

New Lennoxville fire station inaugurated

By Emilie Hackett Special to the Record

Lennoxville's new fire station, at 3175 College Street, was inaugurated after months of construction.

Started in September of 2018, there are only a few finishing touches left to the construction of Sherbrooke's fire hall number six.

The $3,270,000 investment is one that is worthwhile, according to Lussier. "We are happy to be able to offer this new fire station to the population of the Lennoxville borough.

"The opening of this fire station will allow the residents of this area to profit from a first responders service.

"These first responders' interventions will help save lives, decrease recovery

The weather couldn't have been better this past Saturday for the 30th edition of Friendship Day in Lennoxville.

"We're lucky that we have the weather with us," said Borough President Claude Charron while taking in a piece of cake at Uplands Cultural and Heritage Centre in the early afternoon.

Asked about how he thought the day was going, Charron said he was pleased but was hearing mixed reviews.

"Some people say there's less people, some people say there's more. I don't know," he said. "It's all perception."

However the 30th Friendship Day compared to its various predecessors, the Borough President said he feels the celebration is a vital part of local community identity.

"I think it's essential," he said, praising the small army of volunteers who, through their work with various different community organizations, continues to make the day a success, year after year.

Potton Youth Talent Show blows the roof off the big top!

THE SCOOP

MABLE HASTINGS

On Saturday evening, June 8 the Missisquoi North Volunteer Centre (CABMN) Youth program held its annual youth talent show in Potton at the Mansonville Elementary School. With close to fifty youth ranging in ages from 1-13 years old performing, the show was a roaring success.

With 200 in attendance the evening blended a tribute to, The Greatest Showman a film about P.T. Barnum and his circus performers and was also laced with a variety of hip hop dances, performances of the past, tributes and more... Performers included youth from Potton, Bolton-Est, Cowansville, Sutton and Montreal who all came together as one big group to collaborate, cooperate, communicate and celebrate through performing. There was a place for everyone and a supportive hand to hold as many performed for the first time while others are almost seasoned to perfection.

Door prize draws were drawn between performances and donations of prizes from: Bijouterie Danis-Cowansville, DJ Jerk, NexKemia Petrochemicals, Giroux and Giroux, FamiliPrix Pharmacy-Mansonville, Virgin Hill Coffee, Depanneur des "13", June Peacock, Toro Graphix-Knowlton, Laurie Hastings and Paul Boivin, and Garage JF Giroux (Shell). Refreshments were purchased through donations from the parents and prepared by Epicerie Jacques Ducharme (Richelieu) with the store donating all of the juices for the evening.

The CABMN youth centre staff, parent volunteers and friends provided the dressing room changing team that also did hair and make up as well as those who tended sound, lighting, scenery, chairs, decorations and more... This was a team effort all the way and many hands did indeed make light work.

