

ARREST BERTRAND; NO BAIL

POLICE NAB EX-SECRETARY IN BEAUDRY CASE

Henri Bertrand, out on bail of $3,000 as a material witness in the Beaudry murder case, was arrested last night on a warrant issued by Coroner McMahon and is held in the cells at detective headquarters.

Members of the detective force applied to Coroner McMahon at 7 o'clock last night and were granted a warrant permitting them to take the ex-secretary of the murdered publisher into police custody on suspicion.

Subsequently Captain Mercier and Detectives Pelletier, E. Belanger, Gauthier and La-joie found Bertrand at his home and brought him in to detective headquarters, where he was lodged in the cells. He spent the night in custody. His bail of $3,000 is cancelled.

SECOND WOMAN TO SWIM ENGLISH CHANNEL:—Mlle. Gade, mother of the two children with her above, is the second of her sex to conquer the fierce waters of the Channel. Her feat raises a question as to which is the weaker sex. While she was battling the waves, her husband was muffled in wrappers suffering from a cold. Following close behind her was Frank Perks, of Birmingham, England, who gave up the fight within sight of shore. Mlle. Gade, Mrs. Clementine Corson in private life, is Danish by birth but married to an American. She is 27 years of age.

SENSATIONAL REVELATIONS BY N. Y. GANGSTER

SQUEALER TELLS OF TWO MURDERS IN METROPOLIS

New York, Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch)—Benjamin Mintz, who was arrested last Monday night with a bullet in his arm, and for several days resisted efforts of police to make him talk, finally broke down and made a full confession.

He told of the "Brownsville Gorillas," a gang of gunmen, jewel thieves and auto robbers for whom he was the chauffeur. By the time he had finished, the police had learned who murdered Aaron Rodack, "the fighting jeweller," and Patrolman Frank J. Murphy.

Several members of the gang have already been arrested and the police are on the trail of others.

HUBBY HAS RIGHT TO ONE NIGHT OFF TO SEE THE GANG

Camden, N. J., Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch) — O Men! Also Min! "Every husband is entitled to one night off a week, provided he behaves himself and associates only with 'The Boys,' ruled Judge Sham in Criminal Court.

He acquitted a husband, whose wife charged with desertion.

Alvin Lynch, 30, of Philadelphia, the husband, said his wife nagged him and accused him of going out with other women.

In his denial Lynch said he went out seldom and then only with male companions.

MOTORIST ASKED TO WIRE FATHER

FARMER FOUND DEAD

Sarnia, Ont., Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch) — Robert McArthur, age 84, a farmer, was found lying near the road near Newbury. After examining the body it was found that he had a fractured skull. Death had occurred two hours previous to the finding of the body.

It is not known whether the aged farmer was attacked, or struck by an automobile.

TIGER TO REMAIN SILENT ON MATTER OF FRENCH DEBTS

Paris, Aug. 30. — (Daily World Cable) — Clemenceau, war-time premier of France, said today that he would not address another letter regarding war debts to President Coolidge. A newspaper interview here had intimated that the "Tiger" might repeat his action of several weeks ago when he emerged from retirement to plead for France.

Clemenceau believes his letter has made ratification of the Franco-American debt funding agreement impossible.

COMMANDER OF CANADIAN ARMY IN NOVA SCOTIA

Amherst, N. S., Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch) — General Sir Arthur Currie, principal of McGill University, accompanied by Lady Currie, arrived in Amherst Saturday evening and inspected the guard of honor drawn up under the command of Lieut.-Col. I. E. C. Spicer. He inspected the soldiers and the members of the Halifax Rifles' band and congratulated them upon their appearance. Later a parade was formed.

General Arthur Currie and Major General Thacker, C.M.G., D.S.O., were escorted to the exhibition dining room where a re-union banquet was held by the ex-service men, presided over by Capt. Ross Miller M.D., of Amherst. Three hundred ex-service men were present.

New York, Aug. 30. — (Universal Service) — Requiem high mass was said at St. Malachy's Church here today for Duddolph Valentino. Police held thousands of people back while the cortege passed down Broadway. There was no disorder, the crowd appearing respectful.

HARRY NICHOLLS KILLED IN FALL FROM FAST TRAIN

London, Ont., Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch) — The body of the late Harry B. Nicholls of Montreal, vice-president and general manager of the Barrett Co. of Canada, who met death on the C.N.R. tracks near here, was shipped to St. Louis, Mo., for burial. It is believed that Mr. Nicholls got off the train here and lingered too long and when the train pulled out clutched the handrail of the moving car after the doors had been closed. It is suspected he hung on in that way until he became exhausted and fell off after riding about two miles and was killed.

MELLON TO CALL UPON POINCARE

Paris, Aug. 30. — (Universal Service) — Secretary of the Treasury Mellon arrived here today. He has an engagement to confer with Poincare tomorrow, but insists that his call is merely a matter of courtesy. It is understood, however, that he will make it clear that individuals in the United States now publicly urging debt cancellation in no way represent the Coolidge administration.

BANDIT SLAIN IN ATTEMPT TO STEAL CAR BARN TAKINGS

Chicago, Aug. 31. — (Daily World Dispatch) — One bandit was killed, his confederate will die, and three policemen and a company official were wounded when three masked men were met by a fusillade of more than 100 shots from ambushed officers when they attempted to rob the cashier of a Chicago surface street-car barn of $6,000.

ROMAN PRIESTS MUST OBEY RULE OF MEXICAN HEAD

Mexico City, Aug. 30. — (Universal Service) — The real threat against the church involved in Calles' policy of restriction was seen in Catholic quarters today with the receipt from Guadalajara of a decree issued by the governor of the state of Jalisco, providing for the distribution of priests and close government supervision.

The decree also carries penalties for the violation of any of the clauses covering registration and reports and necessitates the elimination of surplus priests. One provision authorizes the governor to select priests if the committees in charge of the churches fail to do so within a specified time.

COUNT DECLARED TO BE INSANE

Berlin, Aug. 30. — (Universal Service) — Count Emerich Schonburg Degenfeldt, relative of the Hapsburgs, who squandered his fortune in the night resorts of European capitals and New York, has just been declared hopelessly insane and confined to an asylum.

HUNDRED YARDS SEPARATED SHIPS IN CLOSE SHAVE

New York, Aug. 30. — (Universal Service) — A sea disaster was narrowly avoided when the Cunard liner Samaria, under the British flag, was reported to have "cut across" the port bow of the U.S. liner, American Merchant. It was learned today. The lives of several thousands of passengers and members of the two crews were endangered when the ships missed collision by 100 yards.

Capt. E. F. Mitchell of the American Merchant today charged the British skipper, Capt. S. G. S. McNeil, with recklessness. It is expected the matter will be thrashed out before shipping authorities.

MUCH FEELING IN CAPITAL OVER STAMPS' DELAY

Ottawa, Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch) — The cancellation by Hon. Dr. Manion, postmaster-general, of the issue of historic stamps conceived by the former postmaster-general, Hon. Charles Murphy, has created considerable comment. It was the idea of the former postmaster-general to portray Canadian history by means of postage stamps, bearing on their face the features of eminent men in the life of the dominion.

In pursuance of that idea arrangements were made last year for the issue of three historic stamps, on one of which there were to appear the portraits of Baldwin and Lafontaine, on another of which were to appear the portraits of Sir John A. Macdonald and Sir Wilfrid Laurier, and on the third of which was to appear the portrait of D'Arcy McGee.

Enquiries were made as to the reason for the delay in issue, and Sir Henry Drayton, acting prime minister without portfolio, furnished official information which was as follows:—

"Some reasons why the government has held up the projected issue of historic postage stamps were officially indicated. There have been a number of complaints. One is that Sir Wilfrid Laurier is linked with Sir John A. Macdonald on one of the stamps. It is argued that Sir John's confederate was not Laurier, but Sir. George Etienne Cartier. Some objection has also been made against the late D'Arcy McGee being on the stamp by himself. The whole proposal has been held up for further consideration, but the assurance has been given that, if the issue is ever proceeded with, Cartier will be included."

TORONTO YOUTH FOUND HANGING FROM GAS JET

Toronto, Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch) — Mystery surrounds the motive behind the tragic death of Sidney Seligman, aged 13, of 910 Bloor Street West. The lad was found hanging by a piece of rope from a gas jet in his bedroom by his mother, Annie Seligman.

The boy was apparently in his usual health when he retired to bed about 10 o'clock. Arrived upstairs, he laid his cadet uniform out on the foot of the bed, in readiness for the opening parade at the Exhibition. Besides the uniform were several paper-backed novels of the detective-story type.

NEW BRUNSWICK CATHOLIC BISHOP DIED 75 YRS. AGO

Saint John, N. B., Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch) — Sunday was the 75th anniversary of the death of the Rt. Rev. William Dollard, D.D., the first bishop of the Catholic Church in New Brunswick, which took place Aug. 29, 1851. He was the pastor of St. Dunstan's Church, Fredericton, when he was nominated the Ordinary of the Diocese by His Holiness Pius VIII. A few years after his consecration in 1843, he removed the See of the Diocese to Saint John, and since about 1846 it has been a cathedral city. His Lordship was in his 63rd year.

PERODEAU URGES DOMINION UNITY

Toronto, Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch) — Bon entente throughout Canada between French-speaking and English-speaking Canadians and between provinces, was stressed today by Lieutenant-Governor Narcisse Perodeau, of Quebec, speaking at a luncheon of directors of the Canadian National Exhibition. He said that inter-provincial relations were not a matter for politics.

FORMER GOALER KILLED BY TRAIN

Quebec, Aug. 30. — (By Staff Correspondent) — Rene Fortin, who occupied a prominent place in hockey circles of the Province two seasons ago, was killed at Fitzpatrick by a C.N.R. train today. The accident occurred while Fortin, who was a brakeman, was engaged in coupling cars. He fell beneath the wheels and was instantly killed.

He was a goaler of note, having guarded the nets for La Touque, Sarsfield, Quebec, C.N.R. and other teams.

WOMEN CLAIM MIRACULOUS CURES

Quebec, Aug. 30. — (By Staff Correspondent) — This year so far has made a record for cures at the Shrine of Ste. Anne de Beaupre, and two more were added to the already long list last week, when an Albany woman and another visitor from St. Coeur de Marie, Megantic County, said they were cured of their ailments. Mrs. Catherine Dunn, of Albany who had been afflicted with spinal trouble, and in consequence unable to walk for years, left her crutches at the Shrine after a pilgrimage, while the Megantic woman recovered the use of her legs.

REPORT BERLINS TO HAVE SECOND WEDDING SOON

New York, Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch) — Reports along Broadway said that Irving Berlin and the former Ellen Mackay will be remarried in St. Patrick's cathedral upon their return to New York. "We have heard of no such plan," said a clergyman at St. Patrick's.

"Absurd and absolutely without foundation," said Max S. Winslow, Berlin's manager. The Berlins have been his guests since their arrival from Europe, recently.

Yet there persists a possibility of the ceremony. Berlin has done many things to appease the wrath of his father-in-law, Clarence H. Mackay.

VICTIM OF ACID GETS NEW FACE TO FREE SPOUSE

Chicago, Aug. 30. — The most delicate of plastic surgery operations was performed on the face of Darby Day, Jr., 23-year-old millionaire and if successful may lead to the liberation from prison of Mrs. Bernice L. Day, his "acid throwing" wife.

Dr. Henry J. Schierson, famous plastic surgeon, grafted a new layer of skin on the face of Day and the stitches will be removed—possibly removing all traces of the ugly scars caused by acid thrown by his young wife, in a fit of rage.

BOYS TOO FRISKY SO MAIDEN OF 21 TO WED OLD MAN

Boston, Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch) — "Get them young" is the slogan which prompted William Townner, 71 years old, a former California prospector, to take upon himself a maiden of 21 years of age, "for better or for worse."

