

THE WEEK IN PICTURES

DAISY'S VICTIM — An old 36-foot sailing boat carrying three adventurers from Britain to Australia was blown ashore this week at Seaford, about 10 miles east of Halifax. The trio escaped with a wetting as the converted fishing craft lodged on the rocks where it was left high and dry by the receding tide. Several other small vessels suffered the same fate on Nova Scotia's storm-whipped southwest coast. (CP Wirephoto)

LONG HOIST — Perky the cow, a 700-pound Jersey, plunged down a 50-foot-deep well while grazing in a field near Ladner, 10 miles south of Vancouver, and had to be rescued by firemen. Volunteer firemen put big leather straps around perky's body and a two-truck hoisted her up to safety. (CP Photo)

MEET AFTER 17 YEARS — Raven-haired Mary Anne Parson flew from Toronto to Vancouver to meet Steward Terry Blanchard aboard P and O-Orient liner Iberia. They started pen-pal letters between England and Canada when they were 12, had never met. Romance? That's their secret. (CP Photo)

Mending Commonwealth fences

Canada goes slow in the UN

UNITED NATIONS — (TNS) — This is Canada's "go slow" session in the U.N. General Assembly as compared with last year's almost super-human activity.

About this time last year, Canadian diplomats were feverishly — and successfully — pushing disarmament plans, a resolution banning monster megaton bomb tests, and a resolution setting up a system to monitor the harmful effects of radiation.

This Assembly session has witnessed no new Canadian initiative so far, and none appears in sight. Rather the Canadian policy is to build upon last year's successes while mending Canada's Commonwealth fences at the U.N.

The main Canadian effort at the U.N. is to attempt to force the resumption of the Geneva disarmament negotiations as quickly as possible, without cold war propaganda exchanges on disarmament in the assembly. At the same time Canada will support a resolution which will strengthen the world-wide radiation monitoring and study system, which was External Minister Howard Green's brainchild last year.

Concerning the Soviet Union's nonpayment of the Congo expenses, Canadian strategy is to support a rather innocuous resolution that indorses this year's World Court decision on the matter. The court ruled that the Soviet Union should pay its share of the Congo expenses.

If this resolution is passed, it will mean that the Assembly has given formal ratification to the World Court decision. This will lay the groundwork next session for a major Western campaign to force the Soviets to pay up their share of the Congo costs. If the Soviets still refuse, the West will then be ready to ask the Assembly to rescind the Soviet Union's voting rights in the U.N., which is the penalty for nations who do not pay their dues.

Canada is also backing the re-election of U Thant to a full five-year term as U.N. Secretary General. Here again the Canadian policy is to go slow and to avoid giving the impression that U Thant is a spokesman for the West.

By AARON EINFRAK

As for the Commonwealth External Affairs Minister Green vowed to make the Commonwealth a more "meaningful" force in U.N. affairs. The green plan is to weld the Commonwealth Nations at the U.N. into a more cohesive unit than they have been up till now.

British Foreign Secretary

Lord Home has given his unstinted blessing to the Green plan. In an interview with this correspondent, Lord Home stressed that the Commonwealth should not act as a bloc at the U.N., but rather as a representative "cross sections" of the world's nations.

Lord Home said that better Commonwealth co-operation would result in greater understanding between the Afro-Asians and the West. In other words, the Commonwealth could serve as a bridge to link the various U.N. blocs that are based on racial, national and economic grounds.

One of the dividends of stronger Commonwealth co-operation at the U.N. will be to make the Common Market countries realize the value of the Commonwealth as a force in world affairs.

Toward the end of strengthening the Commonwealth at the U.N., Canada has given its wholehearted support to British colonial policy, which Canadian diplomats now feel is the only safe and sane way for granting independence to colonial peoples still

53 years a prison inmate

Birdman of Alcatraz may fly again

By JOHN F. BASSETT

The Birdman of Alcatraz may yet be permitted to fly his prison coop.

Efforts to free 72-year-old Robert Stroud—the longest imprisoned man alive—received a boost last week with the release of a fellow-convict.

Joseph Albert Duhamel, a 29-year-old Canadian, served 18 months with Stroud in the Medical Centre for Federal Prisoners, Springfield, Missouri.

He smuggled out many of Stroud's writings, penned in invisible ink and sealed in the covers of books.

They reveal much of Robert F. Stroud, convicted murderer, 53 years a prison inmate, poet, penal reformist, and leading authority on birds and their diseases.

Duhamel, who once served 30 months in San Quentin Penitentiary on a bad cheque charge, claims to have entered Springfield to help Stroud.

A GOOD FRIEND

He asked no money for his story. He has pledged Stroud all help possible in bringing about a parole for the celebrated birdman.

Stroud was tabbed the Birdman of Alcatraz by writer Thomas Gaddis who put together a best-selling book about the case.

The book received great publicity when it came out in 1955. It told the story of a man who, in 1909, killed a bartender in Juneau, Alaska, over the affections of a prostitute.

Since that year, Robert Stroud has been in prison. Still tough and defiant in 1916, he killed a club-bearing guard in a hand-to-hand encounter.

SAVED BY PRESIDENT

For this crime he was ordered "into the hole" for the rest of his life. Only a clemency order from U.S. President Woodrow Wilson saved him from hanging.

Gaddis' book then went on to relate the changes in Robert Stroud as the years progressed, how the once ruthless murderer saved the lives of birds and became an ornithology expert.

It also described other subjects which Stroud studied and mastered, among them psychology, physiology, and languages.

Today, he is regarded as proficient to teach in 23 fields.

In short, Stroud entered jail with a third grade education. Now, he translates Cicero from Latin and Zola from French, has written books and poetry (not released except for his Bird Digest).

He has not raised his arm in anger to any man since 1920, and his life is regarded by many as unique in U.S. prison history.

24 APPEALS

Yet, 24 formal appeals for parole have failed.

This, despite Gaddis' book, thousands of appeals to President Eisenhower and Kennedy, and a successful movie in which Burt Lancaster masterfully played the lead role.

Why? Many penologists lay the blame squarely on the shoulders of U.S. Prison Bureau Chief James V. Bennett, who was consistently refused to consider the appeal.

Bennett, then a minor official, and Stroud are believed to have had a row in 1931 over the removal of birds from Stroud's cell in Leavenworth.

Others suggest—and Duhamel agrees—Stroud's parole has been refused because he knows too much.

"During 18 months with him, three hours every day and five on week ends, he told me many things about his prison days which could shake the prison system in half," says Duhamel.

Duhamel was perhaps closer to Robert Stroud than any other man has been.

HOPES CAVIAR WILL REPLACE HOTDOGS

By PETER WORTHINGTON

TEHRAN — (TNS) — Iran is sending a new ambassador to Canada with the avowed intention of drumming up more aid, trade and tourists for his country.

And in the process Ambassador Nouredin Kia hopes to introduce Persian caviar to Canadians, and vice versa.

He hopes, somehow that caviar will replace hotdogs as a Canadian custom at sporting events and picnics.

WHEN I VISITED Mr. Kia at his office in the foreign ministry here, he was brushing up on a book about Canada.

Mr. Kia expects to arrive in Ottawa about the end of October. He replaces Mahmoud Esfandiari as ambassador, who in turn is returning to Iran to take a high post with the foreign ministry.

"I have been to Canada once—as a tourist when I was with Iran's U.N. delegation from 1948 to 1954," Mr. Kia said between sips of sweet tea and nibbles of sugar biscuit in his elegant office.

"I went to Montreal and was astounded at how many people spoke 18th Century French. I could hardly understand them—and I was educated in Paris!"

He hopes to encourage more trade with Canada.

Excluding oil deals, Canada shares a unique distinction with such distinguished nations as Kuwait, Oman and Qatar as being the only countries with whom Iran has a favorable balance of trade.

Iran imports $5,000,000 worth of Canadian goods a year and exports $21,000,000 worth.

"AND DO Canadians eat much caviar? No? Well I would like to make caviar a Canadian custom. Our caviar we call 'Caspian Pearls' . . . you would like it!"

Caviar, even in Iran, costs $10 a pound.

But more than trade he wants aid for his country.

At present Canada's aid to Iran compares favorably with America's aid to Red China.

Mr. Kia admits he's hazy on Canadian politics. At the moment he seems to feel the Governor General is equivalent to the Shah, and that the Prime Minister's job is as important as an Iranian P.M.'s—which isn't very.

After extolling the virtues of Persia as a tourists' Mecca, Mr. Kia had to get back to work. Before I left he commented:

"MY WIFE and children

UK Liberal party growing cocky

LONDON — (NEA) — In contrast to Britain's tired Conservatives and its hopelessly split Laborites, the Liberal Party here is acting more cocky than at any time since the war.

And they have good reason, in the opinion of most political observers. For one thing, there has been a significant vote swing to the Liberals in recent by-elections held to fill vacant seats in the House of Commons.

For another, the minority party has a dynamic leader in 49-year-old Oxford man Jo Grimond. Touseled-haired Grimond is both pro-America and pro-Europe in his outlook, and has done much to orient his party in these directions.

In calling for Britain's entry into the European Community, the Liberals have gone further than Prime Minister Harold Macmillan in demanding closer European unity.

They would like to see a United States of Europe with a directly-elected European parliament.

Lastly, the Liberal Party is better organized and better heeled financially than at any time in the past 20 years. Recent contributions include a $4,500 check from an anonymous donor who described himself as "disgusted with Macmillan's performance on television."

Commenting on the party's new image, the London Daily Mail declares, "For the first time in recent years the Liberals manage to convey an impression of substance and solidity, as against mere boyish enthusiasm."

Britain's third party still has a long way to go before it will become a formidable challenge to the two major parties, however. Liberal representation in Parliament is still slender. A political way describes it thus: "Liberal Members of Parliament could once crowd into one taxi-cab without breaking the law. Now they need two taxis to transport them to the House of Commons, their number having increased from four to seven."

They are given a good chance to increase their number to nine in by-elections this autumn.

But it is in local government elections that the Liberals have scored their most spectacular gains. Last May Liberals managed to win 546 seats on town councils, one-quarter of the number they contested.

Grimond and his party set great store by these victories. "They are excellent training for parliamentary elections," a Liberal spokesman explains, "and they attune the public psychologically to the idea of a Liberal victory."

In parliamentary by-elections the Liberals have been stealing two votes from the Conservatives for every vote they take from the Labor Party. Their most astonishing win came last March in the London suburb of Orpington where the Liberals overturned a Conservative majority of 14,000 to win the parliamentary seat by 7,855 votes.

It is no secret, however, that the Liberals would like more time to consolidate their recent electoral gains. They need at least another year of solid organization before they will be ready to face a general election, according to present estimates.

The 288 candidates whom the Liberals have adopted so far to contest parliamentary seats in the next general election are surprisingly youthful, well over half are under 40. Most of them are business or professional men—school teachers, lawyers and journalists.

The Liberals are spending $300,000 to run their party headquarters this year, four times the amount spent in 1960.

"Today the Liberals are a significant force in British politics," declares The Guardian. "At last they are getting essentials that they have lacked—an efficient organization, money and competent candidates."

News in brief

Ex-MPP dies

ASBESTOS, Que. — (P) — Albert Goudreau, 75, former Union Nationale member of the Quebec legislature for Richmond and mayor of this Eastern Townships community from 1945 to 1951, died Friday night.

Mr. Goudreau served four terms in the legislature between 1935 and 1952.

$ Million a day

WASHINGTON (P) — The Soviet Union's assistance to Cuba — military and otherwise — now is costing Russia about $1,000,000 a day, says Edwin Martin, assistant secretary of state.

The military aid part of it, he said in a CBS radio interview Friday, is running at the rate of $200,000,000 for this year.

Also, he asserted, the state department estimates that Russia will have a $50,000,000 to $70,000,000 trade deficit with Cuba as well as supplying long-term economic aid this year of up to $50,000,000.

