Haiti massacre the work of secret police — Manigat

PORT-AU-PRINCE (AP) — A human-rights leader said Monday a bloody massacre at a Roman Catholic church in which at least five people were killed was part of a campaign to return Haiti to the dark days of the Duvalier family regime.

But Franck Romain, mayor of Port-au-Prince and a former high official under the Duvaliers, said the radical priest whose church was attacked and burned by armed men during a mass Sunday was "justly punished."

At least five people were killed and 60 wounded when two-dozen men burst into Rev. Jean-Bertrand Aristide's St. Jean Bosco church in the La Saline slum and shot or stabbed terrified parishioners, radio stations said.

Witnesses said at least a dozen people were killed. Aristide, an outspoken critic of Haiti's military rulers, escaped unhurt and went into hiding.

The human-rights leader compared it to attacks on civilians that occurred during the rule of the late president Francois Duvalier and his son, Jean-Claude.

"This act is unprecedented in our history," said Arnold Antonin, head of the National Network for the Defence of Human Rights.

"Even Papa Doc (the elder Duvalier) did not dare do such a thing — penetrate the holy precincts of a church and, after massacring unarmed worhippers, burn it down."

SPOTS EMPLOYEES

Witnesses, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said Monday they spotted Port-au-Prince city hall employees among the assailants, but they did not identify any of them by name. Witnesses also said police and soldiers watched the attack on the church Sunday and did nothing to stop it.

Romain, a former army colonel and police chief during the 29-year Duvalier era, denied the charge.

"If (city) employees were involved...I don't see how I am concerned...I am not an anarchist, I am not someone who preaches violence and who sends people out to die as Aristide has always done," he said Monday.

"Father Aristide has always preached violence...He who sows the wind, reaps the storm," Romain told Radio Metropole.

Aristide, one of the most popular figures in the Caribbean country among the poor masses, has regularly preached against army atrocities and has led his supporters in street demonstrations.

Romain, Port-au-Prince mayor until Duvalier's ouster, returned to that office in an army-run election in January and remained after Namphy ousted civilian president Leslie Manigat in a military coup in June. Namphy was head of the military under the Duvalier regime.

SHOOTS TWO

The mayor was a member of a firing squad in the Nov. 12, 1964, execution of two survivors of Young Haiti, a group of U.S.-based anti-Duvalierists who invaded the country. Romain personally shot and killed two members of the group.

"On Sunday, (the forces of law and order) stood by...and let a massacre take place," Antonin said.

Radio reports said police and soldiers looked on from an army compound across the street as 300 assailants stoned the church.

Men armed with machetes, sticks and guns entered the church and began attacking parishioners after the larger crowd stoned the church.

Ousted president Manigat, who lives in the United States, denounced the incident as the work of Namphy's secret police.

"Brute force is the principal instrument of those who now control the country," Manigat said from his home in Maryland.

"It is the same killers of the Duvalier time organizing the new terror."

Posties vote on new offer

By Dave Blaikie

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada Post reached another tentative agreement with its 1,200 striking technicians Monday, apparently yielding little ground on the key issue of a shorter work week.

Ratification votes will be held across the country today and all strikers will be back to work Wednesday if the settlement is accepted.

The technicians, who service sorting machines, maintain computers and repair mail trucks, have been out since Aug. 24. The strike has caused no major disruption of mail.

Sources said union negotiators approved a deal much the same as one the technicians rejected by a 61.5-per-cent vote Sept. 3.

The new deal does not include the paid half-hour lunch breaks the strikers were seeking to reduce their work week to 37½ hours from 40 hours, the sources said.

Canada Post stuck to its position that paid lunch breaks would only be adopted after the union agrees to make compensating improvements in productivity, they added.

But they said Canada Post did modify the timetable and non-binding target dates for negotiating productivity changes once the new contract is signed, the sources said.

Rustlers hit Sawyerville farm

RECORD/GRANT SIMEON

Farmers Sternie (kneeling) and Stanley Taylor take a look at the damage after cattle rustlers killed and butchered a 1300-pound cow on their Sawyerville farm this weekend.

The culprits were skilled at stealing and pretty good meatcutters too.

Retired judge puts Tories on defensive

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government, apparently stung by a free-trade critique written by a 72-year-old retired family court judge, has written a derogatory rebuttal.

A paper prepared by the trade negotiations office calls the free-trade analysis by Marjorie Bowker of Edmonton a "pseudo-legal analysis" that's riddled with errors.

"In many instances she simply does not know what she is talking about," says the unsigned report obtained from the trade office, which worked out the free-trade deal with the United States last fall.

"However well-intentioned the author, it is hard to give this report any credibility."

Bowker has granted requests for newspaper, television and national radio interviews since her 59-page, photo-copied booklet was released in July on a $1,000 budget.

She says she has been receiving 20 calls a day at her home requesting copies of her booklet, which concludes that the benefits of free-trade are outweighed by the costs to Canadian sovereignty.

However, Bowker, who is visiting her son in North Bay, Ont., said in an interview she stands by her analysis. She called the government reaction despicable.

"It shows I touched a nerve with the federal government and they can't bear any contrary expression of opinion nor can they tolerate any opposition."

Bowker's critique concludes: "There can be no equality where one partner is the most powerful nation on earth . . . this is an unequal union — much like that between a walrus and a frog, an elephant and a mouse.

"Such a union can have but one result — the smaller being swallowed by the larger."

CALLED PROPAGANDA

Crosbie and other government officials have complained over the past year that the trade deal has been distorted by critics with propaganda techniques pioneered by the Nazis in the Second World War.

Bowker, who retired in 1983 after serving as a judge for 17 years, said she didn't have an axe to grind in writing What Will the Free-Trade Agreement Mean to You and to Canada?

Bowker said that unlike Trade Minister John Crosbie, who admitted this summer he hadn't read the entire agreement, she has pored over all its provisions to satisfy her own curiosity.

She said the federal government, which has spent $24 million promoting the agreement scheduled to take effect next January, has its own biases.

"If the public wishes to agree with this government when the chief salesman has not even read it, then that's their privilege.

"I am not out to sell anything except the truth."

Bowker said she never expected her booklet to catch on the way it did. Since then, an Ottawa printer has taken on the project and has received 600 inquiries since the middle of last week.

"I never started out to make a sensation," said Bowker, who fills her time with reading and charity work.

"As I was reading it, I was hearing right, left and centre, everybody saying they didn't have any idea what it was all about, and I thought if I put something together it might be of help to others."

Turner upset about Weston attack on wife

By Dan Leger

OTTAWA (CP) — Liberal Leader John Turner says a book attacking his credibility and competence is "deliberately negative in tone and more fiction than fact."

Turner said Monday he has reviewed the book, Reign of Error by reporter Greg Weston, and decided it is not worthy of extensive comment.

"I think the book should be treated as fiction," he offered. "I'm not going to give it to anybody for Christmas."

But he did admit that the book's scathing portrayal of his wife, Geills, as a spoiled, petulant spendthrift angered him.

"The comments made about my wife made me angry," he said through clenched teeth.

"Geills is a woman of a lot of talent, a lot of energy. She's had to make the most of the sacrifices that we, like everybody else, make in public life. She deserves better, in my view."

Turner, who met a jostling herd of reporters outside his Parliament Hill office, seemed frustrated that there is "little defence against negative comment, certainly little defence against rumor."

He suggested Canadians will sympathize with him and his wife, and maintained that the book won't damage Liberal chances in the next general election.

"I've got a lot of confidence in the good judgment and fairness of Canadians," he said.

MPs back, election call in mind

By Portia Priegert

OTTAWA (CP) — MPs return to the Commons today after an 11-day break, but with a federal election call expected soon they may not be there long.

Speculation has been building for weeks that the election will be called any day.

And Prime Minister Brian Mulroney has fuelled rumors by saying he will consider election timing around Sept. 17, the fourth anniversary of his ministry.

Before then the Conservatives plan to tie up some last loose ends on child-care and broadcast bills they hope will enhance their electoral fortunes.

Although MPs will be in the Commons, their minds will likely be on election strategy for a campaign many say is unofficially under way.

"There will be some blank, vacant looks on members' faces because their thoughts will be in their constituencies," predicts New Democrat House leader Nelson Riis.

MIND OPEN

But Tory deputy House leader Doug Lewis says he is keeping an open mind about the coming weeks.

"I could stay here all fall or I could go out and walk into my campaign committee room tomorrow," said Lewis, who shepherds government bills through the Commons.

"Take your pick. I'm very flexible."

Most MPs spent the break in their ridings doing pre-election campaigning and winding down from their long, testy summer in Ottawa.

They were supposed to take off July and August and the first 11 days of September. But the government forced summer sittings to deal with priority issues — free trade, tax reform, child care, broadcasting and abortion.

This week, the top order of business will be final approval of legislation to implement the government's $6.2-billion child-care package, said Lewis.

The bill, expected to double day-care spaces to 400,000 by 1995, was pushed through a Commons committee earlier this month.

Although Health Minister Jake Epp has said he wants the child-care program to be law before the election, opposition MPs want major changes.

"This bill is too important to jam though the House in two or three days," said Riis.

The Tories also want the Commons to approve broadcasting legislation, which includes incentives to encourage private broadcasters to increase Canadian content.

And bills establishing a human rights institute and a heritage language institute should be passed by the Commons this week, Lewis said.

But it's unlikely the Senate will have time to pass any of those bills if there's an early fall election call.

Two major legislative initiatives — tax reform and the free-trade agreement with the United States — cleared the Commons this summer.

Gourd won't try for old Quebec seat in election

OTTAWA (CP) — Robert Gourd, a former Liberal member of Parliament, said today he has no confidence in John Turner's leadership of the party and won't seek the Liberal nomination in his old Quebec riding of Argenteuil-Papineau.

Gourd, a strong backer of fellow Quebecker Jean Chrétien in the latter's unsuccesful bid for the party leadership in 1983, told reporters "there's no leadership in the Liberal party presently."

He said he disagrees with Turner's opposition to the free trade agreement with the United States. But he said the key reason he's not running in the general election expected this fall is that the Liberal party has lost its direction under Turner.

He said the party leader "must unite the troops, but under the present circumstances, that's impossible."

Gourd would not say who he thinks should be the Liberal leader, but he acknowledged that he had called for a review of Turner's leadership after the party's electoral disaster in 1984 which brought the Conservatives to power.

The former MP was defeated in the Tory landslide and later went to work for high-powered Tory lobbyist Frank Moores. But he kept up his sniping at Turner, joining forces with other Chretien supporters and members of the party's old guard at the national convention in 1986.

Despite a vigorous campaign to oust him, Turner was reaffirmed as leader at that convention by more than three-quarters of the delegates.

But elements of the party remained dissatisfied and Gourd said he couldn't see any way that Turner would be able to rally Liberal spirits in time for the next election.

Better get ready for Cosmos 1900's arrival

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal experts hope Cosmos 1900 isn't coming to a backyard near you. But they're getting ready just in case.

There will be little warning about when and where the disabled Soviet satellite will land when it returns to earth late this month or in early October.

So many variables are at play in tracking the nuclear-powered satellite that "we'll not know if it hits a large area until it hits," Commander Doug Henderson of the Defence Department told reporters at a briefing Monday.

"Possibly some of the first indications will be people calling into the police that 'something has happened in my backyard.' We cannot predict it any more accurately than that."

Experts estimate the satellite, which was launched last December but went out of control near the end of its mission in April, is in position to fall on Canada only three per cent of the time and is over oceans during two-thirds of every 90-minute orbit.

In the event it fell over a populated area, citizens would be urged to remain indoors until debris was cleaned up and would be advised not to pick up any metallic particles found outside.

If radioactive fragments were picked up, skin and clothing would be contaminated. Prolonged contact could result in radiation burns, cancer or death.

The satellite, in stable orbit Monday at an altitude of about 200 kilometres, passes over Canada about nine times daily, Henderson said, with each pass lasting from three to 18 minutes.

On Monday, for instance, the satellite — launched to track the movement of ships — was to pass over points near Edmonton, Regina, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., and Fredericton, according to a tracing map issued by the Defence Department.

Normally, the nuclear reactor would have been separated from the satellite at the end of a mission and boosted into a "parking orbit" about 800 kilometres above the earth where it could "safely remain for some centuries," Henderson said.

Soviet officials say Cosmos 1900, which will deteriorate and drop in altitude over the next few weeks, still has two safety devices which could jettison the reactor during re-entry.

If the reactor is shot into orbit, observers on the ground "would just see a great sparkler in the sky and there would be no radioactivity coming down," said Dr. Ernest Letourneau of the Health Department.

If the nuclear reactor separates first and burns on the way down, the radioactivity would be finely dispersed and be hard to detect at ground level.

Fired union members seen as villains by many in saga of Manoir

POINTE-AU-PIC, Que. (CP) — Almost every day this summer, Quebec tourists could be seen taking pictures of the 80 people still picketing outside Quebec's most controversial piece of property, the Manoir Richelieu Hotel.

Almost three years after Quebec City multi-millionaire Raymond Malenfant bought the resort from the Quebec government and fired most of its 350 unionized employees, 80 are still on the picket lines.

The rest, especially the younger ones, gave up. Almost all of the those still on the picket line six days a week, nine hours a day, are over 40.

Each puts in a three-hour shift, three days a week, to qualify for the weekly union stipend of $77 or $100, depending on marital status. They knit, read newspapers, play cards or just sit.

Out-of-province hotel guests don't know who they are. But Quebecers know and point as they pass. Some stop and say hello.

It has been one of the most bitter labor conflicts in Quebec in this decade.

Few Quebecers are indifferent to what's happened here since December 1985, when Malenfant, 57, purchased what was then a decrepit hotel from the government for a nominal sum and a promise to invest $10 million and keep it open 12 months a year instead of the usual five.

The union, affiliated with the Confederation of National Trade Unions, Quebec's second-largest labor federation, says Malenfant took advantage of a loophole in the Quebec labor code to get rid of the union.