Miss Elva E. Call, is the happy bride-to-be, and is a real girl with that school girl complexion, so states William. Miss Call loves home life, and claims the young men of today are too frisky.

BOSTON TOO HAS MOTOR PROBLEM

Boston, Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch) — Fourteen persons, seven adults and seven children, were killed by autos last week. This is one more than the week before but five less than in the same period last year.

Persons convicted of operating while under the influence of liquor numbered 105 or 15 more than in the previous week. Eight were committed to jail, all from the lower courts. Three were convicted for a second time within six years.

POISON IN SOUP BELIEVED FATAL TO YOUNG BABY

Hamilton, Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch) — Investigation will be made into the cause of the death of 18 month's old Peter Putnick and the illness of his mother, brother and sister.

Some time previous to their taking ill the family had eaten soup made by the mother, and it is believed that in some way this became poisoned. Those ill will recover, it is stated although for some time doubt was expressed that the life of Steve, aged 3, would be saved.

EX-NEWFOUNDLAND PREMIER IS DEAD

St. John's, Nfld., Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch) — Former Prime Minister Sir Michael Cashin died suddenly at his home here tonight. Sir Michael was born at Cape Broil, Sept. 29, 1864, and lived all his life in Newfoundland.

WOMAN DEAD, FOUR BADLY HURT IN AUTO CRASH

SPEEDING SEDAN TURNED OVER 3 TIMES IN FIELD

Mrs. George Wakin, aged 28, of 92 St. Denis Street is dead and four others early this morning were unconscious in the Notre Dame hospital following a serious accident near L'Assomption last night. The injured:— Mrs. Nassif, broken leg and internal injuries; Selim Hadeed, broken ribs, and bad scalp wound; Lean Courey, head injuries, and Selim Courey, fractured skull. All the injured live at Three Rivers. According to witnesses the motor car, a large sedan, became unmanageable when the driver swerved to avoid another machine. It jumped the road at a curve and turned over three times.

DRIVERS GIVEN TERMS IN JAIL

Magistrate McMahon of Westmount yesterday sentenced and fined five men who appeared before him, for having stolen and driven automobiles without licenses. Heavy fines and lengthy jail sentences were imposed upon the drivers.

YOUNG MAN HELD RESPONSIBLE FOR DEATH OF YOUTH

Held criminally responsible for the death on Saturday of Thomas Girard, aged 22, of 1970 Adam Street, Hector Langevin, 24, of 1447 Valois Street, will appear in police court this morning on a charge of manslaughter.

According to evidence before Deputy Coroner Prince yesterday, Girard and Langevin had words late on Friday night. They are said to have quarrelled previous to that time. Matters are understood to have reached a climax over a girl, and Langevin is charged with having struck the younger man in the head.

Girard fell to the pavement, was carried home, and the next morning taken to hospital, where he died later in the day.

RUSSIA WON'T HAVE ROMANOFFS BACK

Moscow, Aug. 30. — (Universal Service) — The first Romanoff to attempt to return to Soviet Russia met with a sharp rebuff today. The Grand Duchess Romanova Zelenia, daughter of Alexander the Second, applied for a passport to go from Italy to live in Russia and the Soviet authorities refused permission.

BARBERS USE NEW MONIKER OVER THE OLD COLORED POLE

So it's come to this! The fellow who used to wield the shears and clippers with eloquent gestures as he discussed with you the topics of the day is no longer "the barber on the corner," but the "chirotonsor at the intersection." And the place where you used to go to get first shot at the Police Gazette, and incidentally a shave or haircut, is no longer a barber shop but a chirotonsorial.

To aggravate matters the barbers admit they are chirotonsors and think it such a euphonious title that it is bound to become popular. The well-known Mr. Webster of dictionary fame apparently never heard of the word "chirotonsor" although he gives a definite and understandable meaning for the word "barber." But more of this later.

A local barb—er, chirotonsor, says it has been in use, more or less, since its adoption at the national convention at Chicago two years ago. He offered this explanation when asked the origin of the word: "I don't know the literal transla-

CARVETH WILL BATTLE WHITE FOR COMMONS

The Liberal candidate chosen to represent Mount Royal Division is T. H. Carveth.

Mr. Carveth addressed a large gathering last night at Municipal Hall on Cote St. Antoine Road, and was many times interrupted during his address by the applause which filled the assembly room.

The newly appointed candidate maintained that he would fearlessly uphold justice and rectitude, and strive to prove worthy of the confidence of his fellow men who would assist him in bringing true Liberalism to the front.

ADVERTISING MAN BURIED YESTERDAY

Rev. Dr. Pigeon, pastor of Erskine Church, conducted the funeral yesterday of W. S. Marson, former advertising manager of the Montreal Star. Various government officials, prominent business men and representatives of the newspaper fraternity attended. There were many beautiful floral tributes. Burial took place in Mount Royal.

LABOR WILL HELP STRIKING MINERS

William Green, president, and other members of the American Federation of Labor Executive, who have been in Montreal for a few days, left last night.

Mr. Green declared that the work of collecting additional funds for the assistance of the striking British miners would be pushed rapidly as soon as he returned to headquarters.

FAMOUS BRITISH JURIST HERE TO ADDRESS LAWYERS

Quebec, Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch) — The Rt. Hon. Lord Darling, P.C., famous jurist and poet, touring Canada, and on his way to St. John, where he will be the principal speaker at the sessions of the Canadian Bar Association, today stated that the introduction of legislation in Great Britain to amend the Trades Union Act and relieve workmen from interference, had resulted from the many industrial troubles in that country.

Lord Darling upon his return from St. John will commence his tour to the Pacific coast, stopping off at Montreal about Sept. 7.

OLIVER'S WATCH GONE London, Aug. 30. — (Universal Service) — It was announced to night by Scotland Yard that Oliver Cromwell's watch had been stolen from the London Museum.

LIBERAL LEADER WILL SPEAK HERE NEXT LABOR DAY

William Lyon Mackenzie King, Liberal leader and former prime minister of Canada, will speak at a monster mass meeting in the Forum, Montreal, on Labor Day, according to an announcement yesterday. Already the thousands of local admirers of Mr. King and his policies are arranging to attend the meeting. It is more than likely that the speeches will be radiocast, because the hall, large as it is, will not contain a fraction of the men and women who want to hear the next prime minister.

Mackenzie King

P. J. A. Cardin

Tonight several meetings will be held outside the city. In Jacques Cartier Division, Theodule Rheume and others will speak at Dorval. Wednesday night Liberals will speak at Pointe Claire, Thursday night at Cartierville, and on Friday night at Ville LaSalle.

At Pointe des Cascades in Vaudreuil-Soulanges tonight Larry Wilson, H. Pilon, J. R. Oulmette, Hector Racine and P. E. Wilson will speak. On Wednesday evening two meetings will be held, one in St. Redempteur and the other at St. Justine de Newton.

This evening at 8 o'clock at Contrecoeur, in Chambly-Vercheres, the candidate, Aime Langlois, will speak. Others on the platform will be J. M. Richard, M.P.P. and Louis Morin.

DOMINION LIFE CONVENTION HERE

About 150 members of the Dominion Life Assurance Company, belonging to the Company Hilliard Club, arrived in the city Sunday, having made the voyage from Toronto by boat.

The address of welcome was delivered by Mayor Martin yesterday at the Mount Royal Hotel where the visitors are holding a convention.

PECULIAR TWIST IN STOLEN BOOZE CASE AT QUEBEC

Quebec, Aug. 30. — (By Staff Correspondent) — Philippe Goulet of St. Romuald who claimed that he was robbed of 75 gallons of alcohol by a group of hijackers, admitted in court today that the liquor was smuggled, and this led O. Boulanger, K.C., acting for Emile Boivin, the only one of the gang who has been identified, to ask for the quashing of the indictment, on the grounds that no theft or robbery had been committed, in view of the fact that the goods did not legally exist as they had been smuggled.

It was brought out during the case, which concluded today, that the Quebec Liquor Commission officer who participated in the raid did not report the seizure to the head office and now is suspended. Judgment will be rendered Sept. 7, when Boivin, the only one standing trial, will know his fate. In the meantime the liquor has been sold.

VERDUN MAN IS KILLED BY AUTO

Father Point, Que., Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch) — When the automobile in which he was riding overturned, Romeo Gibault, age 29, residing at 137 Second Ave., Verdun, was killed.

BEAUDRY'S MANAGER SAID TO HAVE BOUGHT PISTOL FROM BLIND ADVERTISER

One curious fact has cropped out from the maze that has surrounded the Beaudry case, a fact that is thought to have formed the leverage point which sent detectives to Coroner McMahon for last night's warrant for Bertrand.

The ex-Secretary, it appears, recently purchased a revolver in circumstances which lend a touch of dime-novel melodrama to the story.

SALE OF WEAPON

J. H. Mulhollin, a blind piano dealer, advertised in the "wants" in an afternoon paper that he wished to sell a revolver, according to report.

Bertrand, it is said, answered the advertisement and purchased the gun. Mulhollin, being stone blind, was absolutely unable to identify the purchaser.

But Mulhollin's daughter witnessed the transaction and later is said to have identified Bertrand as the purchaser of her father's shooting iron.

Reporters were unable to locate the piano dealer last night, but the statements were confirmed in conversation with members of the detective department.

INQUEST ADJOURNED

The Coroner's inquest received another postponement yesterday, being laid over until Thursday at the request of Crown Prosecutor Bertrand, who declared that he wished another day or two for the production of additional witnesses.

Members of the detective force were working on clues last night that took two or three men out to Richelieu, Beaudry's boyhood home, where his aged parents now reside.

VISITING YANKS HOLD BATTLE ON PLACE D'ARMES

Flying the red, white and blue of the Stars and Stripes, in the form of bleeding noses, torn shirts and swollen eyes, George Tucker of Orange, N. J., and John Miles of Rochester, N. Y., went down to defeat last night when they tried to "clean up" in Place d'Armes.

According to police, trouble started in a nearby cafe where the visitors are said to have broken a couple of windows. In the square hard by the melee continued, with citizens engaging in battle. It was a merry go while it lasted, but when Constable Lenoue of No. 1 appeared on the scene the scrap ended.

Tucker and Miles will appear before the Recorder today on a charge of being drunk.

HEAD OF C.N.R. WED N.Y. WOMAN DECLARES REPORT

New York, Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch) — According to report, Sir Henry Thornton, K.B.E., president of the Canadian National Railways, recently divorced will be married next month to Miss Matilda Watriss, 25-year-old daughter of F. N. Watriss, vice-president of the International Petroleum Company.

The present Mrs. Watriss is the daughter of Sir Frederick and Lady Williams-Taylor of Montreal, and divorced wife of Frank Duff Fraser of New York.

CHEMISTS THINK GAS FROM WOOD QUITE POSSIBLE

Montreal chemists believe that an invention announced from Berlin for making gasoline from wood is quite possible, but add that since the process was not given in detail they could not say whether or not the results were correct.

"I think this is quite possible," said a manager of one of the largest local gasoline firms, "but since it doesn't say how it is done it is impossible to comment upon it. All discoveries of this kind I believe to be possible, but whether it has actually been done or not I would not like to say."

The inventor, Herr Engelsbrecht, claims that his invention, which would result in the production of fuel suitable for automobile motors at about a third of the cost of imported gasoline, is now out of the experimental stage and that all that is necessary is the construction of a large plant to produce it.

CLOTHES FOR MAYOR

The Asheville, N.C., chamber of commerce, has written to Mayor Martin offering to send him a suit of homespun clothes. They are also ready to do the same for the Premier of the province.

SNOW IN QUEBEC

Quebec, Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch) — The cold winds which blew from the northeast today, brought flurries of snow.

