homer to snap a 2-2 tie.

"I wouldn't ordinarily do that," Cox said of inserting Niekro into the game in a relief role. "But we don't play again until Friday and it shouldn't make any difference for Tuesday's all-star game. He can go if called on."

Niekro came on after Burroughs ripped his 10th homer of the season in the fifth inning. In three innings of work, he allowed an infield single, one walk and struck out five.

Preston Hanna, 7-5, who went five innings and gave up both San Diego runs, picked up the victory.

In other National League action, Philadelphia Phillies downed Montreal Expos 8-7, Cincinnati Reds trimmed San Francisco Giants 8-2, Houston Astros beat Los Angeles Dodgers 5-1, Chicago Cubs tripped New York Mets 4-1 and Pittsburgh Pirates whipped St. Louis Cardinals 6-1.

On Saturday, Philadelphia beat Montreal 6-3 in the opener before losing the nightcap 8-1. Los Angeles beat Houston twice, 7-1 and 7-5. San Diego blanked Atlanta 7-0 in the second game after dropping the opener 6-4. New York blasted Chicago 7-0, St. Louis whipped Pittsburgh 4-0 and San Francisco downed Cincinnati 4-2.

Phillies 8 Expos 7

Richie Hebner, who had two earlier two-run homers, singled with the bases loaded in the ninth inning to cap a two-run rally and give the Phillies their win over Montreal. Gary Carter belted two-run and three-run homers for the Expos.

Reds 8 Giants 2

Dan Driessen singled home the tying and go-ahead runs in the sixth inning. Tom Hume ended a personal nine-game losing streak with one inning of hitless relief and Pete Rose tied his career high by extending his hitting

TWINS BLANK OAKLAND 7-0

The face wasn't familiar before, but Dave Goltz now may remember Mike Edwards for a long time.

Goltz, a 20-game winner last season, hurled 7 1/3 innings of hitless ball en route to a three-hitter Sunday, leading Minnesota to a 7-0 victory over Oakland A's and extending the Twins' unbeaten streak to eight games.

"It was hard to pitch to the A's because they have so many new faces," said Goltz, who missed a couple of turns in the Twins' pitching rotation this season after burning his hand on a barbecue grill.

"It seemed like a whole new lineup from the last time I faced them."

Edwards gave Goltz something to remember, however, when he singled to centre field in the eighth to ruin the righthander's no-hit bid.

"It was a high fastball—a good pitch for him to hit," said Goltz, who pitched a one-hitter last year. "I didn't have great stuff all day, but I kept adjusting."

Goltz then allowed ninth-inning singles to Tony Armas and Mitchell Page before nailing down the victory.

RELAXED SLIGHTLY

"After Edwards got the hit, I relaxed a little—I just wanted to get the game over," Goltz said.

In other American League action, Cleveland Indians blasted Boston Red Sox 7-1, Chicago White Sox edged Toronto Blue Jays 5-3, Milwaukee Brewers defeated New York Yankees 8-4, Kansas City Royals bombed Baltimore Orioles 10-4, Seattle Mariners shelled California Angels 11-7 and Texas Rangers outlasted Detroit Tigers 4-3 in 13 innings.

On Saturday, Toronto blanked Chicago 3-0, Minnesota outlasted Oakland 9-8, Boston took two from Cleveland, 12-5 and 3-2, California swept Seattle, 10-5 and 5-0, Milwaukee beat New York 6-5, Kansas City blasted Baltimore 11-3 and Detroit downed Texas 5-1.

Singles by Rich Chiles and Glenn Adams and an infield out gave the Twins a 1-0 lead in the second. Hosken Powell homered off A's starter Pete Broberg, 9-7, in the third and Rod Carew delivered an RBI single in the fifth to give Minnesota a 3-0 advantage.

The Twins, who moved to within 4 1/2 games of first-place California in the West Division, added four unearned runs over the final four innings.

White Sox 5 Blue Jays 3

Alan Bannister drew a bases-loaded walk off reliever Tom Underwood to force in the tie-breaking run during a four-run eighth inning as Chicago beat Toronto and snapped a four-game losing streak. Pinch hitter Bob Molinaro added a two-run single in the seventh in support of Steve Stone, who raised his record to 7-6.

