News in brief

Rift opens

WASHINGTON (CP) — A five-day world monetary conference has opened a disturbing rift between Britain and the United States on the burdens their currencies should bear in financing future world trade and economic aid.

The U.S., anxious to shore up its dwindling gold reserves, appears to be moving towards reduction of American dollars flowing around the world. Britain wants to expand the world flow of acceptable currencies, including the U.S., to prevent a possible future strain on sterling.

Urge junta

Buenos Aires (CP) — The navy moved today to halt Argentina's drift toward civil war by proposing that a three-man military junta take control.

Rebel leaders refused to attend a top level meeting called to discuss the plan and said President Jose Maria Guido was resisting navy pressure to resign.

Political manoeuvring continued through the night as troops of both the rebels and so-called loyalists were deployed throughout the capital. Scattered clashes during the rebellion, now in its fifth day, have killed six persons, five of them civilians.

Probe Accra

ACCRA, Ghana (Reuters) — President Kwame Nkrumah today declared a state of emergency in the Accra area following the recent bomb explosions. The emergency, announced by the president's office, gives police special powers to search houses, ban all processions and holds out the possibility of a curfew.

US, Reds clash

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Russia and the United States accused each other of risking war over Cuba in a head-on clash Friday night before the General Assembly. Soviet Foreign Minister Gromyko brought up the explosive Cuban issue in a 90-minute general policy speech delivered on the eve of a meeting with State Secretary Rusk arriving in New York for a week's stay.

Progress made

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States appears to be making headway in its drive to get Allied co-operation in cutting down Communist shipping to Cuba.

The West German government has agreed to take steps to prevent its ship owners from putting German flag vessels under Soviet charter.

There is hope that Britain, Norway and other North Atlantic treaty allies whose ships have sailed for the Russians in the Cuban buildup also will cooperate.

Confrontation

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Diefenbaker and Liberal Leader Pearson, protagonists in a parliamentary drama soon to unfold, confronted each other Friday on what may become a big issue of the opening days of the new Parliament.

Mr. Pearson, at the prime minister's request, called at Mr. Diefenbaker's East Block office and informed him of the Liberal view that Parliament should not proceed with any legislative action until the Commons decides whether to vote confidence or non-confidence in Mr. Diefenbaker's minority administration.

U of S and Bishop's

How many can they accept?

By MALCOLM REID
(Record Staff Reporter)

One way universities have of measuring how well they are serving their communities is placing the percentage of the population actually studying alongside the percentage capable of university studies.

In the Sherbrooke area an old and intimate university and a young and expanding one are both giving thought to the question.

"About 15 per cent of the population of university age could undertake university studies," says Father Antoine Sirois, general secretary of the University of Sherbrooke.

"In the Sherbrooke area, about six per cent do." This is not as high as in some areas of the province, and Father Sirois attributes it to the lower level of wages paid in Sherbrooke.

"In some parts of Canada they have their university population up to nine per cent, but nowhere are they very closely approaching 15."

The University of Sherbrooke, developing from the Sherbrooke seminary, opened doors in 1954. Its building program is in full gear; this fall it opened a new residential building and now 460 of its students live on campus premises.

Academically it is expanding too. This fall it offers master's degree courses in arts for the first time.

The university registered about 1,500 students during two weeks of return to the faculties, and Father Sirois says it could accommodate another 100 without any further building on its spacious suburban hill. All institutions under the university's jurisdiction, of secondary, college and university level, embrace about 5,000 students. Roman Catholic clergy are in charge of the university.

The $55 engineering and law tuition increases the University of Sherbrooke has felt necessary this year to keep its expansion financially sound are by no means the highest in Canada. Dalhousie University in Halifax put fees up $100 this year, reports a Canadian Press survey of university costs, and almost all eastern Canadian universities have followed the western ones' fee increases of last year.

Among Quebec universities, Sherbrooke has one of the highest proportions of costs paid by the provincial government—75 per cent.

At Bishop's, the university founded in 1843 at nearby Lennoxville, they must think of the expansion problem in somewhat different terms.

With a $100 increase, Bishop's is high among the several residential schools in the country which have raised fees for residence this year. To get into McKinnon Hall, the airy new women's residence, a girl must obtain a high academic average and hold it.

Legion opposition seen

Vets to battle Glassco report

OTTAWA (TNS) — When the executive of the Royal Canadian Legion meets in Ottawa in November, battle will be joined with the Glassco Commission's recommendation that veterans' preference in the civil service be reduced.

The Legion has been pressing for just the opposite. In their last convention, legionnaires passed a resolution that would increase the scope of veterans' preference procedures.

Under these provisions, a veteran who qualifies in a competition for a civil service position has a prior claim over all non-veterans who qualify, even though the non-veterans may have achieved higher marks in the competition.

The Glassco Commission on Government Organization recommended that veterans, instead of the present absolute preference, be granted a specific number of points, which would give an advantage in all competitions.

To the Legion, this is an old story. The Heeneey Report on Civil Service Administration a few years ago made the same proposal, and the Legion condemned it then.

No direct comment on the Glassco Commission has been made officially. A spokesman, however, cited past stands taken by the Legion.

Last June at the annual convention in Halifax, three resolutions were passed in favour of widening the application of veterans' preference. One would extend the present civil service provinces to Bishop's has not stopped innovating academically—this year it has added two new, and far-flung courses. One is in Russian, and will be given by Leo Sepp, a graduate of the University of Tartu, Estonia, who has been teaching zoology at Bishop's since 1952.

A second new course is in Quebec political parties, and will be given by Claude Thibault, who joins the history department this year. Mr.

Thibault, whose own studies were at Laval, the university nearest the cockpit of Quebec politics, will have an election campaign raging through his first term to keep student interest alive.

Principal Ogden Glass says the decision to start teaching Russian was dictated by both the world situation and literary considerations—and by what he saw on a 1960 tour of the Soviet Union. Extensive English courses are given at the University of Moscow, he said, and he is even thinking of eventually carrying Russian at Bishop's beyond the present basic course, which will be open only to "mature" third and fourth year students.

But when it comes to expansion in volume rather than variety, Principal Glass is more cautious. "There comes a point beyond which the operation of the university becomes inefficient. We haven't evolved a definite policy on expansion, but this year's registration pretty well fills us up."

The Bishop's campus is not downtown, as some long established universities' are, but the principal academic buildings form a compact square inside which is a grassy, but restricted, area.

With such newer buildings as McKinnon Hall and the Scott Memorial Rink, Bishop's has stretched into the somewhat residential area outlying, but the university is not thinking in terms of

Patrol Cuban waters

US begins arms blockade

By RAY CROMLEY
WASHINGTON (NEA) — The United States has quietly begun a regular patrol of the Caribbean around Cuba in an attempt to waylay arms being smuggled to leftist revolutionaries in other Latin American nations.

A key government official says privately: "It's understood that the Cubans are running these arms by small boat and by air drop."

The exact nature of the U.S. patrol is secret. Its existence was uncovered by this reporter in a week of talks with high officials in the State and Defense Departments about the nature and scope of the Communist arms threat in Cuba.

These officials say that four major problems have been created by Nikita Khrushchev's shipment of 3,500 to 5,000 "technicians," anti-aircraft missiles, motor torpedo boats, electronic equipment and new economic aid.

1. The supplying of arms, supplies and equipment by refugee groups to anti-Castro guerrilla fighters in the Cuban mountains will be made much more difficult, says a State Department official. The landing of fresh anti-Castro cadres will be a more tricky business. The motor torpedo boats will be a danger by sea. Anti-aircraft missiles will be a menace to air drops.

2. "With Khrushchev's new aid to Cuba he has thumbing his nose at us with impunity in our own backyard," says a high Defense Department aide. "It weakens our position in Berlin, in Latin America, in Asia."

Another military man says "it gives an impression of U.S. weakness" which discourages U.S. friends and encourages Communists.

3. The new economic aid could cause the failure of the economic boycott, the major State Department policy for bringing about the economic collapse of Cuba. So thinks one U.S. diplomat.

The theory has been that the Red Cuban economy is so inefficient that the loss of U.S. dollars would eventually cause Cuba to wither. The sugar crop has been a failure of late because of a shortage of men willing to work in the sugar fields. This in a country where there's chronic unemployment. The tobacco crop also has had hard sled-

Cross between Hereford and French breed may produce better, less expensive beef

By JOHN BENNETT
Toronto Telegram News Service

A drop in the price of beef together with a rise in quality, would be good news to the housewife. Even though at this date it might seem too good to be true.

But it's not as impossible as it sounds.

In fact certain cattle farmers in Ontario are right now conducting experiments in cross-breeding that might make this come true in a few years' time. They are cross-breeding to domestic beef cows a giant, cream-colored breed of French cattle called Charolais.

GET RESULTS
And they are getting results that are causing raised eyebrows all round the beef-growing areas of the province.

The Charolais breed comes from the old French province of Charolais, where it has been undisputed champion for over 300 years.

When communication improved around the start of the 19th century, the fame of this gentle breed spread and now it is the second largest by numbers, in France.

GOOD BEEF
Foreign interest started when it became known that the Charolais has the ability to pass on its fast growing, and good beef production qualities, plus a strong distinct blood line that runs true.

There were early troubles on importation of specimens because French cattle were associated with reports of hoof and mouth disease. This was overcome by export of cattle to North America from various places outside France, where Charolais had been established.

Britain, which has very strong laws preventing cattle importations from France, this year got into the act when the British Ministry of Agriculture itself bought a quantity of herd bulls of good stock direct from France.

In Ontario, there are very few Charolais to be found, but the limited number of breeders who do own them are excited at the future prospects they see coming from this breed.

Many feel the answer in using the Charolais is in using pure Charolais to pure Hereford cows to obtain a first-cross hybrid vigorous calf to be raised and finished to high grade, as a first class beef steer.

This view is held by Roy Snyder, manager of the Waterloo Cattle Breeding Association.

"I see the best prospects for the Charolais in producing a straight beef animal, not as a dairy cow," he said. "From our present experience, we find the Hereford cross a good bet and suitable beef animal for Ontario," he said.

