'Cash mobs' to swarm local businesses

Gordon Lambie
Special to The Record

The concept of a flash mob, a seemingly spontaneous gathering of singing and dancing, street performance, or public demonstration organized through social media, has quickly become a part of social consciousness and popular culture over the last decade. This coming weekend, thanks to a project of Dr. Yanan Wang's Consumer Behaviour class at Bishop's University, Lennoxville will be host to two gatherings of a new generation of the event, known as "cash mobs."

"In a flash mob people sing and they dance," said Wang, "in a cash mob we spend money as a group."

According to the business school professor, the growing trend of cash mobs employs the tactics of flash mobs to provide surprise support for small local businesses. She pointed out that many small businesses are the hearts of their respective communities, but are struggling financially due to fears about economic instability over the last several years.

"A cash mob is just organized by a group of people who want to make a positive impact on a business in their community," Wang said, explaining that by doing so, the participants in the mob are making a substantial contribution to the community as a whole, even if each individual only spends a small amount of money. She said her Consumer Behaviour class has a chapter specifically devoted to opinion, leadership and social media networks, and that the cash mob project was born out of those ideas.

"You need to use your network to form a cash mob and build public opinion," the professor explained, adding that two groups, one in each of her classes, have taken on the project.

Those two groups have been hard at work organizing cash mobs at the Boutique Encore and Doolittle's store on the Bishop's campus, respectively.

Stanstead Council: Councillors sworn in at first meeting

MATTHEW FARFAN

Matthew Farfan
The Border Report

This Monday saw the first official meeting of Stanstead's new town council. At the start of the session, with only about twelve people in the audience, the mayor and councillors each swore to serve the municipality faithfully and honestly. As per Quebec law, the new councillors will have to go for ethics training, while the returning ones will have to go for an ethics refresher course in two years' time.

The town council is now composed of Paul Stuart (Seat 1, acclaimed); Rolande Rouleau (Seat 2, elected); Wayne Stratton (Seat 3, acclaimed); Françoise Bonenfant (Seat 4, acclaimed); A. J. Bedard (Seat 5, elected); and Guy Ouellet (Seat 6, acclaimed). Philippe Dutil was returned without opposition as mayor.

Paul Stuart has been appointed pro-mayor for the next four months. This same councillor has also been named to the Downtown Revitalization Committee, which is supposed to be wrapping up its work soon, and which involves a group of McGill students trying to figure out what to do with the downtown.

Wayne Stratton has been reappointed to his seat on the board of the Régie intermunicipale de gestion des déchets solides de la région de Coaticook (also known as the Barnston dump). Guy Ouellet and Françoise Bo-nenfant have been appointed to serve on the Comité consultatif d'urbanisme (the CCU) for a two-year term. Bonenfant's real estate background was cited by Mayor Dutil as being a useful qualification for service on this committee, which includes both members of the council and the public, and which makes recommendations to council on such things as zoning changes, minor derogations and sign permits.

Jérémy Fluet has been hired by the town to look after the skating rink in Beebe; Dany Francoeur, as a support worker for the roads department during the winter months; and Guy Beaudoin, to monitor the ice and snow

Boucher, Pinard, Barrière, and Tremblay face charges of narcotics trafficking, production and possession of narcotics for the purpose of trafficking, and conspiracy.

Revenu-Quebec seizes almost $3 million from accused drug kingpins

Record Staff
SHERBROOKE

Revenu Quebec announced that it has taken collection measures to maximize the recovery of sums owed by four residents of the Eastern Townships under the auspices of 'Operation Kayak.' The targeted men are Guy Boucher, Serge Pinard, Danny Barrière and Patrick Tremblay, all of whom were arrested in the operation aimed at dismantling a drug distribution network.

Revenu Quebec has seized properties totaling over $2,900,000 with respect to the application of the Taxation Act and the Act on the Quebec sales tax, including $1,442,000 from Boucher, over $470,000 from Pinard, more than $857,000 from Barrière, and nearly $151,000 from Tremblay.

Revenu Quebec has obtained authorization from the Saint-François District Superior Court allowing it to proceed to the registration of Legal mortgages on real and personal property belonging to these persons - five residences, an apartment building, a cottage and land. In addition, post-judgment writs of movable property were placed on five boats, three vintage cars, a motorcycle, and an all-terrain vehicle.

These actions were made possible through the collaboration of the Estrie Mixed Regional Squad who provided information that led to the dismantling of drug trafficking networks in the region last June, under 'Operation Kayak.' Elements of the investigation sent to Revenue Quebec helped establish non-declared income of the subjects and the taxes due.

Boucher, Pinard, Barrière, and Tremblay face charges of narcotics trafficking, production and possession of narcotics for the purpose of trafficking, and conspiracy.

The growing collaboration between the police and Revenu Quebec Service is part of the government's determination to fight against organized crime and tax evasion.

'Cash mobs'

"It was just an extra credit project that we've kind of taken a little bit further," said Marc Deshaies, who is working with the group organizing the Encore mob. "The ideas that really brought us towards it are the values associated with Boutique Encore."

Deshaies highlighted the second hand clothing store run by the Lennoxville and District Women's Centre as a shining example of a local business that promotes community values, and said that theirs was a business model easy to support.