Charges made

MONTREAL (CP) — Charges of police "gestapo tactics" and countercharges of "lies and fabrications" are being made almost daily in the civic campaign leading up to the Montreal election Sunday, Oct. 28.

Senator Sarto Fournier, seeking to regain the mayoralty he lost to Jean Drapeau in 1960, says he is subjected to mysterious telephone threats and "gestapo-style" shadowing tactics by Montreal policemen.

To outline plan

QUEBEC — (P) — Premier Lesage says he will disclose the general outlines of an economic planning program for the province before the end of the Nov. 14 election campaign.

Opposition Leader Daniel Johnson Friday night called the premier a "half-backed dictator who has been raising the race cry."

Gatt meeting

GENEVA — (Reuters) — This month's session of the contracting parties of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) will have an important bearing on Canada's international trade relations.

The session, which opens Oct. 23, will consider Canada's decision last June to impose temporary import surcharges of five, 10 or 15 per cent on certain categories of products.

Agree to talk

MONTREAL (CP) — Under prompting by Labor Minister Michael Starr, the CPR and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen CLC have agreed to resume talks to avert a walkout Oct. 29.

No official announcement was made on the time or place of the resumption but the two sides were expected to get together Monday.

The agreement on further discussions came Friday after Mr. Starr was reported to have urged both parties to get back to the bargaining table and stay there until the dispute is settled.

Hasn't done job

OTTAWA (CP) — The president of an organization formed three years ago to promote communications research and education in Canada said Friday "we have not yet found the means to do that job."

Eugene S. Hallman of Ottawa told the annual meeting of the Canadian Institute of Communications research which has meaning for newspaper men, broadcasters, advertisers, educationists and others engaged in the business of communications.

PARTNERS AREN'T MIND READERS

As I look back on a long bridge career I can recall all my triumphs, but most of my misadventures are long forgotten.

However, no series of articles on third hand low plays would be complete unless I recounted one unhappy result.

The game was rubber bridge. The late Ely Culbertson set South, the late P. Hal Sims North and I was West. East also played at five spades.

I dropped the three of clubs reasons that will soon become on the table as soon as the bidding was over.

Ely played the four from dummy just as quickly and my partner had a problem. After

I will withhold his name for apparent. The time was the early thirties but the bidding might well go the same way today. Hal and Ely were just about the best of the early contract experts.

I realized that our only chance to beat the hand would be with two club tricks. It also seemed certain that Sims would hold the king of clubs. Other-wise he would have let the hand North and I was West. East also played at five spades.

About Television

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

NEW YORK (AP)—The television "special," which two seasons ago seemed to be a new work fad, now appears to be on the way out.

But this, says CBS Vice-President Michael Dann, a programming specialist, is an optical illusion. Specials are around this season in just about the same quantity, but nowadays, the vast majority are public affairs shows instead of entertainment.

Dann has been doing some research on the subject. He finds that the 1954-55, when the idea of pre-empting a regularly scheduled show for a special one-shot really started rolling, there were a total of 55 on CBS and NBC (ABC has never been especially active in this area). Of this total, 46 were entertainment shows, largely variety, and only nine fell in the news and public affairs area.

By 1959-60, the total had climbed to 189, with more than three out of four filled with singing, dancing, comedy or, often, special blockbuster dramatic shows.

This season, Dann estimates, CBS and NBC between them will mount 185 specials. Fifty-five will be music, variety and dramatic shows — and 130 will fall into the public affairs area.

Dann believes that the decline of the entertainment special came from various quarters: Many of the shows billed as specials were not really special at all; and, let's face it, public affairs shows are less costly to produce.

He said the average entertainment special costs the sponsor on an average about $500,000 and, even so, networks rarely if ever make any money on them.

High Times

By SANDRA PICKFORD

Provincial political parties aren't the only ones busy with nominations this week. Townships high schools are also at it, and student council executive lists were prominent in the week's mail.

Sunnyside School in Rock Island submitted this four-member executive. Richard Reynolds, president; Jim Cooke, vice-president; Wendy Elliott, secretary; Mary Osborne, treasurer.

From the Compton, Waterville Independent School comes this slate: Francis Sayers, president; David Smith, vice-president; Linda Ewin, secretary; Marguerite Lane, treasurer.

Sunnyside of Rock Island and St. Francis High School in Richmond announced executive officers chosen for another important school institution; the school magazine.

St. Francis "Tatler" is headed by editor Susan Somerville, with Sylvia Sage and Marion Robinson assisting. David Healy is secretary-treasurer; Bill Butler and David Rattray literary editors; Bee Peart, Jennifer Gilchrist and Billy Griffiths in charge of advertising; Donna Roach, Ruby Paige and Bruce Skiller in charge of subscriptions; Linda Hawker and Gloria Armstrong in charge of photos, with Serge Plandin as photographer; Carolyn Frank and Donald Nixon covering extra-curricular activities; Basil Wheeler and Heather Skiller on sports; Judi McCourt and Ann Sundborg doing artwork; Barbara Aulis and Myrna Armstrong for school publicity, and Ann Jondreville and Shirley Heale corresponding secretaries.

Sunnyside School's magazine, "Strobe", has selected the following board under editor Terry Shaw: Lindsay Black, assistant editor, and Brian Soutiere, business manager.

Fall sports are winding up and winter ones warming up.

"Our cheerleaders have begun to practice for forthcoming basketball and volleyball tournaments," comes the word from Cookshire, where they're still proud of their team's showing in the Compton County Track Meet, Sept. 28 at Burry.

Brian and Heath and Lana Gagnon of Cookshire took all but one cup at the meet. Theirs was the highest aggregate score. Compton, Waterville, last year's meet winner, placed second.

St. Francis is announcing, in the sports realm, that the R.D.A. volleyball tournament will be held there on Nov. 10.

At Sunnyside in Rock Island the executive of the athletic association has been installed.

Officers are: Tommy Lees, president; Brian Denney and Morgan Barnes, vice-presidents; Gail Perkins, secretary, and Nancy Smith, treasurer.

North Hatley High School has decided to hold a Sadie Hawkins dance for high school students on Oct. 19, and a masquerade party Oct. 27 for younger children. Commencement exercises were held Oct. 10 at North Hatley.

Cookshire announces the re-forming of the glee club which was so successful last year. It is under the direction of Mrs. F. Berwick.

Junior Red Cross officers at Sunnyside School in Rock Island are: Patricia Sisco, president; Gail Perkins, vice-president; Sandra Sisco, secretary; Janie Whitehouse, treasurer.

The Sherbrooke High Hi-Y Club will hold a dance Saturday, Oct. 13 from eight to 11 p.m. at the YMCA on Dufferin Street. Jim Bradley will be the MC, and memberships will be sold at the door for $1.00 — they entitle the holder to attend all subsequent dances for 35c.

The Hi-Y at Sherbrooke High School has noted a jump in its meeting attendance with the addition of 10 new members. It now has 21 altogether.

Paralyzed in accident

Operates his pet shop from bed

From Interlaken and Bern in Switzerland to Wiesbaden, Germany, on to the Azores, then to Washington in the United States to Montreal and Sherbrooke, Canada. This is the route that Bob McGee has travelled during the last three years. But don't get the impression that the trip was a pre-

By JAMES DAVIES
(Record staff reporter)
It was entirely improvised and was not a pleasure trip.

He was confined to hospital wards and operating rooms. About three years ago, on Easter Sunday, Bob McGee was involved in a car accident while serving with the Canadian 4th Brigade Signal Squadron in Interlaken, Switzerland, from which he emerged completely paralyzed.

Bob had been given leave and at the time was driving leisurely along a paved road towards a friend's house. As he reached a turn in the road, he did not notice a patch of gasoline on the pavement, and as his car took the turn it flipped over and began tumbling down the hill. Six or seven somersaults and the car then fell over the edge of a thirty foot cliff and came to a splashing stop in Lake Interlaken.

He was hauled from the wreckage by a group of Swiss soldiers.

Since that time Bob has been transferred from one hospital to another, undergone twelve operations and received an extensive variety of medicines and treatment. Today, although still bedridden, Bob is able to move his neck, shoulders, the upper part of his body and has control over his arms.

A series of operations now being performed at the Sherbrooke Hospital should, if they are successful, restore control of the thumb and index finger on Bob's right hand.

If it is a success, and the medical authorities say that the chances are 50-50. Bob will then undergo a similar operation on the left hand. But such medical treatment is expensive and to amass enough money, Bob, has, since May, been running a pet shop at 50 Wilson Street in Lennoxville.

From 10 in the morning until six in the evening, Bob busies himself at the telephone taking orders for pets, and ordering pet food and other supplies for the store.

Although unable to feed the pets himself, he is fortunate in having the devoted help of his mother.

Bob likes the business that he has chosen and has in addition to the pets up for sale, a dog named Curly who stays by his bedside throughout the day to keep him company.

Despite Bob's condition, he has a dedication towards his work and his clients.

"I'd get my customers a boa constrictor if they wanted one."

At present Bob purchases much of his stock from local people, but when necessary he imports the pets and merchandise.

E.T. artist to exhibit at show

Eastern Townships residents who are looking for important Canadian paintings at bargain prices should plan to be in Montreal on November 7, for the annual V.O.N. Art Sale, taking place that day, all day, from 10 a.m. until 10 p.m., at the Y.W.C.A., 1355 Dorchester boulevard, according to the committee, who released today names of top-ranking Canadian artists who will be taking part in the show.

No work, no matter who the artist, is permitted by the committee to be priced higher than one hundred dollars.

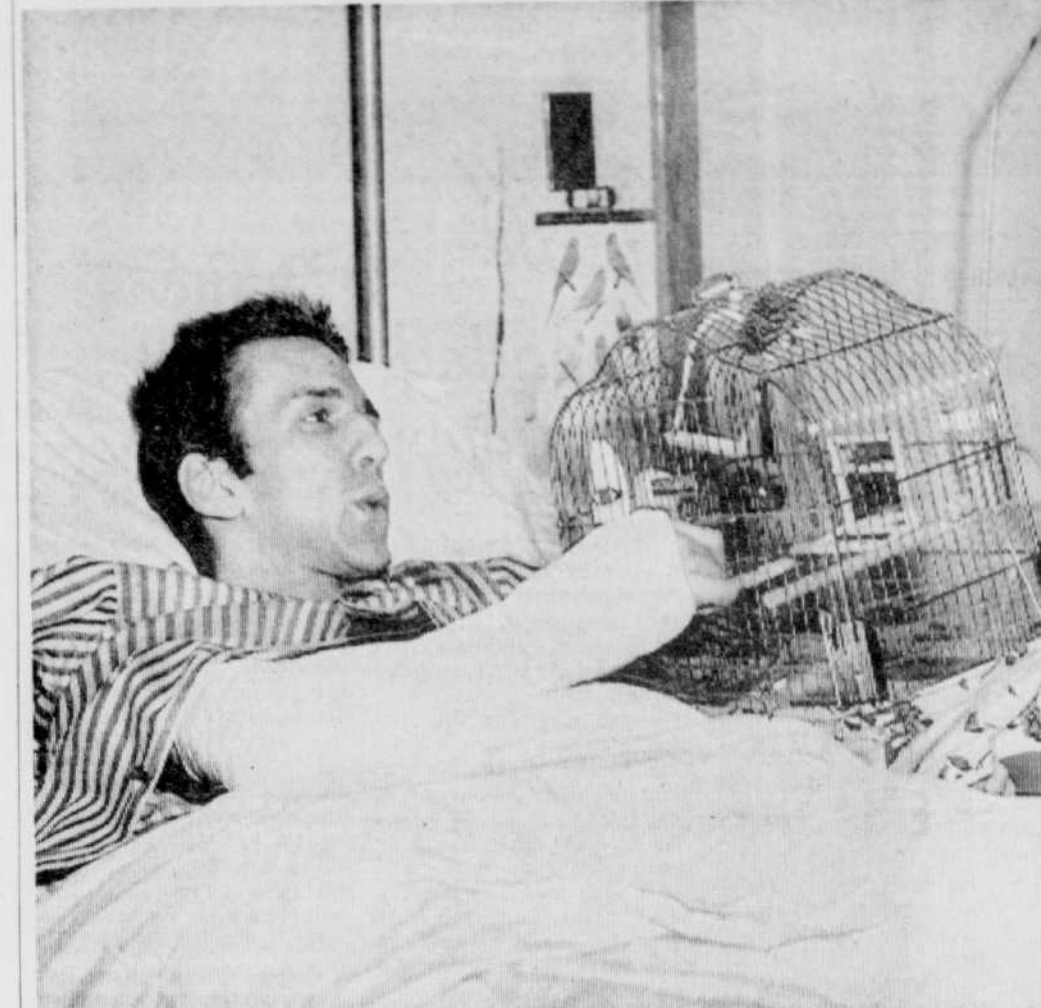

The committee also announced that it has been honored this year by "an expression of good wishes" from Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother Grand President of the Victorian Order of Nurses for Canada, who also sent a specially signed photograph of herself for exhibition at the art sale.

