

'Automatic' mutual aid fire assistance targeted for 110 city buildings

"AUTOMATIC" mutual aid fire assistance will go into force here Monday at 8 am with some 110 Westmount buildings designated as target areas for the added coverage. Most are apartment buildings, churches and institutions.

The new concept of automatic mutual aid will see firefighters from second and third municipalities dispatched "automatically" to fire calls in other cities which involve certain types of buildings, whether or not their assistance ultimately will be required. If crews are not needed, they will be turned back en route. No single- or multiple-family dwellings or commercial buildings have been included for the automatic coverage in Westmount. Seventeen of the 20 fires in Westmount requiring mutual aid over the past three years, however, involved these types of

Youth Horizons:

Detention unit closing completes final stage

By JAMES MILLS

The final stage in the closure of the Youth Horizons detention unit for juvenile girls at Weredale House was completed this month with the resignation or reassignment of the unit's 13 employees.

The unit was closed June 8 by order of the Conseil de la santé et des services sociaux de la région de Montréal métropolitain (CSSSRMM). The unit's clients, juvenile anglophone girls, were to be detained at another facility in St. Jérôme.

The employees' contract stipulated a four-month notice period before their jobs could be terminated. Notice was not served until after the unit already had been closed, ceasing to serve clients June 8. The 13 workers continued reporting to work in Weredale park regularly, collecting full salary.

For most of the four-month period, which expired Oct. 17, the workers sat idle in the unit. In mid-September, it was reopened as a temporary back-up facility

Girl, 7, nailed for shoplifting

A seven-year-old Westmount girl was caught shoplifting at the Westmount Stationery store yesterday afternoon, police said.

The girl apparently had taken an assortment of pencils, erasers and other stationery items amounting to $93.91. She was turned over to her parents.

Wine bottle no bomb

The police technical squad was called to the Atwater Métro station Wednesday morning when a suspicious looking parcel was found in a garbage container near the tunnel into Westmount Square.

The suspected bomb was wrapped tightly in a Steinberg bag with what appeared to be a note attached, police said.

Police, taking precautions to render the parcel safe, examined the contents and found ... an empty wine bottle.

The "note" turned out to be "only an envelope from the U.S.A.," police said.

Local police were first called to the scene at 11:50 am and were joined by Director Michel Groulx.

$1,500 radio taken from car

A $1,500 car radio system was stolen from a car Tuesday last week when it was parked near 4606 St. Catherine street, police said.

The vehicle, a 1981 green Audi 5000, leased by a Chomedey man, was broken into through a side window sometime between 10 am and 6 pm.

The Blaupunkt sound system included an AM-FM cassette radio, amplifier and equalizer.

Forced open

Two drawers were forced open in an office at 4060 St. Catherine street last Thursday but nothing was reported missing, police said. Damage was estimated at $200. The main door to the office had not been locked at the time.

Glasses found

A pair of "Silhouette" bifocal glasses in a case was found Saturday on Kitchener avenue between Sherbrooke street and de Maison-neuve boulevard, police report.

A 45-year-old New Brunswick man has been charged with disturbing the peace after he was arrested early Saturday morning inside the entrance to the apartment building at 235 Metcalfe avenue, police said. The incident took place at 2 am. Police said the man's faculties were impaired.

Unsuccessful

Someone made an unsuccessful attempt to get into a second-storey window in an office building at 1384 Greene avenue over the weekend, police said. The window apparently was broken in the attempt but a covering had been impossible to remove. Police said a burglar alarm failed to activate.

Students are 'important' to success of Centraide

By JAMES MILLS

Westmount's school children have an important part in the Centraide campaign, according to Sheila McCall, the local campaign chairman.

Although the children's fund-raising efforts might not represent a large part of the total, Mrs. McCall feels "it's important to educate the young about Centraide so they become community-minded."