PHOTOS: MABLE HASTINGS AND SARAH JERSEY

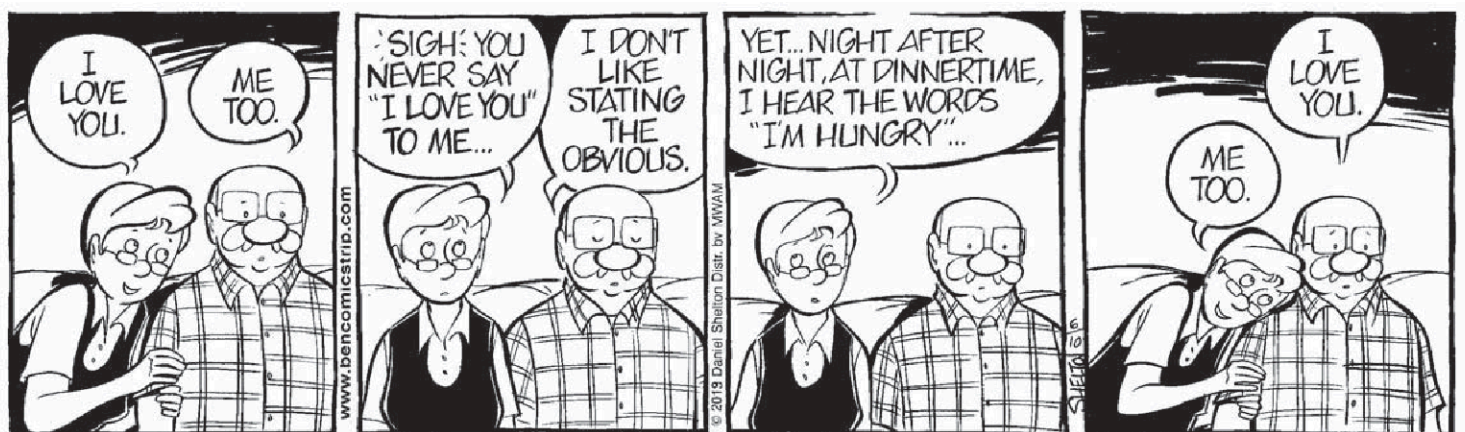

The stars were bright as each youth beamed with pride and excelled with the delivery of 20 dances with many youth in of them. A sprint after each performance to the dressing room for a hectic change of costume with a refined walk back to face another challenging blend of movement and memory made for admiration and applause as the audience watched in awe. This was indeed, "the greatest show!"

In a time where computer devices, cell phones and quick access entertainment makes way for most youth to find their time and efforts gobbled up as they sit with screen in hand far, far away on the sofa with little motivation; these youth have been meeting for the last nine months creating, practicing, refining and perfecting their performances for three to four hours every week. Their only motivation is to perform for an audience which brings them the greatest of all highs.

As emcee for the evening, I stood at one point looking out at the crowd following the performance of, "This is Me," a number from the Greatest Showman and I could almost see Hugh Jackman and PT Barnum beaming from the back of the room as they marvelled at Potton's youth who not only performed numbers from the show but who seem to live the message. "Look out 'cause here I come, and I'm marching on to the beat I drum. I'm not scared to be seen, I make no apologies, this is me"

"We consider immigrants to be more than just merchandise," he said. "These are human beings with needs who are looking for an open and accepting society where they can be included in communities."

Sherbrooke group protests against CAQ immigration, religious symbol bills

By Gordon Lambie

A gathering of people from the group that calls itself "Le collectif Ensemble avec les personnes migrantes contre le racisme," or "the collective together with migrant people against racism," held a demonstration in front of Sherbrooke's courthouse on Sunday to voice their ongoing opposition to the Coalition Avenir Quebec's Bill 9, on immigration, and Bill 21, on religious symbols.

"We have a responsibility to oppose these bills," said group spokesperson Guillaume Manningham, calling the government's proposed bills irrational, discriminatory, and the complete opposite of what is needed in modern society. "An attack against anyone among us is an attack against the entire population," he added. "When the CAQ attacks religious and cultural minorities, they also attack the kind of society in which we want to live."

Manningham explained that the group was formed last fall in response to the positions of the new provincial government. Since that time it has held public actions in the months of December, February, and May that were meant to express solidarity with migrant people who stand to be impacted by the bills, should they become law, but also clarify information about the realities of religious and cultural minorities that they feel are being misrepresented in public discourse.

"We consider immigrants to be more than just merchandise," he said. "These are human beings with needs who are looking for an open and accepting society where they can be included in communities."

The group has prepared a list of concerns which can be found online (in French) at <https://contreleracisme.wixsite.com/collectif>. The list underlines the collective's position that the new laws suspend rights and freedoms with the claim that doing so will somehow produce a more just society.

Asked if the CAQ's majority position creates concern in the group that the bills will be passed regardless of opposition, the spokesperson said the group is not unrealistic about the position they find themselves in.

"We are concerned, but that will not stop us from making ourselves heard," he said. "Even if a bill is passed into law; that does not automatically make it right."

According to Manningham the group means to continue actions over the coming weeks and months to make clear their ongoing opposition to the proposed laws, including participation next Sunday afternoon, June 16, in the annual "Soldarité sans frontières" march in Montreal.

periods after incidents, and reduce after-effects that, for example, occur during cerebrovascular accidents," explained Berthold.

