BRITON BEATS EDERLE TIME IN CHANNEL SWIM

"I WILL WIN," CRIES ENGLISH VICTOR AS THE COAST IS SEEN

London, Sept. 17 — (Universal Service) — For the first time in 15 years, an Englishman swam the Channel today. The victor was Leslie Derham of South End, whose time of 13 hours and 55 minutes is slower than that of the German, Vierkoetter, and the Frenchman, Ederle, but ahead of all others, in the Ederle.

Derham beat Ederle's time. Derham's prize of $5,000 offered by Lord Riddell to the first English swimmer, man or woman, was won by the Ederle record. Derham swam strongly when he caught his first glimpse of the English coast, tore off his goggles and shouted, "I will win." He announced he would try to break the record for the Channel swim by starting from the English side next year.

MEXICO ROUSED OVER SLAYING OF J. ROSENTHAL

Mexico City, Sept. 17 — (Universal Service) — The entire population of this capital, natives and foreigners are aroused over the killing of Jacob Rosenthal, New York business man, by bandits on the very outskirts of the city, after his having been kidnapped in broad day light on a main highway. One paper, the Universal, said editorially:—

"The Mexican people are outraged by the infamous crime and the bandits, stupidity in affronting the nation by retarding the work of civilization and culture."

Three of the kidnapers of Rosenthal were killed by Federal troops when the New Yorker was slain, and three suspects are now being held.

The dead kidnapers include—Former General Bonifacio Hinojosa of the Zapata forces, former Mayor of the Village of Huiztilac, near the scene of the hold up, and Miguel Garcia, warden of the jail in the same village.

Dr. J. J. Guerin, 77, died at his home in Montreal, Sept. 17.

CABINET PLACE MAY BE MADE FOR MRS. CLORAN

Ottawa, Sept. 17 — (By Staff Correspondent) — As the smoke of battle clears, there is revealed an increasing number of followers of both major parties reaching the capital, some for the gloomy post-mortem and others for jubilation and a glance at their chances for preferment. In addition, of course, have come members of the Meighen ministry and members of the former King government on the urgent business of the transfer of the reins of power.

Even those intimate with Mr. Meighen's mind are not sure what course he will pursue. Some assert that he will as promptly drop the leadership of his party as he relinquishes the reins of government next Monday, making it necessary to name a temporary leader — probably Sir Henry Drayton — until a canvas of elected members just prior to the next session. Others are convinced that he will show his usual tenacity and retain the leadership.

Another name mentioned locally is that of Mrs. H. J. Cloran, president of the Ottawa Liberal Women's Club, and also member of the Catholic Women's League of Canada. She is the wife of Senator Cloran of this city.

The difficulty for the new prime minister will be to form a ministry by the process of elimination and selection from the embarrassing numbers to be considered.

The Maritime provinces will get their quota of three — one from each — with Paul Hatfield as the probable choice for Nova Scotia; Quebec will have its four and Ontario its three, but there will have to be a re-appointment of Western representation, now that Manitoba presents a solid front against the opposition. In the last Parliament Saskatchewan had three Cabinet members — the Prime Minister, Hon. Charles A. Dunning, and Hon. W. R. Motherwell — but there is likely to be a reduction to two, to make way for Manitoba, which will involve the appointment of Hon. Mr. Motherwell to the lieutenant-governorship of the province.

In Manitoba there are two probable choices J. T. Thorson of Winnipeg South Centre and Robert Forke, former Progressive leader.

When the Montreal radio show opens at the Windsor hotel on Oct. 4, there will be provision for a great number of visitors. In addition, contests of various kinds will be open to the public. A large number of exhibits, in the smallest form of receiver to the largest, will be on display.

WOMAN MEETS DEATH IN MOTORCYCLE CRASH

Hurled through the air in a semi-circle from the carrier of her husband's motorcycle to light on her head on the pavement, Mrs. Evonne Auger, aged 28, 1272 St. Denis Street, was instantly killed in front of 824 Gouin Blvd., last night.

Charlamagne Auger, the husband, was proceeding east on the boulevard with his wife, when 15-year-old Gerard Tremblay on a bicycle started to make a left hand turn down a side street.

As the boy turned, Auger swung to the left to avoid hitting him. The wheels of his machine hit the curb on the opposite side of the street. The cycle turned turtle.

SHOOTING CASE DECREASED TO SIMPLE ASSAULT

Buckets of beer, pools of blood, floods of invective, tides of testimony, and as a result Stanley Langoussi is awaiting sentence for simple assault.

He was found guilty in Court of King's Bench yesterday after a jury had deliberated for less than half an hour.

The evidence was that Langoussi tried to shoot Jimmy Cadieux in the latter's admitted blind pig at 5 Craig Street East on June 2.

Cadieux told his story. He said the accused came in, imbibed ten quarts of beer, and then tried to shoo away his lady friend. Cadieux apparently interfered, and Langoussi is said to have taken a couple of shots at Cadieux. The only damage done was to a door. Then Cadieux, wielding a bottle, broke Langoussi's nose and inflicted other injuries which laid the accused in hospital for some days.

After a day and a half before Justice Walsh, during which Greek, English, French and decidedly broken English were spoken, the jury decided that Langoussi was not guilty of attempted murder, the charge laid, but of simple assault. He will be sentenced at the end of the term.

FAITHFUL ANSWER SACRED CALL OF YOM KIPPUR AS FASTING AND PRAYER CLEANSE SOUL'S SINS

By M. KRUSHEN

Sixty thousand members of the Jewish race stood reverently silent, heads bowed in penitence, as the majestic strains of Kol Nidre last night ushered in the holiest of Hebrew holy days.

Every synagogue in Montreal was filled with men and women and children—some eager, others pathetic. And as the chant rose higher and higher, the sweetly-solemn, awe-inspiring charm of the music seemed to penetrate the innermost depths of the worshippers as they faithfully promised themselves, and the Benign Creator, to "sin no more" if they thought they had sinned before.

Last night, just as the final lingering ray of light disappeared the face of this huge rolling bundle of loves and hates, and feelings that we call our World, about fifteen million of the faith of Israel gathered in synagogues, in every corner of the universe, to do penance.

On this Day of Atonement, which ends tonight, Jews in every part of the world are giving balm to their wounded souls by fasting and prayer, just as their fathers have done for over 5,000 years before them. Today no Jew may either drink or eat, nor must nourishment of any substance or character pass his lips. Orthodox Jews hold that it is not even permissible to wash except the eyes and hands. Nor is considered correct, according to the orthodox law, to walk very far.

From sundown yesterday until tonight, no place of business in any part of the world, operated by a Jew, is open. Important business sections in the largest commercial centres of the world are deserted and forsaken.

This is the toll exacted by Yom Kippur, the day which marks the climax of ten days of penitence, commencing with Rosh Hashana, the New Year. It is the One Day which sends a powerful, harmonious chord of strong friendship through the many millions of a race scattered far over the face of the globe.

STUCK ON RAINY DAY? THEN TRY TRAMWAYS LOST PROPERTY OFFICE

By VAN ROBERTS

Books, umbrellas, coats, vanity cases, handkerchiefs, earrings, and pipes, these are only a few of the hundreds of articles left on the street cars by careless passengers.

The lost property department of the Montreal Tramways Company is besieged from morning to night by people looking for lost articles.

Old ladies who have left their spectacles, irate fathers come to collect the parcel dropped by little Jimmy, or girls of the flapper age looking for a lost vanity case.

These and many others flock to the little wicket in the Terminal Building on Craig street, and eagerly try to describe what they are looking for to the clerks in charge.

Each face is a study in expression, hope or despair, joy, anger and disbelief being only a few of the emotions registered on the faces constantly coming and going to the office.

When an article is found on a street car it is promptly sent to the lost property department, where it is neatly tagged and put away to await the coming of the owner. The interior of this department reminds one more than anything of a particularly tidy and well arranged second-hand shop.

It is amazing to think that anyone could forget a vacuum cleaner weighing about 25 pounds, or a bundle of clothes evidently destined for the laundryman, but these and many other astounding things have been found in street cars.

A typical month's find of the tramways company consists of 214 umbrellas, 164 parcels of clothes, 91 purses or bags, 58 pieces of jewelry, 15 coats, 72 valises, 47 books, and dozens of other articles classified as sundries.

