$300,000 Sweepstake Receipts Are Seized At Franklin Centre

Ross Fraser Confiscates Illegal Goods

Driver Flees When Car Strikes Tree Near Customs—28,000 Envelopes Containing More Than 280,000 Receipts In Loot

One of the biggest seizures in this section of the Province in recent years was made at Franklin Centre on Sunday evening at about 9 p.m. at the Canadian Customs port when Customs Officer Ross Fraser confiscated nearly $300,000 worth of official receipts of the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes.

The receipts in question apparently arrived by boat at New York City last week and were being smuggled into Canada as the selling of these lottery tickets is illegal both in Canada and in the United States. These receipts were apparently to be mailed in Canada to the salesmen of these tickets who in turn were to remit them to the purchasers.

Chased along the American border by United States Patrolmen, the 1934 Ford Sedan bearing a New York State licence and driven by Aldemore Surprenant of Mooer's Forks, N.Y., was loaded with these Irish Sweepstake receipts when it crashed into a tree about twenty feet from the Canadian Customs at Franklin. The driver of the car had failed to report and intended to smuggle the receipts into Canada. The mishap is believed to have been caused by the driver losing control of the vehicle.

Customs Officer Fraser immediately rushed to the scene of the accident but on his arrival there noticed that the driver had escaped. The loot was still there and apparently intact. On investigating further Fraser discovered that the Ford contained more than 38 boxes of these official receipts from the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes in Ireland. It was estimated that these boxes contained more than 28,000 envelopes which in turn had enclosed in them from 4 to 15 receipts in each. The estimated cost of each of these original tickets is $2.50 in Canada and in the United States, or ten shillings in Great Britain.

These lottery receipts were destined mostly to Canadians living in all parts of the country. There were also a few envelopes addressed to American citizens, which probably were inadvertently placed in the receipts addressed for Canada.

The amount of these receipts reach the fabulous sum of nearly a third of a million dollars.

Each year when the receipts of these lotteries are expected in Canada and in the United States, United States Patrolmen and the Royal Canadian Mounted Police co-operate with each other in an attempt to track down the guilty persons and to make a seizure of the illegal receipts.

The mishap on Sunday night at Franklin Centre will help the Canadian Government in tracing the salesmen of these tickets and put a damper on sales here to a certain extent. It is to be noted that each envelope is properly addressed to the salesmen of these tickets and each receipt has on it the name of the purchaser of this illegal matter. Pen names are also to be found on practically all these receipts along with the full name of the purchaser.

When Fraser made the startling discovery on Sunday evening, he immediately notified the Collector of Customs for Huntingdon division, C. M. Oney, of Huntingdon, who rushed to Franklin to investigate further into the matter.

It is expected that the driver of the car, who fled after the accident, will be arrested shortly at which time startling revelations will no doubt be made.

Attached to the bundles of receipts was the following:

"Ireland is not at War. The Government of this Country has declared its Neutrality, and as a Neutral Country it is desirous and capable of maintaining its industries and institutions.

"The Sweepstakes, which are conducted under the Public Hospitals Acts 1933 to 1938, will therefore be continued. Remittances and counterfoils should be forwarded in the usual way."

THE WRONG CHURCH AND THE WRONG PEW

For a long time there's been a maxim about a man being in the right church but the wrong pew.

At Ormstown on one Sunday recently it was a case of four men in the wrong church and the wrong pew also. It seems that Dr. George H. Donald, of Montreal, was to address the rally of Presbyterian Young People in the Ormstown Presbyterian church at 7.30 o'clock in the evening. The minister and three men who were to sing at the Ormstown church met with an accident and arrived late. By mistake they went into the Ormstown United church and the service was more than half over when they learned that they were not in the right church. Hurriedly they made their exit and arrived at the right church somewhat late but to an audience that patiently awaited the excellent discourse that was in store for them.

Farewell by Congregation To Rev. Rose

Chicken Supper Held in Honor of Minister Going To Pointe Claire

On Wednesday evening, Nov. 22, the Congregation of Knox United Church, Robson, in conjunction with the Y.P.S. tendered Rev. Victor and Mrs. Rose a chicken supper. About 60 persons were present. After supper, Mr. Walter Barr on behalf of those present presented Mr. and Mrs. Rose with a purse in token of the esteem in which they were held by their congregation here. Mr. Rose very adequately replied. Then a mock trial was put on by members of the Y.P.S., this being very much enjoyed by those present. Mr. Fred A. Sweet recited the poem, "The Little Kittens Drowned in the Well", which was the first piece he ever recited in public, 60 years ago, then came back with "Specially Jim".

All present joined hands and sang "Auld Lang Syne", and wishing Rev. Rose and Mrs. Rose much success in their new field at Pointe Claire, Que.

Mr. and Mrs. Willis Clark entertained Rev. Victor Rose and Mrs. Rose on Thursday evening when Mr. Rose baptized their two youngest children, the elder receiving the name Glen Alwyn while the baby received the name Charles Bruce.

ATHELSTAN IS THE WINNER OF "TRUE AND FALSE" CONTEST

On Monday evening a very pleasing and educational entertainment was held in Munro Hall, Athelstan, under the auspices of the Woman's Association when four teams of six contestants each, took part.

Dr. Quizz (Douglas Elder), asked the questions which dealt with a wide range of subjects, testing the wits of the contestants and proving most amusing. Mrs. George Boyce assisted Dr. Quizz.

The first two teams called were Huntingdon and Athelstan; the next were that of Gore and Brooklet. The latter team in each case being the winners, these were matched against each other for the final test which ended in favor of Athelstan. Each contestant received a small prize, while $3.00 was given to the winning team. Volunteers from the audience were called for, when four came to the platform, Mrs. John Ross being successful in this impromptu questionnaire.

Christmas Shopping Is Started

Stores Dress up Their Windows; This Year's Shopping Expected to Surpass Last Year's

Christmas shopping has commenced. The absence of snow so far has presented anything but a Christmas atmosphere but with Christmas nearing people are remembering the wisdom of shopping early. The season is rapidly advancing, however, and by Friday we will have reached December first with not a great many shopping days before Christmas left.

Christmas stocks are arriving at the stores of district merchants who are counting on an increase in Christmas trade over that of last year. With business conditions showing quite an improvement over last year and with the prospects that by spring there will be a decided uptrend in business, people are looking forward with optimism. Figures recently released from Ottawa have shown that Canadian payrolls and employment have shown a marked rise for October. For example, 105,920 more people are working than in 1938. Business conditions throughout the province of Quebec have shown definite improvement. Reports show that the 2,959 employers have increased their staffs to 375,718, an increase of 14,634 over October 1. Activity has been much greater than at November 1, 1938.

A number of stores in the district have dressed their windows for Christmas and among them are some attractive layouts. By the beginning of next week the shopping season should get well under way, although there has been the usual amount of it done to date.

Social Prestige of Pig to Fore as War Creates Greater Demand For Once Lowly Hog

More Farmers Go Into Raising Pigs—Largest Piggery in District is That of A. C. H. Picard—How Town Garbage is Used up

It's taken a war to move up the social position of the lowly pig.

The present war has created a demand for bacon and as a result pigs will be considered more valuable than they have been heretofore.

In this district a number of farmers have gone into the raising of hogs on the side while others are contemplating doing so in the near future.

Yes sir, the lowly pig is getting new recognition and as time passes will probably get more and more recognition.

Nowhere in the immediate district are more hogs raised that at the piggery of A.C.H. Picard. Here there are to be found as many as 300 pigs of all shapes and sizes. And from this piggery to Montreal markets there are shipped many pigs by truck every two months or so. When the pigs are ready for market they are shipped to Montreal; there is usually an interval of about two months between shipments. The present market price is approximately $9.50 per hundred weight so that shipments will be held back as long as possible in order to cash in on an expected rise in the price of hogs.

It was in 1931 that Mr. Picard decided to go into the raising of hogs on a fairly big scale and since that date he has shipped to Montreal several thousand hogs.

Much of the food that is fed the hogs is garbage collected about town. Housewives place their garbage outside and a rig of Mr. Picard's makes calls 5 days a week. This rig holds more than half a ton of garbage. Since it makes calls five days a week that means that about three tons of garbage is collected per week or more than 150 tons of garbage during the course of a year's time. That's a lot of garbage. It would be a real nuisance to the housewives yet it is all regularly disposed of by this means and as well as being a benefit to the housewives is a help to Mr. Picard.

All this garbage is placed in a large boiler in the piggery of Mr. Picard and thoroughly boiled before it is given to the pigs. It is a sort of a large scale operation in which steam heat is used to cook the garbage. And the garbage has to be cooked. That's definite. At one time government regulations were not in force to call for the cooking of garbage before being fed to pigs, but it seems that it is the case now. An Inspector calls around as often as twice a week to see that this is carried out and also to check on the general condition of the piggery. By cooking the garbage it is guaranteed that all germs will be killed, that there will be no danger that the pigs will catch any sort of disease from contaminated garbage in the garbage cans at the rear of the houses in Huntingdon.

In addition to the garbage there are many sugar beets fed to the pigs. One year many pigs died as a result of feeding one particular crop of sugar beets to the pigs. It seems that there was some sort of acid in the sugar beets which was productive of a disease and many pigs died as a result of it. In recent years, however, no pigs died from any disease. And within the history of the piggery few pigs have ever been stolen.

In the piggery are to be found many different compartments in which pigs of various ages and sizes are to be found. Down the middle of the building is a center aisle. Every possible convenience is used to make for the efficient feeding and handling of the pigs.

Yes, the pig is coming back and by that we don't mean that the lost one is coming back, or anything like that, but just that the rise in the price of bacon in the future is inevitable and the lowly pig enters the picture here to take a graceful bow and a little speech, "Here I am—but at a higher price than you used to pay for me."

Export shipments of bacon in the form of Wiltshire sides, hams and other cuts from Canada to Great Britain from October 1 to November 15, 1939 amounted to 30,183,301 lbs. or the equivalent of 250,000 live hogs. Of the total shipments 67 per cent were Wiltshire sides, 15.5 per cent hams and 17.5 other cuts.

There has been a sharp increase in bacon exports since the war began. Shipments for the six weeks mentioned have averaged 5,030,550 lbs. weekly as compared with a weekly average of 3,089,650 lbs. for the period Jan. 1 to Sept. 30, 1939.

While the increased shipments of bacon to the British Isles is regarded as encouraging, it is evident from an analysis that there is plenty of room for improvement in connection with weight and finish, as only about 36 per cent of all the Wiltshire sides were of the desired weight and selection, the remaining, approximately 64 per cent, being too heavy, too light or having too much finish for leanest selection.

Bacon for export is required to be graded according to type and conformation as Grade A and Grade B. Each grade of bacon is further selected according to fat measurement into No. 1, No. 2 or No. 3, or as termed in the trade, leanest, lean and prime.

In the recent shipments 93 per cent graded satisfactorily as to type and conformation, which would indicate there is not much wrong from the point of breeding. In selection 52.72 per cent was No. 1 or leanest, 28.71 per cent was No. 2 or lean and 12.29 per cent prime. But of the 52.72 per cent leanest only 35.72 per cent

FATALLY INJURED WHEN HE FALLS OFF A MOVING TRUCK

Mrs. H. A. Cameron and Mrs. John Fleming attended the funeral of Mrs. Cameron's cousin, Mr. Clifford Clarkson, of Middleburgh, N.Y., which was held at the deceased's former home at Lacolle, Que., on Monday afternoon. Mr. Clarkson, a man in his early thirties and well-known in the vicinity of Dundee, was a victim of an unfortunate accident while assisting a neighbour friend to move some furniture in his home town. The accident happened on Saturday while loading a number of articles of furniture into the truck. Mr. Clarkson was standing in the rear of the vehicle as his friend started to drive away. In some unexplained manner he lost his balance and fell off the platform of the truck, striking his head on the pavement. The driver continued on some distance with the truck before he noticed what had happened. Returning quickly, when he learned of the accident, he summoned aid and the injured man was removed to a hospital at Albany, N.Y., where he never regained consciousness. He passed away later in the day. Surviving are his wife and 2 young children.

TO OFFICIATE

DR. J. C. MOORE, who will on Saturday morning cut ribbon to officially open the Barrie Memorial Hospital at Ormstown

Hospital is Launched With $38,000.00

Dr. J. C. Moore to Formally Open the New Building—Many Modern Conveniences

MANY SUBSCRIPTIONS

With the opening of the Barrie Memorial Hospital at Ormstown on Saturday a new, modern and convenient hospital service is provided for the residents of the Chateauguay Valley. Dr. J. C. Moore of Huntingdon, dean of district medical men, will formally open the building at 10 o'clock on Saturday morning when he will cut the ribbon on the door of the main entrance and declare the hospital open. From that hour until 9 o'clock in the evening many people are expected to take advantage of the offer of the authorities for the public to make an inspection of the building.

Every person who has made a contribution to the hospital has been sent an invitation and every other citizen of the counties of Chateauguay and Huntingdon has been cordially invited through an announcement in the district press.

A collection of funds to the amount of approximately $38,000.00 launches the Hospital and enables the institution to start fully equipped yet totally free from any debt. The hospital was originated by the bequest of the late Miss Margaret Barrie who left the residue of her estate for the purpose of starting a hospital at Ormstown. This residue has amounted to $11,000.00. Since that time, due to the generosity of residents of the district, the sum of approximately $22,000.00 has been raised by private subscriptions. In addition to the aforementioned the Provincial Government has given a grant of $5,000.00.

The Neil Sangster property, formerly the Thomas Baird Property, was acquired for $5,000.00 and this building has been magically transformed into a smart, modern, fully-equipped hospital that would do justice to an area of greater population. Mr. Edward J. Turcotte, Dominion Square Building, Montreal, was the architect who cleverly planned the present serviceable layout of the hospital. Mr. Turcotte has had considerable experience at architectural work on hospitals, having been architect on St. Mary's Hospital, Montreal, and the Aberdeen Hospital at New Glasgow, N.S. among other hospitals. Much commendation has been heard of the way in which the former residence has been built over into a modern hospital with accommodation for 18 persons.

The main floor is composed of administrative offices and a reception room with a sun porch lying to the right of the main entrance. In the hallway there will be erected a large plaque showing the list of benefactors of the hospital. On this floor there is a public ward of three beds and a large private room equipped with a toilet and wash basin. The operating room is also situated on this floor and has been completely equipped with modern lighting and operating equipment. Adjoining this, there is a sterilizing dept. with complete equipment. On this floor, too, is to be found the maternity department consisting of a delivery room and nursery, which latter can accommodate four infants. In addition to the aforementioned there are utility rooms.