Track and field champs achieve goals

MONTREAL (CP) —

Many of the country's top amateur athletes achieved their goals during the weekend at the Canadian summer track and field championships in spite of inclement weather and some organizational blunders.

The goal for most was to earn a berth on the national team for the Commonwealth Games in Edmonton next month.

The inclement weather came on Saturday when afternoon activity at the Centre Claude Robillard was interrupted twice because of thunderstorms.

Sandwiched between the storms, however, was the only record of the meet as Marjorie Bailey chased fellow Vancouverite Patty Loverock to a time of 11.34 in the women's 100 metres. Bailey stopped the clock at 11.35.

The previous record of 11.36 had been set by Loverock in 1975 in a silver-medal performance at the Pan-American Games in Mexico City.

Loverock burned up the track on Sunday as well and, although she did not set any records, she easily won the 200.

NAMED BEST

The victories earned her the title as outstanding athlete in the meet.

The only others who came close to the Vancouver runner's stature were pentathlete Diane Jones-Konihowski of Edmonton and Carmen Ionesco of Longueuil, Que.

Jones-Konihowski won all five events in the pentathlon on Saturday and easily took the long jump title the next day. Her opposition, however, was not of the stature of Loverock's and she did not threaten her national record in either event.

Ionesco won both the women's discus and shot put competitions. Her discus victory was no surprise because she is the Canadian record holder. The shot put triumph, though, might have been thanks to one organizational blunder.

Lucette Moreau of Montreal, the national record holder with a mark of 16.96 metres, had been told her event would be held late Saturday afternoon. Moreau received a call at home Saturday morning telling her the shot put competition had started. She was unable to reach the track on time.

Ionesco won with a heave of 15.66 metres, more than a metre under Moreau's record.

The men's shot put was a disappointment as well.

Record holder Bishop Dolegiewiez of Montreal strained some pectoral muscles in a warm-up and could not take part.

Athletics breeze to 15th triumph

SHERBROOKE (BP) —

Richard Vachon picked up his fifth victory of the season with a five-hit performance last night as the Sherbrooke Athletics downed the Shawinigan Jets 9-1 at the Amedee Roy Stadium.

The Athletics blasted away for 13 hits against three Shawinigan pitchers and took advantages of five errors by the visitors, three which came in the three-run first inning, in front of a crowd of about 500.

Sherbrooke had a 6-0 lead after two innings before the Jets got their lone run in the top of the third. The A's replied for a pair of points in the bottom of the inning, and the locals breezed their way to their 15th triumph of the season.

Allan Watkins went three for four at the plate with singles while Sherbrooke's designated hitter, Donald Dupre, knocked key hits with a triple and a double in three trips to the bat. Michel Benoit, Bernard Boutin and Pierre Begin accounted for two hits each for the winners.

Rene Girard was tagged with the loss after one and one-third innings - six runs on six hits going against him. Real Auger pitched in relief until the fifth inning when Rejean Longpre took over for the remaining two innings. Auger gave up four hits and two runs, while striking out one and walking two. Longpre permitted one run on three hits.

Vachon, in his seven inskein to 25 games, tops in the majors this season.

Astros 5 Dodgers 1

J. R. Richard fired a four-hitter, struck out 12 to offset six walks and drove in two runs with a sixth-inning single in beating the Dodgers for the seventh consecutive time since June 23, 1976. Richard, the major league strikeout leader, ran his total to 157 as Houston snapped the Dodgers' fourgame winning streak and pitcher Don Sutton's personal five-game winning skein.

Families gather for 11th community picnic

WINDSOR — Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Farquhar hosted the 11th annual community picnic at their place on Sunday, July 2nd. People came from far and near to make it one of the largest ever. By the number of little ones present, it would seem there will be plenty of folk to carry on picnics for a long time to come.

The weatherman was very co-operative, sending along a bright, sunny day. A cool wind during the lunch hour saw people slipping on a sweater for a brief time.

As usual, the long lunch table was laden with goodies galore, this soon disappearing as one by one passed along the table and made their choice. A few late-comers found a good choice still. Cold drinks and ice cream to top off the meal were furnished by the Ladies Aid.