LAW UNCLEAR

The code says when a business is sold, the buyer must respect the labor contract agreed to by the previous owner. But the law is not clear about what happens when the owner didn't administer the business. The hotel, east of Quebec City, was being managed for the government by another hotel chain at the time of the sale.

A ruling expected soon by the Supreme Court of Canada on a similar case may determine whether Malenfant acted legally or whether he must rehire the fired workers.

Malenfant has become a corporate hero to small businessmen since the dispute started. Last November, he was awarded the Quebec tourism award by an industry-government jury of five people. Last February, he was named hotelier of the year.

The violence that has marked the conflict has made the union the villain in many minds.

In June 1986, blue dye was put into the Manoir's water supply. The following month, vandals torched the Malenfant family's cars in suburban Quebec City.

In October of the same year, there were three incidents. A car bomb exploded outside the Motel Universel in Ste-Foy, part of a chain owned by Malenfant. Fired workers rampaged in the Manoir lobby, causing $20,000 damage. And the husband of a fired employee died after being taken into police custody during a demonstration.

BLOCKED PLAN

In the winter in 1986-87, the union federation announced it was going to take out ads in major newspapers in the United States and Canada urging a boycott of Malenfant hotels. The campaign was blocked by a court injunction.

In May last year, a Malenfant hotel in Chicoutimi was bombed, causing $10,000 in damage.

An unidentified union official was recently quoted as saying, "We've used enough pressure tactics ... to terminate at least 15 labor conflicts, so I guess we'll have to find a new approach."

Last autumn, five union federation officials, including one who was a police informer, pleaded guilty to charges of bombing and conspiracy to bomb and began serving prison terms ranging from 10 months to three years.

Ever since, the violence has stopped.

Most of the hotel's current employees are relatively young and are paid about two-thirds of what the fired employees earned. They are not unionized. Whereas the fired employees were local people, a large number of the summer workers are not.

"Malenfant hired a lot of people who were on welfare," said Robert Marion, a former employee. "And since the government pays employers a certain amount if they hire welfare recipients, this further reduces his salary costs."

The final chapter in the Manoir dispute won't be written until after the Supreme Court ruling, expected to influence about 20 labor conflicts in Quebec.

Says union president Louiselle Pilote: "If the judgment favors employers, there's going to be a lot of unions on the street like us."

Search for Champlain may be up before long

By Peter Lowrey

QUEBEC (CP) — Two maverick archeologists descended into the gloom beneath the basement of the Quebec Basilica Monday to renew their search for the missing tomb of explorer Samuel de Champlain.

René Lévèsque, 63, a former priest, and Charles Beaudry, 34, a freelance archeologist, will sift through the dirt in a cramped space the height of a man and the size of a small room, lit by two naked light bulbs. A century-old theory maintains Champlain's grave lies at that spot.

They say they should know within three weeks what, if anything, is buried there.

In July, the pair made headlines when they found an old copper coffin near the same spot in the church located in Quebec City's historic old quarter.

Because of the coffin's richness and the presence of 17th-century coins and pieces of clothing nearby, Lévèsque, who has been searching for the tomb for 38 years, thought he had hit the jackpot.

But provincial government experts, without opening the coffin, concluded it contained the remains of a Jesuit priest who died in 1879.

WAS CONCERNED

Levesque said at the time that he was afraid the Department of Cultural Affairs would never allow him to continue excavating the site because he had been digging without a permit.

The grey-haired geographer, who works for the provincial Department of Recreation, Fish and Game, has charged that officials of the Cultural Affairs Department have been obstructing his requests for excavation permits because he is an amateur archeologist.

But public support quickly rallied behind Lévèsque after the copper coffin was found.

He and Beaudry got their permit to continue digging beneath the basilica at a spot which Thomas O'Leary, a 19th-century amateur historian, pinpointed as the tomb's location after extensive archival research.

An obviously excited Lévèsque said Monday, "I don't know if it might be Champlain but .. if he's not there we'll look somewhere else."

Another theory places the grave directly underneath Rue Buade, the street which runs alongside the basilica.

The permit requires that the team summon experts if they find anything interesting, before alerting the press.

The authorities want to avoid a circus atmosphere should another coffin be found and opened, Lévèsque said.

Chrétien didn't speak to author of Turner bio

By Betsy Powell

TORONTO (CP) — Jean Chrétien says gossipy accounts of the lives of politicians are a fact of public life, but it's an aspect "one doesn't really like."

The former Liberal cabinet minister was commenting on a controversial new book chronicling John Turner's leadership of the party.

"One has to realize it's very rough in politics and this time it's really rough," Chrétien told a crowd of business people at a luncheon in Toronto on Monday.

He was responding to a question about Ottawa journalist Greg Weston's book Reign of Error — a scathing criticism of Turner and his wife.

Chrétien, who was defeated by Turner at the party's leadership convention in 1984, said Weston called him for a clarification about a political appointment while he was researching the book.

"But I had nothing to say," he said, adding he hadn't yet read the book because he is busy on the lecture circuit.

WON'T RUN

Chretien said he hoped someone would "go after him" if it can be shown Weston has erred in writing his book.

"I'm just glad no one went after me," he quipped, referring to his best-selling book Straight from the Heart.

Despite Turner's ongoing troubles, Chrétien reiterated he is not contemplating a return to politics at this time.

But when asked whether he'd participate in the next federal election, he replied "of course."

"(But) If I wanted to run, I would have sought the nomination in my Quebec riding," he said, squelching rumors that he might run against Tory candidate Maureen McTeer in his new home of Ottawa.

Chrétien said he is busy with his law practice, working on his golf handicap and making speeches about major issues facing the country.

News-in-brief

Canada, France disagree

OTTAWA (CP) — Canadian officials expressed puzzlement Monday over a statement by the French government saying negotiations had broken off in a fisheries and boundary dispute between the two countries.

Réjane Dodd, a spokesman for the External Affairs Department, said no talks have been held since July when the two sides met in Paris for informal discussions to settle a structure for a new round of formal negotiations.

She said there was disagreement over a report quoting studies carried out for the Northwest Atlantic Fisheries Organization showing that French fishing in a disputed zone south of Newfoundland was damaging stocks in the area.

Dodd said France would not accept the report but Canada made proposals aimed at settling the dispute, which has been described as the most serious political and diplomatic problem between the two traditional allies.

Best crop in years

WINNIPEG (CP) — Prairie farmers might not be harvesting a lot of wheat this year but much of what gets poured into their grain bins could be the best quality in years, analysts said Monday.

Despite a crop-withering drought which slashed yields this summer, much of Western Canada's wheat crop is expected to be high grade.

In Saskatchewan, some 48 per cent of the province's red spring wheat crop is predicted to grade No. 1, said Patricia Rupert, a research analyst with the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool.

That's more than double the amount of No. 1 wheat harvested in 1987 and above the 10-year average of 43 per cent.

"There isn't much but what is there is of a higher grade," Rupert said in an interview from Regina. Harvesting in Saskatchewan is ahead of schedule and expected to be completed in about two weeks.

Lime may fight acid rain

BALTIMORE (AP) — Scientists said a device that releases lime into streams to combat the effect of acid rain appears to be reducing acidity up to five kilometres downstream from where it is used.

The question that remains is whether more fish eggs will survive.

"If we can improve streams for several years, we can allow the remnant species to improve or at least to maintain itself," Dr. Ronald Klauda, a Johns Hopkins University senior fisheries biologist, told the Baltimore Sun newspaper in a story published Monday.

This spring, Hopkins scientists began testing the idea of adding lime to neutralize acid rain in Maryland streams.

The idea was an extension of work done in the Northeastern United States and Canada, where government officials have fought acid rain by liming acidic lakes.

Satanic rumors in Kentucky

JACKSON, Ky. (AP) — Rumors of devil-worship and child-abduction are spreading across eastern Kentucky, stumping police who have fielded thousands of telephone calls from terrified residents.

"This is the first time to my knowledge that a rumor of this nature has gotten to this proportion," said Elijah Hollon, a Laurel County sheriff's deputy.

"This one seems like it's carrying on much more than anything I've ever seen before."

"It got wild here," Jackson Mayor Frank Noble said.

"You could have brought a bunch of guns in here and made a fortune."

He said he understands one department store has sold out of guns.

A survey of sheriff's offices, police departments and Kentucky State Police posts found satanic rumors have spread into at least 25 eastern Kentucky counties since late July.

Robbery makes man move

HOUSTON (AP) — A man who worked five years to surround his home with flowers uprooted his plantings and moved after burglars stole everything but his bed-frame and clothes.

Cleveland Turner's yard, located in a poor section of the city, was full of flowers and adornments such as plastic swans and a wooden cutout of Mickey Mouse.

But Turner, frustrated over two recent burglaries, pulled out the bright surroundings last week and moved from the three-room house to another rental home about three kilometres away.

"They (burglars) usually break in once a year, but they hit me two times last week and stole everything but my bedstead and clothes," said Turner, 53, who cleans residential windows and does other odd jobs for a living.

"I just couldn't cut it anymore. I cried for two nights straight to keep from moving.

"But I just couldn't stay there anymore."

Eddie Minor, 41, a former neighbor, was saddened to see Turner leave.

"He had it looking nice, too — you couldn't find nothing like that anywhere," Minor said.

"Everybody loved it."

Jamaica hit by hurricane

KINGSTON (AP) — Hurricane Gilbert hit the Jamaican capital on Monday with torrential rains and winds that ripped roofs off homes and buildings, uprooted trees and tore down power lines.

No serious injuries were immediately reported in the city of 750,000 people, which was hit by the full force of the hurricane around noon. The winds were 185 km-h.

For half an hour, the hurricane tore branches from trees, blew down fences and whipped paper through the air.

The National Weather Service reported heavy damage to Kingston's airport and aircraft parked on its fields.

The first shock let up as the eye of the storm moved across the city. Skies brightened, the winds died and people waited for an hour before the second blow of the hurricane arrived.

Bomb's origin unknown

BELFAST (AP) — A bomb planted in a taxi blew up outside City Hall on Monday, injuring eight people who could not flee quickly enough after a telephoned warning, police said.

The blast was heard for several kilometres and rocked a large area of the city, breaking shop and office windows over a wide area and setting off security alarms.

Two of the injured were in serious condition, police said.

No immediate claim of responsibility was made, but suspicion fell on the outlawed Irish Republican Army, which carried out a car bombing near Monday's site Aug. 24. Last month's blast caused the equivalent of more than $8 million Cdn in damage.

Earlier Monday, two IRA bombs badly damaged the home of Sir Kenneth Bloomfield, head of Northern Ireland's civil service, but Bloomfield and his family escaped serious injury.

Hijacker may have enjoyed it

FRANKFURT, West Germany (AP) — The pilot of a TWA jetliner hijacked in 1985 testified Monday that hijacker Mohammed Ali Hamadi took pleasure in torturing passengers and fired the shot that killed a U.S. navy diver.

Capt. John Testrake, who commanded the plane during the ordeal, told the court he believes Hamadi was the more violent of two hijackers who invaded the jetliner's cabin and later killed Robert Stethem.

But under questioning by defence lawyers, Testrake said he did not see Hamadi pull the trigger.

Hamadi is charged with murder and air-piracy. He has admitted being one of the hijackers, but has denied killing Stethem.

The Athens to Rome flight was hijacked June 14, 1985. It was flown to Beirut, where Stethem was killed, and 39 U.S. passengers were held hostage for 17 days.

West German hostage free

BEIRUT (AP) — Shiite Muslim kidnappers freed West German hostage Rudolf Cordes on Monday after 20 months in captivity, an official said.

The kidnappers said they freed Cordes in response to Syrian and Iranian intervention, an official said.

The official, an aide to Interior Minister Abdullah Rassi, said the 55-year-old businessman was freed at midnight Monday night in the luxurious Verdun neighborhood of west Beirut, outside the minister's home.

The aide spoke on condition of anonymity.

It was unclear why the captors chose to free Cordes there. Earlier statements Monday said Cordes would be released at the seaside Beaurivage Hotel, close to the command headquarters of the Syrian army's peacekeeping contingent in west Beirut.

Botha speaks about rebels

SONGO, Mozambique (Reuter) — South African President P.W. Botha travelled deep into Black Africa on Monday to promise his government will not support right-wing rebels whose attacks have devastated Mozambique's economy.

His talks with Mozambique's president, Joaquim Chissano, were held beside the Zambezi River at the mighty Cahora Bassa Dam — a project that has become a white elephant since the rebels that Botha's government is widely accused of backing destroyed the power lines taking its electricity to South Africa.

"These power lines which link us represent the future and let no one who has the interests of Southern Africa at heart disrupt them," Botha declared.

At the end of the talks, Botha and Chissano pledged to revive a moribund 1984 non-aggression pact known as the Nkomati Accord, to rebuild and defend the Cahora Bassa power lines and step up economic co-operation in other fields.

Matchmaking fiesta

STOCKHOLM (Reuter) — A Swedish village in the Arctic Circle is making a second attempt at enticing brides to join its lovelorn bachelors for a matchmaking festival known as Romp Week, the organizers said Monday.

"We are expecting several hundred women," said Lars Olof Snell, the organizing committee chairman.

Pajala, a forest-ringed village with about 100 bachelors and 40 single women, hopes to ease the predicament of its young men at the Sept. 26-Oct. 1 traditional post-harvest Romppaviiko (Romp Week) festival.

The Spanish village of Plan also had the same idea recently and succeeded in marrying some of its bachelors after inviting out-of-town women to a matchmaking fiesta.

Last year, advertisements in European newspapers enticed a busload of women to take advantage of a Stockholm-to-Pajala bus trip dubbed "A Streetcar Named Desire."

All but nine, however, turned out to be journalists. But Snell insists last year's get-together was a success.

Gorbachev going shopping?

MOSCOW (Reuter) — Angry Siberians, complaining about the lack of goods and services, asked Monday Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev to go into the stores and see that there's nothing to buy.