In the basement of the hospital is located the X-ray and laboratory. There is also to be found in the basement the kitchen, drug room, nurses' dining room and the furnace room. The furnace is operated under thermostatic control.

Two public rooms, each with three beds, will be found on the second floor, one a semi-private room with two beds and one a private room. In addition there is to be found on this floor the nurses' station, the doctors' consulting room and the utility and linen rooms.

On the third floor is located the Superintendent's living quarters and the nurses' sitting room and bath room. An up-to-date laundry is located in a special building to the rear of the hospital.

An elevator going to all floors facilitates the workings of the hospital while a special feature is the nurses' call system which enables all the patients to keep in constant touch with nurses on duty.

The Provisional Governors of the Hospital were: R. E. Walsh, Chairman; H. B. Patton, Secretary; Dr. James Quintin; Dr. M. R. Stalker; George E. Baird. These men worked to obtain the charter for the Hospital. With the aid of Mr. Auguste Boyer, K.C., the Provincial Charter was obtained. Later by the aid of Mr. Donald E. Black, M.P., and Mr. Auguste Boyer, K.C., M.L.A., the hospital was accepted as a recognized public institution, enabling it to accept and care for indigent patients as provided under the Quebec Public Charities' Act.

hospital was accepted as a recognized public institution, enabling it to accept and care for indigent patients as provided under the Quebec Public Charities' Act.

The executive of the financial campaign was as follows: Dr. W. S. McLaren, Chairman; David Munroe, Secretary; R. C. Jarvis. At the conclusion of the campaign a meeting of the members of the hospital was held and the following were elected Governors of the Hospital: R. E. Walsh, Chairman; W. G. Mc-

Hospital Opens at Ormstown

SATURDAY will mark the reaching of a new milestone in the annals of medical service in the Chateauguay Valley with the opening of the Barrie Memorial Hospital at Ormstown. This new Hospital will definitely provide a more convenient service to district residents and its presence will undoubtedly be a real asset to the district, even to the saving of numerous lives in those cases where immediate operating is necessary.

One of the outstanding features of the new Hospital is the splendid response in the way of subscriptions that citizens have made following an appeal for funds. Elsewhere in this issue will be found a complete list of subscriptions. Approximately $22,000.00 was raised in private subscriptions which is no small sum for this purpose in these times.

We feel confident that those who visit the Hospital on Saturday will be impressed with the complete equipment, the efficient layout of rooms and the attractive color scheme of the interior.

The completion of the Hospital sees the fulfilment of a dream of a former resident of Ormstown in the person of the late Margaret Barrie. It was as a direct result of the bequest in her will that a Hospital be built from the residue of her estate, some $11,000, that the Hospital was built. This, supplemented with the untiring efforts of the provisional Governors, brought into a state of actual being the dream of one who long hoped that it might be so.

The financial side of operating a small hospital is not an easy one as countless other such ventures throughout the countryside have proved. Fortunately, this hospital is one which is being launched completely free of any debt. But if it is to meet with the success it deserves it will need the wholehearted co-operation of the residents of the district. The convenience of this hospital will only be appreciated when such a time comes as your family is in need of it.

More Houses Needed Here

DESPITE the fact that Huntingdon has this fall experienced the greatest building boom in its history the strange anomaly exists that in the spring it will probably face the greatest shortage of houses in its history.

At the present time there is not a house to be rented in Huntingdon and all available space that is in any way suitable is being used for accommodation. With the Huntingdon Woollen Mill taking on approximately one hundred hands by the beginning of the new year an extra tax will be imposed on the Town's housing accommodation. It has been stated that by Spring the Woollen Mill will be needing another fifty employees which, if this is the case, will in itself create a serious shortage of accommodation for residents of the municipality.

There have been built in Huntingdon this summer and fall a total of eight houses. Although this is acceptable, it does not commence to remedy the situation and quite a number of new houses will be needed by spring.

Some extent of the building operations can be gained by looking over the approximate costs of the building here during the summer and fall. Eight houses at an average cost of $3,000 means $24,000. Add to this the following buildings: Huntingdon Academy addition, dyeing plant of Huntingdon Woollen Mill, addition of the Leach Textiles, new building of Huntingdon Gleaner Inc., aggregating close to $150,000. Although this figure was exceeded on one previous year the work was not so varied and probably did not give quite so much employment. This was in 1928 when the Chateau was erected at a cost of about $160,000.

That there has been much building here this fall is reflected in the fact that it is quite difficult to secure a carpenter to work. They are more or less at a premium and even additional carpenters and brick layers that have been called in from outside have failed to relieve the situation.

The Board of Trade has not ceased to keep on the lookout for new industries and even at present they are working on prospects which may bloom forth some day as definite gains.

Yes, Huntingdon is growing and seems to be in for an era of expansion, but there will have to be more houses built to take care of the taxed accommodation.

The Hon. J. L. Ralston, minister of finance, has released figures showing National Housing Act loans to October 31 at above $45,000,000, and the number of new homes provided at more than 12,500. Loans approved in October numbered 435, an increase of 42 per cent over the corresponding month last year, which clearly shows that Canadian citizens elsewhere are making good use of the government's offer. This is one source which Huntingdon citizens could make good use of in the building of necessary houses.

Hog Production—Orderly Marketing

FOLLOWING the general trend of increased hog production throughout the Dominion there has been evidence that more hogs will be raised right in the Chateauguay Valley where the cow is King and mostly all the farm animals are cows and cows alone.

Several farmers in this district have already purchased a number of pigs while others have signified their intention of doing so in the near future. One farmer sold out his cattle and intends going into the business of raising hogs solely in the belief that he can get more profits therefrom. While it can never be expected that hog raising in this district will reach any major proportions it can be expected to increase considerably as a side line.

Right now the price is not sufficiently high to cause any rush into production. At the Montreal markets a price of from $9.25 to $9.50 off the trucks is being paid for hogs. Although this is not a price at which any great profit can be made it is expected that the future will show an upward price trend.

That there is a general increase in hog production on the part of farmers throughout Canada is to be seen in the report of hog marketings for October, 1939. There were close to half a million hogs marketed in Canada during the month, which is the largest marketings for any one month on record. The usual hog producers, expecting an increase in price, have no doubt some time ago looked forward to increasing their production and these, together with the production of new entries into the field, have no doubt been the cause of the new high record. It is always a cry of the farmer that just as soon as there is a possibility of there being any profit in any one line of farm produce, the farmers all rush into it with a bang, flooding the market and preventing an acceptable rise in price. This has seemed to be more or less the case. For this reason it would seem that the Federal Department of Agriculture should devise some means of more orderly marketing of hogs, or any other farm produce for that matter. When the farmer is not organized he is at the mercy of other powers. Every effort should be made by the Federal Department of Agriculture to see that the farmer is organized to secure the greatest advantages now that an opportunity is presenting itself. It is not often that the farmer does get opportunities of any great proportion so that when the war opportunity comes along for them to receive good prices for their products it is hoped that they will receive good prices, and then some. The basic industry of this country has passed through a long period of stress and strain and it sorely needs a wave of prosperity to restore it to its rightful place in the sun of reasonably good times. The orderly marketing of produce might go a long way towards helping the farmer and not allow him to go blindly dumping his produce on the market just at a time when everyone else is doing the same, thus preventing him from receiving as good a price as he might.

An Air Training Base Here?

A NEWS despatch reports that U.S. and Canadian towns along the International border are looking forward excitedly to the possibility that through their territory will pass a portion of that vast shipment of airplanes from the United States to Great Britain via Canada. The United States neutrality act forbids the flying of belligerent-owned planes across the border but contains no provision against rolling the craft across after title has passed from the United States manufacturers. No reports have been heard of any rolling of planes across the border in the vicinity of Huntingdon although it would not be a bad place to do so. Planes could be flown to the Malone Airport, an official port of entry, and from there brought into Canada, rolling it across the border in the usual manner.

The long stretches of level ground in the Chateauguay Valley and its proximity to Montreal should make it qualified to see some air activity, however. The two aforementioned factors seem to be a reasonable claim to establishing an air training centre in this district. A delegation from here might well wait on federal authorities with a view to having them establish in this neighborhood one of the many air training bases that are to be established in Canada. A number of districts, awake to the possibilities, have sent delegations to interview Defence Minister Norman Rogers and Transport Minister C. D. Howe with a view to having one of the training bases located in their particular district.

Good Service Pays

TODAY, when you drive a car into a filling station, the attendants are prompt, polite and competent. A few years ago a motorist apologized when he asked for water for his radiator. He had to find the buckets and do the filling himself. Some smart boss told his attendants to do this little service for the customers. Another boss, not to be outdone, told his men to wipe the windshield. A third suggested that people might appreciate help in inflating tires.

The spirit of willing service has spread until you are now almost certain of decent treatment in any filling station. Good attendants make more money than they did in the old days when they were mean and un-accommodating. Some are paid a percentage of their sales of oil and gasoline. Many have regular customers who patronize them exclusively.

Everyone in business can learn something from observing the filling stations.

AIRCRAFT MAKERS SEEK SPEED OF 500 M.P.H.

Airplanes that can be plummeted through the air at 500 miles an hour by 3,500 horsepower engines are the goal of the American aircraft industry, Robert Insley, assistant chief engineer of Pratt & Whitney, Hartford, Conn., told the Society of Automotive Engineers at Los Angeles, Cal. He stated that the 3,500 horsepower engines are already "on paper."

NO KISSING IN DARK

Rev. Donald Soper, minister of Kingsway hall,London, England, and a corps of deaconesses have decided to form a "morality patrol" to sally forth during the blackout nights and protect the soldiers from the girls or vice versa. They do not seem to have quite made up their minds which side needs protection, but they are determined to do something about it much to the indignation of the girls themselves and also of the military.

HOLE-IN-ONE NETS $100

Two years ago Ellis Knowles, Sr., Greenwich, Conn., took out a policy with Lloyd's of London against the possibility of his making a hole-in-one in golf. He took out similar policies for his son and a few friends. Each policy cost $1 a year. A few days ago Ellis Knowles, Jr., the son, scored a hole-in-one on a nearby course and collected $100 from Lloyd's on his policy. Knowles, Sr., former Yale golf team captain, said he hasn't made a hole-in-one in 40 years.

ANIMAL REFUGEES ARRIVE

Refugees from the war, pedigreed horses and dogs valued by European shippers at more than $1,000,000, are finding a haven in North America it is stated at New York. Transportation officials said all records for such incoming cargoes have been broken since the war started. Horse and dog lovers have been shipping them to this continent to save the animals from destruction or the breeds from deterioration.

READ HIS OWN DOOM

The story of a Stanford university medical student who kept a secret, meticulous record of the rare disease he knew would kill him in two years was disclosed on the eve of his funeral. Doctors and students alike paid tribute to the courage of Frederick James Hinds, of Santa Barbara, Calif., who died of myelogenous leukemia recently, one month before his twenty-third birthday. Nearly two years ago Hinds, as an eager student, peered through a microscope in the course of routine medical studies at a slide of his own blood and gave a start of surprise. As clearly as if it were written in printed words he read his own doom there. Quietly he went about verifying his own accurate diagnosis, that he was one of the few victims of the disease, in which white corpuscles disappear from the blood and tissues become replaced with bone marrow, leading inexorably to a painful death. Faced with the decision many have often toyed with in fun—"if I had only a year to live"—young Hinds did not hesitate. More than anything in the world, he wanted to study to become a doctor, just as he was doing. So he kept right on. "He took it splendidly," said Dr. Loren R. Chandler, dean of the medical school. "He felt that he had a job to do, and did it." Right up until the last painful weeks, when he could no longer work with his hands and look into the microscope, he kept a record of his own case. One physician at Stanford hospital said that record may become invaluable help some day to the man who discovers a cure for myelogenous leukemia. Another part of Hinds' story never will be told. That concerns the help which came to him. His family could not meet financially the double cost of his studies and expensive treatments, too. Month after month contributions came with the strict proviso that contributors' identities never be known.

MOVE WITH TAXICABS

If you want to store furniture in London, England, these war days, you are practically out of luck, as all storage space appears filled. One man whose family had been evacuated to the country sought to close his home and put his furniture in a warehouse. He tried 32 companies and got the same answer each time: "No." It's just about as hard to move house as so many trucks have been requisitioned, owners of those remaining are snowed under with orders. Many persons who have to move from furnished or partly furnished flats use taxicabs and make several trips to get their chattels to their new dwellings.

Officials Seeking Suitable Sites For Airports For the Empire Air Training Project—Large Orders For Manufacture of Aircraft to be Placed With Can. Companies

The Canadian War Supply Board, whose duty it is to buy supplies for Canada's war effort, and also to buy for the British Supply Board represented at Ottawa, will hereafter be under the ministerial control of Mr. C. D. Howe, minister of Transport. Up to this time Mr. Ralston, Minister of Finance, has exercised this control, but the heavy burden of responsibility of a Finance Minister in wartime is quite enough for one pair of shoulders, however broad. His regular duties will take up his full time. The supervision of the functions of the War Supply Board seems to fall quite naturally to the lot of Mr. Howe, who is an engineer by profession, who has directed the establishment of the Trans-Canada Air Lines, appointed a Transport Controller as an important war measure, and who supervises national harbors through the harbor board. His duties dovetail very closely in the national war effort.

More News of Canada's War Activities

It has further been announced that hereafter there will be greater publicity about the operations of the Supply Board which is directed by Mr. Wallace Campbell. The present regulations forbid the publication of information about contracts for supplies until the contracts are laid on the table in parliament. It has now being decided to give out at least general information about the operations of the board which throw more light for the people of Canada on the progress of the war effort. Beginning this week some details will be issued showing the manner in which the war appropriation is being spent. The information will of course be restricted to some degree by censorship and internal security regulations. The Prime Minister has further stated that he wishes the flow of useful news to the papers of Canada to expand rather than contract. Whether a general bureau of information will be set up is not quite clear, but there will be no undue restriction on news. There will be more rather than less news about Canada's war effort. A point made clear by the Prime Minister was that there is the closest coordination in the activities of all members of the British Commonwealth in carrying on the war. When the time came for plainer speaking this would be apparent to all.