The department is one of the busiest in the company, for all the articles have to be filed and catalogued, telephone calls attended to, and above all, angry and disappointed people looked after with patience and civility.

SON OF CHIEF SLAYS FATHER WITH AXE BLOW

Charlottetown, P. E. I., Sept. 17.—(Daily World Dispatch)—A tragedy was enacted at Lennox Island the Indian reservation in the western part of the Province, when Anthony Mitchell, an Indian between 50 and 55 years old, was attacked with an axe which inflicted a wound in his head causing instant death.

Hamilton, Sept. 17.—(Daily World Dispatch)—To be attacked, robbed and then thrown over a 12-foot wall was the experience of Patrick Garrity, who was admitted to St. Joseph's hospital suffering from a broken knee-cap and injuries to his shoulder. ### SECURED MONEY BY NOVEL SCHEME

St. Catharines, Sept. 17.—(Daily World Dispatch)—Accused of a curious method of defrauding people, Arthur Golsborough, aged 20, of Stamford township was handed over to the county police. It is alleged that the youth has been through Lincoln county collecting money unauthorized for the Protestant orphanage, a private institution of St. Catharines. ### AVERAGE LIFE SPAN LONGER SAYS DR. MAYO

Fort William, Sept. 17.—(Daily World Dispatch)—That medical science is able to raise the average age of life of a human being to 70 from 58, the present average, was the statement made by Dr. W. J. Mayo, world-famous surgeon of Rochester, Minn., who was in Fort William today with a party of Minneapolis and Duluth friends on a flying motor visit.

Dr. Mayo said that the Psalmist gave the age limit as threescore years and ten, but medical science was now making the age of 70 the average length of life, not the maximum. That was made possible by the increase of scientific research and the general spread of knowledge.

Dr. Mayo said that the researches of Dr. Ewe and Dr. Blanchard, two noted English surgeons, into the cause of cancer were having wonderful results, and he anticipated a speedy conquest of the cancer scourge.

I WANT YOU BUT NOT YOUR MOTHER---NO GOOD TO JUDGE

Toronto, Sept. 17.—(Daily World Dispatch)—Mother-in-law, brothers and sisters have a perfect right to move into a relative's home if the relative has half a share in the house, was the decree issued by Magistrate Patterson in women's police court, when she remanded Andrew McIlmunn for sentence on a charge of assault.

McIlmunn smilingly admitted that he had got tired of his mother-in-law and put her out of his home. Why shouldn't he, was the question he wanted answered, he married the girl, not her mother.

Then the full story was unfolded by the magistrate. How the young couple met and fell in love with each other. They built castles in the air and dreamed of the time when they would have a bungalow of their own. Together they saved sufficient money to buy a little house and get married. The love nest belonged to each of them equally.

But after they were married the wife wanted her mother to come and stay with her so she took in sewing and paid for her keep. One day when she was absent the husband is said to have forced the woman on the verandah, pulled out her trunk and told her to "beat it."

She did "beat it," to the police department and McIlmunn was charged with assault. "I claim that she had a perfect right to have her mother there," the magistrate insisted. "She owns as much of the home as he does and is allowed to be host to her friends."

"Why doesn't she bring her brothers and sisters in as well?" W. K. Murphy wanted to know.

"Because they haven't wanted to yet."

LANG PRESENTS WANDERING JEW AT HIS MAJESTY'S

"The Wandering Jew" will be presented by Matheson Lang at His Majesty's Theatre next week, and the interest is accentuated by reason of the fact that many famous authors have essayed to express this in dramatic or novel form. "The Wandering Jew" was in the first instance put forth as an apology for Christianity. The Reformation had produced a split in the church, and called into existence a spirit of criticism.

As the expected reappearance of Jesus seemed as far off as ever, people were inclined to question the New Testament stories. Thus there arose the legend of a Wandering Jew, who, having seen the crucifixion with his own eyes, could testify to the veracity of what many Christians had come to regard as legends.

The legend of the Wandering Jew first appeared in pamphlet form in Germany in 1602, the Jew in the story being named Ahasuerus.

GANGSTERS SINK AGED WARSHIP

Sydney, N. S., Sept. 17.—(Daily World Dispatch)—The old wooden man-of-war, Pelican, moored alongside Ingraham's wharf, sank last night, and now lies in about 25 feet of water, with its hull submerged.

It is believed that rowdies are responsible for the sinking of the old ship by having opened the sea-valves. The Pelican is over 70 years old, and was used as an ammunition ship during the world war, traveling from England to France.

SPLENDID SHOW AT THE GAYETY STARTS TOMORROW

Max Field's "Kuddling Kuties" will appear at the Gayety theatre next week, starting tomorrow night. This performance promises to be one of the most amusing of the Mutual Burlesque circuit.

Max Field, playing the leading role as a Jewish comedian, assisted by June Rhodes, leading lady of the troupe, will again star in the performance.

The feature of the entertainment is the playlet known as "The Girl with the Diamond Mask," which is burlesqued to perfection.

The chorus of Kuddling Kuties will perform in clever dances, and offer popular song hits.

CORINNE GRIFFITH AT PALACE PLAYING IN RUSSIAN FILM

It is announced that four former major-generals of Czar Nicholas' army are among the members of the supporting cast in "Into Her Kingdom," the photoplay scheduled for the coming week at the Palace, starring Corinne Griffith. With a plot based on the disappearance of the Czar's Imperial Russian armies, the film has the services of Major-General Pleschkoff, son of the commander-in-chief of the Russian armies, who escaped from a Bolshevik prison at Vladivostok, through Manchuria, and came to Hollywood three years ago. Elinor Glyn, who had met him in Europe, found him in a film laboratory, and introduced him to producers of pictures. In addition other Russian celebrities are featured, as the tone and color of the theme has attracted a number of pre-revolution military and artistic leaders. The remainder of the program will include stake attractions prepared by George Rotsky, as well as "The Palace Symphony" and "The Melody Kings."

"LORD BYNG AND THE ELECTIONS"

For sheer incapacity to understand a political condition, or else sheer malignity in seeking its own political ends, commend us to the Montreal Star. In its issue of September 16, the Star deals with "Lord Byng and the Elections". After having all through the recent election campaign done its best to make the people of Canada believe that there was no constitutional issue, even going to the length of declaring that Mr. Mackenzie King had "silently and adroitly dropped the constitutional issue" from his election campaign speeches, which was untrue, the Star now has the audacity to declare that probably more voters approved Lord Byng's course in rejecting the advice of his Ministers than disapproved it.