"I want to salute those who took great care of us for so many years, our local firefighters. Your impact on our community will remain for many years to come. You delivered the most valued and dedicated work to our community," mentioned Charron.

"I hold a personal memory from your service. One day a doctor told me that there wasn't much hope for recovery for my son who got into an accident. Today, he is in the Armed Forces, living a regular life. Our local firefighters made that difference in my son's life by responding to the call." Charron also thanked borough councillors Jennifer Garfat and Bertrand Collins for their support throughout this project.

"We respected our budget and our schedule for the fire hall," said Simoneau. "The two-storey building is over 800 square meters and the garage can welcome two fire trucks very comfortably. Its location is strategic in order to answer the population's needs, and the building is highly functional and optimizes the space."

The biggest change for this new fire station was the arrival of permanent employees. The City of Sherbrooke had to hire a dozen new firefighters to be up to standard, but also had to unfortunately let go of 15 part-time, previous volunteer firefighters. "It is bittersweet. Every single part-time firefighter really helped to the fulfilment of this fire hall and community," remarked Simoneau.

"The biggest changes don't come from the people who were hired but comes from the different structure and status within the station and the fact that there will be people here 24 hours a day, seven days a week," explained Scott Passmore. "We will have a much quicker response time. Over and above all that, the new first responders service will really be beneficial to Lennoxville, especially with the Renaissance home, the schools in town, and more." Passmore transitioned from a volunteer firefighter position, to a part-time firefighter, and has been a permanent employee for 12 years as a firefighter. He now works at the Lennoxville fire hall.

"Every firehouse in the city has a specialty. Ours will be off roading," he said, pointing to the station's new all-terrain vehicle. "If someone gets hurt on a bike trail, or a skidoo trail, or out in the woods and our trucks can't make it, we will have this vehicle to access a person. We will be covering all of Sherbrooke calls that require this vehicle."

There will be an open house for the general population on September 14.

Bishop's Graduation 2019

By Emilie Hackett
Special to the Record

Bishop's University's graduating class of 2019 walked across the stage in the Denver Gymnasium on Saturday, June 8, among their academic colleagues, professors, mentors, peers, and family.

Students in the Humanities, Natural Sciences, and Social Sciences graduated in the morning, along with Honorands Colm Feore, actor, and author Kim Thù. The afternoon ceremony saw its Business, Education, and Graduate and Micro-program certificate students honoured along Claude Belleau, Estrie Aide director general and Christiane Germain, co-president of Groupe Germain Hotels.

Jo-Anne Ryan, class of 1983 alumna, was awarded the Alumna of the Year award for her work in launching JUMP, a program that helps graduates transition into the working world by assigning them to mentors in their new host cities.

"The class of 2019 consistently responded to the needs of people less fortunate than them, from raising money with the annual charity Fashion Show for mental health organizations, or with the Caribbean and African Student Association's culture show, which raised money for health care and education for children in Rwanda," said Principal Michael Goldbloom. "We owe a great debt of gratitude for this class, for how they have cared for each other, themselves, and the world, and for what they have contributed collectively to the Bishop's campus."

Colm Feore sent off the class of 2019 with a parting message. "I wish you the strength and courage to cope with the challenges that lie ahead," he exclaimed. Smith's inspiring speeches left the graduates leaving with their heads held high.

Townshippers' Association Annual General Meeting

Record Staff

Townshippers' Association hosted its 40th Annual General Meeting this past Friday, June 7, 2019, at Studio Georgeville, with more than 50 people in attendance.

The Association provided a brief summary of its activities over the past year, which may be consulted on the Association's website. The meeting was followed by an awards presentation for the winners of this year's Young Townships Leader Award, Brittany Mosher, Samantha Young, and Jessica Meadows-Hornov; Outstanding Townshippers Award, Jane Loisel, Ann Rothfels, and Miranda Côté; and the Excel in the Estrie essay challenge, Mandy Roy and Adrien Drolet; after which, attendees crossed the square to Murray Memorial Centre to mingle over light refreshments to the tune of live music by Keenan Wilcox.