Officials Select Airports for Training Project

Experienced officials of the Transport Department are flying these days over wide areas of Canada seeking suitable sites for airports for the Empire Air Training project. Many airports already existing in the Trans-Canada Airways chain across Canada will be utilized at least in the early stages of the training scheme, but many more

A NOTABLE TALK
(Granby Leader-Mail)

The remarks by Cardinal Villeneuve delivered over a continent wide network of radio from Washington on Sunday are bound to have a beneficial effect and should dispel delusions held by many Americans concerning the Province of Quebec.

He emphasized that the Province of Quebec is not a priest ridden country as many believe, and that on the contrary its citizens both Protestant and Catholic, live peacefully side by side under a government which allows all men to worship God according to their beliefs and desires. Charity and love, he stated, are extended to all, regardless of race and creed.

There are many Americans who have a distorted conception of the Province of Quebec and the words of the Cardinal should accomplish a great deal of good.

The entire Province should be grateful to the Cardinal for his words broadcast on Sunday.

BRITAIN'S WAR AIMS
(Manchester Guardian)

If, then, the world wants to know why Great Britain is at war, the answer is three-fold. She is fighting, as every threatened state must fight, for her own security. She is fighting, as a people that has drawn so freely on Europe for light and culture, for fame and wealth, in honor bound to fight, to guard Europe's liberties.

If today she can only defend Europe by using her reluctant strength upon the seven seas, she is fighting, we hope for this dream of a nobler future when she can serve Europe by using all her knowledge, experience, and sympathy to aid the common purposes of mankind.

LET'S LAUGH

Two teams were contesting an important Cup-tie. Play was vigorous and excitement ran high.

Among the home club's extreme partisans was a St. John Ambulance man. He got into a heated argument with a supporter of the visiting team, and so far forgot himself as to shake his fist in the other's face.

Immediately there came a voice from the crowd: "Oi, chum, you mustn't do that. You're 'ere to pick 'em up, not knock 'em down!"

"You didn't carry out your plans to elope?"

"No. I found father was planning to move, and I didn't know where we'd find him when we got back!"

WARM WEATHER IN PROSPECT

Not far from the North Pole a travelling Eskimo salesman knocked at the entrance of an igloo. A brother Eskimo answered.

"Would you be interested in an electric fan?" asked the salesman.

"Fan!" echoed the second Eskmio. "Why what would I want with a fan? Do you realize it's 50 below up here?"

The salesman nodded. "That's true," he admitted. "But you never can tell about this weather. Tomorrow it may jump up to zero!"

CHRISTMAS FRUIT CAKE

It's not too soon to make this cake

Even if a more rigid economy has been the rule in the kitchen since the outbreak of war, Christmas is still the big time of the year and will be celebrated as usual. Fruit cake is standard in most homes at this season and the sooner it is made the finer it will be. The flovour improves with ageing and by utilizing these days before the hectic rush of Christmas shopping for such pleasurable tasks as making your fruit cake, life will prove less confused in the days to come.

Christmas Fruit Cake

1 pound (4½ cups) sifted cake flour
1 teaspoon double-action baking powder
½ teaspoon cloves
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ teaspoon mace
1 pound butter or other shortening
1 pound brown sugar
10 eggs, well beaten
½ pound candied cherries
½ pound candied pineapple
1 pound dates, seeded and sliced
1 pound raisins
1 pound currants
½ pound citron, thinly sliced
½ pound candied orange and lemon peel
½ pound nut meats, chopped
1 cup honey
1 cup molasses
½ cup cider

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and spices, and sift together three times. Cream shortening thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add eggs, fruits, peel, nuts, honey, molasses, and cider. Add flour gradually. Turn into four 8x8x2-inch pans which have been greased, lined with heavy paper, and again greased. Bake in slow oven (250°F.) 3 to 3½ hours. Makes 10 pounds fruit cake.

A CAKE FOR THE HOLIDAY SEASON

Besides the standard fruit cake which just naturally goes with Christmas festivities, a lighter cake is a good investment. It won't be refused by guests who have already had too much of heavy Christmas food because it is not too rich. It is an ideal cake to have on hand throughout the whole season for those occasions when old friends drop in to chat and wish you the best. And moreover, it can and should be made several weeks ahead. Any time now is the right time for baking this Old-Fashioned Nut Loaf which can then be stored till you need it.

Old Fashioned Nut Loaf

2 cups sifted cake flour
2 tablespoons double-action baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
⅔ cup butter or other shortening
1 cup sugar
3 eggs, unbeaten
1 cup finely cut nut meats
6 tablespoons milk
1 teaspoon vanilla

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add eggs, one at a time, beating thoroughly after each. Add nuts and blend. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time, beating after each addition until smooth. Add vanilla. Bake in greased loaf pan, 8x4x3 inches, or in medium fluted pan, in moderate oven (350°F.) 1 hour and 15 minutes, or until done.

Christmas Pudding

1 lb. shredded suet
1 lb. white sugar
2 teaspoons salt
6 eggs
3 cups bread flour
1¼ cups fine bread crumbs
¼ cup molasses
½ teaspoon soda
2 lemons, juice and rind
1 lb. currants
1 lb. Sultana raisins
1 lb. mixed peel
2 oz. chopped almonds
¼ lb. glace cherries
1½ teaspoons nutmeg
1 teaspoon mixed spices
1 teaspoon almond flavoring
1 teaspoon vanilla

Method: Chop or shred the suet very fine. Add the sugar, flour, salt, soda and spices sifted together. Use cinnamon and cloves for the spices, about ¾ teaspoon of cinnamon and ¼ teaspoon of cloves. Be sure the bread crumbs are dried and then rolled very fine.

Pour boiling water over the raisins and currants, then drain them and dry them between towels. Add these with the finely chopped mixed peel, the cherries which have been cut and the almonds, blanched and chopped. You can leave out the almonds, but they taste awfully good.

Add the molasses and lemon juice mixed with about 1 cup of water. Add the grated rind of lemons also and the flavoring and beaten eggs. Now you'll probably need a little more water; it generally takes about 1¼ cups, but use enough to make a rather stiff dough. Set aside overnight to ripen and blend the flavors, then turn into well greased bowls, filling them up almost to the top.

Cover the puddings with waxed paper and tie a folded cloth securely over the tops. Place them in a large kettle of boiling water, having the water almost but not quite to the tops of the bowls. Boil steadily for 5 hours, replacing the water as it cooks away with more that is actively boiling.

When they are done, remove the bowls and dry the puddings. Then return them to the bowls and store them in a cool, dry place. They'll need another 2½ or 3 hours' steaming when you are ready to serve them.

SIZES FOR CARDS

The sizes for cards change according to the fashion of the season, though never radically. Following are the approximate sizes for the ordinary visiting cards.

The woman's card rarely measures more than from 3 to 3¼ inches wide by from 2¼ to 2½ inches high.

For a young girl the card is a little smaller. It is usually more square in shape, as, for instance, 2¾ inches wide by 2¼ inches high.

The man's card is usually long and narrow. The popular size is 1⅝ inches high by 3¼ inches long.

Double cards, that is, cards on which the names of husband and wife or mother and daughter appear, should be about 3½ inches wide by 2½ inches high.

The correct card is of pure, unglazed bristol board with no decorations or borders.

THE MAN'S CARD

If they prefer, bachelors may have their cards engraved with the name of their club, instead of their home or lodging address. Sometimes both the home address and the name of the club appear on the card, in opposite corners. In this case the home address should be in the lower right corner, the name of the club in the lower left corner.

A business address is never engraved on a social visiting card. Nor does an "at home" day ever appear on a man's card.

CANADIAN WRITERS: TAKE OFF!

Miss Margaret Lawrence, who was the guest of honor at a dinner given by the Montreal Branch of Canadian Women's Press Club, did the job of guest-honoring with a singular warmth and intelligence. She is bonnie in appearance and with a serious wit laid bare a valuable fund of useful information to a group of writers.

Mrs. E. J. Archibald (Margaret Currie) spoke of a luncheon she attended that day given by Doreen Day for a visiting Helena Rubinstein demonstrator, a Russian Baroness, who looked forty but must have been over sixty. The Baroness attributed her looks and good luck entirely to Rubinstein. Her husband was killed in the revolution but she escaped to America. She weighed over 200 pounds, a disadvantage in seeking employment, and consulted Mde. Rubinstein, who put her on the famous oatmeal diet. In six weeks she lost fifty pounds and her appearance was so much improved she was given a position to promote the treatment by educating the public. The Baroness claimed also that her improved appearance obtained her a second husband.

Miss Lawrence joined the conversation to recommend her favorite diet of vegetable juices. This is now the universal method of the Hollywood experts who have the job of keeping the stars in shape without sacrificing health. In her house they use a machine called a Health-o-Mine which crushes vegetables, sending the juice out one side and the pulp out another. Celery, red cabbage, cucumber, radish, etc., may be used. Carrots are particularly good for the sight and cucumbers for the tell-tale puffs under the eyes. Radish juice is good for the bladder. If the juice of a white, red, orange and green vegetable is combined no other food is required for a balanced ration. Miss Lawrence claimed that her father, who was rapidly losing his strength and suffering from arthritis, was completely restored to health through the addition of raw vegetable juices and now delights in various activities he had once given up. Vegetable juice may be combined with orange and lemon or other fruit juice but should be used within twenty-four hours after extraction.

Change of Heart

A prominent New York Author's Agent told her, said Miss Lawrence, that the attitude towards the Canadian writer had completely changed in New York. This he attributed to the Royal visit, but not in any hysterical or publicity sense. The American audience had a new picture of Canada that had taken away the feeling that not much would come out of that small population of stiffish people who didn't express themselves with any great facility. There was now a new feeling of glamour thrown about the Canadian people.

He said to me . . . I wasn't answering him. I was taking it all in very carefully . . . "You have untouched mines of material that can be used not only in fiction but in other ways. But it is much more difficult to sell non-fiction in the magazine field. Your writers have for years been coming down here and there is something of the salt of the earth, a staunchness, about them that is refreshing."

He mentioned such successful writers as Muriel and Merle Dennison, Norman Riley Raine and people of that character. "You have had difficulty up to now in selling, but this picture has changed. Of course the war has entered into it. Canada stands now as an exciting country and that attitude will increase along with the development of Empire Air business. I want to remind you of the future there is for air stuff . . ."

He spoke, said Miss Lawrence, of the well-known stories of Gallico. "I think you are ready to "take off" in Canada and Canadian writers who have suffered a great deal in the past for lack of a place to put their stuff may now come into their own."

There are very few subjects that you can gather the basis for here and then transfer the locale successfully. I don't speak from the newspaper standpoint but rather from the magazine or fiction end. If you divorce, as many Canadian writers have been forced to do, a story from its true locale, there is a gap that the reader can feel and it takes away the convincing quality of the story. Now the time has come when the Canadian locale will be an added charm. In the United States they had got to the place in the magazine field that everything had to be exotic; the Main Street touch had vanished. They are not so interested in themselves and this touch of Canadian strangeness or difference could be a very attractive element.

Owing to the tragic falling off of British writing available, Canadian writers are the logical heirs of this market. It is indeed your duty to take it up . . ."

All of which I think was a very interesting point and I had never heard it stated before but the agent said it is the truth.

I think that when we are by ourselves we can admit that writers in Canada have had a very difficult time. We know that even in the Canadian magazines it is very difficult for us to stand by the Canadian writer as we should. We are in a highly competitive business not only in Canada, but with the magazines that come across the border. In our business set-up the editors all work under a great difficulty in our relations with the business office, and that is true of every writing vehicle. We are almost forced to use stories which match the stories of the type of magazine we are supposed to be like that is published in the United States. I think that has been the great crime of Canadian publications and it has never been the editor's fault. He has always been forced to follow the pattern because if you don't, hell is raised around you.

At this time I think of what Morley Callaghan said to me. He believed, and he was going to stick to it, Canadian writing in the end would turn to be very close in line and quality to the Russian. He wasn't speaking of the Communist; he was speaking of the literature from Russia.

I asked him why he thought so; what was his psychology?

He replied that the country's structure was very like Russian. "I believe," he said, "writing comes out of the soil. The people become like the country they are in. There isn't any difference between the prairies and the steppes of Russia. The literature of a country has to be torn out of the blood and struggle of the people. It wouldn't be like the crowded scene; the stuff you get in American novels, but rather the sympathy and poignancy you get in the Russian story. I think the real writers are writing and putting the stuff away, God knows they couldn't sell it. But if they do starve to-day and still write of their own locale the time will come. It is too bad they have to starve; but good writers have always starved." Morley Callaghan didn't seem to think it was any handicap to writing. However, when Canadians did get writing sold, it still was desk work. We followed a pattern of what we thought would sell in the United States. If it sold it was because of some recognized technical excellence.

"If you don't write at a desk where do you write?" I asked.

"You write anywhere," he replied, citing the case of a writer who laid on his stomach listening through a hole in the floor to the Irish peasants talking below and getting it down literally. It is reality that counts and especially a Canadian reality all its own."

This was told me in 1927 when the first thing I was sent to do by Saturday Night was to interview Morley Callaghan eleven years ago. And according to this Agent in New York that moment has come that Morley prophesied would arrive. But it all depends if we have been true and are ready to sell abroad bricks from our own blood and native stories that will strike the editors as being Canadian and not imitation American. This agent assured me that the whole scene was changed and if we missed this opportunity it might not come very quickly again. If you do not take a tide when it is there, it goes away unless we catch it. Now is the time to catch this favorable tide.

Miss Lawrence referred to "The Champlain Road" by Frank McDowell, to be published shortly, as an outstanding Canadian novel about the Jesuit martyrs 1648-50.

Away With Glamour

Many questions were asked Miss Lawrence and among the opinions and ideas expressed was that women were tired of glamour as depicted in national advertising material. There was possibility of rich rewards for advertisers who discovered that women were really interested in intelligent arguments, facts and numerical figures. Women, in fact, were now adults, run their own business and enter the professions. They would appreciate being treated with respect to their brains and responsibilities. Moreover, when glamour ceased to appear in the advertisements it would also disappear from the fiction and we would have real life presented instead.

Hollywood Pitfall

A lot of American writers had been ruined by Hollywood and many magazines were having a serious time finding what they wanted. Many of the big names had been unable to produce good stuff after a session in Hollywood. They seem to lose control of the background and it is all turned into foreground. And you cannot have fiction presented without that background. Publishers are making many inquiries to discover new writers and the old feeling regarding the necessity of big names has vanished.

Do you think you must have an agent to sell in the States? was a question asked.

Yes, if you can get an agent that you can rely on, it is much easier to reach a market.