Among the professional artists taking part will be Eastern Townships artist, Marion Hawthorne, of Brigham, whose work has hung in Royal Canadian Academy shows, and who has held many one-man shows of her own. Miss Hawthorne recently returned from a European trip during which she made many sketches.

The committee announced, too, that the V.O.N. show will exhibit, for the first time in Montreal, the work of a Canadian who has been hailed in New York and London as "a modern Canadian Audubon," and opens a one-man show shortly in New York.

Fenwick Lansdowne's work was chosen last summer as a gift from the City of Victoria to the Princess Royal, when she

Sutton house burns

SUTTON — (Special) — A modern one-and-a-half floor house here suffered an estimated $2,500 damage in a fire

Friday morning. The fire took place during a violent thunderstorm, and Sutton Fire Chief Sheldon Davis said it was likely caused by lightning.

The chief's estimate of the damage was $2,500.

The house is occupied by the family of F. Lusignan, manager of the H. Despres grain business. None of the Lusignan family was injured.

The fire was held by Sutton firemen mainly to the kitchen. Chief Davis described the kitchen as "nearly gutted." It contained modern appliances, and it was behind the stove that the fire was reported to have started.

The fire started about 9:45 a.m. The Lusignan house is on upper Main Street in Sutton.

Sentenced to time in jail

A 23-year-old Sherbrooke woman who pleaded guilty to a prostitution charge in Sherbrooke Court of Sessions last week was sentenced to time in jail Friday by Judge Evender Veilleux.

Miss Murielle Bernier, of Moore Street, who was supposed to be sentenced next Thursday was brought before Judge Veilleux Friday morning after the court learned she underwent a medical examination. She was arrested last Wednesday by the Quebec Provincial Police Morality Squad of Montreal.

Miss Bernier is scheduled to appear in Sherbrooke Welfare Court for sentence on the same charges next Wednesday.

Two other girls aged 16 and 17 years-old will also appear before Social Welfare Court Judge Roger Bouchard Wednesday on the same charges.

Social Welfare Court Clerk, Gerard Bessette, said the two girls and Miss Bernier were part of a prostitution ring in Sherbrooke. The two teenaged girls are from Montreal.

Mr. Bessette said Gaston Soucy, 28, of 102 Wellington Street North, who faces charges of breaking and entering the Molson's Ltd., warehouse and taking $1,357.26 in cash and $4,736.61 from the warehouse safes, and taxi driver Edouard Laroche 52 of 1391 St. Andre Street, both face charges as go between in the ring.

The pair pleaded not guilty to the charges in Social Welfare Court Wednesday and were ordered to appear in court next Wednesday.

Laroche also faces similar charges next Thursday in Sherbrooke Court of Sessions.

Bearing their prizes

Deer hunters will be wanting pictures

Soon most of the hobbyist's picture-taking will be limited to family groups, birthdays, babies and anyone else who happens along.

The outdoor scenery is slowly taking on that drab look, although in and around the evergreens, one can always take interesting shots.

The deer season opens this year on the October 20 and naturally any hunter who knows you can operate a camera will probably arrive at your door, usually at night, wishing you to photograph his prize deer, excuse me, buck, a seven or nine point one, that is, draped on his nice shiny car. Funny thing about this, if any member of the hunter's family would so much as lean on his vehicle, he would probably hear about it.

In order to photograph this battle-scarred prize — (I may not seem too enthusiastic about deer hunting because the only way I want to shoot an animal is with a camera) — remember that the head and antlers of the deer should be shown clearly.

As in any outdoor shot with flash, one must compensate for the loss of light that usually bounces back to the subject when taking pictures indoors.

The light from the flash carries to the subject and that distance gives you approximately the figure to calculate your exposure. But when your subject is 15 or more feet from the camera outdoors you should allow two stops larger. As the hunters will have to

ADVICE TO HOMEMAKERS

Often Neglected in Our Homes.

Do you know that bacteria are germs carriers can affect your health. Of course, they have no wings, no legs and are invisible to the naked eye, but they are harmful.

Dust carries them into our homes, especially during the winter months, as the house is warm and circulation of air is at a minimum. In fact, in winter, the germs are more harmful as they enter the body through the nose and throat.

Through numerous inquiries, specialists have discovered that 85% of sickness is contracted by breathing, namely, influenza, pneumonia, tuberculosis, asthma, and many other illnesses, as the human body is allergic to polluted air.

Now, science and chemistry have discovered a famous air purifier (filter type) that nullifies impurities, effectively (99.9%).

The best proof of its efficiency, is that it is used in atomic laboratories. So... why continue living, this winter, in polluted air, when you can get an air purifier.

Your health is the most precious thing in this world... protect it.

For more details on this amazing air purifier, call LO. 2-1188 between 6:00 and 7 p.m.

Alternative is worse than nothing

It was very apparent a few weeks ago when the Union Nationale opposition announced its position on nationalization of power resources in Quebec that provincial voters who oppose nationalization were going to be caught between the devil and the deep blue sea on November 14.

The alternatives were clearly not to vote at all, or vote Union Nationale and gamble that the referendum a winning UN government would hold might fail, or vote for some third or fourth party the only attraction of which was that they offered an alternative. At that time, there was not a formal third party in existence.

Now there is, and so far, it appears to confirm the worst fears of those who had hoped for an alternative to nationalization. The Action Provincial Party is apparently a sort of Quebec Social Credit party in thin disguise, with the important difference that it holds some views independently of the Social Credit movement which apply specifically to Quebec. Unfortunately, these views, although they may be different from official Social Credit positions, do not seem to be any more coherent.

From what can be gathered from reports of the founding meeting of the new party held in Marieville on Thursday, while the party is opposed to nationalization of power, it does not seem to be opposed to public ownership as such. The argument against nationalization is a curious one. It holds that if Quebec will just wait long enough, the private power companies will go bankrupt, and then atomic energy power stations can be built, presumably by the government, to supply our needs.

The argument might have some validity in an area devoid of abundant natural water resources for the production of cheap hydro-electric power in plentiful quantities, but in a province like Quebec, which has the largest hydro potential in Canada, and perhaps in the world, the proposal scarcely makes sense.

As of Friday afternoon, the new party did not have a leader. A number of men had been solicited, including Quebec Social leader Real Caouette and Mayor J. A. Mongrain of Trois Rivières, but prudently declined the honor. While there is no law that says a political party must have a leader, the value of one without a chief must be regarded as extremely dubious.

It might not be fair to call the Action Provinciale party a crackpot organization, but at this time, it does not appear to be very far removed from one. This much is clear: as an alternative to either the Liberals or Union Nationale, it is worse than no alternative at all.

What would some kids do if their parents didn't help them with their homework? Probably pass!

China resents Russian fighter deal

The announcement from New Delhi that India will receive its first batch of Russian-built MiG-21 jet fighters in December with another consignment expected early in the spring displeases Great Britain and the United States for obvious reasons. Both London and Washington wish that India would purchase its fighter planes from Western producers.

But information from Peking indicates that the Communist Chinese are more vexed with the transaction than are the British and Americans, and for military rather than economic reasons.

They disapprove of the delivery of Russian planes to India at a time when Red China and less-Red India are engaged in hot and apparently irreconcilable argument over India's northern border with China.

The dispute has involved a series of shooting incidents and loss of life as India seeks to prevent the encroachment of Chinese troops in the mountainous northern area that New Delhi regards as its own.

Obviously China resents any action by Russia that will strengthen India's determination to resist any encroachment on its territory. Furthermore, the sale of Red planes to India at this critical moment lends support to reports of growing disharmony between the two leading Communist powers.

Lots of folks have unpacked their vacation grips and put away a whole flock of things they never used.

Other papers say:

Some government controls essential

The head of a Montreal corporation complains bitterly (and gains wide headlines in the process) that Canada is being threatened with "the strangest of a government-regulated economy."

Now such warnings are not without use; in a democracy, it is always a good thing to have sentinels of liberty, people to cry out against encroachments upon freedom by governments. At the same time, it serves no good when the sentinels ignore realities, support their alarms without a sense of proportion.

Says the Montreal critic: "The right of individual Canadians to freely choose from a variety of competitive products and services provides business with its most effective restraint."

That is true in theory, but it may not always be true in practice. For example, what opportunity did the people of the U.S. have to "choose from a variety of competitive products" when the U.S. steel companies banded together a few months ago to increase the price of steel?

And we could cite other cases—some nearer home.

There are those, of course, who seem to think that when it comes to business we should go back to "laissez-faire," to a system of everybody for himself and the devil take the hindmost, with corporations free to say, as old Commodore Vanderbilt said, "the public be damned."

But sensible people know that in the sort of world we have today the law of the jungle in business is impossible, that with vast aggregations of capital and the rise of powerful unions, there must be some superintendence by government to guard the public interest.

And this does not mean (as somebody put it recently) that there should be a policeman in every car; it means only that there must be traffic lights; the individual kept from being crushed—rights and security sustained by law.

If all of us were angels, if all our business leaders sprouted wings, there would be no need for government interference with business. But there are still among us, alas, a lot of people, in business and out of it, who do not sprout wings. There is still greed and avarice and arrogance born of power. Standing between all of this and little people who need protection there must be a referee.

That referee must be the government.

How much and how often that referee will be compelled to interfere, and the measure of interference, must depend largely upon business itself.

United Nations Assembly new look

Following last week's election of a new president of the United Nations General Assembly, it was worthy of note that the podium in the assembly hall was occupied, for the first time in the history of the organization, exclusively by Asians.

In the presidential chair sat Sir Mohammed Zafrulla Khan, former foreign minister of Pakistan and new president of the Assembly, and beneath him were Secretary-General U Thant of Burma, and his deputy for Assembly affairs, C. V. Narasimham, who is an Indian.

But if it was significant that for the first time since the foundation of the United Nations that no Westerner had appeared among the chief officials, it was not less a symbolic indication of the manner in which the Assembly is becoming increasingly dominated by Asians and Africans.

This can serve only to emphasize again the necessity for good understanding between East and West. All of these relatively newly independent countries are already far removed from colonial status, and with their removal have come to a consciousness of their importance. No longer is it a case of the United States or Britain—or any other country—of the West, for that matter—commanding an easy and automatic majority on any issue; rather, it is now a matter of conviction and persuasion on grounds of equality.

The multiplication of Asia influence in the Assembly is also interestingly illustrated by the personalities of the three principal officials already mentioned. They comprise a Pakistani, a Burman and an Indian. Yet, prior to 1956, these three were all fellow-citizens of one country with the British Empire, India.

There is no reason why this should necessarily mean the termination of the hegemony of the Western powers. There is a natural weight of influence which attaches to experience and leadership. But it is a leadership which must be commended, because it cannot be commanded. And there is nothing radically wrong with that.