At St. George's School, a representative of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind (CNIB) visited the school at the suggestion of two students, Lori Bergman and Beth Finkelstein, who wanted to see where their money was going.

Lorraine Bugold, who recently lost her sight, addressed 156 students from grades one to six. She introduced the children to Braille and gave them safety tips on eye protection.

One of the campaign's school committee volunteers, Valerie Miller, 54 Aberdeen avenue, reports that it was "a fascinating and very effective talk."

During question period, "everyone put up their hand for a turn to speak, even though they knew she was blind." The students' reflex action, says Mrs. Miller, "brought home to them all in a very special way how many small things sighted people take for granted."

Last year, the CNIB received $193,000 from Centraide.

Elizabeth Scanlon, librarian at St. George's School, is organizing a read-a-thon for Centraide from today until Nov. 8.

The Study has also planned a read-a-thon for Centraide. School organizers are Heather Trott and Olivia Sampson.

Dance proceeds

Provol Lala, head prefect at Selwyn House School, is organizing a Hallowe'en dance with the student council. Proceeds from the dance, which is to be held tomorrow evening, will be contributed to the campaign.

Lise Desjardins, a Centraide representative, showed a film at Centennial Academy, near Westmount. The school is holding a lottery for two donated box seats at a Canadiens' hockey game. Bill Caoussin and Stephanie Sadler are handling the lottery.

Detectors and meters on agenda

Parking meters on Greene avenue and smoke detectors in homes are two of the items which city council is being asked to consider Monday night at its regular November meeting.

The agenda for the public session, which starts at 8 pm at city hall, also includes approval of tenders for updating of the city's communications system for the fire department and public security unit.

The council also will be asked to approve a resolution to purchase materials for the joint training program to be shared by the six mutual aid fire departments, for a combined total cost of about $20,000.

Notice of motion will be made regarding the city's intent to adopt a by-law making mandatory the installation of smoke detectors in Westmount. This is another joint mutual aid project and is being adopted by the other communities involved.

Another notice

Another notice of motion will be presented for a by-law to amend By-law 685 to provide for the addition of parking meters on Greene avenue.

A commitment of funds for the light and power department in the amount of $36,500 also is expected to be made concerning a new distribution system on De Lavigne road.

Other items include formal approval of a sign at 4848 Sherbrooke street (see story last week), approval of accounts for the period ending Sept. 30 and approval of purchase of trees for the city.

Council also will consider a request to subdivide property on Sunnyside avenue.

Jones at Miss Edgar's and Miss Cramp's School have organized a book and bottle drive to be completed next week.

At the Convent of the Sacred Heart, near Westmount, Vanna Di Blasio and Stephanie Horne say they will hold their annual Centraide fund-raising events in early 1983.

Mrs. Miller is joined on the local Centraide school committee by Angela Darragh, 17 de Casson road; Jessie Riley, 33 Forde avenue, and Mrs. Heather Ballon, 4344 Westmount avenue.

38.2 percent so far

The local Centraide campaign had reached 38.2 percent of its $215,000 goal by Tuesday morning, according to Sheila McCall, Westmount campaign chairman.

The total collected as of Tuesday's tallying is $82,134.

What might appear to be a slow week in the campaign fits into the "regular pattern," says Mrs. McCall. Only a handful of the more than 400 canvassers have turned in their kits, she reports.

She urges canvassers to get out and finish their rounds and return receipts to the office in Dominion-Douglas Church as soon as possible.

Police urge Sunday choice for Hallowe'en

Police are appealing to Hallowe'en trick-or-treaters to go door to door on Sunday, Oct. 31, the customary date for ghosts and goblins.

That is the night police are providing extra protection, according to Director Michel Groulx.

"We are assigning six men from our station to pay particular attention to the Hallowe'en activities on Sunday," he explained.

Extra patrols also will be assigned by the Public Security Unit on both Saturday, mat night, and Sunday, for trick-or-treating, according to the force's director Sidney Ashford.