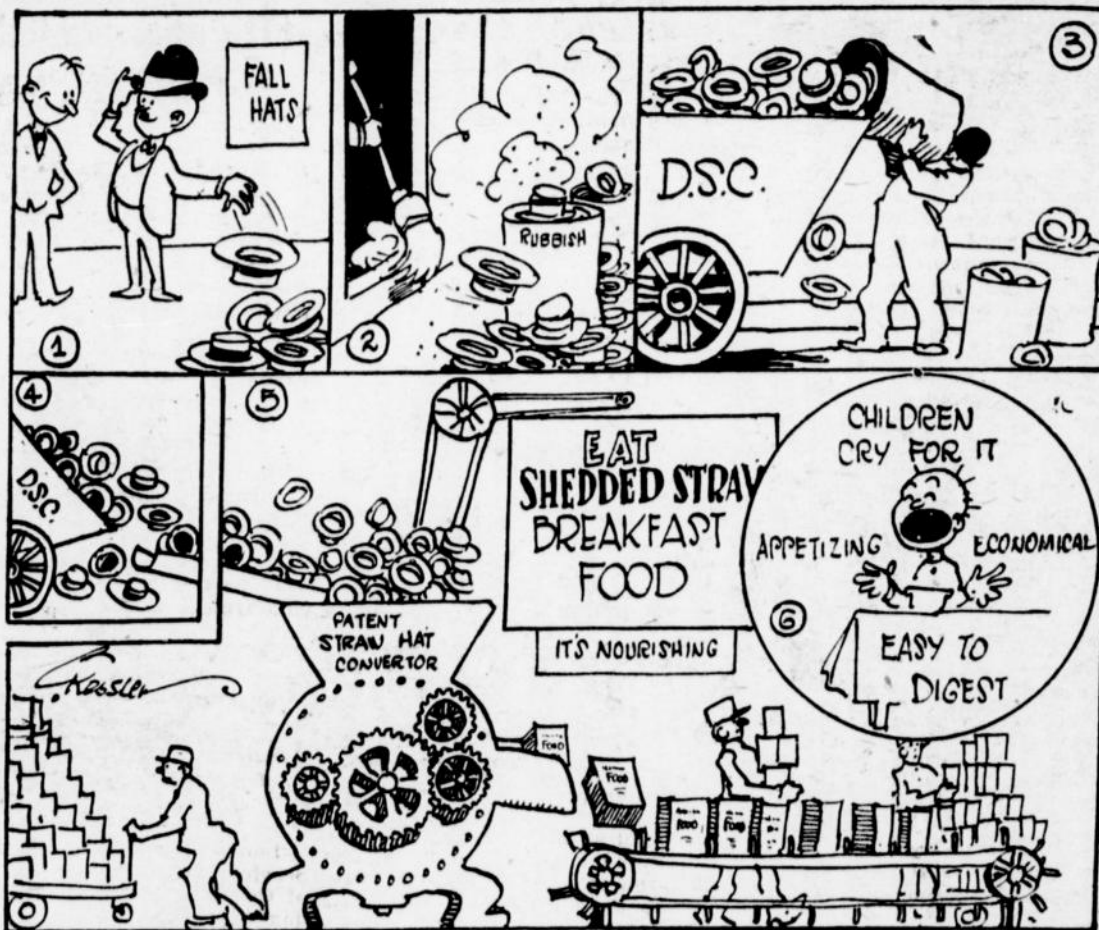

Either this is unmitigated balderdash or the poisonous effluvia of a political partizan bent on destroying the country he can no longer dominate. For, make no mistake about it, the people of Canada will not accept any lower status than that held by the people of England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, or of the other dominions; they would "cut the painter" first. And the responsibility for that course of action would be that of papers like the Montreal Star and of those who would blindly make Canada a subservient colony instead of a free Dominion. It is because some of us have seen this danger, and have expressed our determination to let nothing happen that might have the possible effect of separating us from the Empire we love, that we have protested against Baron Byng's unconstitutional act and, may we say, protested not without effect.

The Star goes on to waste much space and ink in attempting to show that the Governor-General is not a "rubber stamp". We do not use that offensive term. But, when all is said and done, a Governor-General, like a constitutional monarch is only such in order to do what he is told. He must accept the advice of his Ministers. He cannot do otherwise and remain a Governor-General of Canada within the meaning of the British North America Act and the instructions given to Governors-General from the Home Government and which are matters of public record, and, if he be a constitutional monarch, remain constitutional. The minute a Governor-General or a constitutional monarch acts on his own free will and volition in matters of state-craft that moment he ceases to function in the manner prescribed for him by law, custom, usage, practice and constitutionalism. That is what Baron Byng did. If the Star really believes that the people of Canada did not sense this and express their verdict upon Baron Byng's conduct at the polls that explains why the Star has ceased to carry any weight as a political adviser.

To illustrate the Star's complete lack of ability to understand the constitutional question involved in "the recent unpleasantness", we quote just one sentence from this asinine editorial. Speaking of a Governor-General, it says: "Nor should he grant one (dissolution) to a Prime Minister who he had reason to believe had lost the confidence of Parliament". In other words the Star believes, or professes to believe, that a Governor-General has greater power than the King. Let us consider something that has actually happened: Ramsay Macdonald, when Prime Minister of Britain, was defeated in the House of Commons on what he declared he would regard as a vote of confidence. After being beaten, Macdonald went to His Majesty, asked for dissolution, and got it without demur or hesitation.

AN ANESTHETIC IS NOT HARD TO TAKE

The Way Modern Experts Perform Simple Operations Is Far Less Painful Than Having a Tooth Pulled in the Old Way

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

Operations are not such dreadful things. But I confess that I always dreaded the idea of having any operation performed on me. In spite of the fact that for twenty or thirty years I was oper-

The King certainly had "reason to believe", in the Star's words, "that the Prime Minister had lost the confidence of the Parliament", yet he granted dissolution when asked for it. In fact, under our constitutional system he has no other course open to him.

If he refused dissolution at the request of a Prime Minister the King would cease to be a constitutional monarch. And a Governor-General of Canada, or of any other dominion of the Empire, is not greater than His Royal Master. A constitutional monarch or a Governor-General sees only through the eyes of his Ministers, speaks only through their lips, and hears only with their ears. He "can do no wrong" because he can do nothing as monarch or Governor-General except what his advisers advise him to do. If wrong is then done they are responsible, not he. If he acts outside their advice then, if wrong is done, he must shoulder the blame.

Baron Byng, having asked Mr. Meighen to form an administration did right in granting him dissolution. Mr. Meighen was Prime Minister; even though by will of the Governor-General only; he was entitled to dissolution when he asked for it. Baron Byng's mistake was in refusing dissolution to Mr. King who, clearly, was entitled to it. If Mr. King was wrong in "running away from a vote of censure", as charged, the people would have dealt with him. Political history might have been different had Baron Byng granted him dissolution. But Baron Byng had no more right to refuse him dissolution than the King of England has to cede Canada to the United States in payment of Britain's war debts. If the Star's position could be imposed on Canada this dominion would not stay in the Empire a day. Canada will remain in the Empire because its freedom, its status, and its right to self-government have now been settled at the polls, once and for all, and there will never be any further question of its right to Responsible Government and the management of its own affairs without outside dictation or interference.

ating on other people, I never had to have anything done to my anatomy. During that time I saw thousands of anesthetics administered, and yet I always felt that I should hate to take one myself.

When the occasion came to take an anesthetic and have an operation, after it was all over I was positively ashamed of myself to think I had dreaded it. In the hands of the skillful physician, an anesthetic is easily administered, and you will be surprised, if you have never had the experience, to find how quickly and comfortably you lose consciousness.

It will probably not be necessary for you to have an operation, but it is a good thing to know what operations are like. Then if fate decrees you must go on the surgical table it won't be a dreadful shock to you.

What wit was it who said: "The trouble with most folks is that they know too many things that aren't true?" The worst operations never happen! Thousands of persons go about with their hearts full of trouble—they are living in dread of operations which will never be required.

If you suspect there is something wrong with you and that an operation is necessary, go to your doctor at once. You should find out exactly what is the matter. Better still, it is wonderful to find there is nothing the matter with you. When the doctor tells you there is nothing wrong it will make you happy. You will be glad to lean on his comforting words.

But suppose the doctor says you need a trifling operation—what then? Are you to tear your hair and loudly bemoan your fate?

When I think how we used to sit in the dental chair and have a couple of teeth extracted, I am ready to say a major operation today is mild in comparison. There was no cocaine in that day, no laughing gas in the ordinary office, no anesthetic at all. The cruel forceps were sent crashing into the jaw, and the powerful arm of the dentist yanked out the tooth while his knee was pressed into your stomach to hold you in the chair!

But now an expert in anesthetics, knowing exactly how to administer the well-chosen agent, puts you to sleep in a jiffy. He does his work so skillfully there is slight nausea and little vomiting afterward.

The kind surgeon has knowledge of drugs and measures to make you comfortable when you have shaken off the effects of the anesthetic. In a few days you are out of bed and better than ever before.

MAINE SLAYER IS LOST SON OF WEALTHY WIDOW

Portland, Me., Sept. 17.—(Daily World Dispatch)—Information was received by the authorities that Benjamin Turner, indicted for the murder of James D. Hallen at Falmouth Foreside, Sept. 8, is son of a well-to-do widow living in Mystic, Iowa, who had not heard from him for several years.

The mother, Mrs. Charles F. Turner, supposed her absentee son was working in New Mexico. She is planning, it is understood here, to hasten to Portland in defence of the accused. She will be accompanied, it is also understood, by Harold Turner, another son.

Benjamin Turner left home when he was 16 years old, according to information from Iowa. When the United States entered the war he enlisted in the army in New Mexico. Honorably discharged at the end of his army service, he went to Mexico to work for a mining concern.

Charles F. Turner, father of the prisoner, died March 27, 1926, and was buried at Moravia, Iowa, where the Turner family formerly lived.

The father left an estate of $125,000. No mention is made in the despatches from Mystic, Ia., whether any of this estate was set aside for the missing son.