Is there a market for short feature articles such as we turn out in our essay group?

No, there isn't a great deal of market for that work. It is due to a change in civilization. There is little call for that lovely bit of prose. We try to keep a little door open in Saturday Night but that type of work usually goes to the person on the spot or to one on the

Annan Water's wading deep,
And my love Annie's wondrous bonny;
And I am loath she should wet her feet,
Because I love her best of ony.
(Anonymous author, 16th or 17th century).

The lady who acted the part of Portia during my childhood's years was also, in some instances, our Emily Post. A direct descendant of the Sandilands family who had held a position in a fashionable boarding school for young ladies, she was possessed of a nice discernment in the social proprieties. The lady to the east had been formerly a Miss Helen McFaul, a school-teacher, under whom we felt that the three R's must have yielded a crop like Solomon's "apples of gold in pictures of silver." She entertained her nieces of the O'Neil, Donnelly, and Dineen families from the Trout River and Burke districts, and the more juvenile guests assisted us in our church-playing, which took place on their uncle's side of our line fence. In the Rev. W. L. Gage's book on the Holy Land, referring to the Bible he says, "If they would but see in that Book a progressive revelation, very dim at the first, very full at the last, etc." As the branches and dark foliage of our three-spired pine-tree fane dimmed its light, so sectarian shades of opinion obscured our spiritual vision. But again like our open-air shrine, our religious atmosphere was well- ventilated by access to both King James's and the Douay versions of the Scriptures.

Actually the only part of the ceremonial which I distinctly remember was the rite of sprinkling for which my eldest sister, always ur[illegible]ng in resourcefulness, had appropriated my mother's sturdiest onion-stalk. The sprinkling ceremony, you may recall, dates back to the time of Moses. So our childish service might, in a restricted sense, be considered a type of the modern Church of All Nations to be found in Montreal and other cosmopolitan centres.

Doubtless our views on property rights called for clarification: they savoured more of primitive Christian socialism than of Puritan standards, and I cannot deny that when it came to foraging in a neighbour's woodland we had as little sense of sin as the chipmunks.

If you left the brook where, after a dry summer, the handsome lobelia brooded over the Sun's theft of her mirror, walked the greater part of a lot-length, passed the house, crossed the road, and continued through one field more, you would reach the Outarde, bounding the farm on the north. There, according to the season, we gathered hazelnuts, or fished, were rowed across by one of my aunt's family from their home on the opposite bank, or, carrying a basket of eggs, tripped over stepping-stones, picked up a spare cousin, and hied away through lanes and meadows to Dewittville, where there were then two stores, Holiday's and McCaffrey's.

There were two rapids in the river. West of the upper rapids was a safe depth for the row-boat, west of the lower rapids the steady farm horses pulled many a load, including one of worshippers on Sunday.

Usually the little river prattled good-natured gossip of its contribution to community welfare, of the mill-wheels it helped turn, of the cattle whose thirst it slaked, of the linen it washed snow-white as well as fleeces of wool, of the geese it helped to fatten, of the merry bathers on the rocks as level as the floor, of as merry skaters, of the ice-bridge it built for the farmer.

But there were times when its voice changed, and even to my childish ear its tones spoke of danger, of despairing doom, of the desolation of death.

Find German Airplanes Inferior to British and French—Allied Aeroplane Production Fast Reaching The Speed of Germany's Production—Britain's Old Fighting Spirit is Rising

By DONALD C. MacDONALD

(Written especially for The Huntingdon Gleaner)

It has been reported that the designer of one of the German types of aeroplanes has fled his country. The reason? His planes have proven inferior in combat to British and French types and he feared the wrath of the Fuehrer for his failure. With something of a lingering smile that such should be the fate of any well-intentioned citizen in this twentieth century civilization, we may leave Hitler to fume over his newly-discovered inferiority and turn our attention to the proven superiority of the British planes.

British re-armament during the last few years has centred chiefly around the new air-arm. The pulse of national feeling and public morale could be felt to beat in quickening tempo with the growing confidence in air strength. Conversely, until that air strength reached a point to warrant confidence, the British people were none too sure of their defences.

Upon a little investigation the reason for this is strikingly apparent. Almost one thousand years have passed since Britain's countryside has been ravaged by war-fare. William the Conqueror in that distant year of 1066 last led foreign troops onto English soil to bring with them the horrors of war to the door-step of the Briton's cottage. Slowly throughout the medieval centuries, that island people sought their security in a Navy—the strength of a people who had gone down to the sea in ships since time immemorial. Shakespeare spoke of This precious stone set in a silver sea,
Which serves it in the office of a wall,
Or as a moat defensive to a house
Against the envy of less happier lands . . .

The names of Drake, of Rodney, of Nelson, of Jellicoe, and of Beatty, have each in its turn inspired those silent guardians of Britain's shores to maintain their eternal vigilance. Behind their silent watch Britons have lived in peace and security, developing a freedom unhammered by the influence of a permeating and permanent military discipline, and cherishing it so much that, to save the last vestiges of a similar continental freedom from a Philip, or a Louis XIV, or a Napoleon, or a Kaiser Wilhelm, (or a Hitler!), they have sent their sons to die on Europe's battlefields.

But the old order changeth in this dynamic world. The irresistible march of scientific progress has given to man the power to fly through the air like a bird, and it seems that he must use it to pour bombs upon his fellow-men. Today the British Navy, that silent watch-dog of Britain's shores, cannot stop this invasion from the air. For the first time in one thousand years, the "envy of less happier lands" can be inflicted upon the quiet living Briton by death rained from the skies. For the first time in one thousand years, the ravages of war may be brought to his hearth-side, so that, as never before, he feels the threat of this European tyrant as a personal one.

But the amazing feature of the last six years—those since Hitler's rise to power in 1933—is that for the first four of those years, Britons did not grasp the significance of the threat that loomed ever larger, as the shadow of the Nazi swastika lengthened over Europe and fell across the English Channel. Only a few, notably among them, Winston Churchill, from 1933 to 1937, saw with unerring clarity what the future held. And so it was that Churchill, that human dynamo with a spirit as indomitable as the spirit of freedom that burns in his country-men's breasts, thundered ceaselessly that Britain's security was not only threatened but gone; that the security of Britain meant the security of Europe; that Nazi Germany under the threat of using her already formidable air strength, was not only increasing it further, but planning to build an army and eventually a navy, the total strength of which would be irresistible. He called to Britons to awake—but for almost too long they did not heed. And even though the Government could not close its ear to his eloquent and rigidly logical call, they put it down to the exaggeration of a man whose brilliancy they admitted, but whose judgment they had always, and were still seriously questioning.

Nonetheless the Cabinet accepted the demand of Churchill during 1936-7 that Britain's air-fleet should be equal in strength to the strongest one within striking distance,—namely that of Germany. Repeatedly, ministers stated that such was their aim during the last year of Baldwin's premiership and the first one of Chamberlain. Production was planned, it was said, to catch up and maintain an air parity with Germany.

It was a stunned and apprehensive nation that found in the early months of 1938, that in spite of two years' of such ministerial declarations, Britain was falling further and further behind. The horrifying significance seemed to strike them for the first time: Britain was deeply vulnerable to the attack of an enemy, not just an attack that could be met on the seas and dealt with by a tried defence, but an attack that would come through the air, bringing war into the peace and quiet of the English countryside and the Scottish braes, an attack for which they had most inadequately and relatively untried defences.

The wave of public protest, skillfully directed by Churchill against the Government, swept the dilatory Lord Swinton from office and brought in Sir Kingsley Wood in his place. That was May, 1938. Four months later came the Munich crisis, and Britain was forced to accept one of the most humiliating defeats in her diplomatic history, and for no other reason so much as that her air strength both defensively and offensively was totally inadequate to cope with that of Hitler. As some one had pointed out, in September, 1938, the preparations for air attack, being hastily added to by improvising shelters in trenches dug in city parks, were more of a danger than a help. Thousands would have rushed to the shelters where only hundreds could have been accommodated. People, at that time unacquainted with air raid alarms, would have hysterically trampled each other down in the milling throngs, and at the same time provided perfect targets for bombing from the air.

But following Munich the re-organization which had been effected by Sir Kingsley Wood in the air-force development, soon became evident. The most vigorous re-armament of the past year dufing Britain's feverish preparation was in the air. The air-force was taking its place with the Navy as the guardian of Britain's shores. The well-justified lack of confidence in September, 1938, rapidly gave place to a newfound assurance. That is why I have said that the pulse of national feeling and public morale could be felt to beat in ever quickening tempo with the growing confidence in the air strength. A silent and grim determination seized the British people; never again could Munich be repeated; the end for Hitler was in view. The protective wing of Anglo-French strength was given to Poland, Rumania and Greece. Hitler would not heed—he had his way in Poland, but it was a Pyrrhic victory, the consequences of which he must now face.

Meanwhile, even though the Allied aeroplane production has not as yet reached that of Germany, it is fast approaching that point. The greater resources of the Empire are to be utilized in an imperial air program to be centered in Canada. Besides the access to the American market now made possible by the revised Neutrality Bill. So disturbing does this existing and potential Allied air strength appear to Hitler that he hesitates to use his own weapon that he counted so much upon.

In Britain the rising confidence of the past summer has reached new heights with the revelation of their proven superiority over at least certain types of German planes that have been sent to Britain's shores. Beverley Baxter has vividly pictured the reaction of the British people to the "Battle of the Flying Scots" when the R.A.F. amateurs swept back the German air attack directed at points along the Firth of Forth. A few days before that episode, a German submarine had ingeniously made its way into the sea-harbour of Scapa Flow and sent the Royal Oak down with some eight hundred of her 'sea-dogs'. Britons were momentarily stunned. But their grim determination had not, as Hitler hoped, been shattered by this success; rather "all grumbling and wonderings ceased as if at the down stroke of a conductor's baton... Germany had struck at the very heart of Britain—her naval security. The race of islanders who had breathed the salt of oceans from time immemorial, felt the challenge almost as a personal matter, as if the submarine had fired its torpedo at the door of every home and cottage in the country".

Then came the attack on the Firth of Forth. Britons who had wondered if their confidence in the oft-tried navy had been over-estimated under modern warfare, breathed more freely as the "Flying Scots" gave them new cause for confidence in the new and untried guardian of their shores. Britain found herself anew. "Off the coast of Devon, Drake's drums had been heard again. Nelson walks the corridors of the Admiralty these nights, and Pitt has entered the soul of the British Parliament."

It is all a very heartening story for those of us who live in the far-flung corners of the British Commonwealth of Nations, but feel, nonetheless, the threat to our security as personally as though we stood elbow to elbow with Glasgow's "Jock" and London's "'arry" and "'enry". The only cause for apprehension is that this confidence that was lacking in Munich's dark hour of September, 1938, may grow too great and become a dangerous over-confidence. There is the danger that Britons should come to feel that their shores cannot be pierced. But some day, the long-exepected air armada will bring its death and destruction. The R.A.F. will be able to cope with it, but it is too much to expect that the enemy will not be able to bring the terror and destruction to Britain's country-side. An over-confidence will then result in a dangerous drop in the morale of the nation. The realities of the present and the probable future must always be faced. The most dangerous self-deception would be to under-estimate the strength of the enemy while he is acquiring the will to attack.

WHY SOME PEOPLE GROW OLD QUICK

Everybody should know the facts

Why do some people keep youthful, while others grow old quickly, before their time? Are you too busy to learn the truth? Are you prepared to face the facts and to admit them, if they apply to you? We say you may find new joy in living if you read and heed these frank statements.

Thousand of people just don't bother to do anything about constipation. They even refuse to believe they are constipated. They think that if a person is regular, that is all that matters. Occasionally they take "a good dose of something" when the need is evident. That is definitely not the way. The way to keep feeling fit, to prolong the years of youthful exuberance and well-being, is to keep the entire system free as possible from impurities and poisons. That means the blood, the kidneys, the intestines and the bowels.

Take off the mask of premature age

To do that your body must get certain minerals in some way.

We make no exaggerated claims for Kruschen Salts, but we recommend the "little daily dose" because Kruschen contains several valuable mineral salts in highly refined form. Each salt has its particular function. In combination they help rid your system of excess poisons each day. Thus free from the sgeing effects of accumulated impurities you are much less apt to suffer from splitting headaches, acid indigestion, rheumatic pains, listlessness, because your excretory organs are encouraged to function normally.

Thousands upon thousands of people throughout the world refer to the general well-being it imparts as "that million dollar Kruschen feeling". Start "the little daily dose" right away and just you see for yourself! At all drug counters 25c, 45c, 75c.

R.C.A.F. Makes Good Pilots In 12-Weeks' Club Course

Douglas Hampson of Huntingdon, Que., is Located At Air Base "Somewhere in Ontario" Where Pilots Are Being Given Preliminary Training for R.C.A.F.

Young men from different parts of Canada are being trained at the various air training bases for future service. At these bases they are given the preliminary training which will prepare them for more intensive training later on.

Huntingdon has made its contribution in the way of future air pilots, among these being Douglas Hampson, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Hampson of Huntingdon.

The Toronto Daily Star recently visited one of these air training bases "somewhere in Ontario" and in a recent issue gives a detailed account of the visit. At this base is located Douglas Hampson. The account of the visit is in part as follows:

Once a day six young fellows at a flying club in Ontario run two-thirds of a mile out to the windsock at the far side of the field and back. They're not practising for a track meet—they're preparing to be fighting pilots with the empire's air force.

Until a week or so ago, four of them barely knew the difference between a propeller and a tailskid. They were just lads in their early twenties, with a college education or senior matriculation certificate, who decided they wanted to do their fighting in the air.

Today, under Flight Lieutenant Charles Burgess, who is a young but experienced flier, they are beginning to catch on and in another 11 weeks they'll be as good as a commercial pilot and will be ready for advanced training.

It's all part of the scheme to make the empire's air force the greatest in the world. Many flying clubs throughout the Dominion are giving preliminary training to R.C.A.F. men who may become bomber pilots, fighter pilots or reconnaissance fliers or be "washed out"—found not suitable.

Two batches of R.C.A.F. pilots already have been turned out at this flying club, and many more are to come.

Fears Slowing Down

The present six arrived a week ago. They live and eat in quarters at the field, and their day begins at 8 a.m. Before lights out at 10.30 p.m., they have put in seven hours or so of ground work, flying, theoretical work and general aviation instruction. They do so much, chuckles Instructor Burgess, that he makes them do their run across the field after the day's work for fear an early-morning run would "slow 'em down."

