HEAVY RAINFALL CHECKS DISTRICT FOREST FIRES

World News In Brief

Warsaw, Oct. 29.—(AP)—Premier Josef Cyrankiewicz told the Polish Parliament today that frontier guards had prevented 35,000 persons from illegally leaving the country this year but that Opposition Leader Stanislaw Mikolajczyk had managed to flee.

The Premier said nothing, however, to clarify how Mikolajczyk, leader of the Polish Peasant party, had made his way out of the country or his present whereabouts.

Previously there had been speculation in some quarters that Mikolajczyk might have been apprehended while attempting to cross the border. The Opposition leader, who apparently fled Poland in fear of his life, had not been definitely located since he dropped out of sight 10 days ago with a party of seven friends. There have been unconfirmed reports that he already was in Britain, or was on his way there via Sweden.

Adak, Alaska, Oct. 29.—(AP)—The treacherous North Pacific crossing lay behind the globe-girdling pilots, Clifford Evans and Saskatchewan-born George Truman and their tiny planes today, but the long Aleutian Island chain, the "cradle of storms," lay ahead.

The two former United States army fliers and their 100-horsepower planes landed at Shemya last night after a flight of 13 hours, 28 minutes from Nemuro Airfield, Japan. The distance is about 1,500 miles. Shemya is 420 miles west of here.

The trans-Pacific crossing was fair nearly all the way except for 2½ hours of rough weather, the fliers said.

The United States Navy sent a flying boat out from the Aleutians to meet the two planes and take over the escort from Flying Fortresses assigned to them in Japan.

The planned next stops will be at Amchitka, Adak, Fort Glenn and Anchorage, most northern point of their 21,350-mile world flight. They left Teterboro, N.J., last Aug. 10 on a leisurely world flight.

New Delhi, Oct. 29.—(AP)—The government of India continued to pour more troops into Kashmir by air today amid conflicting reports concerning the progress of operations against a force of several thousand invading Pathan tribesmen from the Northwest Frontier province in Pakistan.

Pakistan radio reports heard here said that the invaders had filtered into the Kashmir capital of Srinagar and that the city was in danger of capture, but this was denied by the Indian government, which said the tribesmen had been driven back out of the Srinagar plain into the hills 30 miles west of the capital.

Early Canadian Statement On Council Membership Due

Lake Success, Oct. 29.—(AP)—Canada's representative on the 11-member Security Council of the United Nations, to which the Dominion was elected more than a month ago, may be announced this week by Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

It is understood reliably that the Prime Minister has been urged by several of his close associates to make the announcement before he sails Saturday from New York for England and the Nov. 20 Royal Wedding.

This has led to the assumption here that the decision on this appointment, as important as any Canadian diplomatic post, has been made or is close to being made, barring some last-minute hitch.

The Prime Minister is scheduled to arrive in New York Friday morning and sail for England the next day after receiving the Award Medal of the Canadian Club of New York.

Meanwhile in the United Nations here, attention focused on arguments over Korean independence and the new wrangle over press freedom.

The United States yesterday presented to the U.N. Political Committee its plan for national elections in Korea and withdrawal of occupation troops, and promptly ran into stern opposition from Russia, which, like the United States, has occupation forces in Korea.

Heavy Toll In Parisian Street Rows

Scenes Reminiscent of 1936 Re-enacted as Communists Clash With Rightists—Bitter Debate in Assembly.

Paris, Oct. 29.—(AP)—Unofficial counts of the number injured in last night's bloody, head-cracking street fight between Communist and Paris police ranged today from 40 to 300.

The riotous street brawling, first major political street battle in Paris since the bitter conflicts of 1936, occurred only a few hours after Premier Paul Ramadier opened his Government's fight for life in the National Assembly, summoned into special session to deal with France's vexing political and economic problems.

Communists estimated to number about 35,000 responded to a call in their newspaper "Humanite" to break up an anti-Communist meeting sponsored by former Senator Gustave Guatherot.

They besieged the Place d'Etoile meeting place and broke through three police lines and a wooden barricade before police drove them off. The meeting, attended by about 1,500 persons, was held and ended early today.

Estimates of the number injured ranged in the Paris press to as high as 150 on each side. An official police statement said eight officers had been hurt.

The Assembly, which yesterday heard Ramadier attack both the Communists and Gen. de Gaulle, was in recess until tomorrow, when it was expected a vote of confidence would be taken.

Most observers thought Ramadier would be able to win by a small margin.

Ramadier blasted de Gaulle, victor in France's recent municipal elections, as a modern "Caesar" and a leader of the "enemies of the Republic." He hoped to be ap- prised "some day" of the policy of de Gaulle's new party, the Rassemblement du Peuple Fran- cais (R.P.F.).

Amid riotous, fist-shaking, screaming scenes in which Com- munist Secretary Jacques Duclos rose to accuse Ramadier of subser- vience to "American imperialism," other deputies chanted "Petkov Petkov, a reminder of the execu- tion of Opposition Leader Nikola Petkov by the pro-Communist government of Bulgaria.

Few Smouldering Stumps Still Bear Witness to Fires Which Swept Thousands of Acres of Bushlands Throughout the Eastern Townships.

A rainfall which started last night and was recorded at .25 inches at 7 a.m. today brought relief to hundreds of men fighting stubborn forest and brush fires in the Eastern Townships area, and brought under control any fires which had threatened, and all but extinguished those which were dying out.

Stumps are still smouldering and in many places the flames have eaten up to two feet underground. A prolonged heavy rainfall is needed to extinguish these menaces, which would flare up anew if a strong wind arose. In some cases, they may smoulder and make progress for a week before breaking into flame.

Hundreds of acres have been ravaged in the South Bolton-Mansenville-Sutton area, near St. Denis de Brompton, on the Shonyo Mountains in the neighborhood of Magog, and in the international border area of Dixville-Stanhope-Hereford.

From St. Denis, it was learned the flames which yesterday threatened to cross the 11th range road into a heavily timbered area on the shores of Little Lake Brompton, where there are many summer camps owned by Sherbrooke residents, had been regulated by the rain and were at least momentarily, checked.

A saw mill and a large quantity of cut timber on the lake side of the road were considered out of danger.

A report from South Bolton revealed that a heavy rainfall during the night had brought under control the flames which have been raging over a 12 mile front. The area is located in a triangular area formed from drawing straight lines from Sutton to South Bolton, from there to Mansenville, and back to Sutton.

Near Magog, the fire which started at the base of the Shonyo Mountains and threatened to destroy farmers' homes and then raced up to the timberline, is under control and dying out. At one point, farmers used tractors to cut paths through the woods to halt the flames from reaching their homes.

In the border area, where volun- teers and regular firemen from Cansan, Vt., were working to halt the flames spreading to the Amer- ican side of the line, everything is under control with the flames dying out.

Five houses which were in the path of the flames now are con- sidered out of danger.

There is no accurate estimate of the total acres ravaged, but it is believed they will number several thousand when an ac- curate count can be made.

No great amount of merchant- able timber had been lost as far as is known, and no one has been reported killed or badly injured as a result of the fires.

In some sections, the fires have been raging for more than a week.

Shortage Of Labor Shows Minor Drop

Available Jobs Still Out- number Unemployed by Some Ten Thousand, Labor Statement Shows.

Ottawa, Oct. 29.—(AP)—Canada's favorable labor balance has begun its first noticeable decline since the post-war boom but available jobs still outnumber unemployed by 10,000 and the Labor Department predicts there likely will be no labor surplus until winter begins to block major construction and transportation activity.

In his monthly report on the manpower picture yesterday, Labor Minister Mitchell showed that unfilled vacancies recorded at Employment Service offices across the nation totalled 102,000 at Oct. 16, a drop of 15,000 since Sept. 11.

On the other side of the ledger there were 92,000 unemployed applicants at the same date, about 8,000 more than at Sept. 11 this year but still 45,000 below the unemployment figure a year ago. The Minister's report said that the 92,000 unemployed applicants included a proportion of job seekers "who are unsuitable for general employment because of phys- ical age and also many now em- ployed who have applied for other jobs."

Reporter Describes Scenes In Separated Fire Regions

To give its readers a first-hand account of the fires raging in various parts of the Eastern Townships prior to the heavy rains of last night, the Record sent a staff reporter and photographer to the St. Denis de Brompton and Brome County areas. Below is the story of conditions yesterday afternoon as seen by the writer.

By JOHN JENNINGS
Record Staff Writer

Somewhere in the Sutton-South Bolton-Mansenville fire area, firefighters combatting the flames in this area are handicapped by a lack of water, a lack of men, bone-dry woods and moun- tain roads inaccessible to trucks, which hamper them in getting from one point to another quickly.

Some of the men have been fighting the fires for more than a week, but have been pushed back relentlessly. Smoke arising from the fires can be seen for miles before the scene of the fire is reached, and it reaches several hundred feet into the air, hanging over the area like a dirty blanket.

Parts of the smoke-filled wood- lands are heavily covered with timber, while other sections are covered with saplings and thick underbrush.

This underbrush is generally heavy and the fallen leaves have laid a thick inflammable carpet for the more slowly advancing flames to feed upon and gain strength to tackle the heavier tim- ber.

Flames are not so prominent during the daytime, but when darkness falls, residents say the area is covered with red lights and at times they can see the red tongues racing across the treetops on the ridges.

A. H. Treagus, who owns a small farm off the road from South Bolton to Sutton, remarked, when asked by this reporter and photo- grapher, Gerry Lemay, whether there was a good spot to take pictures: "Did you bring a fire truck and hose with you?"

His aged wife and young daughter have been clearing away the dead leaves from around their small home, and made efforts to clear away as much brush and tim- ber as possible to have a free area around their dwelling in case the fire reaches them.

The family said that on Mon- day night the flames hit the ridge overlooking their farm, into a bright red glow and flames could be seen jumping from one treetop to another, blinking like lights on a switchboard.

The fire started creeping down the slope towards their farm, but a change in the wind pushed the flames back down a previously unburnt section of the mountain.

George Goyette, who has a farm about two miles further up the narrow, rock-studded road, said the fire had come to within two miles of his property, "but the wind turned it away today."

There is a lumber camp, oper- ated by Russell Gail, a few miles behind Goyette's farm, which is almost at the crest of the ridge, and a large number of men fight- ing the nearly-extinguished fire in that area yesterday were rushed down the bumpy road by truck to aid in fighting the fires threaten- ing the Bolton Lumber Company.