The evening of goblins and ghosts is traditionally October 31, and many parents in Westmount are planning to send their young ones out on Sunday night. On the other hand, some apparently feel Saturday night, October 30, is more convenient.

Whenever your children go trick or treating, optometrists are urging they wear a "be seen" costume.

Retroreflective material, available in either iron-on or sew-on fabrics and tape, is strongly suggested.

Optometrists also say that a poorly-fitted mask, which might slip out of position and block a child's view of potential danger, is a hazard. They suggest make-up is usually safer than a mask.

Homeowners are also asked to turn on all porch and yard lights.

Many children will be out canvassing for UNICEF as well on Hallowe'en. Those who did not get their boxes and wish to do so can pick them up from Yolande Massella, 5 Springfield avenue, the president of UNICEF Canada. For information, call 937-1366.

Burglaries here down 18 percent

Burglaries are down 18 percent in Westmount in the first eight months of this year compared to the same period in 1981, according to statistics released by local MUC station 23.

There were 205 break-ins here this year between Jan. 1 and Aug. 31, a decrease from 251 last year. The number is only 10 more than the same period in 1980 and is down 12 percent over 1979.

The new figures, which may come as a surprise to many residents, also show a total drop in the number of all thefts as well as an overall dip in crime.

The total of all thefts here in 1982 to Aug. 31 decreased by 9 percent from 1981, going from 518 to 470.

The figures represent only the Westmount sector of local MUC police district 23 and are not attributed to any one factor, according to police officials.

The number of thefts of vehicles and from vehicles has declined slightly to 196 in the eight-month period from 207 over the same time last year.

There was a slight increase in all thefts with violence, however, including armed robberies. There were 69 of these crimes recorded this year by Aug. 31, nine more than last year at the same time.

By LAUREEN SWEENEY

than last year at the same time. Director Michel Groulx said it was difficult to single out any one reason for the decrease in thefts, but estimates that all crime in Westmount is down about 10 percent this year.

He suggested that three separate situations might have combined to cut crime here.

There were more crime prevention programs both locally and from the MUC police headquarters.

The installation of a police computer terminal at the local station now provides instant information on suspects.

Station 23 also has made a concentrated effort to cut down on burglaries, which had increased 24 percent between August 1980 and August 1981.

The big jump in thefts from vehicles and of vehicles came between 1979 and 1980. Between January and August 1979, there were 90 such infractions.

The number rose to 146 during the same eight-month period the next year, compared to 207 in 1981 and 196 in 1982.

We Say

Action at city hall

THAT was no flash in the pan civility and good humor which pervaded city council's last public meeting, Sept. 4.

Not only did citizens with submissions to make get, for a change, the kind of reception from mayor and council which they deserve.

But last week, following the mid-month in camera meeting of council in general committee, announcements revealed that action was being taken on several fronts which have been sore issues for some time.

Mayor MacCallum revealed, among other things, that:

- ▶ Talks have opened on the YMCA-proposed establishing of a Neighborhood Watch;
- ▶ An aldermanic committee will look into the possibility of a nuclear disarmament referendum;
- ▶ Long-dormant complaints, extending back a full year to opening of the Vendôme Métro station, about inadequate bus service through Westmount may see some action through Conference of Montreal Suburban Mayors' intervention with the MUCTC.

Earlier, after five months' badgering, the city was moved to take seriously the complaints about pigeon droppings around Park Place apartments.

And it is just possible that, without announcement, something will be done during the winter closedown of the swimming pool to put right the women's showers.

Even the Montreal Urban Community now is open to attack, perhaps not frontally and by our mayor who is this city's representative to that body. But our MNA, Mr. Richard French, is doing some aggressive pressuring at Quebec for reform of the municipal tax system with, we suspect, the concurrence of the Westmount administration.

We have Mayor MacCallum's assurance that the fight is continuing behind the scenes to keep our fire ambulance as an ambulance, even if he still will not reveal how he is going about it.