"What I was very surprised about is that people at Bishop's seem to have very little idea about the boutique," Deshaies added, saying that the mob will provide an exciting opportunity for the school community and the women's centre to branch out and reach new people. "It'll be fun to get more people to know about the boutique and about the women's centre who wouldn't necessarily know that these resources exist." He pointed out that the experience will attract people with shared values and, he hopes, help create ties between community and student body, potentially leading to increased involvement of the students in the centre's activities.

Olivia Vandzura spoke for the group organizing the Doolittle's mob, saying that it has long been known to be a struggling business, but that it is also a valuable resource on campus that the students should be supporting. She argued that more students would get involved in an event held on campus.

"We know Doolittle's is struggling," Vandzura said, "so we're going to try to help them out as much as we can."

and Deshaies admitted that their mobs would not fit with the general tendency in flash mobs to be a surprise gesture, but said that the respective managements of the businesses they are working with are so positive about the plans that it doesn't really matter.

"They're so motivated and passionate," Wang said. "I can see that they're good students and they want to make a change in the community." She said that the intent is to carry the events on in a more surprising fashion as time goes on in order to show and develop the positive energy that such events can spread throughout the community, to show that Bishop's students care and they want to do good things.

The two mobs, though independently organized, have been scheduled for almost the same time. Both will take place this coming Saturday afternoon, with the boutique Encore mob gathering at 178 Queen Street from 1 p.m. to 2 p.m., and the Doolittle's mob meeting in the lobby of the Student Union Building (SUB) on Bishop's Campus at 2 p.m.

The Boutique Encore crowd is encouraged to bring non-perishable food items to contribute to the Women's Centre's "Bare Necessities" project, while participants in the Doolittle's mob are asked to spend a minimum of five dollars to support the campus store.

2013 Honda Civic Coupe Si HFP

Comfort takes a back seat to sportiness and performance

Marie-Laurence Paquin

We auto journalists are privileged enough to test drive a new car every week, many of them fully equipped models. Of course, you know how I love sports cars, so I was very excited at the prospect of spending a week with the 2013 Honda Civic Coupe Si HFP. On the other hand, now that I'm getting a bit older and have driven all these luxurious vehicles, I've come to appreciate the value of comfort.

There you have it, the classic conundrum: sporty handling vs. a smooth ride.

What is the Honda Civic Coupe Si HFP?

Take the standard Civic Coupe, increase the displacement, add several high-tech features, and you get the 2013 Honda Civic Coupe Si.

Wait, there's more. With the Honda Factory Performance (HFP) kit, you also get 18" alloy wheels, Michelin Pilot Super Sport tires, an HFP suspension, a body kit, and specific badges.

2013 Honda Civic Coupe Si HFP Price and Specs

The 2.4L, 4-cylinder, i-VTEC engine of the 2013 Honda Civic Coupe Si HFP is rated at 201 horsepower and 170 lb-ft of torque. The only configuration available is front-wheel drive with a close-ratio, 6-speed manual transmission. Officially, fuel consumption amounts to 10.0L/100km in the city and 6.4L/100km on the highway. I recorded 8.3L/100km in mostly highway driving -- as much as the V6-powered Honda Accord Sedan I tested a while back.

The 2013 Honda Civic Coupe Si HFP retails for $28,890. If you're looking for a more affordable version, the regular Civic Coupe starts at $18,645.

Driving the 2013 Honda Civic Coupe Si HFP

There's no denying that the various performance parts make a difference in terms of driving dynamics. Heck, I even considered bringing the 2013 Honda Civic Coupe Si HFP to my local track!

You can feel the 201 horsepower at work, but acceleration is not quite as forceful as I expected. Unlike some 6-speed units whose final gear ratio aims to improve fuel economy on the highway, the manual in the 2013 Honda Civic Coupe Si HFP is responsive and dynamic in all six gears. At 60 km/h, with the box in third gear, the engine almost reaches 4,000 rpm -- great for power delivery, not so much for your gas bill.

While supportive, the seats are firm, and so is the suspension. What's more, the cabin is pretty noisy at speed. Of course, you don't buy a car like the 2013 Honda Civic Coupe Si HFP for its quiet demeanour.

Inside and Out of the 2013 Honda Civic Coupe Si HFP

The sporty, aerodynamic silhouette of the two-door 2013 Honda Civic Coupe Si HFP is arguably designed to appeal to young driving enthusiasts -- even more so when you factor in the rear decklid spoiler, 18" wheels, and body kit: this is the sort of look you either love or hate.

Inside, I liked the driver-oriented centre stack, as well as the sharply raked windshield that makes the cockpit feel roomier because it stretches the top of the dashboard.

Closest to the driver is the multi-function steering wheel, and behind it is the tachometer where about another foot away sits the digital speedometer, not to mention the i-VTEC indicator that lights up when you hit the right rev range. The problem is that I had to break from my ideal driving position to see the second row of data.

There's an intelligent Multi-Information Display (i-MID) to the right of the speedometer, and another display in the middle of the centre stack for navigation and infotainment purposes. The small audio buttons frustrated me and I wished for a more user-friendly interface. On a related note, Bluetooth disappointed me yet again: I had to repeat half the words I spoke on the phone, and the device could not understand any of my voice commands.

On the flip side, the 2013 Honda Civic Coupe Si HFP proves surprisingly spacious for all occupants, although the car's sporty design hinders cargo capacity.

The 2013 Honda Civic Coupe Si HFP has the edge when it comes to content, reputation, and reliability, so it's a great deal when you buy, and when and if you decide to sell.

