1st Point.

When you are ready to purchase your Spring CLOTHING, patronize an old and reliable house; one that is abreast of the times and that carries large stocks, so that you may have a varied assortment to select from.

2nd Point.

Don't go to a Dry Goods House for your clothing if you want the latest styles in material and cut. It stands to reason that a tailor who devotes his entire attention to one special branch, can serve you better than a dry goods man who knows nothing about tailoring.

3rd Point.

We are men tailors, everyone in connection with our establishment are practical men of wide experience in the trade.

4th Point.

ANOTHER WARNING TO FOOLISH YOUNG WOMEN.
TORONTO, March 8.—Harry Webster, a young man, the boarding-house thief, arrested yesterday, was about to marry the young girl, Rose Manning, turns out to be a notorious fellow. He has been in the Central Prison, being convicted in London in September, 1888, for bringing into Canada from Port Huron, Mich., the proceeds of a big jewelry robbery. He then gave his name as Harry Simon, but was recognized at the prison as William Waters, alias Harry London, under which name he has twice spent terms in the Central Prison. Simonson is a married man, and when he was sent to prison in London, his wife wandered round till she was sent to the Mercer Reformatory for six months as a vagrant.

LITERARY REVIEW.

CANADIAN POETRY.

Gentleman Dick o' the Greys and other Poems, by Hereward K. Cockin (C. Blackett Robinson, Toronto), is dedicated to Prof. Goldwin Smith as an Imperial Unionist's honest tribute of respect for an eminent and fearless publicist. It contains nearly seventy-five poems, all short, and many of them humorous in character. The cynical vein predominates, but there is much simple pathos. Here is one badly out of measure, entitled "Killed in the Straight":

Only a jockey, awaiting the solemn hereafter,
Only a crushed form lay bleeding, insensate there,
Unchecked for a moment the boisterous laughter
Or the curses that rang o'er the keen autumn air.

Not a sigh, nor an accent of ruth had they for him,
Done to death for their pleasure on that ill-fated day.
Not a bet was delayed, as the ambulance bore him,
For why should they fret o'er the insensate lay?

'Tis the way of the world, little pity has fashion
For the innocent cause of its momentary gloom.
Aye! pity is silent, and none hath compassion
Save the jockey lad's mother who weeps o'er his tomb.

"In Memoriam." Dean Grassett, is one of the best of the religious poems, part of it is as follows:

Departed rest ere the bright day's dawning
Had crimsoned the west with its bright saffron'd blush,
With loved ones beholding his manhood resigning
His exquisite beauty in death's pallid flush.

But the pale horse's rider of dread o'erthrew him
(The fathers in Israel are strangers to fear).
He knew 'twas the Master at eventide called him
Away from the tolls of his pilgrimage here.

His gone from our midst, but a halo still lingers,
Enriching his name with consistency's light.
His life and example, like bright angel's fingers,
Are pointing to regions where day has no night.

O soldier of Christ, ne'er thy worth shall we know here,
Extending each cross but a labor of love.
Till one day, though one less in the army below here,
One more is enrolled in the legions above.

Humor is much injured by ignorance in a number of rhymes, whose whole tone implies that religious and temperance men are fools and hypocrites and that missionary societies devote themselves to such work as sending ships to Labrador laden with "drab gauds," mosquito nets, fans and other Arctic gear.

The poem from which the volume takes its name has a very martial ring. "Gentleman Dick o' the Greys" was "a real and true," but fretted and chafed at barrack room life and felt "the woe of a life under martinet's frown." The story is soon told:

Have showed the "black heart" in a thousand of ways,
Ay, he made life a hell to the men of the Greys,
Till one day in the stables our captain, our foe,
Tossed poor Dick, and Dick answered a blow;

But the wrath that felled Hayne to the ground with a crash,
Doomed "Gentleman Dick o' the Greys" to the lash.
He deserted and in the course of time
The Greys were taken to the Crimea, and in the thick
Of a fierce fight the narrator says:

Three Russians best me; at last I fought free,
And much of my charge, and turned, God to me
A Vladimir heroism charge Buldostoff Hayne,
And midst the infuriate yell of the Greys,
Deliver out six—and Hayne dropped from his horse,
And his curse written lips were the lips of a horse.