Adventures with God

Charitable aid is badly needed even when there is no emergency

The screech of brakes pierced the autumn evening. I ran to the door numb with fear. Which one of my little neighbors had been hit. I wondered. How badly is he or she injured?

The same questions brought a chain reaction. Suddenly anxious men, women and children emerged from rows of opening doors.

Fortunately in this case injuries were minor. A few stitches and bruises were treated at hospital and the small child went home with his grateful parents.

The narrow street on which the accident happened is usually lined solidly with parked cars in the evenings. Scores of carefree, happy boys and girls play hide-and-seek, tag and ball as passing cars challenge their right to pass.

Occasionally a tiny tot darts from behind a parked car into the path of an approaching vehicle. The screech of brakes freezes the blood in older veins. Even the most callous of men are concerned when an innocent, carefree child is struck down.

The protective instinct is sometimes stronger than love in a crucial moment. A person who may not love his neighbor will, in a moment of tragedy, try to protect him from impending danger.

NEIGHBORLY LOVE But love is a more permanent and reliable force than the urge to protect a neighbor from sudden danger, accident or probable death.

It is unfortunate that so many of us show interest in our neighbors and their children only when faced with sudden tragedy.

JANE SCOTT

A sudden deluge like hurricane Hazel can whip up generosity and concern. But the wave of sympathy and support is short-lived. The plight of the slowly dying, the lonely, the crippled, the mentally disturbed, the orphans, the blind, the weak and the sinful is ignored and forgotten. And it becomes increasingly hard to raise funds to subsidize the charitable organizations that spearhead the blessed ministry of comfort, guidance and assistance to the poor and the needy who are always with us.

Thousands of citizens who would respond quickly and generously in times of flood, earthquake or famine, will make excuses when a volunteer canvasser asks for a contribution to aid organizations that act on our behalf to restore and sustain our less favored neighbors.

THINK OF OTHERS Does your blood curdle in your veins when you think of the thousands of frightened and deserted children who are carried off to shelters and institutions?

Do you care for the crippled and retarded who languish behind closed doors in your neighbors' homes and in hospitals?

Or do you only respond to your neighbors' need and show your love and concern when brakes screech and there is a possibility that the grim reaper is snatching for one of your neighbors?

It is a serious reflection upon us that canvassers are so often turned away empty-handed when appeals for charity are made.

And it is particularly disturbing when those who name the name of Christ hesitate before an emergency and ask: Who is my neighbor?

Work begins on Malaysia project

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (Reuters)—Committees in several cities have begun intensive work aimed at binding together five territories into a new nation spread in a crescent across the South China Sea between Thailand and The Philippines.

Some international civil servants at the UN say this method works as long as their respective missions support their causes. However, Canadian officials complain that they have been utterly ignored in recent years by their mission.

They foresee a possible change in their attitude with the expressed desire of Paul Tremblay, the new Canadian ambassador, to meet them.

The 42 officials are 17 fewer than the maximum quota set for Canada in the geographical distribution of professional positions which is based on the population of a country and its financial contribution to the world organization.

A total of about 100 Canadians

This work should lead to the birth in August, 1963, of the federation of Malaysia. This was the date set in an agreement reached recently in London between the British and Malayan governments.

But how firmly the five units will be bound together, and how these bonds will stand the test of time, will be decided by the answers which the proposed nation can find to a number of complex issues.

Malaysia will be composed of five states in very different stages of development, all multi-racial and all former units of the British Empire and present components of the British Commonwealth.

Scouting and Cubbing

BY DIANE DURRANT

An unrelenting downpour of rain greeted the Scouts of the Sherbrooke District at the Lake Lovering campsite on the night of Oct. 5, and refused to let up. This was the event of the Fiftieth Anniversary Camporee and over one hundred Scouts set up camp in the rain and cooked their meals over reluctant fires.

Major General Dan Spry, director of the International Boy Scouts Bureau, arrived at the campsite at 2:30 p.m. Saturday afternoon to inspect the patrols and address the Cubs who came out for the occasion. Because of the heavy rain, it was impossible to carry on the original program scheduled for the afternoon.

Courtesy of the army facilities and an excellent cook, a supper banquet was put on for the Scouts in honor of the major general. In his address, Major General Spry compared the different camping practices in various parts of the world, pointing out that although the program differs, the principals and objectives of Scout Camp are the same the world over. His interesting talk enlightened the Scouts on the many problems which are faced by our International Bureau.

At the supper, Bill Black, Chairman of the First Lennoxville Group Committee, presented Scoutmaster, Cliff Force with a valise as a token of their appreciation for his work with the Lennoxville Scouts. Also, on behalf of the Ladies Auxiliary of the First Lennoxville Group, Mrs. Hewitt presented Mr. Force with an alarm clock in a travelling case. Cliff is now attached to a troop of Sea Scouts in Magon, and although this is in another district, we hope he will keep in close touch with the Sherbrooke District activities.

One other presentation was made at this banquet. Waymer Labaree, Scoutmaster for the Bulwer-Birchton Troop, was presented with his twenty-five year service pin by District Commissioner, Percy Gray.

Steven Ross, Barry Friedlander, and Eric Rothschild, solemnly promised to obey the Cub Law last week, as Akela Ken Bartlett presented them with their Tenderfoot badges, and the red neckerchief identifying them with the Fifth Sherbrooke Pack.

October 19th and 20th are the dates set for the annual Boy Scout Apple Day. The funds raised on this occasion are used to help support Troop and Park activities, to buy books and equipment, and to finance awards for competitions.

under the British flag. The present Canadian attitude differs from previous Canadian dissatisfaction with Britain's colonial policy.

Canada is also expecting Britain to take a more co-operative attitude in working out U-N problems with Commonwealth members.

One Canadian suggestion is to give the Afro-Asian Commonwealth nations a greater say in Commonwealth initiatives at the U-N by providing a rotating chairmanship for the regular fortnightly meeting of U-N diplomats from Commonwealth countries. At present the chair is permanently controlled by Britain.

What U-N strategy Canada will follow in regard to the captive nations of east Europe is still a mystery. The Western position at the beginning of the Assembly was to tread lightly on this issue because, it was felt to do otherwise would have meant stirring up ugly cold war passions.

But Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko's bitter, scathing cold war diatribe in the Assembly has disillusioned Western diplomats who hamel began to read about Stroud. He was fascinated. A year and a half later, in Feb. 1961, he decided to help him.

Duhamel crossed from Winnipeg into North Dakota and gave himself up as an illegal entry. He asked to be sent to the Medical Centre for help. The court at Fargo, North Dakota, obliged. On June 1, 1961, Joseph Albert Earl Victor Duhamel began his 18 months with Robert Stroud.

On his first day in the Springfield prison, Duhamel walked up to Stroud in the yard and told him why he had come.

FAST FRIENDS
"Stroud was enthralled," recalls Duhamel, "and we became fast friends. It was the first of hundreds of meetings between us."

According to Duhamel, the Birdman told him everything, from his murders through his rehabilitation. The two rendezvoused in the yard and in the prison library, where Stroud still works. Soon they formulated a method to get the real story of the Birdman before the public.

"You have come for the truth," Stroud told me, "and you will get it," said Duhamel.

The method was deceptively simple and brilliant, typical of Stroud's trained scientific mind. Duhamel bought a 1962 World Almanac in the prison commissary and around the page edges he and the Birdman wrote the Stroud story.

"Bob had us write it in oxalic acid. When we couldn't get this we used urine. The acid in it comes up under heat."

A third convict, still in prison, acted as watch guard for the two as they passed away the hours talking and writing. When a guard would come near he would whisper "jiggers" or "screw."

Duhamel has this Almanac with him now. He also has a signed contract with Stroud to operate a birdseed business under the Birdman's name.

When he left prison he brought out seven handmade wallets which Stroud put together. They were for sale through Telyt ads last Thursday.

Stroud made four others and gave them away, to Burt Lancaster, Thomas Gaddis, his counsel Stanley Furman, and to Duhamel.

This is Robert Stroud's basic belief, as told to Joseph Duhamel:

The philosophy in which I believe is the fundamental decency and inhumanity of the human spirit. No matter what the odds against him may be no man is or ever can be defeated till he quits fighting.

No man can be a slave until he accepts slavery. I have been a convict all my life. Never for one minute have I ever been a slave either mentally or physically.

Stroud also gave Duhamel a picture taken in 1908, three months before his first murder. This picture has never been published before.

The invisible writings tell, Duhamel believes, why Stroud's parole has been held up.

They relate a few incidents which Stroud contends actually happened, and which he was witness to. Because of these, he feels, prison authorities may never let him out.

One purports to describe the death of a Negro prisoner named Elmer Davis, at the hands of guards in Leavenworth Penitentiary.

Miss Vivian Baker, of Sherbrooke, spent the holiday week-end with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Baker, Rock Island.

Mrs. F. W. Hackett and family, Montreal, spent the holiday at their summer home in North Stansstead.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Selby, have returned to their home in Derby Line after spending a few days at Atlantic City, N.H., where Mr. Selby, president of the National Bank of Derby Line, and who is on the executive council for Vermont, attended an American Bankers Association session.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Scott, Johnathan and Sally, Shawinigan South, spent the holiday week-end with the former's mother, Mrs. J. R. Scott, Stansstead.

A.C. Albert Malouin, who is with the RCAF at St. John's Air base, spent the week-end with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Molway, Rock Island, where a family Thanksgiving dinner was held on Oct. 7, attended by Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Malouin and family, Sherbrooke, Mr. and Mrs. John Cox and daughters, and Mrs. Rose Lyons.

Thanksgiving holiday guests and visitors at the home of Rev. and Mrs. Carl Gustafson, Rock Island, were: Miss Andrea Gustafson, Sherbrooke, Mr. Carl Gustafson, Jr., Ottawa, Mrs. S. Harrowing, and Andrea Jean, East Farnham, Mrs. Reg. Halladay, Cowansville, Mrs. K. MacKenzie, Sweetburg, Mrs. Francis Rankin, Mrs. Percy Beane, Miss Irene Parsons, Waterville, Rev. and Mrs. R. Mitchell Magog.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Walsh, Derby Line, Mrs. Cora Walsh, Mrs. Violet Badger and Mrs. Raymond Wheelock, Rock Island, were in Montreal from Oct. 2 to 6, where they attended the Grand Chapter of Quebec O.E.S. sessions, and Mrs. Wheelock, Rock Island, joined the group and with them attended the banquet and ball of the Eastern Star, Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Colt, Stansstead, and Mrs. George Hatch, Rock Island, attended the session on Oct. 5. Mr. Walsh completed a successful year as Worthy Grand Patron and was welcomed to the ranks of the Past Grand Patrons. Mrs. Wheelock completed her year as District Deputy Grand Matron and was elected to the office of Associate Grand Conduetress.

Almanac describe other deaths which Stroud contends were brought about by prison officials.

ATTEMPT ON LIFE
Another purported incident, said by Stroud to have occurred in the Leavenworth Penitentiary hospital, gives in detail an actual attempt on his own life.

The only reason he was able to fight it off was through his knowledge of medicine, Stroud admitted to Duhamel.

What can Duhamel do to free Stroud? Perhaps nothing, but he is going to try. His attempt will come through a book he intends to write based on the smuggled-out information in the Almanac.

"If I can tell people what the Birdman is really like, maybe more public opinion can help him," he says.

There is a premium on time, because Stroud expects to be dead within a year, Duhamel says, unless he can get out, or receive the medication he wants.

"He desperately wants to be free. After all, he's paid society his debt. He's also become more than a useful citizen, even in prison."

Railway conductor retires

LAST RUN — Engineer J. Edgar Poulin, centre of Richmond, received greetings from his wife left, and E. W. Kavanagh, superintendent of the Richmond district for Canadian National Railways, after arriving at Richmond from Quebec which was his last trip before retiring after 49 years service with the company.

RICHMOND (Special) — Another employee of the local Canadian National Railways division has made his last run and will now go on pension.