Pay Day And Holiday Likely To Delay Scheduled Strike At Local Textile Factory

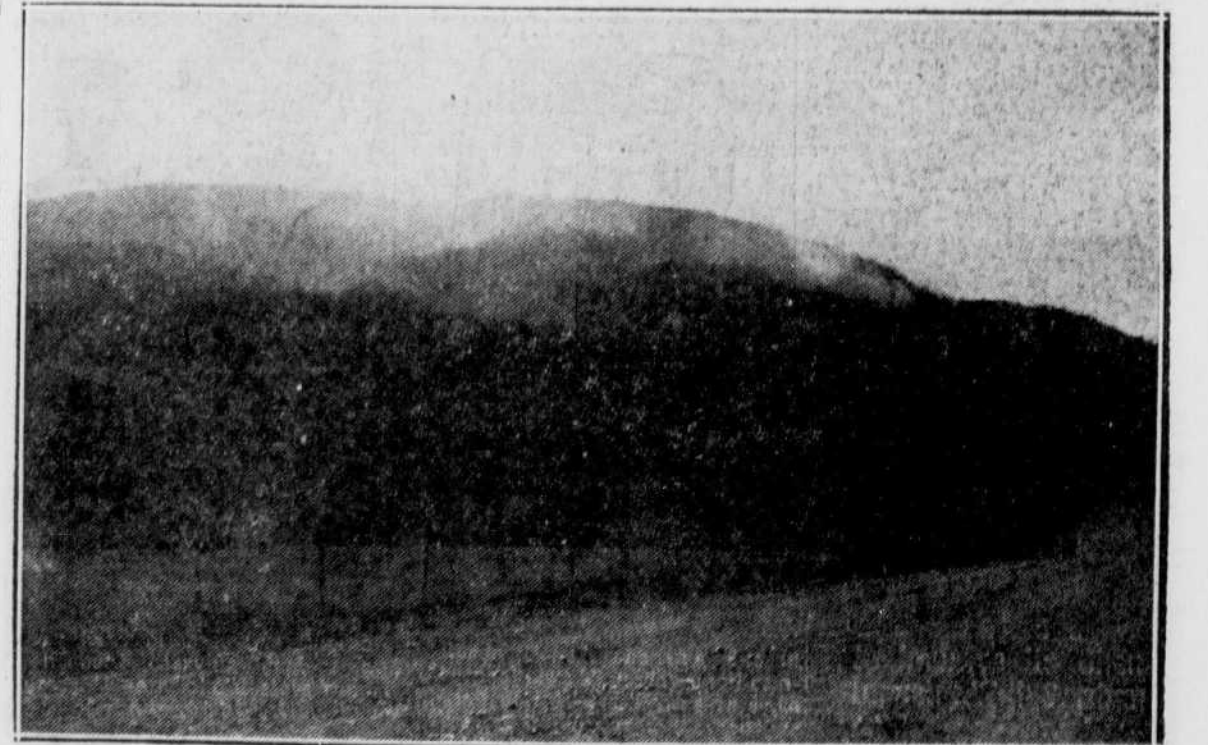

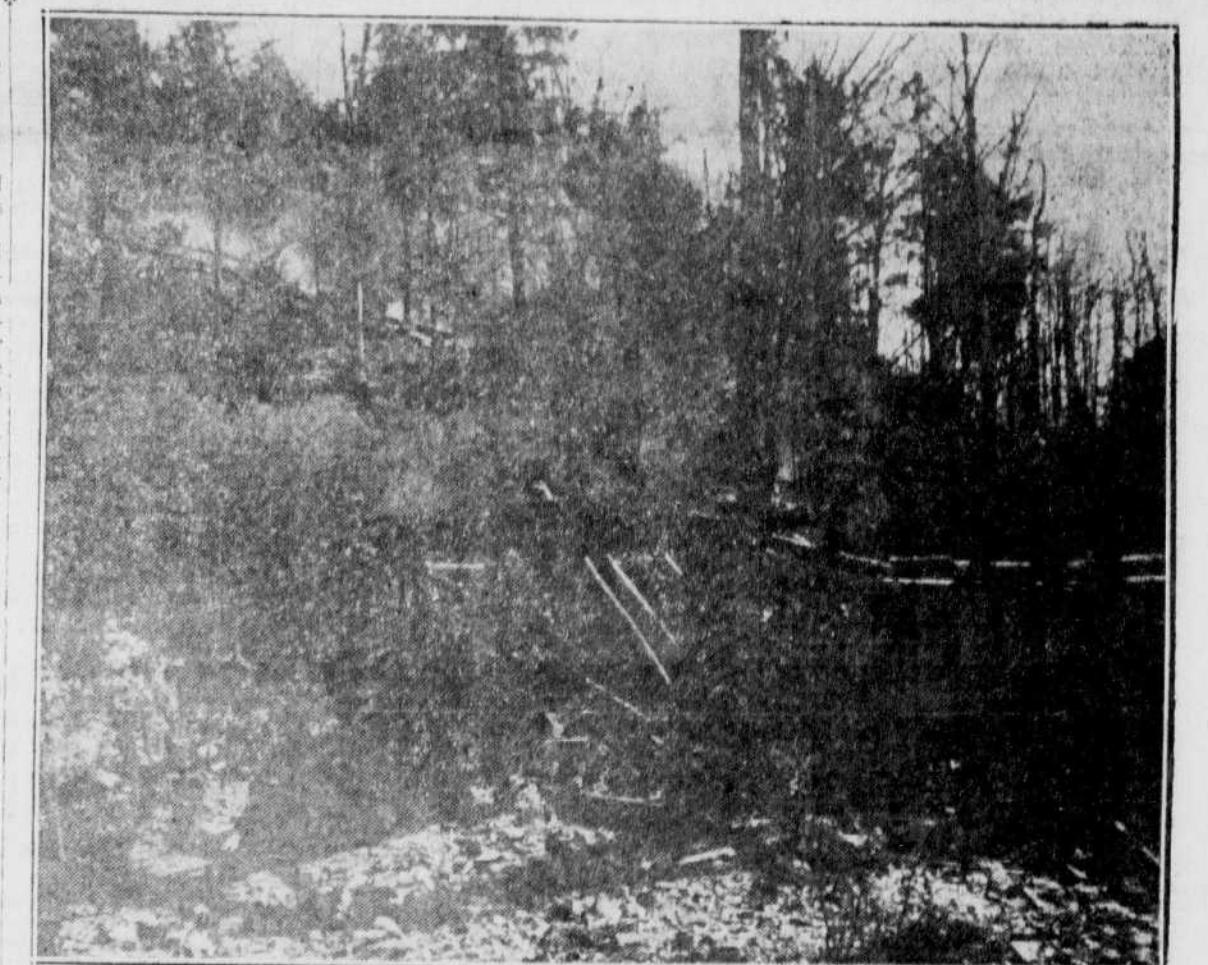

Due to the fact that Friday is payday and Saturday is a regular holiday, the strike scheduled for Thursday morning at the local plant of the Dominion Textile Company now is expected to take place on Monday morning unless a settlement is reached between the union and the company at a meeting to be held in Montreal today.

Union officials were unavailable for comment today, and a com- pany spokesman said operations at the plant were going smoothly.

Labor Minister Barrette has ap- pointed Cyprien Myron to preside over the conference, brought about in an effort to settle the differences between the two parties. Mr. Myron is chief conciliator of the Labor Department.

The big issue between the em- ployees, represented by the Na- tional Catholic Textile Syndicate which received an overwhelming vote by secret ballot to call a strike, is a management rights clause. The plants affected are at Magog, Drummondville, St. Gregoire de Montmorency and Typical of the brush fires which yesterday swept the St. Denis de Brompton area, the top picture shows a section of the blaze which at one time threatened a sawmill community and a large quantity of sawn lumber.

In the centre a camp in the Brompton Lake area is shown after being swept by the flames.

The lower picture is a view of the Bolton Pass region, with the flaming mountains in the background.

United States Seeks Early Greek Offensive In North

Washington, Oct. 29.—(AP)—Gov- ernment officials are considering an increase in the United States mili- tary mission to Greece as a means of helping the Greek army prepare for a clean-up offensive against Communist guerrilla forces.

Authorities said the present mis- sion, totalling 40 officers and men, now appears to be too small to do an adequate job. The mission's as- signment has been to help Greek forces assemble United States equipment being furnished them under the "Truman Doctrine" aid program and to train the Greeks.

LITTLE MASTER

PITCHING HORSESHOES by Billy Rose

There's an interesting set of people rattling around New York these days. I don't think you've heard much about them. I doubt if you ever will.

One of them came into my office this afternoon to play me some melodies she had composed. It was obvious from the way she fingered the practice arpeggios that the lady knew her way around a piano.

"I wish you would be frank about my music," she said in a charming Mittel-Europa accent. "Please do not say nice things you do not mean."

For the next half hour I listened. Her tunes were pleasant enough, but they couldn't seem to make up their minds whether they were Heidegger or Hotcha.

"They're pretty good," I said when she had finished, "but I doubt whether they're Hit Parade stuff."

Evidently I wasn't the first person in this country who had said "No" to her music. "Thank you," she smiled. "Could I come back in a few months? Maybe by that time I'll have the feel of your American tempo."

I asked the lady if any of her songs had been published.

She said, "Yes, a great many," and told me the titles of some of her compositions. I remembered a couple of them. They were gay little waltzes which had set all Austria humming before the Horst Wessel Song became the first tune on the Danube Hit Parade.

As we said our good-byes, I told her to keep trying. I knew she would anyway. But I also knew her chances of getting help to our American beat were not particularly good. For several years now, Broadway has been the unhappy hunting ground for much of the theatrical talent which fled from Der Schoener Adolph. Producers have been giving ear-time to big-name playwrights, directors, actors and composers from every nation between Petrovsk and the Pyrenees. I'm afraid it hasn't added up to much.

In Europe before the war, these gay and talented folk lived in fancy apartments and ate their goulash out of pedigree porcelain. Here they live in furnished rooms, cook on hot plates, and spend most of their waking hours trying to adapt themselves to our run-of-the-mill rhythms. I'd like to see them make the grade, but I'm afraid most of them are in for tough times. Much as I would like to see them succeed, I'm afraid I'm not a living writing trisane music.

In spite of the doors which have been banged in their faces, these

DRUMVILLE CHURCHES HELD BIBLE SERVICE

Drummondville, Oct. 29.—On Sunday evening, the St. George's Anglican Church joined in a worship service with the United Church in the St. George's Church.

The Rev. De Courcy Rayner, of the British and Foreign Bible Society, was the guest speaker. After a short prayer service religious moving pictures were shown in the St. George's Hall.

This annual service was to offer corporate prayer for the spread of the Gospel, thanksgiving for the Word, and a gift to further the great work of the Saviour gave His followers to do. One of the greatest agencies of the Church for the spread of the Gospel is the British and Foreign Bible Society, a branch of which represents Canada and Newfoundland, and one of the most striking facts, which has made the burdens of the Society heavy, is that in the war-torn countries of the world few Bibles were printed during hostilities. As one example of the shortage it is estimated that in Germany, where 180,000 young people have joined the church only about ten per cent possess a copy of the scriptures. In the British zone of Germany there are over three million children in the public and high schools, all without the Book.

Pastor Martin Niemoller has emphasized that out of his imprisonment and isolation the inescapable conviction came to him

Continental katzenjammer are still able to laugh it up. Some of the brightest conversation in Manhattan these nights is to be heard in the coffee houses and delicatessens where they congregate. Some of their best jokes are on themselves and on their inability to adjust themselves to Yankee razzmatazz. Where schnitzel is never served without a piece of lemon, the sad little tale which follows is the current favorite.

Kleffebach, one of the mainstays of the old Salzburg, was engaged to conduct a series of concerts in New York. Before boarding the plane with his wife, he bought the four-volume edition of "American Manners and Mores" by an anthropologist from the University of Leipzig.

"A strange land, mama," mused Kleffebach as he turned the pages. "Nevertheless a land abounding in sausage and strudel."

Kleffebach read his wife the story of a talented fellow named Oscar Levant who made big money out of music only after he started telling jokes on the radio. The couple were even more impressed by the story of Salvador Dali, the surrealist painter who jumped into prominence by jumping through the plate glass window of a Fifth Avenue department store.

"In America it is not enough to have talent," Kleffebach told his wife. "A man must also be spectacular."

The directors of the New York orchestra Kleffebach had been engaged to conduct were astonished to find that his first program included a razzmatazz called "The Fireman's Quadrille." The librarian looked it up and reported back that this old-time favorite hadn't been played by an important orchestra since McKinley was President. The directors registered a mild beef, but they subsided when the great man from Salzburg frowned at them over his bifocals.

During the first half of his concert, Kleffebach more than lived up to his reputation. Then came "The Fireman's Quadrille." In the middle of the piece, the audience suddenly heard the wailing of sirens and the ringing of bells. Black clouds of smoke billowed up from behind the percussion section. A minute later the stage was filled with firemen brandishing axes and dragging long lines of hose. One of them silenced the orchestra and stepped to the podium. "Be calm!" he bellowed at the audience. "Walk, don't run, to the nearest exit!"

That night, after the directors bailed Kleffebach out of the house, the poor little man explained that he had only tried to give America what he thought it wanted. Right after the town of "The Fireman's Quadrille," he had had his wife light a tar pot backstage and then ring every fire alarm in the neighborhood.

that there was only one message that could bring freedom to his fellow countrymen, that was the Gospel of Christ.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the United Church held a very successful social tea and sale of home cooking last Thursday afternoon in the Church Hall, on Lindsay street.

A JUNIOR CHOIR FORMED

Mr. Gault Parker, organist and choirmaster of the United Church, is to be heartily commended on forming a Junior Choir of about sixteen children.

Master Donald Eastwood has been elected president, and Master David Conyers, elected secretary-treasurer.

The first public appearance will be for the Candle Light Service, on December 20.

Rehearsals will soon commence for the presentation of the sacred cantata, "The Daughter of Jarius," to be presented in the early spring.

THE BAPTIST CHURCH

Regular Sunday evening services are being held at 7:30 o'clock at 42 Holmes street. The Rev. T. D. M. Carson has begun his ministry in this city with a series of Sunday evening addresses on Primary Principles and Primitive Christianity. An invitation is extended to all to attend these services.

THE HOME AND SCHOOL ASSOCIATION

Last Thursday evening members and friends of the Home and School Association held the first regular monthly meeting of the season.

Reports of the president and sub-committees were submitted and two very interesting films were shown, (A) $1,000 For Recreation, (B) Playtown U.S.A. The balance of the evening was spent in getting acquainted with the teaching staff of the Riverview School.

A very cordial invitation is extended to all parents and friends of the pupils and staff to attend these meetings.

PRIZE AND SCHOLARSHIP FUND FOR RIVERVIEW SCHOOL

Last spring there was forwarded a letter to the parents and friends of pupils of Riverview School advising that a Prize and Scholarship Committee had been formed to collect contributions for school prizes and to establish a Scholarship Fund.

In the rush of summer activities possibly this fund has been forgotten. With the fall season here and the school commencement exercises being held Friday, November 14, the committee would like to bring this fund to your attention. If you have not already made a contribution, give your generous support to this essential fund.

Parents and friends of pupils may send their donations to Mr. J. L. MacKeen, the treasurer of the Association. The committee members are available at any time to give information or receive contributions.