They're the class of Canada's young men. They have to be physically perfect before accepted for training. Most are built like athletes and are good-looking enough to attract attention without a uniform. They're the sort of lad who centuries ago would have jousted for a fair lady's glove or even a glance.

During the first week "we just get them accustomed to things," smiled Instructor Burgess, who was teaching them how to swing a propeller when a reporter and photographer arrived. At the end of the week they had about two hours' actual flying instruction, had begun their ground school course and were getting on to the idea of handling their planes on the ground.

The lads also have been issued their flying equipment, which makes them look like men from Mars and gives the man added value of about $500. If a pilot loses his heavy flying suit, which keeps out cold even in the Arctic, it costs him $50. His helmet is worth $10, his goggles another $5, his fur-lined moccasins $20, and fur-lined gloves $10.

The parachutes they must carry when flying are worth another $400.

Undone in Jiffy

One lad finally had won his 20-minute struggle to get into the intricate parachute equipment. He stood up proudly. "This," he pointed to what looked like a wire handle on the left side, "I suppose is what you pull when you jump?" Burgess agreed. "And this," added Burgess with a smile, as he banged a little round case in the front, "is what you do when you want to get out of it."

The equipment promptly fell off and the student wearily began all over again to get established in the suit.

When the fledglings first begin flying, they learn why a plane flies and what each control and instrument does and means. Then they are taught straight and level flying and how to climb and glide. Then come turns, take-offs and landings. Instructor Burgess requires at least eight hours of dual flying before he'll let his students solo.

"I don't believe in this business of soloing a pilot after three or four hours," he said.

Before the would-be warbirds leave for advanced training in faster training ships and fighting ships, they put in 50 hours of flying in their preliminary training. That is made up of 25 hours of dual flying and 25 hours solo. They get flying tests at the 20-hour and 50-hour marks. The testing is done by an outside R.C.A.F. expert who rides with the student.

After 20 hours in the air, the young fellows get aerobatics, such as loops, slow rolls and half rolls, and fancier flying generally.

Flying takes up only a comparatively small part of the training period however. The fliers get a complete ground school course in navigation (they also get five hours of instrument flying) theory of flight, engines and rigging. They must be able to start their plane and look after it and know why their engine stopped in mid-air or at least be able to find the source of the trouble.

10 Words a Minute

They also take up telegraphy and must be able to receive and send at a rate of at least 10 words a minute. Their lecture room contains a table for each student, and on it are headphones and a key. They all are linked so everybody can hear what is going on.

They try written examinations on their ground school training about two weeks before the 12 weeks are up. "All together," said Instructor Burgess, "the boys get all that a man training for his private pilot's license gets and more. Actually, when our boys finish their course here, they are even better equipped than a commercial pilot.

"The boys must be able to fly accurately and well."

One of the more interesting phases of the course is the "rumble pot" which is started the second or third week. At this stage the provisional pilot officers, as they are called, are supposed to have a fairly good idea of what's going on, so when a student taxies too fast or forgets to turn off a switch or makes similar slips, he must contribute 25 cents to the pot. The pot is divided up among the lads at the end of the course or is used jointly to throw a party or dance.

Air-Minded Youths Train To Become Fighting Pilots. . . .

With Canada scheduled to become the training centre for the air forces of the empire, private flying clubs across the country are already co-operating with the R.C.A.F. by giving preliminary training to young men who want to become fighting pilots. Lined up before a training plane above are six air-minded young men who will get 50 hours' flying experience before going on for advanced training. Included in instruction is a full ground school course in navigation, theory of flight, engines, rigging and telegraphy. From the left: Hugh Rae, West Branch, N.S.; Tom Bartlett, Toronto; James Tyre, Westmount, Que.; Flight-Lieut. Charles Burgess, instructor; Reginald L. Avey, Toronto; Douglas Hampson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Hampson of Huntingdon, Que., and Douglas Cleland, Toronto, Ont.

Bank of Montreal Reports Record Assets as Result of Business Expansion and Public Financing

Resources Increased to $1,025,508,367, a New High Mark in Canadian Banking—Liquid Assets of $742,603,867 Represent 78.29% of Liabilities to The Public—Loans to Industry and Business Increased by $29,861,056 and Holdings of Government and Other Bonds by $76,434,435—Profits Somewhat Higher

Reflecting the continued expansion of industrial operations, greater agricultural and mineral production, enlarged business activities, and participation in government financing, the 122nd annual statement of the Bank of Montreal for the year ending October 31 shows a substantial growth in assets and a moderate increase in earnings. Total assets of $1,025,508,367, an increase of $151,252,539, have in fact reached the highest level in the bank's history and represent a new high mark in Canadian banking. Profits of $3,462,446 showed an increase of $64,056 after the payment of government taxes of $1,198,413—which were higher by $45,795—and were the equivalent of 4.54 per cent on the capital, rest and undivided profits, which compares with 4.46 per cent in the preceding year; the increase in relation to total earnings is about 2 per cent.

The growth in the banks' assets is more than accounted for by an increase in deposits payable on demand and after notice of $151,752,105 to a total of $914,909,050. The changes in the notes in circulation, bills payable, and other items in the liabilities to the public are relatively small.

As against the expansion in deposits there is an increase of $48,703,634 in the bank's cash assets to $201,243,716 and of $122,268,748 in liquid assets to $742,603,867, while current loans in Canada at $257,261,729 are larger by $29,558,280. Apart from substantial holdings in cash at $94,641,456, and money on deposit in other banks at $77,357,497, holdings of government and other bonds and debentures, of which "the greater portion consists of gilt-edge securities which mature at early dates," are up by $76,434,435 to a total of $517,171,255. This, together with the increase in deposits, may be taken in part as reflecting the bank's participation in the recent $200,000,000 Federal Government loan taken up by the Canadian banks generally. The expansion of current loans is a highly satisfactory indication of the part the bank has played in expanding industrial and general business activities. The effect of the greater business activity has also been to increase the bank's deposits from the public.

Of the bank's total assets, shown at over $1,000,000,000, the quickly available resources of $742,603,867 are equal to 78.29 per cent of all liabilities to the public. This compares with 77.80 per cent in the preceding year.

The net result of the year's operations, after the payment of the usual dividends to shareholders and appropriation of $500,000 for bank premises, was to leave $82,446 to be added to the balance of profit and loss; this compared with $18,390 in the previous year. The total balance in this account now stands at $1,265,700.

EXPORT OF HONEY IS NOW PERMITTED

Export of Canadian honey to the United Kingdom will now be permitted without the necessity of having an individual licence, according to official advice received by the Dominion Department of Agriculture.

When the war began honey was one of several products placed on the list of restricted imports by the British authorities, consequently no Canadian honey has been shipped since the beginning of September, 1939.

In normal times nearly 25 per cent of the honey imported into the United Kingdom is Canadian. In 1938 the total exports from the Dominion to the United Kingdom amounted to more than 4,500,000 pounds. Last year honey production in Canada reached the record figure of 37,000,000 pounds; this year it is estimated the output will be between 25 and 26 million pounds.

More than 40 countries supply the United Kingdom with honey, but the Canadian product in recent years has held a primary position on the British market due to its high quality and flavour.

CHEAPER THAN GASOLINE

That Britain could save millions of gallons of gasoline for her fighting forces by fixing adaptors to her half a million road transport vehicles, is the claim of gas experts. These adaptors would enable gasoline burning engines to produce and burn coal gas. Five-ton vehicles could be driven 300 miles on 4 cwt. of coal—a saving of 50 per cent on gasoline costs. The costs of adapting vehicles would be $300 to $350, it is stated. Research mechanics of the London Passenger Transport Board, which will be badly hit by gasoline rationing, are carrying on extensive experiments with the adaptor.

COMBAT RHEUMATISM

Rheumatism is often caused by uric acid in the blood. This blood impurity should be extracted by the kidneys. If kidneys fail, and excess uric acid remains, it irritates the muscles and joints causing excruciating pains. Plan to help prevent rheumatism by keeping your kidneys in good condition. Take regularly Dodd's Kidney Pills—for half a century the favorite kidney remedy. 106

Valleyfield Resents False Publicity Launched by Montreal Newspaper, Radio

Montreal Agencies Claim Valleyfield Booming With Activity—Council Passes Resolution Rebuking Such Statements as False and Harmful to Valleyfield—Grants $3,000 For Opening of Winter Roads

Mayor J. A. Larin and the members of the Valleyfield Council greatly objected at their last session of the Council on Wednesday to the adverse publicity which had been given their city through station CKAC and in a Montreal French daily newspaper. The latter claimed that the City of Valleyfield was booming with activity and there were no unemployed there.

The laborers and the Council greatly protested against such and adopted the following resolution in order to inform the public that the situation was not as it was said to be:—

It was moved by Ald. Gontran Hébert, seconded by Ald. Eustache Langevin, "that the Council of Salaberry of Valleyfield deplores the false publicity made against the economical situation in Valleyfield when it was stated that Valleyfield was experiencing a great boom and was full of activity."

"Contrary to this false publicity made over the radio through station CKAC and in the French daily newspaper 'La Patrie,' there is no apparent prosperity and overflow of activity in Valleyfield as there are as many unemployed in Valleyfield to date as there were last year at this same time;

"That this Council invites all industrialists who are seeking an advantageous spot to establish themselves to come to Valleyfield and employ the competent men which are available here."

The City Clerk read a letter from the Department of Public Works at Ottawa to obtain an estimate for the continuation of the work on Victoria street.

Mayor Larin explained to the Council the result of his interview with the Department of Roads for the Province of Quebec in regards to the opening of winter roads. Hon. T. D. Bouchard has assured the Valleyfield Council a grant of $3,000 as in the past but the City will have to pay for the removal of the snow in question.

The By-law in regards to the closing of dance halls and grills was not read a second time at this session, as was expected, as the protests were too numerous.

The following letters were read at the opening of the meeting—Alderic Deschamps, for hospitalization; Rosario Lanctot, a construction permit on Bay St. Francis; Charlemagne Hébert and W. G. McCabe, the consolidation of their taxes; Rosario Leroux of Bellerive claims the sum of $2,500 for damages to his business during the repairing of Alexandre street.

The council granted to the Hotel Dieu hospital the ground stone which was used in the construction of this building for $1.00; this body also advised the hospital authorities that they will continue the annual grant of $5,000.

The Shawinigan Water & Power Co., or the Bell Telephone Co., will have to remove the post which was placed in the middle of a street in Village Billette.

Mr. J. Paul Chatel will also be asked to use his influence with the Provincial Government for the upkeep of the winter roads.

The engineer was authorized to build the open air rinks at the same localities as in previous years.

The Valleyfield constabulary force was unable to return to Valleyfield Miss Savage, who is being held at Brockville, Ont., for sixty days.

The Council voted the sum of $25. to the Canadian Red Cross Society, Valleyfield division.

These workers have optimistic hopes of reaching their allocation for this year as they have almost reached their objective. A most delicious lunch was served by Mrs. Duncan and members of Elgin Auxiliary. It is interesting to note that two former daughters of the Manse, Miss Ina Rowat and Miss Margaret Houston were present at this meeting, and enjoyed reminiscing over old times.

Week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ross were Miss Carol Ross of Montreal and Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Houghton of Huntingdon.

Mr. and Mrs. L. D. Watson, Mr. David Watson, Misses Viola Gilligan, Patricia and Shirley Rowat motored to Ottawa on Sunday to visit friends.

Miss Ina Rowat of St. Lambert and friend, Miss Margaret Houston and the Misses Margaret and Millicent Walker of Huntingdon were guests on Friday of Mrs. George Elder and Mrs. James Brims.

S.S. Notes.—

A gold pin was awarded Katherine Rowat, a Junior pupil, on Sunday morning, signifying that Katherine has completed two years of uninterrupted perfect attendance as a pupil of Athelstan Presbyterian Sunday School. This makes a total of twenty pupils who have received these gold pins offered for two years' perfect attendance under the St. Andrew's Award System, and three of these have been given year guards for three years' perfect attendance.

Protection of Bees in Winter Is Important

Natural Windbreaks Are Advocated—Drawn Comb Best Asset to Beekeeper

Bees need protection from cold and draughty homes. Winter is approaching, the bees' larder is well stocked, or should be, otherwise, valuable property is likely to be lost before next spring. Bees to be wintered outside are no doubt snugly packed in their cases, but are they well protected against cold and driving winds? Asks C. B. Gooderham, Dominion Apiarist. They need it, because such protection is just as important as good cases and packing material. If natural windbreaks are absent a slatted board fence about six or seven feet high is a good substitute. The apiary should be protected on three sides at least, all four if possible. Bees to be wintered in cellars would be just as well inside now. There is no advantage leaving them out, exposed to cold and changeable weather, waiting for a flight they may never get. A colony of bees offers a snug winter home and a nice food supply for mice, but such boarders are apt to be very costly to the beekeeper, protect your colonies from such pests. Bee equipment is expensive, and therefore worth a fair amount of care. It does not improve the appearance of the apiary nor prolong the life of the equipment itself by leaving it lying around until wanted next summer. Drawn comb is perhaps the most valuable asset a beekeeper can have, but mice and wax moth can ruin it in short time. Place the combs in supers and tier the latter up with an inverted hive cover at the bottom and another cover on top of each pile, this will keep out the mice. Store the combs in a cold building, the moth cannot work at freezing temperatures. Check over all used equipment as you put it away for winter, some of it may need repairing, which if left until next spring may never be done. Do it now is a good motto, procrastination may prove costly.

Mrs. Mary Kazulak, Mr. George Kazulak, Mr. Dan Kovaneff and Mr. Archie Colquhoun of Dundee motored to Montreal on Tuesday. Mrs. Kazulak expects to undergo further treatment at the Montreal General Hospital.

WINTER CARE OF MARES

An important item in the care of brood mares during the winter is daily exercise—enough to keep them healthy, but they should not be driven in deep snow or made to haul heavy loads. When brood foals are usually weak. The amounts mares stay idle all winter, their of feed depend on the size of the mare, her condition and the amount of work she is expected to do. When young brood mares have not completed their growth, more liberal feeding is desirable. As a rule, a good grade of mixed hay together with oats and bran will suffice, and a few roots a day will help keep the mare in good health.

At the Dominion Experimental Farm at Fredericton, N.B., the basic ration for brood mares is half a pound of grain, made up of three parts oats and one part bran, and one pound of mixed hay for every hundred pounds of live weight. Thus, a 1,600 pound mare would get eight pounds of grain and 16 pounds of hay daily. The mares are watered three times a day, and always have salt within reach. As a precaution against joint trouble in the foals, the mares are given a teaspoonful of potassium iodide in the drinking water on the first and fifteenth of each month beginning with the first of October.