J. Edgar Poulin, who will be 62 on October 27, was greeted by many of his friends, relatives and fellow-employees as he made his last trip on the Richmond-Quebec Railiner Oct. 6.

The train arrived here at 7:25 p.m. and among those greeting him were E. W. Kavanagh, supt., of the CNR here, the Hon. Emile Lafrance, provincial minister of family and social welfare, and MLA for Richmond County; Bert Hebert, chief clerk, Mr. Marier, Roadmaster; J. L. Burns, retired railway man and several others.

Others on the train travelling with Mr. Poulin were Frank Goulet, engineer and Herbie Marchand, baggageman. Of interest here is the fact that this same train was the victim of a robbery in June 1960 at Kingsley Station. Poulin was conductor at the time and engineer was Bill Arnold who retired last year.

Presentations were made to Mr. Poulin at his home, 420 College St. where many friends and relatives greeted him and his wife offering their congratulations and good wishes.

Mr. Burns made the presentation of a purse of money. A

Prelates flock to Rome to discuss - in Latin - future of the Church

The Roman Catholic Church has taken stock of itself in an effort to assure that its presence in the world always has a contemporary aspect.

One of these inventories began in Rome Oct. 11 — the feast of the Motherhood of the Blessed Virgin Mary — when 2,800 cardinals, archbishops and bishops gathered in St. Peter's Basilica for the 21st ecumenical council.

The stated aim is to make the church "more accessible to our separated brethren" without changing in any way the essence of its doctrine.

Pope John XXIII announced Jan. 25, 1959, his intention to summon the ecclesiastical hierarchy to take part in a rejuvenation of the centuries-old appearance of the church.

A questionnaire sent by the Holy See to all spiritual leaders of Catholicism brought 9,000 replies.

DRAFTS ARE SECRET

Twelve preparatory commissions were set up to correlate and classify the replies, from which draft decrees were drawn up. These draft decrees were later studied and amended by the central commission of the council and then sent to all council members, called fathers of the council.

The fathers have since been studying the draft papers, written in Latin and bound in volumes marked "sub secreto".

While the details of these working papers have not been disclosed to the world's 500,000,000 Roman Catholics, their general topics are known by the individual names of the 12 preparatory commissions.

Discussions of the council will deal with theology, bishops and the administration of dioceses, discipline of the clergy and the faithful, religious orders, the liturgy, the sacraments, universities and seminaries, the Eastern churches, the missions, the lay apostolate, the press and entertainment, and Christian unity.

These and related subjects, contained in 2,060 pages, were studied by the central commission which last June 20 completed its seventh and last sitting on the third floor of the Pope's palace.

SECOND AT VATICAN

As in the case of the 20 previous ecumenical councils, the council will be named after its site—the Vatican. That is where the council of 1870, which proclaimed the Pope's infallibility on questions of faith and morals, took place. Thus the council, beginning this month, will be named the second Vatican council.

Until 1870, when Pius IX ended the practice, emperors and chiefs of state took part in ecumenical councils as the voice of the laity.

The church, this time, invited the laity to "participate" by presenting suggestions. The bishops of Canada were the first to meet lay groups and ask them what the laity expected of the council. This example was taken up in several other countries.

Among Canadian initiatives is a plan of Rev. E. F. Kutarna, parish priest of Wishart, Sask., to hold a "parochial council" that will be run much like the Vatican's. Every parishioner has been invited to take part in the project approved by Most Rev. M. C. O'Neill, Archbishop of Regina.

The work of the second Vatican council carried out in the central nave of St. Peter's, especially renovated for the purpose at a cost of about $500,000. Lighting is the best ever and allows the works of Michelangelo to be seen in all their splendor.

CRITICIZED LIGHTING

This recalls that in 1550, the year Pope Julian III convened the second part of the council of Trent, members of the parish of St. Peter's criticized him for the poor lighting of the apse.

In St. Peter's nave, the Pope's throne is on a stand mounted on casters so that it can be moved around. The 10 cardinals making up the presiding committee of the council sit at a table in the centre. At the sides, there are the tables of Msgr. Pericle Felici, general secretary of the council, and of his staff.

The desks and kneelers of the cardinals are set up in eight tiers of 11 seats each. The other fathers of the council are seated in 16 grandstands of between 60 and 84 seats each, set up along both sides of a central aisle. Microphones have been set up at various spots so that anyone wishing to speak need not walk more than 45 feet to reach one.

Other installations include a special pulpit, a table for shorthand reporters and another for the vote-takers.

A buffet, a first aid post and rest rooms have been set up just off the nave, where the fathers of the council debate in Latin behind closed doors.

Launch campaign for vaccinations against smallpox

NEW DELHI (Reuters)—India has launched a mass vaccination campaign in an attempt to ward off a virulent smallpox epidemic which experts predict will hit the country next year.

The forecast is based on a careful analysis of the incidence of smallpox in India in the last 60 years. It has been found that the disease breaks out in epidemic form every five or six years.

The last epidemic was during 1957-58 when more than 100,000 people were affected. More than 40,000 Indians died of smallpox in that year.

Six years earlier, in 1951, another epidemic hit India, with equally devastating results.

The grim warning about the impending epidemic was given by India's health minister, Dr. Sushila Nayar, in a speech to the Lok Sabha, the lower House of Parliament.

EXPERTS HOPEFUL

Health experts are not too pessimistic about the forecast, however. They believe that with preventive measures already under way, the disease can be checked, if not altogether eliminated.

A "national smallpox eradication program" has been launched at an estimated cost of 69,000,000 rupees ($14,500,000). The program aims at the immunization of the country's entire population of 440,000,000 by 1964.

This program has been speeded up in view of the experts' warning. But, many hurdles have come in the way of its speedy implementation.

In many parts of India, particularly in remote villages, people still do not bother to register births. Thus, thousands of new-born children have never been vaccinated.

Ignorant peasants also shy away from smallpox vaccination, often on religious grounds. Attempts to educate them on the advantages of an occasional immunization shot against the deadly disease now are being made through vigorous propaganda in the villages.

Toronto house is eight feet wide

TORONTO (CP) — There's room to swing a cat in the three-room bungalow at 28 Day Ave. in West Toronto but you'd have to restrict yourself to a cat with a short tail.

The Toronto Real Estate Board says it's probably the narrowest bungalow in Canada — 8½ feet by exact. But it has its advantages — $35 a year for taxes is one of them.

The salesman offering the house for $4,300 gives this description:

"Living room, 16 feet by eight feet; one bedroom, 12 feet by eight feet; kitchen 12 feet by eight feet."

That's it—all of it.

Number of similarities are noted in two biographical dictionaries

QUEBEC (CP)—A South African historian, touring the world to gather ideas for a new South African dictionary of biography, has found a number of similarities between the biographical dictionaries planned in Canada and in his own country.

Dr. W. J. de Kock spent two weeks visiting the National Archives in Ottawa and calling at Laval and Toronto universities which are jointly preparing the Canadian Dictionary of Biography.

Dr. de Kock said Canada's work is of particular interest to him because, like South Africa's, it will be bilingual, which presents special production problems. The French version of Canada's dictionary is being prepared here and the English in Toronto.

South Africa's will be printed in English and Afrikaans, the language of the Dutch-descended Boers.

COVER BROAD FIELD — And, like Canada's dictionary, it is to include biographies of some of the natives. There will be some 70 Indians covered by the Canadian dictionary. The South African will contain items on a number of Bantu, in a "greater proportion than even the people of South Africa realize."

Both dictionaries are going well back into history of subjects.

The earliest personage in South Africa's probably will be Henry the Navigator, the 15th century Portuguese prince who sent ships around the Cape of Good Hope. Canada's probably will go back to the end of the 10th century and the Norsemen, believed to have spent about three years somewhere on the east coast.

After trekking through Europe, where some countries have had dictionaries of biography for more than a century, Dr. de Kock came to North America and ends his six-month tour in Australia. He now is in the United States.

He noted that Australia, South Africa and Canada had all started dictionaries at about the same time. There was no special reason.

"The need was felt more or less at the same time. We have been agitating for it for many years," said the former senior lecturer of the University of Pretoria's history department.

In addition to the famous, both dictionaries aim to provide material on people who don't normally get into most history texts.

Andre Vachon, a Laval specialist on New France and research associate on the dictionary staff, says people like Jacques Boissod, Canada's first innkeeper, and Olivier Lejeune, the first Negro in the colony, will be written up beside Jacques Cartier, Wolfe and Champlain.

The Canadian dictionary "will run the whole gamut of activities, prophets, priests and pirates all finding a place."

Dr. George Brown of the University of Toronto, the Canadian editor, has written.

When completed, the Canadian dictionary will have 18 to 20 volumes containing 10,000 biographies, ranging in length from a few lines to 10,000-word essays.

There probably will be another 10,000 names on file at Toronto and Laval. The universities are building duplicate files that will be available to researchers.

The first volume of the Canadian series is to be ready for the printer by the end of June, 1963, and should be published about the beginning of 1964.

The series is being paid for by a $1,250,000 endowment set up by the late James Nicholson, a Toronto businessman.

POLLY'S POINTERS

Adds office to closet in small apartment

DEAR POLLY — I needed a writing room for correspondence, writing checks, etc., and there seemed to be no room in our apartment. I cleaned out the hall closet and removed and painted the top shelf. I then placed it on elbow brackets about 21 inches from the floor for my desk. The closet walls were then covered with contact paper up to the remaining shelf which holds papers, budget book and all sorts of things. There is a study lamp on the desk shelf and a padded stool that slips underneath and out of the way. My pleasant "office" will present no dismantling problems when we move.

MRS. R.J.J.
DEAR POLLY — I hope you and the other gals will like this trick as much as I do. Keep an extra dust pan in the kitchen to use when removing hot dishes from the oven. The dustpan scoops under pie tin or baking dish. You remove it without danger of burned hands.

MRS. E.L.T.
DEAR POLLY — This gimmick worked with my two daughters, and now the married one uses it for her own daughter. All mothers know how often they hear "It is not too cold to..." I set a certain degree of temperature for "warm enough to go swimming" and in the winter for "it's too cold to go without—" and so on. My thermometer always settled the argument and with no fuss.

MRS. A.N.
DEAR GIRLS — I wonder how many of you had the same thought I did, "Why didn't I think of that years ago?" Very clever, Mrs. A. N.

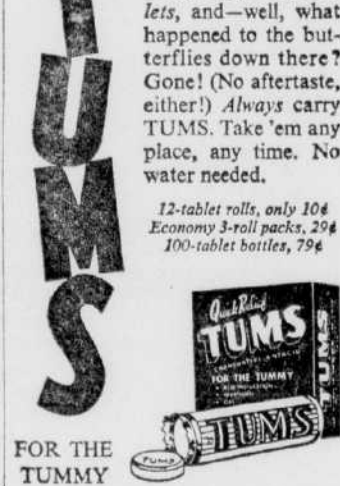

POLLY
DEAR POLLY — Here is my back and broom saver. When you scrub the bath tub, sprinkle cleanser in the tub, take the moistened broom and use it to scrub. It will clean the tub and increase the life of the broom.

RONALD H.
Now, wouldn't you know a man would come up with an idea like that?

Canada will honor Gzowski on stamp

A new postage stamp honoring one of Canada's most eminent citizens of Polish birth, Sir Casimir Stanislaus Gzowski, will go on sale at post offices throughout the country March 5th, 1963. It has been announced by the Hon. Ellen L. Fairclough, Postmaster General.

In announcing the new stamp, Mrs. Fairclough said the Gzowski issue was intended to honour not only Canadians of Polish extraction, but also those of many other races and origins who had contributed to the growth and development of the Canadian nation.

Sir Casimir Stanislaus Gzowski was born in Poland in 1813 and came to Canada as a young man. He was an intimate friend of many of the Fathers of Confederation.