The Prize and Scholarship Committee: F. Adamson, 880 Mercure Blvd.; J. L. Killoran, 882 Mercure Blvd.; J. L. MacKeen, 210 Chapleau street; E. C. McWilliam, chairman, Marconi Station; E. C. Montgomery, treasurer, 794 Mercure Blvd.

PROVINCIAL SCOUT CONFERENCE

A conference of Boy Scout officials from all parts of the Province of Quebec was held at North Hatley during the week-end of October 11. The meeting was under the chairmanship of Mr. E. Russell Patterson, executive commissioner for Quebec.

The provincial commissioner for Nova Scotia, Mr. William Speed, opened the session with a talk on problems in Scout training in general. Many other prominent Scout leaders were heard during the session and there were special training demonstrations for the three sections of the Scout movement, wolf cubs, boy scouts and rover scouts.

Many films on the scout movement as well as nature films were shown.

Scout officials from Drummondville who attended the conference were Messrs. S. Conyers, O. Bogstad, Lloyd Doull, J. Van Damme, R. Rout, B. Templeman, J. MacPherson, M. Roadley, N. West, D. Illick, E. Christman and Mrs. B. Templeman.

The Drummondville delegation reports a very successful conference.

IN HOLLYWOOD by Erskine Johnson

NEA Staff Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD'S A FUR, FUR PIECE

Hollywood, Oct. 29.—Al Teitelbaum, the Beverly Hills furrier who once made a squirrel fur skirt for Gene Tierney and an ermine sweater for Mike Romanoff, is disappointed in New Yorkers after reading Frederic Wake an's "The Saxon Charm."

In the new novel by the author of "The Hucksters," a Broadway producer awakens a showgirl out of a deep sleep by whispering "Mink coat."

"That would hardly rouse a glamor girl in Hollywood," Teitelbaum told me. "You'd have to specify what kind of mink."

It only snows coniforms in Hollywood, but through those shredded drifts walk the most exquisitely-pelleted women in the world. Al Teitelbaum and an untold number of unsuspecting little fur-bearers collaborate the year round to keep Hollywood looking like a gigantic mink farm.

Bonus Coat

Sometimes stars buy the furs to make for their pictures from the studios and, occasionally, the studio will hand out a blizzard marten coat as a kind of bonus. But most of the time, the glamor girls shell out their own hard cash at Teitelbaum's plush, gray-toned salon for coats, hats, jackets, capes and other items into which good little minks go.

Ginger Rogers once bought a white ermine trench coat that he designed. And Paulette Goddard had him make up a leopard-lined raincoat for her recent trip to England. Whenever he gets a spare moment, which is seldom, he whips out his sketch pad and turns out such eyebrow-raisers as Eisenhower jackets combining mink and ermine, or sable aprons that are just the thing for an actress when she puts around the kitchen.

Teitelbaum will match the furs of high-salaried Hollywood stars against the furs of New York's cafe society any cool night in the week. When he announces that Ann Sheridan has just about everything, he doesn't necessarily mean oomph. Anne's "everything" means her mink, marten, ermine and sable.

A short time ago, Teitelbaum gave his cutters an order to prepare two mink coats of his design for a Gene Autry western picture. One of the cutters, a lady, complained.

"Yesterday," she moaned, "it was Greer Garson. Today it's Champion."

Teitelbaum assured her that the coats were for Autry's two leading ladies and not for his horse. The woman cutter shrugged her shoulders.

"Double phooey," she said. "Mink coats in a western. Gene Autry must have a hole in his head."

They're Not Furriers

Barbara Stanwyck, Loretta Young and Joan Crawford are down in Teitelbaum's book of Hollywoodians as the stars who know most about furs.

Betty Hutton likes to try on every fur in the place. Her fur wardrobe, which includes ermine, sable and mink, is equally suitable for Siberian winters and Hollywood premieres.

Bette Davis is one of Teitelbaum's more conservative customers. Betty wouldn't go for white mink, which is about as precious as uranium, but Joan Crawford and Benay Venuta felt no such constraint. In fact, Benay is still smarting because a friend mistook her white mink for ordinary ermine.

The most fun Teitelbaum ever had in designing furs for the screen was for "The Road to Utopia." After long research, he gave Bing Crosby an oversized coat made up of bearskin and skunk

Palestine Development Is Reviewed At Local Lecture

"The common Arab and Jew in Palestine are friends and work side by side in perfect harmony," stated Col. Edwin H. Cooper, D.S.C. and Silver Medal, to an attentive mixed audience in the Jewish Community Hall last night. The internationally known lecturer and photographer gave a vividly colorful description of the Jewish agricultural and industrial progress when he presented his documentary film entitled "Palestine Today."

Col. Cooper, who during the war was a correspondent for the Christian Science Monitor, has travelled all over the world.

The picture, taken by Col. Cooper, who makes his home in New York, depicts the life of the Arab and the Jew working the soil for existence. Soil which the average man would classify as worthless has been made into rich and productive land by the two races, with each other's co-operation. The film also shows the Arab living on one side of the street with the Jew on the other and no intervening police force existing.

The Mount Scopus Hospital, one of the world's largest, built by the Junior Hadassah organization, welcomes all comers regardless of creed, race or color.

The audience was amused to hear the noted lecturer state that five room apartment houses were available at $30 a month in the all Jewish City of Tel Aviv which boasts a sanitation system second to none in Palestine.

Modern buildings, spacious parks, wide tree-lined boulevards all accentuate the beauty of Tel Aviv. The technicolor pictures which dealt with the human side of the happy faces of orphans and refugees safe from the ravages of war-torn Europe.

Introduced by Dan Heilig, president of the B'nai B'rith, the speaker was thanked by Henry Echenberg.

Shortage Of

Of the unemployed, 62,000 were men and 30,000 women, compared with 58,000 unemployed men and 26,000 women at Sept. 11.

"Labor is still scarce, however," the report said, "and workers being released by seasonal industries are urgently needed in other fields. . . the problem here is the usual one of matching jobs with suitable applicants."

"In addition, many of the currently unemployed seasonal workers came into the labor market only temporarily and thus will likely soon withdraw again. For these reasons, no labor surplus will likely appear until winter begins to block major construction and transportation activity."

The Maritimes and the Pacific region were the only areas showing an actual adverse labor balance at Oct. 16. The Maritimes had 13,000 unemployed applicants and 5,000 unfilled vacancies and the Pacific region 16,000 unemployed applicants against 10,000 unfilled jobs.

But the report pointed out that in the Maritimes the employment situation continued to improve and job seekers continued to decline seasonally even though the seasonal turning point had already been passed in all other regions. Construction activity was speeding up, there was need for 1,000 extra workmen and steel plants were working at top capacity.

Quebec reported 23,000 job-seekers against 32,000 unfilled jobs and labor demand was still placing a very heavy pressure on labor supply. But in Quebec, the report said, "labor unrest due to the rising cost-of-living is evident and the outlook is uncertain."

E.T. Youth Hospitalized After Crash With Stolen Automobile

A seventeen-year-old youth miraculously escaped death early today when the car which he was driving overturned and was completely demolished after hitting a small bridge near the Langlois Hotel at Lake Park. The car, a 1947 Pontiac Sedan, was stolen by the driver and was the property of Leonard Boast, of Richmond, the victim, who gave two addresses, Richmond and Inverness, is a patient in the St. Vincent de Paul Hospital suffering from lacerations to the head and slight cuts to the hands. He is being detained by Provincial Police.

The accident which occurred about 4 o'clock this morning was investigated by Sgt. Henri Cantin. Sgt. Cantin asked the youth for his license and he was unable to produce one. He said that his father owned an older type of car which made the officer suspect robbery. Sgt. Cantin called the police in Richmond who went to the garage of Mr. Boast and found the car had disappeared. Mr. Boast was unaware of the fact.

The teen-ager was heading towards Magog and to date no eye-witnesses have been found. Mr. Gilles Langlois hearing the crash and the horn, came out and found the car. The 17-year-old is under the care of Dr. E. Bruneau and his condition was reported as satisfactory this morning.

Plans Completed For Music Conservatory In Sherbrooke

For quite some time a rumor has been circulating to the effect that Sherbrooke would have a Conservatory of Music. While some of the music minded public was aware that certain negotiations were being made, those who were most interested in the project felt that no publicity should be released until the matter was definite.

In an interview yesterday with Sylvio Lacharite, director of the Harmony Band and the Sherbrooke Symphony Orchestra, a Record reporter was told that final plans had been made and that the Conservatory would be established here in the near future.

"The Conservatory is a most extraordinary achievement for Sherbrooke in the domain of music," said Mr. Lacharite. "As a result of this school, the talent which exists here—and there is a great deal—will have an opportunity to develop. The musically inclined youth of Sherbrooke and the surrounding district will be in a position to plumb to the depths the well of knowledge which will be at their disposal."

A grant of $5,000 has been received from the provincial government, for the first season and it is expected that next year will see this amount doubled. This sum of $5,000 will permit the establishing and maintenance of seven classes: violin, cello, bass, oboe, bassoon, clarinet and trumpet.

Some of the best professors of Montreal and three local teachers will be available to the students. The out of town musicians, all members of the Montreal Symphony, are Arthur Leblanc, for violin, Roland Leduc, cello, Roger Charbonneau, bass, Real Gagne, oboe, Roland Gagnier, bassoon, Moretti, clarinette and Lecompte, trumpet. According to Mr. Lacharite, Mr.

Rev. E. A. Wright, minister of the Presbyterian Church here, said that an offering for this purpose had been taken up last Sunday and that the results were most gratifying.

"We felt that, with the food situation as it is in Britain, no other Christmas gift could be more appropriate," said Mr. Wright. He stated that the orders have already been given to the wholesale house and that the parcels will reach their destination in time.

Summer Theatre Important As Tourist Trade Magnet

Summer theatre is an advantage in promoting the tourist trade of Quebec and the Eastern Townships, Filmore Sadler, director of the Brae Manor Players and School, of Knowlton, said last night at the regular meeting of the Sherbrooke Rotary Club.

Thousands of dollars are spent annually to entice American tourists into the Province of Quebec, and the Eastern Townships, he said. "When they get here they can play golf, fish and enjoy the beauties of the country, but all during the day. There is little after-dark entertainment, except the movies, which they can see at home. Here is where the summer theatre can play a part, and through it a distinctive type of entertainment can be offered."

Mr. Sadler traced the development of summer theatre during the past fifty years, when it first began in the United States. He mentioned the Lakeside Theatre outside Skowhegan, Maine, which is well-known to Sherbrooke travellers, and the Barter Theatre, Virginia, which now gets an annual grant of $10,000 from the State Government as a tourist attraction.

Mr. Sadler spoke of the early days of Brae Manor Theatre, which started twelve years ago in Knowlton, and has been going on continually ever since. "The only theatre of its kind in Canada," he said.

"The people of Knowlton have supported us most generously, and have always been willing to lend us properties to help in putting the play on," Mr. Sadler said that Phyllis Thaxter, who gained prominence in the title role of "Claudia" first in Chicago and later in New York, and is now celebrated in the movies, was the outstanding graduate of the Brae Manor School.

"But many others are doing well," he said, "and many of our pupils come during the summer to learn something of the theatre, not necessarily to train for a career."

Have you read the Want Ad lately? Perhaps there is something advertised you would like to buy.

on the stage." Mr. Sadler said that the success of the Brae Manor Players in Knowlton should urge other communities to start and support summer theatre, thereby building up a distinctive attraction for visitors.

Mr. Sadler was introduced by Gordon Armitage and thanked by Randolph Lindsay. Others seated at the head table were Ernie Gilbey, vice-president of the club who was chairman of the meeting, Norman Baldwin, Harry Moffat, Brown Hopkins, Jay Jolin, Stuart Ball, Russel McCabe and Walter Murray, of Montreal.

TREATMENT OF WATER SHOWN CITY COUNCIL

A water purification and filtration demonstration was given by representatives of the Hydrozone Corporation of America at the Lansdowne market place yesterday with water drawn from the St. Francis River being used.

The water was drawn about 400 feet below the main sewer outlet and a few hours before the demonstration, animals had been killed at the slaughter-house and their blood also was included in the water to be purified.

The small pilot unit used, did a more than satisfactory job in making the contaminated water microbe free, seeing that it was not constructed to carry such a heavy load.

Donald F. and Harold J. Fleck, representatives of the company, turned over samples of the polluted water and the filtered water to the health department for analysis.

THREAT OF TEXTILE STRIKE

Empowered by the vote of its members the National Catholic Textile Syndicate plans to call a strike in Dominion Textile Company plants in Sherbrooke, Magog, Drummondville and Montmorency either tonight, tomorrow, or at latest next Monday, it is reliably reported by both union and company officials. Hon. J. S. Bourque, M.L.A. for Sherbrooke County and Minister of Lands and Forests and Hydraulic Resources, has told the union that as long as the law is obeyed the Provincial Government will support the workers in the strike.