One prick of the spur in the flank of the grey,
Three bounds, and I held the three Russians at bay,
And crash! at their trumpet sounded the "wheel,"
From his skull to his teeth it had crumpled the steel.

As the sub-deft helmet discovered his face,
As he fell from his charger in death, I had space
For a glance—Oh, my God! at those wild staring eyes,
For one look at those features upturned to the skies,
And I reeled in the saddle, my brain all a shiver,
For the dead man was "Gentleman Dick" o' the Greys.

CHLOE LANKTON.

A book which delighted young and old thirty years ago and which has been in such constant demand ever since as to wear out the stereotype plates, has just been republished by the American Sunday-school Union, Philadelphia. It is the life of Chloe Lankton, by Harriet G. Atwell, and tells the story of a woman who has been for more than thirty years an invalid, confined to bed and suffering from a torturing disease, yet sustained by the grace of God and sending forth, from the little room among the hills of Connecticut a light which has shone into many homes and hearts.

Chloe Lankton is now seventy-seven years old, and her simple story teaches many useful lessons. It is a good book for the home and the Sunday-school.

MISSIONS A SUCCESS.

The Baker Tinsley Company, New York, publishes a timely volume entitled The Great Value and Success of Foreign Missions Proved by Distinguished Witnesses. In it the Rev. John Liggins, author of "England's Opium Policy," quotes the testimony of diplomats, consuls, naval officers, and scientific and other travelers in heathen and Mohammedan countries as to the efficiency of foreign missions, as well as that of English viceroys and governors in India and the colonies. Mr. Liggins gives, besides, leading facts and recent statistics of missions with a convenient index. Dr. Pierson writes an introduction to the book, and a careful reader, no matter with what prejudice he commences the perusal, will be likely to agree with Archbishop Farrar, who says: "So far from having failed, there is no work of God which has received so absolute, so unprecedented a blessing. To talk of missionaries as a failure is to talk at once like an ignorant and like a faithless man."

DR. PIERSON'S MAGAZINE.

The question is often asked, "Which is the best missionary magazine for stirring up an interest in missions?" While the monthlies published by the various mission boards give current information concerning the missionaries they send out, which is of great interest to those who are supporting these missions, there is one magazine, which, besides giving current intelligence, gives a great deal of attention to the literature of missions, and has most fascinating articles giving the history of the work in different places from its commencement, besides discussions on various interesting topics. This magazine is The Missionary Review of the World, edited by Dr. Pierson, of Philadelphia, and Dr. Sherwood, of New York, and published by Funk & Wagnalls, New York, for $2.00 a year.

In the March number Dr. Sherwood treats of "The City as a Factor in the World's Evangelization," and Dr. Pierson tells of "A Wonderful Work in the West Indies," an article of intense interest, while there are many other papers of importance.

TEMPERANCE.

The Prohibition Melodist is a new temperance song book (John J. Hood, Philadelphia), edited by John R. Sweeney and Wm. J. Kirkpatrick which is likely to prove an efficient aid in temperance work. When the boys of a country sing to the tune of "Rally Round the Flag" such words as the following may be sure that when they come to men's estate they will not vote for license:

We are standing by the Home,
We are standing by the Right,
Shouting the cry of Prohibition,
We hail the day when we shall win.

And we're ready for the fight,
Shouting the cry of Prohibition.
Chorus.

Our country forever,
Hurray, boys, hurrah;
Down with the wine cup,
Up with the cross;

While we rally round our cause,
Boys, rally once again,
Shouting the cry of Prohibition.

A pretty temperance cantata, "The Water Fairies," is given at the end of the volume.

CANOE AND BOAT SAILING.