MOONSHINE SAYS EXPERT ASKED IF LUNA AFFECTS THE WEATHER

During the month, 7.68 inches of rain fell, more than twice as much as the average, according to records at McGill Observatory. During August last year a record low rainfall occurred, exactly 1 inch. The average for the past fifty years has been 3.4 inch.

"Nothing but moonshine," says one of the experts at McGill, commenting on the theory of some so-called prophets that the moon is somewhat to blame for the recent bad weather.

The weathermen do not take this moon talk at all seriously. "Mere superstition," says one. "It dates away back to the time of the Medes and Persians or somewhere about that time—the idea that the moon influenced the weather. We find it also in the Indian superstitions. The ability of the hunter to hang his powder horn on the upturned end of the crescent moon was supposed to betoken a coming dry season. If it were tilted downward it meant that rains would be poured out of the moon or something of that sort. But that has been discounted long ago."

NOT STRONG ENOUGH

As a matter of fact the sun is the one planet which is strong enough to supply atmospheric conditions which influence the weather. The influence of the moon on the tidal waves is an altogether different thing to its alleged power to shape the weather. The tidal power is a matter of gravity.

An interesting modern manifestation of the old idea about the moon and the weather is shown in the saying of western farmers that if they could get past August 23—the change of the moon—without frost they would be out of danger. But the weathermen do not take any stock in that either.

THE MERRY-GO-ROUND

by A MAN OF THE WORLD

GIVE US CREDIT!

One thing about this Channel swimming business that is some consolation to us Britishers is found in the fact that we are supplying the Channel, if not the swimmers.

They had just met, and the next night he took her up to Bill Krausmann's for dinner.

He paid the check and looked at her longingly.

"Can't I see you again to-morrow?" he blurted.

"I'm sorry. I'm married," she smiled back (having eaten).

"That's all right with me," the gallant responded. "I'm the same; married and sorry."

Quebec had its first snow-fall yesterday. Probably as a protest against some of the summer raiment worn by visitors.

TIME AND MONEY

She threw her arms around the neck of the bridegroom-to-be. "Oh, Walter," she said "Dad's going to give us a cheque for a present!"

"Good!" said Walter. "Then we'll have the wedding at noon instead of at two o'clock."

"But why, dear?"

"The banks close at three o'clock."

YOU BETCHA!

The teacher had been lecturing the kindergarten children on how much better it was to guard against a bad habit while young, pointing out that it was sometimes a struggle to rid of it later.

She concluded by asking, "Now, children, what is mighty easy to get into, but pretty hard to get out of?"

Instantly a hand shot into the air.

"Well, what is it?"

"Bed!" exclaimed Tommy.

LONDON HAVING MILK TROUBLES

London, Ont., Aug. 30.—(Daily World Dispatch) — Wholesale milk producers from the district surrounding London will be barred from delivering milk in the city unless the condition of their product is improved, Dr. C. S. Tamlin, local inspector of dairies, said. The quality of milk being sold by them at the present time is declared by the inspector to be away below standard.

CHILD'S ARM CUT OFF BY MACHINE

Palmerston, Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch)—Lillian Diamond aged 3, playing with her brother in a field of grain at their home in Minto Township, two miles north of Palmerston, got in the way of a binder in charge of her father, Benj. Diamond, and was terribly injured. Besides other injuries the little girl had her right arm cut off above the elbow by the binder knives, but the brother, aged 5, had a wonderful escape, being found under a portion of the binder but little the worse for the experience.

CUSTOMS PROBE INTERRUPTED BY COUNSEL CLAIMS

Halifax, Aug. 30.—(Daily World Disatch) — The customs inquiry was interrupted today when counsel for the Commission informed Sir Francois Lemieux, that the former member for Lunenburg-Queens, William Duff, was reporting that they dared not call him as a witness, for fear of what he might divulge.

As an agreement has been passed that no politics would enter at present, a formal application was made to His Lordship to return next Monday to take up political matters which have been held back.

CLOTHING INJUNCTION STANDS UNTIL SEPT. 15

BOTH SIDES STILL RESOLUTE BUT PUBLIC WILL SETTLE STRIKE IN WORKER'S FAVOR

Woman worker tells Our Special Investigator terrible story of conditions resulting from underpayment of girls in one clothing factory, by which girls of the factory become women of the streets.

BY OUR SPECIAL INVESTIGATOR

The great battle of Society Brand versus the Amalgamated Clothing Workers' Union, which was scheduled to take place in the Superior Court yesterday, did not take place. The legal fight is postponed until September 15. In the meantime the temporary injunction holds, the strikers will continue striking, and Society Brand will remain struck against. Government by injunction is something of which much has been heard a few years ago, especially in the United States. It has been the practice of sweating employers when defeated by the determination of their striking workers and the justice of the workers' cause, backed by public sympathy, to fly to the Courts for redress. In the United States they have mostly got protection. In Canada our Courts do not regard themselves as institutions especially created for the assistance of slave-driving employers who wish to sweat their workers.

LOW WAGES CURSE

Out of all this turmoil there will come brighter days for the clothing workers and, when they come, there will likewise come brighter days for their employers, because one side can not gain without the other side prospering also. That is the lesson I want to drive home in these strike articles. Low wages do not pay the employer who pays low wages. They depress the standard of living and prevent the workers who are paid low wages buying the products which all employers as a class want to sell.

The great residuum of buying power is with the workers of any country. Rich people spend very little money in reality. But the workers as a class spend practically everything they earn and receive. The more they earn the more they spend. The less they earn the less they spend. The less they spend the less the merchants take over their counters. The more money they earn the more the merchants take over their counters. There is an elementary lesson in economies that every merchant and storekeeper ought to learn and profit by.

A TERRIBLE STORY

Over and above all is the moral issue involved in the present strike. Let me here relate a story of something that happened to myself in the early days of the present strike. I received a telephone message one morning. A woman's voice spoke. "Why don't you send one of your reporters to see me and I will tell him of worse things than any you have printed yet?" Such was her greeting.

Together with another member of the staff of the DAILY WORLD and a representative of the Amalgamated, I called at this woman's house and listened to her story. It was a heartbreaking one in what it revealed and implied.

She told us of girls working in the clothing factory which she had worked at, and which she named, that had literally been driven to the streets to eke out there by the sale of their honor the meagre living they earned in the factory.

"Sometimes," she said, "I have noticed a girl and with a woman's eyes have been able to discern her trouble. A little later she would not come to work any more, and I knew that before long she would be a mother, that shame was upon her head and had come to her family through her. But it is somebody else," she said, vehemently, "that should be made to feel ashamed, not the girl."

THE SOCIAL EVIL

This woman worked in a contractor's factory where work is done that is farmed out by bigger factories and had herself been compelled to give up her job because of the low wages paid. The moral conditions resulting from the low-paid conditions of the girls employed in this factory were shocking. I shall not attempt to describe those conditions here, but she told me enough for me to know that one of the underlying causes of that great cancer in the community that we call "the social evil," is this very underpayment of girls and women.

I don't think there is a decent man amongst us who wants to encourage any employer of labor in the business of making women of the streets out of women of the factories. For that reason I know beyond all peradventure and doubt that when the really worth while men of Montreal know all that is involved in the present strike of clothing workers they will make short work of any pretensions of employers in the clothing trade who claim the right to sweat their workers as Society Brand has done.

Hundreds of Buyers' Pledges are still coming in. I ask everybody reading this article to keep up the good work by letting me have their pledge right away.

Once more I ask my readers to sign the pledge below. The signed pledges are beginning to trickle in but in a day of two they will come with a rush. Let me have yours right away, please, for humanity's sake. Mail your pledge to me addressed: "Special Investigator, Daily World, 220 Lemoine Street, Montreal."

BUYERS' PLEDGE

I, the undersigned, hereby pledge myself not to KNOWINGLY buy any clothes or other articles that have been made by firms whose workers are not paid a living wage or employees who are compelled to work under such conditions of labor as are not for their own or the public good.

THIS AMAZING
STORY OF A
TO-DAY

In this hour of the nation's life, so fraught with menace to our institutions and our status as a self-governing Dominion of the British Empire, so full of glorious possibilities for our future growth and development and the achievement of our high destiny, every true and sincere lover of Canada will want to know and understand the most outstanding Canadian of the day, who is leading the Liberal Party in the fight for the preservation of Canada's constitutional rights.

CHAPTER V.

HIS WAR RECORD

The enemies of Mackenzie King are forever, especially in elections, making charges against him on account of his war record, stating that during the late war he left Canada and went to work in the United States and did not play the part in the war that he should have done. It must not, of course, go unrecognized that the Conservatives of Canada have always professed to be the ultra-loyal party of Canada, claiming a monopoly of patriotism, and that their chief argument in every election is the British flag, which is no more theirs to wave than it is the Liberals'.

FLAG WAVING

Patriotism does not consist of flag-waving. As Dr. Johnson said, it is often "the last refuge of the scoundrel," and the Conservatives have often taken refuge beneath its ample folds. It is one thing to wave the British flag to win elections, it is another to do something practical to cement the Motherland to Canada and Canada to the Motherland. The Liberals established the British Preference, giving a lower duty on all goods entering Canada from Great Britain and, in the last Parliament, with the Liberals in power, that British preference was extended.

The Conservatives, on the other hand, have bitterly opposed the British Preference always and would repeal it tomorrow if returned to power and they were true to their election promises and threats. No question of loyalty to the British flag when the friends of the manufacturers want to repay the latter for the campaign funds they put up for Mr. Meighen and his cohorts. Most people prefer the loyalty that is expressed in deeds rather than the lip-loyalty that finds its highest expression in flag-waving, desecrating a glorious old flag to selfish, party purposes.

INDUSTRIAL RESEARCH

Here is what Mackenzie King did in the war. In June, 1914, mark the date, before the war had broken out, he was invited to accept a position on the staff of the Rockefeller Foundation directing a great movement of Industrial Research. That work was not to interfere with Mr. King's citizenship of, or residence in, Canada; this was explicitly stipulated by Mr. King before he took the work up for the Rockefeller Foundation. During the war the work of that Foundation became largely concerned with war activities. First in the United States to send relief to the Belgians, its funds were also used to help the other suffering peoples of the allied cause and it gave millions of dollars to Red Cross and Y.M.C.A. work overseas. Now let Mackenzie King tell his own story of that war work under the Rockefeller Foundation. Speaking in the House of Commons on April 20, 1920, in reply to attacks on his war record, he said:—

"The war had not proceeded very far before it became perfectly apparent that the winning of the war depended upon the successful co-operation of Capital and Labor in the industries that were engaged in the production of munitions and the furnishing of war supplies and materials, as well as upon the heroic efforts of the men who were fighting at the front. The Governments of the different countries recognized that to be the situation. The Government of Great Britain established, shortly after the beginning of the war, a Reconstruction Committee, which subsequently became the Ministry of Reconstruction in England, with a sub-committee on relations between employers and employed, to deal with the problems of industry as they arose during the war, and were likely to arise during the period of reconstruction. The Government of the United States appointed a National War Labor Board, and the Government of Canada—the present Government—appointed the Reconstruction and Development Committee of the Cabinet, with a labor sub-committee. The work of all these bodies was to study the problems arising out of the relations between Capital and Labor with a view, if possible, to avoiding industrial controversy in essential industries during the war, and finding means for the rapid development of peaceful and helpful relations in the period after the war."

Hon. Chas. Stewart

MUCH NEEDED SERVICE

"The work I was doing for the Rockefeller Foundation, both in its purpose as research and in its practical effort, was identical with the kind of work which was being done by persons associated with these bodies. Every man associated with any of these organizations was regarded by his fellow-countrymen as rendering a much-needed war service, a service for which he was specially qualified. My selection by the Rockefeller Foundation had been made, among other reasons, because of the circumstance that during a number of years I had held a position in the Department of Labor of this country as Deputy Minister of the Department, and subsequently as Minister, and during that time had had considerable to do, at first hand, and in a practical way, with industrial problems. It was believed that, with that experience and with the opportunity the Foundation afforded, a useful service might be rendered."