For those who are curious, the winning essays from this year's edition of Excel in the Estrie will appear in Townshippers' Fall 2019 magazine, and this year's Young Townships Leaders and Outstanding Townshippers will be added to the list of past honorees on their respective sections of the Association's website, in addition to being added to the awards book, which may be consulted at the Association's head office in Lennoxville.

Submissions for Excel in the Estrie, and nominations for the Young Townships Leader Award and the Outstanding Townshippers Award are now accepted year-round, so interested individuals are encouraged to call the Association or visit its website and act while the iron is hot!

About the Awards

Each year, Townshippers' Association has the pleasure of recognizing the achievements and contributions of fellow Townshippers through the Young Townships Leader Award and the Outstanding Townshippers Award.

The Outstanding Townshippers Award recognizes the dedication, generosity, and talent of people and groups who are contributing positively to the Eastern Townships English-speaking community. The Young Townships Leader Award recognizes youth ages 15 to 35 who have shown leadership within the English-speaking community of the historical Eastern Townships, and encourages younger citizens to become actively involved in their communities by celebrating their achievements, commitment, and efforts; its cash prize is made possible each year through the generous support of the provincial and federal governments, as well as local schools and businesses, including Cass Funeral Homes, Global Excel Management, NAV Canada, and Stanstead Col-

In addition, the Association hosts Excel in the Estrie, an annual essay and short video contest that invites graduating high school seniors from across the historical Eastern Townships to share stories of overcoming challenges – academic, social or personal – on their path to graduation and to share their plans for living and working in the region in the future. The winning entries are awarded a cash prize to help them as they embark on post-secondary studies. This year, the prize was made possible thanks to the support of the provincial and federal governments, Global Excel Management, and Cass Funeral Homes.

It's grilling time at Renaissance Manoir St-Francis

By Emilie Hackett
Special to the Record

The Renaissance Manoir St-Francis held its annual barbecue on Friday, June 7. The residents enjoyed hot dogs and hamburgers on the grill outside the dining room, prepared by the staff members.

Réjeanne Frémont, Jean Kerr, and Barbara Moore were three of many residents gathered for the festive lunch. "It's quite appreciated by everyone," said Moore, who has been living at the Renaissance for four years. "It really means that summer is coming. Hamburgers are my favourite, but for some reason, we're all eating hot dogs right now. I think we were hungry," she chuckled.

Frémont praised the regular food services as well. "Usually we have the salad bar where we go help ourselves, and that is really appreciated. We also have soups and then our main meal. But for today we are really enjoying our barbecue food," she explained. Frémont has been a resident at the Renaissance for six years now and is the volunteer who welcomes all new residents to help them integrate into the establishment. "What she does is amazing," mentioned Kerr, who was welcomed by Frémont two years ago when she arrived at the Renaissance.

All three ladies now call Lennoxville home, but neither grew up here. "I'm from New Brunswick, and when I got married, my husband and I went to teach French up North in indigenous communities. Somehow, we ended up here, and I think I have spent more time of my life in Lennoxville than anywhere else," remarked Frémont. Moore came to town over 20 years ago when her husband was transferred out of Montreal into Lennoxville. As for Kerr, she lived in the country in Cookshire for as long as she can remember.

"It's really nice here. I love to go out after lunch and sit on the veranda and admire the scenery. The view is great from my room. I see everyone on Queen walk by," added Frémont. She was looking forward to watching the busy street for Saturday's Friendship Day celebrations. Frémont also makes jewelry out of her apartment, which she then likes to distribute among her friends. She keeps a room in her two-bedroom apartment specifically for her crafts.

"We have so many activities here. I really like when we have our monthly birthday party to celebrate everyone's birthday," said Moore. "The sing-along activity is so great. You can see how helpful it is for people," chimed Frémont. As for Kerr, she loves the bilingual aspect at the Manoir, one she says is very unique to the Lennoxville community.

Gabriela Rotariu, director at the Manoir, explained that the barbecue is an annual tradition. "We do it every year before Father's Day. We try to make the summer come sooner," she mentioned. They also held their first bocce game of the year after the barbecue. Bocce is very popular among the residents, and they play every Monday as long as there is good weather.