The union has followed the proper procedure in this case, and, as Colonel Bourque stated, is to be congratulated on its behavior throughout the arbitration. "Canada has had too many hasty strikes, without the proper appeal first being made to arbitration, and the Textile Syndicate earned prestige by following the course of law, rather than the course of hasty and spectacular action, which is sometimes more popular."

Now the arbitration board has handed down its decision, and one section is completely unacceptable to the Dominion Textile Company. The company has refused to agree to this section, and the union is thereby entitled to use its right to strike. But even now this needless action can be forestalled by wise leadership. The Dominion Textile has agreed to a general fifteen cents an hour increase and states "the company is ready to review certain clauses with syndicate representatives providing the latter are duly authorized to do so by their members."

The clause approved by a majority of the Arbitration Board that the company cannot accept allows the union to approve, or not, changes in the installation of new machinery, processes of manufacture, tasks for labor and work loads. The company claims that this violates the fundamental rights of management and that the company must control the right to install new machinery, allocate tasks and loads so that efficiency can be maintained and competition successfully met.

The company is on firm ground on this point. It is not reasonable for the union to have the power to say whether or not a new machine shall be installed. The division and allocation of work, so long as it does not require a man to work longer hours than his union contract calls for, must remain to the discretion of management.

The main issue at stake was originally one of pay. Fifteen cents an hour increase has been recommended, and agreed to by the company. Union leadership has behaved wisely and with patience throughout. Let this wisdom be carried further and the strike planned for today or tomorrow called off, until at least the company and union discuss further their differences. Probably the union members are not concerned with having the right to approve the installation of machinery. They are certainly more concerned with a raise in pay.

Nobody gains by strikes. The company loses production and the workers lose pay. Local merchants lose business, and family budgets are strained. Let the union and management settle their differences on the firm base of what the company has already agreed to do.

CONSTRUCTIVE ACTION BY PREMIER GEORGE DREW

Prime Minister George Drew, of Ontario, has again showed his flair for constructive action by introducing into the Ontario Legislature a bill prohibiting the improper removal of business papers from the Province of Ontario.

Premier Drew says quite frankly that the bill was inspired by action of the United States Government in issuing subpoenas to Canadian newspaper companies, and asking them to supply their books and records of business. This was done under authority of United States anti-trust laws.

Premier Drew takes the stand that if this was permitted then, as far as those newspaper companies are concerned which operate solely in Ontario, the Government of Ontario would tacitly be admitting the jurisdiction of the United States Government in a Canadian Province.

Premier Drew will find general support for his stand, particularly as Canada has her own anti-trust laws which can be used if it is necessary to charge the newspaper, or any other industry, with an illegal combine. The newspaper companies operate wholly in Canada, with the exception of sales offices to handle U. S. export business, and it certainly appears to be an invasion of Canadian rights for the U. S. attorney-general's department to demand records and books from head offices situated in this country.

But Premier Drew's action can, of course, only apply to the Province of Ontario. It would be much more effective if the Dominion Government made a move in the case, as was urged when the subpoenas were first served. In fact it is doubtful even if official action would be necessary.

Surely relations between Canada and the United States are sufficiently good for an informal call by Canadian Ambassador Hume Wrong to a friend in the State Department where he can point out that the Canadian Government takes a dim view of the Attorney-General's enthusiasm. If this was not enough then perhaps "Billy" could call "Harry" and get the thing ironed out. In the meantime Premier Drew's bill is the first step, and a very good one too.

HOLLYWOOD COMMUNIST TEST CASE

If Congressman J. Parnell Thomas' House Committee on Un-American Activities can produce one live Communist out of Hollywood, its case will have been made. Such a disclosure would encourage the committee to report out the Sheppard or Rankin bills making it unlawful for any American to belong to the Communist Party.

Number one whipping boy and likeliest candidate for this honor in the current three-dimensional technicolor and sound-track investigation of Communist infiltration in the movie picture industry is apparently going to be one John Howard Lawson, a writer. He is under subpoena, and unless his lawyers are successful in their move to have it quashed, Lawson will probably be called to the witness stand in the second week.

This will be Lawson's second appearance before the House Un-American Committee. In the fall of 1944 he testified under oath that he was not a member of the Communist Party. That record will have to stand unless the committee can now prove that he was or is a card-carrying and dues-paying member. If it can be proved, he runs the risk of a charge of having perjured himself in previous testimony.

Jack L. Warner identified Lawson as one of the 14 writers whose contracts had been allowed to lapse because of their "Un-American ideas."

Director Sam Wood, in reply to a query from committee counsel Robert E. Stripling, "Is there any doubt in your mind that Lawson is a Communist?" replied, "If there is, I haven't any mind."

Actor Adolphe Menjou testified, "I have heard he was a Communist leader."

SCENE "STEALING"—RED STYLE

Esquire Magazine's film critic, John Charles Moffitt, told the committee it had been testified Lawson was sent to Los Angeles by a former Communist secretary to help organize the party work there. Moffitt further identified Lawson as first president of the Screen Writers' Guild, a speaker at the California Labor School, an endorser of the Harry Bridges defense movement, an officer of the Hollywood Committee of the Arts, Sciences and Professions and member of the Hollywood Democratic Committee—the last in a way connected with the "respectable" Democratic Party.

In 1941, Moffitt said, Lawson lectured before a Hollywood School for Acting. He told the young actors it was their duty to further the class struggle. If they were nothing more than extras on a country club lawn, they should appear decadent and be snobs. If in a tenement scene, they should look downcast and oppressed.

Howard Rushmore, former film critic of the New York Daily Worker, called Lawson Hollywood's "Red Communist."

The John Howard Lawson on whom all this is being hung is a 52-year-old New York playwright. He was graduated from Williams College in 1914. For two years he was a cable editor for Reuters British news service. In World War I he was a volunteer ambulance driver in France and Italy. Then he was a foreign correspondent.

BETTER LUCK IN HOLLYWOOD

From 1923 to 1937 he wrote nine plays, all produced on Broadway. The worst, "The Pure in Heart," was about a girl who ran away to New York and fell in love with a murderer.

His most successful play, "Processional," ran 95 performances in 1925 and 81 in 1938. It was about "industrial slavery" in West Virginia with all the characters protesting against life in America. The class consciousness theme runs through all of Lawson's plays. In "International"—27 performances in 1928—some mean old men start an uprising that spreads all over the world.

In "The Marching Song"—61 performances in 1937—Pete Russell, the hero, is an evicted laborer who goes to live in an empty factory. He is offered his job back if he will betray the strike leader, but he won't. In the end the strike leader is shot down.

In Hollywood, however, Lawson has done better. His "Action in the North Atlantic," whipped up in jig time for the Maritime Commission to tell the story of Liberty ships against the submarines, was one of the best pictures of the war. But as the "hero" Liberty ship of the picture carried Lend-Lease supplies to Murmansk, it will now probably be considered subversive and used against the author, no matter what his defense.

BIBLE THOUGHT FOR TODAY

In the day of prosperity be joyful, but in the day of adversity consider: God also hath set the one over against the other, to the end that man should find nothing after him. — Ecclesiastes 7:14.

Constant success shows us but one side of the world; adversity brings out the reverse of the picture. — Colton.

WHERE WILL THE MONEY GO

The Montreal Gazette

The outcry that has followed the wide removal of price controls in Canada is one to which the Government ought to give a more adequate answer.

As it is, only a partial answer has been given. It is true that the answer, as far as it goes, appears to be sound. It is said that the Government cannot keep paying subsidies indefinitely. For the Government has not kept prices down merely by "controlling" them. It has kept many of them down by putting up the public money to absorb the rise in costs. It has been therefore the people's own money, given through taxation to the Government treasury, that has gone to help hold the price levels. It is the people's own money that will be saved now that subsidies are to be removed.

Yet this is only a partial answer. For what the people want to know is what is going to happen to the money that will no longer be paid out. Will this subsidy money—and it is going to amount to a saving of millions each month—be given back to the people in the form of reduced taxes?

In short, will the end of subsidies relieve only the Government's burdens or will it ease the people's burdens too? Millions of new money will be at Ottawa's disposal. Is the public to get it or will it drain away through the many-headed sieve of indiscriminate government expenditure?

In trying to meet his necessities, the citizen feels the double anxieties of high prices and high taxes. He can understand that prices cannot be indefinitely controlled since it costs too much to control them but he wants to be sure that the saved money will go back where it belongs—in his own pocket. If high prices and high taxes, like the upper and the nether millstone, are both to squeeze him, he will not merely squeal; he will scream.

No doubt the argument will emerge from the Government's economic academicians that tax reduction at this time would only serve further to raise the costs of living. The more money released for spending the greater the inflation. The tax levels ought to be at least held, certainly not lowered.

But such an argument is cold comfort to the citizen facing mounting crises, and who is trying to make meet the ends which are parting company. It is an argument that disregards the fact that high taxation is aiding inflation by discouraging production all along the line. Taxes devour so much of the rewards of extra effort that the extra effort seems hardly worth the candle. More than this, both in the estimates of wages and of goods, taxes are so high as to be often considered as expenses and turn up in inflated prices. In this way the taxpayer often pays twice.

The man-on-the-street may understand that the Government cannot keep paying out his money to keep prices down, but he wants to know where the saved money is going. It is an important question for him if prices are going higher.

NO COLOR FOR THE WEDDING?

Globe and Mail

Britain, and London in particular, is finding diversion from the world's gloom in an argument whether the Brigade of Guards and the Household Cavalry should wear full dress at the wedding of Princess Elizabeth.

In normal times there would be no question about it. The palace regiments would ride through London in scarlet and gold, "all dressed up" and "a joy to behold," as the song says. But these are austere times when the average Briton finds it hard to clothe himself respectably, let alone smartly, on the coupon allowance. Some one in authority has decided that a lavish display of gold braid and bright tunics would be out of keeping with the grey shabbiness of the people on the sidewalks. The order from Buckingham Palace, in the King's name, is that dress uniforms are out; which apparently means that the gorgeous guardsmen will ride in honorable but hardly colorful battle-dress.

Londoners seldom argue with an order from the King when it seems to express his personal wish. But on this occasion few people doubt that some excessively dour Labor Minister has advised His Majesty. Consequently, there is no lack of protest against the decision. The burden of most of them is that the people of Britain, who love a pageant like everybody else, have been starved for color in the last eight years. Another argument, which sounds reasonable from this distance, is that the uniforms exist. Why let them languish in moth-bags?

There are, however, British Socialists who think that the pomp and trappings of a Royal procession are bad for people's minds. They are like the long-faced educationists who think that fairy tales turn children into psychopaths. They fear that the sight of a guardsman in full panoply will arouse social envy, or national vainglory, or even the militaristic spirit. They are much too deep to see that at the wedding the onlookers will be thinking about the Princess and her groom, not about economics or sociology. Perhaps this simple human fact will be found out in time for a change in the ruling.

POCKETS FOR MEN ARE BACK

The Printed Word

In October the man of the temperate zone can put his coat on again and get some work done. During the warmer weather he has been frustrated by the lack of pockets. His shirt has only one pocket—two at the most—and there are only four or five trouser pockets. No man can hope to carry much equipment in so few pockets.

In October a man can carry his working kit with him. October brings out the waistcoat, which has four pockets and even in rare specimens of waistcoats a fifth pocket on the inside, an excellent place to carry money and lose it forever. Then there is the jacket.

SHADOWS

These are the days when long and lovely shadows
Linger on roads all redolent with leaves
And rest on fields now slumbering and dreaming
Of seed and summer and of harvest sheaves.

These are the days when long and lovely shadows
Drowse on a world that never grows too old
To stir the heart when dusk holds fast the beauty
Of hill horizons on the sunset's gold.

MCKENNEY ON BRIDGE

By Wm. E. McKenney, America's Card Authority

IMPORT OF SETTING UP THE SIDE SUIT

The principle involved in today's hand is the importance of establishing a side suit. Bear in mind that when you hold a six-card suit and a five-card suit, you should expect abnormal distribution in the other hands.

Let us take up the bidding of today's hand. South should not pre-empt with this type of hand.

South makes the correct bid of four clubs over three spades. This is a free bid, therefore it is a constructive one. If West passed the four-club bid, North should go to five clubs.

But when West bids four spades, North should not bid five clubs for two reasons. First, he has shown the full strength of his hand in his two free bids of one heart and three clubs, and another free bid might cause South to place too much strength in his hand.

Second, a bid of five clubs at this point might induce East to take a sacrifice and bid five spades. South's freak distribution and the strength shown by North justify South's bid of five clubs. The only thing that keeps West from doubling is the bidding, which clearly indicates abnormal distribution.

The opening lead is won in dummy with the ace of spades,

Reporter Describes

The road leading from the Sutton-South Bolton thoroughfare to Goyette's farm is typical of the roads which have to be used by the firefighters.

It is narrow, an automobile barely managing to get passage, rocky, rut-filled and has dozens of sharp turns. Driving is more than difficult and it is along roads such as these that truckloads of men have to pass over to get to the fires quickly.