The heckling, although apparently not aimed directly at Gorbachev, came within minutes of the Soviet leader's arrival at Krasnoyarsk, a Siberian industrial region, to start a week-long visit.

Gorbachev, 57, reappeared in public after a six-week absence with a meet-the-people visit to eastern Siberia.

"Go into our shops, Mikhail Sergeyevich. You'll see there's nothing there," one woman shouted at him when he stopped to talk to people crowded by the side of the road on the way into the city from the airport.

No compromise: Pinnacle plan won't be stopped by Frelighsburg council

By Rita Legault

KNOWLTON — A meeting Sunday between Frelighsburg Mayor Guy Gosselin and residents for and against a planned private ski resort and golf course plus 350 homes on Pinnacle Mountain failed to come to any compromises.

Gosselin called the meeting of residents representing both sides of the debate hoping he could get citizens, deeply divided on the development proposal, to come to some sort of consensus.

At last week's council meeting Gosselin suggested a referendum on the plan — one of his election promises — but there was little interest so the suggestion was dropped.

Councillor Gilles Jourdain, one of a dozen who attended Sunday night's meeting, said opponents of the development had no intention of compromising and sought only to delay construction.

'WHAT'S THE USE'

"They came straight out and told us they would take all the political and legal means to stop the project," Jourdain said in an interview yesterday. "What's the use of a discussion when they have an attitude like that?"

Jourdain said opponents of the project were acting in "bad faith" and "they let the cat out of the bag last night" when they said they would oppose the project no matter what.

He said that faced with a "sterile debate," council would go ahead and make a decision.

Jourdain said he expects council will agree in principle with the development, promoted by Montreal lawyer and part-time Frelighsburg resident Pierre Tellier, at next month's council meeting.

"Councillors have met in private and they all agree with Tellier project," he said.

Jourdain, who lives in the Pinnacle area, said he has remained neutral in the debate.

"If the project goes through it will disturb me, but I have to look at what is good for residents of the town," he said.

Jourdain agrees with Mayor Gosselin, who has maintained all along that a majority of townspeople are in favor of the development.

Some 60 to 65 per cent are all for it and only a smaller number of residents opposed are making the most fuss, he said.

"The noise they are making is not proportional to the percentage of people against the project," he said.

"We will not permit a massacre of the Pinnacle," Jourdain insisted. "We don't want a monster like we have seen elsewhere."

Jourdain said Tellier is providing guarantees to the town, including a promise to provide roads, lights, sewage and water at his own expense for the development.

ECOLOGICAL GUARANTEES?

"He has also given ecological guarantees — such as he will not develop the summit of the mountain," he said.

Jourdain also said Telier will be clearing a minimum of space for ski runs. "They won't be big boulevards like in the Laurentians," he said.

Jourdain said not only the town must give the go-ahead to Tellier's development. He said Environment Quebec will have a say in its water and sewage systems.

Tellier's land is also in the 'green zone', sheltered from development by the farmland protection board. Only La Commission de protection du territoire agricole du Quebec, can allow recreational and residential development on green land.

'NO SOLUTION'

Hélène Leduc of the Frelighsburg Taxpayers Association said Monday the group refused to budge from its position against the development.

"There is no solution," Leduc said in an interview. "Both positions are so far from each other."

Leduc said though that the meeting allowed the taxpayers association to show its is not against all development.

Leduc said members are worried about the size of the Tellier project and where and how it will get water.

Based on information provided by the promoter, Leduc said, she is not sure whether there will be enough water on site to handle the resorts' artificial snow making, watering the golf course and supplying the 350 planned homes.

She said this may not be possible without causing shortages for local people already established in the vicinity.

DISHONEST?

Jourdain said he doubts there's a lack of water. He said opponents are being dishonest by saying so.

"I have an artesian well dug 29 feet down and it supplies 2000 gallons an hour," Jourdain said. "Two artesian wells provide the whole town of Frelighsburg with enough water."

Jourdain said he has told opponents of the project that if they want to protect the mountain they should buy it with money from corporations and private sources. He said this has been done elsewhere where people want to conserve natural habitats.

"They want to put the mountain under a glass dome," he said. "If they want to protect it, they should buy it from Mr. Tellier. They should conserve it."

But Jourdain said the complainers are not willing to put their money where their mouths are. "Mr Tellier has invested $1 million so far," he said. "So I take him more seriously."

Jourdain said town council will approve the development proposal as soon as possible.

"If they want to take it to court, let them go ahead," he said. "I would respect a decision of the court. But I seriously don't think the courts would come out against the project."

Sawyerville farmer hit by beef rustlers: They took the best and left the rest

RECORD/GRANT SIMEON

Contemplating a messy clean-up job, Sternie and Stanley Taylor point out the entry hole of a bullet which killed a cow.

By Charles Bury

SAWYERVILLE — Saturday night somebody left half a cow in Sternie Taylor's pasture. Trouble is, they took the other half.

The thieves, who seemed to boast professional butchering skills, shot it once cleanly through the head and then took only the 1300-pound animal's hind-quarters — where most of the fancy cuts are.

They left the front half of the pregnant Hereford, complete with all the guts hanging out. in an isolated pasture on Bulwer Road, about two miles from the Taylor farm.

Reached after he came in from combining on Monday, Taylor said the culprits were old hands at butchering. "Yes sir, they'd done it before. They used a meat saw."

Taylor pastures about 40 cows there.

'PICKED A NICE ONE'

"They must have come by before and picked a nice one out," he said. "They probably used the number on her ear-tag to pick her out."

"She was a nice cow, eh? There were some thin cows in there but they didn't touch any of those ones."

The theft probably took place Saturday night. "I was over there Saturday night at 7:30 and I was back at Sunday noon."

"I think you should put a bit of a something in the paper about this," Taylor said. "It would be a good reminder for other farmers"

"It's getting to be that time of year again."

By early autumn most ranging beef cattle have been feeding on fresh grass for several months and are almost ready for slaughter. Every year producing areas suffer waves of cattle rustlers, whose methods improve with the times along with those of the farmers.

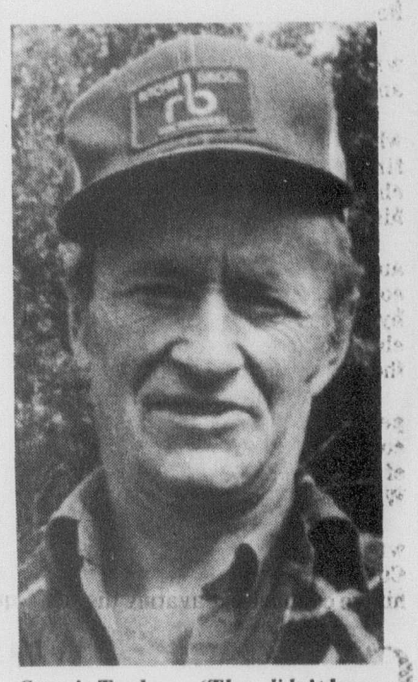

'STARTING NOW'

"It's starting now," Taylor said. "The beef are getting fat like, after the summer. And it was a pretty good summer."

Taylor, his wife Frances and sons Stanley and Danny run about 75 Herefords on their farm on Laberee Road. The summer pasture is about two miles distant. They stand to lose more than $300 from the theft. "I guess she was worth $900 or $1000," Sternie said. "And I had her insured for $600."

A spokesman for the Quebec Police Force Cookshire detachment said the rustling case is the first in the region in some time.

Police have few leads except that the thieves knew enough to leave few traces. They were as expert at sneaking around as they were at butchering beef.

Sternie Taylor... 'They didn't leave a mark.'

"Oh, they knew what they were doing alright," Taylor said. "You couldn't see where they got into the field or where they got out. They didn't leave a mark."

Town must stop 'turning in circles' — Decelles

Mayor uses deciding vote in favor of Brome Lake sewage, water plan

By Rita Legault

FULFORD — It came as no surprise to Brome Lake residents Monday that the sewage debate that has been rocking this town is far from over.

Town councillors were even more divided after their meeting than before on what to do about the problem.

And during question period several people including members of the Brome Lake Conservation Association and organizers of the 'NO' side in the August 28 referendum had questions and suggestions about what council should do about this hot issue.

One third of eligible residents turned up to defeat bylaw 127 by a margin of two to one in the referendum. The bylaw was to finance an extension of town water and sewage mains to Fisher's Point, the Auberge du Lac Brome condominiums and homes on Lakeside road.

The referendum was made necessary when 511 residents showed up to sign the town's register against the bylaw.

SECOND TRY

Borrowing bylaw 127 was needed after bylaw 124, passed earlier by council, could no longer be used because an expected government grant of $560,000 didn't materialize.

Mayor Gilles Decelles told some 50 residents who turned up Monday council met Municipal Affairs Minister and Brome Missisquoi MNA Pierre Paradis, who offered help in restoring the lost grants.

If the town gets the money it can go ahead. The town will not be subject to the register/referendum process because bylaw 124 has already been passed and only a handful of residents signed the register objecting to it.

Bylaw 124 will bring a special tax of 3¢ per $100 in evaluation while bylaw 127 would have cost taxpayers 8¢ per $100. Users of the extension will pay half the cost while the town pays the rest.

CHANGED THEIR MINDS

Although councillors asked Paradis to go after the money some have since reconsidered.

At last night's meeting Decelles said it was time to do something about the issue.

"The previous administration debated it for four years. We have studied it for 11 months and it has been the subject of three studies, two borrowing bylaws and one referendum," he said.

"We have to take a decision on the direction we are going to take, in a hurry," he said. "The easiest solution is to go ahead with 124."

Decelles said a better solution could take a long time to come along and council could end up with nothing in the end.

He said the town has already spend $450,000 and has nothing to show for it except studies and a plan.

'TURNING IN CIRCLES'

Brome Lake has to "stop turning in circles," said the mayor.

In the end council split with the mayor casting a rare deciding vote — to ask Paradis to seek the extra money and to implement bylaw 124 as soon as possible.

The resolution to go ahead was proposeed by councillor Michael Caluori and supported by George Bristol and André Groulx.

Councillor Stanley Neil refused to support the plan. He said he needs two weeks to think about it.

Councillor Frances MacKeen said she wants a month to ponder other soltuions. She suggested the town hire an independent consultant to look into alternatives along with a committee of townspeople to help evaluate them.

Councillor Richard Price said he objected to bylaw 124 because he feels the extension should be paid for by its users and not all taxpayers. He also said council should wait a month.

Coulombe set to sue the town?

Rock Island ponders lawyer's warning

SHERBROOKE (MHG) — Rock Island council is consulting a lawyer over what to do about a lawyer's letter demanding that the town "proceed as apparently understood" in the sale of the town gravel pit to Ray Coulombe of South Stukely.

Mayor Jean-Louis Dupont said Monday "no decision has been made yet" on what council will do.

The letter, from Coulombe's lawyer Jean-Pierre Rancourt, gives the town five days to respond or be faced with further legal measures.

Coulombe wants to buy the land, situated in Beebe, as a dry waste dump. But at last month's council meeting the town decided not to sell it to him or anyone. Coulombe said he has an agreement with the firm Jarbec of St-Denis-de-Brompton to take dry waste. He said the deal was made after Rock Island agreed to sell him the gravel pit.

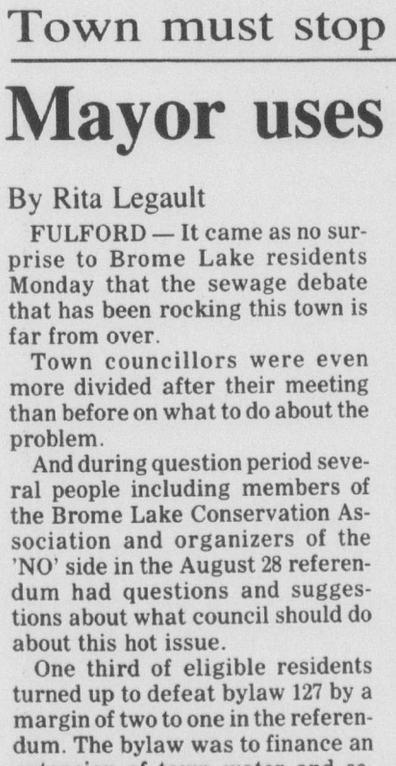

At the August council meeting about 50 Three Villages residents protested Coulombe's idea to set up a dump. They said they don't want the dump in their area because the materials could be dangerous.

They claimed some of the waste would be coming from nearby Vermont and said Beebe shouldn't have to take care of Vermont's waste.

Rancourt's letter arrived Friday. Dupont says council's five days of grace are up at the end of this week. The mayor said he had no idea what decision council might take but simply, "We are consulting with our lawyer and no decision has been made yet."

Coulombe and a partner also recently bought Rock Island's unused town dump, located in Ogden, for $800. Coulombe is offering $2000 on the gravel pit.

Virgin Farm development: Dennis Wood pulls out: John Dunn stays in John Dunn... In.

SHERBROOKE (MHG) — One of the would-be developers of North Hatley's Virgin Farm has withdrawn his interest in the controversial project.

Dennis Wood said Monday he is no longer part of a group of developers looking to turn the 195-acre abandoned farm into a housing development.

Wood said he is embarking on a new career which makes it impossible for him to be involved in the development project.

Wood recently announced he would seek the Liberal nomination for Sherbrooke riding in the upcoming federal election. North Hatley is in neighboring Megantic-Compton-Stanstead.

But he said Monday he didn't withdraw his interest because of political pressure or the fact that there were many potential voters in North Hatley.

"I think it was the right decision at this particular time and that's the reason I took it. It has nothing to do with any pressures from anybody."

"I have made considerable changes in my career path over the last number of weeks and at this particular point I do not feel that I want to be involved in land development," Wood said.