It is one of the merits of the pastime that not only is amateur sailing a present pleasure and a form of physical exercise, but it has a tendency to create in its votaries a strong and abiding interest in all that concerns the designing and building of sailing craft. So strong is this tendency that there are but few good amateur sailors who are not to a certain extent students of the science of marine architecture and amateur boat builders and riggers, at least in desire. This is particularly the case in that large and growing division of the army of amateur sailors, who use the smaller sort of sailing craft. It is of some importance that this thirst for knowledge should be slaked at a fountain of pure information, as the amateur sailor who knows what his canoe, boat, or yacht should be is much less likely to sail in a death trap than the one whose knowledge is of the "custom of the waters" and "rule of thumb" type. Canoe and Boat Building, by Mr. W. P. Stephens, the yachting and canoe editor of Forest and Stream, is an unpretentious little volume, written to supply this very craving for information about their craft on the part of canoe and boat sailors. It has already run through three editions, and the fourth edition, revised and much enlarged, has recently been issued. Mr. Stephens essays the difficult task of describing to amateurs with no technical knowledge the mysteries of boat building and designing, and he has succeeded, not only because of his great knowledge of his subject, but because as an amateur who has become an expert he has a personal knowledge of the needs, desires and difficulties of those for whom he writes. The descriptions of methods and processes are lucid, and are marked by practical good sense. The most valuable portion of the work to the amateur sailor, who does not aim at building his own boat, is the information which it furnishes as to the different varieties of boats and canoes in use by amateurs on this continent. The descriptions of boats and canoes given is not abstract but concrete, every boat or canoe mentioned having made its mark either as a cruiser or a racer. This section of the work is illustrated by fifty practical working plates of racing and cruising canoes and boats, their fittings and rigs. (Forest and Stream Pub. Co., $2.)

OTHER PUBLICATIONS.

The Bible Searching Almanack is an ingenious publication arranged for the purpose of promoting Bible study. It has a verse for every day of the year, with a blank space to record the place where the passage is to be found. The texts are classified under different headings, and marginal references are to be used, not by concordance. It has become a very popular method for Bible study in England, where the various members of families, classes and societies vie with each other in seeking to fill the blanks correctly. The circulation is 60,000. Mr. F. E. Grafton has it for sale.

The Christian Advocate, of Tokyo, Japan, is a sixteen page, double column paper, with two pages in English and the remainder in Japanese. Of its merits we cannot speak intelligently, but it looks decidedly interesting. It is edited by the Rev. C. S. Eby, and is published fortnightly, by H. W. Swartz, M.D.

Scriver's Monthly has a powerful story entitled "An Eye for an Eye," by Mr. Robert Grant, and a serial by Robert Louis Stevenson. There are also illustrated articles on "A Railway Mail Service," and "A German Romance." Harper's Monthly has a thirty page paper containing "Comments on Canada," by Charles Dudley Warner. The frontispiece is Sir John Macdonald. George William Curtis writes on "Motley's Letters."

NEW PROTESTANT SCHOOL.

ON THE EDGE OF PITCHER'S FIELD.

The Protestant Commissioners' new school on Upper St. Urbain street—above the Hotel Des—now being completed. It has a solid brick and stone foundation. It is a four room school, but can be extended to eight or twelve rooms. It is heated and ventilated by the celebrated "Reed-Down" system and finished with hardwood floors and ceilings. Rooms for the janitor are provided in the attic. It is built after the style of the Victoria and Royal Arthur, and costs about $12,000 to $15,000. It is expected to be opened after the Easter holidays.

The situation of the whole neighborhood is magnificent, facing the beautiful slope of the mountain and Pitcher's field. This part of the city has suffered in reputation from the lack of drainage and water until very recently. It is generally expected that a fine broad avenue will be opened on this side of the park, which may induce capitalists to build some handsome private residences to face the park.

The Hon. Geo. A. Drummond, Mr. W. A. Scott, Mr. M. Parker and Mr. J. Widmer Nelles, have lately acquired some large lots there, and the latter has already commenced the erection of two very pretty medium size houses.

TREE-SLAUGHTER.

THE HON. MR. JOLY'S ADVICE TO CANADIANS.

A GREAT OPPORTUNITY FOR THE GOVERNMENT IN THE NORTH-WEST.

A subject of national and urgent importance and a man most highly qualified to deal with it—the combination is rare enough. The Hon. H. G. Joly de Lotbiniere's Somerville lecture on "The Forestry of Canada" should be read with more than passing interest, and should be taken to heart by every Canadian.

Forestry, Mr. Joly said, was one of those subjects which did not awaken the interest it deserved in Canada. Probably not one man in twenty in Montreal had ever seen a real Canadian forest, or had any adequate conception of what such a thing really was. This was regarded in Europe as the land of forests, and they should feel proud of the natural advantages which Providence had bestowed upon them in this respect. Two hundred years ago, under the old French regime, the attention of the Government was called to the state of the forests in the neighborhood of Quebec. He pointed to the comparative absence of trees in the North-West of Canada, and strongly associated the systematic cultivation of new ones by Government aid. The white pine, the treasure of our forests, was fast disappearing and deteriorating in quality, while such year they had no other source to draw upon. He laid down as an admitted fact that the presence or absence of forest land influences very largely the water-courses.