To show the value of Mackenzie King's services to the allied cause during the war the following extracts from a letter from Mr. E. G. Grace, President of the Bethlehem Steel Company of South Bethlehem, Pa., are in order:—
"I think it is now well recognized that if it had not been for the assistance our plants were privileged to give to the Allies previous to the entry of this Government in the war the result might have been different. In reflecting the credit for the achievements of this company, which is shared by every one of our employees who contributed to the result of the outcome, I cannot in this connection refrain from calling to mind with much appreciation the great work to which you gave your time and talent during the world's crisis.

"At a crucial time, when we were contending with an unprecedented industrial unrest, your counsel and advice in the construction and development of a plan which, when installed, proved most conducive to promoting cordial relations with our employees during the emergency, resulting in the obtaining of the maximum efficiency in the production of war munitions, constituted, I felt, a real service, not only to this country, but to the Allies, during the war."

In closing this defence of his war-time record, Mackenzie King said:—

"There remains the statement that I was young, and a bachelor. I am now in my forty-sixth year. When the war commenced I was in my fortieth year. Shortly before that time my father, a barrister and solicitor, and one of the lecturers at the Law School in Toronto, was stricken with blindness, and obliged to give up the practice of law and lecturing at the Law School. He and my mother and unmarried sister lived together at our home in Toronto. My brother, who for a number of years was a practicing physician in this city, some little time prior to the war, after an attack of influenza complicated by double pneumonia, developed tuberculosis and was obliged to give up the practice of his profession and for the greater part of two years to spend his time in a sanatorium. Later, he and his wife and little children took up permanent residence in Colorado. There was no one left to share the responsibilities of our home under these sad and trying circumstances but my married sister and myself. My married sister had, as well, her own family to consider.

"On April 4th, 1915, within the first few months of the war, my unmarried sister died. That left my father and mother alone. On August 30th, 1916, my father died. After spending a few weeks with my invalid brother in Denver, and two or three months with my married sister, my mother came to reside with me at the Roxborough, here in Ottawa. My mother was critically ill most of the year she was with me, and on December 18th, 1917, she, too, died.

"As I look back upon those years of the war, so full of poignant suffering for the whole of mankind, I cannot but experience a sense of gratitude that in that world ordeal it was given to me to share in so intimate a way the sufferings of others, and, with it

DID BARON BYNG ACT CONSTITUTIONALLY?

If it be conceded that His Majesty's Representative is not greater than the King he represents and, that, therefore, a Governor-General of Canada must follow the precedents established by the customs and practices of the British Throne in its relation to Parliamentary institutions, then Baron Byng acted unconstitutionally in refusing to dissolve Parliament on the advice of Mr. Mackenzie King, the then Prime Minister.

Here are two pieces of evidence in confirmation of this view: On February 1, 1886, Mr. Gladstone "kissed hands" at Osborne and became Prime Minister of England for the third time. On April 8, he introduced his Home Rule Bill. In the early morning of June 8 the Home Rule Bill was thrown out by a majority of thirty. Now let Mr. G. W. E. Russell tell the story in his book, "William Ewart Gladstone," pages 256, 257:—

"Mr. Gladstone immediately advised the Queen to dissolve Parliament. Her Majesty naturally demurred to a second dissolution within seven months, and begged Mr. Gladstone to reconsider his advice. He replied that he was sure that a General Election would cause less inconvenience to the country than a year of embittered and fanatical agitation for and against Home Rule. Besides 'if we did not dissolve,' he said to a colleague, 'we should be showing the white feather'. The Queen yielded, and Parliament was dissolved on June 26".

So much for the Victorian precedent. His Majesty, King George, faced with a similar situation in 1924, acted in the same way. Ramsay Macdonald came to power dependent on Liberal votes. His government was defeated on a vote of censure for having dropped a prosecution against the Communist, Campbell. Macdonald's position was much worse than Mackenzie King's; he had actually been censured in the House of Commons, Mackenzie King had not.

Did King George refuse dissolution to Ramsay Macdonald although he had been in power only six months and had been defeated in Parliament? No. He gave him the dissolution asked for and Macdonald went to the country as Prime Minister.

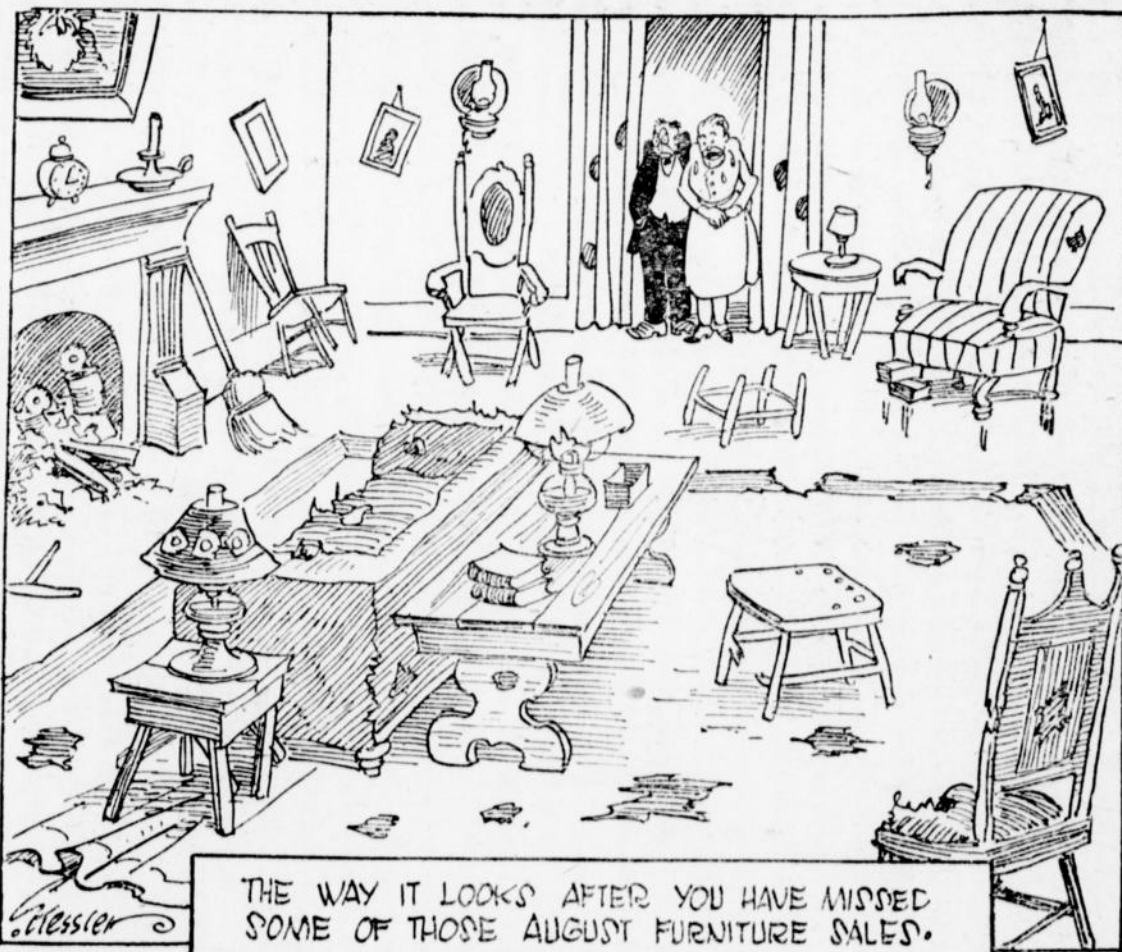

Will anybody say that Baron Byng acted constitutionally in view of the two precedents quoted? If they do so, they can only do it on the ground that they believe the people of the United Kingdom, and their Parliament have a higher status than the people and Parliament of Canada, that we have not the same Responsible Government in Canada that obtains in Great Britain, and that the people of Canada have not the same measure of liberty and freedom as the people of England, Scotland and Wales. The position of the Governor-General we contend is exactly on all fours with that of His Majesty the King. He acts only on the advice of his Ministers as does the King. Here let Sir Robert Borden, the former Conservative Prime Minister of Canada, step into the witness box and testify Sir Robert Borden, in his book, "Canadian Constitutional Studies," says:—

"The administration of (Canadian) public affairs is conducted by ministers responsible to Parliament and the governor-general acts by their advice. By convention, his appointment is subject to the approval of the government of the day, and his functions as an imperial officer are formal rather than real; his office as representative of the crown exhibits the constitutional unity of the empire. . . . He has become in fact a nominated president."

The foregoing historical facts and constitutional testimony answer the question, "Did Baron Byng act constitutionally in refusing dissolution to Mr. King?" with an emphatic "No".

MIDDLE-EAR DEAFNESS CAN BE RELIEVED

Nasal Tissues Must Be Made Healthy and Then the Eustachian Tube Cleared Before Any Cure Is Possible

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States Senator from New York.
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City.

In describing the tiny bones of the ear, I have spoken of the stirrup bone. It is so called because of its resemblance to the stirrup of an army saddle.

The base or foot-plate of this bone fits into an opening in the skull in such manner that the foot-plate can play to and fro in the opening. In this way the vibrations of the ear-drum are carried through the little bones to the foot-plate of the stirrup-bone. This is made to vibrate and it communicates its movements to the fluid in the inner ear.

This fluid, in turn, is agitated, and the endings of the nerve of hearing which float in the fluid are stimulated. Then the brain takes up the impulses and translates them into meaning sounds.

In a very brief and unscientific way I have told you how the outside vibrations passing through the canal of the ear to the drum are transmitted to the nerve of hearing. Unless the drum and little bones are freely movable and flexible, the sound waves are not carried as they should be.

Any catarrhal condition which inflames and thickens the lining membrane of the ear will interfere with the vibrations of the drum, bones and inner ear fluid. Deafness, more or less profound, is the inevitable result.

Acute catarrh, as acute colds are called, may not permanently impair the hearing. There may be temporary thickening of the nose and ear tissues, but recovery is likely to be complete. You may have a "stopped up" feeling in the ears and feel deaf for a few days.

Repeated and neglected colds are different. There is more and more inflammation of the mucous membrane. Then the condition is known to the doctors as a "chronic catarrh." This means that the tissues of the Eustachian tube and inner ear will become thicker and thicker as time goes on, just as the tissues of the nose become thicker and it becomes difficult to breathe freely.

It is not to be expected that "catarrhal deafness," the form of deafness you get in the way I have just described, can be relieved unless the nasal tissues are first made healthy. The first step in successful treatments is to get the nose back to fairly normal condition.

Then the Eustachian tube—the passageway to the ear—is opened by inflation and other treatment. Skillful treatment of the middle ear will be applied. Under expert care much can be done to overcome the effects of chronic middle ear catarrh. Early treatment is essential—every month of delay makes it more difficult to improve the

Dr. Copeland Answers Queries

Mrs. J. W. W. Q.—Is harelip hereditary?

2.—What is the average weight and height of a girl of nine and a boy of four?

A.—No.

2.—The girl should be about fifty inches tall and should weigh about fifty-eight pounds, and the boy about forty inches and should weigh about thirty-six pounds.

J. A. Q.—My ears are constantly ringing and one nostril is clogged,

A.—Your symptoms are probably due to catarrh. A good cleansing spray and treatment in the nasal passage should bring about improvement.

T. B. Q.—What is the cause of high blood pressure? Should I do heavy house-cleaning? I am fifty-nine years of age and in normal health otherwise.

A.—Indiscretion in diet, constipation or possibly a kidney condition. Careful attention to the diet and general care should be helpful in bringing the pressure down to normal. Your doctor will advise you, since each case demands specific attention.