BRAVE INSURANCE AGENT IN RESCUE OF INVALID WOMAN

Gardner, Mass., Sept. 17.—(Daily World Dispatch)—Critically ill in bed and trapped by flames when an oil stove exploded Mrs. George H. Mulcahy, 35, was rescued by Edgar Gringran, insurance agent.

Gringran was walking towards the front door when he heard the explosion and saw flames burst from shattered windows. He rushed in, wrapped bed clothing about the woman and carried her to safety to the home of a neighbor, where she is suffering from shock.

The stove exploded a few minutes after a physician had left the home following his daily visit.

HOTEL CLERK IS UNDER ARREST

Toronto, Sept. 17.—(Daily World Dispatch)—Wanted here on a charge of stealing the sum of $600, a diamond tiepin and a diamond ring, the property of a guest at the Mossop Hotel, Tex Van Ruth, alias Van Ressler, was taken into custody by the Rochester, N. Y., police yesterday. Inspector of Detectives Guthrie has applied for the extradition of the man.

Van Ruth, the police say, was employed as a clerk at the hotel some time ago, when one of the guests, on registering, handed over the cash and jewelry to be placed in the hotel safe. Instead of locking the goods up, Van Ruth retained them, and at night made a hurried departure from the premises.

FEW WHO LEAVE FOR U.S. SEEKING GREATER WAGES

Canadians who are leaving this country for the United States are not doing so because they are out of employment, but because they are attracted by the higher wage offered in Uncle Sam's domain, according to Richard A. Flinn, chief of the division of employment, State Department of Labor, New York City.

Mr. Flinn, who is in Montreal to attend the 14th annual convention of the International Association of Public Employment Services, added that, on the whole, fewer Canadians are leaving for the United States. The figures are considerably lower than for the same period last year.

The only types of labor who have been unable to find full-time employment in the U.S.A. are the "white collar class," who do not know a trade and the "middle-aged men," who are not physically equal to unskilled laboring work.

THE REPORTER

They are ordinary men like you and me,
You'd find it hard to spot them in a mob,
But when anything occurs on land or sea
They're pretty sure to be right on the job.
They're ready for a wedding or a war,
A murder, an election, or a cruise;
They feed on trouble, then come back for more—
The snappy lads who gather in the news.

Oh, in England they call 'em the pressmen,
The boys with the pencils and pads,
Those pushing, ubiquitous, sometimes iniquitous,
Fresh, irrepressible lads.
We call 'em, on this side, reporters,
But what is a name more or less
To those dashing, spectacular, wise and oracular,
Clever young men of the press?

If the British should unearth a Russian plot,
Or the Turks should start a rumpus with the Greeks,
You will find a bright reporter on the spot
Who has known about the thing for weeks and weeks.
If a chorus girl should shoot a millionaire,
Or a foreign prince should wed a movie queen,
You can bet your life that some reporter's there
Collecting facts and pictures of the scene.

Where angels fear to tread they rush right in,
They do not dread the evil or his wife,
You snub 'em, and they greet you with a grin,
Then ask you for the story of your life.
They can scent a crime or scandal miles away,
They can hear through walls of iron if they choose,
But we couldn't do without 'em for a day—
Those snappy lads who gather in the news.

So here's to the gallant reporters,
The boys with the pencils and pads,
The calm, undisturbable, cool, imperturbable,
Nervy, inquisitive lads.
Each time that we pick up a paper
Their valorous deeds we should bless—
The bold, reprehensible, brave, indispensable,
Sensible lads of the press.

WIFE OR STENOGRAPHER—WHICH?

Should a woman who has been betrayed by her husband take him back? If her love for him still holds, what else can she do? Can his love for her blossom again? Here is a true story which shows how husband and wife grapple with such problems.

FEW READERS BEGIN HERE:—

Barbara Thorne is the wife of Robert Thorne, a brilliant and successful business man. Mildred Parker, a chum of her school days, implores Barbara to intercede with her husband to take Gladys Spencer, a mutual friend, into his office as stenographer. Gladys's husband has been brutal to her and she has left him. Robert Thorne agrees to give her a chance. She is employed in his office, but his brusque manner is offensive to her sensitive spirit. But he finally gains her confidence and they pledge each other their friendship. Gladys does some important work with Thorne after business hours, and as it is late, he takes her home. He is fast coming under the spell of her beauty and when he reaches home there is a strange coldness in his heart for Barbara, his wife. He consults Mildred Parker, who is a lawyer, and learns it is impossible for Gladys to win a divorce. Despite that he appoints her as his private secretary. In an intimate conversation they realize that they love each other. Gladys moves into a new apartment furnished with Robert's money. Her husband hears of it and commences to blackmail her. Robert connives with a lawyer and railroads him to jail. Gladys does not know it. From his prison cell, Fred reveals the bitter truth to Barbara. The next morning she visits Gladys. Robert walks in and sees them there. He slams the door and goes out. Then he begins to think the matter over. He receives word from Gladys that she will not remain his secretary, and after a long talk with Mildred Parker he makes plans to release Gladys's husband from jail. He then gets some advice from Barbara's father, after which he starts for home.

(37TH INSTALLMENT)

He had no plan in his mind. He was simply going home to eat humble pie. That was the distasteful thought in his mind; that and an almost more mortifying one—that he was being compelled to it by a woman. However, it was more than likely that he would have had to do it anyhow. He could not forget the expression on Barbara's face.

He visualized Barbara when he had first met her, when she was in the first bloom of that wonderful beauty which, combined with her noble honesty and perfect innocence, had so captivated him. Then he visualized Gladys, with her extraordinary fascination, and marveled at the way she had developed from the shrinking, sensitive girl of his first interview with her to the capable woman of his office and the voluptuous siren of their hidden home.

He began to ask himself how he would have chosen if he had met both of them at the same time when both were untried girls. It startled him not a little to realize that he had no hesitation in recognizing the fact that not only then, but even now, if it were a matter of choosing a wife, Barbara would still take first place.

Gladys still roused emotions merely in the thinking that Barbara never had; but he knew that if she were his wife he would be in a state of unrest through jealousy such as Barbara with her beautiful simplicity and her marvelous devotion to him and to her mere abstract duty would never rouse.

Moreover he had never understood so clearly as now the necessity to a man like him, with his aims and projects of a perfectly clean reputation.

It was a time when the common people were talking a sort of sedition against wealth, when they had no scruple in prying into the private lives of the captains of industry and the kings of finance.

He remembered distinctly two men, bigger than he, far wealthier, far higher in the realm of finance, who before the revelation of the impurity of their private lives had been compelled by popular clamor and the frightened insistence of their equally impure but hypocritical associates to give up their places of trust.

His last word to himself, as the taxi stopped before his house, was, "I must make it up with Barbara. I'm not going to be bowled down as those men were. Anyhow, damn it! she's a good wife, and I love her yet."

It was a properly chastened spirit in which to go to his interview; and there was no one to know how much self-interest had to do with it; so much repentance as he chose to show—or would be compelled to show—could not be scanned too critically.

When he entered the house he asked if Mrs. Wentworth was there, and being told that she was, asked that she be told that he was in the way. Don't waste any sympathy on Spencer, Barbara. He has been unjustly treated, and will be righted; but in my judgment he deserves more than he will ever receive in this world. He is everything that is contemptible—including being of the superior sex." She looked the strong disgust she felt.

Barbara reflected a moment, then dismissed the man, who meant nothing to her, and who was going to have justice done him. She did not ask about Robert, because pride prevented, and because she knew he was well, or she would have been told.

"What do you advise me to do, Mildred?" she asked bluntly. "You know what my views are, but I ask you for your judgment. Will you give it, understanding that I shall do my own way in the end?"

"Yes, I'll give it with—a certain amount of pleasure. I think that divorce in the abstract is the remedy for a case like this. But you must answer me a question: Do you still love Robert?"

"Heaven help me, yes!"

"Then it ceases at once to be a question of divorce. I would despise a man who had treated me as he has treated you, but if I didn't, if I loved him, I wouldn't think of divorcing him. A woman ists. Am I right, Mrs. Wentworth?"

"Alas!"