The small creeks and streams are virtually dry and the men are relying, when possible, on water pumped from springs to use in their fight.

However, the greater part of the fighting is done by digging trenches, felling trees and lighting counter-fires.

The store operated by Mrs. Lane at South Bolton is the centre of information regarding the fires. Firefighters, on their way home, if they live in that district, invariably stop by to make purchases and give the latest information.

Mrs. Lane said all kinds of reports and rumors had been received and it was difficult to verify them due to the poor communication system in the area.

Just a few hundred feet from the village proper, on the road leading to Mansonville, the fire has reached the road, leaving behind it a trail of smouldering embers and blackened trees.

When we arrived at the Bolton Lumber Company, ringed on three sides by the fire, a group of weary, smoke-begrimed men had just come out of the woods and threw themselves on the ground to gain a few moments of badly needed rest before re-entering the fray.

Too tired to talk, the men smoked, sat on logs or stretched themselves on the grass.

They said they had their fire about 100 yards from the mill, half a dozen houses, and a large quantity of newly-cut timber, virtually under control, but pointed to the fire raging on the right and centre of the mill, saying, "There's where they're having a hard time."

There was a pump truck pulling water from a spring through hundreds of feet of hose to the men fighting the more serious flames.

We took the automobile up another of those treacherous roads, on which a slip on the driver's part would plunge the vehicle several feet down to the low fields, or into a solid wall of rock, for about three-quarters of a mile until we could go no further.

We got out, and, unwilling to penetrate the smoke-filled woods in search of the firefighters whose exact whereabouts we did not know, we skirted the area in search of them and ran across a husky, penetrating mill worker who had just come out of the woods.

He leaned on the shovel he had been using to dig trenches and told of how several families in isolated spots near South Bolton had left their homes Monday night while about 100 men kept watch over the house while fighting the flames.

He said about 150 men were working in the woods around the mill. Ever since they have been combating the flames, some men have been in action for more than a week, the weather has been hot, the wind constant and the heat almost unbearable.

To give some indication of how bad the roads really are, Gerry, after turning the car into a field to turn around to come back down the road, turned onto the trail and before he was halfway around, the bumper struck rocks. To get the car loose, this reporter had to stand on the back bumper to lift the nose of the car above the rocks.

One lady, who lives on the South Bolton-Mansonville road not far from South Bolton, told of how she could see the smoke from the fires last week, then burning on the Sutton side of the mountains.

Saturday night the flames crept over the crest and started down the slopes.

"Last night (Monday) during the darkness the mountains were blazing red. There were so many lights it just looked like a city."

The flames have ravaged hundreds of acres of land and the fires spread for 12 miles across the slope. The fires are not in a solid line, but they are spaced half a mile apart, or closer, or further away.

A view of the area from a high ridge showed acres upon acres of desolated land with smoke still hanging heavy and ashes swirling about giving a snow-storm appearance.

On the crest of hills, trees, stripped of their foliage and only the trunk and a few scraggly branches remaining, stood out on the skyline as a symbol of the waste and destruction caused by forest and brush fires.

In some places the smaller fires are progressing unchecked due to insufficient men to fight them.

Getting closer to the capital of the Eastern Townships, a fire about two miles from the village of St. Denis de Brompton was threatening camps along the shores of Little Lake Brompton.

There, firefighters have to plod their way through dense brush to get close to the flames.

When a fire threatens a point, every available man rushes to the scene. At St. Denis, Abbe Paul Marin, parish priest, was aiding in the fight.

Dressed in a smoke-grimed cassock and wearing a grey cap, Father Marin climbed the slopes with a length of hose slung over his shoulder as did other firefighters.

Eastern Townships hospitality is famous, but when a forest fire breaks out in the area, firefighters are up against the harsh, unrelenting fury of Eastern Townships forests turned into a frenzy by fire, a better servant than master.

Abandoned Mine Shaft Provides Water

The abandoned mine shafts which dot the Brompton Lake region proved a godsend to the crews fighting the forest fires in that area. With the rains reduced to a mere trickle by the extended drought, the water accumulated over the years in these shafts was pumped through hundreds of feet of hose to the blazing areas.

In the use of this equipment.

These authorities flatly denied, however, that there is any thought now of sending United States troops to Greece or of having any American officers participate in Greek combat operations, as was reported from some European capitals last week-end.

The belief here is rather that an increase in the military mission would simply speed up the work already undertaken and give the Greeks a morale boost in launching the projected winter offensive.

An offensive is considered essential to bring the guerrilla fighting under control and restore to Greece the minimum political stability which officials say is necessary to enable the country to undertake an effective recovery program.

In a sense this estimate of the situation, which now is the predominant official view, recognizes the failure of a theory widely held in Washington earlier in the year. That was that if a liberal Greek Government could be persuaded to offer an amnesty to members of the guerrilla movement, the guerrilla forces would disintegrate and only the Communist core would remain.

However, persons most familiar with the situation in Greece now concede that the amnesty offered several weeks ago has not succeeded. The reason given is that the Communist discipline in the guerrilla forces is too strong.

This has led authorities here to decide that the only solution to the guerrilla problem is a military clean-up. The amnesty offer expires Nov. 15. Officials say frankly they believe the Greek army forces, which total 204,000 including police, could have shown a more offensive spirit than they have.

However, the problem of the Greek army is a difficult one from its point of view. It presently is seeking to protect all the towns and villages in government territory from hit-and-run guerrilla raids. This hampers the bulk of the forces to garrison duty and prevents aggressive action.

The United States problem, therefore, is to persuade the Greeks to adopt a different strategy in the hope of ending the present stalemate.

To this end Washington is counting heavily on United Nations actions to reduce the assistance reported being given the guerrilla forces by the Communist countries on the northern Greek border—Yugoslavia, Bulgaria and Albania. The United Nations already has authorized a "watch-dog" commission and the belief here is that its presence in the border area will help shut off the flow of supplies to the guerrillas.

Meanwhile, the American government still is holding the position that British troops, reported to number about 6,000, should remain in Greece as a symbol of Anglo-American force. As one official summed it up, the British troops are doing no special good but they would do considerable harm if they pulled out too soon. Aside from the 40-man military commission there are no American troops in Greece.

ONE-THIRD OF ALL CANCERS ARE CURABLE

By William A. O'Brien, M.D.

Fewer deaths from certain varieties of cancer have followed earlier reporting and better treatment, some forms are increasing in spite of control efforts.

When early cancers of the uterus are treated, the majority of the patients are permanently cured, but the percentage of cures is small when those who are treated come after the disease is far advanced.

Every woman had a complete examination of her pelvic organs every six months and proper treatment was given at once if cancer was found, it would not be long before cancer of the uterus would be a rare disease.

Cancer of the lung is apparently on the increase. Physicians detect a few more lung cancers today, probably because of better methods of diagnosis, but there is a real increase as well. Suggestive reasons for this are irritation from excessive smoking and use of tar in manufacturing and building roads.

Cancer of the skin is rarely seen in indoor male workers or in women. It is more common in the south, because of greater exposure to the irritating effects of sunlight.

As a result of better economic conditions, more patients in middle and late life are having their teeth repaired and dentures installed. As irritation from rough, ragged teeth and poorly fitting dental appliances is the direct cause of mouth cancer, the number of cases will decline as more aging persons have their mouths put in order.

It is estimated that about one-third of all cancers are curable with methods now available. Better results will follow through co-operation of patients in reporting early signs and symptoms, and in having periodic examinations while they are apparently well.

Physicians also are becoming more conscious of their part in cancer control. They aim to discover the disease earlier and, if they do not treat the form which is detected they refer the patient to someone who does as quickly as possible.

Even though cancer deaths may go up as the number of cases increases, because of the relatively larger number of cancers which develop, many forms of cancer are now showing a decline.

VEL works magic!

CUTS DISHWASHING TIME 3 WAYS

VEL penetrates, cuts grease, loosens dirt faster.

VEL eliminates wiping... dishes, glasses gleam no streaky film to wipe away.

No dishpan ring with VEL... no soap scum to scour away.

HERE'S ALL YOU DO...

Just put a few teaspoonfuls of VEL in your dishpan (about half as much as soap). Add water. VEL gives the water amazing new cleaning power that lasts long after suds dissolve. VEL removes grease faster, more completely than soap—in hardest water. Dishes, glasses sparkle without the touch of a towel. And VEL is milder to hands, free from soapy alkalis!

VEL keeps stockings sheerer, lovelier!

Says Claire Honeyford, Toronto. "My nylons stay lovelier longer now I wash them with gentle VEL. I put just a teaspoonful of VEL in the basin, add lukewarm water... dip and squeeze a few times, and VEL washes nylons and undies fresh and sheer as new... no dulling soap film."

Cox, who opened the meeting with items relevant to the sectional meeting and reported having received a letter from the secretary of the Bury C.G.I.T. group, Gwyneth Lawrence, expressing appreciation for the invitation to attend the sectional meeting. DOROTHY DIX

Very Lonely Wife

Young Matron With Husband In Hospital
Tires of Inactivity

Dear Dorothy Dix: I am very young, and married and have a baby. My husband is a war veteran and I love him very much, but now he is in the Veterans' Hospital and will be there for a long time. I am very lonesome and don't see why I should go on without companionship of a man any longer, as my husband was two years in the army and is still away from me.

DOROTHY DIX

Do you think if I had a boy friend and he would take me place that people might talk and get a bad impression of me? I knew when I married that my husband would have to be away from me, so I kept my chin up and made the best of it, but now I am so lonesome I feel that I just can't take it any longer. What must I do?

SUE.

Answer: Well, Sue, there is one thing you don't have to wonder about, and that is what people will say about you if you are chasing around with a boy friend. It will be a plenty, and you won't get by with saying that you and the boy have a platonic friendship and that you still love your husband and just want to have a little innocent fun. A married woman has to keep her skirts clean, unless she wants them torn to tatters by the gossip.

HARD ON WIVES

I grant you that it is hard for the wives, who are nothing but girls themselves, to be cut off from so many of the pleasures of their time of life just because they wear wedding rings. They don't want to sit in the corner with the grannies and read an improving book for diversion, or to push the baby in his perambulator every time they step out of the house. They crave excitement. They want to laugh and dance and run with the crowd and have good times, but they can't do it without wrecking the apple-cart.

They may still be true to their husbands, but their husbands won't believe it if they step out with other men. They can't go to the places nor do the things that their girl chums do to amuse themselves, because a woman with a baby is supposed to get all the diversion she craves in just watching Junior breathe. They are lonesome, so heart-breakingly lonesome, that it is no wonder that many of them haven't the stamina to stand it and do go haywire.

But there is no remedy for it, except endurance. They are simply paying the penalty for marrying too young and before they were ready for it. But they are one of the big tragedies of the war, these little lonesome girls who want to dance, but whose feet are tied.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I am in love with a returned veteran who is emotionally unstable. We were engaged to be married, but when I insisted on our waiting until he was more settled he broke our engagement and married a girl who is basically no good.

I have continued to see him occasionally and he tells me that he still loves me and promises to get a divorce so we can be married, but he does nothing about it and seems to get along well enough with his wife. Inasmuch as I have no way of being sure of what he will do, is it wise for me to give him up and turn my attention to other men, or wait for him?

READER.

Answer: I think you would be very foolish to waste any more time on a man who does not seem to know his own mind from day to day. What a woman wants is security in marriage. A husband who sticks by her through thick and thin, not one who runs after another woman every time he gets peevish. Husbands, at their best, are hard enough to hold, and any woman who marries one who is emotionally unstable lets herself in for a lot of trouble.

Dear Miss Dix: We have a store and I know very many people. As I was walking down the street with my husband a man passed by and I said "hello" to him. It made my husband very angry. He told me that I was always making a fool of myself by saying "hello" to a man, because a man should be the first to speak.

When we came home we quarreled about it all night. Do you think I was wrong?

MABLE.

Answer: According to the strict canons of etiquette a woman always speaks first to a man acquaintance because that is supposed to indicate whether she desires to keep up the acquaintance or not. But nowadays nobody bothers about such trifles, and it doesn't signify which one speaks first, the man or the woman.

The Record will be pleased to receive any letters to this Dorothy Dix column. These will be forwarded to Miss Dix who will answer them as quickly as possible.

If your child has moody, cross, irritable spells for what seems to be no reason, watch for "hidden" constipation. Oftentimes, youngsters' bowels, also moving regularly, do not move completely. As a result, harmful wastes remain in the intestines, making the child listless, peevish and not feeling like eating. What may be needed is Children's Own Tablets. They help give the thorough evacuation that quickly helps make most children feel like their usual happy selves. Pleasant tasting, small, easy to swallow. MARRIAGES

RUDD-GILLANDER

St. Johnsbury, Vt., Oct. 29.—Frances Isabel, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert M. Gillander, of St. Johnsbury, Vt., and Frederick Jasper Rudd, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jasper L. Rudd, of Waterford, Me., were united in marriage at eight o'clock Saturday evening in a beautiful candlelight service held at the South Congregational Church. The Rev. John Henry Sargent performed the double-ring ceremony.