Weedon: Planting the seeds for the next generation

WEEDON

Educational and agricultural stakeholders have joined forces to offer a unique event on the occasion of the third edition of the Rendez-vous for farm succession in Weedon. On Wednesday, 87 students from various educational institutions in agriculture, industry stakeholders, and farmers gathered at the Weedon Community Centre to discuss the farm start-ups and re-establishment as well as possible careers in agriculture. Farm tours, workshops, professional meetings, and kiosks were all part of the program.

"Over the next 10 years, 40 per cent of farmers will be ready to retire. Many of their businesses are viable and deserve to be taken up for the next generation," says hog producer and president of the Quebec Federation of Farmers, Alain Audet.

"Will it come from the same family or from somewhere else?" The rapid increase in the value of farm assets makes transfers more difficult.

The event brought in students from many of the local schools offering agriculture related programs, including the Cégep de Sherbrooke campuses in Sherbrooke and Coaticook, the Cégep de Victoriaville, and the Maison Familiale Rurale in Saint-Romain.

This event was made possible through the collaboration of many partners, including the Regional Directorate of the Eastern Townships of the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (MAPAQ), Emploi-Quebec Estrie, the Federation UPA-Estrie, Desjardins-Centre financier aux entreprises de l'Estrie, Weedon Co-op, Co-op de Saint-Isidore-de-Clifton, Compton Co-op, Co-op Coaticook, the Town of Weedon, the Hauts-Cantons school commission, the Haut-Saint-François MRC, the local office of the UPA Haut-Saint-François, the Rotary Club, Compton-Stanstead MP Jean Rousseau, the Estrie Union of pork producers, Mégantic MP Ghislain Bolduc, Financière agricole de l'Estrie, the Coaticook Region Agricultural Initiative Centre, and the Weedon Centre for volunteer action.

The owners of the building at 85 Albert Street in downtown Sherbrooke proudly showed off their revamped, repurposed renovation project that has created a building housing over 40 employees of tenant firms Lubie communication interactive, Rackam, JBLP Inc., and Jean-Marc Dugré engineering. Philippe Vachon, David Côté-Hamel, Pierre-Philippe Rousseau, and Vincent Lemaire-Dugré have turned the 101 year-old building from an antique shop and a few apartments into a commercial building.

In his announcement, Vachon said "I am very pleased with the investment made here and it is a real pleasure for my team and myself to come to work every day in downtown Sherbrooke. We can't see ourselves working outside downtown. It is a choice that my associates and I made several years ago and we are very happy today."

Sherbrooke Commerce, which contributed about $29,000 to the $675,000 project, also praised the project and vice-president Daniel Chasse said he was very happy to see young entrepreneurs choose to invest and locate their businesses in downtown Sherbrooke, to develop and attract human resources. "It is a way to make it a workplace, but also a place of living and business development," he said.

The 101-year old, 11,500 sq. ft. building housed until last summer an antique shop and apartments. Six people were occupying it. Today, the space is occupied and has been converted into commercial premises in their entirety. The purchase was signed in the spring of 2012, work began in June 2013 and lasted for almost four months.

Serge Paquin, Councillor for the Centre-Sud, stressed the exemplary nature of the project and called it an inspiring initiative. "I congratulate the owners for this great success. This is a totally rejuvenated building that now houses young and innovative companies. Our aim is to further develop the downtown area to make it a challenging place to work, a place to live, and a place where we can invest." The owners, flushed with their success, have suggested that they are looking for other projects in the downtown area.

Artisans Christmas Craft Show in Richmond

The perfect place to get started on that Christmas shopping list will welcome visitors Saturday and Sunday at the Artisans Christmas Craft Show in Richmond.

The event, featuring unique and original arts and crafts that cover a wide variety of works spotlights local talent in many fields - jewelry, art work in glass, oils, acrylic, sculpture, weaving and even locally produced treats such as chocolate, cheese and wine.

Of course, the tasty treats will be offered in samples tempting even the most discriminating. Roger Viens, president of the organizing committee, together with France Cote and Martin Lafleur got together for a chat Tuesday, underlining the quality and originality of the goods offered at this fourth annual event.

"We insist on unique and original works created by the artists themselves," Viens explained.

"We have around fifty exhibitors registered," France Cote said. The show fills two floors at the Salle Ste Famille on Craig Street. "We've changed the entrance this year," emphasized France Cote. "We'll have the entrance at the lower or basement door and the exit from the main floor.

Also on the program is the participation of the Richmond Historical Society with their photo display, homemade snacks and beverages and a silent auction at their booth.

Funds raised by the Society will benefit activities and help with their museum expenses. Also, model trains, the much-loved hobby of organizer Martin Lafleur, will be set up and in working order. Doors open at 10 a.m. Saturday and Sunday this weekend, November 16 and 17.

High-resolution automated microscope

The Cœur en tête benefit, initiated by Nathalie Buisson—the former star ballerina of the Grands Ballets Canadiens and Dr. David Fortin's patient enabled the CHUS to acquire a fully motorized microscope.

In addition to being very user-friendly, the system captures florescent images of cancer cells, which can be used, among other things, to determine cell-cycle phases. Moreover, the system combines a microscope and incubator, making it possible to reproduce cell culture conditions on a small scale (controlled CO2, temperature, and humidity).

Of course, the research carried out by neurosurgeon and neuro-oncologist Dr. David Fortin deals mainly with glioblastoma multiforme, one of the most aggressive forms of cancerous brain tumors.