"I believe in divorce. I believe that if divorce were as free as marriage and as easy, women particularly would be mighty careful about the men they chose. And it would make women see the necessity of being economically independent. Yes, and independent of the man, with his strength and his protection. As if a woman could not be strong enough to get along without a man! Indeed, you may take my word for it that men need us more than we do them, and if we'd go on strike we could have any terms we demanded. But this isn't to the point. You don't want to hear my views."

"They don't bear on my case, do they?" Barbara said with a sad smile. "I don't know how I could face life without Robert."

"You could if you thought so, woman in New York, and that others see it. Mrs. Wentworth, am I not right?"

"I do think a woman should not make herself cheap."

"Have I done so?" Barbara asked piteously. "I have tried so hard to be so true to my conception of a good wife."

"A good slave, my dear," said Mildred. "Look at yourself now! You'd meet Robert dressed as you are now, wouldn't you?"

"Why not?"

"The somberest gown you have, and a downcast face to match."

"Have I not enough to make me downcast?" cried Barbara, flaring up suddenly. "Would you have me look gay?"

"No, but I wouldn't have you meet that sinner looking as if you were the one who had done wrong; I'd have you meet him looking the outraged woman that you are. I'd have the royal beauty showing in face and poise and gown. I'd make him see that, no matter where he went, he'd find nothing more worth while. Do you want him on his knees to you in admiration and desire, as he was in the old days, or do you want him coming back regretfully?"

"If it were my case, since I couldn't look beautiful to save my life, I'd prove to him that I had wit and brains, if I could. Why, you simply drove him away from you by making him tired—not of you, you divine creature, but of the easy, certain love that was his whether he wanted it or not. Never throw yourself adoringly at him again. And if you will take my advice you will forever keep him wondering whether or not you do love him at all. There! That's a part of what I think about it, my dear. And I know that even if your mother is a bit shocked at some of the things I say, she really indorses most of it."

"I do think that Barbara has submitted too easily. At the same time, I must say that I think a wife's duty is to her husband. In my own case—"

Mildred, who had small reverence, interrupted with a laugh. "In your case, Mrs. Wentworth, your theory was submission, but your practice has been to rule. Rule gently as a woman should, of course, but yet to rule. Barbara, who held the reins of government in your mother's house?"

Barbara smiled and put her hand on her mother's. The latter bridled, a bit taken aback by this plain speaking, and yet pleased to have her dominance recognized.

"But," said Barbara, "Papa and Robert are not the same."

"Certainly not; but both are men, hence sinners. Pardon the inference, Mrs. Wentworth! And you and your mother are not the same. All I say is, treat Robert as Barbara should treat him; not as Barbara should treat the immaculate fair prince of her dreams. Barbara is awake now and knows her husband is a man—only a man, and not a bit of a fairy prince. And remember that whatever Robert has done, he not only is no worse than other men, but on the whole is much better."

"I was afraid," said Barbara, after a silence of a few minutes, "that you would recommend divorce."

"Recommend divorce to one who doesn't believe in it and doesn't want it? No, indeed. I look upon divorce as a legitimate remedy for a wife who hates her husband; not for one who loves him. That would be terrible. It would be like cutting off both legs because you believe in amputating them when they are past helping. But I do believe that when you have a leg like you, Barbara, craves a man in her life; and you would never let any other man in."

"Oh, no! If it isn't Robert it will be no one."

"Very well! Then keep Robert. He will be only too glad."

"You think he loves me still," Barbara cried impulsively. "Did he say anything to indicate that?"

"He's a man, dear," Mildred answered sadly. "I am afraid he will love as his interest dictates, and it will be apparent to him that you are indicated. Forgive me for saying that, dear. In truth, I'm sure that in time he will love you as devotedly as ever he did. I'm sure your mother can tell you that in some ways all men are alike. Mrs. Wentworth?"

"In some ways, yes."

"Robert is one of the strongest, after all. I say take him back. You want to and he wants to come. He's no worse, if he's no better, than other men. You may revolt at the double standard, but it ex-but as you don't, it's no use talking about it. You're stronger than he is, if you want my opinion. But, you see, it comes to this, after all, that you want Robert and he must have you. Make good terms with him, that's all."

"You have always seen the adoring, humble wife, accepting the mastership of the man. Abandon that attitude and be yourself; but since it is a man you are dealing with, don't forget that he is best reached through his appetites. Yes, even Robert. He cares for his stomach; he loves beauty well set off more than an even greater beauty hidden behind too great a modesty. And man's an animal first of all, don't forget that. Also, a man always keeps on desiring what other men fix their desires on."

"Oh, Mildred! You wouldn't have me—"

"I wouldn't have you do anything that wasn't as fine and sweet as you are yourself, but I would have you show your husband that you really are the most beautiful

A Fashion Model's Diary

By Grace Thorncliffe

SHE DESCRIBES A SMART FALL COAT

Madame's collection of Fall coats is practically completed. She has been working steadily on coats lately, as she wanted to have a comprehensive collection of them in her fashion opening.

"So many of my steady clients come to view the collection and then order their entire Fall wardrobes afterward," Madame observed. That's why I have to include everything, for one needs to have one's principal frocks in mind before deciding on a coat."

This means a lot of rush work after Fall modes are really established. Madame has a positive knack for sensing fashions before they come out, so the things she does are always in advance of the mode, and so individual as to be smart for a number of seasons—if her clients ever want to wear anything that long. Some of them do occasionally, when they are so attached to a garment that they simply can't give it up.

To return to coats, Gaby and I had an argument today as to what coat in the collection was most typical of the Fall mode. We seemed to have different ideas at first, but soon decided on the design I am showing here.

"You see capes are really such a prevailing fashion that I think you'd have to choose one with a cape," Gaby commented.

"Then surely one of the outstanding features of Fall coats is the deep-set armholes," I added.

"That being the case, that smart black kasha with the double cape set into raglan seams combines the outstanding features of both," Gaby announced.

So we decided on this very modern garment for the typical coat. It is trimmed with Persian lamb, as many of the Fall coats make discreet use of short-haired furs for trimming.

Then too it has the typical silhouette, which is widened above the waistline, and perfectly straight from there down. This wideness is achieved usually by a cape, or by sleeves which widen considerably toward the armholes.

This Black Kasha Coat Features a Double Crepe.

An Old Aid to Beauty

By Lucrezia Bori

A great deal has been said about the advisability of stopping excessive perspiration. Most doctors claim that it is a necessary evil and should be tolerated. They also add that when perspiration is stopped in one part of the body it comes out at some other place. And as this latter point seems to be pretty generally agreed upon among scientists I see no possible harm in the individual selecting the places where the perspiration is NOT to come out.

Most women have been unspeakably annoyed by excessive perspiration under the arms, and it is possible to eliminate this trouble in a harmless way.

Dress shields can be tacked into the armholes of the frocks, but this is often unsatisfactory as the shields must be removed and rinsed out each time the gown is worn. Then when the damp shield presses against the tender flesh it feels unpleasant. If the shields are not kept scrupulously clean they will cause an irritation that frequently causes pimples. Then there is always the problem of what to do when wearing a sleeveless gown for it is impossible to conceal the dress shield.

There is an old-fashioned remedy for this affliction in alum, a powerful astringent. It will close the pores of the skin for several hours at a time.

A dusting powder that is splendid to check excessive perspiration is made of one part powdered alum and two parts of finely powdered boric acid. The two ingredients are carefully blended and then dusted under the arms with a powder puff. A special puff should be kept for this so that it isn't used on the face by accident, for the astringent quality of the powder is too strong for the face. This powder makes an excellent dusting powder for the feet and to put in new shoes to keep them from burning.

Before retiring the powder should be thoroughly removed from the skin by first rinsing in cold water, then washing with tepid water and soap. Rinse the skin again in clear water, pat it dry, and apply a little cold cream or olive oil. The latter will prevent excessive dryness.

TEMPTING BREAKFAST DISHES Most families like one warm breakfast dish regardless of the season. Tiring of fruit, hot or cold cereal, egg and toast, a more elaborate dish is welcomed. A broiled smoked finnan haddie is good. Chipped beef in a well-made cream sauce, creamed codfish, buttered lobster, chicken and pepper hash, or poached fillet of sole with cream sauce, are among the general favorites. None of these dishes is difficult to prepare or takes long in cooking. The recipes given may offer even a stronger appeal in the same class of cookery.