Floral decorations were simple and effective with white chrysanthemums predominating. There were white tapers in the candelabra and a single taper, encircled with clematis, in each window. White ribbon markers were used on the pews.

While guests were assembling, Mrs. Virgil Collins presided at the organ, playing the traditional wedding marches of Mendelssohn and Lohengrin.

The bride who was in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white satin with sweetheart neckline, long sleeves and an overskirt of netting cut in train, with half-half entwined with satin braid and finger-tip length veil. She carried a streamer bouquet of white roses, white carnations and sweetpeas. Her only ornament was a gold locket, a gift from the groom.

The bride's only attendant was her sister, Miss Margaret Gillander, who wore a floor-length gown of pink tulle with cap sleeves and a matching headpiece of roses and tulle. She carried an arm bouquet of pink roses.

William Brouillette, brother-in-law of the groom, acted as best man. Both had boutonnieres of white roses. The ushers were Goldwyn Davidson, of Ayer's Cliff, and Frederic D. Newton, of Barnet, who were boutonnieres of white carnations.

The bride's gift to the groom was a Hamilton wrist watch, to her maid of honor a black leather handbag, and to the organist a small clock. The bride and groom were assisted in receiving the guests by their attendants and their parents. A long white table was centered with the bride's cake, three-tiered and topped with miniature bride and groom, and candelabra on either side. The cake was cut in traditional manner by the bride and groom, then served to the guests by Mrs. Glen Findlay, cousin of the groom. Refreshments of thumb cakes and punch were served, buffet style, by Miss Mary Taylor, Mrs. Leo Lavature, Mrs. Clifton Murray and Miss Doreen Fraser.

Mrs. William Brouillette, sister of the groom, had charge of the guest book.

Out-of-town guests were Carlo and Otto Pederson, Mr. and Mrs. Albert Davidson and daughter, Leora, Mr. and Mrs. Goldwyn Davidson, all of Ayer's Cliff; Mr. and Mrs. Peter Maurice and son, Mark, of Coaticook; Mr. and Mrs. V. R. Beattie, of Richmond; Mr. and Mrs. Johnston Beattie and Mrs. Pearl Mersereau, of Sherbrooke; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bowen and children, and Mr. and Mrs.

MODERN
MARRIAGEALLEGIANCE TO FOSTER
PARENTS

Dr. Paul Popenoe

There are times when your own parents have very little right to claim any recognition from you.

Fred has reached one of those times. "I am an adopted child," he writes, "living with the parents who adopted me when I was only four months old. I am now in the last year of high school, and am deeply devoted to these parents, who are really the only ones I have ever known."

"For years I knew nothing of my natural parents, but they turned up last winter and are living in this city. They keep calling me up and demanding that I come over to see them. I went once, from curiosity—I suppose anyone would want to see what his own mother and father looked like! I must confess that I am not at all proud of them. They keep on hounding me, telling me that I'm an unnatural child to deny the claims of the parents who gave me life."

"My foster parents have been awfully decent in the matter; I know they were greatly annoyed to have this couple turn up, but they tell me I must use my own judgment. My own judgment would be that I want to keep my real parents as far out of my life as possible! But I want to do the right things. What is the right thing?"

No one would enjoy being in such an unpleasant position, Fred. But I think most people would agree that your allegiance is to your foster parents, and that your real parents have no moral right to upset you and make your situation uncomfortable.

I don't know the reasons that led them to give you up in infancy. Probably you don't, either. We'll assume that the reasons are to their credit. Nevertheless they did give you up and, as you say, the couple with whom you are living are your father and mother for all practical purposes. Your real parents have every reason to be gratified with the way you have turned out, and that will have to be their satisfaction.

Intelligent parents nowadays don't feel that they have much right to demand recognition or love from their offspring. They know that they'll get it if they deserve it. Why should they get it if they don't deserve it?

Your foster parents deserve to be reassured that you are going to stand by them and not let anyone rock the boat. Then you may as well tell the other parents that you'll try to be a credit to them, and they'll have to be content with that—you can't divide your allegiance.

Your own judgment has already told you all this; and you are right.

Questions and Answers

Q—You must admit that a woman with a job outside the home will keep much more alert and intellectually stimulated.

A—Depends on the job! Many of the jobs held by women—and by men—not only give no opportunity for self-expression and personal development, but provide a crushing and monotonous routine which destroys initiative, deadens interest in living, and engenders bitterness. So says Dr. Henry Bowman of Stephens College, Don't you agree?

Q—What type of husband should a girl want nowadays?

A—Why not ask yourself, instead, what kind of a husband you particularly need and what kind you are likely to be able to get?

Q—I'm engaged to a girl who is now 800 miles away. Should I date other girls in the meantime?

A—Most students of the subject agree that you should and that she should also date, in order to maintain a normal social life. Of course, it would be well to spread your attention out among a variety of partners.

Gala Hallowe'en Party To Be Held By Rotarians Friday Night For All Kiddies Of The Boundary District

Derby Line, Oct. 29.—There will be fun galore for the boys and girls of Stanstead, Beebe, Rock Island and Derby Line, at the Haskell Opera House, Hallowe'en night, Friday, October 31, when the Rotary Club of the Boundary stages a grand and glorious party.

James Galbraith, former director of the Frontier Community Center, and well known to all the young people as the M.C., at the party last year, is coming here from Montreal to put on the big event next Friday. He will be assisted as M.C. by Romeo Rodrigue.

Plans are rapidly nearing completion under the efficient direction of the chairman, Rene Monty, and there will be plenty of fine things to keep the children entertained. There will be movies, songs, special stunts and vaudeville, prizes for costumes and stunts, candy, apples and everything that goes to make such an evening a really completed success.

Transportation for the boys and girls of Beebe and Stanstead is being arranged, and there is no doubt that the Haskell Opera House will be completely filled.

The Frontier Community Center, which staged the party last year, let that the Rotary Club of the Boundary could handle it for them this year, and accordingly voted the sum of $25 to help defray the expenses. Rene Monty was selected to act as chairman for the club, and is busily engaged in making the plans and making certain that nothing that will add to the fun will be omitted.

All boys and girls of the Boundary are invited to attend, and there is no charge whatever—everything is free. Here is a grand once-a-year opportunity to have a really fine time, at no expense whatsoever.

NEW YORK VISIT DESCRIBED TO BOUNDARY CLUB

Derby Line, Oct. 29.—"One thing I learned on my trip was that if I smiled and was pleasant to people, no matter how tired and cross they seemed, they would smile and be pleasant to me," were the chief words of a short talk on "My Trip to New York," by Donald Heath, at the regular Monday evening meeting of the Rotary Club of the Boundary, held at the Del Monty Hotel.

There were two speakers at the meeting. Donald Heath and his father, C. Earl Heath. Donald told of his recent trip to New York City in a very interesting and entertaining way, mentioning the rather bumpy flight from Boston to New York, and telling of his visit to the National Broadcasting Company, where he watched and listened to the Fred Warshaw Show, took the NBC Tour and also sat in on the Milton Berle Show. Other experiences mentioned in his talk, were the trip to the United Nations Assembly.

Flushing the meeting of the Rotary Club of New York, the visit to the Empire State Building, and the ice show at the Rockefeller Center Theatre.

RAMBLING ROUND THE BORDER

Water over the dam! Yes, but this is not the old saying, it's true—there was water over the dam last week-end, with the Wyman Street dam once more looking natural as the Tonifolia flowed over and not around the dam, for the first time in many months.

Since the retaining wall washed out at the rear of the Del Monty, or rather, since it fell down from being undermined, the river has been diverted through the sluice and the dam became dry. It remained like this while workmen built the new cement wall for the Del Monty management, and last week this was completed. The sluice was closed, and the dam began to fill, with the result that over the week-end, once again the river resumed its natural course and water poured over the Wyman Street dam. Things are back to normal!

Residents of the Boundary Communities, joined by several from Lowell and Newport, are enjoying the sessions of the International Community School this year. Interest Groups are well-attended and many are so interested that the instructors have a difficult time to break up their evening lectures to attend the Public Assembly.

Two weeks ago the members enjoyed a most interesting talk on the structure of the United Nations, and how each individual could play his or her part in making the difficult role faced by the U.N. a success. Harold W. Sloane, of Burlington, Vt., provided the factual address, preceded by an eye-opening and pulse-quickening film entitled "One World Or None," produced for the Emergency Committee of Atomic Scientists, and showing the transition of the number of people killed by one effort in wars from the early days of man-to-man fighting to the present day when one atomic bomb can wipe one city virtually off the map, stressing the idea that we either make this into one world and prevent future wars, or else there simply will not be a world as we now know it.

Last week, the Public Assembly session took the form of Recreation Night, with Mrs. A. O. Brundage, Director of Recreation for the State of Vermont, in charge. A brief talk on the value and need for supervised recreation was followed by actual participation in various forms of games and crafts, to the delight of all who took part.

A banquet feting the long-service employees of the Blair Veneer Company, of North Troy, was held at the Del Monty Hotel recently, when nine employees with 20 years service and two with 25 years of service were elected to membership in the firm's Twenty Year Club. Pins were presented to the veterans by C. T. Hall, of Montpelier, Vt., chairman of the board of directors. The club now includes 60 employees. W. R. Dailey of Derby was M.C. for the evening's

KIDDIES' CAMP COST REPORTED TO ROTARIANS

Derby Line, Oct. 29.—The net cost of the Rotary Children's Camp at Lake Salem, Derby, last summer was $1,121.57, announced treasurer R. A. Hammill, at a meeting of the Rotary Club, of the Boundary, The gross cost of the camp for the three weeks was $1,426.07, the sum of $304.50 was received from parents and others, thus making the net cost only $1,121.57.

One hundred and eighty-six children of Rock Island, Beebe, Standeard, Ayer's Cliff, Derby and Derby Line each had a full week at the camp at an average cost to the Rotary Club of slightly over six dollars per child. The actual net cost per child is between seven dollars and eight dollars per week, but a number of the parents paid all or part of the expense of their children, thereby reducing the average cost to the club.

The members of the Rotary Club of the Boundary were agreeably surprised by the figures, as most of them had believed that the camp would cost the club considerably more than the sum announced. A lot of credit for keeping the expenses at the minimum goes to A. P. Joly, who directed the camp, and to William T. Green and his committee, who looked after the camp.

There is no doubt but what there will be another camp next year, and it is possible that plans will be made to operate the camp an extra week, making four weeks in all, and thereby making it possible for still more children to attend. Full announcements will be made as soon as the plans are completed.

ST. JOHNSBURY PLAY COMING TO BOUNDARY

"Brighten the Corner," a comedy in three acts by John Cecil Holm, will be presented at the Haskell Opera House, Friday evening, November 7, by the St. Johnsbury Players, under the auspices of the Rotary Club of the Boundary. Local people will remember the highly successful production of "You Can't Take It With You," which the St. Johnsbury Players staged here in May 1946, a play which not only drew a packed house, but which kept the audience laughing and enjoying themselves throughout the evening by the real excellence of the cast and production. Those who remember Clark Noyes as Grandma Vandervoort in "You Can't Take It With You," will be happy to know that he plays an equally important part in the new play, "Brighten the Corner."

"Brighten the Corner" was first produced at the Lyceum Theatre in New York in 1945, and starred Charles Butterworth, as the rich, absent-minded, but thoroughly lovable Jeffrey Q. Talbot. This part will be played by Clark Noyes. Others in the cast are Frances Morrison, Betty Plance, Virginia Bean, Adrienne Daigault, Richard McDonald, W. Roy Young, Reginald Savigny and Douglas Murphy. The play is directed by Murphy. The stage manager is Wendell Mudgett, Phillips King, Harlan Haslam, and Richard McDonald. Albee Smith is in charge of costumes; Virginia Norris acts as business manager; and the properties are the responsibility of Beatrice Leane, Marcella Rowland and Rita McPherson. The play is being presented by arrangement with the Dramatists Play Service, Inc.

The committee for the Rotary Club of the Boundary consists of J. Earl Heath, chairman, Phillip Austin, Gordon Harrison, Maurice L. Moore and Albert Young. "Brighten the Corner" is a play loaded with laughs and funny situations, as might be expected of any play by John Cecil Holm, author of "Three Men on a Horse." No one can fail to enjoy a really grand evening watching this play, and as it is presented by the St. Johnsbury Players, it is certain that the production will be up to really professional standards. Tickets for the play will be available at the low price of seventy-five cents each, there will be no reserved seats, and the tickets may be obtained at Brown's Drug Store, The Caswell and O'Sourke Store, Southern Canada Power Company, Bethel's Reg'd, or from any Rotarian. The Haskell Opera House only seats 400 people, so it will be a good idea to purchase your tickets early.