Haiyan may really be an early warning of what is to come for any coastal area that is within a thousand km. of the usual tracks of tropical storms.

Early warning system

By Gwynne Dyer

“We’ve been telling the rest of the world we don’t want what’s happening to us to happen to everyone else,” said Lucille L. Sering, the vice chair of the Philippines’ Climate Commission, as the country struggled to cope with the aftermath of Typhoon Haiyan. “This is your early warning system...we will all eventually be victims of this phenomenon.”

A full week after the typhoon roared through the eastern Visayas, the number of people killed is still unknown. Ten thousand dead is the number being used in the media, but the area around Tacloban city alone may have lost that many. Many other parts of Samar and Leyte islands are still inaccessible to both media and aid workers.

But the question that people are asking elsewhere is: will we really all become victims of this and similar phenomena? You can never attribute a particular weather event to climate change with complete confidence, but consider this.

Among the large countries of the world, the Philippines is the one most exposed to tropical cyclones. Their tracks most often take them across northern Luzon or the eastern Visayas. They do a lot of damage, but by and large Filipinos have learned to ride them out. However, you cannot just ride out something like Haiyan.

What did most of the killing in Samar and Leyte last week was not the high winds (although they stripped off almost every roof in the affected areas). It was the “storm surge” that submerged coastal regions to the height of a two-story building. The pressure at the centre of the typhoon was so low that a “hump” of water six metres (20 ft.) high was pushed up beneath the eye and travelled with it.

Shelters are not much good against that sort of thing unless (as in Bangladesh) you start building them on elevated platforms. Even then, you may decide that you want to move elsewhere if your city is going to be inundated and destroyed every ten years or so. The east coast of Luzon is very sparsely populated for precisely this reason, and this may be the future that awaits the eastern Visayas as well if storms of this scale become more frequent.

The very worst typhoon that hit the Philippines since detailed records began in the 19th century was Thelma, which killed about 5,100 people in 1991. But of the next worst nine, all of which killed over a thousand people, six have happened in the past decade: 2004, 2006, 2008, 2011, 2012, and 2013.

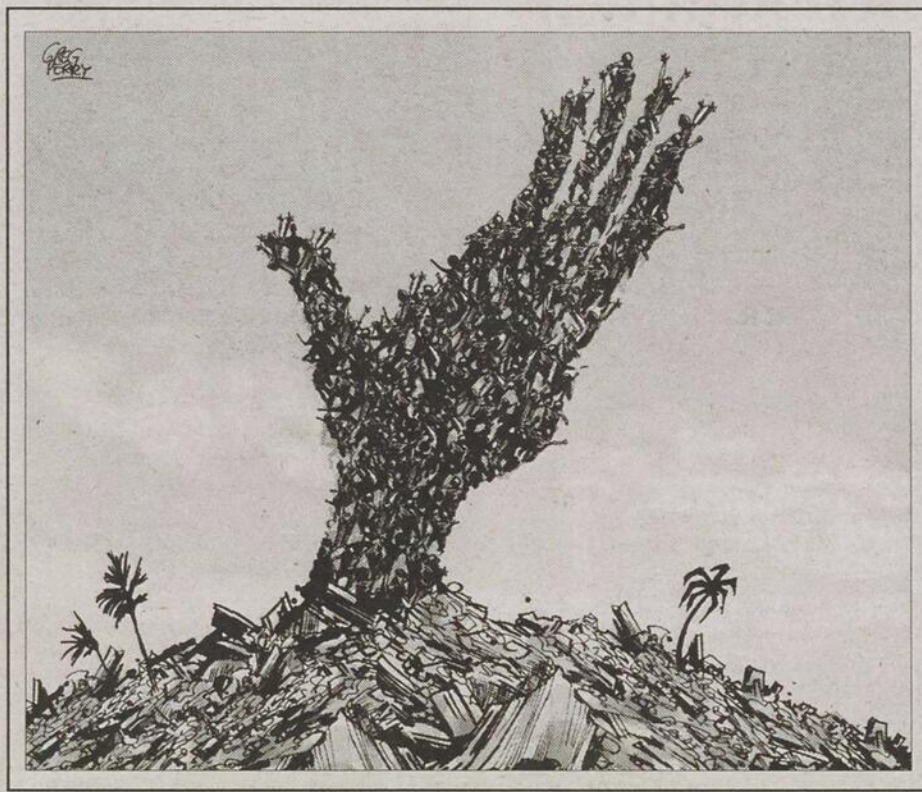

So Haiyan may really be an early warning of what is to come for any coastal area that is within a thousand km. (500 miles) of the usual tracks of tropical storms.

At some point, people decide that it’s just not worth living in such constant danger. They become, for want of a better word, “climate refugees.”

In some regions, it will be frequent mega-storms that drive them out. In other regions it will be drought and desertification, or heat so great that it kills the crops that people depend on. There are going to be a lot of refugees, with not many places that are willing to let them in.

Lucille Sering is right: this is an early warning of how the warming will unfold, and what the impacts on human societies will be. But we are getting lots of early warnings, and so far we are managing to ignore them all.

Gwynne Dyer is an independent journalist whose articles are published in 45 countries.

Letters

DEAR EDITOR,

I read Mr. Ronald Ewing’s column in Friday’s Record on Euthanasia a.k.a. assisted suicide. It’s the word “assisted” I have a problem with. Some might not feel comfortable with helping someone to die.