F. C. Q.—What causes a swelling of the hands and feet as well as of the body and a rash resembling hives?

A.—Probably a form of hives, due to either some food poisoning, poor kidney condition. For further particulars send a self-addressed stamped envelope and repeat your question.

C. Q. Q.—What would cause a murmur in the heart? Could it be due to indigestion? Would too much exercise be responsible?

A.—Usually due to weakness of heart valves and may be caused by infectious disease such as inflammatory rheumatism. Have your doctor advise the treatment necessary. No, although indigestion often affects the heart action. No.

A. Reader. Q.—How may I remove freckles safely and quickly? 2.—How can I gain in weight?

A.—Equal parts of lemon juice and peroxide will act as a bleach. Try using a good cold cream after applying the preparation, since it may prove too drying to your skin.

2.—Build up your health in general and you will also gain in weight. For further particulars send a self-addressed, stamped envelope and repeat your question.

S. B. Q.—How can inflammation of the sciatic nerve be cured?

A.—First of all, locate the source of your infection. Massage should give temporary relief. For further particulars send a self-addressed stamped envelope and repeat your question.

Dr. Copeland will answer for readers of this paper questions on medicinal, hygiene and sanitation subjects that are of general interest. Where the subject of a letter is such that it cannot be published in this column, Dr. Copeland will, when the question is a proper one, write you personally, if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is enclosed. Your Birthday

by STELLA

SEPTEMBER 1

MARILYN MILLER

This is the birthday of Miss Marilyn Miller, the star that is shining so brightly in "Sunny." Marilyn Miller was born when Venus, the goddess of the theater, was with Jupiter, lord of worldly success, in the popular and harmonious Libra and when Mercury, her Star of Destiny, was with the Sun in his own sign Virgo; moreover, the Moon was in the rhythmic and emotional Pisces and was working in complete harmony with Neptune, Mars and Uranus—all of which promised this popular actress great success in the theater through music, rhythm and dramatic power combined with the intelligence given her by Mercury to make good use of her unusual talents.

Mercury, ruler of the sign Virgo and therefore chief ruler of the destiny of those born at this time of the year, is the only planet without any particular character of its own, its influence being determined almost entirely by the harmony or discord existing between it and the Sun, Moon and other stars. It seems to act more as a reflector or collector of good or evil vibrations from other centers, but unless very badly placed, it denotes quick intelligence and a somewhat nervous temperament. It is the ruler of literature and of writings and contracts of all kinds and exerts considerable influence over travel and short journeys. The people of Virgo are extremely sensitive mentally, Mercury being chief ruler of the mind. They are also introspective and critical, not only of others, but of themselves, and much of their knowledge seems to come from experience rather than from education, though Virgo undoubtedly is one of the cleverest of all the signs.

but all he saw as yet was that he had been caught in a trap, and his instinct was to fight.

"The cur!" he cried. "What did you say?"

"I gave him all I had, and told him to wait till Saturday. But don't imagine I had any idea of giving him the money. I haven't so much—"

"The money is nothing," he interrupted.

"Do you think I would take your money to give to him?" she wailed.

"What will you do?"

"I see but one thing to do—go away; hide myself from him."

"Leave me?" he cried. "Would you leave me? Oh, Gladys!"

"It is for your sake, not my own," she answered. "Do you know what he will do if I refuse the money?"

Robert started up. It had just come to him that his peace was in jeopardy, too. He saw at once the whole train of possibilities.

"Barbara!" he muttered.

Gladys nodded her head. She could see in a moment that his threatened reputation was more to him than anything that concerned her. She, too, had been more troubled about that than about herself, but she had hoped—only hoped, however—that he would think most of her. She was going away for his sake, not her own.

"You see," she said, "there is nothing else to do."

"What shall I do without you?" he said, almost in a tone of acquiescence; and began to pace the floor. "Damn him!" he exclaimed suddenly, "your going won't end it. You are sure he knows who I am?"

"Quite sure."

He went on pacing. It was a familiar movement to Gladys, who had often seen him pace his office in the same way while working out a problem in finance. All at once he stopped and turned to her with a smile.

"I confess I was frightened for a moment," he said. "Such a scandal would have come near ruining my life."

"And mine," she sobbed, breaking down completely.

He was too keen to miss the implication that he had not thought of her unhappiness, and, feeling safe now, he also felt ashamed and grieved; for in spite of his selfish concentration on himself, he did love the beautiful creature who had withheld nothing from him that she had to give.

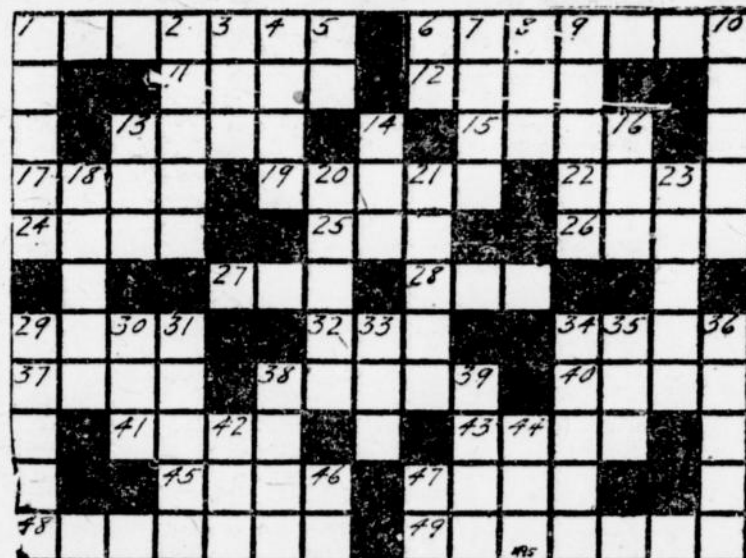

"Sweetheart!" he cried, taking her in his strong arms and lifting her up as if she had been a child. "forgive me! I know I seemed to think only of myself, but don't you see that it was our joint problem?"

He soothed her so tenderly, holding her on his lap and kissing her golden head, as it lay shaken by her sobs on his breast, that she ceased at last, and looked up at him with a faint, sad smile.

"It was about time for me to cry, wasn't it?" she said.

Gladys is now beginning to reap the bitter fruit of her love for Robert Thorne. How far will Fred go in his revenge? Will Barbara learn of her husband's actions? Read this stirring story for further incidents.

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle

Your Montreal and Mine

By James R. Watson—No. 24

Look where you will in Canada's Metropolis, and you will see churches. From the great Cathedral of Notre Dame to the newest mission they stand majestically, eloquent of Christianity. And they testify that most of the population believes in God and His Kingdom.

Look from the mountain-top, with the huge lattice-work cross as a background. Gaze down over the city's vast network of streets. Scintillating in the sunlight innumerable domes and steeples. Close and at a distance they stand.

Or wend your way to the roof-tops of La Sauvegarde Building. The rippling St. Lawrence, lengthy Victoria Bridge, busy Bonsecours, bustling harbor, and, to the other side, churches again. Half-way up Mount Royal the granite buildings of the Royal Victoria Hospital. . . silver dome of St. James Basilica. . . steeples. . . trees. . . And close beneath court houses, old and new. Traffic-filled streets, pedestrians. . . old buildings. . . new city hall. . . Across the river mountains rear their dim heads in the distance. . . and still more churches show.

GEORGE W. FORD, teller in the Peninsula State Bank, Detroit, Mich., found that the $25 a week he received was inadequate for the needs of his wife and two children. He misappropriated $809. Then, fearful he would be found out, he held up the cashier with a dummy pistol, and, with $7,463.50 loot, fled the city.

ARRIVING in Buffalo, Ford became acquainted with Jane and Patsy, two chorus girls who betrayed an eagerness to help him spend his money. He was persuaded to bring them to New York. He installed them in a smart apartment on Riverside Drive and feted them grandly at theater parties, cabarets, night clubs and cafes.

ONE NIGHT, professing weariness with the unceasing whirl of night life, the girls begged to be excused from a theater party. So Ford attended the show alone. Returning to the apartment, he found it stripped of everything of value. Money, clothes, valuables of all sorts had been taken. The girls left him alone—broke.

IN HIS savage bitterness Ford wrote a letter to Commissioner McLaughlin, revealing his identity and announcing that he intended to track the show girl thieves to earth if he went to the chair for it. With the letter as a clue detectives found Ford. Now he is in jail, disgraced, broke and forever cynical.

WIFE OR STENOGRAPHER—WHICH?

Is it proper for a woman who has separated from her husband to permit another man, whom she loves, to furnish her apartment? Can the relations between this woman and her friend remain platonic? These are the questions dealt with in this gripping serial.

NEW READERS BEGIN HERE:—

Barbara Thorne is the wife of Robert Thorne, a brilliant and successful business man. Mildred Parker, a chum of her school days, implores Barbara to intercede with her husband to take Gladys Spencer, a mutual friend, into his office as stenographer. Gladys's husband has been brutal to her and she has left him. Robert Thorne agrees to give her a chance. She is employed in his office, but his brusque manner is offensive to her sensitive spirit. But he finally gains her confidence and they pledge each other their friendship. Gladys does some important work with Thorne after business hours, and as it is late, he takes her home. He is fast coming under the spell of her beauty and when he reaches home there is a strange coldness in his heart for Barbara, his wife. He consults Mildred Parker, who is a lawyer, and learns it is impossible for Gladys to win a divorce. Despite that he appoints her as his private secretary. In an intimate conversation they realize that they love each other. Gladys moves into a new apartment furnished with Robert's money. Gladys's husband, Fred, learns of it and comes to blackmail her.

(22ND INSTALLMENT)

"Yes," he sneered, looking around, "all this looks as if you were dreadfully poor." He stood up. She prepared to defend herself if he came toward her. He turned and walked in his half-reckless, half-sodden way into the parlor; she following at a distance, trying to make up her mind what to do. He looked slowly around; then crossed the room and was going into the bedroom beyond. At that Gladys leaped after him and, catching him by the arm, pulled him so sharply that he reeled and would have fallen if he had not caught at the back of an easy chair.

A flood of the vile oaths poured from his lips. He checked himself suddenly, and turned and went into the bedroom before Gladys could recover herself and make an effort to prevent him. There he stood and looked about, as he had done in the other rooms. Gladys watched him, white-faced, trembling. His eyes fixed themselves at last, on a picture of Robert which stood on the dressing table. He pointed to it.

"That's why, eh?" he said. "You damn fool! Didn't you suppose I knew before I came up here? Why, I've been watching you two these three weeks."

"Forty dollars is all I have," she said. "Come out and I will give it to you."

He sat down on the side of the dainty bed and stared at her in disgust. "Forty dollars!" he repeated; "forty dollars! Say, what do you take me for? Do you think I'd let you bring dishonor on my name for forty dollars? Come! cough up! cough up!"

"I tell you it is all I have. Take that or nothing." She was trying to understand the situation so that she might know how to act wisely; but the horror, the despair, the shocking inevitability of it seemed to paralyze her faculties.

"Oh, really!" he sneered. "I'm to take forty dollars or nothing. Well, now, you listen to me: I'm going to camp out here till I get what I want. See? I'm going to get into this scrumptious bed of—of his, and—"

"Do so," she cried as a sudden thought flashed into her brain. "This place isn't mine. I shall leave it to you. Good night!"

She fled from the room, snatching up her hat and coat, which lay on a chair near the door. She had almost gained the door into the hall, when her husband reached the dining room, crying out:—

"Don't be a fool! Can't you take a joke? Give me the forty!"

Gladys came back to the door of the dining room; he stopped by the table. She was still white and greatly shaken, but in command of her wits now. She opened the bag which she had snatched up with her coat, took out her purse and gave him all the money there was in it, without stopping to count it. "It is all I have. Now go!"

He unfolded the roll of bills and counted them slowly. When he had done so he thrust them in a bunch into his trousers pocket and stared at her in a lowering, evil way.

"On account," he said. "Only on account."