In the afternoon the young ones engaged in various races and games while the older teens went off for their regular ball game. The older ones enjoyed an afternoon of reminiscing and they, too, got into the activity of things with a "Know your Country" contest conducted by Mrs. W. Paterson. The result was a tie between four participants, each choosing a small prize. Winners were Walter McGee, Gladys Perkins, Olive McCourt and Clifford Perkins.

For the young folk, probably the most eager participant was young Don Hutton from Huntingdon. Once this four-year old got the "hang of it" he was ready and willing to take part with any age group.

Leading off the races was fifteen-month-old Kelly McGee. With dad on the starting line and mom on the stop line it really couldn't be all that hard and so she was off. At the end of the race Mrs. Delbert Watson was on hand with an assortment of little prizes to make it all worthwhile.

Kevin McGee was first in the dash for the four year olds, with Don Hutton second and Anic Bourget third.

Ricky Watson led the 9-10 yr. class with Diane McCourt and Peggy McCourt coming in second and third respectively.

Little Anic Bourget and Don Hutton teamed up for the three-legged race and made a really cute picture as they tried to make it to the finishing line.

Cathy Watson and Karen Coffey took first place in the 3-legged race, with Donna McCourt and Donna Coffey, second, Jeff Coffey and Donnie McGee third, Diane McCourt and Donna Coffey,

Ricky Watson and Peggy

McCourt tied in their class.

Besides those mentioned, there was the wheelbarrow race, shoe scramble, marble-on-a-plate race, potato between-the-knee hop, and grab the bacon tag. Each participant received a prize so that by the end of the afternoon all had gathered up quite a "loot".

One new race, actually taken from a Dennis the Menace cartoon, got a lot of folk into the act. Two people of approximately the same height were given a long blown-up balloon. The idea was to hold it between foreheads down and back an allotted distance. From a side view it was really amusing to see them trying to balance that balloon. Winners were Irene McGee and Doreen Coffey with Pat Coffey and Connie McGee, second.

In the "over 23 in a sack" race, Valerie Healy and Pat Coffey made it to the finish line at the same time. Doreen Coffey and Walter McGee were second and third.

Randy and Marlene McCourt were winners in the potato on a popsicle stick

A peanut scramble brought the afternoon activities to an end. A drawing was held to help defray expenses. Pat Coffey won the smoked cushion, donated by Alison Watson; Brenda Lynch and Alison Watson received an Esmond blanket each; Steve Perkins chose the cake, made and decorated as the Canadian Flag by Mrs. Randy McCourt; Sheila McCourt and Brenda Lynch each claimed a can of fruit, donated by Olive McCourt.

A hand was given to Hugh and Irene for their hospitality. It was nice to see Irene able to be out after over five months in the hospital.

We were pleased to see Mr. and Mrs. Gordon (Jack) Sims from Sand Hill, and Mr. and Mrs. Victor Sims from Hatley Acres. Another newcomer this year was Mr. Thomas McGee from Quinebaug, Conn. Others attending were from Chateaugay, Rock Forest, Richmond, Melbourne, Huntingdon and the local area.

Who knows, we may do it all over again next year!

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Alan: "How about some articles on planning our play?"

Oswald: "Good idea. Our rule of 'ARCH' with emphasis on C for Count winners and losers and H for How can I make my contract?"

Alan: "Here is a good example. East's king wins the diamond lead and shifts to the queen of clubs. South sees one potential loser in each suit. He wants to eliminate that club loser if he can."

Oswald: "If he had time to pull the trumps he could get rid of it on a heart. He hasn't time so must go after hearts right away. He leads a heart."

Alan: "West ducks one heart, wins the second and leads a club to knock out dummy's ace. South leads a high heart. If both opponents followed he would be home free, but East ruffs."

Oswald: "This doesn't upset South's apple cart. He overruffs, enters dummy by ruffing a diamond and leads another high heart."

Alan: "East has a Hobson's choice. He can ruff with the ace or discard. Either way South gets rid of his club loser."

Ask the Experts

A Kentucky reader wants to know if there ever was a time when five down doubled vulnerable cost 2,000 points.

In the early Thirties there was a sliding scale of penalties. The first trick cost 200, the second 300 etc. Five down came to 2,000, six down to 2,700 etc.