I also think his remarks on other people’s beliefs were very inappropriate. In the first place, I don’t believe in burning in hell and doubt that many people do. Also, his remark about listening to harp music for eternity would be a form of punishment to me and not a reward. And to refer to religions myths was inappropriate also.

I believe in right and wrong, but also realize that what feels right to one of us may feel wrong to another. But one thing I’m sure of taking cheap shots at others beliefs is not the way to go.

KATHLEEN BROWN

DEAR EDITOR,

As Christmas approaches and we think about giving, I urge your readers to consider a donation to your local cemetery. In most cases interment charges and burial fees do not come close to covering the annual maintenance costs of our cemeteries, and their upkeep and preservation depend on hard working volunteers and your donations.

Scattered through the Townships, these beautiful, historic sites bare witness to our pioneers, ancestors, soldiers and family members who have contributed so much to our communities and, without your help, their preservation is in jeopardy.

Best wishes and Happy Holidays!

We knew from the outset, for instance, that we would call Katherine "Kate." Later, Kate informed us that she preferred "Katie," so now we call her "Kate."

What kind of name is that?

ROSS MURRAY

My mother was born with the name Mavis Worthylake. When I tell people this, it never fails to amaze. But then I go for the kicker: her sister is named Juanita. Juanita Worthylake. She married a Wilcox, which was a small improvement.

Mom used to complain that the only fictional characters named Mavis were truck stop waitresses. It's not even an especially old-fashioned name like Beulah or Ethel. Mavis is just... rare.

Her mother - my grandmother - was a WWI nurse who came to Canada to marry the injured soldier she had met in hospital, Prescott. Her name was Florence. Everyone called her Flossie. Flossie Worthylake.

Everyone calls my Aunt Juanita "Wheet," but no one calls Mom anything but "Mavis" - which is fine with her. As much as she's ambivalent about her name, woe is anyone who calls her "Mav."

My father's name is Robert. Everyone calls him Bob, or at least they do now. I remember the great giggly delight I felt as a kid when friends of his parents would call him "Bobby."

Dad's full name is Harry Robert Dick Murray. "Harry" was his dad's name and "Dick" was his mother's maiden name. He doesn't use the "Harry" and he's dropped the "Dick." There are so many potential jokes here that it's almost better than the Worthylake sisters.

Considering this history of semi-unfortunate monikers, you have to wonder why my parents would have named me something as odd as "Ross." They had already produced a Janice, a David and an Andrew, so things were going pretty smoothly. And then they had me. It's as if they panicked.

Like my mother, I used to lament the lack of Rosses in popular culture. The only people named Ross were... well, no one. Eventually there was Ross Perot. Eek. Then Ross Geller. Ick.

In Grade 1, I had to write a composition about my name. I explained that I was named after my great-great-grandfather, which to me was the only thing that could possibly make sense. My parents saw my report and said, "What? No. We just liked the name." Facts, shmacts,

I laid the groundwork for my future career in journalism.

I've learned to live with "Ross" (as has my wife - ba-DUM-bum!), and I don't know that I would now choose an alternative. What I've often wished for, though, is a cool nickname, certainly not "Flossie" but something with that kind of oomph.

Nicknames are funny things. Sometimes they come pre-arranged. We knew from the outset, for instance, that we would call Katherine "Kate." Later, Kate informed us that she preferred "Katie," so now we call her "Kate" only when she's done something stupid - usually with an exclamation mark.

Emily is occasionally "Em" but James is always "James," never "Jim" or "Jimmy," though sometimes his mother calls him "Magoo," which is far too embarrassing for everyone involved to discuss here.

The reason for nicknames is to convey a sense of affection and familiarity, but also because speaking is hard work and short words are better. Or at least that's the only reason I can think of for the fact that some people call Abby "Ab" - like that extra syllable is just so difficult! If you're going to do that, then the trip from "Ab" to "A" is short and ridiculous.

With "Ross," there's really nowhere to go. Consequently, a small handful of people go the other way and lengthen it to "Roscoe," while others lengthen it still further to "that big jerk Ross."

My brother Andrew calls me "Rossy the Cow." He's the only one who does, and it's not something I encourage or fully understand. He started doing this in high school, and it was perhaps out of fear that it might actually stick that I attempted to self-lobby my own nickname: Moss. Moss Furry, if push came to shove.

Of course, it didn't go anywhere because a) it was cringingly stupid and b) true nicknames are organic; you can't assign them to yourself. Nicknames emerge from characteristics or circumstances and are often beyond your control. There used to be an oldtimer in Stanstead named Poopy, and I doubt very much he picked that himself. After he died, his friends installed a granite bench engraved in his memory, so next time you're in Stanstead, don't forget to sit a spell on the Poopy bench.

Now that I'm a card-carrying adult, I'm at peace with knowing I'll never have a great nickname (and let's just keep that "cow" business under our hats, shall we?). What I can do is start planning my grandpa name. I'm thinking something hip that combines my unique first name and grandfatherliness. I'm thinking "G-ross."

The Border Report

No doubt counting on attracting bargain hunters from north of the border, as well as residents of the Northeast Kingdom.

Green light for Derby Walmart

Matthew Farfan
Record Correspondent
DERBY LINE

American retail giant Walmart is one step closer to opening a big box superstore just a few kilometres south of the U.S. border in Derby, Vermont. No doubt counting on attracting bargain hunters from north of the border, as well as residents of the Northeast Kingdom fed up with having to travel all the way to New Hampshire to buy underpants and other necessities, Walmart has long been pushing to get the green light to set up a store in Derby.