KIWANIS CLUB HOLDS MEETING AT WATERLOO

The Waterloo Kiwanis Club were entertained at its weekly meeting by a most interesting account of a western tour given by Immediate Past President, Fred St. Denis. Taking his recent trip to the West Coast as a basis of his topic, the speaker presented a truly picturesque travelogue of his experiences in an amusing and instructive manner. Taking his audience on the train with him, the speaker was able to keep them interested in the very scenery, which he saw and the very experiences, which were his on the trip.

Taking them right across Canada to the Rockies took very little time, and the first stop that the members had was at Banff, which Mr. St. Denis took some time in describing.

The main point of interest, outside the breath taking scenery, was the hot sulphur springs that produce water the year round at the startling temperature of 115 degrees. The several mountain peaks, including Stoney Squaw, Tunnel Mountain, Rundell Mountain, Brewster, Fairholme Range, Cory Cascades and Mount Norquay were vividly described and the surrounding beauty was emphasized. Wild animal life was mentioned, and a few amusing incidents were described by the speaker. Bear, deer, and many other animals are very common, yet dangerous in a sense.

It was with considerable surprise to the listeners, when the speaker mentioned the size of the National Park in the Rockies, including Banff which is 2,585 square miles; Yoho Valley Park, 507 square miles; Glacier Park, 571 square miles; Kootenay Park, 587 square miles; Jasper National Park, Mount Robson Park and Mount Revelstoke the smallest park of all, with only 160 square miles.

The speaker had occasion to take in several tours, while at Banff and these took him to many points of interest. The most beautiful of all was Lake Louise, being the most perfect gem of scenery in all the world. Mr. St. Denis stated that the water from dawn to sunset is a wonderful spectrum of color, while the immensity of the mountains dwarfs the lake, making it look like a virtual pond, while actually it measures 1 1/2 miles long, with Victoria glacier situated at one end. Eleven mountain peaks are visible from the hotel terrace and three more from the end of the lake.

The trip from this beauty spot to the Okanagan Valley was one of winding railroads and long dark tunnels. With a prayer on the lips of the travellers for safe and sound breaking on the trains, the tour wound itself down mountain sides, only to crawl up another just as high, with the trains then running dangerously close to precipices on the one side, overhanging surging rivers below, and hugging a mountain side of sheer rock on the other. Such was the trip through the Kicking Horse Pass to the Great Divide. The speaker described this section of the trip very vividly.

It was a pleased gathering when the tour finally took them to the Beautiful Valley, from whence originates most of Canada's fruit crop. This is the land of the churches, where rise thirty-seven different churches of different religions. This is the land, which was a bare desert but a few years ago, and today is a rich bearing locality due to the tremendous irrigation system used there. This is the land where riches abound, and hard working citizens live. This is the land where the speaker happily left his listeners, as it is Canada's Paradise, a place where anyone can be peaceful and contented.

Twenty-nine members and two guests, Mr. C. Gordon Laplante and Kewanee, Eddie Huel, of the Granby Club, were present. The speaker was introduced by Kiwanian Roger McKegow, and was thanked by Kiwanian P. Pickford. This week's meeting was an interclub get together with the St. George's Kiwanis Club, of Montreal, who furnished the speaker.

ST. LUKE'S P.W.A.
The P.W.A. of St. Luke's Anglican Church held its regular meeting in the church hall. Mrs. Walter Readshaw presided over the business portion. There was a very good attendance of members and visitors, and the sales table proved once again to be an attraction to the gathering.

The appearance of Christmas cards again this year showed that the members soon would be selling them. It was decided at this time that the next meeting would be held on the 30th of the month, and it would take the form of a tea, with a food table.

Following the meeting, refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. William Graves and Mrs. Alnus Hayes.

THE BIBLE SOCIETY
The annual meeting of the Waterloo Branch of the Bible Society was held in the United Church. In the absence of the president, Mrs. C. W. Slack, Mrs. J. C. Marcotte presided, and read the minutes of the proceedings for the past year.

Lantern slides were shown by Rev. Mr. Booth on "Faith Triumphs" and the meeting closed with the Benediction pronounced by the minister, Rev. E. D. McNeill.

The business portion of the meeting was then held, with the election of officers conducted by Rev. Mitchell, resulting in the following elections: President, Miss Lucia Knowlton; secretary, Mrs. Dorothy Baziner; treasurer, Miss L. M. Gilmore.

Beale, Mrs. A. Wade, Mrs. J. C. Marcotte, Mrs. F. Sheppard, Mrs. Basiner, Miss A. Mougou, Mrs. N. Langevin and Miss Shirley Ledoux.

THE Y.W. GUILD
The Young Women's Guild of St. Luke's met at the home of Mrs. Donald Martin one evening. It was planned at this time that a Christmas sale and tea would be held on December 5, at which time a work table and food table would be featured. It was also decided that all children under school age would be admitted free.

Following the regular business portion of the meeting, refreshments were served by the joint hostesses, Mrs. J. C. Marcotte and Mrs. S. Trussler.

BARNSTON

One evening upwards of forty-five friends gathered to wish Mr. and Mrs. Thornton Cleveland good luck and happiness in their new home. The Ladies' Aid presented Mrs. Cleveland with a pair of boudoir lamps and a matching bed lamp. A purse of money was presented to Mr. Thornton Cleveland, from the guests present. A social evening was enjoyed, followed by the serving of refreshments.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Sanderson and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Buckland attended the banquet and the "At Home" given for Dr. C. L. Brown, in Ayer's Cliff.

Seventy-three guests sat down to the dinner given by the Ladies Aid on Wednesday, Mrs. H. S. Sanderson and Mrs. Harry Buckland were the hostesses. Mrs. Willard Pope was voted to be the president of the Aid to replace Mrs. Thornton Cleveland. Plans were made for a sale to be held in November.

Mr. C. E. Poyari, inspector for the Central School Board, and Mr. A. Montreuil, assistant auditor of the Central School Board, of Quebec City, were business visitors of Mr. Hugh Sanderson.

Miss Mary Kelly, of Lowell, Mass., was a guest of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Buckland.

TRANSFERS NOT CUP PLAYERS GIVEN EMBERG PREPARE FOR AND CORRIVEAU INITIAL TILT

Montreal, Oct. 29.—(P)—The Quebec Amateur Hockey Association last night refused to grant Eddie Emberg, former Valleyfield Braves winger, and Andre Corriveau who played with Nationale Juniors last year, transfers to the Ottawa Senators of the Quebec Senior Hockey League.

A spokesman for the amateur body said that Emberg, who had been refused a release from Valleyfield before, appealing his case to the Q.A.H.A., had made efforts to have his employers transfer him to Ottawa in an effort to offset the Valleyfield refusal.

(The Q.A.H.A., constitution allows a player to transfer to another amateur team when he has been legitimately moved to another city by his employers).

Andre Corriveau, who attended the New York Rangers training camp at Lake Placid, N.Y., and has signed a contract with the professional team, was refused a transfer under the constitution which states that a player who tries out with a professional club must return to his amateur team.

If he fails to sign a playing contract with the professional unit, Corriveau allegedly told the Q.A.H.A., executive that he was encouraged to join Ottawa Senators instead of going to their farm club, New York Rovers of the Q.S.H.L.

It was learned that T. P. Gorman, general manager of the Ottawa Auditorium will carry the ruling of the Quebec body to the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association in the form of an appeal.

Portland, Ore., Oct. 29.—(P)—The Americans have looked the hottest in practice rounds, but what will happen when the Ryder Cup golf matches open here Saturday?

The non-playing strategist and manager of the British team, R. S. Ross, confided that Britain will manage to sneak home with a victory.

"The wet course will not bother them. It's really in fine shape, you know. They are very good competitors and have the enthusiasm and will to win."

To point up his statements were the scores turned in yesterday by three of his players—a 69 for Charley Ward on the par 72 Portland Golf Club course; a 70 for Reg Horn and a 71 for Dai Rees.

These were more than matched, however, by four of the Yanks—E. J. (Dutch) Harrison coming in with a 66, Herman Keiser and Ed (Porky) Oliver getting 68s and Byron Nelson a 69.

And the Yanks' Walter Hagen, team co-captain who won't hit a shot but was brought along for the strategic touches he can add, pooh-poohs talk of a British win.

"On paper we have far the better team, and we'll see that it comes out that way, too."

Both Hagen and Ross said the four best-ball teams would not be announced until Friday night, just before the draw to determine Saturday pairings. The eight singles players also will not be announced until Saturday night, just before the draw for concluding play Sunday.

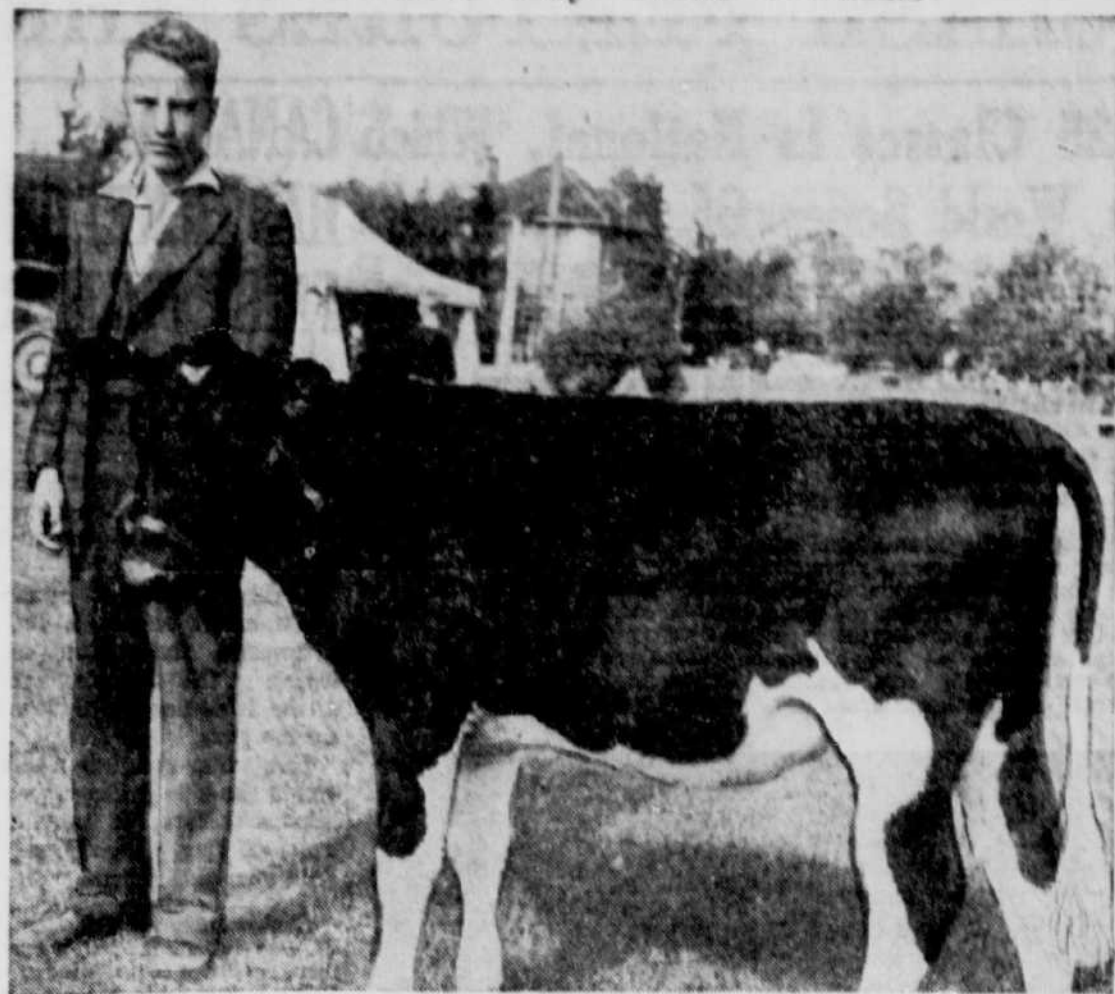

ing leg, McGuire remarked: "He's going to have a good basketball team this year. That ought to cure him."

Sports Roundup

New York, Oct. 29.—(P)—If there's any extensive debate at the winter baseball meetings this year, it probably will be over the privilege of spending too much money . . . Although Red Trautman, boss of minor league baseball, says the new bonus rule "has worked out very well," Southern Association club owners and Herb Perno of the Phillies have come out against it . . . According to Trautman, "it has eliminated in a measure at least the wild orgy of spending, where spending was the result of enthusiasm rather than judgment."

It all goes back to a situation that the late W. G. Bramham tried in vain to clear up . . . Minor league "independents" usually can't afford to pay big bonuses, but they're liable to be swept away by enthusiasm. "The chain" operators can afford such payments, especially when the top clubs are making money and the dough would go for taxes anyway, but they like the general idea of a ceiling. Their objection now is that they can't farm out a bonus player for seasoning . . . For the Judge Landis' theory that he's entitled to all the dough he can squeeze out of the owners.