"Our results show extra good growth rate plus a minimum of waste fat in the slaughtered beast. That saving in waste can in the end be passed on to the advantage of the housewife," he said.

Dr. Hugh Lawford of Caledon conducting feed tests on Herefords against Charolais cross-Herefords found the cross breeds grew to 1,200 lbs. in 12 to 14 months.

The pure Hereford stock grew to 1,000 lbs. in the same period. Both were fed on grain.

Commonwealth examination

No minds changed at London conference

London conference winds up
Argentina faces new crisis
Quebec to vote in November

Leaders of the Commonwealth this week ended a searching examination of the community's foundations and future.

The issue: Whether the unique family of nations can hold together when and if Britain throws in its lot with the blossoming European Economic Community.

The result: "Nobody changed their minds," was the sumup of External Affairs Minister Howard Green.

This conclusion was reflected in the carefully-worded communiqué issued as the talks ended Wednesday. It expressed the "anxieties" of Britain's partners over her Common Market plans and renewed British pledges to protect Commonwealth interests if she joins the European club.

DIEFENBAKER DISAGREES
On the vital issue of agricultural products from Canada, Australia and New Zealand, the communiqué set out the British view that the enlarged Common Market would offer "reasonable" export opportunities.

Prime Minister Diefenbaker disagreed. "This is the viewpoint of British ministers," he said. "It was not acceptable."

to at least 12 of the prime ministers."

On the whole, however, the prime minister said he was "very well satisfied" with both conference and communiqué.

The document made no mention of a proposal by the Canadian leader for a free world trade conference, in Canada, aimed at cutting down international trade barriers.

That proposal, and Diefenbaker's over-all contribution to the conference, were criticized by opposition leaders in Canada. But Pakistan's president, Mohammad Ayub Khan, flew to Ottawa with the prime minister Thursday for a state visit to Canada, expressed praise for his "great contribution" to the talks.

CIVIL WAR THREATENS
Argentina faced a new crisis this week as a rebellious army faction, charging a plot to set up a military dictatorship, clashed with government troops.

A number of casualties resulted from fighting near Buenos Aires Thursday and new outbreaks were reported Friday after President Jose Maria Guido proclaimed a cease-fire.

The president also dismissed three military leaders whom the rebels had charged with plotting, but there were indications that they might not bow out peacefully.

LONG HEARTS TEMPT SOUTH

Italy added five International Match points to its lead in the first hand of the sixth session of the World Championship match.

Both North players chose to open with one diamond. The American East overcalled with hearts and West jumped to two clubs. South went to two three no-trump. The defense ued with the king after receiving a come-on in the suit. Then he shifted to a low club so the defense had four tricks before surrendering the lead.

West still had his two trump tricks and South was down three 800 points, and a net loss of 200 points on the hand.

The Italian East elected to pass—considerably better action than a club overall. The American South jumped to four hearts. West looked at his two sure trump tricks and ace and king of spades and doubled.

The defense was easy for him. He opened the ace of spades. (This Italian pair leads ace from ace-king). He contin-

About Television

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP) — A remarkable thing has happened to the television western: They have finally figured out a way to keep the flavor but get rid of the guns and villains.

NBC's new wide country, which had its premiere Thursday night, has been fashioned carefully to avoid all those danger areas that caused such loud criticisms about violence.

Thus, we had a saga about professional riders who follow the rodeo circuit. Superimposed on this basic background Thursday night was a story of a married rider suffering from a brain tumor gamely trying to make a quick dollar for his family while he still had a little time.

Unfortunately, this sad tale didn't come off convincingly.

While a number of new shows have been making their preliminary bows to the audience—and it's always more difficult to say a cordial hello to strangers than bid farewell to an old friend—some old acquaintances have been returning after a summer's holiday.

Naked City, ABC's police-action show, came back with a vital script and a splendid performance by guest-star Burgess Meredith which ought to be remembered months hence when Emmy time comes around. Meredith played with delightful invention, an alcoholic Greenwich Village poet in an imaginative script which was in the quality class of The Defenders.

OUR BOARDING HOUSE with MAJOR HOOPLE

TAKE IT FROM KATHY

Dear Kathy: A few weeks ago I was kissed by a boy whom I like very much. It was neither the time nor the place to do this, and I told him that I shouldn't have let it happen. He was sort of mad.

The boy hasn't spoken to me since and that's my problem. I want to go out with him very much. Should I wait and hope he will ask for a date or should I try to break the ice? I feel he liked me, too. Please answer if possible.

—Hopeful Virginia.

Dear Virginia: There is a time and place for everything. Apparently you know this but he either didn't know or didn't care. You were right. He was wrong. Public kissing is a bad taste anywhere and always. In some countries it's actually against the law.

One big consideration is the fact that he was too self-centered to listen and care about your feelings. Different standards would mean more hurt feelings and misunderstandings in the future. Leave the ice well frozen and save your concern for a less touchy boy.

One member paid into the holiday box and a bill of 75 cents was ordered paid.

Lunch was served by the hostesses, assisted by Mrs. C. Vintinner and Mrs. F. L. Gilbert.

Legion Auxiliary reports $60 made at food sale

SUTTON — The regular meeting of the Women's Auxiliary, Canadian Legion, No. 158, held its opening meeting on Sept. 12 after being closed for the summer months.

General business was taken care of. It was reported the food sale held at Knowlton was a success, proceeds being $60.

The Auxiliary room has been redecorated, sick members visited, and cards sent. Plans were made for the fall activities.

The surprise package, donated by Comrade Darlene Sevigny, was won by Comrade Bernice Russell.

Community Concerts opens on October 16 with Spanish troupe

Community Concerts have announced a three-concert season for Sherbrooke this coming winter, starting Oct. 16 with an "imaginative, yet traditional" team of Spanish dancers.

The Ballet Espanol Ximenez-Vargas is the troupe, and the descriptive phrase comes from the magazine Musical America, reviewing their last New York performances in April. The New York Times called them "muscular."

Though from Spain, Roberto Ximenez and Manolo Vargas draw on the folk dance of Mexico and Argentina as well as the Spanish provinces for the well-crafted numbers in their program.

In addition to Ximenez and Vargas, the company includes the guitarist Emilio Bonet and two featured female dancers, Maria Alba and Lola Soler.

On Feb. 12, the Community Concerts will bring the Paganini Quartet, a string ensemble consisting of Henri Temianka, Stefan Kravay, Albert Gillis and Lucien Laporte.

Closing artist for the concert season will be young American pianist Lee Luvisi. He will perform March 19. The Community Concerts are held annually on the stage of the Granada theatre on Wellington Street North.

The Sherbrooke Community Concerts organization's spring membership drive has been a success, and there are now about 1,200 members to fill the hall on Oct. 16. Cards will be mailed to members around Oct. 1.

Faithful color reproduction is sought

For as many years as he has had knowledge of photography, man has striven to reproduce scenes and subjects as they really are, and ultimately, in full color.

So with the approach of fall colors, it would be fitting to have a discussion on various types of color film available. Naturally, through research, color photography has been developed from crude examples of color to a more true-to-life reproduction. While improvements are made in the conventional type of color film, there are great strides, and already production, in color pictures in a minute.

Whether it will be actually a minute or not, we can only say at this time that the color picture, from exposure to print, will be made on the spot.

At a directors' meeting of the Land Polaroid Corporation last April, it was announced that color pictures made in the camera were being used under test by members of the firm and a selection of professional photographers. The tests were being made under conditions such as winter, and also at extreme heat. They are hoping to have the film available to the public this fall.

The results were satisfactory according to their reports: color fidelity and graduation prove very pleasing. However, whether or not the few troubles they mention, which seem to be not in the film but in the model of camera you have to use (all photographers were using a standard model), will cause further delay is not yet known.

Fall was mentioned for distribution date, and it would be timely, since the most colorful subject matter can be found anywhere in that season.

There was no mention of price for a roll of this unusual film in their report, but it can be expected the price will be based on what you pay now for color film and prints, plus extra for the privilege of having it right away.

With the constant improvement of conventional color film and prints, you can well expect a sudden turn for the better—but in which direction or of what nature, it would be difficult to say at the present to say.

The color film in use today falls generally into two types: subtractive reversal, which gives you transparencies for projection, or prints may be made from it; and subtractive negative, a film giving you a negative color, from which you may have color prints made, or black and white ones.

The subtractive reversal material is processed by reversal in the second development, taking place in the color developer, which produces not only a silver image, but a dyed image in each layer. There are actually three silver images with a built-in yellow filter between the top blue and the middle, cyan. The bottom layer is magenta. This yellow filter is to minimize the blue filtration from the top layer to the bottom two. The three silver images are eventually removed by chemical action, and the three dyed images form a composite color picture by subtractive synthesis.

Subtractive reversal film, such as Kodachrome, Ektachrome, or any film giving transparencies, has two main types, which require distinctly different processing techniques. The Kodachrome film uses controlled individual development of each layer, the developer containing appropriate forming agents for each layer.

The other subtractive reversal film, which the hobbyist, if he wishes, develops himself, such as Ektachrome or Ferrania color, has color couplers in each layer, so that one color developer simultaneously develops each layer to its correct color. The other popular color film is subtractive negative, such as Kodacolor or any film giving negative color. In principle this is similar to subtractive reversal film, but is processed to a color negative only. The final image is not only reversed tonally, but appears in colors complementary to those of the original.

For example, blue skies are brownish-yellow, green appear magenta (reddish), yellows appear as blues. From this kind of film you can make color prints by enlargement or contact, and also black and white prints.

If you're not completely confused by now, you can go out and start shooting the fall colors... with the film of your choice.

AGE HATH CHARM — It may be an old school but it teaches modern technology. This photo if it were taken in color, would give the warmth and atmosphere that actually surrounds Bishop's University at Lennoxville. This is a good illustration of a subject that looks as well in black and white as in color. Color negative film would be appropriate. Taken with a Rollicord camera, 1/100th of a second, F16.

Social Credit leader faces decision

The stand taken by Opposition Leader Daniel Johnson on the power nationalization issue when he opens his provincial election campaign at Amqui in the Gaspé area over the week-end may well determine the future action of the Social Credit group in the provincial field.