PERFECT PURCHASE

Last big industry to enter the instalment buying field, the Canadian housing industry has now established the most perfect form of purchase financing of any Canadian business. Backed by the National Housing Act, Canadian construction companies can sell new homes for down payments of ten or 20 per cent, the balance spread over 20 years, payable monthly as rent. To simplify financing Canadian home builders also have the opportunity to utilize savings certificates to apply on their down payment or to protect their home investment.

COLORS BRIGHTEN HOMES

Plastic doorknobs which can be manufactured in a variety of shapes and colors promise to do much to brighten interiors in modern Canadian homes. More modern than glass, they are also unbreakable and, unlike old-fashioned brass knobs, they do not need cleaning and polishing.

TILE FLOORING FOR CHILDREN

The contribution of building science to children's play-rooms is the asphalt tile flooring. Easily applied over wood or cement floors, flexible tile floorings have unlimited color possibilities and are easily kept clean. They are also easy on the feet.

BOOM IN PAINT INDUSTRY

Of all the industries related to home building perhaps the greatest scientific improvement has been shown in the paint industry. Among its outstanding achievements in recent years has been the development of a dirt-shedding, whiter-than-white paint known as Trutone. This new white paint solves many problems for the home owner and is a distinct contribution to the building industry.

Never were Canadian apples of finer flavour or better quality than this year. There is no better fruit for eating and cooking.

Death Of Miss D. Worldling

(Obituary of Imaginary Yet Real Person)

Miss Deidine Worldling died Friday, Oct. 13th, 1939, at two o'clock, after a short illness. The scene at her bed side was heart rendering for she continually grasped for imaginary things, and when asked by her sister, Carnal, what they were, she screeched, "cards, cards and a fiddle bow; but they have mocked me," she cried. "I have sowed to the wind." The she was gone.

The deceased was born at Sinnerville, Feb. 14, 1917, and was an adopted child of Prince Beelzezale and his wife Serpie Satanna. She, in her younger days, followed in the procession on Broadway, with whom she spent most of her time. She was a member of Do As You Please Church, a cross between Christianity and Modernism. She patronized regularly the Beauty Parlor, where she would gloat over the catalogue for the latest styles of the modern day in woman's attire. She also was a modern cigarette smoker, often scattering ashes over everything, including the morning plate of toast. She feigned to be a child of God yet she was only an enchanter, for her example belied her. She did often mingle with the people of God in the sanctuary on the Sabbath, yet her heart remained unchanged. She was prone to vanity and pride. She was a member of the Fast Set, and during her short life she had attended 103 dances, of which 32 were barn dances of rather low reputation. She also attended 127 bridge and euchre parties. When in, she won several prizes as a champion player, which made her father famous with her colleagues and her verdict was always that she had an awful good time and would not have missed it for anything.

The funeral of Miss Deidine Worldling was held in the chapel here on Oct. 16th. Her pastor, Mr. Shepherd, a graduate of the 34th of Ezekiel, officiated. He took for his text, "We have done the things that we should not have done and left undone the things that we should have done."

The summary of his discourse was somewhat like this: He said, as far back as time immemorial the whole human race had been doing that very thing. Adam started the ball a-rolling, and it had been rolling ever since, all down thro' the ages. So we should have no quarrel with the youth for we cannot put an old head on young shoulders. For the young must sow their wild oats, and some of their pranks may seem to some of you old grey headed veterans of the cross, to be somewhat fanatic. Now there is so much that is unnecessary in this world, that youth has to contend with in order to keep in the swim that they have no time to do the necessary things.

It is true of our departed sister; she was a live wire, she was overcharged with enthusiasm and her ardor was high; in that case she had to let off steam somehow so she had to dance to the tune of a fiddle. Undoubtedly if our beloved sister had reached a more mature age she would have thought of things of a more serious nature, but fate played in and youth and vigor cannot always hold back the hand of death. I could see that our dear sister was gambling with her eternal interest. I candidly believe if she had only known that her departure was so near at hand she would have made some preparation for the future life. I can say that I always enjoyed her little flirtation when in her company. She was so gay and full of snap that I could not find it in my heart to approach her with the subject of religion, for to the youth, the question of religion means to prepare for death. I could not throw a wet blanket over the frivolity, yet I knew that she loved pleasure more than God. Yet it is the way of the world and you might as well be out of the world as not to go with the crowd.

She leaves to lament her passing away, her Foster Parents, and one brother Belial of Liquorville in the county of Booze, and two sisters, Mrs. Immoral Lucifer of Vanity Street in the town of Immodesty, Miss Carnal of Harlot Avenue in the state of Lascivious.

The Euchre Club and Bridge Parties have lost a most efficient member and her dancing associates a wonderful leader who they may well be proud of, for she at all times was noted for her ability.

A choir composed of Mrs. Indifference, Mrs. Formality, Miss Vanite, Miss Mockery, Mr. Wanton, Mr. Blashphemy and Mr. Sinner, while Miss Vain Glory presided at the organ, rendering two beautiful hymns, "Gathering Home, One by One," and "Will There Be Any Stars in My Crown."

Miss Self Conceite sang a solo, "Angels Are Weeping."

The floral display was very touching and rather peculiar and sad. There was a pillow of thorns with the words, "There is no rest for the wicked," sent by the Euchre Club of which she was a member in good standing, and a wreath of briers and thistles with the words in scarlet, "The wages of sin is death," from the Fast Set of which she was president at the time of her death.

The interment took place in the cemetery in the Valley of the White Sepulcher.

The pall-bearers were six of her bosom pals: Mr. Lip Stick, Mr. Lotion Rouge, Mr. Cock Tail, Mr. Sneak Libertine, Mr. Poker Game and Mr. Insignificant Cigarette.—(Sinnerville).

5 MILLION MORE WORKERS

Britain started the war with 5,500,000 more workers—people between the ages of 16 and 64—than in 1914, according to report just issued by the ministry of labor. With regard to the unemployment situation, the ministry states that the demand for additional labor will in point of numbers of work people required, soon exceed the present total of unemployed (1,330,928). It was pointed out that this figure was lower by 438,000 than it was a year ago.

The total area estimated as sown to the principal field crops in Canada in 1939 is 58,291,800 acres, as compared with 57,121,000 acres reported for similar crops in 1938. Wheat occupied 26,756,500 acres in 1939, compared with 25,930,500 acres in 1938.

EARTH SOD FOR PIGS

Modern agricultural scientists have placed their seal of approval on the old custom of throwing earth sods to young pigs before they are weaned in the early spring. The earth supplies the pigs with iron and iron is a preventive of anaemia. Recently anaemia has caused much worry and loss to hog breeders. Provision can be made in the fall to prevent anaemia in spring litters by storing up a quantity of sods. As an added precaution against anaemia, the sods may be sprinkled with a solution of iron sulphate just before they are thrown to the pigs. The main point is to have the sods stored ahead of time.

The real turkey season begins in the fall, when chilly winds rustle the ripened grain and send coloured leaves whirling to their wintry beds. By this time the great flocks of birds have attained their growth, and the cool weather stimulates appetites. Golden grain is transformed into plump muscles nicely cushioned with delicate layers of fat. It is this "finish" to which much of the delicious juiciness of properly cooked Canadian turkey is attributable.

Huntingdon Loses To Valleyfield Tigers

"Red" White Scores H'don's Lone Goal

Hunter Furnishes Assist In Huntingdon's Lone Success—Sunstrum Tallies Twice For Valleyfield R. Joannette in Smart Form

Bellerive took sole possession of first place in the Valleyfield City and District League over the week-end when they shellacked the Beauharnois team by the huge score of 11-1 in a regular fixture of this loop, played at the Valleyfield Arena. In the second game of this double bill, Huntingdon lost its first game in two starts when they went down before the smart playing aggregation of Lucien Leduc, of Valleyfield. The score in this last game was 3-1 in favor of Valleyfield.

A crowd estimated at more than 800, the largest to witness these league contests at Valleyfield in recent years, saw Huntingdon battle with Tigers in the most closely contested game of the year. Taking advantage of three good breaks, Sunstrum beat Houle once in the second period and repeated this exploit mid-way through the final stanza. Reynolds counted Valleyfield's second goal of the afternoon. Red White, who was moved to defence at the opening of the season by manager Charles Faille, scored Huntingdon's lone tally when he received a well-laid pass from Morris Hunter at the 14-minute mark in the third period.

The teams were held scoreless in the first period although Huntingdon had a slight edge in play. Laplante in the Valleyfield nets seemed unbeatable but Huntingdon, on the other hand, missed two open nets when their marksmen missed the twine by inches in their anxiousness to tally. Houle played a stand-out game in the Huntingdon nets and batted out everything that came his way in this fray.

Both teams seemed well balanced when they started the second period and it looked as if this twenty minutes of play would also end scoreless but Sunstrum turned the tables against the Huntingdon team. On a double pass from Howarth and Rolland, Roy Sunstrum picked the right hand corner of the Huntingdon nets to register the Valleyfield team's first goal. Houle had no chance whatsoever on the shot.

Again Valleyfield were favored with breaks in the third period when they took advantage of two power-plays to score. Counters were made by Reynolds and Sunstrum and assists went to Legault and Bertwistle.

Huntingdon's lone goal was scored after fourteen minutes of play when Red White received a pass from Morris Hunter and drove a hard shot which Laplante never saw. This first success inspired the visiting team and they launched several power-plays in an attempt to get more goals but Laplants rose to great heights to stop all the shots which he had to handle in the last five minutes of play.

R. Joannette starred for Bellerive in their decisive victory over Beauharnois. Lecompte and Amyot were also stand-outs.

Of the four teams which played that day, Huntingdon seemed the most improved one, and they certainly displayed smart form although they ended their game on the wrong end as far as scores went. They have developed into a smarter skating crew and should go places when they hit their winning streak.

The refereeing was very poorly handled that day and it is to be hoped that the league will supply the teams with more experienced officials in the future.

And...a Skatin' We Will Go...

—Gleaner Photo and Engraving.

Hundreds of youths in Huntingdon are taking advantage of the smooth icy surface of the Chateauguay River to don skates and limber up before the Huntingdon Arena is opened to the public. The above photo, taken on Saturday afternoon by the Gleaner photographer, shows a group of youths chasing the puck in a "practice" game, while others are waiting for the puck-carrier with a determined resolution to stop him at "any cost." It is to be noted that there is no snow whatsoever on the ground but this fact does not in the least diminish the enthusiasm of the skaters and hockey players. Such scenes as this have not been seen here in recent years. The above photo was taken at the rear of Log Lodge, about one half mile from Huntingdon.

"Mighty Mite" is Appointed As Valleyfield Braves Pilot

Succeeds Emile Perron as Coach For Balance of Season—Took Post on Monday—Former Canadien Star Handled Club Against St. Hyacinthe on Tuesday Evening—Change is 3rd in P.S.H.L. This Year

Secretary George Perron of the Valleyfield Hockey Club in the Provincial Senior League announced over the week-end that Aurel Joliat, left-wing star with Canadiens of the National Hockey League who retired from active play two years ago had been appointed coach of the Braves for the balance of the season

Joliat, who managed the Verdun Maple Leafs of the Quebec Senior League last year, succeeds Emile Perron. Braves won the league championship last year, piloted by Archie Wilcox, but lost to Royals in the provincial senior final. Wilcox succeeded Emile Perron halfway through the 1938-39 season.

This marks the third coaching change in the Provincial league since the season got under way. Fred Hebgurn was succeeded by Robert Hebert, a club director, at Shawinigan Falls where the Cataracts had indifferent success, while Albert Lemay became playing manager of St. Hyacinthe when 'Doc' Clement relinquished the reins.

Braves arrived home on Monday from Boston, where they tied one game and lost another in a week-end schedule against the Olympics. The results left the Braves in 7th position in the eight-club circuit.

Joliat was born at Ottawa in 1901, joining Canadiens in 1922 and played with that club until his retirement two years ago. He was rated one of the greatest left-wingers of all time and had a successful season as coach of the Verdun team last year—guiding the Leafs into a play-off position. The Leafs were eliminated by Royals who went to the Allan Cup final against Port Arthur Bear Cats.

Club officials stated on Monday that they expected a practice would be held on Tuesday morning, when Joliat will take charge.

Surprising Marksmanship Recorded at Shoot—English River Rifle Club Winners

The Turkey, Duck and Chicken shoot sponsored by the English River .22 Rifle Club at Riverfield on Saturday afternoon did not receive the patronage a similar event in November of last year did. However, the attendance could be said to make up in quality what it lacked in quantity and the shooting was really good resulting in ties which brought out some inspiring markmanship. Two turkeys, two ducks and four chickens fell to the winning marksmen during the afternoon. Mr. Wallace Logan introduced a new departure—trap shooting into the afternoon's sport and treated the onlookers to a smart piece of shooting, taking five birds with five shots in all of the contests. The winners were, turkeys: Messrs. E. MacFarlane, C. Goundrey, R. Patenaude, W. Logan. Ducks: A. Allen, C. Goundrey; Chickens: G. W. F. Barwick, G. Roy, W. Logan and R. Carson, tie, and W. Logan.

WINTERING-OVER OF WEEDS NOTED

It cannot be over emphasized that a regular short rotation of crops, which provides a cleaning crop at intervals, smother crops of clover, etc., and at all times, the most thrifty and complete possession possible of the soil by crops, is the best insurance against weeds. In addition, enough should be known of the special life history of each weed to guide one in the choice of additional methods of attack and to make them seasonable. The Division of Botany, Science Service, Dominion Department of Agriculture, is accumulating life history information, and the Dominion Experimental Farm at Ste. Clothilde, Chateauguay County, will give information on the most economical control measures.

RIVERFIELD IN LIMELIGHT

RIVERFIELD .22 rifle club, better known as the English River Rifle Club, shot its way to the championship of Canada in the largest rifle match ever held in this country last Wednesday and thus became the Quebec Provincial titleholders in the first round of the third annual Dominion marksmen .22 sporting rifle championship competition. This is an honor which has been awarded the Riverfield team and one which will surely be appreciated by the population of the Chateauguay Valley.

Its fame was practically nil prior to this imposing victory and, now, that team is the "talk of the town," and justly so. In their competitions prior to this contest the Riverfield team had always figured well but it took this outstanding showing to make other rifle clubs in the Dominion take notice of the array of stars which formed this mighty aggregation.