Last week Wood and one of his partners in the project John Dunn, withdrew their application to have about half the land rezoned by the Commission de protection du territoire agricole du Quebec. The rest is already approved for 'non-agricultural use'.

Lawyers said last week Wood and Dunn's numbered company, 143195 Canada Ltd., has been unable to come to purchase terms with the land's owners, 2536-9356 Quebec Inc., which is controlled by the Washington, D.C.-based Saar Foundation. The protected land would have to be rezoned in order for the housing development to proceed.

Dunn said Monday the rezoning request was withdrawn because his company "didn't have clear title to the land."

Dunn said he is interested in proceeding with the zoning change and the development and that Wood's decision to drop out would have no bearing on the project's future.

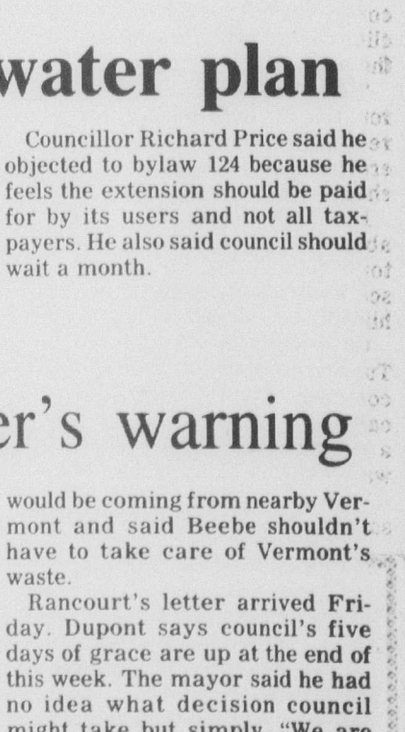

"I think he'll be heavily involved in politics," Dunn said of Wood.

But that won't stop the others. "It's a nice project and we're interested in doing some kind of project there but I don't know what's going to happen now."

Wood, a wall-paper magnate and hotel owner, now calls himself a farmer, not a developer. He said he too hopes the development goes ahead.

"I say that this development has a lot of potential and as a development, should be looked at seriously. It's to the advantage of the majority of the citizens of North Hatley," Wood said."

"I am not a land developer. I'm an industrialist and I'm also a farmer. At this point I'm not interested in this particular development."

Dennis Wood... Out.

Shouldn't have to run further risks

The choice between being left out of one's home and facing the risk of toxic contamination is a tough one. Not many people would want to go back to living in the St-Basile homes evacuated during the PCB warehouse fire. But it is also difficult to try and carry on with a normal life while being unable to go home at night.

That's where the government has made its mistake. It told residents of St-Basile-le-Grand and other areas affected by the fire they could go home this weekend, assuring them they ran no risk of contamination. Most of the residents, probably homesick and tired of living at relatives homes or in hotel rooms, accepted the assurances and went back to homes they will have to clean themselves.

But it is the residents who are refusing to go back who are thinking straight. They realize that simply because the government has told them they can go home is no sure sign they will be safe from danger.

The whole situation seems hardly to have been properly thought out and is not even the least bit safe, particularly in light of facts which have been recently brought to light.

Firefighters say they have been called back three times in recent weeks to extinguish smoking barrels at the PCB warehouse. And despite the fact a fire truck and team has been stationed at the site 24 hours a day, the temporary structure erected over the burned-out structure could prove to be a hindrance to firefighters in the event of another fire.

The structure was designed to ensure none of the contaminants inside is dispersed by the wind. But if it also happens to be dangerous it isn't the best thing for the community.

To make matters worse, the residents themselves will have to clean their homes. Surely, after all they have been put through because of the government's chronic Pontius Pilot attitude before the fire ever happened, the least they deserve is to have their homes brought back to their original state by professionals. They shouldn't have to run any further risks by having to deal with any more possible PCBs.

These people have been put through enough, it's time their well-being became a priority.

Argentina competes in arms sales

BUENOS AIRES (AP) — Better known for its beef and grain, Argentina also produces jets and tanks and hopes to sell them abroad to help pay its large foreign debt.

Arms sales have topped the equivalent of $92 million Cdn. That's a fraction of what this primarily agricultural nation could receive if the United States decides to buy a jet trainer called the Pampa and Ecuador goes ahead with its purchase of TAM medium tanks.

An intermediate-range rocket also is being developed with financial aid from Egypt, conventional submarines are being built with technical assistance from West Germany, and negotiations are under way with an Italian company to co-produce military helicopters.

BUILD ARMS

"We're not trying to convert ourselves into a huge exporter of weapons," Jose Maria Llados, secretary of production at the Ministry of Defense, said in an interview. "What we're trying to do is ... take advantage of our existing industrial capacity."

Argentina has produced artillery and munitions for decades, mostly for its own use. The big projects — drone aircraft, submarines, jets, tanks, rockets — were begun by the military governments of the 1970s and early 1980s.

Following the defeat by Britain in the 1982 Falklands War and the election of civilian Raul Alfonsin as president in October 1983, the military budget has been halved to the equivalent of about $1.8 billion Cdn. Funding for weapons projects has dried up.

"With the industries in place, we had three choices: close them, export, or convert them" to civilian use, Llados said.

CHOOSE EXPORT

"The preference ... was to export. We have a big foreign debt. We have to export in order to pay it."

Argentina has a foreign debt the equivalent of about $68 billion Cdn. Interest alone is a burden. This year interest payments will total the equivalent of about $5.6 billion Cdn.

Argentina's edge in arms sales is that it can — because of its technical infrastructure, educated work force and low wages — produce relatively sophisticated weapons at a low cost.

The package of 56 medium tanks and 18 armored personnel carriers that Ecuador is considering is priced at the equivalent of about $132 million Cdn, Llados said.

SHOW INTEREST

The single-engine, two-seater IA-63 Pampa jet trainer costs the equivalent of about $4.3 million Cdn.

"It's a lot of plane for the money," a U.S. embassy official said. "We are interested."

The U.S. air force is seeking to replace its T-37 jet trainers that date back 30 years. The potential multi-billion-dollar U.S. contract, avidly sought by several countries including Italy and Belgium, could call for more than 500 planes.

A U.S. decision is not expected until next year at the earliest.

Gov't not interested in helping miners

Dear Editor;

I am appalled by the advertisement placed in Monday's Record concerning the mining of asbestos. The ad appears to have been placed by the Dept. of Energy, Mines and Resources Minister Marcel Masse.

Asbestos is a magnesium silicate mineral and is fibrous in form. It is fireproof and resistant to most chemicals which has made it useful in certain applications. In recent decades, however, we have learned of its poisonous properties and I am shocked to learn that it is still being mined.

Asbestos is highly toxic by inhalation as this leads to asbestosis, (a fibrosis involving lung scarring). It is also a human carciogen by inhalation and a suspected carciogen by ingestion.

A single exposure to asbestos can in some cases, cause mesothelioma: a cancer of the membrane lining of the chest or abdomen.

Those who mine asbestos are at terrible risk! The government is not helping miners by propping up this deadly industry. The $50 million for pro-asbestos propaganda could have been used to establish alternative industries where people could work safely.

Clearly the government is not interested in helping miners, but rather the owners of mining companies, who are the only ones to profit from such activity. The responsible decision would be to totally ban the use and production of this poison.

(My facts on asbestos come from the book. Artist Beware, published by Watson-Guptill Publications/New York, and written by Michael McCann, PhD., founder of the Center for Occupational Hazards. I highly recommend this book.)

Sincerely yours,
Fred Williams

Plan development carefully

Dear Charles,

A recent rash of articles and correspondence on Lac Brome contained a number of inaccuracies, of which this letter addresses two.

First a minor one. "Neil McCubbin is not on the tax roll", (letter from ex-mayor Blackwood). Perhaps he could persuade the Ville de Lac Brome tax collector who issued the attached receipt to refund my money.

More importantly, it is frequently stated that various developments, especially condominiums, will reduce taxes and "pay for themselves with increased tax revenues". Various contributors to the Record and other newspapers consistently repeat this theme. This insults the taxpayers by assuming that they have forgotten that Mayor Drapeau did give birth to his Olympic baby, despite his frequent claims that the 1976 Olympics would not cost Montreal a cent.

Experience all over the developed world demonstrates that the larger a town grows, the higher the taxes are. This does not mean that growth is necessarily bad, but it does demonstrate that towns must plan development carefully and with full disclosure of the costs involved, so that the taxpayers can make informed and democratic decisions on the kind of town they wish to live in.

Yours very truly
Neil McCubbin

Socialist party shows the way

Dear Sir,

A current TV series has shown how Roman Catholics in Northern Ireland, outnumbered two to one by Protestants, are discriminated against by the latter in the matter of jobs, housing, etc. Catholics get the menial, lower paid jobs, the poorest housing, and many cannot vote in local elections. Many live in what was described as "Catholic ghettos". Unemployment is high, hence the prejudice and discrimination against the Catholic minority which gives Protestants the economic advantage in the struggle for the available jobs and housing. It also provides Northern Ireland capitalists with a pool of cheap labor. Its political leaders cater mainly to the Protestant majority.

It should be clear that the discrimination, conflict and violence is economic in origin. It is the consequence of a capitalist system that cannot provide the opportunities for jobs and a measure of security for large numbers of workers.

Instead of fighting and killing each other Northern Ireland Catholics and Protestants, and workers elsewhere, many in a similar situation, should be organizing to end the social system that divides them and keeps them at each other's throats in a struggle for economic survival. They should prepare to establish genuine socialism, based on the social ownership and democratic worker-control of the economy.

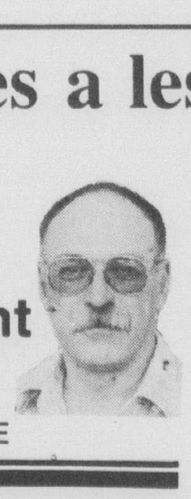

This would be non-political, industrial representative government, elected from the industries and services by, responsible to, and removable at will by their industrial constituents. This real economic democracy would provide the foundation for collective and democratic productive planning to serve social needs, for economic equality, security and prosperity for all. The Socialist Labor Party shows the way.

Blais-Grenier gives a lesson in modern politics

Where the pavement ends

JIM LAWRENCE

Blais-Grenier told tales that were neat,
And the Tories were feeling the heat,
So they called Good King Brian,
Who said she was lyin',
Now she's out on her seat, in the street!

...Anon 1988

We remember her! Suzanne Blais-Grenier is the cabinet minister who's expense account for a trip to Europe doubled the national debt. Her use of limousines and aircraft became part of the Ottawa legend. The trail of empty champagne bottles finally led the Ottawa snoops to her hideout and she discovered how fast you can be dismissed from King Brian's cabinet, when you fall out of favour.

She had been a typical Quebec Conservative MP, blundering her way around the capital, and making incredible errors of judgement in her portfolio. Not having the experience to cover her tracks, wind of her passing was finally noted by the opposition and, in their zeal to recover the trough, began asking embarrassing questions.

Rather than admit the whole gang were simply inexperienced in the game, Good King Brian banished her to the back benches for the duration.

My goodness! I'd have thought she'd learned her lesson and been content to "suck on the public teat" with the rest of her confreres. Not our Suzanne!

A couple of weeks ago she spoke up and told of an "organized network of patronage and kickbacks" within the Conservative government.

Screams of rage echoed throughout the hallowed halls of Parliament as a result of her comments. MPs raced through the catacombs with spears and knives searching dilegently for her blood. King Brian "sicked" the RCMP on the case and demanded they get to the bottom of the whole thing. John Turner rubbed his hands in glee and said "ahem".

However it was found that Suzanne really didn't have any specific proof to back up her claims. None of the people she knew about would testify, she claimed. "Whew!" said the king, wiping his brow with a used $100 bill.

In righteous indignation the Tory caucus in Quebec voted to toss her to the wolves. She was cashiered from the ranks without even the usual broken sword and ripping-off-of-buttons ceremony.

Poor Suzanne even claims now that Peter White (you remember Peter White don't you?) called her and said that if she didn't retract everything, or at least claim to have been misquoted, she'd get tossed out of the national caucus and lose her executive washroom key.

I have a sneaking suspicion the key's gone and Suzy will have to use the washroom in the basement with the tourists!

Suzanne is undecided about running for a second term in Parliament. Apparently a parallel Tory organization has been set up in Rosemount, her home riding, which is expected to choose another candidate, which might possibly make her decision easier.

All Suzanne said was what most of us have suspected about politics for years. Is there anyone within the circulation of this paper that hasn't suspected, at one time or another, that politics, north or south of the border, is nothing more than an opportunity for out-of-work lawyers, and political toadies, to line up at the trough and feat on public funds?

The real problem is that our conservative government just doesn't have enough years of political, in-power experience to cover their tracks. All the fumbling and bumbling, the many scandals, Sinclair Stevens, Michel Cote, the Orlikon affair, even Blais-Grenier's expense accounts were all because of simple inexperience. If you don't know how to line up at the trough without getting your feet wet, you're going to make a whole bunch of mistakes. The real crime seems to be... getting caught!

What else is new? It's not really a crime to use your new-found powers for personal gain. What the hell, politicians have been doing that for years. But you have to know how to cover your tracks and be prepared to deny everything if the opposition begins asking questions. You also have to be prepared to sacrifice those below you, and be sacrificed by those above you, at any time the need arises.

Poor Suzanne, all she did was follow in the footsteps of the big boys, get caught, and then rat on the troops. Of course she got it in the neck! What did she expect?

Ever since the first prime minister donned his robes of office there have been only three basic, unwritten rules. 1) Whatever you do, don't make waves. 2) Whatever you do, don't get caught. 3) Whatever you do, don't embarrass the chief.

These rules are tattooed on the left buttock of every MP, just after the swearing-in ceremony and before he is assigned a seat in the house.

Suzanne Blais-Grenier broke all three rules and has to be sent to purgatory for the benefit of the party.

Personally, and I too have no proof (so don't bother sending the RCMP around for a visit), I'm inclined to believe her.