There was a very unreasoning prejudice against forestry, Mr. Joly went on to say, even among lumbermen, who supposed that it meant the stoppage of their trade. The timber trade of the country, whereas, the contrary was the case. He held the true meaning of forestry to be the cutting down of trees on a judicious and systematic plan, for proper reason, so as to promote the growth of their fellows, by which means they could CONTINUE TO ENJOY FOREVER.

The advantages to be derived from forests, instead of precipitately exhausting their sources of supply, were pointed out by Mr. Joly. The Crown, under an ancient deed of conveyance, and he felt that they must look to the Government to be careful in their preservation and management of this valuable resource. They were certainly far from doing all that they ought to do; but, at the same time, there were some good and hopeful features about their administration.

He warmly approved the amended Dominion Act of 1883, by which the Governor-General was entrusted with large powers of maintenance of the forest lands of the Rocky Mountains, and urged the more general application of the spirit and intention of this law to all the disforested lands of Canada. He quoted the opinion of one of our noblest statesmen, the Hon. Mr. Cartwright, who admitted that though our methods in this respect were crude and undisciplined they strongly upheld the fact of the title of ownership being really vested in the Crown instead of being sold outright to the purchasers of timber limits. This, he urged, should teach them that there was still time to profit by the hard-earned experience of the past.

Giving a number of practical suggestions for the guidance of those having authority over the forest lands of Canada, Mr. Joly strongly urged that there should first of all be a rigid classification of lands, showing the difference between agricultural and non-agricultural lands, or arable lands and those only fit for the growth of lumber, and, amid loud applause, declared it to be a

MOST REFINED SERIES OF CARELITY to force the poor unfortunate settlers to take up land which was wholly unfitted for agriculture. Next, he held it to be wrong to force the timber limits on the market, saying he never saw advertised the sale of those limits over thousands and thousands of miles of country without feeling sorry; then he urged the restriction of the size of timber, the discontinuance of the manufacture of square timber, and the resistance to the strong effort being made to remove the export duty on logs. His final point was the preservation of our forests from fires, and he was glad that the Governments both of Quebec and Ontario were disposed to enforce this latter by calling on the limit-holders to contribute one per cent of the cost of maintaining a thoroughly efficient means of protection. In Canada they unfortunately possessed no school of forestry, and he knew not when they would get one; but it was a healthy sign of the times that the era was now past when the settler regarded the lumber on his holding as his worst enemy. He was no longer obliged to sacrifice it to the flames; but now that the railway system carried the iron road to some of the remotest corners of the Dominion he was able to dispose of his lumber to more pecuniary advantage.

As to the creation of new forests, it was principally in the North-West that we wanted them. Throwing out some valuable hints as to the means to be taken to re-afforest the country, Mr. Joly urged the cultivation of such trees as

THE AM-LEAF MAPLE, which gave almost as large a percentage of sugar as sap-maple itself, and the black walnut, which was even more valuable than mahogany. This latter required a better quality of ground than ordinary timber, but there were vast tracts of virgin soil, never broken by the plough, which could be utilized for this purpose. The Government, he urged, should make the most liberal experiments with the view of securing the very best results for the different localities of Canada and said this could be done at a very little expense. The whole machinery was practically at hand, as the Government had a staff of mounted police at various points along the prairie which could be made into depots. If only now in the Province of Quebec, after all the neglect and spoliation, the vast areas of former forest land were to be properly kept from the ravages of the cattle, it would do much towards reforestation. In conclusion, he spoke of the importance of the advantages already derivable from the institution of Arbor Day; and above all urged the duty of instituting a thorough system of education on this subject in all the schools of the Dominion, so that the young and rising generation might be drilled in a course of moral and mental gymnastics, teaching them all that was to be taught in connection with tree planting, and giving them practical lessons upon it, besides inculcating the great moral truth contained in the lesson of not living selfishly for themselves alone, but for the benefit of the generations that were to follow.

A PROPOSED PRESS CLUB.

At the recent annual dinner of the Press Association of the Province the question of organizing a press club in Montreal was discussed, and the suggestion was very favorably received by those present. In order that the scheme may be put into practical shape, a meeting of gentlemen connected with the press of the city is called, to be held at the Gazette Office on Tuesday afternoon at half-past four. All interested in the matter are cordially invited to attend.