A NEW WAY WITH HAM

Take a good-sized slice of sugared ham a half inch thick and place it in a dish, covering it well with milk. Let stand overnight in the ice-box. In the morning, drain and wipe ham dry, then fry it a delicate brown in deep fat. Make a cream sauce from the milk, unless the ham is very salty, in which case fresh milk must be used. Serve broiled potatoes with the ham.

At the left is a cloche of wine red felt, trimmed with ribbon bow and band, and a rhinestone clasp on the side. At the right is shown a turban of black felt with a circular fold of the felt across the top and tiny rolls of black ribbon at front and sides.

Why Custom Opposes Lucy Stone Idea

The Business and Social Worlds, for Convenience, Have Decreed That the Man's Name Shall Designate the Family, So Why Worry?

Miss Doris Hill is going to marry Alwin Hobson.

But she's going to stay Miss Doris Hill.

"I'm crazy about Al," she writes, "and I'm going to do my very best to be a wonderful wife, but I don't think that necessarily means I should lose my own identity. It was all right for women in the past to take their husbands' names. Women were just so many cattle in those days, anyway. They didn't have any rights or education or careers. But I think it is perfectly absurd for a modern woman to give up her name, especially when she has made it mean something before marriage, as I have."

"Al doesn't like the idea very well, but he says that if it will make me happier he's willing. But my mother and father and all our friends think I am crazy. They say that it would be all right to keep that name for use in my dancing studio, but that I shouldn't do it in private life. To hear them take on you would think I was going to do something actually illegal."

"It isn't so, is it, Elsie? There is no law that can compel me to take Al's name, is there? And don't you think it is lots more progressive for a woman to keep her own?"

No, I don't suppose there is a law which will actually compel you to use Al's name, Doris. Nor is there any reason why the husband's name for the family is any more sacred or honorable than the wife's. Nevertheless there is a very good reason why you should use Al's name in private life, and legal affairs, and that reason is COMMON SENSE.

The use of the husband's name in this world, and they must transact a great deal of business. For the sake of our mutual comfort and profit, we've established certain methods by which we can transact that business with the least fuss. One of these methods is the use of the husband's name by the wife.

"Why not the use of the wife's name by the husband? Are men so much better than women?"

No, men are not better than women. But the average husband is out in the world and the average wife isn't. The average husband transacts the family business, the average wife doesn't.

There's no deep, dark injustice in the custom. Nor does it limit the expression of the wife's individuality, or add to the husband's expression. It simply helps the rest of the world identify that particular family group as quickly and as easily as possible.

Therefore, when you fight, as do members of the Lucy Stone League, that custom, Doris, you fight social convenience and comfort. The man or woman who fights entrenched evil and stupidity is heroic. But the man or woman who fights a universal convenience, simply to go on record as a fighter, is a silly, selfish egotist and every right minded citizen should resent such action.

From which you may gather, Doris, that I'm siding hard with ma and pa and the gang. I can't see that you're accumulating merit for yourself or your sex by signing yourself Miss Hill, in private life, when you are in reality Mrs. Hobson. If you want to do it, it is your personal business, that's an-

NEED FOR GET-TOGETHER IN CLOTHING STRIKE

HART AND GARMENT MEN SHOULD MEET IN FAIR SPIRIT AND SHAKE HANDS

BY OUR SPECIAL INVESTIGATOR

The all-absorbing General Election has interfered with the ability of the DAILY WORLD to give proper space and attention to the Clothing Workers' Strike, while the Jewish holidays of last week also held their meed of interference with this series of articles. With factories closed and so many Jewish people employed in them, and the work of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union practically at a standstill because of those holidays, there has not been a great deal that one could say on strike matters.

DAY OF ATONEMENT

And now today comes the great Day of Atonement, "Yom Kippur," the greatest day in all Jewry, so that anything like a fighting strike article from my pen would, under the circumstances, be entirely out of place. And I promise at once that nothing of the kind shall be written. It is a good thing to have these resting places in life, when the desert of strife ends in the water wells of good feeling and good fellowship, and mankind is at peace.

But I cannot refrain from "pointing a moral and adorning a tale," so to speak. If I refer to my good friend, Samuel Hart (I hope he won't think of me as anything else but a good friend, because my attitude to him will yet prove to have been the very best thing that could have happened to him), it is because this day of Atonement furnishes me with a suitable text. I do not pretend to know and understand fully the whole meaning and symbolism of "Yom Kippur." But I think I do understand the meaning of atonement.

In regard to a man's attitude to God, and God's attitude to man, atonement is simply at-one-ment. Instead of being divided and separated, God and man in the atonement become reconciled to each other, re-united, made at one. It is the same in human relationships. A son does wrong to his father, let us say. He makes reparation, he asks forgiveness, he secures pardon. They have been alienated one from the other, not on speaking terms, never meeting, having no association one with the other. But, with the putting of matters right, with the one who was wrong admitting it, or where both have been wrong, both admitting it, there comes understanding, forgiveness and forgetfulness. The past is dead; they go forward living for tomorrow, not for yesterday. That is the atonement in human life and it is not unlike to atonement in the spiritual sense.

FRUITLESS STRIFE

What a blessed thing it would be for all concerned if Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement, should mark the end of this, so far, fruitless strife between Samuel Hart and his work-people. I am not suggesting that Mr. Hart has anything to apologise for, or that he should demean himself in order to bring about an end to the struggle between him and his workers. Nor am I suggesting that his striking workers should go cap in hand to Samuel Hart, confess they were wrong, and ask to be taken back. But I am suggesting that the spirit of the Day of Atonement, affecting as it does so many of those concerned in this unfortunate strike, should impel both sides to make sacrifices of pride and position in order to bring to a happy issue the conflict that has lasted so long.

After all, the issue between Society Brand and its workers is very simple. They claim they have been getting underpaid. If they have, then atonement is due them. Samuel Hart, I presume, claims they have been getting paid well enough, or that he can get people to work for the money he was paying them, or possibly that he cannot afford to pay them more. Well, that is all easily decided. In the spirit of this Day of Atonement let both sides come with their grievance to the conference table, state their respective cases, and discuss the matter in friendly fashion. Let there be no folly about objecting to the union officials, because ultimately they will have to be conferred with. The workers have just as much right to act together as have their employers in manufacturers' associations or the like. But with common sense, courtesy and courage in facing the problems of the industry in which both sides earn their livelihood peace could be secured.

I put this frankly to Samuel Hart and I speak for the workers when I say they will be found ready to have a frank, heart-to-heart talk with him, and will be found ready to shake hands and be friends. This statement of mine should not be interpreted as a sign of weakness on the part of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers Union, which is prepared to carry on the fight until won if it takes all this year and next (although this is not said as a threat). But the foolery has gone on long enough and should stop. Both sides are losing money and opportunity. If Yom Kippur marks the end of the folly of such a strike and the beginning of a better understanding between Samuel Hart and his workers, it will have been a blessed day.

Why think of divorce, then? No, Barbara! keep him, but keep him in his place. Goodby!" She added with sudden seriousness, "I'm going to show Gladys that I love her no less."

"Miss Parker!" cried Mrs. Wentworth in horror.

"Why not? To you she's a dreadful woman, a harlot, anything bad and shameful. To me, she's another victim."

"And to me, Mildred," said Barbara. "Will you tell her for me that I shall never forget her goodness, her tenderness, and her greatness of soul?"

How will Robert and Barbara solve their difficulties to their mutual happiness? And what about Gladys—will she be forgotten completely? The installments of this stirring serial hold the answers to these questions.

DIRT TRACK AUTO DRIVERS RACE AT DELORIMIER PARK

Harry Davies and Superintendent Vermette of Delorimier Park after a careful examination of the track report that the track will be in good condition for the speed events today and tomorrow. Superintendent Vermette who has had charge of Delorimier for years reported yesterday afternoon late that the track would be in good condition if no more rain fell.

The track will be hard and fast time should be made. A dustless track is absolutely essential for speed and after we have rolled that track today it will be suitable for speed. The drivers who have been here since Wednesday for these races were glad to get the news and immediately made arrangements to have their cars removed to Delorimier Park to prepare them for these speed trials.

ULSTER UNITED TO BE PUT TO A SEVERE TEST

WEEK-END FEAST OF SOCCER IS TO BE PROVIDED

Carsteel did not travel last night to meet Toronto City. They will be idle today and very active tomorrow. If they are wise they will take mental note of the weaknesses in the Ulster team which will oppose Maroons.