Scientists advance chatty computers

By Marcia Dunn

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Don't expect the Tower of Babel to tumble, but computer scientists are breaking down language barriers with machines that can translate languages in seconds and recognize speech regardless of accent.

"Where can it lead to?" said National Science Foundation assistant director Bill Wulf. "How big is your imagination?"

Need to call Tokyo? Hotel switchboards, within a few years, will be able to connect English-speaking callers to a special computer that translates their words into Japanese, then responds by machine in English.

Stuck in a foreign hospital? Patients and doctors who speak different languages will be able to communicate via computer in about a decade.

Travelling abroad and can't speak the language? Forget a dictionary. Plan on packing a pocket translator.

USE PHONE

The list goes on and on, including eyeglasses for the deaf with screens that provide transcripts of conversation, and the ability to order merchandise by talking on the phone to computers.

"One of the most distinguishing characteristics of human beings is our ability to communicate," Wulf said. "What you're seeing here are techniques that improve that ability."

Companies are beginning to cash in on voice recognition programs even while experts are trying to make the computers capable of dealing with the ambiguity of human language, bad grammar and different accents, among other things.

"We need to reduce the costs and increase the size of the vocabulary and increase the capabilities," said Raj Reddy, director of Carnegie Mellon's Robotics Institute in Pittsburgh. "All of those are yet to be solved."

SAVES MONEY

Dragon Systems Inc. of Newton, Mass., developed a program — used by Xerox Corp. in 1986 — that recognized 1,000 words, said Dragon assistant marketing manager Jonathan Robbins.

Now a 5,000-word program is out, and a 20,000-word version is expected by early 1989, said Robbins. Dragon also is working with the federal Defence Advanced Research Projects Agency to develop a voice-controlled jet fighter cockpit.

Kurzweil Applied Intelligence Inc. of Waltham, Mass., has developed voice-recognition systems for radiologists and emergency rooms. Doctors dictate their reports to a computer, and the reports are printed. The programs originally recognized 1,000 words, but the vocabulary has been expanded to 5,000.

More than 100 U.S. hospitals use the radiology system, VoiceRAD, and about a dozen have VoiceEM for emergency rooms, said Kurzweil spokesman Martin Schneider.

Both Dragon and Kurzweil's systems require brief pauses between words and must be trained to recognize each speaker.

VOICES DIFFER

"Most of us don't speak properly most of the time," said Reddy, president of the American Association for Artificial Intelligence. "If you transcribe anybody's voice ... there are all types of pauses and repetition, hums and haws, which we know how to ignore. Computers don't know that yet."

"Either we have to come up with ways to deal with (this) or we have to teach people to speak right," said Kai-Fu Lee, a Carnegie Mellon researcher who has developed a speech recognition system known as Sphinx.

It's a slow, complex task because human language is rife with ambiguity, unlike mathematical, scientific or computer language.

A classic example of machine misinterpretation involves the epigram, "The spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak." Early translating systems turned that into, "The vodka is good, but the meat is rotten."

IDENTIFY WORDS

Lee's Sphinx, unlike earlier systems, can identify English words spoken continuously. It boasts up to 96-per-cent accuracy identifying 997 words and people don't have to spend hours training the system to recognize their speech patterns.

"It's the first system that has all these capabilities," said Lee, 26, who has been working on Sphinx for 1½ years, funded by a defence research agency.

Masaru Tomita, associate director of the Carnegie Mellon University Centre for Machine Translation, has developed a system capable of recognizing 100 words of doctor-patient dialogue in Japanese, then translating the Japanese into English uttered by a computer's speaker.

GENERATE SPEECH

The computer transforms the spoken Japanese into its written equivalent, which is translated into written English and sent to another part of the computer that generates English speech.

Tomita, 30, also has devised a program that translates written English or Japanese into written English, Japanese or German.

He hopes to increase the programs' vocabularies and eventually expand them to conversation used in booking hotel reservations and registering for conferences. His work is funded, in part, by IBM Corp. of Tokyo.

LACK AWARENESS

There are more than 3,000 world languages and dialects, said Jaime Carbonell, director of the Center for Machine Translation.

"Americans don't seem to be aware of the fact that maybe 90 per cent of the world population doesn't speak English at all," said Tomita. "But everywhere you go, there is somebody who can speak English."

Because of that smug sense of superiority as well as insufficient funding, machine translation has received scant attention in the United States since the 1960s, experts say. Most work has been in Europe and Japan.

"The man on the street may or may not directly benefit from a machine translation system," Wulf said. "On the other hand, he may benefit indirectly from American scientists being able to interact better with the Russian or the Japanese or the French scientists."

Financial repercussions of summers drought will spread like an epidemic

By Darlene Rude
The Canadian Press

Far from the drought-sickened fields of Prairie grain now being harvested, the financial effects of this year's drought are expected to spread like an epidemic.

The shipping companies, grain elevators and ports that make money handling grain for export, face a particularly bleak year, a report by the Canada Grains Council says.

Drought dried the Prairie crop to two-thirds its normal size. Analysts say only 14-15 million tonnes of grain will be available to sell overseas, about half of the usual amount.

There's little reserve grain to draw on for customers like Brazil and China because stocks have dropped to their lowest level since 1951.

PREDICT LOSS

The council predicts Canada's grain transportation and handling sectors could see an average 47-per-cent loss in revenue this year if exports don't exceed 14 million tonnes.

"There's such a massive impact," said Maurice Kraut, research director of the Winnipeg-based council.

"This is happening to such a broad expanse of an industry and thousands and thousands of people, rather than just the farming community."

Railways that move grain from Western Canada could lose up to 55 per cent of their grain revenue while primary elevators face a drop of as much as 45 per cent, the report estimates.

Major grain companies such as United Grain Growers have already said they'll be in the red this year.

HIT HARDEST

However, many of the hardest hit players in the grain handling system will be those along the Great Lakes and St. Lawrence Seaway.

Grain moves to the Atlantic through an elaborate system of lakes and storage houses and comprises about 20 per cent of the total movement through the seaway.

Already about 1,400 workers have been laid off along the seaway, while about 500 of the 1,300 grain handlers at Thunder Bay have been let go.

How severely the St. Lawrence suffers will depend on how much grain is moved through the east as opposed to ports on the West Coast, said Norman Hall, president of the Ottawa-based Dominion Marine Association, which represents 90 per cent of Canadian shipping companies.

DROPS SHARPLY

Some industry officials have predicted only four million tonnes of grain will be exported through the seaway — a drastic drop from the 13 million tonnes shipped last year.

In recent years, more grain has been exported from ports at Vancouver and Prince Rupert, B.C., because of a shift in markets from Europe to the Pacific.

"It's one thing to try and struggle through a season when you have a slowdown in July and August but it's another thing to survive 12 solid months," said Hall.

"That will tell the tale right there as to who lives and who doesn't."

EXPECT CLOSURES

Hall said additional layoffs, a reduction in Canada's fleet of 60 grain ships and terminal elevator closures are likely.

Already some ships are docked at a time when they're normally in service.

"There's certainly been a big decline," said Mike Kirkpatrick, manager of traffic for St. Catharines-based Misener Shipping Ltd., which is using only six of its 10 grain ships.

"It's essentially because of the grain situation. It's not going to be a good year."

Business briefs

MONTREAL (CP) — A.L. Van Houtte Ltd. recorded revenue of $5.8 million for the four-month period ended July 16, compared to $3.7 million for the same period last year, an increase of 58 per cent.

The company, which specializes in the roasting, packaging and marketing of coffees in the retail and institutional food markets, attributed the growth to the acquisition of Les Cafes Orient Express Ltd. in 1987 and increased penetration of the market.

NEW YORK (AP) — Publishing giant Macmillan Inc., target of unwanted takeover offers for four months, said today that it will be bought by the investment firm Kohlberg Kravis Roberts Co. in a cash deal that values the company at $2.36 billion US.

The announcement came after reports surfaced that Macmillan officials had negotiated this weekend with Kohlberg Kravis, a private partnership that has helped other large companies thwart unwelcome takeovers.

Kohlberg Kravis specializes in leveraged buyouts, in which a company is acquired through mostly borrowed money repaid from the target company's profits or asset sales.

Sugar cookie recipe comes from Bondville

Kay's kitchen korner

BY KAY TAYLOR

During a recent visit home Mrs. Marguerite Rousseau and "yours truly" enjoyed a chat with recipes as the topic. Here are a few favourites from M.R.

The first was a special with her mother the late Mrs. Sydney Taylor. A jar of these cookies was always on hand. A frequently used recipe also in my home — acquired from Mrs. Taylor but actually originating with Bondville's Mrs. Gillam.

SUGAR COOKIES

1 cup butter
1 cup sugar
2 eggs, well beaten
1 teaspoon vanilla
2½ cups all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons cream of tartar
1 teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt

Mix well, roll out and cut in desired shapes and sprinkle with sugar. Bake at 375°F for 10 minutes. (My own original recipe gave 300 °F).

Mrs. R. recommends for rolling out a mixture of powdered sugar and flour. In my original recipe margarine was an alternative to butter (but butter gives best flavour!).

* * *

Another of M's favourites. This would originate from Mrs. Kenneth Miller of Brome

DARLINE'S BEST-YET DINNER ROLLS

1 package yeast
¼ cup warm water
¼ cup sugar
¼ cup salad oil
Pinch of ginger
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup scaleded milk
1 egg, beaten
4 cups sifted flour

Soften yeast in water with 1 teaspoon of sugar and the ginger. Add oil, remaining sugar and salt to hot milk; stir and cool. Add egg; stir in softened yeast. Stir in flour until well mixed. Knead until elastic and form into ball. Put in greased bowl, turning to grease surface.

Cover and let rise (at about 85°) for 1 hour or until double in size.

Knead well; shape as desired. Place on greased pan or cookie sheet. Let rise, bake at 350°F for 25 minutes or until done. These freeze well.

* * *

And this one — highly recommented by Marguerite.

BLUEBERRY BREAD

2½ cups flour
¾ cup sugar
1 teaspoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
6 tablespoons butter or margarine
¾ cup chopped nuts
2 eggs
1 cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
1½ cups blueberries

Preheat oven to 35-°F. Grease and flour 9 x 5-inch loaf pan. In large bowl mix flour, sugar, baking powder and salt with fork. Cut in margarine or butter until mixture resembles fine crumbs. Stir in nuts. In small bowl, beat eggs slightly with fork; stir in milk and vanilla. Stir egg mixture in to flour until just moist; gently stir in blueberries and spoon in pan. Bake approximately 1 hour 20 minutes.

Uncle Joe should have treated Minnie better

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: My Uncle Joe married Mary in 1927. Ten years later she died. He bought a large cemetery plot with a place next to her for himself. Less than a year later, Uncle Joe married Ruth, who was Mary's best friend. Ruth died in 1950. He buried her on the other side of the grave site.

In 1951, he married Minnie. This marriage lasted 28 years, then Uncle Joe died. Before his death, he told Minnie that he wanted to be buried between Ruth and Mary. This really hurt her a lot. After all, she had been married to Joe far longer than both of the other wives combined. Uncle Joe had become an invalid the last eight years, and Minnie waited on him hand and foot. He never appreciated a thing she did for him and treated her like she was hired help.

A few years ago, Minnie died. She was buried with her family in another cemetery. Even though Joe was my uncle,I believe he gave that dear woman a lousy deal, and so does the rest of the family. Care to comment? — K in Florida

Dear K: I know of no solution to the problem since nobody knows in advance who is going to go first or how many spouses may follow. It does seem, however, that Uncle Joe could have arranged for Minnie to be buried somewhere near him when it became apparent that he was going first. It sounds as if he treated her in death the same way he treated her during their marriage. Shabbily.

Dear Ann Landers: "Teardrops in Shreveport" wrote that what had been a warm relationship with her husband has turned into a cold war and her marriage is falling apart. You suggested that he might have a fear of intimacy or that he may be having an affair with another woman.

Ann, I could have written that letter myself two years ago. I would bet anything that Teardrops' husband is having an affair, not with another woman, but with cocaine. His coldness and indifference are classic symptoms of an addict who is hiding his drug use.

Please make this woman aware of this. Take it from me, I've been there. Two years ago my hsuband went to a rehab clinic and he has been clean ever since. It's been a long, difficult road and our marriage is by no means perfect, but we're together now and the worst is behind us.

We couldn't have done it without the excellent support provided by Cocaine Anonymous. Please plug the growing self-help organizations, Ann. They do a fabulous job. — A True Believer in Lake Ariel, Pa.

Dear Believer: Cocaine Anonymous often succeeds when other attempts to get off the junk have failed. This organization has more than 1,000 groups and is based on the concept of Alcoholics Anonymous — people who share a common problem.

Anyone interested in learning about a chapter near you can write or call: Cocaine Anonymous, P.O. Box 1367, Culver City, Calif. 90239. The phone is (213) 559-5833.

Dear Ann Landers: One line from your column has changed our lives. It is this one: "Don't sweat the small stuff." Our two college kids were home for the summer and we didn't have a single fight. Nobody blew up over some small thing and nothing big ever came along. Thanks for the help, Ann. — Gulf Breeze, Fla.

Dear Breeze: Funny how everything is obvious after someone points it out. Thanks for letting me know I helped. A letter such as yours makes my day.

Normal childbirth possible after multiple caesareans

NEW YORK (AP) — Women can go through labor and normal childbirth after three or more caesarean sections, even when delivering twins or facing other complications, an obstetrician says.

About one in four children in the United States are born by caesarean section, Dr. Jeffrey Phelan of Los Angeles said in an interview.

"At the present time," said Phelan, "caesarean delivery is the No. 1 most common hospital-based operative procedure" in the United States.

But about 455,000 of the 906,000 caesareans performed in 1986 — the last year for which figures were available — were unnecessary, says the Public Citizen Health Research Group in Washington.

It said adherance to the outdated policy of "once a caesarean, always a caesarean" was one of the main reasons for the high number.