"We have a lot of activities here, some organized by the residents and some organized by the staff," she explained. "We have music for our non-autonomous citizens, Wii bowling, art crafts, and zootherapy once or twice a month. Zootherapy is so beneficial to our residents, we can see how it lights up their day. They really love holding the piglet."

Rotariu has been director at the Manoir for two years now, and previously worked in the hotel industry. "I truly love what I do here. I used to say that I now have a house full of grandparents. I didn't have any as a kid, and now I have hundreds. It is so rewarding to work here. You manage to know your clients in a way that you can't in the hotel industry. You can really build relationships at the Manoir. That's the biggest difference," she concluded.

EMILIE HACKETT

Réjeanne Frémont and Barbara Moore are two of the many residents who enjoyed the Renaissance Manoir St-Francis's annual barbecue.

EDITORIAL

Bernier, now the leader of his own party, beat Scheer on the first ballot in all provinces except Saskatchewan and Prince Edward Island, and was dominant in British Columbia, Alberta, Ontario and Quebec.

Crowded fields for party leadership, except ...

PETER BLACK

Anyone taking bets on who will end up winning the U.S. Democratic Party's presidential nomination? Oddsmakers must truly be at odds trying to handicap a field as vast as amber waves of grain.

Twenty-four candidates have declared for the honour of running in 2020 against President Donald Trump - assuming he is still the choice of the Republican Party a year from now (and not in jail or in self-exile on some tax haven island).

Remarkably few oddballs or single issue fanatics are among the double dozen Dem hopefuls. That's partly because the bar to enter the race is high enough to discourage all but the very monied nutter. Candidates must have the support of at least one percent of respondents in three recognized polls or have received financial contributions from at least 65,000 "unique" donors with at least 200 in each of 20 states. Got that?

The first two candidates debates, split into two groups of 10, will be held later this month in Miami, and in Detroit in July, cities in states the Democrats could have and should have won in the 2016 election.

While it is indeed an exceptionally large group of candidates in the hunt for the Dem nod, it is almost normal for there to be more than a dozen lining up at the start of such a marathon in American politics. We need look no further than Trump who emerged from an initial pack of 16 candidates who made it to the debate stage.

Here in Canada, no less than 17 candidates initially entered the 2017 race to replace Conservative leader and former prime minister Stephen Harper. Four dropped out (including former TV Dragon Kevin O'Leary, and exposed sexer Tony Clement) before the final debates and voting.

After the 13th ballot was counted Saskatchewan MP and former House of Commons speaker Andrew Scheer edged out former Harper minister and frustrated libertarian Maxime Bernier by 17,222 to 16,577, or 50.5 per cent to 49.05.

Bernier, now the leader of his own party, beat Scheer on the first ballot in all provinces except Saskatchewan and Prince Edward Island, and was dominant in British Columbia, Alberta, Ontario and Quebec. Whether or not "Mad Max" and the People's Party of Canada will end up cashing in on some of that support in the October federal election is anyone's guess.

There is, of course, another important party leadership race underway, but you'd hardly know it. A year from now the venerable Quebec Liberal Party will select a new leader. The vote will be in the Spring but no date has been set yet.

So far the list of possible candidates declining to run far exceeds the list of those in serious reflection, as they say. We do know with virtually certainty one of the candidates will be Dominique Anglade, former minister of Economic Development in the Philippe Couillard government, and, not that it really matters, a former candidate and party president of the the Coalition Avenir Québec (CAQ).

Others mulling a run are also former high profile Couillard ministers, Gaetan Barrette and Carlos Leitao, and rookie MNA, Marwah Rizqy. All these folks hold seats on or around the Liberals' island fortress of Montreal. The party only has three of its 29 seats outside the Grande Métropole, and none of those MNAs is planning to run.

Such initial reluctance to take the plunge is understandable considering the challenge that comes with assuming the Liberal leadership: Less than three years to rebuild a party erased from the regions, polling near single digits among francophone voters, and facing a governing group that seems to have tapped into a neo-conservative motherload in Quebec's heartland.