Maroons will be all out to let the champions of Canada see that they are not. Bobby Campbell is to be captain. No disrespect to Andy Clark who has gone to do duty elsewhere, but temperamentally he was so enthusiastic on the field that he did not think quite so much about those in front of him as Bobby will.

And when the Canadian champions meet Carsteel on Sunday, there is certain to be a record crowd. All soccer Montreal and his wife will be there.

There is a distinct probability that Johnny Broom and Davy Mackenzie will be playing. Shall be very disappointed if they are not.

If it should happen that Westwater will be in the centre forward position you can be assured of this that there will be activity and to spare. He is to come back into his own and very determined about it too.

The only gentleman whose proclivities are in doubt is Jupiter Pluvius.

You may be assured the P.Q.F.A. will be there. That's no excuse for your staying away.

PLAYERS PICKED FOR UNO'S TEAM

It is very nice to see that the Montreal League are taking an interest in the Players Benefit Society this with a team to face that which represented Montreal on May 24 against the Englishmen.

October 9 has been suggested as a suitable date. A suitable team was selected as follows:—

Kennaway (C.P.R.), Yetman (Wood Hall), Johnston (Nomads), Nelson (Gurney), McDonald (C.P.R.), Dawson (Nomads), McEwan (National Breweries), Davies (Railroader), Kelley (Blue Bonnets), Whittaker (Spool) and Parker (Spool). Reserves: Moon (Lachine), Greer (National Breweries) and Nicholson (Lachine).

They are all known players. It is nice to be in the limelight. It is hard luck upon players who do not get that publicity which they deserve. Supposing I were asked to select a team to test this outfit I would pick players from no fewer than eight teams in the city who have not been recognized.

I shall get no compliments in presenting these names. No matter. The eleven who would knock the "chosen" stiff are players who have proven their worth. They are a bunch of "oddfellows," but they would beat the league's lot. Here they are—

Brown (Victoria) goal; Nelson (Gurney), McKenna (Glen Yards); Renfrew (C.N.R.), Nicholson (Lachine), Bell (C.N.R.), Watson (B.E.), Whittaker (Spool), McBride (Can. Rail.), Munro (Gurney), Parks (Spool).

There is a team! I am particularly well pleased that the first real player I saw when I first set foot in Montreal has at last been recognized. I refer to Jacky Davies. As an inside man he will make good.

You can make all the choices you care, but he is a kid who can take care of himself from the first to the last blow of the whistle.

There are people who think he is small. So was Fanny Walden. So was Fatty Wedlock. So was — oh! Why occupy space enumerating the wee fellows who have been great in soccer.

Curious thing is that the three feet two and a bit men do most of the thinking.

RAILROADERS' TEAM AGAINST EMARD

Railroader's team today against Emard will be—McFarlane (Getting old); Pearson (Hitch kick Charlie) McKenzie (Charlie Horse); Todd (The Wanderer), Neasmith (Ata Boy), McCutcheon (the come back); Davies (Nurmi), Rowland (Charlie Chaplin), McBride (Swiftly), Rossiter (Lawn Mower) and Harrowing (no hurry).

This is the official amusing announcement. The observations are appropriately funny.

HUMPHREY PAYNE COMES INTO OWN

I suppose there is no one in Montreal who has stood more steadfastly by Humphrey Payne, than myself and unknown to him. I have worked hard to get him back to where he belongs. He is now to be in charge of the Canadian National A.A.A.

There are some friends who can be all that is desired, but when I was trotted around by Fred Barter and saw Alexandra Park, he told me something.

It was this: Humphrey Payne has made this ground. He has made this team. He has made many enemies. Because!—he speaks his mind."

Will I tell the truth? Sure I will.

There was a deliberate, continuous effort to hound him out of the game.

Now he is on top again. You can't sink a cork.

NOMADS HAVE NO HOPE IN PROTEST

A question has been forwarded to me in regard to the protest of Nomads against their game against Gurneys, holding good.

If the ref declares he can see from goal to goal, no Scotch fog about to obliterate his observations then—well, his decision is final anyway.

No appeal. The League can do nothing in the matter. It has been referred to them to decide next Wednesday.

Think myself, Nomads are out of luck.

McCUTCHEON IS TO PLAY AND TODD ALSO

The Montreal League program today is interesting in parts—very much like the curate's egg. C.P.R. will win the First Division championship. They are up against Blue Bonnets. If they stop Kelly

U.S. NET STARS ELIMINATED FROM NATIONAL MATCH

Forest Hills, N. Y., Sept. 17.—(Daily World Dispatch) — Jean Borotra, the "Bounding Basque" completed the route of the United States tennis forces this afternoon by defeating Vincent Richards after a nerve racking five set match, 3-6, 6-4, 4-6, 8-6, 6-2.

At times Borotra seemed about to collapse but managed to hold on long enough to pull out a last minute victory. Richards had many splendid opportunities to win sets, but tossed them away by erratic playing.

Borotra's splendid win makes the finals an all French contest, as he will meet Rene Lacoste at 3 o'clock Saturday afternoon to decide which will carry away the United States title for second time in history.

STAR OUTSIDE WING KICKED ON HEAD

Toronto, Sept. 17.—(Daily World Dispatch)—Word has been received from Grace Hospital that George Stronach star outside wing of the Balmly Beach team who was seriously injured last night would recover. Stronach was kicked on the head and suffered a severe concussion.

that is the end of the story. He will be opposed to a real tip top man and one who plays the game. The contest between the two should be worth going a long way to see.

Burges, the abused—very much so—will be in charge.

Lachine are likely to win but Canadian National will have a deuce of a job getting the better of Gurney. Nomads have a hope of winning against Breweries, but only a hope.

The great game in the Second Division will be that between Emard and Canadian Railroaders. If Herb Mould's men—beg pardon he is—what? off the active list, a C3 man—well, if those whose interests have been looked after by the said gentleman care to exercise a care, the Second Division championship is theirs.

Might as well tell you McCutcheon and Todd will be in the fighting line.

They were wired for. They are due to arrive in the city this morning.

Need more be said?

KEEN FIGHT FOR JR. CHARITY CUP

Can Canadian National Recreation beat Beavers in the final for the Junior Charity Cup at Cote St. Paul this afternoon?

There is keen discussion as to the issue.

It is known what the Beavers, a team of youngsters, have accomplished.

Methinks, however, the Canadian National Rec. will come out on top. 'Twill be a real good game to watch. Wish that I could be in two places at the same time. Someone will be there.

CHARLES MILNE.

MONTIES SQUAD SHAPING UP WELL IN EARLY DRILLS

The Monties Football Club had a large turnout last night, considering the inclement weather. H. Shalinsky turned up in good condition and ready for a bumper season. Big Ben Cummings is rounding into shape fast and with his 200 pounds, hits the line hard.

Monroe Abbey is working hard and Ralph Cummings is in perfect shape preparing for his best season. Sonny Parke's foot is sure booting the pigskin far. Hy Leibson is now finished with baseball and ready for rugby. Morris Rabinovitch is sure kicking the old ball nice and will make the juniors sit up and take notice.

Sunday morning next a full turnout of juniors and intermediates of which both squads will be picked. Full turnout will be held on the Shamrock Grounds at 8 o'clock sharp.

The 3rd annual Montiflore Football Club smoker will be held on Monday night at 8.15 p.m. at the Y.M.H.A. Gymnasium. There will be ten bouts of excellent boxing and other sorts of entertainment.

TARS AND M.A.A.A. TO PLAY AT JUNIOR TITULAR MEET

An exhibition English rugby game between a team from the H.M.S. Calcutta and the M.A.A.A. fifteen will be held in connection with the Junior City Championships track and field meet at the M.A.A.A. Grounds this afternoon. The navy band will also be on hand.

CABBIES AND HARPS MEET FOR CROWN

Yellow Cab Co. and the Harps will meet in the final game for the all-round city championship of the Spalding Baseball League on September 25, it was announced yesterday.

HODDY'S JUNIORS FIT FOR SEASON'S OPENER TODAY

At the conclusion of last night's light workout, coach Hoddy Foster announced that the line-up of his M.A.A.A. juniors for today's game with Lachine would be as follows: Flying wing, Haynes; half backs, O'Hara, Adams and Peel; quarter, Allen; snap, Tellier; insides, Nichols and Gaborino; middles, Atkinson and Potter; outsides, Hutton and Hutchison; subs., Giles, Carpenter, Fletcher and Decarrie.