"Go!" was her only response, pointing to the door.

"No, by God!" he said. "Not till I have had my say. You think you've got the best of me because I've taken your dirty forty. Well, you haven't. There will be more coming. See? I needed something tonight, and I know you well enough to be sure it's all you have. But I want more—a lot more. And you'll get it for me. I'm down to bed-rock and I've got to have it. And, what's more, I'm not particular how I get it. Do you understand? Are you going to get it?"

"I have no money but my wages," she answered.

"Which wages?" he demanded, with so plain a meaning that the color rushed to her white face. "Now, look here! I want $500 by Saturday night, or this won't be your secret any longer. See?"

She felt that she must be rid of him or she would become hysterical. She could see his power for mischief and could not see any hope for herself. She could never get the money from Robert, but she could gain the three days till Saturday by temporizing.

"Give me your address," she said. "I don't want you coming here again."

"That five hundred's only an installment," he said. "You understand that, do you?"

"I know you."

"You bet you do," he laughed. "And don't try any hanky-panky on me. This is a mighty good thing for you." He looked around again, and again let his eyes rest on the sideboard. And this time he went to it and took the bottle of whisky in his hand and was going to drink from it, when Gladys stopped him with a cry.

"Not here, you beast! Take the bottle if you want it, but don't touch a drop here."

He slowly withdrew the bottle from proximity to his mouth and let it slip into his coat pocket.

"Oh, all right!" he laughed. "I don't often drink that label. That's for multi-millionaires. Take it from me, Goldilocks! a multi-millionaire is a good thing. Work him to the limit. Goodnight! How about a kiss?" She shrank in disgust. He laughed loudly. "No? Oh, all right! So long!"

"Your address?" she said.

"Look here! I don't want a check. I want money, and I'll come after it. I'll be here next Saturday night about this time. He generally leaves you about this time Saturday nights." He had evidently watched carefully to know that.

"It won't be a check," she said. "I don't want you coming here. Give me your address. I should think you might understand that I don't want—want anybody to see you."

"Then I want it Saturday afternoon at 4 o'clock; and if I don't get it then, I'll come here after it. And I'll come early, too." He gave her an address in the slums of the city. She repeated it and fixed it in her memory. "And look here!" he went on, "don't bring anything bigger than a twenty."

She stood aside without speaking. He leered triumphantly at her and went out with a swagger. She went to the door and watched him go down the stairs and heard the lower door slam after him. Then she ran to the front of the

I would not ask you."

"Then something is wrong?" he demanded.

"Yes, something is wrong, but I'm not sick. I need your advice. Will it put you out much to come?"

He smiled. "As if it could be anything but a happiness. Surely I'll come, dear. Is it anything serious?"

"That's what I want you to tell me," she answered.

palate.

He was a picture of contentment, when after dinner he lounged in the parlor smoking. Gladys sat in a low chair looking at him, trying to picture how he would take what she had to tell him.

"Now, then," he said, looking his admiration, "let us have the problem. And don't look so sober, for death is the only ill that can't be cured."

house and opened the window softly and looked out. He was swagging down toward Madison Avenue.

She closed the window, tottered blindly into the room, stumbled and sank in a heap on the floor. She had endured to the limit of her powers; she was unconscious.

Robert and the Husband

Gladys was at the office the next day looking very pale, but as efficient, alert, and cheerful as ever. Robert asked her several times if she was ill, but she smiled away his concern, so that he finally concluded that there was nothing much wrong. In the afternoon she found an opportunity to speak to him without interfering with his work.

"I want very much to talk with you for a little while," she said. "Could you come home tonight for half an hour? It is important, or

"I'll dine with you," he said. "I only need half an excuse. I know it is a lot of trouble for you, but you won't have a cook, and you do make it so delightful in our Eden."

She smiled sadly. "It is never a trouble," she said; "and I shall be especially glad to have you tonight." In truth she wondered if it might not be their last meal together.

She had determined to consult him about her husband, because she had been unable to find any way out of her trouble, and she felt that to tell him would involve losing him. For that reason she refused to tell him until after he had eaten; and he, without suspicion of the seriousness of the matter to be discussed, ate the dainty meal with an enjoyment that almost grated on her sensitive nerves, although she had exerted herself to surprise and delight his

"Yes," she answered gaily, "but sometimes it seems as if death were the only way out."

"Oh, my darling!" he cried. "Is it something so serious? Come here and sit on my lap."

He was very tender and loving, but she only shook her head and said she would rather sit where she was and talk to him.

"Then tell me, dearest," he said.

"A few minutes after you left last night," she said, coming to the heart of the matter at once, "my husband came here."

"Your husband?"

"Yes, he came here to blackmail me."

"To blackmail you! Then he knows?"

"Everything. And he demands $500 by Saturday."

It is amazing to think that Grandmother's tan and brown ostrich boa should have the same shaded tip effect as the lavender and purple feathers this up-to-the-minute mannikin is wearing on her evening frock!"

Bleaching for Beauty

By Lucrezia Bor

Summer is the season when bleaching methods are of most interest. One preparation will be beneficial to one skin and of no value to the next; so one can't have too many of these formulas tucked away for trial.

The bleaching treatment I'm going to tell you about today sounds rather more complicated than it really is.

Mix enough buttermilk with one cupful of yellow cornmeal to make a creamy paste that will spread easily. It should stand for fifteen or twenty minutes before using. Besides the paste, you will need cheese-cloth, a bowl of buttermilk and a small sponge or pad of cotton.

All skin to be bleached should be washed first, using tepid water, soap and a rough wash cloth, or flesh brush. Rinse the skin with several towels that have been wrung out in very warm water.

Without drying the skin, spread a liberal amount of the paste over the area to be bleached and place the cheese cloth, which should be saturated in buttermilk, over it. The cloth must be kept moist and this is most easily done by dipping the sponge in the buttermilk and patting it over the cloth every few minutes for half an hour.

When bleaching the arms the cloth may be wound around them and fastened and tied in place so that their freedom is not impaired. The same kind of bandage may be used for the neck.

It is advisable to make the gauze into a mask allowing holes for the eyes, nose and mouth when bleaching the face. Three folds of the cloth should be allowed so that it doesn't dry out too quickly. If a towel is wound around the head it will keep the hair back and will make a foundation to pin the mask to.

Bleaching the chest requires a lying-down position, and the cloth is just laid over the paste.

Mitts, made of three thicknesses of the cheese-cloth should be slipped on over the hands.

It is important that the gauze be kept moist for half an hour; at the end of which time it should be allowed to dry naturally, and the bleaching process is over. In cases of severe tan two or three treatments are sometimes necessary.

The paste is removed by dashing tepid water over it until it comes off easily. After rinsing thoroughly massage a soft, fine cold cream into the skin and remove it with a soft cloth after ten minutes. Follow this with an ice massage which simply means rubbing a piece of ice over the skin until it tingles and glows. Pat the face dry.

Some of the French importations are introducing higher waist-lines for Fall dresses. These waist-lines, however, are merely suggested by the use of smart trimmings.

The better-looking cloth dresses will employ amusing embroidery motifs on the sleeves and pockets.

Navy blue will be one of the smartest colors for the Fall. Hats, umbrellas, scarfs, afternoon dresses and even shoes are to be seen in this universally becoming shade.

Although skirts will remain short, dresses with inserted flares will have a longer hemline than usual. This is to preserve the flowing line so lovely for satins and heavy crepes.

A combination both strikingly effective and smart will be black and red.

Fur coats are now being displayed in all the smart shops. Ermine is coming back both for coats and wide-sleeve wraps, and will be seen in all of the dyed shades.

Sheer, all-over prints on georgette grounds will be used in the Spring.

Floral brocades, in black and white or brilliant colors, are at-

Daddy Dusk

The Sandman

Nothing pleases a child more than to feel that people are interested in him. A nationally-known newspaper man who loves children, will tell here every day a story about Daddy Dusk, who takes little boys and girls for Dream Journeys every evening. Send Daddy Dusk the name of one or more of your children, so that he may print their names in the Daily World and take them on a journey to sleep. It delights a child to see his name in a Dream Story.

DADDY DUSK,

"Isn't this a beautiful day?" asked Daddy Dusk of Doodle, the hired man.

"Where are you going tonight?" asked Doodle.

"I'm going to take Marjorie Gosling, 372 Gordon Ave., Verdun, to the Land of Snoozers," replied the old man.

"Why, is she sleepy?" "Oh, no! She's very wide awake, but I think she wants to go and see the other boys and girls who are fast asleep—who never look both ways when they cross the street." Daddy Dusk started for his airship and was soon sailing in the direction of Montreal.

"I'm very glad to see you, Daddy Dusk," said Marjorie.

The two were soon skimming over the clouds, and finally they heard a lot of snoring above the whirr of the engine.

"That's the sleepy boys and girls snoring," laughed Daddy Dusk. "They are the children who are asleep all the time. They never wake up."

"I've seen enough—take me back home," said Marjorie as Daddy Dusk took a nosedive.

"Don't you want to see the snoozers snoozing?" asked Daddy, a bit worried.

"No. I'll be careful crossing the street after this," said Marjorie.

"I wish all the boys and girls in this world would do the same," sighed Daddy Dusk.

tracting much attention. They are beautiful for straight-line frocks and require no trimming.

Covert cloth in the darker shades will be seen again this Fall. The tailored suit made of this fabric will be extremely chic.

The heavy frock which can be worn when cool weather comes round again will be trimmed with fur. The most popular furs will be squirrel, gray or beige, and seal.

The new feather trimming, combining coq feathers with either marabou or ostrich, will be used on evening wraps.

Many Fall coats are featuring the kimono sleeve with a narrow band of fur as the cuff.

Junior Dress

By Ruth Bates

The small girl today can be as fastidious as her debutante sister in the choosing of her frocks. Design 356 buttons down the front and has long sleeves with narrow cuffs and also features the convertible collar, which may be worn in high standing fashion buttoned snugly at neck. It may be worn with or without the wide belt. It will be the delight of any little girl to have a frock like this made of tweed, novelty plaid woolens, balbriggan or velveteen. Cuts in sizes 6 to 14 years. The 8-year size only requires 2 yards of 36-inch material or 1 1/2 yards of 54-inch material with 5/8 yard of 27-inch contrasting.

To secure today's pattern, write to Ruth Bates and inclose 25 cents in coin or stamps. Give the correct size and be sure to write your name and address plainly. Address Ruth Bates, care of this paper. These patterns will be mailed directly from our New York agent.

It is coming back, with variations.

Another new shade will be Paris blue for evening dresses and wraps.

Reps and fine lightweight twill frocks promise to be much worn during the Fall.

Velvet also promises to be the favored fabric for next season.

One of the new shades of the ever-popular blue is called "sail-or blue."

A black moire frock has an interesting draper at the side, and is lined with green taffeta, which appears at the neck and side-drapery.

A silver lame moire evening coat has two full and long panels at the side, scalloped hem line, and is collared and cuffed with mink.

A cotton dark green voile frock has smocking at waist, shoulders and cuffs in two tones of wool.

A biscuit-colored kid shoe has a checkerboard insert in red or green

JONES AGAIN OUT OF COMMONS AS GOV'T WINS MOVE

London, Aug. 30. — (Universal Service) — The Government was heckled severely for hours today when the House of Commons met especially to pass a resolution continuing the emergency regulations for another month owing to the coal strike.

Socialists frequently interrupted Home Secretary Joyson-Hicks, who moved the resolution, declaring that he was provoking disorders in the coal areas by moving the special police into some districts.

Jack Jones, Labor's most turbulent member, was suspended because he disobeyed the speaker's order to leave the House after he had indulged in a running fire of comment during the speech of the home secretary. Before leaving he shouted to the Government benches amid Socialistic cheers:

"You are a terrible lot of cowards, trying to starve miners who are better men than yourselves. One miner is worth the lot of you."