The logjam is breaking.

All of which is as it should be.

Now is not the time to reproach the city fathers for the obtuse manner in which Westmount residents have been brushed off, even stonewalled, for some time when presenting complaints or suggestions.

A new leaf has been turned over. Taxpayers are being regarded at city hall in a renewed light of respect. Even city employees, who seemingly were taking their cue from the solons and getting testy with citizens in day-to-day contacts, have rediscovered courtesy and consideration.

This paean would not be complete without a direct thank-you to His Worship in behalf of EXAMINER readers for the commencement on the page opposite last week of a column, expected to appear fortnightly, Our Mayor Says . . . in the company with the long-standing regular reports from our MP and MNA. It is fitting that the first magistrate use his community newspaper, read in a majority of local homes, to communicate with those who look to him for municipal enlightenment and leadership.

Our only worry: we were becoming uncomfortably used to city council public question periods which featured confrontation, rudeness and anger on both sides. Will sweetness and light also bring out the crowds?

Watch this space next week; November's statutory open council meeting takes place next Monday evening!

Our faded leader

LAST week we chastised the opposition leaders for unseemly failure to recognize who is prime minister of Canada and his right, even duty, to address the nation via the CBC.

This week, now that the right honorable member for Mount Royal has said his uninspired, three-part piece on the obvious economic state of the nation, we say to

Mr. Clark and Mr. Broadbent: Go to it! Go get him!

The good burghers of Westmount have a fairly long-standing tradition of blindly voting Liberal.

After last week's TV and radio trilogy, from the comments at the dinner tables, on the church steps, at the cocktail parties, in the shops, in the pubs, on the job

Editor's note: THE EXAMINER is glad and hopes "the late" was far too early, and regrets any embarrassment to Mrs. Fraser, her relatives and her friends. The past tense was given erroneously to our reviewer, Miss Capréol, by the author of the book. This was not the only slip-up. The photo which we reproduced from Ms. Guernsey's volume turns out not to be of Gaby Bernier; it was not identified in the book but now is believed to be of the skater, Barbara Ann Scott.

Trudeau must resign in interest of unity

Sir: Mr. Trudeau finally has been forced to admit in his TV series that the era of free-spending "laissez-faire" government is over in Canada. The present crisis was caused in large measure by the most incredible public spending spree in history and in the street, we would say that Mr. Trudeau would have a slim chance here of getting elected dog-catcher if a vote were called tomorrow.

The nation looks for leadership. It anticipated, perhaps, inspiration and direction from the Queen's first minister when his talks were announced.

Instead, Canada got platitudes from a tired, laid-back politician, too long in office. A man no longer trusted, blamed perhaps unjustly but nonetheless blamed for much of the country's ills and divisions, preached to us about trust.

The head of a government which has blindly pursued ill-advised policies which effectively brought to a halt investments and projects for the development of our chief strength, resources, for which the rest of the world envies us, offered no hope of admission of those failures — the first requisite to putting us back on track to economic health.

The federal Liberal Party is bankrupt of ideas other than on how to stay in power. It has lost all talent in governing. Its recent cabinet shuffle was just that — a redealing of the tattered deck of portfolios among the same players. We saw no new blood brought forward to try where the old gang has failed. Mere survival has replaced statesmanship.

The tragedy is that, with the majority commanded in the Commons by this government, it is unlikely to be unseated by the parliamentary voting process unless, shallow hope, its own backbenchers revolt to preserve their own individual dignity.

This ministry does not have the honor or decency to recognize its failure and resign, going to the electorate for a mandate for whomever the people might choose to place the trust of which our faded leader spoke.

topped off with a projected deficit on the government account of $25 billion for fiscal 1982. Mr. Trudeau asked for the "trust" of Canadians to surmount a crisis which his socialist theories when put into practice had brought about.