Surgical deliveries accounted for 5.5 per cent of all births in the United States in 1970, 10.4 per cent in 1975 and 20.3 per cent in 1983.

In a series of studies of labor and delivery following caesarean sections, Phelan found that women who have had one caesarean have an 80-per-cent chance of delivering a second baby normally if they are allowed to go into labor.

Women with two prior caesareans have a 70 percent chance of normal childbirth if they attempt it, Phelan reported at a meeting in Boston of the American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists.

Phelan is now analyzing data from more recent studies in which he has found that women can have normal childbirth after caesareans even when carrying more than one fetus or when the fetus is turned in the so-called breach position.

It is also safe to use oxytocin, a hormone that stimulates and intensifies labor contractions, in women who have had a prior caesarean, he said.

Colored hardwood latest flooring fashion

LONDON (CP) — The latest trend in hardwood floors is color.

Hardwood floors have enjoyed a revival, with sales doubling since 1982, and one study estimates 23 per cent of North American households have hardwood floors in at least one room.

Now there's growing interest in using colored stains on hardwood.

White and grey stains are the favorites so far, say flooring experts, but ebony, pink and blue are available for the adventurous.

Home-builder Aleck Harasym of London had his hardwood floor finished in bone white to match kitchen cupboards in his new home.

"I wanted something that was attractive and warm looking, actually warm to the touch," he says.

Colored hardwood, particularly white, shows up joint openings caused by humidity changes more than natural finishes do, but Harasym doesn't regret his choice.

"I am very satisfied with the finish. It's a lovely look."

Henny Veerkamp, who along with her husband Theo owns Huron Flooring Ltd. in London, says colored finishes on hardwood have developed during the last two years and now amount to about 10 per cent of their business.

SOME DRAWBACKS

Besides more visible joint openings, Veerkamp says there are other drawbacks to colored finishes.

Dust shows up more on dark finishes like ebony, and the whole process involves more work.

"There is more labor. It takes longer," says Veerkamp.

She says customers who want a color stain should use a water-based finish instead of the regular polyurethane because the water base will not change colors or yellow.

Wes Harris of Wes Harris Flooring Ltd. says color staining also costs more in time, labor and materials.

"It's very expensive. It's double (the cost) for sanding and staining."

Harris says a four-litre pail of colored sealer is five times more expensive than a regular sealer.

Veerkamp says interior decorators see trends such as colored stains in places such as California, and push them.

However, Kate Gielen of Gielen Design in London says she's not concerned that color-stained floors may be only a fad.

She says almost any flooring goes in and out of style. "It's a trend coming around. It's like fashion. It just keeps coming around."

Women's Institute meeting

NORTH STANSTEAD (IH) — A meeting of members of Stanstead North W.I. was held in the Mansur School on Thursday afternoon, September 1st.

Rheta Taylor, president, presided and called the meeting to order at 1:30 p.m. after all had enjoyed delicious refreshments served by the hostesses, Ruth Putney and Janice Soutiere.

The president read the motto for the month of September, "What we anticipate seldom occurs: what we least expect generally happens". There were interesting responses to the roll call "Name a Canadian immigrant who enriched our land culturally and financially."

Norma Holmes, secretary, gave her report and read the communications. Members are asked to bring in good recipes to be sent to the Provincial office which plans to print a W.I. cook book.

At the Ayer's Cliff Fair in competition with the Cercle des Fermières groups our Branch placed first in the handicrafts and are recipients of $25.00.

Janice Soutiere read an item from the Royal Bank Reporter issued each month and noted the Seth Taylor first automobile build by him in Stanstead is now housed in a museum in Toronto.

An interesting letter was read from Hazel Clark, Editor of the Macdonald College magazine. This was information from the time it was started in 1940 by three organizations, one being the Institute to its present "new look" much enjoyed by many people. It includes Institute newsy items. Conveners' reports: Irene Johnston, Agriculture, read from The Record about a "small batch of wheat being tested to experiment the possibility of withstanding the weather such as the Western farmers have had this year in the drought. This is Durham wheat used for pasta and such. Citizenship and Legislation Doris Gibson spoke about the Hallowe'en UNICEF collections by school students.

Miriam Osborne, International Affairs, read from The Record an item concerning the Iran-Iraq movement to end the eight year war. She also noted World Food Day is in October.

The school fair in Ayer's Cliff for the four County schools is September 15-16 and members volunteered towork one or both days.

The school house committee reported the school had been vandalized this summer and two items of value to the members have been stolen.

Rheta thanked the members who had worked and contributed to the tea room on the fairgrounds and contributions to the sale table of crafts and cooking.

Gertrude Ketcham, convenor of Home Economics and Health read an article "If you must tan, do it in a sensible way" because there can be drastic damage done to the skin through overexposure.

Irene Johnston gave a report on the judging of the school fair gardens by Sunnyside school students. Former Beebe branch members inspected in their area, and Stanstead North in the other. Cash prizes will be awarded the winners.

This was the International Affairs convenors meeting, Miriam Osborne, who read a paper on the ACW report from Pearl Yates, Provincial President who had attended the session in New Brunswick. Another article "What is the Women's Institute" and concluded with a bit of humour when she read "The Pulpit and the Lillies" from the "Outlet", and Four Kinds of Bones.

The next meeting on October 6 in the Mansur School. It was voted that refreshments be served following the meeting.

Many of the community attended the Kirkin' O' the Tartan held in the packed-to-overflowing St. Paul's Presbyterian Church, Scotstown. Rev. Jim Findlay, a native of Aberdeen, Scotland, and a former minister of St. Paul's, officiated at the most impressive service, with Mrs. Marian Goodwin at the organ. Following the service, many gathered at the Irving's farm, for a family picnic, and along with the pleasant socializing, enjoyed the piping by Piper Andrew Moore of the Black Watch Royal Highland Regiment of Canada, the Haggis Hurling, the Kilted Kilometer Race and the Fiddle Concert with Richard Depault and François Gagnon of Carignan, Que. The Ceilidh Society of Scotstown, who sponsored the day's events, are to be congratulated and thanked for their great efforts.

Mr. Tom McKay, Arlington, Virginia, has returned to his home after spending several days with Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Beaton on North Hill. While here he also visited with Arthur and Clyne MacDonald, and attended and participated in the Kirkin' O' the Tartan and picnic in Scotstown. He also spent some time researching his ancestry, being the great-nephew of the famed poem writer, Oscar Dhu.

Spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe Morrison were Mr. and Mrs. Roger Ball, Montpelier, Vermont. Tom Rowland, London, Ont., was also an overnight guest. Donald Morrison, Scotstown, accompanied by his son Donald and grandchildren, Kenneth and Robert of Ottawa were also visiting at the same home.

More difficult to achieve is the ability to lose our prejudices

H. Gordon Green

One of my radio listeners tells me that she is quite angry about something I said the other day concerning German Shepherd dogs. She says that these dogs have been part of her family ever since the family began and she doesn't believe there can be a more loveable, more loyal, more intelligent animal in the world.

Now I can't recall exactly what I said in the commentary she refers to but I suspect I had been merely relating our own experiences with that breed. For ten years or more this farm was never without at least one pair of German Shepherds. Indeed at one time we had three registered females raising pups for us. And I must say that I have a great respect for the intelligence of this breed.

I well remember a pair of German Shepherds we had which would lie at the gate for hours waiting for the return of a hired man whom they worshipped listening to the sounds of traffic coming up the highway. Now they couldn't see that traffic. It was on the other side of dense woodland. But long before my ears could hear a thing their ears would not only have detected the sound of an approaching truck, but they instantly knew that it was their master's truck and they would gleefully rush out to meet him long before that truck came into view.

But for all their intelligence we were never able to trust this breed with our sheep or young livestock. We would warn, scold, even punish severely for infractions but all we seemed to be able to teach them was that they must not kill when someone was looking. It could be of course that there are strains of German Shepherds which can be depended upon to leave defenceless animals alone, or even to protect them. If so, we were never able to find them.

Now this is not to say that the German Shepherd doesn't have his place. Many are doing wonderfully as guides for the blind, as well as in various phases of police work. Our Mounties have even taught them to find human bodies buried by debris and to locate drugs or illicit stills. Others have been taught to track criminals, and even to attack criminals and bring them to the ground.

One of the saddest aspects of a dog so trained however is that it can never be released for ordinary civilian life. Once a German Shepherd has been trained to hunt men down, he will always be vicious. The dogs the army trained to help rout the enemy in wartime had to be destroyed after the war was over.

As a police dog the German Shepherd is a wizard at learning, but he simply lacks the ability to unlearn.

Seems to me there's little comfort in the suspicion that this may be the fatal flaw in man as well. Man learns so quickly that historians can hardly write fast enough to chronicle his progress. He learns so fast that he should be turning this tired old earth into a fresh new heaven, but he hasn't been able to do this as yet because to achieve lasting peace the accumulation of learning is not enough, marvellous and hard-bought though that learning may be.

More important now, and much more difficult to achieve is the ability to unlearn our deeply rooted prejudices, our instinctive greed and that primitive emotion which moves us to fear those we do not understand, and to want to blot out those we fear.

Aldrich family members hold 11th reunion at Huntingville

On July 31, 1988 the 11th family reunion was held in the Huntingville Hall. It was a perfect day for the occasion and there were 60 signing the guest book. The hall was nicely decorated with balloons and a lovely bouquet of flowers arranged by Doris Aldrich was placed on the food table.

Everyone enjoyed a delicious pot luck dinner served buffet style. The children all received gifts which were donated and given out by Cathy Aldrich. Several ceramic gifts were donated by Barbara Aldrich and given as door prizes.

The rest of the afternoon was spent in visiting and taking pictures. Many left for home around 4 p.m. and those remaining had supper at the hall.

The ages were from six months to 80 years young.

Folks attended from Florida, Concord, North Carolina, Germantown, Maryland, Tyngsbora, Mass., St. Albans, Vt., Milton, Vt., Welland, Ont., Belleville,Ont., Baie d'Urfe, Stanstead, Gould, St. Denis de Brompton, Sherbrooke, Lennoxville and Huntingville.

When count doesn't count

By James Jacoby

If today's deal were played 30 years ago, North would likely just pass three hearts and hope for the best. That way a plus score would be registered, since declarer would lose only three heart tricks and the king of diamonds. However, North-South had the agreement that making an immediate two-over-one response committed the partnership to playing a game. And so the bidding went on until South grasped at the three-no-trump straw. But now to the defense.

The opening lead of the diamond three was won by the nine in dummy. Declarer immediately led a low spade back — nine from East, 10 from South, and the jack from West. What now? After some thought, West led the king of clubs. He hoped his partner would have as much as the club queen and five cards in the suit, plus the ace of hearts. No such luck, and the no-trump game came limping home. We can see that a heart to the king and the jack of clubs return would set the hand. Was there any clue that would have helped West find this play?

In fact, it would have served no purpose in this deal for East to give count in spades when a low card was led at the second trick, so strong inference about suit preference should have been taken from that play of the spade nine. If West had read that card as asking for a heart play, he would have led one despite the deterrence of the bidding, and the hand would have been set.

ASTRO•GRAPH

Bernice Bede Osol

Your Birthday

Sept. 13, 1988

In the year ahead you are likely to become involved in several new ventures. Although each may be small, their collective returns could be surprisingly large.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Think in terms of small gains today, because pennies have a way of adding up. Concentrate on taking advantage of little bargains you would ordinarily ignore. Know where to look for romance and you'll find it. The Astro-Graph Matchmaker instantly reveals which signs are romantically perfect for you. Mail $2 to Matchmaker, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) You will know better than others what's best for you today. Establish your own agenda, instead of letting your companions write the script for you.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Keep your own counsel today even though you may be tempted to repeat something that was told to you in strictest confidence.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) A matter about which you have high hopes can be discussed with a friend who has your best interest at heart. The exchange should be productive.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) If your ears are burning today it is because others are talking about you. If you could hear their conversations it would give your ego a boost.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Something may occur today that will put your faith and beliefs to a test. The results will help make you stronger.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Be especially observant today in your business dealings. You may be able to spot something that could save or make you money.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Before making any agreements today, scrutinize the fine print. It's the little details that are going to turn out to be significant in the long run.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) In order to clear the decks for the important projects that lie ahead of you, make an effort to get all of the small jobs out of the way.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You have a marvelous quality today that equips you to competently manage those younger or less experienced than yourself. Use it wisely.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) A matter that has caused discord in the family recently can be ironed out today. It will be up to you to open the negotiations.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You might have to be a trifle assertive today in order to advance your personal interest. This can be done more effectively with the mind, not muscle.

Women's Canadian Club receives guest speaker

MAGOG (CG) — The Women's Canadian Club of the Eastern Townships will hold its first Dinner Meeting of the season on Thursday, September 20 at Hotel Le President at 6:30 p.m.

The guest speaker will be John Kim Bell, a Mohawk Indian born 35 years ago on the Kahnawake Reserve near Montreal. He began piano lessons at the age of eight and violin at the age of ten.

Bell's professional career started before university. His pianistic ability so impressed producer, John Kenley, that he was instantly hired as an Assistant Conductor of the company at the age of seventeen.

The following year, he was invited to conduct the national touring company of No No Nanette at the age of eighteen making him the youngest professional conductor in the U.S.

While still in university, Bell was asked to conduct the first U.S. tour of the Soviet ballet duo, The Panovs.

While conducting the International Company of A Chorus Line, members of the Toronto Symphony wrote to the Music Director (Maestro Andrew Davis) requesting that Davis audition Bell. In response, Davis flew to Chicago and Bell was offered the position of Apprentice Conductor for the Toronto Symphony for the 1980-81 season.

After a years with the Toronto Symphony, Bell studied with Franco Ferrara in Sienna, Italy at the Accademia Musicale Chigiana, and returned to New York to become the Music Director of the Dance Theatre of Harlem and The Eglevsky Ballet Companies.