In declaring earlier in the week that his party did not intend to enter candidates in the Quebec election fight, Socred Deputy Leader Real Caouette included the significant statement that his party was dedicated to the principles of private enterprise and was opposed to the nationalization of the electricity companies.

If Mr. Johnson were to take a determined stand against the expropriation of the power firms, Mr. Caouette would find himself more or less obligated to throw the weight of his party behind the Union Nationale.

But if Mr. Johnson seeks to avoid the issue the Social Credit leader could justify reversing his non-intervention stand and permitting his party to field candidates of its own.

He could argue that his party alone offered any hope for the opponents of creeping socialism in the Quebec economy.

The Quebec Socred leader might have some difficulty in convincing the Quebec voters of his good faith however as the result of the arbitrary manner in which his British Columbia confrere, Premier Bennett, took over the British Columbia Electric after being elected on a platform of promoting the free enterprise system.

He might take advantage of the favorite explanation of politicians: "Conditions were different there."

Export controls for Quebec apples

A little over a decade ago, Quebec apples were a negligible factor in the Canadian apple market. But since then, the industry, largely centred in the Eastern Townships area, has burgeoned and prospered.

Now, as what appears to be a first-rate crop — perhaps a record one — nears maturity, steps have been taken to ensure an orderly international market for Quebec apples. An export control board has been set up by the Quebec Apple Growers' Board to administer standards which will be applied throughout the Quebec apple industry.

All apples exported under the board must previously be classified by the Federal Department of Agriculture. Only those classified "fancy" and extra-fancy will be made available to agents for export purposes.

Standard packaging will also be adopted. Apples must be selected in such a way that each box will contain 140, 160, 180 or 200 apples. Special permission must be obtained from the board to export Quebec apples that do not conform to the variety, size and packaging standards.

The board has also appointed its own selling agents to ensure complete control over the export crop, and no person, co-operative or corporation can sell or offer for sale Quebec apples for export outside the North American continent.

The move appears to be one that cannot fail to have beneficial results. In the hard bargaining of the overseas market place, only the very best products have any hope of finding a secure and expanding place. The standardization which the new organization will impose on Quebec apples for overseas export will ensure that only the very best are ever offered for sale off the continent.

This being so, there is no reason why Quebec apples cannot become an even more successful crop venture than they are now. A record export crop was produced last year, and the Board says that with the new regulations, "in years to come, it should be possible to export from 200,000 to 500,000 bushels of apples" annually.

The minute kids get back in school they start looking forward to a day off on Thanksgiving.

Other papers say:

Slow in promoting spread of English

English is not necessarily the language most suited to become the international language of the world. Its spelling is perverse. In the hands of officials, business men, and scientists (among others) it spawns jargon of baffling density. As spoken on Clydeside it is hardly comprehensible within the sound of Bow Bells. Yet English has been establishing itself as the most commonly used second language in spite of its defects. It has virtues, too, of course, notably the simplicity of its grammar, but it might also be thought to be disqualified, temporarily at least, as the tongue of a former imperial power. Yet the newly independent countries of Asia and Africa have been among those to find it most useful. As Professor Bruce Pattison remarked in an address to the British Association on Monday, English was the working language of 1955 and the Accra conference of 1957. And it seems increasingly unlikely that India will be able to replace English by Hindi as the official language in 1965 as was intended.

The native English-speakers should be glad to promote the extension of their language. In practice we have been rather slow to help. The British Council has more than once reported on the shortage of competent English teachers overseas. The Commonwealth education conference at Delhi pressed for a greater effort in the teaching of English, but the information given to Parliament last July that 30 teacher-trainers were being sent overseas is very far short of what is needed. New vitality

Peking — a city of fascination

PEKING (Reuters) — Peking, the capital of China, combines ancient splendor with new vitality, making it, for its few foreign residents, one of the world's most fascinating cities. Like Paris, it has the quality of bringing a misty look to the eyes of even the most hardened travellers long after they have left.

After living in Peking for 25 months as Reuters correspondent in Communist China, I feel I have joined those ranks and have little doubt that in future years I too will lapse into a faraway silence when anyone mentions the unique beauty of the "summer palace," or the "temple of heaven," or the exquisite taste of Peking duck.

From the rooftop patio of the house where I lived during the last months of my assignment, I looked upon a wide panorama of new and old Peking. The "forbidden city" of the Manchus, overthrown in the 1911 revolution, looms to the west, just across a narrow moat. Beyond its golden roofs and fiery red walls, new factories and public buildings stand out against the timeless tranquility of the western hills.

NEW FACTORIES
To the north and east, across a sea of grey tile roofs of the one and two-storey houses which fill Peking's residential areas, are more new factories and apartment buildings.

The new national art gallery, opened last May and of cream-colored stone with gold and green roofs and trimmings, is one of the best examples of the marriage of ancient and modern architectural styles in the new Peking.

Some who remember the Peking of the past, when it was a quiet town of university intellectuals and officials, lament the changes which have turned it into a busy national capital and industrial centre.

Great sections of the old city have been ripped down. Narrow streets have become wide boulevards, with houses cut by half and courtyards eliminated to make room for them.

Few cities in the world can match, for size and grandeur, the Avenue of Perpetual Peace, which crosses the city from east to west across the main Tienanmen Square.

OLD AND NEW
Within the 20-mile circle around Peking which is open to Westerners, you come across frequent examples of old and new.

Factory chimneys and blocks of workers' apartments stand above ancestral graves and ancient temples in the western suburbs, near the "summer palace" where the dowager empress once lived.

In the new diplomatic quarter outside old Peking's eastern wall, only the modern architecture of the Polish and Czechoslovak embassies enliven the scene. The other embassies, built by the Communist Chinese, are all alike.

Newly-planted trees are just beginning to break up the grey pattern of brick, stone and grey earth. Vegetable gardens take the space between the diplomatic buildings and there are no playgrounds for the dozens of foreign children who live in the apartments.

Life in the non-diplomatic residential areas is more pleasant. Chinese neighbors are friendly and talkative and choruses of happy children crowd around my apartment's big red street door, greeting every arrival and departure.

BUSY STREETS
Only 50 yards away is the Chinese equivalent of an English "pub," where pedicab drivers and residents gather to drink good draught beer, soda water, or tea.

Grocery stores, where householders line up for their rice rations, are farther down the streets and vegetables are sold from carts which stand on the corner morning and evening.

The street hums with life. Itinerant barbers and knife-grinders, tinkers and cobblers, announce their arrival with loud, wailing cries, or a miscellany of improvised cymbals and horns.

On the banks of the moat surrounding the "forbidden city," students sing airs from Peking operas.

The most rewarding experience is to walk in the narrow lanes, called hutongs, winding between main streets.

These dirt tracks pass between the dusty grey walls of closely-packed houses, each built round a tiny, enclosed courtyard.

PERFECT BOATING DAYS
Open gates afford glimpses

into these homes, while the lanes themselves are the playgrounds for Peking's thousands of children, who follow a foreigner of any nationality calling out: "Russian friend, Russian friend."

The memories which will always recall Peking make an almost endless list. Standing out among them are:

Perfect days of boating on the "summer palace lake," under clear blue skies, with friends from several nations.

Picnics in the shadow of the Ming tombs, or along the "great wall," and animated discussions on the patio of our house, with a full moon shining on the "forbidden city."

Those wonderful meals with Chinese friends at the Peking Duck restaurant, and spicy food from Szechwan province.

Adventures with God

Putting off what should be done can cause regrets and remorse

Two years ago my telephone rang and a reader whose name I cannot recall said: "Miss Scott, I was browsing in Britnell's book shop and I got into conversation with Albert Britnell. We drifted from one subject to another, finally discussing religious writers, among them you. Mr. Britnell is one of your ardent followers and he expressed a sincere wish to meet you. Would you drop in to see him some day?"

I promised that I would do so. But the busy days slipped by and I did not get around to visiting. On Sept. 6 business took me to the area and I dropped in to see Mr. Britnell.

We had a wonderful chat to gether and he urged me to keep on writing Adventures With God. I was strangely challenged, warmed and encouraged by his sincere words of appreciation and his promise to search for a large print concordance for me.

HIS SEARCH OVER
His search is over, and so is his life. On Wednesday his obituary appeared and when I read it I thanked God that I had got under the line and made the call before it was too late.

It is difficult to believe that this clean-cut, kindly book-lover and man-lover has finished his autobiography. Where is the unprinted manuscript of his life? It is in the archives of God where your and my life's story are being recorded day by day.

JANE SCOTT

Some day the books will be opened and the stories and authors judged and the events assessed. Some of the books will be miserable flops. They will contain little but the sordid details of a wasted life. They will portray the descent of souls who ignored God and lived for self alone.

HANG THEIR HEADS
Their authors will hang their heads in shame and remorse. Their hearts will be heavy with regrets for the things that they might have done and the heights that they might have climbed.

Like the rich man who lifted up his eyes in hell (Luke 16: 19-31) they will plead: warr my five brethren, "lest they also come into this place of torment."

By coincidence, spurred by two poems I had written many years ago, I had been feeling the urge to clean up a number of unfinished jobs. A visit to Mr. Britnell was one, a promise to appear on the Sunday evening broadcast was another.

Last Sunday evening I joined Georgia Lee, Gus and Mrs. Ambrose on a late show, reciting some of my verses. The quiet time was concluded with the reading of a clipping which turned up in my Bible during the show. Jeanie Ambrose read the lines:

DO IT NOW

Write off the past with its trouble and sorrow; Write off the past with its envy and pain; Love and forgive in the Now not tomorrow. For NOW is the time for beginning again.

Now is the time to decide where you're going; Now is the time to be patient and kind; NOW is the time for a bountiful sowing— Precious the moments now slipping behind.

May the Lord teach us our brief days to reckon— And may His wisdom be writ on each brow. Think not the future's bright promise beckon. THERE IS NO FUTURE— there's only THE NOW. Long after midnight I tossed

TODAY IN HISTORY

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Sept. 22, 1962 . . .