An engineer of great ability, he took part in the building of the Grand Trunk Railway. He also built the International Bridge across Niagara Falls and was first chairman of the Niagara Falls Park Commission.

He was one of the early officers of the Canadian Society of Civil Engineers (now the Engineering Institute of Canada), and was one of the founders and an early president of Wycliffe College. He served as a Senator on the board of the University of Toronto for approximately 20 years.

The stamp, which will mark the 20th anniversary of Sir Stanislaus' birth, will be of five-cent denomination. A number of Canadian designers, including several artists of Polish descent, have expressed an interest in submitting designs for the stamp.

The Gzowski stamp will form a part of the Canada Post Office program of special issues for 1963. Mrs. Fairclough noted that details of the complete program for next year would be released within a short time.

The coin

by winifred
mather, f.r.n.s.

In Canada and the United States the term "penny" has become synonymous with "copper" or "cent," and when one hears this term one automatically thinks of a copper or bronze coin. However, for ten centuries, from the times of the Kings of Kent and of Mercia to the latter part of the reign of George III, the pennies of England (later Great Britain) were of silver.

The farthing, which was a fourth of a penny, came into being through the silver pennies being cut into fourths, until finally copper, tin and bronze farthings were struck as individual coins.

In the thirteenth century, however, there was a gold penny and a silver farthing, but issued in different reigns. The gold penny struck in 1257 by Henry III, represented the value of 20 silver pennies; this was an attempt to introduce a gold currency in England but it did not prove popular and was abandoned for about 100 years when a second attempt was made in the reign of Edward III. There were very few gold pennies struck and consequently the coin is very scarce and the present catalogue value is £1,500 or about $4,500.

A round silver farthing was struck in 1279, during the reign of Edward I. Being a minute coin and easily lost, it was not too popular, but it was issued until the end of the reign of Henry VIII.

W. R. of Toronto has written a long letter describing a copper coin of George II of Britain, dated 1748. He states: "The size is between that of an English penny and halfpenny. What makes me very curious is that the coin has no marked denomination on it, and according to the encyclopedia copper pennies were not struck until 1797."

There were no copper pennies struck until 1797, during the reign of George III, but other copper coins were struck much earlier. Copper farthings were struck during the reign of Charles I and during the reign of George II there were copper halfpennies and farthings, but the penny was still of silver.

It was not necessary to show the denomination on the halfpennies and farthings as the size indicated the value. The coin in question, I believe, is a farthing. The farthings at that time were larger than modern farthings and the halfpennies were more nearly the size of the present penny.

L. H. of Ottawa has requested an estimate of the value of a "1799 George III large coin" as well as a penny of Edward VII, 1910, and an 1814 Wellington halfpenny token.

There was a profusion of coins issued by George III and without knowing the metal used in this coin it is impossible to even guess at any value. It may not be a coin. If it is copper or brass, it might be a token, of which there were hundreds issued during the reign of George III.

A penny of Edward VII would have no premium as there is not sufficient interest in British coinage among Canadian collectors. The same applies to the 1814 Wellington halfpenny token. The halfpenny token would be worth more than the penny Wellington token as there were more penny tokens struck but there is no market in this country. Of all the collectors I have met, I know of only three serious collectors of British tokens.

Veteran's sour view

THE PATRIOTS by James Barlow, Penguin Books 365 pp., $1.25.

Reginald Mills is a young Second World War veteran, filled with a dreadful sense of his inadequacy in a world where the ability to use words, wealth, influence, power seems to be of more importance than truth, honesty, sincerity and the innate worth of a man.

Propelled by his sense of inadequacy, and by unfortunate circumstances, into the company of a pompous and wordy man who belittles the death of Mills' buddies in the War to End Wars, the young man uses the only weapon he has—physical force, and finds himself serving a six month's sentence for hitting "a middle-aged man."

With horrible clarity Barlow describes the six months Mills spends in prison—brutality, corruption among the guards, lack of realism among the officials, including the earnest but wholly inadequate chaplain, and defines very lucidly the reason for Mills' acceptance of a prison buddy's suggestion that they rob a mail train—their revenge on society.

The Patriots is written with understanding and compassion, and the end result of the robbery—to Mills, his wife and child—is terrible and tragic and inevitable.

Berton's Torontonians righteousness

FAST, FAST, FAST RELIEF by Pierre Berton, illustrations by George Feyer, McClelland & Stewart, $4.50, 185 pp.

Mr. Berton is a regular columnist for a Toronto newspaper and, following the tradition set by newspapermen in that city, he tends to view every day life by those events which offend his sense of justice.

Toronto newspapers have a reputation in Canadian journalism for sniffing out scandals and righting what is wrong, especially in public affairs. They rely heavily on bold headlines to announce their findings and Mr. Berton has been influenced by this thinking.

He has an engaging frankness and makes no pretensions about the collection of daily newspaper columns which he has put together in this book. He does, however, give us appropriate samples of what he decided not to include, more fully, his one-man probe into reasons for the refusal of the Toronto Public Library to carry Vladimir Nabokov's best-seller Lolita; his indignation at the beating of a Toronto gambler by hoodlums in full view of crowd. "What gives here sounds suspiciously like what gives in Montreal..."

Indignation is not all of Mr. Berton, although it is in the fibre of most of these short pieces. His humor is usually satirical, closer in outlook to the American "sick" comedians than to Stephen Leacock. At times, it has the flavor of James Thurber.

He has excellent anecdotes about well-known writers. W. O. Mitchell and Lister Sinclair; a Thurberian story entitled The Image of Gavin Grableigh; a broadside at the qualifications required of U.S. astronaut for moon travel. He devotes one section, Five Dilemmas of Our Time, to bitter comments on the legality of foreign divorces under Canadian law, child adoption practices and instalment buying.

In the words of the author, "Like all collections, this one is not designed to be read at a single sitting; indeed it would be disastrous to read it all at once as it would be to write it all at once. It is really intended to be read late at night, a couple of pages at a time, just before the dreams

Sheridan novelized

'Age when it was fashionable to be different'

MARRIAGE OF HARLEQUIN by Joan Walker, McClelland and Stewart, Toronto, 256 pp.

So infinitely superior to her other books one can scarcely credit them to the same hand. Joan Walker's Marriage of Harlequin, a biographical novel of Richard Sheridan, eighteenth century playwright, politician, wit and man-about-town, should place the author amongst Canada's most noted novelists.

Where Miss Walker's other works showed a certain super-ficiality, the present novel has depth, colour, dramatic impact and a fine musical movement in form and construction, as well as evidence of the author's careful research into all the aspects of English and world affairs of the period about which she writes.

In her Author's Note, Miss Walker states: "None of the characters in this book is fictitious. All the events took place. The letters and poems are authentic, as is also some of the dialogue." The novel's obvious authenticity nobly bears out the truth of her statement.

Sheridan, whose best-known play is probably School for Scandal, was the second and despised son of a man whose main, but unsuccessful, object in life was to restore to the family name the prestige it had formerly enjoyed; it was not until his deathbed that the father acknowledged Richard had accomplished what Mr. Sheridan and his admired elder son had failed to do.

The force that drove the father burned as fiercely in Richard, as did the need to appear favourably in his parent's eyes. Miss Walker's portrayal of these two men is deft and compassionate, as in her portrayal of Richard's love for the exquisite songstress Elizabeth Linley, one of the two most beautiful women in London.

Their romance and marriage in spite of opposition from both families, their passionate attachment, and the almost inevitable tragic consequences to their marriage as a result of Richard's success and the young couple's acceptance by the bon ton of London form a major part of novel.

The Sheridans and the Linleys, David Garrick, Charles Fox, the Royal Family, Dr. Johnson and the other lesser characters in Marriage of Harlequin are faithfully delineated and make one perhaps agree with Richard that "... it was sad to watch the passing of the age of privilege for it was also an age of individuality when it had been fashionable

Organ moved by volunteers

DOVER, Del.—(AP)—The organ in the Presbyterian church is to be played the first time next Sunday—and notes will signal the end of six years of labor in moving the instrument.

It's taken six years to move the organ, including 1,932 pipes from its former home in the Stamford, Conn., Presbyterian church.

Volunteers did most of the work, and the moving and re-assembly cost about $5,000.

By GLADYS TAYLOR

A publication entitled TAB NEWS, put out by the Teen Age Book Club under the sponsorship of the Scholastic Book services of Richmond Hill, Ontario, has recently come to my attention.

This sheet contains a list of books—being sold at very reasonable prices—guaranteed by their variety of subjects, to interest the average teenager.

Ordinarily I am very much in favour of any means whereby young people may be encouraged to read. And I would wholeheartedly support this club except for one thing. There are thirty books listed on the current TAB NEWS. Of these only one appears to have a Canadian setting and that is MRS. MIKE, written by the American authors Nancy and Benedict Freeman. Of the whole thirty books there is not one by a Canadian author.

This I cannot condone. How can we ever expect to instill in our young people a proper pride in Canada if we encourage them to belong to a book club which by its very ignoring of Canadian writing as much as says there is nothing being written in Canada of which they can be proud?

In justice to TAB, I must say that I have only seen one of their book lists. But unless others of their book lists do contain Canadian books, then I seriously wonder if they have the right to expect the support of Canadian parents.

At the Nova Scotia Festival of the Arts at Tatamagouche, Mrs. Lillias Toward presented a lecture on the letters of Mrs. Alexander Graham Bell to her daughter who is now Mrs. David Fairchild of Baddeck and Florida. Sponsored by the Canadian Authors Association, this gem of Canadiana was heard for the first time by a representative audience from every Canadian province and many American states. About 10,000 people visited the four-day Festival and many of these lingered over the book display, of which the chairman was Muriel Edwards. Assisting Miss Edwards were Peryl Daly, Gladys Black, Phyllis Blakeley and Mariana Dempster.

Meet My Uncle Joe: MACMILLAN OF CANADA is quite sure that children and adult readers alike of James McNamee's latest book MY UNCLE JOE will find this unusual literary character "the funniest man in the funniest Canadian tall tale ever published."

LONGMANS CANADA expect great things of the latest book on their publishing list, DATELINE—PEKING, by Toronto newspaperman Frederick Nossal. Already hailed in London and Australia and slated to appear in New York in January, DATELINE—PEKING will be reviewed on this page shortly.

Latest book from the pen of internationally known children's books author Lilla Stirling of Stamford, Connecticut, is THE STOWAWAY PIPER about the coming of the Highlanders to Pictou, N.S. in 1773.

Love novel is a dud

A PLACE TO MEET by Mary Orr, McClelland and Stewart, 280 pp., $5.00.

Briefly, this novel is a clinical examination of an extramarital affair between two people who, although devoted to their spouses, are also sex-starved.

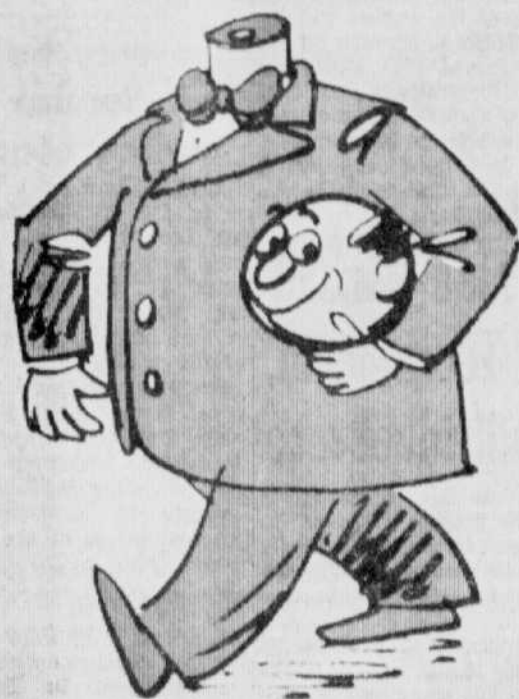

The book's title is self-explanatory, a place to meet is what the two lovers are constantly looking for, and finding, and then losing because of one interference or another.