Personnel of the Riverfield team is as follows:—Roy Carson, Ernest G. Carson, Roy Angell, Andrew A. Allen, G. W. F. Barwick, and W. Logan, all of whom entered perfect scores of 300 out of a possible 300 points. Seven shooters were permitted to compete for each team but only the five highest scores were counted for the team's total score.

Organized just a year ago, the Riverfield shooters have been coached by veteran marksman, W. M. Ramsay, who has spent most of his time preparing the team for its entry this year into the gruelling Dominion Marksmen competition. Instructor Ramsay sharpened the shooting eyes and improved the accuracy of his marksmen by staging regular turkey shoots each week for prizes so that his team members could enjoy active competition. With the winning of the Quebec provincial championship, with a perfect score, it looks as though the team might continue on to capture the coveted national title for the best rifle clubs in Canada.

The Quebec champions will face stiff opposition from the Sunny Brae Rifle Club of Moncton, N.B., which is defending the Dominion title for the second successive year and has successfully defended its provincial crown for the third year. To date the Moncton team has established a perfect score of 7500 x 7500 points which is likely to stand in this country for a number of years. This score is a result of five straight wins with perfect scores of 1500 in the provincial and Dominion competitions of 1937 and 1938 and this year's provincial shoot.

The question of who will be the 1939 championship team will remain unanswered until the smoke has died away after the final round. Nevertheless, it is hoped that the Riverfield team will continue its brilliant showing and that they will bring home the title.

Boston Tops Braves, 2-0; Play 4-4 Tie

Demers, Matte Lead Valleyfield in Saturday's Contest at Boston—Former Sustains Injuries In Second Game of Series

Boston Olympics used good goal-tending by Tom Moon over the week-end to defeat Valleyfield Braves 2-0 in the second Provincial Senior Hockey League encounter of the week-end between the two teams at Boston, Mass. The Braves and Olympics played to a 4-4 overtime draw Saturday night.

While Moon turned every shot aside to give the Olympics their first shutout of the season, the veteran Frankie Spain and Bud Foster scored for the home team in the second period. Spain notched his unassisted in the first minute while Foster tallied in the last minute of the session on assists from Paul Guibord and Cliff Thompson.

The Braves, champions of the P.S.H.L. last season, suffered a severe setback midway through the second period when Tony Demers, their ace right wingman, crashed into the boards and saw no more action. It was believed that Demers might be lost to the team for several days.

Demers paced the Braves in the Saturday contest before 7,131 cash customers with two goals and an assist. The teams split four goals in the first period, with Demers and Henri Matte scoring for Valleyfield and Thompson and Guibord tallying for the Olympics.

Demers and Johnny Huguet sent the Braves into a 4-2 lead in the second period but Nick Lewis cut the margin with a score in the same session and Bob Jeremiah tied it up in the last period.

Ray Mullins, Valleyfield defenceman, was unable to make the trip as he was playing football for Westmounts in Montreal. Another Valleyfield absentee was Johnny Rivest.

"What Do You Mean?"

Demanded Mr. Picobac

● "The time has come for a change", said Mr. John R. Lucas, independent candidate for Essex Centre. "I've been smoking it long enough?"

"What do you mean, change?" demanded Mr. Picobac. "Do you know any other tobacco with a flavour and a fragrance better than Picobac? Don't you know that Picobac is the pick of Canada's Burley crop, matured for three years in the wood?"

"Picobac's my idea of a mild . . . cool . . . sweet smoke", said Mr. Lucas.

"Then what are you talking about?" demanded Mr. Picobac.

"My pipe", said Mr. Lucas. "I'm going to give my old pipe a rest. No fear, I wouldn't change from Picobac for love or money."

"It DOES taste good in a pipe!"

The turkey is the king of birds in the poultry world. The principal course in the first notable festal meal of the Pilgrim Fathers over 300 years ago was turkey. Since then epicures everywhere have glorified the turkey and it has taken a conspicuous place on all occasions for special celebrations.

Obituary

The late Robert English

The friends and neighbors of the late Robert English were saddened to hear of his death which occurred at his late home near Tatehurst, on the 22nd inst., after an illness of two weeks, being tenderly cared for by his wife and other members of his family.

He was a son of the late Robert English and Frances Fulton and was born at Barrington, Que., on March 12th, 1856, being the last surviving member of a family of ten children.

At the early age of fifteen years he went to Montreal, where he secured work with a cabinet maker for four years. Then he went to California where he spent several years.

On returning to his old home at Barrington, he was united in marriage with Matilda C. Robinson, who survives her late husband, and to this union six sons were born, all of whom are living, William on the homestead, Lower Ormstown Concession, Robert Fulton and John B. of Great Falls, Montana, Allan K., of Ormstown, Reay Robinson of Stanford, Montana and James Neil of Great Falls, Montana, all of whom were present at his death and burial.

Forty years ago last June, Mr. and Mrs. English moved from their farm at Barrington to Ormstown and purchased the farm then known as the Cook homestead on Lower Ormstown Concession, where they have lived since, and enjoyed prosperity as the fruit of their labors.

To few it is accorded the privilege of having lived together for fifty-three years of married life, which was their privilege on March 23rd, 1939, and in the passing of these years, they had their trials as well as their joys, living to see their family of six sons reach manhood.

Besides his widow and six sons there are fourteen grandchildren and one great-grandchild to mourn his loss.

The pall-bearers were six nephews.

The funeral was held from his late residence on Friday afternoon to St. James Anglican Church of Ormstown, of which he was a member, and was largely attended by relatives and friends of the deceased. Interment followed in the family plot of the Anglican cemetery.

Floral tributes were received from members of the family and the Montana Light, Heat and Power Company.

Those attending from a distance were Mr. Fred Lauder and son and Mr. Frank Parsons of Haverhill, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. Walter English of St. Albans, Vermont; Mrs. Bateman, Mrs. Mitchell and Mrs. McQuestion of Montreal; Mrs. Harper and Mrs. Brownlee and daughter of Valleyfield; Messrs. William Johnston, Theodore Jackson and son, Hugh McAdam, Jr., Ernest Moore and Robert Campbell, all of Hemmingford; Mr. and Mrs. Roy Wright of Ellenburgh Depot, N.Y.; and Mr. William Wright and Miss Marion Wright of St. Lambert.

Autumn Thankoffering Meeting Of St. Paul's United W.M.S.

The devotional exercises were taken by Mrs. C. Leslie Taylor, the hymn, "For the beauty of the earth", was sung, followed by a Thanksgiving psalm, "Bless the Lord, O My Soul". A missionary story was then told, and the hymn, "Take my life and let it be", was sung after which Miss Bazin gave the prayer.

The denominations and donations are growing steadily.

Poll of Motorists Show Road Hogs as Leading Menace Here

Road-hogging is Pet Peeve of Average Motorist With Careless Pedestrian in Second Place—Back-seat Drivers Rank in Seventh Place—Other Grievances

Road-hogging is the pet peeve of the average motorist, according to a compilation of answers just completed on a questionnaire conducted by the American Automobile Association over a broad cross-section of citizens. A copy of the report was received in Montreal over the week-end at offices of the Royal Automobile Club of Canada.

Careless pedestrians represented the second major complaint of drivers, while cutting-in was third in the list of grievances. No place to park was the fourth greatest annoyance, while the fifth was failure to signal.

Other objectionable factors listed were: 6, inadequate direction signs; 7, back-seat driving; 8, slow-moving trucks; 9, roadside billboards; 10, winding roads.

On the same questionnaire the following was also asked: "Which one condition requires first attention? The greatest number of individuals voted for improving driving practices, while parking problems was a close second, with the building of divided highways receiving third place.

"This questionnaire," observed G. A. McNamee, manager of the Royal Automobile Club of Canada in Montreal, "was answered by over 10,000 individuals. It was conducted in the United States, but I believe that the motorist in Canada, if asked for his opinions on the same questions, would follow along the same lines. It shows that what the motorist is looking for today is not only good roads, but expedition in traffic and greater safety, with emphasis on the latter.

"A better-trained driver would seem to be the common desire. More strict supervision might bring about this objective, both at the time a driving licence is issued and thereafter. Tests of some kind perhaps would assure more competent drivers for the thoroughfares."

Overwhelming majorities voted in the affirmative on the following questions: Do you favor traffic safety education, including at-the-wheel training, in high schools? Should all gasoline taxes and registration fees be used for highway purposes? Should parking facilities be a part of all newly-constructed office and apartment buildings? Should pedestrians be compelled to obey stop and go signals?

On the latter subject, it is pointed out that some experimentation along this line has been carried on for years, but it has not been adopted universally by any means.

At the recent National Safety Congress held in Atlantic City, the manager of the Ontario Safety Council, Toronto, said that such an enforcement program had been tried there, but was abandoned due to lack of popular support. A similar report was received from Denver, Col., the latter adding that the attempt to control pedestrians was abandoned after a short probation "due to the lack of manpower on the police force."

Most motorists favored the idea of having highway patrol cars conspicuously marked. This is a question that has been debated for a long time, the essence of the issue being whether the primary objective of highway patrol should be the arrest of violators or the prevention of violations.

GIVE THE GLEANER

Into the Sunset

by JACKSON GREGORY

Lucy, noting it for the first time, said, "Why, it's the loveliest saddle I've ever saw! Whose is it, Andrew?"

"Belongs to a stranger," said Andrew. "The Judge mebbe knows him. He came in late las' night, changed saddles account the cinch o' this one bein' ready to bust; role on. Said he'd be back tonight."

"A man ought to have a pretty fine horse to match up that saddle," suggested Barry.

"Let's go see it," invited Lucy. "Is it in the corral, Andrew?"

"It must be that one," said Lucy pointing. "That high-headed black with the white saddle marks. It's not one of ours, I'm sure."

Barry didn't say anything. Lucy was right. That was Tex Humphreys' pride among his saddle horses. That was the horse which, only a few days ago, had carried Robert Haveril to his death.

The Judge had a scrap of paper in his hand. He waved it toward Barry, saying as he came on: "I'm sorry you won't be able to see your sister today, young Haveril. There was a note on my study table, sent over by Zachary Blount; he went to Pride's Valley this morning on a bit of business for me, something that looked funny about the deed to a new ranch I just bought. He took his wife along. But they'll be back to-morrow or next day."

Barry was looking at the horse again.

"You're looking at some high-class horse flesh there, Haveril," said the Judge.

Barry nodded. He wanted to ask about that high-headed black, but hesitated. Blind instinct, subtle intuition—he didn't know what—made him move as cautiously as all his true kindred, forest wild things moved.

Lucy asked "Who's the stranger, Daddy, that owns that one? He's got the most gorgeous saddle I ever saw."

The Judge looked the horses over. "That black?" he said. "Oh, yes. It belongs to a young cowboy who rode in late last night. He had to go on and asked to leave his horse here until he came back. Where'd you see his saddle?" he asked.

"Andrew was fixing the cinch. It's a fancy Mexican saddle, and Andrew gave all the silver work a polish; it hurts your eyes to look at it."

"Let's go to the house," said the Judge. "It's most supper time."

But it was not supper time, and they loafed comfortably on the shady front porch looking down over Tylersville.

"How far is it out to the ranch where my folks are?" Barry asked without withdrawing his expressionless gaze from the melting distances.

"It's inside thirty miles," said the Judge. "That little span of mine will do it in less than three hours. We start right after supper."

But they did not go right after supper, nor did they go at all. The three were dining at a long table that would have seated a score when a man rode up from Tylersville for word with Judge Blue. The Judge went out to him, and returned almost immediately. "I've got to see a man in town," he said. "Go ahead with supper; I'll finish when I get back. I ought to be with you in half an hour."

After an hour of waiting Barry was more the sniffing bear than ever. Lucy had conducted him to a pleasant room where there were books and a piano and sofa and easychairs, and at first had chattered like a magpie. She had sung for him a little, too, and at first he had listened enrapt and had looked at her admiringly, thinking her the daintiest and sweetest and cleverest little thing in the world.

When the Judge's voice said, "Sorry I'm so late," both of them jumped for they had not heard him come in. He tossed his hat to the piano top and looked at his watch. "We'll go first thing in the morning. All right, young Haveril?"

Ten minutes later Barry was alone in his room. He extinguished his lamp and went to his window; he stood there a long while looking out at the dim bulk of the mountain under the stars.

Something was wrong and he knew it. It was no longer a mere uneasy suspicion but a positive certainty. "I reckon no one will hear me now," decided Barry, and crawled out through the window, dropping noiselessly to the ground.

He stepped softly through the dark, making a guarded circle of the house to assure himself that the rooms were all dark. He reached the stable. Near the big double doors was a bench under a tree. He sat down and waited. He slid his hand down to the butt of the new six-gun; he dozed, started wide awake and dozed again a dozen times before the soft beat of shod hoofs stiffened him into alertness.

He saw the dark form of man and horse coming on from beyond the stable, a single silhouette dim against the mountain flank.

The rider came down with a subdued jingle of spurs at the stable door; he was whistling softly and didn't turn Barry's way. When he got the door open and led the horse inside, Barry rose quietly and followed.

When the lantern at the harness room door was lighted and swung up on a nail Barry saw that it was Jesse Conroy.

"Hello, Cousin Jesse," he said in a quiet voice.

CHAPTER 4

Jesse Conroy whirled, as swift as a cat, and crouched and whipped out the gun riding loosely in its holster.

"Oh, it's you, Sundown!" said Jesse. His hand was lowered. There was an irritable edge to his voice: "Yuh made me jump purty near out'n my boots, Cousin Barry. Y'want to look out, scarin' folks like that, less'one starts shootin' before he thinks."

"Why should you start shooting, Cousin Jesse?" asked Barry.

Jesse laughed and at last slipped his gun back into its place.

"Want to sell that black horse you left here last night, Cousin Jesse?"

"What's come over yuh? I thought yuh didn't go in for hosses yuhse'f. likin' them long laigs better.

"That's a real nice horse," said Barry.

"What's on yore mind, Cousin Barry?" said Jesse, and again his voice was edged.

"That saddle, too," said Barry. "I was looking at it this evening. The fancy Mexico one. Where'd you happen to get that saddle, Cousin Jesse?"

Jesse answered in an off-hand way, "That saddle? It's one I picked up down to Laredo one time. Why?"

"When?" asked Barry. "You been down to Laredo since I saw you? It's quite a ways from here."