Nathan Hale was hanged in New York by the British as a spy 186 years ago today in 1776—during the American Revolution. Acting on orders from Gen. George Washington, Hale had disguised himself as a Dutch schoolmaster and made his way to New York where he was captured. His last words were: "I only regret that I have but one life to lose for my country."

1948—A U.S. Air Force plane lost in 1943 was found near Fort Nelson, B.C., with 11 bodies and $500,000 in gold and currency.

sed in my bed thinking of the number of things I ought to do and the number of times my efforts have been too little and too late.

And I thought of the sweet young girl I had counselled with at the Exhibition bandshell on Saturday night and a score of other young people who are writing the first chapter of their autobiography.

Oh, if these dear young folk would, like actress Georgia Lee, make Christ the centre of their lives and affection how thrilling their autobiographies could be! And how many regrets they could forestall!

But "The moving finger writes; and, having writ, moves on; nor all your piety or wit shall lure it back to cancel half a line, nor all your tears wash out a word of it."—Omar Khayyam.

The challenge rings again: put your house in order and make your peace with God for life is but "a vapor that appeareth for a LITTLE time, and then vanishes away."

And we ought not to put off important decisions and duties until tomorrow because tonight our number may be called.

REGRET
The blinds are drawn at No. 4. A purple streamer hangs on the door. The tired, old lady with locks of gray. Is holding her last—At Home—today.

I watched her sit of a summer's night. Alone on the porch, in the waning light, Waiting, watching for friends to call. Till night came down like a velvet pall.

Then, wearily, in she went to rest. A pang of loneliness in her breast. I told myself—I shall go and pay A visit to that dear soul one day.

And now—I hasten with cushioned feet, For sorrow has come to our little street. But, I ought to have visited her before The purple streamer went on the door.

Gerald Waring REPORTING

OTTAWA — It's an interesting coincidence, if coincidence it be, that Quebec's Premier Lesage has called a general election at a time when Liberal leader Pearson is doing his best to bring on a federal election.

Back in 1945 Prime Minister Mackenzie King and the Tory premier of Ontario, George Drew, played a game of election date ticktacktoe that is worth recalling in light of the Lesage-Pearson strategies.

Drew knew he was a shoo-in for a second term: like Lesage, he had only been elected two years previously.

The federal Tories under John Bracken believed they had a good chance to turf out King by capitalizing on popular dissatisfactions with the Liberals' wartime record, such as conscription, controls and taxes. They reasoned that a resounding election victory by Drew just before the federal vote would help them win a majority in Parliament.

Drew waited for King to set his date, June 11, and then leaped in with a June 4 date for the Ontario election, which he won handily. But despite the fine strategem of the federal Tories, King squeaked back with a tiny majority a week later.

Quebec will be the critical province for the Grits in the next election, whether the vote be this fall or next spring. They lost the election in Quebec because of the 26 seats that Social Credit took there. And there's a good deal to the point of view that they lost in Quebec because Lesage gave the national Liberals only moral support. He and his ministers failed to get out on the hustings and fight for the election of Liberal candidates.

He had his reasons. Until the dying days of the campaign it didn't look as though the Pearson candidates would need any help. The federal Liberals fully expected to take 60 Quebec seats out of 75. And Lesage is said to have believed that his government's active involvement in the campaign would enable his political opponents to injure him politically with allegations that he was a Pearson stooge.

But if Pearson can now precipitate a federal election overlapping the Quebec election, Lesage and his provincial Liberals can be of great assistance in helping swing the Quebec vote Liberal federally. This will entail routing Real Caouette's Creditistes Sociaux, the militant Quebec arm of the Social Credit Party. But Lesage doesn't need a crystal ball to see that the Creditistes are a potential threat to his administration.

All of this back room politicking, if such it be that has produced the prospect of juxtaposition of federal and Quebec elections, will come to naught if the Socreds vote in the Commons to keep the government in office.

There is not predicting what they will do, except a generalization that they will act in what they believe to be their own best interests. And they may not want to take on Mike Pearson and Jean Lesage at the same time.

But Liberal party insiders report Pearson is preparing to cast as wide a net as possible to catch the Socred and New Democratic votes needed to defeat the government. Pearson will move a want of confidence motion, I'm told, that will simply say the Commons lacks confidence in the government without listing any reasons that, by themselves, might give the minor parties an excuse to oppose the Liberals' motion.

doubling and trebling enrollment. It values its modest size, which makes the campus a community of friends rather than a sea of degree-hunters.

There is an elaborate program of freshman welcoming, at Bishop's with speeches from deans and chats with senior advisors, as well as the usual frosh ribbing.

Even Father Sirois admits that the residence at a university the size of his is rather like a hotel. At places like Oxford in England they have developed a college system which allows for much more mingling.

The new U. of S. residential building has one room to a student, and they are as compact as ship's cabins.

The University College of the university, contrary to the custom of basing universities on the rock of an arts college, was opened after the foundation of the university, which began as a collection of professional schools.

At Bishop's, Principal Glass admits that they have had to turn away many qualified applicants even from the Eastern Townships, although they make a special effort to accommodate regional students.

Sherbrooke's division of students Father Sirois estimates at "one-third from Sherbrooke, one-third from the rest of the Eastern Townships, and one-third from elsewhere, mostly Quebec." There are two Haitian students, and one arrived this year from Uganda.

Where will the increasing number of young people knocking on university doors go in years to come? To swell present campuses even further, or into new institutions? Principal Glass didn't care to venture that far into the future. Bishop's present record number of registrants providing enough problems in a hectic academic season.

But Father Sirois had one encouraging comment: "University population is everywhere growing faster than the population of the country at large. We are getting there."

"Virtutem in 'charitate' says the University of Sherbrooke's motto in the Latin that both this French-speaking institution and English-speaking Bishop's use to express their guiding thought: "Recti cultus pectora roborant," heads the Bishop's motto.

Universities today are trying to have the "charity" to open their doors to the rising tide of students, without sacrificing the "right learning" that is their reason for existing.

ding because of a shortage of labor. The men just won't work. The way it looks now to some State Department economic experts, there's going to be trouble in the rice, corn and bean crops. By next spring, the Cuban Reds would be due for real trouble without the increased Soviet aid.

4. Worst of all, says a key aide to Defense Secretary Robert S. McNamara, "this new aid is another significant step in a series." We don't know what they will try next... a submarine base, an offensive missile base. We can't let things go that far.

Says a military officer: "Like Berlin, the Russians take a step and then wait. If they get away with what they've done, they take another step. That's what worries us."

The United States has quietly started a move among Latin American countries that will lead, diplomats hope, for a way to prevent citizens of the Americas from sneaking to Cuba for guerrilla training and then sneaking back to their home countries to form underground Red military and political cells.

This training of Latins is similar to that given by the North Vietnamese to the Viet Cong for their South Viet Nam operations and by the Russians and Red Chinese to Red North Koreans before the Russian occupation of North Korea. This Cuban training has been stepped up in the past half year.

The United States also will attempt to strengthen the economic semi-boycott of Cuba.

The power to call up the reserves is primarily a gesture, requested of Congress by President John F. Kennedy because officials don't know what else to do to meet the situation, some key government men say privately.

A Defense Department planner says the last call up of the reserves is believed to have done some good in slowing Khrushchev down.

"If something did happen in Cuba or Berlin," says a military man, "the reserves would be needed for backup if regular units were sent overseas." The military men see a possibility of a Communist-inspired revolt in Latin America coupled with a plea by the beleaguered government for U.S. military help. But they don't seem to seriously expect this during the period President Kennedy has asked for special

Back of this current Khrushchev buildup in Cuba, Defense and State men recall, is a series of Russian aid programs for Cuba which fit a pattern.

The Soviet Union supplied Cuba with the MIGs and other fighter aircraft, the medium and heavy tanks, the field artillery and the anti-aircraft artillery to give the Cuban ground forces "an armored, artillery, anti-aircraft and anti-tank capability largely lacking in the past and unknown to other Latin American countries of the Caribbean area," in the words of a State Department analyst.

KENNEDY'S BUSY — In the United States, it was a busy week for the remarkable Kennedy family.

President John F. won a major victory Wednesday when the Senate passed a trade bill giving him wide powers to lower or eliminate tariffs barriers.

His brother, Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy, was involved in a tense integration struggle as his justice department fought attempts by the state of Mississippi to bar a Negro from entering the University of Mississippi.

Meanwhile, the youngest brother, Edward M. (Ted) Kennedy, made a successful political debut by winning, in a Massachusetts primary, the Democratic nomination for Senate elections in November.

On the other side of the world, an era ended with the death of the Imam of Yemen, a legendary ruler who ruled his barren little country with a ruthless hand, beheading opponents — including his own brothers — keeping slaves and spending his fortune lavishly. Scouting and Cubbing
BY DIANE DURRANT

"I promise to help the Old Wolves of the Pack and to give my Six the best lead I can." Peter Howard and Grant Blackmore made this solemn promise last week at St. Peter's Pack as Akela, K. Bartlett presented them with their second stripe, making them sixers.

New Chums, Eric Rothchild, Barry Friedlander, and Robert Ross were welcomed into the Pack last week, learning the mysteries of the Grand Owl, the Cub salute, and the strange command of "Pack!"

Stephen Currier was presented with two badges Friday night: The Observers badge, which he earned at Cub camp this summer, and the Team Player badge. Several other Cubs won badges at camp, but they cannot be awarded until the boy receives his Second Star.

Fifth Sherbrooke is sorry to lose the services of John Butt who has been Scoutmaster of the Troop for the past three years. To fill the position, John has found an able successor in John Inebault who has been attached to Seventh Sherbrooke for a number of years.

One hundred twenty-seven Scouts, parents, and friends from the Sherbrooke District boarded the TCA jet airliner on September 15 to enjoy a courtesy flight around the Cornwall area. Prior to the flight, a guided tour of the repair shops was put on, and lunch was available in the employees cafeteria. For many of the passengers, it was a first flight and it was a thrilling experience for all.

Leaders are reminded of the upcoming Scouters' Conference at St. Marguerite in the Laurentians and, remembering the good time and valuable benefits derived in past years, are urged to make every effort to attend.