The book is written more as a day-to-day account of the lovers' progress than as a novel. It leaves the reader quite untouched, neither richer nor poorer, neither edified nor revolted. Why, one wonders, did the author waste her efforts, the publishers their money on such a book?

And why, in turn, should the reading public be expected to support their folly by buying it?

Lois Marshall hailed by Tass

MOSCOW—(AP)—Operatic singer Lois Marshall of Toronto scored "another triumph" in a concert Monday night at the Moscow Conservatory, Tass news agency reported.

Noting the visit was her third to Moscow, Tass said Miss Marshall is popular with Moscow audiences for her "great culture, impeccable taste and resplendent voice."

Among her selections Monday night were a concert aria by Beethoven and songs by Richard Strauss.

Tass said Miss Marshall's main triumph was in Mozart's Exultate Jubilate where she showed "beautiful timbre and richness of tone."

Miss Marshall gave two more Moscow concerts this week.

Porcelain birds were her craft

TRURO, England—(AP)—Funeral services will be held Wednesday for Dorothy Doughty, 70, ceramic artist whose porcelain figurines of birds are highly prized by collectors.

Miss Doughty died in a hospital at Truro Sunday. She had injured her head in a fall recently.

The artist had made her Doughty Birds for the Royal Worcester Porcelain Company since 1936. They were produced in limited editions and the molds were destroyed.

MUSIC ON RECORDS

By HUGH DOHERTY

TOP TEN BARBERSHOP QUARTETS OF 1962 from the 24th International Quartet Contest of the SPEBSQA (DECCA stereo DL 74314) — Each year, the album put out by Decca for the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America is eagerly waited by barbershop singing buffs (which includes just about everyone who likes music) and this year's album is well worth waiting for. The quartets come from all parts of the United States and Canada, from Alhambra, California to London, Ont., and these top ten are, needless to say, very good indeed. The tunes are all familiar ones; interpretations are imaginative and Decca's stereo sound is magnificent.

OKTOBERFEST: The music and sounds of the biggest beer party in the world, recorded live in Munich, Germany (DECCA stereo DL 74332) — Every September, on the last Sunday of the month, the annual two-week Munich beer festival is held. It is a riot of carnival fun, beer drinking, eating and band music. On this recording, the jolly, sweaty atmosphere of the Oktoberfest is preserved. All the sounds are here: ponderous waltzes and lusty, lively polkas and marches by a typical German band, tipsy choruses, the tinkling silver bells of the brewery horses, and over it all the merry roar of the festival crowds.

FINIAN'S RAINBOW, with Ella Logan, David Wayne, Donald Richards, the Lyn Murray Singers and other members of the original Broadway cast, electronically re-channelled for stereo (COLUMBIA stereo OS 2080) — How Things in Glocca Morra is almost a forgotten song now, but this recording will take you back to 1947 when it first became a hit and when Finian's Rainbow was the biggest thing in Broadway musicals. It has long since been recorded in the mono version of course, but this is the first re-recording of the original cast for stereo. The music is still that combination of witfulness and gaiety that made the musical and its songs so popular.

Biography of a pioneer of the United Church

GEORGE PIDGEON, A Biography, by John Webster Grant, Ryerson Press, 158 pp.

This is more than a biography of Dr. George Pidgeon, Dr. Pidgeon, the first Moderator of the United Church of Canada, was the organizer of Church Union. The man after whom the book is named and the early history of Church Union are so intertwined that the author has given us not only personal glimpses of Pidgeon himself but also some very valuable Canadian church history.

John Grant, the book editor of the Ryerson Press, has done an outstanding piece of work, which will doubtless become a source book for students of Church Union. The book steward of the Ryerson Press, Dr. C. H. Dickenson, said at the recent meeting of the United Church General Council that this book is likely to become a best-seller.

Primarily, this is a book about George Pidgeon. Usually biographers resist the impulse to assess the contribution of leaders to the history of their times until after the close of their lives.

But because of Pidgeon's advanced age — he is now ninety years old — and because the fruits of his long labors have assumed such definite form, the author feels that the time is ripe for this publication.

Dr. Grant has based his biographical study of Dr. Pidgeon's life, his message and his service, on original research, on notes and memoranda written by Pidgeon himself.

He reviews the influence of his boyhood home in Grand Caspédia, Quebec; refers to his happy married life; describes his rise to leadership in the church and his role in the history of the nation, and gives an appraisal of the events associated with Church Union.

This is full of scintillating sentences: "He was a centre of calm in a whirlwind of hysteria..." He showed forth a quality of sanctity that disarmed criticism... His congregation was organized for maximum effectiveness, not maximum activity."

REV. A. B. LOVELACE

Writing pitcher

Brosnan gives you the feel of baseball

PENNANT RACE by Jim Brosnan, Munsion Book Co., Toronto, 249 pp., $5.45.

When you are watching the World Series this year on TV keep this book by you. It will make a sprightly and appropriate escape from the banal interruptions of the sponsors as they endeavour to eclipse the Yankees and the Giants with their wares.

Jim Brosnan writes about the strains and tensions of winning a pennant with the pen of an expert. He is a relief pitcher who helped the Cincinnati Reds to the Pennant last year. His big league experience is wide and long.

More than this, he writes with a novelist's ear for the slang, argot, jargon or idiom of his business. As the pages and innings flit by we come to know as fellow fans the practical joker Henry; Joey Jay, with his "slop slider"; the long-suffering Manager, Fred Hutchinson, and most of the other pleased-looking National League champions whose picture adorns the end page of their story. We are even introduced in a fleeting, non-fraternal way to one or two of the Dodgers and Giants, who, last year, like this, were stepping on each other's corns in the race.

I suppose only a ballplayer could actually enter completely into this world of the bull pen, the dugout, and the diamond. Mr. Brosnan's chapters, or sections of them, often end with a homely bit of philosophy — "Being bombed should make any man mad," and "Baseball is not a career for a man who needs security." And most of it he learned in the tough world of professional baseball.

It is a part of his skill that even if you have never moved in that world, you can appreciate so much of his enthusiasm for one of the great games.

If we wanted to be critical we could wish that Mr. Brosnan had managed to give us the full flavor of at least one whole game, but this is evidently not his aim. He wants to tell you how the Reds, one by one, survived that triumphant season. In doing so he tells you a lot about baseball too.

A new face on the Oxford book shelf

OXFORD ILLUSTRATED DICTIONARY, Edited by J. Coulson, C. T. Carr, L. Hutchinson and D. Eagle; illustrations editor, H. M. Pether; Oxford University Press; 974 pp.; $9.95.

The Oxford University Press has added a new dictionary which is a departure from its already impressive collection of books. Although the book has a selection of "1,700 separate drawings... of plant and animal forms, geometrical figures, machines, architectural details, and many other subjects," it is not exactly a breakthrough in lexicography, but is nevertheless an innovation for the Oxford people whose volumes are noted for their staid typography. The publishers say the Illustrated Dictionary is designed to fill the gap between the Concise Oxford and the Shorter Oxford, and though it provides the information a dictionary should, it contains facts usually sought in an encyclopedia.

The Illustrated would make an excellent gift for a high school or college student. In Canada where the English language is a hybrid of that spoken in Britain and the United States, this can be an excellent complement to an American dictionary.

LEN O'DONNELL'S Sport Shots and Pot Shots

SPORTING SITUATION CONFUSING

As though we didn't have enough with baseball, racing and football battling for headlines in the sporting pages along comes hockey to complicate it a little more. The National Hockey League opened Wednesday with the biggest upset of the early season when the Boston Bruins blanked the Montreal Canadiens 5-0.

Bob 'Miche' Perreault was in the nets for the Bruins and they claim he was outstanding in turning back the Montreal sharpshooters. He handled a total of 27 shots in posting his first shutout of the season.

Miche should be well remembered by local fans when he guarded the nets for Ivan Dugre's Saints in the old Quebec Senior Hockey League. He always was a player with plenty of team spirit and was the comic on the club. It seems that he hasn't changed according to Phil Watson.

Coach Dube will trot out his charges tomorrow when they move into the Arena. He has booked workouts, two for Sunday, and then each night for the next couple of weeks in preparation for the official opening of the loop on Sunday, Oct. 28th. The All-Star game is booked for the 21st, in the Maurice Richard Arena in Montreal.

On the local football scene both Bishop's and Sherbrooke have games booked Saturday. The green and gold boys will tangle with University of Montreal at the Park Avenue Stadium while the purple and white will play hosts to the Aggies from Macdonald College. Both games are booked to start at 2 p.m.

The World Series, which was postponed Friday, is slated for today but if the weather man fails to cooperate it will be advanced to Sunday. It is the sixth game and the Yanks will try to wrap up the battle. Billy Pierce, who hasn't lost a game in Candlestick Park, will be going against Whitey Ford. Manager Houk made the switch to Ford instead of young Bill Stafford.

TV fans will have plenty of variety for the weekend. Starting today there is a football game in Ottawa when the Saskatchewan Roughriders pay them a visit. In the evening there is a hockey game while Sunday there is plenty to choose from.

Today the World Series may be played, weather permitting, and on Sunday the AIs and Argos clash in a 'must' for both clubs. The AIs are in a worst condition than Toronto with five players still on the sidelines. This will hurt them but it will be tough battle. The NHL is also on the agenda and maybe the World Series. So all in all there is plenty for the viewers.

The local high school soccer leagues are in full swing and we understand that some of the schools have pretty fair players. There are senior and junior loops with all the schools represented. The weather has been tough the past week or so and the boys are trying to make up the games lost.

The Bellevue Golf Club of Richmond is holding its closing this evening with a banquet at the clubhouse. President George Ewing will preside at the presentation of trophies and other special prizes. President George has issued a special request for all members to be on hand.

A very important meeting is on the agenda this evening when the Lennoxville Golf Club holds its final gathering of the year. A supper will be served at 6:30 p.m., followed by the meeting.

The various reports for the past season will be given and the election of a new executive with committee chairmen will take place. A notice of motion will be studied on changing the name to the Lennoxville Golf Club Inc., from the present one. Also plans for the future development of the club will be discussed.

The current issue of the Saturday Evening Post has a very interesting article entitled College Football is Going Berserk. Veteran Sports Editor Furman Bisher has issued a call for general reformation of the game.

Figures clearly indicate that the game is getting rougher and that game officials have become less and less vigilant in enforcing rules intended to safeguard the athlete from serious injury. This seems to be trend all over U.S. and Canada and it is about time the men in blue started calling things according to the book before someone is seriously hurt for life.

The official opening of the City Bowling League will take place Monday evening at 8:30 p.m. at the Bowlerium. We had previously announced it was to be held last Monday but owing to unforeseen circumstances it was postponed a week.

President Jean-Marc 'Red' St. Cyr states that Mayor Armand Nadeau will be on hand to register the first strike. His Worship has been practising quite a little and may surprise the top notch men with his elegant style.

The Mount Orford Golf Club is staging a special event today with a mixed tournament followed by a chicken supper and a dance to close activities for the season. All members are asked to be on hand for what should be one of the best fixtures of the year. The supper is booked to start at 7 p.m. give or take a little.

Al Bachman, manager of Bob Cleroux of Montreal and Burke Emery, states that his Canadian heavyweight champion will meet Lloyd Jones of Atlanta, Ga., in a non-title 10-rounder at Noranda on Oct. 28.

He wants his fighter to keep in shape and since he can't fight where the NBA rules he must move to smaller centres. Cleroux was blacklisted by the NBA for refusing to sign for a return bout with Toronto's George Chuvalo.

The Montreal Athletic Commission severed its affiliation with the NBA when the suspension was upheld. Some effort is being made to settle the differences between the camps. Burke Emery is slated to fight in Halifax on Oct. 16 against Marty Pettiford of Newark, N.J. in an exhibition bout.

