

OUR ENGLISH EDITION

This, our first English Edition of "Le Canadien," has been attempted after receiving numerous requests from the English community in Thetford and from the surrounding English villages throughout the county.

We wish to express our appreciation of the co-operation of our correspondents in the localities represented and if any district has been omitted it is because we have not yet found someone who is interested enough to help in this work, or because the letters arrived to late for publication.

The success of this edition depends entirely upon the reception it receives among our English speaking citizens and the support that is given by the correspondents in the way of local news items.

We sincerely trust that with the hearty cooperation of all our correspondents we shall be able to publish real news and with clippings of general interest from the most reliable dailies and magazines, we may print an entertaining and helpful sheet.

THE EDITOR

October month of Opportunity

Seasonable Hints that Should be Kept in View by the Farmer.

October is the month of real opportunities to the general agriculturist and gardener. All attention must be devoted to the harvesting of the remainder of the crops ere the heavy autumn frosts do serious damage.

Autumn is no time for loafing next year's crop depends upon to-day's efforts.

Canadian farmers must provide seeds of diverse kinds for their own use. Mangels should be left in the field as long as possible, but they are injured by hard frost.

Keep the lambs on good pasture or feed cabbage or rape as a substitute.

Deep ploughing at this season of the year will prepare the soil to absorb a large amount of the fall rains, which will be required for the development of next season's crops.

How about the clover field? Have you looked it over to ascertain if the second crop is ready yet to harvest for seed?

Clean up crop remnants. Some pests pass the winter in or about remnants of the plants they have been feeding on. Trash should also be collected and well composted, or destroyed.

Just as soon as the frost cuts the dahlias, cut off the tops, dig up the roots and store in a dry, cool cellar.

Cannas are handled in the same manner as dahlias, but they may be stored without covering. Place in a cool cellar.

Pansies may be set out now and covered with straw or leaves before severe freezing sets in.

As active growth ceases, there are heaven-born chances for planting shrubs, trees and herbaceous plants generally. Act as soon as the leaves show sign of being mature.

Keep right on hilling late celery. It requires a lot of attention now.

Clean the asparagus bed, removing all weed growth, preparatory to the final clean up, which comes next month.

It is not so much the acreage under crop in Canada which should be enlarged as it is the yields. Better farming is what is needed.

Seed potatoes for next season's crop should be selected from the most productive hills in the field. Lennoxville Experimental Farm

Thundering on German Trenches

Churchill Tells of Great Work of Marvellous New British Army

Courage not excelled in our whole history.

A Devotion and Sacrifice Which No Troops of Any Country Have Ever Surpassed.

Rt. Hon. Winston Churchill, opened a fete in the Recreation Ground Chelmsford, on Saturday afternoon, in aid of the Russian Wounded and Scottish Prisoners of War Fund. The right hon. gentleman said:

There are some who think that the end of the war may be near, and that Germany is reeling. Very well then, that is the moment to redouble our exertions—(hear, hear) to gather together every scrap of energy, to hurl blow after blow, until the final knock-out is secured (Cheers). There are others who think that considerable stretches of stony roads are still to be traversed and that at least another winter campaign will be required before victory, plain and unmistakable, the only kind of victory and peace that are worth winning will be within our grasp.

Very well, then, all the more let us prepare ourselves, let us gather together our whole strength so as to meet the new difficulties, new dangers of the new year with new waves of enthusiasm and of power, and with new hurricanes of ammunition. (Cheers.)

And I should like to say to you, "Don't let us get talking too much about after the war." After the war all sorts of bright prospects will be opened. (Hear, hear.) When we have won the war there are any number of fine things which we can do, and all classes will be able to participate.

Decisive Victory Needed But anything short of decisive victory, anything in the nature of an inconclusive peace, will mar all this fair prospect, and put all these hopes of favorable solution perhaps for ever beyond our reach.

That is why I say to you, "Do not let us be drawn too much into discussion of what we are going to do after the war." After the war is over we shall be governed by the conditions established by the peace which our armies are fighting for.

No doubt it is quite right for persons who are not specially occupied in war work, and whose interests and activity turn their minds in this direction to concern themselves with after-the-war problems, and no doubt the department of Government whose duty it will be some day to organize the great process of transition from a war to

OUR SYMPATHIES

Our sympathies are with Mr and Mrs Alfred Frenette in the loss of their little daughter, Germaine-Emilienne, who died Wednesday, Oct. 11, of whooping cough, aged 2 months, funeral services were held at St. Alphonse church, Friday afternoon at three o'clock.