The first District Council meeting of the season will be held on September 25. As this will be the time to finalize plans for the October 6th activities, Scouts and Group Committee members are asked to keep this date free.

In Memoriam

PEARSON — In loving memory of a dear husband who passed away one year ago, September 23rd, 1961.

The golden gale stood open, one year ago today. With farewells left unspoken, we sadly slipped away. God knew that you were weary, the hill too steep to climb. He gently took your hand in His, and whispered "Peace be thine."

Sadly missed by ANNE (wife)

ALBERT (son) AND FAMILY

RUSSELL — In loving memory of our dear son Garth Sheldon Russell, who departed this life, September 23rd, 1961.

Sadly missed by MAM & DAD, GARY AND DEBORAH West Brome, Que.

New Lennoxville school extension consolidates classes

The excavation work for the extension at the LENNOXVILLE HIGH SCHOOL was done by

PETER WALTERS
CONTRACTOR
Conley St. — Lennoxville — Tel. LO. 2-5377

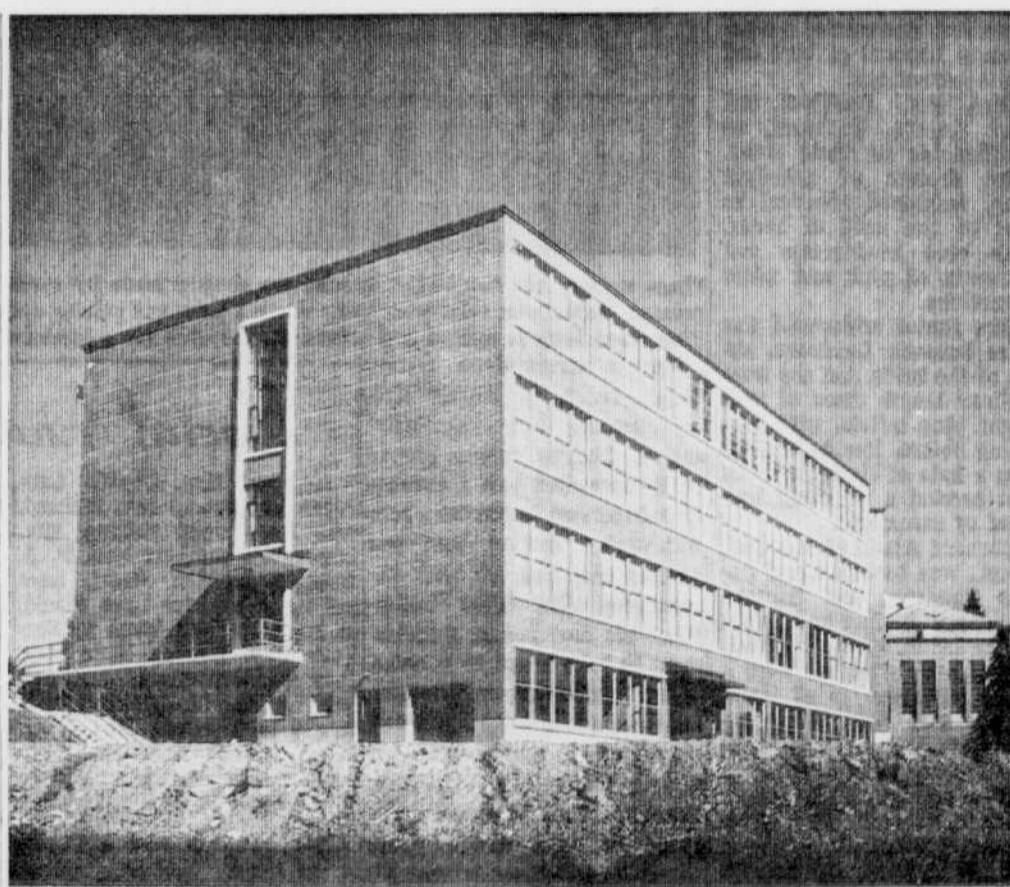

The benefits which have accrued from the new extension to the Lennoxville school are basically threefold according to the Lennoxville principal, Edward Perry.

"First of all the new extension allows us to have all our classrooms in one building rather than scattered all over the town as we have had in the past.

"Secondly, the building with its new labs and new classrooms allows us to have all high school classrooms in one place rather than scattered all over the building and thus intermixed with the grade school classes and children.

"And thirdly, the new facilities have allowed us to initiate a commercial course into our curriculum," Mr. Perry said.

In the past, the Lennoxville school system had maintained five classrooms at the old Ascot school as well as two classrooms in the Douglas Hall of the United Church. So cramped for space was the Lennoxville school system before the addition of the new extension that as well as these seven classes which were held outside the main building, two classes were maintained in the basement of the building and one in the library. However, with the new extension and the 12 new classrooms which it affords, the days of a crowded school in Lennoxville are over. In fact, there are still two classrooms in the new extension that are empty and waiting for the day when the population of school-aged youngsters increases once again.

Aside from the 12 new classrooms in the new extension there are two household science labs, one for cooking one for sewing; two commercial art labs; a chemistry lab; a combined physics and biology lab; a science lecture room, a library; and a book storage room.

The extension was constructed by the firm of J. M. Jeanson and Son of Sherbrooke at a cost of some $330,000, of which 85 per cent was covered by a grant from the provincial government.

The architect for this structure was Perry and Patch of Montreal.

The reason that an extension was constructed rather than building a separate edifice was that the heating facilities in the old building were large enough to accommodate the new addition and thus by constructing an extension rather than a separate building much money was saved in the heating equipment.

Last year the percentage increase in enrollment at the Lennoxville school was 13 whereas this year it tapered off to two to three per cent which is the expected figure.

The probable reason for the unexpected increase last year was the moving of new families to Lennoxville due to new industries locating there.

How scientific prayer helps to promote and support right government will be the topic of a Christian Science lecture to be given in the auditorium of Victoria Hall, Westmount, on Monday evening, September 24, Charles Louis Rolfe of Los Angeles, California, a member of the Christian Science Board of Lectureship. Open to the public without charge, the lecture is being sponsored by the members of the Christian Science church on Landsdowne Avenue in Westmount.

A native of St. Paul, Minn., Mr. Rolfe gave up a musical career as a concert pianist in 1940 to devote his full time to the practice of Christian Science healing. In 1955 he became an authorized teacher of Christian Science. He is well known to television audiences in the U.S. and Canada because of his frequent appearances as moderator on the Christian Science program "How Christian Science Heals."

Buckland-Grady vows solemnized

COATICOOK — The marriage of Joan Mae, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Austin K. Grady of Dixville, to Mr. John Wilcox Buckland, of Waterloo, son of Mr. and Mrs. Allen John Buckland, of Waterloo, took place on Saturday, September 15, in St. Stephen's Church, Coaticook. Rev. Grover Kendrick officiating. Mrs. Clifford Burton played the wedding music and Mr. Robert MacAlpine sang "O Perfect Love" during the signing of the register. White gladioli were on the Altar and standards of yellow and bronze dahlias were used to decorate the church. Bows of tulie, caught with sweet peas marked the guest pews.

The bride, who was given away by her father, was in a gown of white poul de soie, the fitted bodice having a scoop neckline, Alencon lace insets and long sleeves, falling in points over the hands. The skirt was fashioned with back and side fullness, falling into a chapel train, with insets of Alencon lace. Her shoulder-length veil of tulie illusion was held by a tiara of seed pearls, and she carried a cascade bouquet of yellow Sweetheart roses and white shasta daisies and ivy. She wore a string of pearls, a gift of the groom.

Miss Donna Learmonth, classmate of the bride, was maid of honor and wore a pale green, street length frock of peau de soie, having a draped skirt, elbow-length sleeves and matching slippers. Her head-dress was a band of the dress material with a tulie veil. She carried a bouquet of Shasta daisies.

The Misses Gerry Gaber, Marilyn Pugh, and Jeanie Cote, cousin of the bride, were the bridesmaids and wore similar gowns to the maid of honor, in three shades of yellow. Their bouquets were also shasta daisies.

Mr. Bennett Buckland, was best man for his brother. The ushers were Messrs. Foster Buckland, James Buckland and William Buckland, brothers of the groom, and William Jarvis, cousin.

The bride's mother wore a two-piece costume in yellow and brown printed silk and brown accessories and her corsage was of tangerine carnations.

The reception was held in the church hall, which was decorated with fall flowers. The bride's table was centered with a three-tier wedding cake, decorated in cathedral style, made by a friend. Bowls of sweet peas and roses were used on the table and silver candelabra with tall white tapers.

Following the reception, the bride and groom left for a

For a scrumptious tasting lunch, snack, or supper dish, try savory, hot "Butterfly" snacks. They're simply prepared by spreading half a package of refrigerated butterflake rolls with spicy deviled ham and pairing each roll off with the remaining rolls. These "butterflies" are then put on a cookie-sheet to bake about 15 minutes, or until golden brown. Luscious, hot mushroom soup is served on the side to pour over the top of each "butterfly." Crisp, fresh garnishes, such as sliced green pepper or radish-roses complete the dish - and apple wedges are combined with fruit compote, on the side, to touch off a dessert.

SAVORY, HOT BUTTERFLY SNACKS

1 pkg. refrigerated butterflake rolls 1 1/2-oz. can deviled ham, 1 can cream of mushroom soup.

Spread the sides of 6 butterflyflake rolls generously with the deviled ham and pair off spread rolls with remaining rolls to make "butterflies." Place each on a cookie sheet bake at 375°F about 15 minutes, until golden brown. Heat mushroom soup slowly and serve on top of snacks. Six servings.

LENNOXVILLE — HUNTINGVILLE W.C.T.U.

The opening session of the United Lennoxville and Huntingville W.C.T.U. met Tuesday in the parlor of the Lennoxville United Church, with Mrs. D. C. Masters in the chair. Mrs. L. Davidson, conducted the devotional exercises with Mrs. A. J. Macintosh at the piano.