Throw in a new complicated electoral system as proposed by the CAQ government, and the task gets even more daunting.

Inevitably a new Liberal leader will come forth, and, in the style of Ontario's Doug Ford, Donald Trump and possibly Andrew Scheer, maybe pull off a surprise.

(As a post-script, the Ontario Liberal Party, with only seven MPPs, is in an even worse sport than the QLP, leadership-wise).

À suivre, as they say.

In response to Townships History Tidbits: Nanking Cafe

Although not a memory, as legend has it the old platform scales used for weighing incoming produce during the early years of the Nanking are now being used every fall for weighing squash up at MacDonald's farm.

MIKE MACDONALD

TO THE EDITOR,

Last night I found myself in a brief conversation about electric cars and their carbon footprint.

This morning I was up relatively early and noticed a jogger going by. It was hard not to admire his carbon footprint.

Later in the morning it was motorcycles I noticed, lots of them, including the three-wheeled variety, because it was a nice day and what can be better than a Sunday drive? As long as you're not concerned about increasing atmospheric CO2 levels, of course.

On the radio I heard about the Montreal Grand Prix, the Women's World Cup of Soccer, the NBA playoffs, the NHL playoffs. The excitement in the announcer's voice for all these events was palpable.

It seemed a shame that he wasn't followed by a reporter who might have calculated, in metric tons, the enormous carbon footprint of any one of these events, just so we could put into perspective what our little games are doing to our planet.

If I'd been able to find my copy, I might have spent part of the rest of the day reading Neil Postman's book, Amusing Ourselves to Death.

Raptors remain all business on eve of what could be historic victory

The Canadian Press

The Toronto Raptors are one win away from the first NBA Championship in franchise history. But don't tell the players that. Raptors coach Nick Nurse and veteran point guard Kyle Lowry said the team's focus heading into Monday's Game 5 of the NBA Finals is: "We haven't done anything yet."

One of the secrets to Toronto's success in this historic playoff run, they say, is their ability to remain level-headed.

Part of that mentality comes from their unflappable superstar Kawhi Leonard.

The Raptors were back home Sunday after winning twice at Oracle Arena in Oakland, Calif. They've won seven of their last eight post-season games.

Toronto could face Kevin Durant in Game 5. The Warriors star suffered a calf injury in the Western Conference finals and has yet to play in this series.

Warriors coach Steve Kerr said Durant planned to practise with the team on Sunday.

Alouettes part ways with head coach Sherman, name Jones interim coach

The Canadian Press

The Montreal Alouettes have "parted ways" with head coach Mike Sherman, the team announced Saturday, less than a week before the start of the new CFL season.

Montreal says offensive co-ordinator Khari Jones will serve as interim head coach, combining both positions.

Sherman spent just one season as head coach of the Alouettes, guiding the team to a 5-13 record in 2018.

Montreal opens its regular season on Friday at Edmonton.

"We would like to thank Mike Sherman for his hard work and dedication with our team," Alouettes GM Kavis Reed said in a statement. "We would have preferred a different turn of events, but we believe that we are making this decision with the best interest of our organization and our team in mind."

"We had identified some key elements from last year where we wanted to see some changes, but unfortunately, these adjustments did not materialize. These decisions are never easy to take, but we believe that this is the right one to make. Our team is in good hands as Khari showed great things in 2018 and has a very solid experience in the CFL."

Jones will be starting his second season with the Alouettes. He worked with the team's quarterbacks last year.

Jones began his coaching career in 2009 with the Hamilton Tiger-Cats, where he led the quarterbacks in his first two seasons before being promoted to offensive co-ordinator the following year. He coached the Saskatchewan Roughriders' QBs in 2012 and 2013, winning a Grey Cup in his second year.

The 48-year-old from Indiana spent 11 seasons as a CFL quarterback, playing for the B.C. Lions, Winnipeg Blue Bombers, Calgary Stampeders, Edmonton Eskimos and Tiger-Cats.