Patrons who had not heard of Mr Frenette's bereavement will understand the postponement of the usual Thursday edition of "Le Canadien" to Saturday Oct. 14.

a peace footing, and to demobilise the armies and the industries of the nation—of course they should be studying these problems with care. But to all of us, to the bulk of us who are gathered here today, to those of you who are preparing yourselves to cross the Channel and engage in the great adventure, to those of you who have returned—and I see many here from the front—(cheers)—to all who are engaged in aiding them and comforting them, and making the supplies which our armies require, to 999 men and women out of every 1,000 in our land the true motto is:

"Look after the war and after the war will look after itself."

Germany's Dark Outlook.

Firs of all, there is the Royal Navy, never stronger than it is today—(cheers)—never with more supreme control of the seas than it has today, for the battle of Jutland has shown that even in their waters the German fleet dare not fight a decisive engagement with our line of battle. (Hear, hear.)

Now is the moment all the more of tightening the blockade and of stopping by every possible means the launching of supplies into Germany through neutral countries. (Cheers.)

There are widespread signs throughout the German Empire that the continued battering of their front by the Allied Armies, that the heavy losses they have sustained from the beginning of the war, that the increasingly darkened and narrowing outlook for them abroad, and the increased stringency and privation at home, have produced, and are producing, sensible effects upon the German nation, and are making them begin to wonder whether, after all, war is quite such a pleasant thing, and whether, after all, it is not better to live and let live, and to respect treaties, and enjoy and cultivate your own wide country, and let your great empires or little States. (That is all the more reason for redoubling our efforts and increasing the stringency of our arrangements

Then there is the British Army itself—the new British Army—(cheers)—the Army which will forever be linked with Lord Kitchener's name, (Renewed cheers.) Night and day, week in week out, without rest or pause, the great new British Army is storming and thundering on the German lines with a courage never excelled in history, and with a devotion and sacrifice which no troops of any country have ever surpassed. (Cheers.)

Then there is the air. And there too, we have reason to be satisfied and proud. (Hear, hear.) The reports from the front are unanimous in testifying to the superiority which our airmen have obtained over the enemy on the field of battle.

"To France, and Hereos of Verdun"

Lloyd George Toast Frenchmen in the Famous Rock Heun Fortress.

Immortal Words and Heart Swelling Eloquence

The Great British Minister Won One of Greatest Triumphs of His Career

PARIS.—Mr. Lloyd George was invited by the French Government during his stay in France to visit Verdun. He accepted the invitation and was accompanied to the front by M. Thomas, the French Minister of Munitions.

General Dubois, the Military Governor at Verdun, invited Mr. Lloyd George to luncheon at the officers' mess in the subterranean casemates of the citadel. He had previously, in the general's company, visited the much battered city and observed the effects of German bombardment. The meal was eaten almost in silence, the British Minister being evidently much impressed by what he had seen within hearing of the rumbling and never-silent guns. At the close of the meal General Dubois thanked him for the honor his presence had conferred on the officers responsible for guarding Verdun.

Mr. Lloyd George replied with evident emotion to the speech of his host. One who was present says that he spoke in English and in low tone, and seemed to be pronouncing a ritual rather than a speech, to be reciting a prayer rather than making a discourse.

IMPERISHABLE RENOWN

After thanking the General for his invitation to mess, and expressing his great joy at being able to sit at table with the French officers in the very heart of the citadel of Verdun, Mr. Lloyd George said:

"The recollection of the victorious resistance of Verdun will back from the battle, those who will return to it to-morrow, and those who with you keep guard over these inviolable walls. The name of Verdun will suffice to invoke in the history of all the centuries an imperishable souvenir. None of the great feats of arms of which the history of France is full better witnesses to the highest qualities of the french army and people, and that bravery, that devotion to the country to which the world has always rendered homage are strengthened by a coolness and tenacity which have no reason to envy our British phlegm.

"The recollection of the victorious resistance of Verdun will be immortal, because Verdun has saved not only France but our great common cause and the whole of humanity. On the heights surrounding this ancient citadel the malevolent power of the enemy has broken itself like a furrows against a rock of granite. You have overcome the tempest which threatened the world.

"As for me, I feel myself profoundly moved in touching this sacred soil. I do not speak in my name alone. I bring you the sincere admiration of my country and of that great Empire which I here represent. They, with me, bow before your sacrifice and before your glory. Once again for the defence of the great cause to which our own future is attached humanity turns towards France."

Here Mr. Lloyd George paused amid solemn silence. Then, raising his head and holding high his glass with a gesture that brought every man to his feet, he exclaimed, "To France. To the heroes fallen at Verdun." The British War Minister has had many triumphs in his day, but none greater than that he won last Friday, in the rock heun vaults of the citadel of Verdun.