The secretary, Mrs. W. E. Hodge, read the roll call and minutes. Mrs. Macintosh gave the Flower Mission report, in the absence of Miss F. Crane. Due to the absence of Mrs. J. Wright, Mrs. Hodge gave a satisfactory financial report.

Satisfaction was expressed for the lovely Temperance Posters on display at the School Fair recently.

Discussion regarding essay work was taken up, a committee, Mrs. Macintosh and Mrs. G. Sutherland were appointed, other members to contact different schools and report to this committee.

Mrs. W. E. Hodge gave a report of the Provincial Convention, held in Montreal, in June. New report forms will be available before next spring, and unions are urged to read forms carefully and fill in all questions.

More essays were written last year and many posters were made. Leaflets were sent out in great numbers, a fact noted was that the policemen of Montreal West, took two hundred of these and put them in cars. The film Pay the Piper, was teletyped and shown on T.V., another new film will be purchased and will be used in this way. It was felt that the Government is increasingly becoming more concerned about the evils of alcohol.

Mrs. Masters thanked Mrs. Hodge.

Tentative plans were made to have a Rally for Girls in October.

Satisfaction was expressed that the Huntingville W.C.T.U. members will attend the Lennoxville - Huntingville Union.

It is hoped that this union will grow in strength and continue all phases of temperance work, carried on by both unions in the past.

The session closed with the Diraph.

Collectors of United States coins will find there is a wide variation in prices for what would seem to be identical pieces, but are actually coins produced by different mints across the country.

This is due to the fact that a silver dollar, for instance, may have been turned out at three or four branches, but the run at each plant was different. So the version bearing the mint mark of the smallest production run is in shorter supply and therefore commands a better price when it becomes part of a collection.

There used to be several branches of the mint in the U.S., but all have been closed except Philadelphia and Denver. How the mint mark affects the value of any coin is well illustrated in answering a query from Mrs. A. E. S., of Melbourne, Quebec, who asks about several numismatic items.

A United States $1 gold coin of 1851, about which she inquires, is catalogued at $32.50 in Very Fine condition, if it bears no mint mark. Lack of this mark indicates it was struck at the Philadelphia mint.

However, if there is a mint mark, it will appear on the reverse below the wreath. This coin, bearing an O, indicating it was struck at New Orleans, would be worth $30; bearing a D (struck at Denver) it would be worth $100; and marked C (Charlotte, North Carolina) would be worth $110.

Mrs. A. E. S. also lists two Indian Head nickels of 1927 and 1928. These coins, commonly called "buffalo nickels," would be worth from 25 cents to $12 depending on condition.

Our correspondent doesn't state in what metal her Victoria Bridge Medal of 1860 was struck. White metal, bronze, silver and gold were used. In 1869, Alfred Sandham wrote of this medal: "Those in white metal met with a very extensive sale, and are consequently plentiful; bronze copies are scarce, and those in silver or gold are rarely met with, but in possession of original subscribers." (TNS).

A well-bred story from Antony Powell

A QUESTION OF UPBRINGING by Antony Powell, Penguin Books 203 pp., 85c.

A Question of Upbringing will appeal particularly to the introspective and to the philosophical reader; written in a quiet and thoughtful vein, in unquestionably fine English, Antony Powell's story of Nick Jenkins and his friends discloses just how much a person's family background contributes to his character, his friendships, his education and his eventual place in life.

It all depends on where you sit.

The truth of this saying was once more brought home to me this week when I received a letter from CLARKE, IRWIN & COMPANY recommending—gently but none the less firmly (and certainly justifiably)—at a review we recently printed on one of their books. The book was PAINTED LADY by Leonard Falkner. It seems that our reviewer—we can only blame such a lapse on mid-summer madness—judged the book on its merits as a novel (which it wasn't) instead of as a biography (which it was).

Now as anyone can understand, such a mistake on the part of reviewer can put an author in a truly intolerable position—and lead, through no real fault of his own, to such a literary flaying as he received on our page. But the real horror of Mr. Falkner's position only becomes evident when we realize that—our reviewer being a woman—he ended up at the mercy of two women; his "Painted Lady" heroine and the reviewer.

And obviously about neither of them could he do much! His heroine had lived—and died—a century or so before he got around to writing about her, so he certainly couldn't be held accountable for her behavioural lapses. And as for the reviewer—no knowing in advance just how she liked her heroines—fictional or otherwise—to behave, how could he be sure of pleasing her?

All in all it appears that between the PAINTED LADY and our reviewer, Mr. Falkner has been going through quite a bad time. We can only apologize for our share of Mr. Falkner's unhappy hours—and hope that the next time he writes a book he either picks a better behaved heroine or ends up with a reviewer who reads the small print on the dust jacket even at the height of her midsummer madness!

CANADA PHOTOGRAPHICALLY. By special arrangement with the English art book publishers THAMES & HUDSON, the Canadian publishers, MACMILLAN of Canada has originated a project that will result in an unusual book—a photographic exploration of Canada from the southern border to the Arctic and from Newfoundland to the Queen Charlotte Islands.

The photographer, Peter Varley of Toronto, is now travelling through Canada by car. He has already covered the prairies, the foothills of the Rockies, the Rockies themselves, and parts of the British Columbia coast. Of the thousands of photographs he is taking, about two hundred of the best, representing every area of Canada, will appear in the book, which will be published simultaneously in Toronto, London and New York in the fall of 1964.

Is your child having trouble with Arithmetic? If so, perhaps you—and he—should read "MODERN MATHEMATICS: Introductory Concepts And Their Implications" published by W. J. GAGE LIMITED and written by an Edmonton teacher, A. B. Evenson. It explains in layman's terms many basic concepts of mathematics that feature the new approach to this subject. Published simultaneously in the United Kingdom and the United States, this 205-page book is already ensuring widespread readership.

Guide to understanding Dylan Thomas

A READER'S GUIDE TO DYLAN THOMAS by William Tindall, Ambassador Books, 305 pp., $4.50.

The Welsh poet Dylan Thomas, who died at 37, did more than any one poet in this century to create an audience for poetry. During the late 40s or early 50s, he swept across the United States and even darted up into Canada reading his own poems and those of other 20th century poets.

The minute Thomas began to read the atmosphere was charged, electrified. His audience sat spellbound. Even if they could not grasp the sense of much that he read, they grasped the fact that here was a man reading with what Tindall terms "the true voice of feeling."

Thomas also made a great many recordings of his own work which have been widely distributed and sold. Thus there are thousands who have heard him read; of these thousands there will be some who will want to go beyond the emotional feeling, the intensity, and the vivid, original imagery to get at the deeper meaning and sense of his highly romantic, extravagant and often occult poetry. To such readers and students of Thomas' poetry, this book is of real value. It should—as its author suggests—be read as a sort of manual alongside the individual poems; it is a handbook which provides an analysis of every poem in The Collected Poems of Dylan Thomas.

In his introduction, Tindall relates some of his own experiences with and observations of the poet during his stay in America; he also gives an evaluation of much of the available material and commentary on Thomas and his work. One gathers from all this that the restless Welsh poet was just as much of an enigma to those who thought they knew him as some of his poems are to those who think they can understand contemporary poetry. The detailed analyses of the poems are comprehensive; Tindall frequently suggests several possible interpretations and many of them are, I think, valid. One of the virtues of this book is that it will—amongst those studying Thomas—inspire controversy which should lead to greater insight and understanding of Thomas' poetry.

Halifax blast again inspires fiction

THE TOWN THAT DIED by Michael J. Bird, Ryerson Press, 192 pp., $4.50.

On December 6, 1917, in the early hours of the morning, a French freighter transporting more than 2500 tons of high explosives collided with another vessel in Halifax harbour and blew up. The result was a man-made explosion unequalled in force and fury until the first A-bomb was dropped on Hiroshima during the Second World War. The Halifax waterfront was levelled, over a square mile of the city was demolished, and a gigantic tidal wave resulted, tearing ships from their moorings and scattering their broken parts over an area of my miles.

Several literary works have appeared as a result of the Halifax explosion. The Town That Died is the latest. Michael Bird, the author of this work, must be commended for the large amount of research he has put into the development of his story.

As a history, the book is quite acceptable. However, as literature, the story fails. It appears that it was Mr. Bird's aim to reveal to the reader the reactions of individuals unsuspecting and unwillingly placed in a position of stress and turmoil in which they must prove themselves for what they really are.

Had he succeeded, he might well have produced a best seller. Somewhere along the line, however, his purpose is lost. There are no people in this story, only characters; it is almost impossible for a reader to picture the events related here as having actually occurred.

For anyone who knows little or nothing about the Halifax explosion of 1917, The Town That Died is well worth reading. Don't be too surprised, though, to finish the book only half believing what you have read. There are many other works based upon this momentous event in history that are much more realistic.

Caste feuds thwart young love amid poverty of Kerala port because of it.

Her father, Chemban Kunju, an almost penniless fisherman, has a burning ambition to own a boat and net and become an employer. This, too, is a violation of tradition as his caste is too low to allow him to be anything but a hired hand on someone's else's boat.

Encouraged by Chakki, Karuthamma's mother, Parakkutti loans Chemban Kunju enough money to purchase his boat and net. As Chemban rises in the world, his character changes and he becomes proud and miserly. He refuses to repay Parakkutti and so ruins him.

In the meantime, his fellow caste members become very jealous of him and the whisper of scandal is passed about the village—his daughter is unmarried and this is because she is under the spell of the Moslem, Parakkutti. Chemban chooses her a husband from a nearby village, Palani by name, chiefly because he has no family and will marry her without a dowry.

At the wedding a violent quarrel ensues between father and daughter, and Chakki, the mother, becomes desperately ill. Because of this, tradition after tradition is violated, each of which can bring down the wrath of the sea goddess and destruction upon all.

She cannot visit her mother as custom demands so her new neighbors are sure she has been married off to hide a deep sin. Gossip is soon spread that a Moslem is her lover and as a result she becomes estranged from her husband who in turn loses his job as helmsman in the most successful fishing boat of his village.

None will employ him, as everyone believes his wife to be evil. Eventually, tragedy befalls the whole family as the inevitable result.