The home secretary said that there have been only 68 police prosecutions of miners in the 18 weeks of the strike, but insisted that the special powers for dealing with disorders be continued. Ramsay MacDonald, replied that there is "Sabbatical calm" in the coal fields and that any disorders can be met under ordinary police regulations.

ALLEGED SLAYER OF DAUGHTER HELD

Three Rivers, Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch) — The preliminary enquete of Alexandre Levallee, accused of the murder of his daughter Rose-Anna, on Aug. 10, continued today, presided over by Magistrate F. J. Lacoursiere.

Leopold Desilets, substituting for the Crown Prosecutor, reviewed the evidence and stated that sufficient proof had been given to allow the accused to be held for voluntary statement.

YOUTH MURDERS GIRL AND TURNS GUN UPON SELF

Toronto, Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch) — Elmo David Aldo, 22, shot Winnifred F. Caldwell, also 22, then committed suicide. Miss Caldwell, a nurse, was staying at the home of Aldo's parents.

His mother heard the shots, rushed to the girl's room and found them both dead.

LIFE STORY OF MACKENZIE KING

all, so large a measure of opportunity to do my duty, as God gave it to me to see my duty, at that time."

Surely after this convincing justification of Mackenzie King's conduct during the war nothing more is needed to answer the taunts and slanders of his opponents. Mr. Meighen was the same age as Mackenzie King and had no more ties, although married. He remained in Canada in high and safe position. But, in Tory minds, he was loyal because he was a Tory and Mackenzie King was disloyal because he was a Liberal and all the argument in the world will not change a Tory mind once it has taken a position on anything. That is the essence of Conservatism; it never reasons, it never weighs facts, it never uses intelligence; it is "the stupid party" as the greatest of Conservatives, Lord Beaconsfield once termed it.

But honest people who are not slavish in their attachment to party shibboleths will see in Mackenzie King's war-time record a devotion to duty, a service to the Allied cause that was a magnificent achievement, and that there is no shadow of disloyalty to be honestly attached to his name, especially by the Tories of Canada who make commerce of loyalty and prostitute patriotism to their own selfish ends and purposes.

STRATFORD SIGNS C.N.R. ICE STARS

The Canadian National Railways championship hockey team has been sadly shattered by the reported signing of "Dolly" Dolson, Archie Wilcox and Rene Fourier by the Stratford team of the new Western Ontario professional hockey circuit. These three players formed the defence of the Railway-Telephone League champs, and their loss will be a serious blow to their chances of repeating this season. Dolson's work in the nets stamped him a star of first water, while Wilcox has been offered contracts by both Montreal Maroons and Leo Dandurand's Canadiens. Wilcox was in Montreal a couple of weeks ago on a visit and stated then that he expected to play professional hockey with Stratford next season.

Eight boxing bouts and additional wrestling bouts are on the card for the challenge tournament between Montreal and Verdun at Rheume Park, Verdun.

ENGLISH SEEK TO PROMOTE SPORT

London, Aug. 30. — (Universal Service)—Stirred to action by British defeats in international sporting events this summer, a select body of English are about to attempt organizing "Councils of Effort" throughout the country. A meeting will be held in London next week, it is learned, attended by men of wealth and organizing capacity who propose to establish councils in every big centre in the country. As soon as a prospective English woman Channel swimmer, or likely golf or tennis champion appears on the horizon, it is proposed that these councils raise funds for the development of "comers."

JOCKEYS' STANDING

Chicago, Aug. 30.—(Daily World Dispatch)—The standing of the winning riders at Lincoln Fields during the past six days, in the matter of earnings, is D. Smith, D. Dubois, R. Jones and R. Finnelly.

FALL SEASON ON AS BELMONT PARK RAISES BARRIER

New York, Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch) — The 1926 fall racing season will swing into action with the opening of Belmont Park tomorrow. Several important fixtures are on the card to be settled before the closing of the season. The Belmont Park meet will be followed by big meetings in New York, Maryland, Kentucky and Illinois.

LOCAL MAN OUT IN FIRST ROUND OF U.S. NET TOURNEY

Chestnut Hills, Mass., Aug. 30.—(Universal Service)—B. G. Pearce of Montreal, paired with J. W. Foster of Boston, was eliminated in the first round of the United States national doubles championship by a Mexican combination here today. The veteran Claude Butlin and Manuel Llano, both of Mexico City, were able to win from the Canadian-American team only after a strenuous four-set match, 6-3, 2-6, 6-2, 6-4.

All Davis Cup contenders in the forthcoming match between the United States and France survived the first round play. Rene Lacoste and Jean Borotra, French aces, and Henri Cochet and Jacques Brugnon displayed brilliant stroking in defeating their opponents. The victorious U. S. teams were R. Norris Williams and Vincent Richards, Bill Tilden and Alfred Chapin and William M. Johnston and Edward G. Chandler.

PRESIDENT'S PLATE HAS GOOD ENTRY

New York, Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch)—The President's Plate at the Belmont Park September meeting has attracted a field of fine horses. The entries of Pompey, Chance Play, Macaw, Carlis and Haste have been received as well as many of lesser importance.

GOLF MAKES MEN LOPSIDED, 'TIS SAID

New York, Aug. 30. — (Universal Service)—Fashionable tailors are asking one another if golf is producing a race of lop-sided men. As the situation now stands, the majority of men carry one shoulder higher than the other and require special attention. In making his golf strokes a man bends down and if he plays enough, he soon sags on the side he favors. Another burden that brings down the bones and tissues on the right side is the custom of transporting a bag of golf clubs on the shoulder or carrying them in the right hand.

STEEPLECHASE WOODBINE DAILY

A steeplechase will feature every card at the Woodbine autumn meeting from Sept. 15 to 22. Attractive purses have been fixed by the Ontario Jockey Club for each event.

CARLISLES TAKE NET TOURNAMENT AT WESTMOUNT "Y"

H. Carlisle won the boys' handicapped singles in the fall tennis tournament at the Westmount Y.M.C.A. courts yesterday afternoon, by defeating A. Cohen, 6-2, 2-6, 7-5. J. Carlisle won the gentlemen's singles from W. McLaughlin, 6-4, 6-4. Miss Seaton defeated Miss Michaels, 6-3, 6-3, and Mrs. Coles, 6-2, 6-2, to win the ladies' singles.

CRICKET GAME DRAWN

Verdun had scored 89 while Westmount had made 38 for six wickets in reply when bad light forced the players to quit the scheduled Section B cricket match last night.

N. Y. GIANTS INVADE MONTREAL OVER HOLIDAY

MAROONS AND PICKED TEAM TO PLAY VISITORS

New York Giants are to play Maroons on Saturday and they are to play a picked Montreal team on Labor day. Tried to get Len Petos' selection for the Monday's game. That will be divulged at tonight's meeting of the P.Q.F.A.

There will be some peculiar nominations.

Of that I am assured. This does not convey very much news to anybody. The question of who shall be goalkeeper is puzzling the Y.Z.'s.

What a choice they have among this quartette, Murphy of Carsteel, Langlands of Gurney, Kennaway of C.P.R. and Orr of National Breweries.

Put them in the hat and pull one out as far as the representative team is concerned. S'pose as the result of his having played against the ruling of the P.Q.F.A. Orr will not be considered.

None of the goalkeepers would complain if they took the luck that was coming to them out of the hat.

It will be a very interesting vote in view of the many newcomers who have come right bang into the picture.

ULSTER PLAYERS IN FREE-FOR-ALL

When you criticize the Ulster team against Carsteel, will you please keep in mind that they played five games in six days.

And they were able to give Len Petos' men all they asked for.

There was an unfortunate sequel to the game. Just when the Ulster team had boarded the train, Joe Clulow, the centre half and Jim Kelly, the inside left had a difference of opinion. Up went fists. Then the police took a say in the argument. Result: Centre half of Ulster and inside left passed the week-end in the cells.

They appeared before Judge Cusson.

Clulow, it would appear, tried to separate the "others" from which we may take it there had been a disturbance when Constable Alloway of the Canadian Pacific Railway police was obliged to take the pugilists into "quod." For ten minutes the train was delayed at Westmount. It continued and when Montreal West was reached, the conductor had no other option but to put the pugilistic gentlemen under police control. They would have been perfectly willing to spend the week-end in Montreal, but the grim, bare walls did not appeal to them.

The Ulster Secretary advised them to quit in order that their eyes might be attended to, from which could be gathered the fact that somebody other than the two combatants charged, had not had it all their own way. Clulow said "we were only trying to separate the other people." Which would seem to lend color to the suggestion that it had been something approaching a "free for all."

A plea of "guilty" was ultimately advanced and in that both players had passed their "vacation" in Montreal in the cells, they were allowed to go.

THISTLES SEC. BACK

Frank Quinn, the popular secretary of the Thistles Football team, has just returned from the little village of McMasterville and paid a visit to the scene of that memorable battlefield where C.X.L. beat Grenadier Guards by 3-0. The outcome of which was the protest against Johnny Jackson.

THISTLES TO MEET "CAPETOWN" TEAM

Thistles are to meet H.M.S. Capetown on the 4th. This should be a relishing good game, and I don't mind saying even now, no matter how they add to their strength, the Capetown men will win out.

Spotters of talent should be there in force.

QUEEN'S PARK MAN FOR BETHLEHEM

Bethlehem F. C. are surely building up a team with Scottish ideas. On board the Regina was Barrie the Queen's Park right full back, and he left last night in company with Mike Keely for his new quarters.

He is a swarthy boy, with real blood in his veins and I shall be surprised if he does not deliver the goods.

JOCK FOY GOES TO U.S. FOR WINTER

We were of opinion that Jock Foy had determined to remain in Montreal. Wrong. He has crossed the line again and will link up, in fact, has done so with Indiana Flooring.

It was thought that he would fix with Montreal Scottish, but his luck was out. Perhaps it will be better in the end that he should spend the winter in the land of liberties.

MIKE KELLY HAS NOT SAID GOODBYE

D. Armstrong, who is a bright and shining light in hockey and cycling circles in the States viewed the game at Thoronton Park in the company of Hugh McGhee of the New York Giants and Mike Kelly of Bethlehem Steel.

I thought that Mike Kelly would have shed the dust of Canada from his feet ere this, but I learn that instead of leaving for the U. S. A. he proceeded to Quebec, there to meet certain players who are making the acquaintance of these shores for the first time.

Up to the hour of going to press Mike has secured Edwards of Morton, Gillespie of Preston North End. They played their first game for Bethlehem on Saturday. His bag includes Whitey McDonald of Ulsters and Davy Eadie of Hamilton Thistles.

CHARLES MILNE.

FAD'S FOIBLES

The following letter has been received by the writer of this column:—

8,24,26.

Dear Sir,—In the Herald of today they say Coach Nicholson is looking for a good centre who knows the Canadian game. I think it should read that the M.A.A.A. are looking for a good coach who knows the Canadian game, not the American game. What say'st thou?

Truly yours,

LAWRENCE ASKINS.

In replying to Mr. Askins' letter, we think that Mr. Nicholson's results are sufficient evidence of his ability as a football coach. Last year he finished second in the championship race with a very ordinary team and with a little luck in the game here with Ottawa, would have been tied for first place. End runs are a feature of the Canadian game and "Nick" has been more successful at this angle of the game than most coaches in the Big 4.

Jimmy McCaffery, the genial manager of the Ottawa Football Club was an interested spectator at the championship lacrosse game here on Saturday. "Mack" is confident that his Senators will repeat this year, but admits that the Ottawa team are wary of the M.A.A.A. squad, as they have a lot of respect for teams turned out by John Patrick Nicholson.

If the Pittsburgh Pirates fail to land the National League honors the fans will blame Fred Clarke and Bill McKechnie. Max Carey is already tasting the sweets of revenge. As a member of the Brooklyn team he has aided and abetted twice in the humiliating of the team on which he was formerly a valued member.