WILD THINGS OF THE FOREST ROAM IN SAFETY in this land of a thousand lakes

[By G. W. BARTLETT, Superintendent of Algonquin Park]

Nature lovers mourn the passing of wild life under the iron heel of industrial progress and the profound concern of these lovers of out-door life would certainly be justified if there were no national reserves within the broad Dominion.

At the time this territory was set aside for a breeding ground for game, all kinds of fur-bearing animals in this section had become almost extinct. Today they have not only filled the park, but have so overrun its boundaries that many adjacent townships are now well stocked with game.

At the Park Headquarters, at Algonquin Park Station, there is a private collection of mounted specimens of animals and birds that represent the fur-bearing animals and feathered denizens in this section, and we are always glad to have visitors call in and study them during the summer. Some living specimens will generally be found in the large house erected for the purpose at headquarters by the Government.

The accommodation in the park is such that the most varied tastes can be pleased. There are hotels for those who want to be in the wildness, yet enjoy all the comforts that good service and social companionship can bring; there are groups of log cabin camps, comfortably furnished and ideal for family parties, with central lodges containing everything ready for you on your return from the tramp; or if you have planned to camp under your own canvas you may step into a canoe at one of the little railway stations on the Grand Trunk which serves the whole of the park, and after a short paddle find a site unmarred by the hand of man yet within easy reach of the park outfitting stores.

Local News

On Tuesday October 3rd a piece of rock weighing 26 lbs from a blast in one of the mines struck one of the windows in the general waiting room of the Quebec Central Railway Station. The rock tore a way a part of the window casing entered the station tore a hole in the floor bounded up and smashed the window directly opposite rebounded and broke the arm of the benches a piece weighing 2lbs broke off when it struck the floor. This piece passed through the upper corner of the window and went clear across the street and was found almost buried in the sand near the Church Hall.

This happened about 15 minutes after noon and 10 minutes after the passenger train for Quebec had passed luckily no person happened to be around at the time as it seems to have been almost a miracle that such a thing could happen without injuring anyone.

Dr. Lynch of Sherbrooke was in town on Tuesday of this week and performed an operation for appendicitis on the person of the young son of J. D. Sharp Esq. Manager of Asbestos Corporation. The operation is reported to have successful and the patient is quite comfortable.

Dr. Wilburn was in town overnight recently the guest of his aunt Mrs. Lipsey on his way from Valcartier Camp to Lenoxville.

Dr. Lowry has already served one year on the Medical Staff in England and expect to return there soon back again.

The remains of the Cate John Belland who died in the Hospital on Sunday night as the result of injuries received four days previously on the Beaver Mines were taken by train to Marleton and thence to his home.

Mr Belland who was a son of the late Davies Belland was born and brought up in the township of Leeds New Kinnears Mills and some years ago was employed by the late M. Kinnear of Kinnears Mills to Carey on his farm, subsequently he moved to Gould Station where he was employed by M. Peter Reid from there he moved to his late home near Marleton Station.

St-Ferdinand d'Halifax

A progressive euchre-party was held at the residence of Mrs A. E. Ward on Wednesday evening, October 4th, for the purpose of raising funds for knitting socks for 117th Battalion C. E. F. There were twenty-six tables filled when the play commenced, and a spirited and most enjoyable contest ensued. An interesting musical program succeeded the card games, after which refreshments were served, and an auction of cakes and other delicacies helped to swell the financial returns.

The ladies prizes were awarded to Miss Eugénie Sirois, Mrs J. E. Carey, Miss M. Lambert, Miss Frances Pharo and Mrs Geo Carr; Men's prizes Chas Binette, Pierre Boucher, J. S. Larochelle, Bert Dinning, Kenneth Wood, S. L. Pidgeon in the order named.

The hostess deserves great credit for a most successful evening, in aid of a worthy cause, and it is to be hoped that the initiative she has shown will find emulation in the near future, which will help those who are fighting the Empire battles.

—The long needed improvement to the road leading over the Chaine flat between the iron bridge and Mr Fitz Metcalfe's farm is at last under way. The road bed is being raised from three to five feet with stone, and rounded off with gravel. It is expected that this will be sufficient to prevent the water submerging the road in the spring floods. Another beneficial improvement is being made on the Craig's road between Mr Thomas Porters and Mr Jonas Kimball. These two spots were eyesores to automobilists touring in this section and the improvement will considerably shorten the distance from St-Ferdinand to Black Lake.

—Mr J. U. Cloutier has finished his commodious garage and automobile repair shop in front of the church, and autos in trouble will find Mr Cloutiers hospital a convenience.