Ford and Pierce still starting choices

Rain and 45-mile-an-hour gale forces postponement, game is slated for today, no changes

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—Rain and 45-mile-an-hour gale winds forced postponement of Friday's sixth World Series game and threatened plans to resume play today at 3 p.m. EDT.

An all-night rain soaked the uncut outfield grass at Candlestick Park, tugged at the infield tarpaulin and threatened to carry it away despite a number of 35-pound weights.

If they had tried to play ball Friday, this could have been the day of the first 900 - home run in the winds that made it difficult to open doors and shattered glass in downtown hotel windows. Even on a sunny day, Candlestick has its well-publicized wind tunnel.

Commissioner Ford Frick who delayed 71 minutes past game time before calling Tuesday's game in New York, wasted no time Friday. Frick was at the park early and called off the game more than three hours before it was scheduled to start. As soon as he and grounds-keeper Matty Schwab stepped on the field, Frick waved his hands and said, "The game is off because the field is unplayable."

Nobody really expected to play Friday, for the weather forecaster had predicted a 90 per cent chance of rain Thursday night. His latest forecast for today was for scattered showers. However, the wind gusts should help dry the outfield area.

PIERCE SET TO GO
Billy Pierce, the stylish lefty who never has lost at Candlestick, where he has a 12-0 record, still is slated to be the pitcher for San Francisco Giants. Manager Dark did say he might switch to Jack Sanford for Sunday if today's game also is washed out.

Whitey Ford, winner of a record 10 World Series games, is to be the New York Yankee pitcher. Ford and Pierce had many duels in the days when Pierce was with Chicago White Sox. Against the Yanks he had a lifetime record of 25-38.

The Yankees needed only one more victory to close out the series for they led 3-2 in the best-of-seven competition. Both pitchers were well rested. Pierce hadn't worked since Sunday, when he lost the third game at New York 3-2. Ford pitched the opener Oct. 4 and toiled six innings Monday before he was taken out for a pinch hitter with the score tied at 2-2.

The two postponements in one series sent the writers into the record books to exhumate reports of the famed 1911 series between Philadelphia Athletics and New York Giants, who were rained out for a full week between the third and fourth games. The six - game series covered 13 days.

U.S. holds two-stroke lead Canada in World Amateur Golf Tournament, Gary Cowan leading individual race

KAWANA, Japan (AP)—An all-North American duel for the Eisenhower Cup, symbol of world amateur team golf supremacy, shaped up Friday with a revived U.S. team holding a two-stroke lead over Canada going into the final round of the world team championship.

The U.S. team came back from a miserable second round to top the Canadians 619 to 651 strokes after 54 holes.

In the final 18-hole round Friday, Gary Cowan, 23, of Kitchener, Ont., battles Dick Sikes, a University of Arkansas physical education major, for individual honors. Cowan, Canadian amateur champion in 1961, has scored 68-71-72-211 and Sikes 69-76-69-214 on the picturesque Fuji course, set along a small chunk of the Pacific.

The Britain - Ireland team, sparked by Michael Bonallack's 69 and Alexander Saddler's 72, moved into third place Friday with 638 strokes, followed by New Zealand with 660. Mexico had a 69 shooter in Juan Estrada and moved into fifth place at 672.

Ninety-two players from 23 countries played in near seclusion at this somewhat isolated course 80 miles southwest of Tokyo. Team scores ranged from the United States' 619 to 797 for Pakistan. Scores for the low three golfers only are computed.

The U.S. picked up eight strokes on Canada in the third round on Sikes' 69, a 70 by Deane Beman, and 72s by Labron Harris Jr. and Billy Joe Patton.

Bill Wakeham, 21-year-old B.C. champion, had his best round, a 72. But Cowan and Nick Westlock, 45, of Windsor, Ont., a truly big hitter, posted their high tournament rounds with 72 and 75, respectively.

Green Bay Packers and Redskins, only undefeated teams in NFL, meet clubs they already downed Green Bay Packers and Washington Redskins, the only unbeaten teams in the National Football League, meet teams they already have defeated Sunday in the fifth week of the season.

The Western Conference-leading Packers, rolling along with four straight wins, take on Minnesota Vikings, who still haven't broken into the victory column. When Minnesota played at Green Bay on opening day, the Packers romped 34-7.

Washington, surprise Eastern Conference leader, has won three and tied one in the four starts and will try to make it two in a row over St. Louis Cardinals at St. Louis. The revived Redskins beat the Cardinals 24-14 in Washington Sept. 30.

GIANTS MEET STEELERS
Two additional rematches are on Sunday's seven-game NFL program. New York Giants open at home after winning three of four on the road. The Giants' opposition will be Pittsburgh Steelers, a team they barely edged 31-27 in Pittsburgh Sept. 30.

San Francisco 49ers, upset winners over Baltimore Colts last week, hope to avenge an opening day 30-14 defeat by Chicago when they invade the home of the Bears. It will be the home opener for coach George Halas' Chicago team.

Detroit Lions, nosed out by Green Bay in a titanic struggle of defensive giants 9-7, expects to roll over the winless Los Angeles Rams at Detroit. The Rams have lost four straight.

Philadelphia Eagles and Dallas Cowboys, still hoping to fight their way back into the Eastern Conference scramble,

Marc Drouin paces U of S in golf tourney

Marc Drouin of the University of Sherbrooke paced the green and gold golf squad in the annual Ottawa St. Lawrence Golf Tournament.

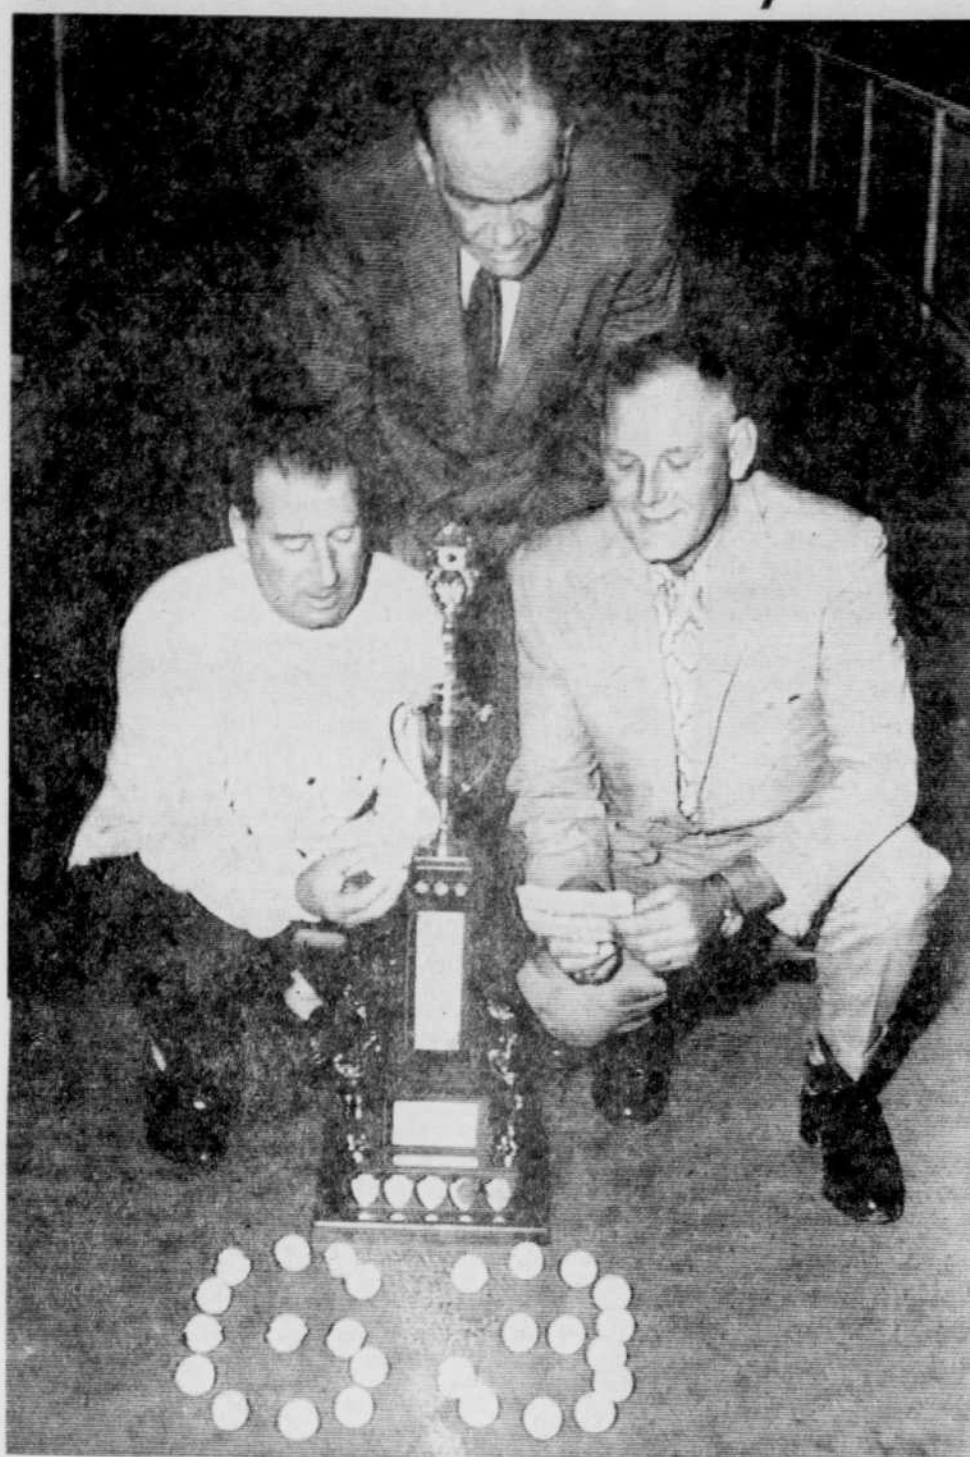

Sir George Williams walked off with the team honors when their four-man squad compiled a total of 626 to 644 for the runners-up Loyola College. University of Sherbrooke finished last with a grand total of 711.

Seven universities took part in the event and the teams finished in order, Sir George, Loyola, Carleton, Bishop's, Ottawa, Royal Military College and Sherbrooke.

Don Andrews of Loyola won the individual honors when he posted 75-76 to nose out Ross Leeder of Sir George by four strokes, 77-78. The other high men on the squads were, Dick Eliehu, Ottawa, 164, Kirby and Johnson of Bishops each with 167, Perry Tony, Carleton, also with 167 while Marc Drouin of Sherbrooke and Chuck Vrana of RMC were deadlocked with 169 each.

Sets record at Country Club

Joe Leblanc, left, is showing Louis Jacob, right, and Alphonse Turgeon, club captain, his card when he set a new record at the Sherbrooke Country Club Thursday when he fired a neat 63. In the front is a trophy Leblanc won in the St. George de Beauce Open Golf Tournament a week ago. Leblanc posted three birdies on the front nine with six pars while on the back nine he registered six birdies and three pars for his 63. Dr. Ledoux, L. Jacobs, R. Leblanc and Maurice Rheume witnessed the feat. It broke the old mark by two strokes.

The ten commandments of security

1. Treat every gun with the respect due a loaded gun.
2. Watch that muzzle! Carry your gun safely; keep safety on until ready to shoot.
3. Unload guns when not in use, take down or have action open; guns should be carried in cases to shooting area.
4. Be sure barrel is clear of obstructions, and that you have ammunition only of the proper size for the gun you carry.
5. Be sure of target before you pull trigger; know identifying features of game you hunt.
6. Never point a gun at anything you do not want to shoot; avoid all horse-play.
7. Never climb a tree or fence or jump a ditch with a loaded gun; never pull a gun toward you by the muzzle.
8. Never shoot a bullet at a flat, hard surface or water; at target practice be sure your backstop is adequate.
9. Store guns and ammunition separately, beyond reach of children.
10. Avoid alcoholic beverages before or during shooting.