Last week, news outlets across Vermont reported that Vermont Governor Peter Shumlin had just announced that an agreement had been reached whereby Walmart would be allowed to open up an outlet in Derby. The measure still would have to get state and local approval.

The store that Walmart would like to open up - a 150,000 square foot "Supercentre" - would be located on land just off Route 5 in Derby.

Up until now, the retail chain has faced stiff opposition from environmental groups and others that fear that the retailer will undercut nearby businesses and empty out downtowns.

By the terms of the deal announced last week, news outlets report, the Vermont Natural Resources Council and Preservation Trust of Vermont will drop their opposition to the project in exchange for a pledge from Walmart developer Jeff Davis not to pursue any more Walmarts in Vermont until at least 2020.

Walmart will reportedly also have to pay $800,000 to help the City of Newport and other communities in the Northeast Kingdom adapt to the effects the new store will have on local businesses and downtowns.

Fundraising quilt won by lucky library patron

Matthew Farfan

The fabulous quilt that has been on display at the Haskell Free Library and Opera House for the last few months has been won by Derby Line resident Ed Hartman, who, along with his family have been devoted patrons of the library for many years.

Each year for the past few years, the Haskell has raffled off a quilt, with all the proceeds going to support the library. From year to year, the quilts are the work of different quilters, and are donated to the library for the purpose of helping to raise some much needed funds.

This year's quilt, a queen-size one, was especially beautiful, with unusual geometric designs and splendid colours. Sewn and donated by Noreen Hinton, it was quilted by Sharron Greenwood of Scrappy Patches. Hinton's design, "Cosmic Kaleidoscope," featured a vibrant centre medallion and matching border on a deep blue star-filled background and was inspired by "Kool Kaleidoscope," by Ricky Tims, and "300 Paper Pieced Blocks," by Carol Doak.

The Haskell Free Library and Opera House is a non-profit organization that serves the communities of the Vermont-Quebec border area. The pride of Stanstead, Quebec, and Derby Line, Vermont, it was constructed deliberately on the boundary line separating Canada from the United States. Area residents rely on the library to access a range of services, materials and programs. New services and technologies are being added to support the lifelong learning experiences of local residents.

Classified a historic site by the governments of Canada, the U.S. and the province of Quebec, this remarkable institution attracts visitors from around the world. In the opera house, most of the audience sits in the U.S. to watch a show on a stage in Canada. The entrance to the library is in the U.S., the circulation desk and all of the books are in Canada, and the reading room is international.

The expenses related to operating the free public library service and to maintaining this unique heritage building are significant. Most of the Haskell's operating funds come from investment earnings. However, individual donations and fundraising projects such as the annual quilt raffle are desperately needed to supplement that income and to replenish the endowment for a sustainable future.

This year's quilt raffle, according to Haskell president Claire Roberts, raised about $1,200 for the library. Winner Ed Hartman is delighted with his prize.

Pancakes anyone?

Staff and volunteers at Sunnyside Elementary School in Stanstead served up a whole mess of pancakes, and bacon, and sausage, last weekend. Sunnyside Up, as the event was called, was a fundraiser for the school's playground renovation project. Pancake flippers were kept busy all morning last Sunday, and the event was deemed a success by all. The school playground is due to be completely rebuilt next year, but there is still quite a lot of money to be raised.

Christmas tea and sale coming up at Colby

Matthew Farfan

The much-anticipated annual Christmas tea and boutique sale at the Colby-Curtis Museum is fast approaching, and staff and volunteers at the Stanstead Historical Society are urging people to mark their calendars for this early chance to get into the holiday spirit while supporting a local cultural institution.

The tea, which will include all of the usual delicacies prepared on premises, will take place during two consecutive weeks this year. It will take place on Thursday and Friday, Nov. 21-22 (1 - 3:30 p.m.), Saturday, Nov. 23 (10 a.m. - 2 p.m.), and on Thursday and Friday the following week, Nov. 28-29 (1 - 3:30 p.m.). As this is a popular event, reservations are required.

In conjunction with the tea, the historical society is also holding its annual Christmas sale in the museum boutique. Boutique supervisor Irene Poulin and her team of volunteers have been working hard to prepare the boutique, which has been well stocked for this year's event with a wide variety of gift items, including books by local authors, cards, crafts, jewellery, holiday decorations, collectibles and antiques, and home accessories of all kinds. There is an excellent selection, and visitors are sure to find something they like.

The sale takes place on one day only, Saturday, Nov. 23, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Entry, of course, is free.

The Colby-Curtis Museum is located at 535 Dufferin in Stanstead. For reservation for the Christmas tea, call (819) 876-7322.

conditions on the various streets around town.

The first expense approved by the new council was the annual Christmas party for the town employees and councillors. This year's shindig has been budgeted at $3,000.

Council has also authorized the expenditure of $19,000 to conduct roadwork on a portion of Hackett and Young roads. That sum has been paid for through a roads grant from the province. A further $7,200 was authorized for gravel to be laid down on these same roads, while $7,900 was approved for gravel on Villeneuve and McShane roads.