Bell became the subject of a CBC documentary film profiling his life as the first North American Indian to become a symphonic conductor and created the Canadian Native Arts Foundation.

During the past two years Bell has become recognized as one of Canada's leading Native activists and Native cultural figures.

He has recently appeared as a guest conductor for the National Ballet of Canada, and with the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra in London, England. He recently received the Ohio State University Alumni award (The William Oxley Thompson Award) for outstanding career achievement.

Bell produced his first gala benefit concert for the Foundation last February at Roy Thomson Hall. Over $50,000 of the money raised from that concert was distributed in the form of grants and scholarships to overe 25 talented Native youth across the country.

Mr. Bell's next major project is the production of the first full-scale Native contemporary ballet, In the Land of Spirits — which will make its debut at a gala benefit at the National Arts Centre in Ottawa on November 15, 1988.

Members of the Women's Canadian Club are looking forward to this dinner meeting and hearing about Mr. Bell's exceptional career.

Musical evening enjoyed at Lac Brome Theatre

KNOWLTON (KT) — A rare evening of music was presented at Lac Brome Theatre on Monday evening, August 29 when an appreciative audience enjoyed the visit of William Stevens, well known classical pianist from nearby Sutton. To just sit and drift on a sea of melody, the listener's thoughts in many instances back with happy and treasured memories of past years and loved ones, this in itself made for a most relaxing experience. To watch the pianist's nimble fingers on the keys as he skillfully passed from intricate runs to vibrant, resounding chords (or vice versa) was alone a delight to many familiar with the classics. Interspersed with his playing were frequent humorous asides by the musician which brought much laughter from his listeners in response. Also noted and appreciated was the strength and resonance of the finale of each composition.

The well chosen programme included composers known to any music lover. Etude in C sharp minor and Etude in D sharp minor by Scriabin (1872-1915); Intermezzo in B minor and Rhapsody in G minor by Brahms (1833-1897); Sonata in B minor by Chopin (1810-1849) and then Allegro-Sherzo-Largo-Presto.

After intermission his listeners were treated to Wedding Day at Trodhaugen by Grief (1843-1907), Reflets dans l'eau by Debussy (1862-1918); Seguidilla by Albeniz (1890-1909), and again a Debussy selection- Rêverie; Un Sospiro by Litzt (1811-1886) and then Hungarian Rhapsody No. 6 by Litzt. In response to the hearty applause Mr. Stevens graciously played an encore. He was then presented a bouquet by Jasmine Roy, one of the cast of "Godspell" the third and closing play of the summer season at Lac Brome Theatre.

A personal note by your correspondent (with the kind indulgence of the readers) — my dear mother, the late Mrs. Alice whittaker was herself a classical pianist, commencing studies at the age of five and playing her first public concert when eight. After studying at the London College of Music, she later taught there until her marriage. The memories of girlhood days as I listened to some of her favourite compositions, added up to a never-to-be-forgotten evening in the middle of which I realized that the next day was her birthday! Thank you Mr. Stevens for helping me remember in a very special way!

Will Stevens is a well known contemporary Canadian pianist. Graduating in Montreal, (of which city he is a native) he has travelled widely, appearing at Carnegie Hall, London, Paris, New Zealand with tours in Canada and U.S.A. carrying a number of "rare" reviews. He will be remembered especially for his T.V. programmes on the CBC. Also he was recipient of the Harriet Cohen Prize and the British Commonwealth Medal.

Now a permanent resident of Sutton, he is available for private piano lessons to semi and advanced pupils at his home, 1267 Parmenter, Sutton.

Coffey is brewing over the possibility

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Defenceman Paul Coffey of the Pittsburgh Penguins played for three Stanley Cup champions in Edmonton, but he says he's never been more excited about a hockey season.

So how could a two-time Norris Trophy winner as the NHL's top defenceman be excited about playing for a team that hasn't made the playoffs in six seasons?

"I'm excited about the possibilities, about what could happen to this team," Coffey said. "You go to camp with the Edmonton Oilers, you always knew you were going to be a good team. You always knew you were going to make the playoffs.

"But with this team . . . it reminds me of the Oilers six or seven years ago. In 1981, '82, '83, when we came into camp, the sky was really the limit for our hockey team.

"I'm not saying we've got a Stanley Cup team here, but in my mind, we've got a good hockey club and if we get everyone going in the right direction with the right attitude, a lot of things can happen."

The NHL's most offensive defenceman, Coffey had 15 goals and 52 assists in 46 games last season, despite sitting out its first six weeks in a contract dispute with the Oilers.

INJURED KNEE

"Last year was a tough situation for me, coming into Pittsburgh on Nov. 24 without any game experience and having to play," Coffey said. "Then, having a knee injury. But the three or four months I was here, I really, really enjoyed it.

"It made me look forward to it that much more."

Coffey underwent arthroscopic knee surgery in May, and has been on a rehabilitation program.

The knee "feels great right now," he said, and should be 100 per cent for the Penguins season opener Oct. 7 in Washington.

"Coffey does what he does best," said general manager Tony Esposito. "I'm not going to try to make him into a defensive specialist. He creates things and makes things happen when he's out there."

Coffey's best season was 1985-86, when he had 48 goals, an NHL record for a defenceman, and 90 assists for 138 points.

"Tony just said to go out there and play and have fun. That's the same attitude we had with the Oilers and it was successful. If you're having fun and you're happy, you're going to be winning hockey games. For this team right now, that's our main objective."

Lafleur's not going to live in the past

TROIS-RIVIERES, Que. (CP) — Guy Lafleur whistled down the ice and fired the puck past the New York Rangers goalie.

After four years away from the game, the former Montreal Canadiens star was back — but wearing a Rangers' uniform.

The packed crowd of more than 2,500 watching the Rangers' scrimmage went wild but Lafleur, 36, shrugged off the goal.

"It means nothing," he said after goalie Bob Froese managed to get only a piece of the puck. "It was flukey."

The fans couldn't have been happier, chanting "Guy, Guy, Guy" as the right winger stepped onto the ice Sunday and watching him and 61 others spend an hour trying for a spot on the Rangers roster.

"I feel pretty good for the first time out," said Lafleur, who took a couple of hits during the workout although his new teammates usually failed to finish their checks against him. "Nobody expected to scrimmage today — I think it surprised some of us," he said.

Asked how it felt to play with New York rather than the Canadiens, Lafleur laughed and said, "It's a relief." Under his breath, he added, "I don't live in the past any more."

Lafleur looked good, darting down the wing, turning on a dime, making sharp plays, his now-sparse dark blonde hair whistling in the breeze. He also appeared relieved after Chris Nilan, another ex-Canadien, had him lined up near the boards but backed off.

"Obviously, the physical part is going to be the big test because he's been away four years," Nilan said.

"But he's still got all the skills. From what I saw today, I think he's got a great shot at making it.

"All I know is if anyone can, he can."

Teammate Lucien DeBlois said, "He looked good but a lot of veterans haven't skated as much as he has.

"The thing is, even if he doesn't make it — and I think he will — it's got to be a big plus for us. He's such a great person and he brings so much enthusiasm. It's great for the kids."

Lafleur, whose 518 goals in 14 seasons with Montreal made him the Canadiens top scorer next to Maurice Richard, gets treated the same as any other player, said Rangers coach Michel Bergeron.

GETS COMPLIMENT

"He did well today like the rest of the players," said Bergeron. "Now we have to see how he does tomorrow — just like the other players."

Asked after the workout whether he hoped to stick with the Rangers, Lafleur said, "If I didn't, I wouldn't have done all the training and I wouldn't be here. Yes, I still believe I can make a comeback."

He said his teammates have welcomed him since he arrived Saturday in this city 125 kilometres northeast of Montreal.

"Nilan said, 'I was there when you retired and now I'm here for your comeback'," said Lafleur, who put on his old No. 10 again but will change to No. 44 if he makes the Rangers lineup.

Lafleur said it felt odd to be back in the arena.

"It reminded me of 20 years ago when I played in this building as a junior," said the former Quebec Remparts junior. "It was also strange because after four years of not playing I was in a dressing room with the Rangers."

He added, "I felt strange but happy."

Which Greg Adams are we talking about?

EDMONTON (CP) — The Oilers' Greg Adams the Grinder has been confused with the Canucks' Greg Adams the Shooter for a few years.

Used to be the Grinder got the Shooter's mail, or maybe the wrong stick order.

"I got his skates once last year," said the Edmonton Oilers' Greg Adams the Grinder, not to be confused with the Vancouver Canucks' Greg Adams the Shooter.

"His size nine to my size 12s didn't work too well. I figured that one out in a hurry."

"Sometimes adults will ask me if Greg is my brother. After awhile my standard response would be 'That wouldn't exactly make my parents neurosurgeons, now would it?'

"You always think of the Bob Newhart show where Larry says, 'This is my brother Darryl and my other brother Darryl.'"

Adams and Adams are from the same area — the Grinder lives in Duncan, B.C., and the Shooter in Nelson, B.C. — but that's where the similarities end.

The Canuck centre is an offensive threat; the Oiler forward has taken the National Hockey League's dirt road.

DOESN'T SCORE

He's a roll-up-the-sleeves kind of guy who doesn't score much (72 points in 6¼ seasons in Philadelphia, Hartford and Washington) but sticks his nose in to make plays happen, said Oilers' general manager Glen Sather.

"He stood out when they (the Capitals) played us. He's a good, hard-nosed winger who'll stand in front of the net," said Sather, who grabbed Adams, 28, from the Washington Capitals for Geoff Courtnall in late July.

Adams wanted out. He wasn't happy and aired his feelings with Capitals' general manager David Poile.

"I had an interesting conversation, a very candid discussion with him after the season. I spoke my mind and came out there with the feeling something was going to happen, that I'd be moving on," Adams said.

His playing time baffled him. "There wasn't any logic to it. It was inconsistent and frustrating — no rhyme or reason."

Adams didn't come into the NHL with a large build up. He had to work hard.

He spent 1¼ seasons in the minors and got up to Philadelphia, but was traded to Hartford. One year there and he went to Washington for Torrie Robertson in 1983.

He had only 27 points last year but 56 and 44 the previous two seasons.

Sather isn't looking for big numbers from Adams, though.

"I felt we needed help on our third and fourth lines."

Gretzky's extras sign deal with the Kings

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — Forwards Mike Krushelnyski and Marty McSorley, acquired last month by Los Angeles in a trade that also brought Wayne Gretzky to the Kings, have agreed to multi-year contracts, the NHL team said Monday.

No terms were announced.

Krushelnyski, 28, had 20 goals and 27 assists in 76 games for Edmonton last year. McSorley, 25, had nine goals and 17 assists with the Oilers.

It was also announced that defencemen Steve Duchesne and Jay Wells have informed the Kings they intend to play out the options on their contracts this season. Both would become free agents after the 1988-89 campaign if no new contracts are signed.

Reinhart and Snepsts try to establish new attitude

PARKSVILLE, B.C. (CP) — Paul Reinhart is a man with a mission at the Vancouver Canucks' training camp.

The veteran defenceman, acquired from Calgary earlier this month, is expected to add some offensive punch to a defence that had trouble moving the puck out of its own end last season.

But Reinhart, 28, believes he has something more to offer the Canucks.

"I certainly realize that the on-ice (performance) is the No. 1 thing," Reinhart said Monday. But he also said he's excited about "bringing some leadership qualities and providing a winning attitude."

Reinhart, a native of Kitchener, Ont., has all-star credentials but has been plagued by back injuries in recent years. He was limited to just 14 regular-season games last year but returned to play a key role in the playoffs for the Flames.

Despite the injuries, Reinhart knows what it's like to win. Calgary had the best record in the league last year, finishing 48-23-9. In contrast, Vancouver finished 19th in the 21-team league with a 25-46-9 record.

The defenceman said the Canucks have to learn they can win.

"Every team has got a core of 10 or 15 players that are as good as any 10 ore 15 players in the league," Reinhart said confidently. "This team is no different. Those 10 or 15 guys have to realize that they are in fact in that position."

BOOSTS SPIRITS

Captain Stan Smyl, heading into his 10th season with the club, said the off-season acquisitions of Reinhart and veteran defenceman Harold Snepsts should give the team a tremendous lift on and off the ice.

"The unity and the leadership is very important," he said.

Reinhart and Snepsts, re-signed by the Canucks after spending the last four seasons in Minnesota and Detroit, are being looked upon by management to provide the leadership.

"We just have to stabilize things and help the younger players," said Snepsts, who spent 10 seasons with the Canucks before being traded to Minnesota in 1984. "We have to take some of the pressure off them."

The Canucks braintrust is leaving nothing to chance, however.

The players put training aside for two hours Monday so they could attend a two-hour seminar called The Cutting Edge. It's designed to give them a more positive outlook and to teach them how to have a winning attitude.

Seventy-one players were invited to the 10-day camp and Smyl said they know they have to shine early to attract the attention of the coaching staff.

"It's more competitive for everybody (at camp) because there are players pushing the veterans for their jobs."

Wilander winning what Borg could not

NEW YORK (AP) — Now when they compare Mats Wilander to Bjorn Borg they can talk about the things Borg never did.

Up until now, the focus has been on the failings of Wilander.

But his stirring 6-4, 4-6, 6-3, 5-7, 6-4 victory Sunday over Ivan Lendl in the men's final of the U.S. Open tennis championships changed all that.

He won the tournament Borg never won.

And today the computer rankings released by the Association of Tennis Professionals will have Wilander replacing Lendl as the world's No. 1 player. The loss kept Lendl from winning his fourth consecutive U.S. Open.

Meanwhile, West German Steffi Graf defeated Gabriela Sabatini of Argentina 6-3, 3-6, 6-1 in the women's final Saturday to become the first player to sweep the Australian, French, Wimbledon and U.S. championships in the same year since Margaret Court in 1970.

"I'm glad to have the talk over about the Grand Slam," said Graf, 19. "It's a nice relief not to have any pressure on me."