Jesse's answer hung fire scarcely a noticeable instant. "It's one o' my ol' saddles; I've had it two-three years."

"You lie, Cousin Jesse," said Barry steadily, and pulled his six-gun out of its holster. "That was Tex Humphreys' saddle; so was that black Tex's; and you killed my brother Robert to get them both. Killed him like a dog just for a horse and saddle. Now, if you think you've got any more killing to do—"

A man standing close behind Barry brought a Colt revolver down brutally on Barry's head, and the boy slumped down.

A commanding voice said: "Pocket your gun, Laredo! And put out that damned light. Quick about it!"

"I'm damned!" muttered Jesse Conroy. Slowly he obeyed both orders. Then through the sudden dark his voice came quietly, "What's the game this time, Judge?"

"So you killed young Haveril's brother, did you? Just for a horse and saddle!"

"Yuh're a fine one to talk," sneered Jesse. "Well, I'm not sayin' whether I killed young Haveril's brother or not, but I'd shore shot young Haveril daid if yuh hadn't knocked him out the minute yuh did."

"No," said the Judge. "No. You hear me, Laredo? I've got plans of my own for him."

"Yes?" said Jesse, and sounded frankly mystified. "Want to make me laugh? Judge Blue wastin' time over this kind? What in hell's he got that I overlooked?" He ended peeringly. "He ain't a prince in disguise or somethin,' is he?"

"Some day, Laredo," said the Judge more quietly, yet in just as deadly and cold a voice, "we'll maybe cut loose and kill each other. Now if you'll keep your shirt on I'll tell you about this young Haveril. He blew into town today with a fist full of gold with the dirt still sticking to it. And it's my pressing affair to find out where he got it."

Jesse whistled softly. "An' I might have killed him before yuh found out!" Then, eager and alert, he added, "But Judge, he'll be lookin' up his folks, across to yore new ranch; an' he'll be tellin' the crowd all he knows—"

"He won't be seeing anybody but me for a while," said the Judge. "I'm keeping him shut away. In the morning, if he's feeling like traveling, I'll put him on a horse, tell him we're headed for the ranch, and hand him over to you. And you will be over at the shack in Encina Canon. You and I will work this together, Kid. And when we've won it. I'm paying you off, and you're handing back to me what's mine—and after that if we ever meet up again—Well, fill your hand, Kid, that's all."

Jesse laughed tauntingly. "There's one more thing, Judge," he said. "I got a good look at the girl the other day. When I hand yuh back what's yore'n, yuh're goin' to hand me the girl along with the res' o' my pay. I got a hankerin'—Judge, I'd marry her even!"

For a while it was very still there at the stable. After a while the Judge drew a long breath. He said in a voice which was not quite so steady: "You're getting a swell-head, Laredo. It's a disease that's sometimes fatal. Better slow down."

But the Laredo Kid, reckless and arrogant young devil, mocked him drawlingly.

"Better be on your way, Laredo. And if you are not just trying to be funny—Marry her? Well, we'll see later. Tomorrow evening early I'll be at Encina Canion, and young Haveril will be with me. We'll talk. And one thing more: better get rid of that horse and saddle tonight."

"I'm on my way in two shakes," returned the other. "Drag your man off and shut the door so's I can have a light. Mebbe yuh'd better shine a light on him now to make shore whether he ain't playin' possum."

"I've had a hand on him all the time," said the Judge. "He's out cold. Get going, Kid. Adios."

Barry regained consciousness lying fully dressed on the bed which earlier he had been adverse to mussing. There was a cold wet towel on his head and the Judge stood over him.

"Well, young Haveril," he said. "Alive, are you?"

"What happened?" said Barry, confused.

"I got up for a drink of water," said the Judge, "and thought I saw someone prowling outside under my window. I went out to see about it and was just in time, to see you standing in the stable door talking to somebody; and just when it looked like shooting, some other fellow jumped up behind you and knocked you out cold with a club. Then they were off like a shot, the two of them. What was it all about?"

Is Your Receipt Amongst Them?

One of the biggest seizures of official receipts of Irish Hospital Sweepstake tickets made in this section of the Province was made on Sunday evening at Franklin Centre. Receipts of tickets to the value of approximately $300,000 were seized when the car in which they were packed tried to escape from customs officials but crashed into a tree. The driver took to the bush. Customs Officer Ross Fraser is shown with the confiscated receipts stored in the basement of the Huntingdon Post Office. The wrecked car is at present at C. J. Kyle's garage, Huntingdon.

staff. It is a great pity and I don't know what can be done about it.

Free lance work is in a very tough spot in Canada. Magazines are planned a long way ahead. I know in our own and others they pretty well depend on a certain person they know who writes well to do a feature article, and he has to be ready to do it. For the Saturday Evening Post an article will be written and re-written many times.

In submitting a fiction story and you didn't want to part with full rights how would a writer go about it? How often can the same story be sold?

Miss Lawrence said she would advise a statement you are only selling Canadian rights. If a publisher receives an inquiry from another country he always refers it to the author in any case.

Mrs. Achibald stated she knew of a woman who writes for Snappy Stories and other American publications of the pulp variety receiving as much as $1,500 for a novelette. But for a Canadian publication she would only get about $75.00. She said she couldn't afford to write for Canadian publishers!

Miss Lawrence agreed that it was very difficult for a free lance to live in Canada.

Mrs. M. W. Hackett remarked that there was a great dearth of humor in our magazines. Miss Lawrence agreed that it was the rarest thing in the world to have one submitted. A writer who can do humorous stories can sell anywhere.

Miss Lawrence, who is literary editor of Canadian Home Journal wore a grey-green woollen suit with matching satin blouse, and beautiful orchids. In the afternoon she addressed the Montreal Women's Club on "New World Thinking." In introducing the guest, Mrs. Richmond Smith referred to the famous book written by Miss Lawrence, "The School of Femininity." In thanking her, Miss Ethel Johns, who is Editor of Canadian Nurse, quoted a favorite passage from the same book. She remarked that what we had just listened to was in her profession called a bedside clinic.

Mrs. A. H. Barker, President of Montreal Branch, C.W.P.C. presided at the dinner. Included in those present were Mrs. Martin J. Wolff, Secretary, Miss Gertrude White, Miss D. M. Luke, Miss Marion Stewae, whose book "The Awakening Signal," is soon to be published in New York, Mrs. B. Hammond, Mrs. Newman, Mrs. H. Murphy, Montreal Herald, Miss Holland, Mrs. Templeman, Miss Barrie, Mrs. W. L. Carr, Huntingdon. Two new members were welcomed, Miss Hilda Turner, Editor of Seignory Magazine, and Miss Mamie Dunn of The Montrealer. The sum of $10.00 was voted to the Red Cross.

Valleyfield

Miss Ellen Hagan spent a few days of last week visiting Mr. and Mrs. Morris Hagan in Massena, N.Y.

Mrs. George Albiston of Montreal has returned home after spending some time visiting with Mr. and Mrs. Christopher Mayoh.

Mrs. Walter Colquhoun and son, Ian spent the past week-end in Montreal visiting relatives.

Miss Vivian Lowe of Montreal was a week-end guest of Miss Eleanor Mayoh.

Master Kenneth Grundy of Montreal was a recent visitor at the home of Mrs. James A. Robb.

A 3 act play called "The Three Pegs" was ably presented by the Valleyfield Girl Guides in the United Church Hall, Friday night, Nov. 24th. There was a good attendance. Proceeds amounted to about $35.

WEEK AT OTTAWA

will be needed. Airports are not simply flat fields altnough absence of hills is an important factor. There must be grading and drainage. The runways must be firm enough to withstand the impact of planes coming to rest at high rates of speed. In addition there is the essential equipment to be installed, revolving searchlights, floodlights, and colored lights marking airport boundaries. It is quite evident that air training fields will not be established very close to large centres of population. Danger of accidents is to be avoided. During instruction a large number of planes will be in the air at the same time. The work of constructing the airports, not only the groundwork but barracks, hangars, etc., will continue throughout the winter so that spring will see the project in full career. In regard to the preliminary arrangements, the Missions at Ottawa have worked in the most cordial cooperation. Practically nothing but formalities remain to make arrangements complete. It is understood that the plan for an equitable distribution of the costs among the participating countries, the United Kingdom, Australia, New Zealand and Canada has been virtually agreed upon.

Orders for Aircraft

It is further practically certain that large orders for the manufacture of aircraft will be placed immediately with Canadian companies. Not only the companies cooperating in the Canadian Associated Aircraft Ltd., but the whole of the aircraft manufacturing industry of Canada has been steadily expanding its plant during the past two years. Particularly marked has been the growth during the past year, so that these companies are now in a position to turn out large numbers of modern aircraft. Large orders for training planes, it has already been reported, are being placed in the United States, and it is believed these training craft manufactured both in Canada and the United States, will be an important part of the British contribution to the cost of the air training project. The nature of the craft to be ordered in Canada is not known, but it is certain that Canada's part in the air services not only in air training, and in the Canadian personnel engaged, but in the manufactures of planes will steadily expand. It will be recalled that about two years ago, when Sir Francis Floud was High Commissioner at Ottawa, experimental orders for aircraft were placed with Canadian companies, and with this start as well as orders placed by the Department of National Defence for the R.C.A.F., the aircraft industry in Canada has blossomed into a new life.

Canada's Active Service Force

During the past week General McNaughton, who has made an inspection of Canada's Active Service Force, has given assurance that Canada's citizen army, mobilized to play its part in the fight against Hitlerism and the forces of aggression, is being welded into an efficient military force. He was impressed in his tour with the fine type of men who have enlisted and with their seriousness. "The men have enlisted" the General said, "as a contribution to a great ethical cause, because of the threat to democracy by the totalitarian states which have erupted in Europe". The Minister of National Defence, Mr. Rogers, jointly interviewed with the military commander, said, "equipment of the First Division is moving steadily forward. "The Picture we now have", he added "is reassuring in every respect". Mechanization of the units, partially arranged in Canada, will be completed in Britain.

Effects of War Seen on Agriculture

Dr. E. S. Archibald, Director, Dominion Experimental Farms and a member of the Agricultural Supplies Committee in an address to the members of the Rotary Club of Ottawa, entitled "Effects of War Upon Canadian Agriculture", gave an outline of some of the effects the Great War of 1914-18 had upon the basic industry of the Dominion and the opportunity in the present war to profit by the mistakes that were made during that period.

He explained that while it is now the duty of all Canadian farmers to produce products most required for the Allies and the Canadian market, quality should be the dominating consideration. Care must constantly be observed to see that soils are not depleted, that markets are not glutted, that buying power is not diminished, so that at the end of the war agriculture will be so established, that Canadian products will have an enviable place on the world's markets because of their quality; also that a continuity of supply will be assured. If these things are borne in mind agriculture can serve Canada and the Allies better in this war than the last, and will also be in a position to serve the Dominion better when peace comes.

Conditions in the last war were vastly different, so far as agriculture was concerned, from what they are in this one. There were no huge supplies of foodstuffs in 1914 and practically anything could be sold. Production was over stimulated and quality was neglected. Canada went into the war with a fair reputation for her bacon and at the end of the conflict the reputation for this product was low. Soils were abused; lands were opened to settlement that should not have been. When the drought came in 1930 and continued for several years the fibreless soils were easily blown away by high winds and the problem of Prairie Farm Rehabilitation was accentuated.

When war broke out last September, farm buying power in Canada was low, and agriculture was not in a happy position. Great Britain is well organized to buy foodstuffs and has declared that she will give preference in her buying of certain products, but as yet it is not known just what these products will be, nor in what volume they will be required, except that Canadian bacon and Canadian cheese will be necessary in substantial quantities. When it is known just what products the needs of the war will demand, farmers in Canada should be prepared to supply them. There are opportunities in suitable areas for increased flax production, also for soybeans, to mention only two. As a result of experiments and research work done by the Dominion Experimental Farms, the Ontario Agricultural College and other agencies, varieties of soybeans suitable to different parts of Canada can now be produced in large quantities.

Dr. Archibald explained that there is a wide range of uses for soybeans in industry apart from their value as feed for livestock. In whatever direction the efforts of the farmers of Canada may be directed to help in the war, it should be linked with a program that has for its object better agriculture on a basis that will require little, if any, readjustment when peace comes.

Social Prestige Of Pig To Fore

was in the 55 to 65 lb. range for Wiltshire sides — the most desired weights and which return the top price. Of the remainder 9.01 per cent were in the too light class and 7.99 per cent were too heavy.

In the third range of grading—weights of sides—66.4 per cent came within 55 to 65 lb., 20.4 per cent were heavy and 13.2 per cent were light.

Briefly this analysis shows that only 35.72 per cent of the total of Wiltshire sides combine all the desired essentials of proper type and conformation, proper finish and proper weight. Where much needed improvement is required is in finish and weight.

"OFF-SET" DISC

Experiments commenced by the Dominion Field Husbandry Division at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, in 1934 to secure information on the value of various types of ploughs have been expanded to include tests of the "off-set" type of disc. This implement is essentially a double one-way disc. The results of these experiments to date indicate that there is little difference in the draft of mould-board and disc plows under ordinary conditions. Under dry and hard conditions, the disc plough has required slightly less draft. The draft of the one-way disc has been found to be considerably less than the ordinary plough, as is the case with the "off-set" disc. Present indications are that the yields of crop following the mouldboard plough on sod land are slightly superior to those following the disc plough. The one-way disc has not proven satisfactory for sod land. As yet, no yield data are available for the "off-set" disc, but it would appear considerably more effective on sod land than the one-way disc, and has been operated very satisfactorily in the cultivation of stubble land.

There is no kind of poultry meat more delicious than turkey. It is rapidly growing in popular favour for its economy, fine flavour and tender eating qualities.

Athelstan Is The Winner

Piano duets by Mrs. N. W. Sparrow and Miss Davis, violin selections by Mr. Emmett Duheme accompanied by Mrs. Reese were rendered during the evening and were much enjoyed. Over $27.00 was taken in at the door while about $9. was realized by the Mission Circle who served a Cafeteria lunch in the dining room of the hall. Rev. J. H. Woodside acted as Chairman and Mrs. Boyce heartily thanked all who helped make this entertainment such a success.

Nothing has been more remarkable in the realm of meats during the past few years than the spectacular rise of the turkey. A few years ago the turkey was a strictly seasonal bird, to be thought of only at Thanksgiving and Christmas; turkeys are now eaten all year round. Prices are within popular reach, but the quality, too, has greatly improved.