The amount of $7,500 has been authorized for a study of the condition of the pedestrian bridge that crosses the Tomifobia River in downtown Rock Island near the Canada Customs. Back in the summer, someone had said that this bridge might need to be inspected a bit more closely. In October, council approved the expense of $5,000 for a study, but once the bids came in, the job was estimated at $7,500. So that amount has now been approved, and the firm of SM Inc will look at the bridge and report back to council what, if anything, needs to be done to make the structure even more secure.

Council has approved the sale to a private buyer of a portion of disused town-owned land in the Beebe sector. The price has been set at $30,000, plus notary fees. And finally, a Christmas celebration is being planned for Place Henry Seth Taylor in Rock Island. Mayor Dutil said that the event will take place on Dec. 7, and will include the unveiling of some new benches in the town square.

Canada Summer Games - Sherbrooke 2013 wins major Sustainable Development Award

Record Staff
SHERBROOKE

Organizers of the Canada Summer Games 2013, held this summer in Sherbrooke, have been given an award of excellence for its commitment to sustainable development by two of Quebec's leading tourist and events organizations.

As part of the annual Coup d'Éclat awards ceremony, the Société des Attractions Touristiques du Québec and Festivals et Événements Québec awarded one of fourteen awards to the Games' organizing in the category "Sustainable development awareness."

The evening, held to recognize the excellence of festivals, events, and attractions in Quebec, was held at the Sheraton in Laval before an audience of over 300 guests.

The organizers of Sherbrooke's 2013 Canada Summer Games were recognized for their commitment to sustainable development in both word and deed, and setting an example for other special events in the province.

The Games, the first Summer Games held in Quebec, were cited for the consistency of its efforts and initiatives and their notable success.

After being awarded the Coup de Cœur by the Estrie Regional Environmental Council, the Coup d'Éclat is the second coronation in less than a month. "This second award confirms that we have played a pioneering role, not only in our region but in Quebec," says the Games' Sustainable Development director Patrice Cordeau. If the steps we have taken here can serve as a guideline and inspiration for other festivals, events and attractions, it is Quebec that looks better."

The Canada Summer Games - Sherbrooke 2013 was the first major games event to get sustainable, equitable and carbon responsible certification. The sustainable development policy and action plan put forward by the organization made it possible to obtain a Level 1 classification from the Quebec Bureau of Standards and Enviro-Access carbon-responsible certification. The Games were also the first event ever certified "fair" by Fairtrade Canada.

This past weekend, the Varsity boys team went to Providence. They lost 4-3 and 3-1 to the Northwood School team. Coaches are pleased with progress and effort on the part of the boys. "Our goaltending was excellent," said coach James Rioux. The girls were in Boston, and lost all four games played, but they are optimistic, heading into the weekend. The girls will host the NAPHA league play all weekend at the Pat Burns Arena. The varsity boys will play this weekend in Vermont for the MPHL kick-off weekend. The Junior Varsity boys will play this weekend at Massey Vanier in the Nicholas James Gilkinson Memorial Tournament. The player in the above photo is Troy Linderson.

Pair of losses sends Champlain Cougars out of national hockey rankings

By John Edwards
Special to The Record
SHERBROOKE

The Champlain Cougars men's hockey team fell out of the Canadian Junior Hockey League's weekly rankings after a split of their two games last weekend. The Cougars, who had been ranked No. 20, last week, fell 6-5 at La Tuque on Friday and suffered an 8-2 home loss to the St. Jérôme Panteres on Sunday.

The two losses dropped the Cougars to 17-4-2 on the year, and they now sit in a tie with St. Jérôme for second overall in the Quebec Junior AAA Hockey League with 36 points. The Princeville Titan hold down first spot with an 18-3-3 record. Princeville moved into the No. 20 ranking that had been held by the Cougars.

Friday's game saw the Cougars take a 4-1 first-period lead, on goals by Raphael Lacerte, Anthony Nellis, Dwayne Bradley-Tessier and Jérémy Brown, only to see it slip away as La Tuque scored three unanswered goals to tie the game at 4. Brown's second of the game, at 7:36 of the third, gave the Cougars back the lead, but Antoine Masson forced overtime for the Loups as he scored with only 17 seconds left in regulation time. Masson then scored at 1:31 into the extra period to give La Tuque the come-from-behind win. Shawn Leclerc made 21 saves for the Cougars in taking the overtime loss, while Charles-Étienne Martin had 37 saves to pick up the win.

On Sunday, St. Jérôme scored early and often as the Cougars fell to their worst loss of the year. The Panteres scored 19 seconds into the game, and led 4-0 after the first period. By the time Janick Asselin put Champlain on the board at 13:37 of the second, it was already 6-0. Cédric Montminy had the other Cougars goal. Alex Leclerc started in goal, but was chased after allowing four goals on 11 shots in the first period. Ouellet made 20 saves in the final 40 minutes.

This week, the Cougars have a pair of road games, both against the Vaudreuil-Dorion Mustangs. Champlain heads up to Vaudreuil on Friday at 8 p.m., with the second game of the series set for Sunday at 3 p.m. The Mustangs (8-15-1) have struggled so far this year, and come into the weekend on a three-game losing streak, and winners of only one of their past six.

The Cougars return home on Sunday, Nov. 24, when they play Ste-Agathe at the Thibault GM Complex.

Geraldine Sylvia (Jennie) (née Hatch) CHILVERS
December 15, 1926 - November 11, 2013

Passed away peacefully at the Montfort Hospital, Ottawa, the evening of November 11, 2013, lovingly surrounded by family.