THE BUILDING SEASON.

Any amount of small and moderate sized properties are reported by the City Registrar as changing hands in the Antoine Ward. Contractors, however, do not expect a building boom this year owing to the price of labor. One gentleman, in fact, who was building about a house, even after the specifications were prepared decided to discontinue, owing to the high wages.

CITY ITEMS.

About seventy-five of the St. Gabriel Church young people had a sing day on Thursday at Mr. Henderson's at Petite Côte, and were received with characteristic hospitality.

The Celtic Society met on Thursday, the Rev. Dr. McNish, president, in the chair. An interesting paper on "Scottish Wit and Humor" was read by Mr. Campbell, of Cornwall, and one on the Celtic Society of Inverness, by Mr. McNish.

Mr. Rousseau has a new invention at work for the Road Department in the shape of a large wheel and snow ice plough, which draws four horses, cuts up the ice roadways "in 40 minutes." One plough, in fact, does the work of 40 men.

CHARGE OF BIGAMY.

SINGULAR PROCEEDINGS IN A SHERBROOKE COURT—TWO HUSBANDS CLAIM ONE WIFE.

(Special to the Witness.)

SHERBROOKE, March 7.—Before Messrs. A. G. Woodward and J. Wood, Justices of the Peace, the case of John Farrington vs. Marie Louise Flette came up. The defendant, Marie Louise Flette, is a French Canadian, thirty-five summers. John Farrington comes into court and reluctantly deposes that Marie Louise and he were joined in holy wedlock at Portland, Me., about two years ago and since then have lived together as man and wife. They both landed in Sherbrooke the other day, when John made the discovery that his Marie Louise is another man's wife. He draws his grief in the bar-room close by. Full of his affliction and of rum he wanders into the presence of a local J. P., and to him pours forth the story. A warrant is issued and Marie Louise is lodged in Sherbrooke gaol. John now swears he knew nothing about the complaint he made until the following morning, and winds up his deposition by imploring the Court to allow him to withdraw the charge.

The other husband's name is Bartholomew Burton. He also appears in court and swears that he was married to Marie Louise at St. Apollinaire fourteen years ago. They were an ungenerous mismatched couple, so three years later Mrs. Burton left her domicile and since then he had not laid eyes on her until he saw her this day in court. He now thinks her more congenial and is engaged in the task of looking up bail, having been committed to gaol for taking her trial at the next session of the Court of Queen's Bench in October next, unless bail is given, heretofore in the sum of $500 and two sureties in the sum of $250 each. He has with him $100, so finds himself a little short. Husband No. 2, although committed to gaol to be held as a witness, still loves his Marie Louise, and, not to be outdone in magnanimity by No. 1, pretains to love her as much as his undying attachment to her. Come what may, for better or for worse, he will share her fate. Born to be together; until the trial they are kept apart, and the other husband's hospitality of Castle Road—unless in the meantime they are bailed out. Mr. J. S. Broderick is counsel for the defence.

A BAZAAR recently held at St. Jerome for the benefit of the local hospital, realized the comparatively large sum of $1,890.

A Sketch by our Special Artist Always on the Spot

BISHOP FULFORD COMPLIMENTED.

The following anecdote is not generally known by the friends of the late Metropolitan Bishop Fulford, of Montreal. It was one of his Lordship's many pleasing traits to express his ideas in a simple comprehensive manner. On one occasion when paying to a country congregation, an old Irish woman sent because so much interested with the sermon she decided to inform his Lordship how much she appreciated it. Immediately after service, she said to the Bishop and spoke as follows: "O Bhrú, ny tóir leap, it's many a day since I heerd the likes o' your sermon; there was nather a word of gran'n nor country in it at all, yer reverence." His Lordship paused a moment before answering, to comprehend old lady's meaning, and on doing so, a smiling lighted his grave face while shaking her wrinkled hand, he replied, "I am glad you liked it."

A TRINITY OF EVILS—Biliousness, constipation and dyspepsia usually attack together. By discharging the liver and toning the stomach simultaneously, they are eradicated. The promptitude and thoroughness with which Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Deobacator and great blood purifier removes this triad of physical evils is a fact widely appreciated throughout Canada.