While last season's Dominion champions have lost several of their star players, they will again take the field with a mighty fine looking squad. Owing to a clause in the rules regarding intermediate players, the coach will not be able to use several of his more experienced men until two scheduled games have been played. If the boys get away with today's game and the one next Saturday they should be right in line to repeat for the honors.

While little is known regarding the strength of the Lachine team, Coach "Tokey" Clendenning can be counted on to place a rugged, hard hitting squad on the field. The Lachine entry has been working out for several weeks now and should at least have it on the wheels for condition. W. Munslow will be in charge of this game, while Jack Corrigan will handle the Westward-C.N.R. game at Alexandria Park.

Victoria Hockey held Thursday evening, it was definitely stated that the Vics would again operate a team in senior amateur hockey. For some time rumours have been rife that this famous organization would not be in active sport this winter, but it was the unanimous decision of the gathering to again carry on.

BERT AIRTH TO PLAY FOR M.A.A.A. THIS YEAR

FORMER QUEEN'S MIDDLE WING ACE TO DON RED-BLUE

The word that big Bert Airth, star middle wing of the Queen's team for the past four years, would don the moleskins on Monday night and play with the Wheelers this year was received with much enthusiasm last night. Airth was considered one of the best line plungers in the intercollegiate union; he weighs about 190 pounds, and is very fast. Bert has been up in the mining country all summer and is hard as nails. He was visiting Bud Thomas here the other day, and Bud convinced him that he should take another season's whirl at the game.

Thomas has been under the weather for over a week now suffering from a severe cold, but has promised to return to the squad on Monday. The addition of these two stalwarts will just about round out a championship aggregation.

Next Saturday the Wheelers will open the season with an exhibition game against Bill Hughes' Queen's team, and Thomas and Airth will be out to try and upset the clan of their former coach.

CARDS REGAIN LEAD AS GIANTS EDGE OUT REDS

Philadelphia, Sept. 17. — (Daily World Dispatch)—St. Louis regained the lead in the National League race this afternoon by swamping Philadelphia, 10 to 1, while the New York Giants were edging out Cincinnati in ten innings, 5 to 4.

With their eyes on the pennant, the Cards are socking the ball far and wide these days, and today was a repetition of previous games with Philly. Three pitchers were pounded at will by the rampaging Cardinals, who ran wild on the bases.

Frankie Frisch spoiled the whole day for the Reds by pounding out a homer in the tenth and knocking Cincinnati from their first place hold.

Cleveland, Sept. 17. — (Daily World Dispatch)—On the warpath with an American League pennant in view as a trophy, the Cleveland Indians scalped another game from the Yankee lead by trimming them 5 to 1, making it three straight for the series. The Yanks now hold first place by the slender margin of three and one-half games.

New York is suffering from an acute attack of batting slump and gathered but five hits off Shaute. The Cleveland pitcher was wild at times, but, due to brilliant fielding, he was never in serious difficulty.

Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 17.—(Daily World Dispatch)—Assurance that the Indiana injunction against the Dempsey-Tunney fight would not hold in Pennsylvania was given Promoter Tex Rickard by Atty.-General Woodruff. ## M.A.A.A. LACROSSE TEAM BANQUETED! GIFTS PRESENTED

Last night the members of the M.A.A.A. Lacrosse Club attended a banquet at Krausemans, bringing to conclusion a very successful season. While the team did not win the championship of the league, they developed some exceptionally fine lacrosse players and if the squad stays together as they have promised, the Red and Blue should be right up in the running next season.

Much of the credit for the splendid showing of the team is due to Jack Marshall who took a keen interest in the boys who reciprocated in a measure by presenting the popular coach with a beautiful wrist watch. Billy Soden, who managed the team, was presented with a silver cigarette case, while Paul Lefebvre, the genial trainer, who has seen more lacrosse players come and go than any man in Canada, was made the recipient of a pipe.

HARRISON STARS AS M.A.A.A. GETS FIRST SCRIMMAGE

Coach Nicholson's M.A.A.A. grid-ders were given their first taste of real football last night, when the coach sent two teams at it for about half an hour. This was apparently what the boys were looking for, and they certainly worked off plenty of superfluous energy. The coach kept shifting his men about and the results showed that the team will not only be strong on the backfield, but will have a line that will be second to none in the Big 4. There is plenty of size, speed and stamina in the group of candidates for wing line positions and the addition of Bert Airth will round this department out splendidly.

HARRISON IN FORM

The work of Ralph Harrison last night demonstrated clearly why the officers of the Winged Wheel were so anxious to land him. He showed good form in handling the ball, and his squirming dashes through the line were features of the scrimmage. The backs also showed to good advantage, Keatie Burnham, Clary Booth and Pean Bennett working together like machinery. Later on Wally Sheppard, Johnny Bennett and Earl Whittall were alternated with this trio, without weakening the combination.

Cec Brooks and Carl Work looked after the flying wing business, until Brooks was unfortunate enough to get kicked in the back and had to retire.

LINE STRONG

Up in the front line all the candidates gave good accounts of themselves, and it would be impossible to make any definite selections. Hammy Lane, Erin Smith, Frank Cowley, Bert Adams, Des-Troismaisons, Keith Carruthers, Charlie Starke, Fountain, Doc Lemieux, Giles, Maunder, Ross and Conny Consiglio all worked their heads off and if they display the same pep in the league games, will be hard to stop. Dunc Anderson gave his injured shoulder a rest, being content to do a few laps around the track.

CRICKET CURTAIN RINGS DOWN TODAY

Westward-C.C. and the West Indians C.C. will meet in the final cricket match before the curtain rings down on the season, for possession of the Davidson Challenge Cup. The game will be played this afternoon on the Campus.

BOBBY JONES TO MEET VON ELM IN FINALS 3rd TIME

Short Hills, N. Y., Sept. 17. — (Daily World Dispatch)—Playing true to form, Bobby Jones, Atlanta golf marvel, defeated Francis Ouimet of Boston after brilliant play, 5 and 4, and this afternoon will meet George von Elm of Los Angeles in the final round of the national amateur golf championships at the Baltusrol Golf Club.

Starting the afternoon round with a lead of 3, Jones played with a sparkle and brilliance which was not to be denied. Ouimet put up a splendid fight against his youthful opponent and had he been playing against anyone else, would likely have won.

In the other match of the semifinals George von Elm defeated George Dawson, the youthful player from Wheaton, Ill., 11 and 10. This match was practically settled at noon but was carried to the eighth hole of the second round.

The final on Saturday will be the third meeting between these two super golfers. On the occasion of the other clashes Jones was twice successful, and it remains to be seen whether history will repeat itself.

STARR AND LYNCH TO PLAY IN OTTAWA

Yesterday's report that Charlie Lynch and Harold Starrs were in Montreal and might play with the Wheelers is not causing any alarm in Ottawa, as both boys have promised to play with the Senators and their word is considered sufficient. As the M.A.A.A. opposed the playing of Lynch and Monahan by Ottawa last year under the residence rule, it would be interesting to know what stand they would take should Starrs and Lynch be serious about locating here.

MONTAGNE AIDS DUNC PUT LOYOLA SQUAD IN SHAPE

Dunc Munro, head coach of the Loyola College football twelve, sent a squad of 65 candidates through light exercises yesterday afternoon in the season's first practice. Line candidates were given running exercises and a short drill running down the field under kicks.

The appearance of several of last year's team brightened the chances of the Loyola team in the coming campaign. Pickering, last year's quarter; Bannon, veteran half, and Savard, who is moving up to the intermediate ranks from the junior section, will add strength to the team. Savard has a rep. as a kicker and sent some beautiful spirals down the field.

MONTAGNE COACHING

Assisting Coach Munro is Montagne, who has just completed the course at Knute Rockne's School of Coaching. He was on the field yesterday and his handling of the men makes it apparent that the coaching combination at Loyola will give opposition teams plenty of food for thought.

Heavy togs and hard drill will be in order on Monday afternoon when Dunc Munro starts his men on serious drill in preparation for the season's opening. The schedule has not been arranged, but it is thought the first game will be played in about two weeks.