The story, is magnificently told and the characters splendidly drawn. For a Canadian reader, the book does three things: it paints in living and believable terms an unknown culture and way of life; it arouses interest in India, and it relates a tender and most intriguing story. Readers of good books will thoroughly enjoy it.

Where are they?

Council has room, board, no writers

By RONALD EVANS.

Where are all Canada's new young creative writers? Nowhere, it seems.

That's the way it looks, at least, from the latest report of the Canada Council.

The Council's fifth annual report released this month says in its preamble:

"Now that the Council has had five years' of experience, we believe that we have gained enough knowledge to justify an attempt to look ahead, not very far it is true, and not in the hope of defining accurately every hillock and pool by the road, but in the reasonable expectation that we may discover at least some of the more prominent features of the terrain into which we shall move within the next few years."

And so the Council peers out across the artistic terrain, and what does it see? Much that is encouraging.

The theatre territory doesn't look too good; there are several thriving centres but a dearth of representative regional theatres and virtually no playwrights of any note. Still the situation looks better than it has for many years.

Opera looks better still, with the Canadian Opera Company flourishing and Canadian stars distinguishing themselves in foreign capitals.

The view is somewhat more cloudy in ballet: the Council now is in the midst of a survey of the fortunes and future of Canada's three ballet companies; but again there are signs of great achievement.

Music, too, has its own special problems, says the council, (a lack of co-operation among the major symphonies is one of them), but things are encouraging.

And what about creative writing? Next to nothing.

In only one section of the report, in a passage dealing with the gift by Olivia Terrell of Stanley House on the Baie des Chaleurs, Que., does the Council refer directly to creative writers. Here the Council hopes to put up creative artists, perhaps for a month or two, "when they have urgent work at hand."

"We believe," the Council report continues, "that we can have every expectation of finding, particularly among the younger people, artists to whom the opportunity to work hard in pleasant surroundings and congenial company will be invaluable."

Maybe so. But the council hasn't been that successful to date in finding these hard-working young artists so far, particularly among the writers.

At the back of the 168-page Council Report are some 70 pages listing the Council's $1,285,000 disbursements in grants, awards, scholarships and fellowships. The expenditures to individual creative writers can be listed in less than a page. There were just 11 such grants, five of them to novelists, out of a total of 608 grants, spread through the arts, humanities and social sciences.

It's a pretty pitiful showing for the creative writers.

Now, does this indicate the Council is somehow prejudiced against writers, that it deliberately withholds its largesse from them?

I don't think so. I think it's simply a matter that the Council can't find the promising young writers in this country to recognize and encourage.

There are a fair number of successful, established creative writers in this country. And there's at least one outstanding writer, Brian Moore, in a sort of intermediary stage: not yet perhaps at the top of his powers but already drawing away and beyond our best to date.

But the promising newcomers are few and far between; hard to find, as the Council discovered.

Once more then: where are all Canada's new young creative writers? Nowhere, it seems. (TNS)

RICHARD STRAUSS: Also Sprach Zarathustra; Chicago Symphony, Fritz Reiner cond. (RCA VICTOR stereo LSC 2608) — Of all Richard Strauss' richly-embroidered tone poems, none sparkles and glitters more brilliantly than this long work, based on the book of the same name by German "superman" philosopher, Frederick Nietzsche. But it is not necessary for the listener to be familiar with Nietzsche or be prepared to plumb the philosophical depths of Strauss' composition to be enthralled by this stunning performance. Mr. Reiner exploits every twist and turn of Strauss' music — and there are an astonishing number — to the fullest, producing an interpretation that fairly throbs.

In an interview with Mr. Walter, printed on the jacket of the album, the conductor says: "It needs some maturity to understand the depth of emotion which speaks in Mozart's seeming tranquillity and measure."

To these generally lighter works, Mr. Walter brings the maturity of which he speaks. The result is a series of performances which reach to the core of Mozart as few other performances have. The Columbia Orchestra responds in first class fashion.

Collecting

in the

Townships

The stamp clubs are holding their regular meetings now and it is reported that excellent attendance has been the outstanding feature to date.

The Eastern Townships Club, meeting in Sherbrooke, held its annual election last Thursday evening. The president is Claude Willard, the vice-president elect being A. A. Audet, and the secretary-treasurer Mrs. L. Caron.

Our congratulations are sent along to these well known philatelists who will do a great job in bringing the club up to the standards expected. The next meeting of this club, Sept. 27, will see the Royal Philatelic Society of Canada Plaque presented to Mr. Willard for his outstanding contribution to philately in this area. This club is probably one of the few bilingual clubs in the world and as such reaches a cross section of our population.

While this aspect does present problems it also helps to cement the friendship that exists in Canada, and it also gives collectors an opportunity to participate in discussions about their hobby in two languages. You would do well to attend the next meeting and join this active club.

• • • • •
The St. Francis Collectors Club held its meeting this past week, and the feature was an auction of lots of stamps donated to the club by its members in order to replenish the funds. It is planned to have Dr. A. C. Hill, of Sherbrooke, as one of the speakers this coming November. Dr. Hill has collected post marks of this province and at the present time has a very comprehensive collection.

This phase of philately is becoming very popular and certainly is within the reach of all collectors. You should keep Wednesday the 3rd of October open so that you may attend the meeting in Lennoxville. Mr. Gauthier of the Canadian Post Office Department will be the special guest and he will have some films and information about our postal service. The fellowship of these clubs is an asset to your hobby. Join now and enjoy a full season of philately at its best.

National Immunization Week to start tomorrow

Time lag proves costly

Francis Quarles, a 17th century poet, wrote "One today is worth two tomorrows." The truth of this statement is forcibly demonstrated in a pamphlet on which this article is based entitled, THE COSTLY TIME LAG, issued by the Public Health Service of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

The time lag referred to is that which elapses between the discovery and the use of medical knowledge.

Every year, millions of dollars and man years of time are spent in research to produce new life-saving knowledge but unnecessary deaths and physical and mental handicaps continue to occur because the knowledge gained from this research is not fully utilized.

The intelligent and timely use of the results of medical research can cut cancer deaths, prevent some heart diseases, reduce the incidence and severity of mental illness, lessen physical handicaps, save eyesight, wipe out tuberculosis, prevent polio and keep teeth from decaying. During 1959, the latest year for which we have complete statistics for Canada, 22,576 people died from cancer of some type.

If all current knowledge about detection, control and treatment of cancer were fully applied, the number saved annually could have been increased by 50% or better.

Some forms of heart disease are preventable, e.g. rheumatic heart disease. The prompt medical treatment of streptococcal infections which often start a chain reaction leading to rheumatic fevers and rheumatic heart disease could prevent recurring infections and ultimate damage to the heart.

While the number of deaths caused by mental, psychometric and personality disorders, 479 in 1959, appears to be insignificant, the number of people incapacitated temporarily or permanently is formidable. Many of them experience a living death and are lost to society.

One of every 250 residents in Canada has, at one time or another, been a patient in a mental hospital or is one now and more hospital beds are occupied by the victims of mental illness than of physical disability.

With mental health clinics, child guidance centres and other psychiatric services, it is possible to prevent the development of much of the all too prevalent mental illness. In many parts of Canada, existing preventive services reach few of the emotionally disturbed.

Although techniques have been developed to detect possible cases of glaucoma painlessly in a matter of seconds and to detect diabetes from urine and blood specimens, these two diseases are responsible for 20% of all blindness because of the large number of untreated cases. Over 70% of this blindness could have been prevented by early detection and treatment.

And so the sad story goes. Tuberculosis could be eliminated. Vaccination reduces the risk of polio by 90% but as long as groups of the population remain unvaccinated or partially vaccinated, new cases causing new epidemics may be expected. The average Canadian has lost half his teeth by the time he is 40 and hundreds of thousands have lost all their teeth. 65% of all tooth decay can now be prevented by drinking water which contains one part of fluoride per million parts of water. Children get lifetime protection against tooth decay as simply as this. "They drink away tooth decay."

Canada's record in infant and neonatal mortality is an unenviable one. In the former, we share with Northern Ireland and Scotland the doubtful distinction of being behind 19 other countries.

National Immunization Week will be celebrated throughout Canada for the twentieth year the week of September 23th. This event is sponsored by the Health League of Canada in co-operation with Health Departments.

The purpose of the campaign is to inform Canadians that every child should be protected against diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus, poliomyelitis and smallpox. Much progress has been made but there are still too many deaths which might have been prevented by immunization.

With the approach of National Immunization Week, September 23 to 30, it is well to remember the slogan, It's Wise to Immunize.

MANSONVILLE — Mr. George Lavery and family have moved to Howick and Mr. Richard Warden, new student in charge of the United Church services, and his wife, have moved into the Manse.

Mrs. Montie Elsdon and her sister, Mrs. Harris, of Montreal, are spending a holiday at Knowlton Landing at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ray Jones.

Mrs. Catherine Marchant, of Montreal, was a weekend guest of her mother Mrs. Ethel Bailey.

Dr. Nelson Reilly, of Victoria, B.C., visited his mother, Mrs. J. Clark Reilly, for a few days.

It is only through repeated reminders that Canadians will take advantage of immunization and safeguard their families. Adults too need protection against polio and tetanus. That is why we observe National Immunization

BEAVERS WIN BASEBALL CHAMPIONSHIP

Sherbrooke Alouettes, who finished first in the Provincial Eastern Townships Baseball League, lost out in their first bid for league honors Thursday evening when they went down 4-1 to the Acton Vale Beavers and lost the series 4-2.

The Als put on a good show and it looked as though this was their year. They got away to a flying start with two straight wins over the Beavers but then they ran into trouble and dropped the next four. The Beavers proved in the final game they had a terrific team and without a doubt Steve Oleschuck, at short, was by far the outstanding defensive player in the series.

Time after time he came through with some great plays to kill the Als' scoring opportunities. Pitching was a big factor and the funny thing was that the lower end of the local lineup were the boys who came through with hits. The Als' big guns were spiked by such fellows as Groulx, Plourde, Romberg and Corbell, who were terrific for the winners.