It was ironic that he asked for the trust of English-speaking Canadians when so much of his career has been spent attacking them for their alleged unfair tactics in their dealings with French-speaking minorities, immigrants and native peoples. The latest example of this came on the day the new constitution was signed by Her Majesty, the Queen. In the case of the English-speaking community in this province, he has tried to transfer control of their language rights to the Assemblée Nationale in Quebec City, resulting in a loss of 186,291 non-francophones in the past five years (La Presse July 24, 1982).

So, clearly, if trust is to be restored, Mr. Trudeau, the author of so much of the present mistrust, has to resign. Anyone whose policies have been such an abysmal failure should have the courage to submit his resignation and follow the time-honored tradition of political figures in Canada. Mr. Trudeau's refusal to acknowledge his own responsibility, his obstinate desire to cling to power regardless of the socio-economic consequences and the complete lack of faith in his leadership outside of one province (Quebec) pose a serious threat to our ability to continue to co-exist as one nation.

The Liberal Party itself will suffer irreparable damage because it has become so closely identified with the political aspirations of only one region of the country at a time when national unity is essential to the restoration of economic stability.

A trans-border reaction to local Tory party ad

Sir: The Franklin County Industrial Development Agency has used your paper in the past to promote skiing in Franklin County, New York.

We were most disturbed to see the ad in your Sept. 23 issue on page eight.

As you state on page four of the same edition, "THE EXAMINER aims to be an independent, clean newspaper for the home, devoted to public service."

This ad does not seem to meet the standards of your paper as established by past issues. We would hope that the management of the paper would use better judgment in the future as to what type of ads are placed in your paper.

All-day parking should match nighttime

Sir: A Participation filler in THE EXAMINER: "Join the human race. We're all out running in the park."

Well, not quite all. Because of the ludicrous parking restrictions, I have to bring my car to work every day. All of five blocks, a 10-minute walk.

Couldn't something be done to have all-day as well as all-night parking?

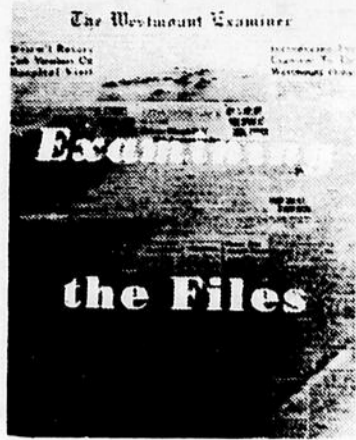

It would save gas, and make for a healthier population.

I Say!

Remembrance Day is coming up, and remembering takes many forms. One is stories, like the one about the irate city woman visiting a farm during the last war who saw a strong, healthy-looking boy of military age milking a cow. "Why aren't you at the front?" she demanded. "Because," he replied, "there ain't no milk up there."

"An assessment of $671 for additional lighting facilities throughout the city was voted the Electric Light department at a meeting of City Council on Monday. Mayor Jenkins presided over the gathering. The lighting arrangements provide for increasing the number of lamp standards at certain points throughout Westmount, including Burton, Roslyn and Argyle avenues. Progress has been rapid on the Hillside Lane project and on the parking space which is being provided there. An item of $82,449 covering payment of bills and routine expenses for September was approved. Ald. W. B. Scott, K.C. was appointed pro-mayor for the regular three-month period."

"The best use to be made of the parks and playgrounds in the City of Westmount, culminating a year of study on this important question, highlighted the first fall meeting of the executive committee of the Westmount Municipal Association, held at Victoria Hall on Tuesday evening, Denny A. Hanson presiding. Special attention was given to development of the Westmount Athletic Grounds (formerly the MAAA grounds on St. Catherine street west). A recommendation was sent in the spring to the City Council that a complete survey be made of all the city's play and athletic grounds by the National Recreation Association of New York. This has been done and a report now is expected."