Predeceased by her parents Charles and Eliza (nee Wimshurst) Hatch, her siblings and husband Reginald, whom she joins in rest.

She is survived by her children Ann Principe (Tony), Sandra Fauteux (Guy), Deborah McQuarrie (Derick) and Brian (Caroline), nine grandchildren: David, Rosalyn Price (Cullen) and Andrea Principe, Steven and Jasen Fauteux, Rod, Sarah Vining (Ian), Sean McQuarrie and Scotty (her feline grandchild), and five great-grandchildren: Willem and Aiden Vining, Olivia Fauteux, and Chloe and Owen Price.

Called Jennie by all who knew her, she was an avid golfer for many years. She loved sewing, a good hotdog, cooking shows and music. She remained sharp as a tack to her final days, amazing many. Jennie could be pretty sneaky about slipping cash to her protesting grandchildren "to get a little treat". Any card Jennie chose to sign her name to was guaranteed to be spectacularly "mushy". She meant every word.

Family and friends may pay their respects at Cass Funeral Home, 3006 College Street, Lennoxville, QC J1M 1T9 on Saturday, November 16, 2013 after 1:30 p.m. followed by a Celebration of Life in the chapel at 2 p.m. Interment to follow at Elmwood Cemetery.

For those wishing, in lieu of flowers, donations to the Montfort Hospital, 713 Montreal Road, Ottawa, ON, K1A 0S2 are appreciated.

Cecil BLENKHORN

After 86 years of a rich and full life, Cecil Blenkhorn began his journey to be with the Lord on Saturday, November 9, 2013. Surrounded by his loving family, he said his last words and bid Adieu, leaving the world peacefully and with the knowledge that God had a place for him in heaven.

Cecil Blenkhorn, known by some as "Cec" and other as "Chum" was a loving Father and will be remembered by so many for different things: As a wonderful husband of Betty, as the "best Daddy in the whole wide world" to his children, as a loving grandfather and great-grandfather, as a committed employee of Ingersoll Rand, an active member of the Snow Shoe Club, as well as for his friendships, sense of humor, love of music, published articles and poems, volunteering, generosity to God's mission and those in need, and for his (ever) humble spirit.

He will always be recognized by his love of gardening, flowers and growing luscious berries that so many enjoyed over the years. His speeches, singing, and his banging foot when dancing, will always be heard. His contribution to his community will not be forgotten.

Cecil, son of Gesner and Clara Blenkhorn and stepson of Daisy Blenkhorn, loving husband of Betty Jean Blenkhorn (Nee Bockus) is survived by his only sister Kathleen Ferraro (Pat) of Pasadena, California. He is also survived by his children and their spouses: Fay Ona, Holly Jean and John Heffernan, Lynn Ellen and Alexander Koukoulas, Dale Ann and Brian Graham, Cheryl Lee and David English, Tamara Jane and Adam Jasek, and Gesner John and Marie-Josée Boissonnault; and his grandchildren: T'Challa, Timothy, Kathleen, Brendan, MarcAnthony, Sophia, Kyle, Jennifer, Paul, Jennifer, Andrew, Jonathan, Alexandra, Joshua, Frédérick, Catherine, Thomas; and great grandchildren: Selyna, Mya, Daisy, Clarence, Presley, Gaspar, Gaby, Jacob, Karl and Hannah; and nieces, nephews and special friends.

The family also wishes to thank Dr. Marc Bezéau for 30 great years together, the staff at Hotel Dieu and La Maison Aube Lumiere for their warm care, and Bobby Flock for all his help over the years. And to all the good friends Cecil had over his lifetime and the warm relations and fun they shared with him, the family is grateful.

From Iron Hill, Pointe-St-Charles, Chateauguay to Sherbrooke, he touched the hearts and minds of so many. His loving memory will live on in our hearts forever.

As Cecil would say anytime of day ... "Good Morning".

Resting at the Cass Funeral Home, 3006 College St. Sherbrooke (Lennoxville), on Saturday, November 16 from 7 to 10 p.m. and on Sunday, November 17 from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. followed by the funeral service at 2 p.m. in the funeral home chapel. Pastor Steven Black officiating.

In lieu of flowers, the family is requesting that donations be made to:

Scott Woods Country Christmas in Richmond

Renowned Canadian Fiddler Scott Woods and his band will be pulling into Richmond to deliver a live presentation of their brand new 2013 Christmas show called Scott Woods Country Christmas.

The two-hour masterful performance features old time fiddle & country music, seasonal songs, inspirational stories, sensational step dancing, trick fiddling and more. The fast paced and uplifting show will delight audiences of all ages. The Show also includes special appearances by 13 year-old step dancing sensation Amanda MacInnis and Guitar Virtuoso Steve Pitocco.

Scott Woods is a multiple Canadian Open and Canadian Grand Master Fiddle Champion. He is known affectionately throughout Canada as "The Flippin' Fiddler" - a nickname earned as a result of a running somersault he does while playing the fiddle without missing a beat. The Scott Woods Band travels across Canada each year performing up to 150 concerts, almost all of which help support churches, charities and other community groups.

Scott Woods Country Christmas will take place at Richmond Regional High School on November 27, 2013 at 7 p.m. and proceeds from this show will help to support: Malvern Cemetery, Lennoxville; Melbourne Ridge Cemetery and CAB Rediker Volunteer Centre, Stanstead.

For tickets and info call 819-826-5883.