However, a first Grand Slam title evaded Jill Hetherington of Peterborough, Ont., when her and partner Patti Fendick of the United States lost in the women's doubles final Sunday.

Plagued by unforced errors and an ineffective net game, Hetherington and Fendick lost 6-4, 6-1 to Gigi Fernandez of Puerto Rico and Robin White of the United States.

The 12th-seeded Hetherington and Fendick had upset Graf and Sabatini, the second seeds; Chris Evert of the U.S. and Wendy Turnbull of Australia, the 10th-seeds; and Jana Novotna of Czechoslovakia and Catherine Suire of France, seeded seventh.

NO EXCUSES

"We were stale today," said Hetherington, 24, the first Canadian to ever reach the final of a Grand Slam tennis event. "We just weren't sharp."

Ever since Wilander, 24, burst on the scene as a 17-year-old champion at the 1982 French Open he has been seen as the next Super Swede. But mostly the performance has fallen short of the promise.

Wilander also did something else Borg never did — win three Grand Slam events in the same year. In fact, no one among the men had accomplished that feat since Jimmy Connors did that in 1974.

Wilander came into this event with victories in 1988 at French Open and Australian Open.

Borg, who won the French Open six times and Wimbledon five times, never won more than two Grand Slam events in the same year and was a loser in four finals at the U.S. Open.

In 1983 and 1984, Wilander won the Australian Open and came back to win the French again in 1985. But the next two years produced no Grand Slam victories and the whispers were that he lacked the aggresiveness to rise to the top of the game.

But he now joins John Newcombe, Ilie Nastase, Connors, Borg, John McEnore and Lendl as the only men to be ranked No. 1 since the computer rankings started in 1973.

No one respected Wilander's accomplishments this year more than Lendl, who was trying to become the first man to win four straight U.S. Opens since Bill Tilden won six straight in the early 1920s.

Lendl, 28, did not go down without a fight in his seventh straight trip to the U.S. Open final.

Trailing 3-5 in the fifth set with Wilander serving, he won the first point of the game. But Wilander won a big point when he survived a 52-volley effort to even the game at 15.

Twice Lendl fought to gain the advantage in the game, but both times Wilander evened it at deuce and finally won match point when Lendl netted a backhand service return.

Wilander won the first set when he broke Lendl in the 10th game and took the third set with a break in the second game. Lendl captured the second set when he won the last five games after being down 1-4 and evened the match at two sets each when he won the fourth set 7-5 by breaking Wilander in the final game.

Champlain Cougars soccer has potential

By Scott David Harrison

LENNOXVILLE — They practise almost every day, hardly noticed by the passing cars and the students scurrying off to late afternoon classes. They had more success last year than either of Champlain College's two big sports machines: hockey and football.

The Cougars' men's and women's soccer teams are looking to put their feet in the door and claim their first-ever provincial prize after coming oh-so-close a year ago.

Both teams are coming off terrific seasons which saw the two place second in the CEGEP soccer provincial championships last year. The men lost to Thetford Mines in a evenly matched contest 1-0, missing out on a trip to the Canadian College Championships.

Mirroring the men's performance, the women also lost provincial glory 1-0 against John Abbott.

Head coach Bob Laderoute is entering his sixth year at the helm of the mens' squad and will also be controlling the womens' team for a second year.

Not being a betting man, Laderoute steered clear of any preseason predictions.

"I kind of try not to look ahead too much," said Laderoute. "We're just going to have to take it one game at a time."

COUGAR WOMEN

On the women's side Laderoute has seven returning players lacing up for another season. "We have a really good base to work with for the women," he said.

Laderoute is particularly high on six veteran returnees. Topping the list is scoring ace Sophie Gailloux along with Josée Bureau and Nancy Walker. Other returning players include Guylaine Belanger, Christine Authier and Mary Durrell.

"They're all going to help a lot," said Laderoute. "They worked really hard in the summer and have improved their game."

Andres Rojas (centre) is one of several key veterans returning to try and do one game better than last year.

"We've also got two exceptional keepers," said Laderoute, naming Marie-José Bellecourt and Ann Simard, the two ball stoppers.

The Cougars women will be tackling a different schedule this season as they face three Montreal teams for one game each during their nine-game season. Last year's provincial champions John Abbott, Vanier and Champlain-St-Lambert are the teams the Cougars face. The women will also play home and away games against Drummondville, Trois Rivières and Victoriaville to round out their schedule.

"The women have the potential to go as far as they did last year," said Laderoute. "Playing the Montreal schools will let us know where we stand. If our record of last year is any indication, I think we will do well."

COUGAR MEN

The men's program is looking up for the coach as well. Laderoute has seven returning players to work with, including captain Eddie Munday, Daniel Boucher, Keith Lane and Andres Rojas from last year's second place squad. Laderoute actively sought and recruited a top-notch striker for his team. Filling that role will be Marc Trudel from Montreal.

"It will be more of a team game this year," said Laderoute. "Last year we were able to let only two or three guys work real hard and we could get away with it. This year we are not going to rely on those two-three players, we're going to have to work as a team."

The only problem Laderoute sees with the 1988 roster is between the pipes. He has four goaltenders trying out for the team, but has yet to decide on the number one stopper.

"The guys (goalies) work their butts off. They are really trying really hard but they lack skill at the postion," he said, adding game experience is the only cure.

"I think we have as much potential as we had last year," he said. "We're really going to have to stay healthy and stay away from the red cards."

Avoiding the two hazards, may just mean the first provincial title for Laderoute.

NOTES

As the CEGEP soccer season prepares to kick off this week, the most noticeable absence is the CEPEG de Sherbrooke. The college on Parc Street has chosen not to field either a men's or women's soccer team this year.

"It's a real shame," said Laderoute. "We had a really good rivalry going with them and they always seemed to have good teams. It's just really too bad that they won't have a team this year."

GAMES

The men were supposed to have started their season last Wednesday against Drummondville, but the game was cancelled because those oh-so-reliable referees never showed up.

Regardless, the men open their 10-game regular season schedule Wednesday taking on CEGEP de Granby in Granby. Locally, they can be seen this weekend for two games on the Champlain soccer field, (next to the W.B. Scott Arena).

On Saturday at 1 p.m. they face Trois Rivières, followed by a Sunday 3 p.m. match with Victoriaville.

The women will also play two games on the weekend. They host Trois Rivières Saturday at 3 p.m. and on Sunday they square off against Victoriaville at 1 p.m.

Rookies have a huge impact on Expos' win

By Wesley Goldstein

MONTREAL (CP) — Nelson Santovenia had two hits and knocked in five runs, while Rex Hudler drove in three more with a pair of doubles as the Montreal Expos routed St. Louis 14-2 in National League baseball action Monday night and snapped a seven-game Cardinals winning streak.

Tim Wallach had three singles to pace a 13-hit Montreal attack, as the Expos set a season-high for runs scored and broke out of a weekend scoring drought that saw them go 22 2-3 innings without a run while getting shut out twice in three games by the New York Mets.

Bryn Smith, 11-9, went six innings to get the win, while Joe Magrane, 4-9, took the loss. Mike Smith got his first career save.

A subdued crowd of 7,632, the smallest this year at Olympic Stadium, saw the Expos jump into a 3-0 first-nning lead on a RBI-single by Andres Galarraga and a two-run single by Santovenia.

Hudler doubled home two runs in the third to make it 5-0 and then the Expos blew the game wide open in the fourth when they sent 10 men to the plate and scored six runs off Dan Quisenberry.

With the bases loaded, Hubie Brooks and Wallach hit consecutive RBI-ingles before Santovenia brought in another run with a fielder's choice. Hudler then doubled home a run before Luis Rivera capped the inning with a two-run single.

John Morris singled home a run for St. Louis in the fifth, but Santovenia doubled home two more for the Expos in the fifth before Wallace Johnson singled home the final Expos run in the sixth.

Rod Booker scored the second St. Louis run on a ground out by Tom Pagnozzi in the ninth.

The Cardinals lost third baseman Terry Pendleton, who caught his spike in the turf making third-inning fielding play, and had to be taken from the field on a stretcher.

Preliminary reports said Pendleton suffered possible cartilage damage to his left knee. He will be returned to St. Louis for further examination.

Expos notes: Scout Ed Creech and Class AAA manager Joe Sparks have been co-named winners of the John McHale man-of-the-year award, given to the top performer in the Expos organization in the area of scouting and player development....Montreal began the night at the .500 mark with a 71-71 record. The last time the club was at the break-ven point was July 5.

Boston keep right on rolling in the AL East

BOSTON (AP) — Bruce Hurst won his 17th game and Ellis Burks got three hits and scored three runs Monday night as the Boston Red Sox beat the Baltimore Orioles 6-1.

The Red Sox began the day with a 3½-game lead over Detroit and New York in the American League East. Boston won the sixth time in eight games.

Hurst, 17-5, gave up one run on nine hits in 62-3 innings. He won for the eighth time in nine decisions and is 12-1 at Fenway Park this season.

The victory was Hurst's 55th at home, tying him with Babe Ruth for second place among the winningest left-handers at Fenway. Mel Parnell is the all-time leader with 71.

The Red Sox capitalized on the wildness of rookie Curt Schilling, traded to Baltimore in a deal that brought Mike Boddicker to Boston on July 29, for three runs in the first inning. They added single runs in the second and third for a 5-0 lead.

In the Boston first, Wade Boggs and Dwight Evans walked around a single by Marty Barrett. Boggs scored as Mike Greenwell grounded into a double play. Barrett scored on an infield hit by Burks, who took third on a wild pickoff attempt and scored on a wild pitch.

In the second, Jody Reed doubled and scored as Boggs singled for his 190th hit of the season. Todd Benzinger had an RBI double in the third off reliever Doug Sisk.

Boggs reached a career milestone with his 107th walk of the season in the fourth. It marked the 300th time he has reached base on a hit, walk or hit by pitch this year. He is only the sixth player in major league season to do it five or more years.

New questions asked as the Games approach

By Helen Branswell

SEOUL (CP) — "Where are you from?"

That question comes at every turn for athletes, journalists and tourists as Seoul's curious residents greet the world.

Security guards, taxi drivers, shopkeepers and waitresses are struggling to communicate with the hordes who have begun arriving in South Korea's capital for the 1988 Summer Olympics, which begin Saturday.

Bright banners wave along spotless city streets, colored streamers dangle from trees in the Itaewon shopping district, helium-filled beach balls hover above the city.

New sports facilities are all around the city, from the enormous Olympic Stadium to the cycling velodrome. Scores of high-rise apartment buildings — set safely behind high and heavily monitored fences — house athletes and journalists.

About half of the more than 530 athletes on the Canadian team arrived in South Korea by Monday.

"Things are going well," said Canadian Paul Douma.

But the rower from St. Catharines, Ont., confessed he hadn't tried Korean cuisine and didn't know of kimchee, a powerful marinated cabbage and garlic dish that is a staple of the Korean diet.

"What's kimchee?" he asked.

DON'T CHANGE

"It's a girl — she hasn't been around to see you yet?" quipped teammate Gord Henry of London, Ont.

"We've been sticking to North American-type foods," Henry admitted once the laughter died down. "You don't want to do anything too different before racing."

There's a disco in the village but alcohol is banned. Some athletes slip over to the raucous beer hall in the media village, but have to leave by curfew.

In the slow days before competition begins, Olympic tourists have converged on Itaewon, the shopping district famous for knock-off products and bargain-basement prices.

Imitation is the name of the game. The tiny, crowded shops that line Itaewon's streets and winding back alleys offer fake designer luggage and bogus Rolex watches. Some shopkeepers proudly boast that their Rolexes are made with "real" Seiko parts.

There are tailors who will gladly make suits, shirts and winter jackets — and sew in the labels of just about any major designer.

"We have Reebok," seems to be considered the magic phrase for the vendors hawking running shoes.

Seoul not worried about its' smog problems

SEOUL (Reuter) — The city has shut factories and asked drivers to stay off the road to cut pollution during the Olympic Games, but the smell of runaway industrial growth still hangs in the air.

Olympic and city officials insist the smog will not trouble athletes but monitoring stations were set up to try and guarantee emission levels are not dangerous.

Seoul, home to 10 million people and nearly half a million cars, has achieved remarkable results in a 10-year campaign to clean its air of the worst effects of unchecked expansion.

"In the '60s and '70s, industry was privileged," said Dong Yi, a senior city planner. "Then, in the late '70s, the central government realized if the search for affluence was allowed to run out of control there would be problems."

Factories were moved to industrial areas outside the city, strict emission controls were imposed for cars. Seoul's huge taxi fleet now runs on pollution-free liquid propane gas and big buildings must use gas for heating.

Holding the Games in the fall has also helped.

In winter, thick smoke belches from homes heated with coal, but autumn skies are usually clear.

Mario Vazquez Rana, president of the Association of National Olympic Committees, said athletes can take a bit of foul air, anyway.

"Athletes are trained to compete in heat, in rain, in cold and in windy conditions," said Vazquez Rana, a Mexican. "Smog means nothing to them — look at all the sportsmen who go to Mexico City to train, even for these Games."

'The Kid' smacks out late homer to help Mets

NEW YORK (AP) — Gary Carter hit a home run with one out in the ninth inning to give New York a 3-2 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates Monday night and reduce the Mets' magic number for clinching the National League East title to 10 games.

Reliever Jeff Robinson, 9-5, relieved Doug Drabek to start the ninth, and after Howard Johnson fouled to third base, Carter hit his 11th homer and 302nd of his career.

Rookie Gregg Jefferies went 4-for-4 for New York and is 24-for-52, .462, since being called up from Class AAA Tidewater.

It was the Mets' fifth straight victory and their 15th in 19 games as they moved 11 games ahead of second-place Pittsburgh. The win also moved the Mets 30 games above .500, at 86-56.

Randy Meyers, 6-3, got the last out in the ninth inning for the victory.