The site will provide access to a fully-equipped playing field immediately behind the school. The playing field and track will remain the property of the city and continue under its management and control, the school providing the necessary dressing room facilities. Planning for the new school is being pressed with all possible speed, Mr. Nelson said."

Some 2,459 pupils are enrolled this year in the three schools (WHS and Roslyn and Westmount Park schools) under the jurisdiction of the Westmount School Board. Of these, 1,243 are at the high school, 775 at Roslyn and 441 at Westmount Park. B. S. Schaffelburg has been appointed superintendent of schools in Westmount and H. N. Hamilton, principal of WHS. Answer to Senate

JUST when I am enthusiastically pursuing regional development in my new portfolio, the Senate finance committee releases a report sharply critical of our new government structures and our regional economic development strategy framework.

If our own Senate committee doesn't understand how the new system is intended to function, how can the public be expected to?

The report underlines how important it is for me to communicate the regional dimension of government operations in all departments having economic responsibilities.

Prior to the reorganization, there was a separate ministry, the department of regional economic expansion (DREE), charged with regional development. DREE entered into general development agreements (GDA) with individual provinces and, under the umbrella of GDAs, more specific agreements on particular areas were developed.

Regional needs

Now, each department, be it agriculture, fisheries, mines, etc., has responsibility for responding to regional needs. To ensure that happens, my ministry has a senior official (some at the deputy minister level) in each province to co-ordinate the activities of all the "line" departments.

These officials, known as federal economic development co-ordinators (FEDCs) also interface directly with provincial governments to ensure close co-ordination and co-operation between the two governments.

In all, I would argue that the regional sensitivities and capacities of the federal government have been enhanced by the reorganization, not diminished as suggested by the Senate committee.

My visit to Alberta this week seems to confirm that view. It was a pilot project for the FEDC role and it seems to be working well. That opinion was shared by a business group which I met in Edmonton.

A politician's worth

WHAT is a politician worth?

On second thought, don't answer that! I mean, why should I run risks I don't have to? It's dangerous enough sitting next to David Payne when he comes to speak in Westmount. Now, there is a glutton for punishment.

But seriously, folks, they're freezing my salary and decimating my pension. Yes, Payne's, too—we have the same job description, even if we are affiliated with different unions.

Wait! Stop cheering, and listen. It's not that simple.

About the kindest thing that can be said about the pay package of an MNA is that it's original. What you see — $35,000 per annum — is not what you get. They have something up here in Quebec City called a pension but, once again, appearances are deceiving.

As things stand at the moment, the parliamentary version of a pension pays off early and often. Whatever you think of $35,000 per annum, it is but a fraction of the real remuneration an MNA receives.

Since the pension begins the day one retires (or is retired) from political life and, since it depends on the size of one's parliamentary salary, (i.e., ministers, leaders of the opposition, whips, and sundry other dignitaries make more than your humble servant) its relative generosity varies from one MNA to another.

FOR some reason columnists like to be nostalgic. It seems that being the champion bore of the world is as good as winning a Pulitzer prize.

Times being hard, The Gazette's Nick Auf der Maur will often lapse into one of those nostalgic columns that can fatigue even the most vigorous reader.

As for myself, I simply refuse to be outbored by the likes of Nick, who is always harking back to his childhood adventures in Montreal's north end.

I pondered this awhile, then remembered that I, too, had a childhood.

Like most Westmounters, I grew up believing that the municipality was a separate state within Quebec. That was before Dr. Laurin appeared on the scene and touched off a terrible row.

Having been brought up in Westmount in my teens, I can assure you that we all suffered the same grief that other waifs in various parts of the city endured. If we were different in any way, it was that we combed our hair straight back and were given to wearing grey pants and blue blazers.

The day I went around the corner to pension is too generous. One thing no one agrees on is how to change it.