Manager Yvon Ellyson and Coach Claude St. Vincent did a fine job in picking up a team for Sherbrooke and they were worthy representatives of the City. The team had a little trouble, at the last, but things were straightened away and in the final game the Als turned in a fine job. A few errors were the slim difference in the outcome.

To the Alouettes on behalf of the baseball fans thanks for a great season and better luck next year.

The Coaticook Baseball Club will hold a banquet to honor its players who turned in a fine showing in the local circuit. It will be held at the Child Hotel, Saturday Oct. 6, commencing at 7 p.m. On the occasion the most-valuable-player award, the top hitter and other trophies will be presented. At the same time the crowning of the local Queen of baseball will be held.

A general meeting of the Lake Massawippi Fish and Game Conservation Club will be held Wednesday, Sept. 26th, at the Ripplecove Inn at Ayer's Cliff. President R. Lindskou is hoping a good crowd will be on hand for the important meeting. At the same time he announced that the Club had dumped 1,000 brown trout in Lake Massawippi. This is part of their conservation plan and the trout were reared in the club's ponds. Nice work, gentlemen.

Carl C. McClay has been appointed pro-tem chairman of the newly formed Bromfield Fish and Game Club with Eric Foster and Lawrence Frizzle as directors pending the annual meeting which is slated to take place shortly.

This is a new club with a charter. It has been waiting for the adoption of its bylaws by the Government. It has already proceeded with naming game wardens for the club and anyone residing around these parts is entitled to become a member. Apply to D. H. Taylor and Fred Patridge for membership.

The Thetford Bicycle Race Committee is staging a special elimination of the Canadian Wheelman's Association event in the Mining Town tomorrow. It opens this afternoon with a big parade and tomorrow the races will be staged followed by a reception and supper in the evening.

The Sherbrooke-Lennoxville Little League held their closing dinner Thursday and a good crowd was in attendance. The circuit had another very successful season which is a credit to the men behind the movement. Judge R. Bouchard was the guest speaker and his talk fitted right in with the youngsters, who followed him the whole way without losing interest.

Manager Harry Kouri and Coach Amedee Roy's Optimists Red Sox walked off with the majority of the honors. Amedee won the coach-of-the-year award while Bruno Bernier, hurler for the Sox, won both the rookie and most-valuable-player awards. These three presentations were well deserved as we think Amedee Roy did a great job with his gang of kids who won the playoffs and title.

Al Schacht, Clown Prince of Baseball, defined Maury Wills as a base stealer and Ty Cobb as a base runner. Asked to explain the difference he stated, "The stealer runs when somebody else wouldn't while the base runner takes an extra base." So gentlemen that is the difference defined by one who pitched to Ty Cobb back in the good old days. No comparison, concluded Al Schacht.

LAST NIGHT'S STARS

Pitching — Curt Simmons, Cardinals, starting when Bob Gibson fractured a bone in his right ankle, limited Los Angeles to five hits in an 11-2 St. Louis victory that cut the Dodgers' National League lead to three games.

C-2 Pace main event on weekend racing card

One hundred and fifty-eight horses to compete for $3,850 in purses, eight entered in C-2 Pace Sunday

A total of $3,850 will be up for grabs on the weekend racing card presented by the Sherbrooke Race Club at the local track. One hundred and fifty-eight horses will compete on Saturday and Sunday's cards. Post time is 8:15 this evening and 2:15 tomorrow afternoon.

A C-2 Pace is the top event on Sunday's card along with the other two seven will go to wire in each dash. All races on both programs are single dashes.

The classes are well balanced and Sunday afternoon the fans should witness some very good classes. This evening every class has eight starters while tomorrow the two C-3 Paces have seven each.

Following Thursday's program two drivers, O. Morin and H. Lepage, were suspended by the judges for inconsistent driving and several drew severe reprimands and warned about future driving. Safety on the track was also discussed as some drivers seem to forget once they get in a race.

In the main class Sunday, a C-2 Pace, Flagman with the pole is installed as the favorite but he will get tough opposition from Rene Claing's indirect boy, who starts from the second slot. Gordon Adamson's Tony Clapp has number three spot and is also to be reckoned with.

Bluet Scott, Kate Peters, McGrapes, Grand Wil and Laurina Rosecroft will give the favorites plenty of fight before the winner crosses the wire. The outcome of the race will depend on how they get away from the gate and who takes the lead. Some horses are fast breakers but seem to fall back once they are in the front while others can come from the rear on the

Stampeders snatch a 36-32 victory from Ottawa Rough Riders Friday

By DAVE MCINTOSH
OTTAWA (CP)—Calgary pass receivers ran dizzying patterns around and through a stumble-footed Ottawa defence Friday night as the Stampeders snatched a 36-32 victory from the Riders in a rousing Canadian Football League encounter before 16,265 frozen fans.

Calgary quarterback Eagle Day completed 20 of 28 passes to wide-open receivers for 330 yards and had one intercepted. With 10 minutes left and Calgary ahead 28-26, substitute quarterback Jerry Keeling, playing defence, intercepted a cross-field pass by Ottawa quarterback Russ Jackson at the Rider 33. The Stampeders had a touchdown in six ground plays.

Riders came back for another touchdown with two minutes left but time ran out on them. The victory moved second-place Calgary within three points of the leading Winnipeg Blue Bombers in the Western Conference. Riders, dropping their third game in a row after four straight victories, remain three points behind the first-place Hamilton Tiger-Cats in the Eastern Conference.

Rookie halfback Jim Dillard from Oklahoma State scored two Calgary touchdowns on 14-yard and 56-yard passes from Day.

Import halfback Lovell Coleman plunged one yard twice for two more Calgary touchdowns and import halfback Ed Buchanan scored the other on an eight-yard sweep around left end.

Larry Robinson kicked four converts and Walt Weaver two singles to round out Stampeders' scoring.

Stampeds were unnerved by the Ottawa rushing in the first half and found themselves behind 23-6 with less than five minutes left in the second quarter.

Racine led off with a field goal and then Riders went 49 yards for an unconverted touchdown in five ground plays, Jackson scampering untouched for the last 18. Calgary struck back in 10 plays for an unconverted touchdown and Ottawa led 9-6 after one quarter.

Wills stole once, his 95th base. The New York Mets are virtually certain to gain an asterisk for the most games lost in a season. But it'll be in 162 games not 154. Going into their 154th game Friday night, they had a share of the modern National League mark, 115 set by the 1935 Boston Braves.

Held by Athletics
The Mets beat Chicago Cubs 4-1, so any loss record will have the softening influence of the asterisk. The modern major league record is 117 by the 1916 Philadelphia Athletics. Cleveland Indians, then in the National League, lost 134 games in 1899 for the all-time mark.

Milwaukee Braves beat Pittsburgh Pirates 7-3 behind Warren Spahn and Philadelphia Phillies defeated Cincinnati Reds 8-6.

Sandy Koufax, on the sidelines more than two months with a circulatory ailment of the index finger on the left hand, was a surprise starter for the Dodgers against St. Louis. He lasted less than an inning.

He walked three men before Charley James hit a grand-slam homer. It was Koufax' sixth loss against 14 victories this season.

James' blow was more than enough margin for Curt Simmons' (9-9), a last-minute replacement for Bob Gibson, who suffered a bone fracture above his right ankle in batting practice. Simmons tossed a five-hitter and was supported by a seven-run sixth inning. Two-run doubles by Julian Javier and Stan Musial and a two-run single by Bill White were the big blows.

MAYS CLOUTS COLTS
Willie Mays led the Giants' 18th hit a s a u l t on five Houston pitchers with three singles and a double in four trips to the plate as San Francisco kept alive its flickering pennant hopes.

The Giants, who have won only two of nine starts on their current road trip, erupted for six runs on as many singles in the third inning, building an 8-0 lead. Right hander Gaylord Perry, recently recalled from Tacoma of the Pacific Coast League, got the victory but needed help when the Colts rallied for three runs in the ninth inning.

Spahn (16-14) tossed an eight-hitter for the Braves. It was the 325th career victory for the Milwaukee veteran, one short of Eddie Plank's record for left-handers.

Mount Orford Ski Patrol to open training for new candidates next week, new system to be followed MAGOG — (Special) — Mount Orford Ski Patrol held an organizational meeting Thursday evening, when plans for the 1962-63 ski season, and the group's activities were outlined.

The patrol will again serve the Mount Orford Ski Centre, and in drawing up their program for the forthcoming months, have introduced several new procedures, in order to upgrade general interest in skiing.

Edward Vancour, leader of the Mount Orford Ski Patrol, stated; first aid training will commence this coming week, and applicants to the patrol are now being accepted." He added that all candidates will be obliged to follow and pass the course mandatory to patrolers, as prescribed by the Canadian Ski Patrol System. A lengthy and thorough training program proceeds each ski season for members of this national organization, which serves the major resorts throughout Canada.

Chief instructor for this year's course followed by the Mount Orford Ski Patrol is Garth Fields. In addressing Thursday's gathering, Mr. Fields stressed the rigid schedule he intends to introduce, and emphasized that with the constant rise in Canadian Ski Patrol System standards, only candidates with above average first aid ability and proven patrolling skills will be accepted.

In an earlier meeting with officials of the Mount Orford Ski Patrol, Paul Albert, manager of the Orford Ski Centre, praised work of the group, and wished them success in the coming season. Mr. Albert's firm, Le Compagnie Gestion d'Orford, rely enthusiastically on the Mount Orford Ski Patrol to supervise the Orford slopes and skier conveyances.

Once rated as Canada's most efficient ski patrol, the Orford group also entered a team in the 1961 International First Aid and Rescue Competitions, to earn top honors, and acquire the title of World Champions.

St. Louis Cardinals whip Dodgers 11-2 victory trims Dodgers' lead

By BOB GREEN
Los Angeles Dodgers were whipped 11-2 Friday night by St. Louis Cardinals. The loss, combined with San Francisco Giants' 11-5 triumph over Houston Colts, trimmed the Dodgers' National League lead to three games over the Giants.

Dodger flash Maury Wills failed by one to equal Ty Cobb's modern major league record for stolen bases, 96. The record had to be set in 154 league decisions. The Friday night game was the 154th decision for the Dodgers.