FIRST CANADIENS-LEAF CLASH FEATURES THREE N.H.L. GAMES

Five Rookies, Former Members Of Royals' Allan Cup Champions, To Be In Lineup Tonight In Toronto

Last spring's Stanley Cup finalists get their first crack at each other of the new season tonight when the National Hockey League swirls into action with the first three-game session of the fall.

For Montreal Canadiens, at present sharing top spot in the loop with Boston Bruins, it's a chance to take a swipe at the Champion Toronto Maple Leafs who defeated them in hockey's world series and at the same time demonstrated that they're as much improved as people have been saying.

The game at Toronto will give an inkling on whether the teams are as evenly matched as last year, when the 12 league games with Toronto, Canadiens won five, tied four and lost three. A win is a must for the Habitués because it could consolidate their top-ranking position should Boston lose in their encounter with Rangers at New York.

Toronto, tied with Detroit in second place, also needs a victory to offset a possible Detroit victory at Chicago, where the third game of the night is being played.

Coach Dick Irvin said as he checked in at Toronto yesterday that he would show five rookies in Canadiens' lineup tonight, all members of last season's Allan Cup Champion Montreal Royals, incidentally, defeated the Leafs in a pre-season exhibition tilt.

Rangers will be without the services of Roy Conacher, who said at Toronto Monday he had decided to retire from hockey. His announcement followed his purchase from Detroit and Coach Frank Boucher Rangers is quoted as saying: "I wouldn't doubt he'd play with Detroit if the deal were cancelled."

In connection with the case the New York Daily News says an "unusual complication" is that Conacher quit because he was afraid his twin brother, Bert, would lose a Detroit job the Red Wings obtained for him.

Branch Rickey-Leo Durocher Talks Big Question In Baseball World

Brooklyn, Oct. 29.—(AP)—What does the self-styled father and son team of Branch Rickey and Leo Durocher talk about during those mystery confabs in the Dodgers' offices these days?

The big question in baseball circles is, of course, whether Durocher will be back to manage the Dodgers next year, now that his suspension for the 1947 season has been terminated officially by Commissioner A. B. Chandler.

"They discussed a matter personal to Leo and having nothing to do with baseball," Harold Parrott, secretary of the Brooklyn Baseball Club, announced after an hour-long session yesterday.

The only safe assumption for the public to make concerning the topic of discussion, therefore, is that the president of the Dodgers and his former manager just talked about the sporting goods business—a new enterprise Leo is entering in Beverly Hills.

Parrott said that he himself and four other men—whose identities he declined to reveal—also were present at yesterday's conference.

"It is obvious," Parrott asserted, "that they (Rickey and Durocher) would not have discussed Leo's managerial status before outsiders."

Leo flew in from the coast three days ago, saying on his arrival that he was here to contract for supplies for his new store. Naturally, Rickey would be interested in knowing something about Leo's enterprise, (Leo once said of his boss: "He talks to me like a father to a son.")

But the $64 question in the minds of baseball followers still is: "Will Durocher manage the Dodgers next year?"

Since Durocher's last visit here during the series it has been speculated that Rickey is awaiting an official green light from Chandler before giving Leo back his old job. Chandler, announced, however, that as far as he was concerned, Durocher's suspension ended with the series' final game.

Durocher had a lengthy conference—described then as "merely a social visit"—with his former boss just before he flew back to the coast after attending the Fall

"FLASH" DENAULT RETURNS

It was announced at a late hour this morning that Rolie Denaault, the robust defenceman with the local squad last season, will be back in town today and will try out with the St. Francis Hockey Club.

Denaault, who will be remembered for his hard hitting behind the blue line, is being brought back to help and build up the rear guard.

At present the locals have four men, Bill Heindl, Red Goulette, Noel Tremblay and Marcel Dufour on the line-up and Denaault will be the fifth player with the squad.

RAY ROBINSON SCORES T.K.O. OVER WILSON

Los Angeles, Oct. 29.—(AP)—The world welterweight champion, Sugar Ray Robinson of New York, toyed through six rounds of a scheduled ten-round non-title fight with California Jackie Wilson last night and then, after the referee asked for more activity, unopposed some dynamite in the seventh and won by a technical knockout.

Robinson smacked Wilson to the canvas with two hard ones to the jaw as the seventh opened. The Californian, glassy-eyed, got up after a count of six and ran into another torrent of blows. Referee Abe Roth stopped the fight after one minute, 35 seconds of the seventh.

By the end of the first six rounds the customers had been yelling for more action.

Wilson, with ten years of experience in the ring, didn't appear to be his pre-war self and wasn't fast enough for the welterweight champ who connected repeatedly with left hooks and rights to the head. Wilson lost to Robinson four years ago by a split decision.

Each fighter weighed 150½.

125 Classes In National, Which Is World Series Of Horse Shows

New York, Oct. 29.—The National Horse Show at Madison Square Garden, Nov. 4-11, is not an archaic holdover from the Gay Nineties, but rather is the World Series of a popular and widespread sport which continues to grow rapidly after all these years.

The market for show and jumping horses is more active than ever, matching that of racing stock.

With its daily international military jumping by teams representing the United States, Canada, Mexico and the Irish Free State, leading riders and drivers in all other contests—for hunters, jumpers, saddle and harness horses—the National opens New

CANADIAN HAS TICKET ON FAIRY FULMER

Newmarket, Suffolk, Eng., Oct. 29.—(AP)—Fairy Fulmer, four-year-old chestnut colt paying odds of 28 to 1, surprised today by winning the Cambridgehire Handicap, one of the most important betting races of the year in England.

Mighty Maharatta, owned by the Maharaja of Baroda, the 5 to 1 favorite, finished out of the money in this the third and last of the Irish Hospital Sweepstakes for the year.

Joan's Star at 100 to 1 was second in the nine furlong race, with Admiral's Yarn, 33 to 1, third, and Red Flag, a lightly weighted three-year-old, fourth.

Chateaugay Village, Que., Oct. 29.—(AP)—F. A. Mahieu, a furnace man, reaped a fortune today when Fairy Fulmer, the horse on which he held an Irish Sweepstakes ticket, won the Cambridgehire.

He whooped with joy when The Canadian Press informed him his horse had won.

"I'll quit my job," he shouted over the telephone. "There are lots of things I want to do with the money."

He said the call from the CP was the first word he had that his horse, held at 28 to 1, had triumphed.

Chateaugay Village is on the south shore of the St. Lawrence River about 25 miles from Montreal.

Mahieu works for an alloy company, has a wife and a small daughter. He is 31.

"I hadn't bought a sweepstakes ticket for a long time before I bought this one," he said. "I have bought them before but not for quite a while."

The ticket means something like $100,000 for Mahieu, too excited to do much more than talk incoherently in French before he hung up the telephone. The ticket number is AK49263.

MIDSHIPMAN IS EXPELLED FROM NAVAL ACADEMY

Annapolis, Md., Oct. 29.—(AP)—A midshipman has been expelled from the United States Naval Academy as an aftermath to detection of "irregularities in the handling" of tickets to last week's Penn-Navy game at Philadelphia.

The midshipman, Frederick W. Lauer, of Wilmette, Ill., had been confined to quarters since Oct. 15, when a man the Navy identified as Harry Rubin of Philadelphia was apprehended on Academy grounds with 400 game tickets in his possession.

The spokesman said Rubin signed a statement to the effect that another Philadelphia man had asked him to come to the Academy and "pick up a bundle from Midshipman Lauer."

An investigation showed, the spokesman said, that Lauer, a first classman, had "obtained the tickets from individual midshipmen of junior classes who turned over their applications to him in good faith."

Each midshipman was entitled to purchase four tickets to the game.

No rule specifically prohibits a midshipman from re-selling tickets, but application forms state a member of the Navy Athletic Association "will be held accountable for tickets falling into the hands of speculators."

To Compete In Matched Race

TEXAS HANOVER, owned by Lucien Dugre and driven by Emile Larente of Sherbrooke, will be seen in a matched race with Highland Frisco, owned by L. Dionne and driven by I. Beauchemin, of Drummondville, Saturday afternoon at the Drummondville Speedway.

The race will be for a purse of $1,000, winner takes all, and should end a lot of controversy regarding the ability of each horse. Highland Frisco edged out the famous Guy H last week in Boston, but will have trouble with Texas Hanover, as the local bay mare also downed Guy H on several occasions during the summer months.

EDDIE STANKY LIKES FANS IN BROOKLYN

Mobile, Ala., Oct. 29.—(AP)—Does the roar of the faithful at Ebbets Field have any effect on the winning habits of Brooklyn Dodgers?

"It most certainly does," says Eddie Stanky, the scrappy little second sacker, who credits that old college cry with a big assist in the Dodgers' 1947 successes.

Stanky rates Brooklyn fans tops. "They're the world's greatest," he said. "They're with you win, lose or draw, and you feel like a heel to let them down."

When the six-piece band in left field gets going and the fans start whooping it up for the home side, something unexplainable happens to you.

That "something" is best explained, he said, by the fact that the Dodgers played something like

.700 ball in the friendly confines of Ebbets Field.

"And if we could have played one more game in Ebbets Field instead of Yankee Stadium it would have been a different story in the World Series," he added. New York Yankees won the series in seven games.

Generally speaking, Stanky said the yelling of the crowd doesn't have a great effect on a player's performance "because a seasoned player gets used to it and takes it in stride."

"However, there's something different about these Brooklyn fans. They way they treat you on and off the field has some sort of a psychological reaction that makes you want to give out with all you've got."

Stanky, who lives here during the off-season, finished the 1947 season with a mediocre batting average but worked the opposition for more than 100 bases on balls and led the Dodgers in runs scored.

Severely Injured Woman, 70, Drags Sister From Blazing Car WINS DOW AWARD

MRS. MARY WESTWOOD of Medicine Hat, Alta., heroic despite broken leg, cuts, bruises

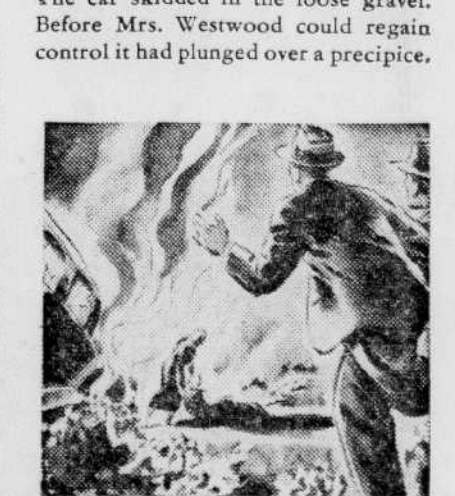

The winding country road along which Mrs. Westwood was driving with her sister was loosely covered with gravel. They were just passing a point where the road is bordered by a near-vertical cliff. Suddenly, the car wheels struck an extra thick gravel patch.

Mrs. Westwood was powerless as the car swerved and then hurtled into space. When it finally struck the ground, it burst into flames—but miraculously, the two women were still alive.

HEROIC RESCUE In spite of severe bruises, a four-inch gash in her head, and a broken leg, Mrs. Westwood was able to move. But her sister, who also had a broken leg, was helpless in the burning car. It was then that 70-year-old Mrs. Westwood showed such amazing courage and fortitude. She fought her way out of the fire through a broken window, and then, after a desperate struggle, managed to pull her injured sister through to safety.

We believe everyone will share our admiration of Mrs. Westwood of Medicine Hat, Alta. We are proud to pay tribute to her bravery through the presentation of The Dow Award.

THE DOW AWARD is a citation for outstanding heroism and includes, as a tangible expression of appreciation, a $100 Canada Savings Bond. Winners are selected by the Dow Award Committee, a group of editors of leading Canadian daily newspapers.

When help came both women were rushed to hospital, where they are now recovering.

CONNY BROWN SIGNS WITH VALLEYFIELD

Valleyfield, Que., Oct. 29.—(AP)—Conny Brown, 28-year-old centre formerly with Detroit Red Wings in the National League, signed a contract yesterday with Valleyfield Braves of the Quebec Senior Hockey League, club officials announced.

Brown, who played a few games with the Q.S.H.L. Ottawa Senators last season when he was still in the army, expects his reinstatement to amateur ranks in time to line up with the Braves when they meet Ottawa here Thursday.

The Braves also announced the signing of Jack Belanger, a left-winger who played in Milano, Italy last winter and previously saw service with Montreal Junior Royals.

The Touchdown That Finally Beat Army

For the last three football seasons—and part of this one—Army's unbroken string of victories has given Monday morning quarterbacks plenty to talk about. This picture will give them plenty of conversation, too, but on the other side of the scoreboard, it is the touchdown that finally nipped the Cadet's 32-game winning streak, and here Columbia halfback Lou Kusserow clutches the ball tightly to make sure there won't be any argument about it. Army tackler who nabbed Lou in the end zone after a two-yard line buck is Bill Gustafson. Kick that followed this touchdown at Baker Field made the score Columbia 21, Army 20.