"This is a tremendous honour," Jones said in a statement. "I would have liked this announcement to occur in different circumstances, but I am ready to take on this new challenge. We have a great coaching staff and a group of hard working, talented players. I am looking forward to seeing our players come together as we all work with them with one goal in mind."

Death

Hywel (Griff) GRIFFITHS
1918-2019

It is with deep sorrow that we report the death of Hywel, who passed away in Cleveland, Quebec on June 5, 2019. He was the son of the late Rev. David Lloyd Griffiths and Catherine Ann Johns. He was the loving husband of the late Margaret Harding of Saint John, N.B. and the devoted father of sons William and John (Penny). He was the grandfather of Elizabeth (Rick), Evan, Sara and Meredith (Phil), and the great-grandfather of Peyton and Xavier. He will be fondly remembered by all his nieces and nephews, and good friends.

Griff was born in South Wales, U.K. The family moved to Canada in 1927. He was educated at the Academy in Huntingdon, Qc. Following graduation, he entered the employ of the Canadian Bank of Commerce (now CIBC). All of his managerial appointments were for offices located in the beautiful Eastern Townships of Quebec: Thetford Mines, Richmond, Farnham, and finally the senior branch in Sherbrooke from which he retired in 1978. He served in the RCAF during World War 2 and returned to the Bank in 1945 at the close of hostilities. Throughout his long business career he maintained executive positions in the Royal Canadian Legion, Rotary, Lions, and Masonry. His great pleasure was a soloist in two outstanding Montreal choirs and in forming and directing church choirs. Also, in welcoming friends to the family summer cottage on Brompton Lake.

He was predeceased by sisters Gwyneth and Iris and brothers David, John and Kenneth.

In accordance with his wishes, there will not be a formal funeral. A graveside service directed by a member of the clergy will be held shortly at the family plot in the Cedar Hill Cemetery in Saint John, N.B.

Recognition and sincere thanks are owed to the administration and especially the nurses and staff of the Manning 1 and Norton floors of the Wales Home for the warmth and the exceptional care they provided Dad in his declining years.

Compton Historical Society holds meeting

On June 1, 2019 the Compton Historical Society held a meeting in the conference room at Wood’s Restaurant in Compton.

The President, Jean Marc Lachance opened the meeting, and the Lord’s Prayer was recited in unison.

The secretary, Sue Nichols, read the minutes of the previous meeting, and they were adopted as read.

Ellie Bailey, Treasurer, gave the financial report, and it was adopted as read.

It was reported that a sunshine gift had been delivered to two of our members who had been ill.

The mystery of the little church has now been solved. Jean Marc Lachance and Madeleine Gosselin did some research and they discovered that this

Roman Catholic Church, “Notre Dame du Juvance” was not moved, but it was built there at Mount Orford Park.

Jean Marc showed slides of some one-room school houses, complete with a wood shed and out-house.

In 1893, the Village of Compton became a municipality, and Waterville became one seven years later.

In 1959, the Louis St. Laurent school as built in Compton.

The 1898 map will be presented at a meeting on August 31, the anniversary of Compton.

Our next meeting will be held August 3, same time, same place.

Does the five-level belong to them?

By Phillip Alder

P.G. Wodehouse, my favorite author, said, "I know I was writing stories when I was five. I don't know what I did before that. Just loafed, I suppose."

He certainly didn't loaf after that, writing almost nonstop until he died at the age of 93.

There is a well-known adage in bridge that the five-level belongs to the opponents. In other words, do not bid five over five. However, as is usually the case with our game, there are exceptions.

What do you think about the auction in today's deal? What is the best defense against five spades?

This deal was played 16 times at Bridge Base Online and featured seven different contracts with 11 different results! In this auction, East was not enthusiastic about his second-seat weak two, but that is the modern style. The rest of the auction was self-explanatory until South's decision to bid five spades despite his partner's double of five clubs. If South had allowed North to double five hearts, East-West would have been plus 650, losing tricks only to the major-suit aces! So, South judged well to bid five over five.