According to his sparring partners, Gene Tunney covers his daily eight mile jaunt in record time, and it is useless to try to keep up with him. If Jack Dempsey is one half the fighter he was against Willard, Firpo, etc., Tunney will be wise to get all the running practice he can.

Next Saturday, September 4, will see a great galaxy of track stars at the Toronto Exhibition Athletic Day. Included in the entries are DeHart Hubbard, world's champion broad jumper; Adrian Buckner, who has a mark of 9 4-5 seconds for the hundred; George B. (Buck) Hester, Toronto-born boy now of University of Michigan, who has been a sensation in intercollegiate circles; Loren Murchison, several times national sprint champion of the States; Cyril Coafee, sprint champion of Canada; Mirth McKeachennay of the M.A.A.A., who ran second to Coafee in the recent national championships; Harold Osborne of the Illinois A.G., Chicago, who won the world's all round championship at the last Olympic games, will be one of the greatest attractions at the games.

George Uhle, ace of the Cleveland hurling corps, is the real secret of the Indians success this season. Should the Indians pull down second money this fall, they can hand the former sand lot heaver a large share of the credit. Uhle has already won 21 games.

It is just possible that both the Timmis boys will be out of football this season. Big Jerry Timmis, the sensational middle wing of last year's champions, was scheduled to leave on Saturday last for Detroit. Just why Jerry left the Capital, no one seems to know. It is rumored that he telephoned to the Winged Wheelers last week, but there were no takers.

Now we hear that his brother Brian and the officers of the Hamilton Tigers are not seeing eye to eye and the husky Brian may view this season's proceedings from a pew with the cash customers.

Why call woman the "weaker sex"? During the past month two of the so called weaklings have succeeded in swimming the English Channel, which is regarded as one of the most gruelling tests of physical endurance. During the same period numerous big husky six footers of the "stronger" sex, like Ishak Helmy, the giant Egyptian; Omer Perrault, local swimmer, and many others, have been taken from the water more or less exhausted. If the girls keep up this pace, mere man will soon be in the minority with successful attempts.

Eighty candidates reported to practice with an intermediate and junior teams at the Westward A.A.A. on Friday. Judging from this, we ought to have plenty of senior candidates in the next year or two.

The Dominion champions are attempting to arrange an exhibition game with the McGill squad for Thanksgiving Day. Last year these teams mingled and the champs. came off second best. Queen's had little difficulty taking "Shags" team into camp in two games, but could do very little with the Ottawa aggregation in the clash for the highest Canadian football honors. Yes, football is a funny old game.

PROVINCIAL TRACK CHAMPIONSHIPS IN HARRIERS' MEET

With the Provincial Championship track and field meet scheduled for Saturday and also on the same day the Marathon being held, officials of the Montreal Harriers A.A.A. are preparing the various entry lists which every day bring more out of town competitors. The 100 and 220 yard sprints should create close competition as two of the city's best short distance men will be competing at Toronto at the Canadian National Exhibition meet, the two men being Myrth McKechnenay and Donald Batn. Ed Fabre, the Montreal runner who has competed in the long distance classic at Boston for years is entered for Montreal's big race and his many friends will be watching him.

JUNIOR LACROSSE PLAY-OFF TONIGHT

The Junior lacrosse officers have arranged the City play-offs for tonight at the Westward A.A.A. field to decide the winner of Section 1. The officials have been selected with Jimmy Walsh and King Brady, Referees: goal umpires, Mr. Dumont and Mr. Gilmer; time keeper, Father Ryan. Following section 1 play-off the winners will meet St. Willibrod's who are Section 2 champions. In the finals for the city championship the victors in the Section 1 vs 2 game will stack up against Caughnawaga who hold the honors in Section 3.

TORONTO POLOISTS PLAY SATURDAY FOR GRENFELL CUP

Poloists from Toronto will arrive here this week to compete with Montreal's polo team Thursday afternoon and Saturday. Their first game will be with the Montrealers in club games at the Back River Polo club grounds.

The Grenfell cup will be played for Saturday afternoon. Montreal now holds the coveted polo trophy.

NEW CHANNEL SWIM RECORD SET BY GERMAN

VIERKOETTER IN WATER FOR LESS THAN 13 HOURS

London, Aug. 30. — (Universal Service) — Today's channel swim was accomplished by Hans Vierkoetter from South Germany, who touched land at East Dover at 2.10 p.m. He hung up world time record for the feat by making it in 12 hours and 42 minutes, thus beating the records of the two U.S. women, Gertrude Ederle and Mrs. Clemington Corson, who had this month defeated all men who had previously made the swim.

Vierkoetter is unknown outside of Germany, mainly because only this year have Germans been permitted to compete in international swimming events. His attempt today was therefore unheralded and only a group of soldiers greeted him when he reached the English side.

Escorted by a tug, he swam in a calm sea, which for several hours had been covered with a heat mist. He collapsed into unconsciousness as soon as he reached land. After a brief rest, the soldiers carried him to a small boat which took him to the tug for an immediate return to Boulogne.

Vierkoetter entered the water at Cape Gris Nez, France, at 1:35 today and walked out on English soil at 2:17 p.m., his swimming time being 12 hours and 42 minutes.

Miss Ederle cabled congratulations to the German with a friendly challenge for a race across the Channel next summer.

ACCLAIMED AT PARIS

Calais, Aug. 30. — (Universal Service) — Vierkoetter was wildly acclaimed here when he returned from making a world record in swimming the English Channel. Having recovered his strength, he said: "I'm feeling fine and could repeat the performance tonight. I used the crawl stroke almost exclusively. The hardest part of the swim was at 10 this morning when strong currents made progress almost impossible. I am completely satisfied. I had the will to succeed and I succeeded. Now I shall return to Germany to resume my baking business, because money is what I lack. I most certainly would accept an offer of an American tour, if I had one."

LEAFS SMOTHER READING UNDER 22 RUNS; WIN TWO

Toronto, Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch) — Smothering Reading with a ock of runs in the first game, and scoring four runs in a last inning rally in the second, Toronto took both ends of a double-header here today, 22 to 3 and 8 to 7. With Baltimore losing to Buffalo, the Leafs stepped farther ahead of the parade.

In the first game, the Leafs made made 22 hits, scored a run for every hit, and played errorless ball in the field. The second game looked gloomy for the home talent when they came to bat in the seventh and last inning. Reading had a 7 to 4 lead and had hammered three pitchers from the box. A spurt by the Canadian batters, however, pushed four runs across the plate before the game was finished.

New York, Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch) — With a sickening thud, for the Yanks, Joe Judge, agile first baseman on the Washington Senators, crashed into the hall of fame in the first inning of the game today by socking a homer into the right field bleachers with the bases filled. Which accounted for four of the 12 runs Washington was accumulating while New York was picking up a niggardly 6 counts.

For league leaders and possible world series contenders, the Yanks looked particularly sour. They gave a splendid exhibition of how not to play baseball, all to the jeers

GERMANS MAKE VIERKOETTER HERO AS U.S. DID GERT

Berlin, Aug. 30. — (Universal Service) — Vierkoetter is the hero of the hour in Germany. His victory is doubly welcomed as proof of German prowess following charges made by the German Press that Dudley Field Malone, Gertrude Ederle's New York attorney, tried to suppress the general knowledge of her German antecedents and that participation by German-Americans was not encouraged in her New York reception.

MISS MACKENZIE AND MISS PAGET TIED IN 1st ROUND

Winnipeg, Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch) — With cards of $5, Miss Ada Mackenzie, Toronto, and Miss Helen Paget, Ottawa, tied for low medal score in the qualifying round of the Canadian ladies' open golf championship here today.

of the fans. Walter Johnson held the Yanks to five hits through to eighth inning, when, with an eight run lead, he let up a bit and the Yanks scored five runs and six hits.

New York, Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch) — Snapping out of their lethargy, at least temporarily, the Giants took a game from Brooklyn today, 8 to 2. Two home runs by Heinie Mueller and the pitching of Hugh McQuillan furnished the features of the day.

SAFE AT THIRD BASE:—Beecher (right) of the Excelsior Club, slips past Ellard at Alexander Park game with Columbus. All went fairly well until the sixth inning, when both sides stopped to argue various questions. No fatalities were reported, however.

WATT AND AIKMAN WIN BANCROFT CUP DOUBLES FINAL

Youth bowed to experience in the doubles final of the Bancroft cup tennis tournament yesterday afternoon, and Watt and Aikman, Mount Royal Tennis club stars, defeated Valois and Deschenes, of Verdun, after a valiantly fought match, 6—4, 6—4, 3—6, 6—3.

PADDY GALKAN, star pitcher on the Excelsiors, who hurled his team into a tie for first place in Section A.

LOCAL NET STARS SURVIVE 1st ROUND

Toronto, Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch) — J. A. Wright and D. McLean, both of Montreal, were victorious in their matches in the opening round of the men's singles for the Eastern Canadian championship, winning their matches easily.

Playing fine ball behind Pitter Eckstein's brilliant hurling, North Branch Y, section B champions, defeated Central Y at the M.A.A.A. grounds last night, 9 to 6. Epstein had 10 strikeouts.

MRS. CORSON MAY RACE GERT EDERLE

New York, Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch) — With a bet of $25,000 already posted by backers of Mrs. Clemington Corson, second woman to swim the channel, a swim around Manhattan Island between Gertrude Ederle and Mrs. Corson looks to be a possibility. Miss Ederle is recuperating from a nervous breakdown brought on by the excitement of her homecoming and the weeks of rigorous training put in preparing for her swim across the English Channel.

AUSSIES SCORE 317

Brighton, Eng., Aug. 30. — (Daily World Cable) — Bardsley's batting of 118 not out was the feature of the Australia-Sussex cricket match here today. The Aussies scored 317 in their first innings. Sussex scored 240 in their first innings.

LEAGUE AWARDS EXCELSIOR GAME, SUSPEND ELLARD

At last night's meeting of section A of the Montreal City and District baseball league, Excelsiors were declared winners of the weekend game by score 3-0, this being the count when a young riot broke up the game.

Russell Ellard the peppery Columbus shortstop was suspended for the balance of the season for his part in the fracas, and Wilf Toole, also of the Columbus team, was suspended for one game for being too effervescent with the umpires. Toole has been given the gate twice by arbiters during the present season, and it was felt that a rest might do him good.

The result of this game places Excelsiors and Columbus in a tie for first place, and some interesting developments as to eligibility, etc., are expected before the teams clash again.

SWIMS 92 MILES FOR NEW FRESH WATER RECORD

Flomanton, Ala., Aug. 30. — (Daily World Dispatch) — A new long distance record for swimming is believed to have been established by Bill Jackson, of Flomanton, who just completed a 92-mile grind down the Escambia River. He required nine hours and 33 minutes for the swim.

RECORD CROWD AT BLUE BONNETS:—Every inch of space on the grounds was filled almost every day since the opening of the final meeting for the season at the Montreal Jockey Club Course. Fast ponies added greatly to the interest in the meet. Above (at left), may be seen a disciple of Dame Fortune, whose bowed head seems to indicate that he has suffered at the hands of his fickle mistress.

IN REMEMBRANCE OF RUDY. Not only the movie fans in private life, but also those in the theatrical profession, flocked to the Polyclinic Hospital after hearing of Valentino's death. Above is a number of show girls arriving at the hospital with flowers. They are (left to right) Carol Boyer, Corinne Sylva and Kathleen Ray of "A Night in Paris." (Graph'e.)

ALMOST, BUT NOT QUITE:—At right: Smith, the Ulster United goalkeeper, saved many hot ones from the Carsteel forwards at Thornton Park, but the hottest of all was when Cook attempted to deliver the goods. The Ulster man saved brilliantly, thereby keeping Carsteel goal total down to a large 0.