If West had led the heart king, the contract would have surely made with an overtrick, declarer losing one club after drawing trumps and being one useful diamond spot from taking all of the tricks. But West led the club ace and continued with the club three, a suit-preference signal for diamonds. East ruffed and returned a diamond, which West ruffed to defeat the contract.

Uncomfortable for all passengers

Dear Annie

MONDAY, JUNE 10, 2019

Dear Annie: When did airplane seats become so small? I hadn't flown in six years until this past spring, when I booked a flight to attend a family wedding. I reserved a window seat so that I could relax in comfort. But the experience was anything but comfortable.

For starters, the man next to me in the middle seat must have been 6'2" tall and weighed at least 250 pounds, and he could not possibly sit in the middle seat without taking up room from the window and aisle seats. We almost had to pull up the middle seat armrests so that he could sit down. The whole time, I kept trying not to touch his body, but his girth was such that some contact was unavoidable.

I used to fly a lot for business in the '80s, and I don't ever remember such uncomfortable seats, or such an unpleasant experience. I never want to fly again!

I felt sorry for this large man. He was very nice and embarrassed about the whole situation. It had to be extremely uncomfortable for him to squeeze his body between those armrests. As bad as it was for me and for the woman in the aisle seat on his other side, this guy had it worse. He should never have been booked into such a ridiculously narrow seat with virtually no legroom. His knees were pressed against the seat in front of him the entire time. Why don't airlines have size limitations for middle seat passengers? — Recovering from an Unbearable Flight

Dear Recovering: You are not alone in wondering what airlines are thinking by reducing the width of their seats and the amount of legroom. They create a great deal of resentment of their brand. In theory, many have policies stating that obese people should buy two tickets so they can spread out, but since more than a third of Americans are called "obese," they don't insist on this policy. Air Canada says that obesity can be a disability and, with a doctor's note, will grant the obese passenger two seats for the price of one. Air France offers a 25 percent discount on the second seat for an obese person and will refund the balance of the fare if the flight has empty seats.

Politicians have passed various versions of a "Bill of Rights" for airline passengers, but having airplane seats like the old days — with plenty of width and legroom — are not considered essential.

However, I agree with you, and I would encourage you to write a letter of complaint to the airline you used.

Dear Annie: This is response to your column about the 88-year-old mother whose daughter didn't feel it was safe for her to drive. Please let people know that if they feel a person is an unsafe driver, they can report them to the DMV anonymously. The DMV will call them in for a driver's license test.

I wish we had known that was a possibility. After various mishaps, we had asked my stepfather not to drive. Unfortunately, one day he decided he wanted to get behind the wheel. One person was killed instantly (my mother). Thank goodness the family in the car he pulled out in front of were only injured and all recovered.

If the 88-year-old mother frequently falls, she should not be behind the wheel of a car. Not only for the safety of herself and her son, but the safety of others on the road. — Mindful Motorist

Dear Mindful Motorist: Thank you for this tip. It might help keep our roads safer.

Dear Annie: I was an animal control officer for six years and a pet sitter for 16 years. I just read the two responses to "Missing Out on Friends," and neither one of them mentioned that 95 percent of shelters require that animals that are adopted from them be returned if, for any reason, the adopter can't care for them.

Our local shelter took back two 12-year-old cats they had adopted out as kittens when their owner died and there was no one else to take them. One of them had diabetes! I know because I was the woman's friend and returned them.

So, if "Missing Out on Friends" adopts, then they should make sure the cats could be returned to the shelter if they can't care for them. And then they should let family or friends know about the situation. "Missing Out on Friends" could also set aside some money for their care, if able. An estate planner can help. I know the shelter would appreciate that! — Lover of Pets and People

Dear Lover of Pets and People: Thank you for this tip, and thank you for taking care of so many stray animals.

Among the most expensive things moving companies have to "wrap" are flat-screen TVs. These items are large and cumbersome, and they can break easily during a move. To avoid the cost of wrapping your televisions, make a visit to your local electronics store. They often have leftover boxes that new TVs came packaged in. You can reuse those boxes (with all of the foam compartments inside) to pack up your TV. This same tip works for computers, printers and other electronics you may also have.