The government house leader, Jean-François Bertrand, has taken his courage in his hands with a proposal that would pay a departing MNA a proportion of his salary for a year or two to ease the transition into civilian life, and would delay true pension payments until 65. Kidding aside, this makes sense to me. The proposal is extremely complex, however, and very unequal in its impact upon different MNAs. As a result, Bertrand has little support on either side of the Assembly.

Of course it's not true what they say — that Bertrand needs a bodyguard to go into his own caucus. That big fellow in the black suit who counts on his fingers is really an actuary.

Pascal's on Sherbrooke street and bought my first infielder's glove was a red-letter occasion in my young life but not quite as memorable as the time I joined the St. Leo's Air Cadet Band.

While everybody else was studying arithmetic or geography, I devised ways of skipping classes, the best method being that I would fall asleep while the teacher droned on. It got so bad that the prof kept repeating, "Wake up Snoring John."

I was forced to spend endless hours at the books before they'd allow me to join the band. For me, it was as though nothing else mattered.

Good bands, bad bands

There are good bands and bad bands. They strut their stuff in parades and on football fields all year round. But never in the history of marching music has such an unskilled band been formed that matched the St. Leo's Air Cadet ensemble.

Believe me, it takes skill, nerve and a steady hand on the bugle to be that inept. When we marched from St. Leo's to Westmount Park the whole neighborhood was watching and you could hear students from other schools snickering, "Boy, are they awful!" Most people followed us because they got an afternoon of comic relief.

The band became an extension of my personality. I thought I could never be without it or die.

There I was, a fat kid in my new uniform marching along proud as punch to some forgotten tune. There was no breaking ranks if I happened to catch a glimpse of Tim Burke and his cousin Dave McVey, whose lives at the time seemed dedicated to teasing me unmercifully.

"Hey, O'Meara," both would call out, "where'd they get a uniform to fit you?" (This always seemed strange coming from Burke who himself has always been well-rounded around the seat.)

Sometimes, if they were close enough, I'd mumble a few things out the side of my

Apostle of 'screenprint'

By JOAN CAPRÉOL

TIM Creery, one of Canada's top newsmen, predicts that probably by the late 1980s something like 10 to 15 percent of households will be receiving "screenprint" in their homes and it is very likely that during the 1990s screenprint in the home will become universal.

"It depends very much on how fast technology can produce a light, flat, portable, high-definition terminal," said Mr. Creery, in describing the revolution going on in communications owing to the combined use of computers and telecommunications.

Mr. Creery has just finished a research report for the federal department of communications. "It's on the trends and issues in communications that the planning group in the department have to deal with," he said. "It's particularly important from the point of view of Canada's industrial future to plan ahead for the best use of the new communications in this country."

"When I was putting out the magazine [Report, a public affairs magazine, now defunct] and even more so when I was director of research for the Royal Commission on Newspapers — the Kent commission — I got interested in the new communications," Mr. Creery went on. "I've been recycling myself to work in that area because more and more of the information that people need and want, they will be obtaining on their TV screen or home computers. While the age of the newspaper isn't over, it's in a period of transition to a different kind of newspaper from what we have known."

Sees thinner newspapers

"It's going to be a thinner newspaper with much less advertising because a good deal of advertising will probably go into the new screenprint medium," he believes.

"Print has become a broadcast medium and with the arrival of high-definition television in the next few years an increasing amount of the information that people now look to newspapers to provide will probably be provided on the home screen which will be flat, portable, and capable of carrying a great deal more print and graphics than it can today."

Mr. Creery said that already in Montreal La Presse has been putting out a screenprint news service in French and there are many other such services in the experimental stage around the country. "So far the main uses of screenprint in the home have been for games, educational courses and professional information in which the householder, be he a farmer, small businessman, lawyer or scientist, is particularly interested."

"I think we are still a few years away from the generalized use of screenprint services by the public but it is coming fast. Already major companies in communications and communication equipment in the United States are putting scores of millions of dollars into developing screenprint services primarily in connection with cable TV."

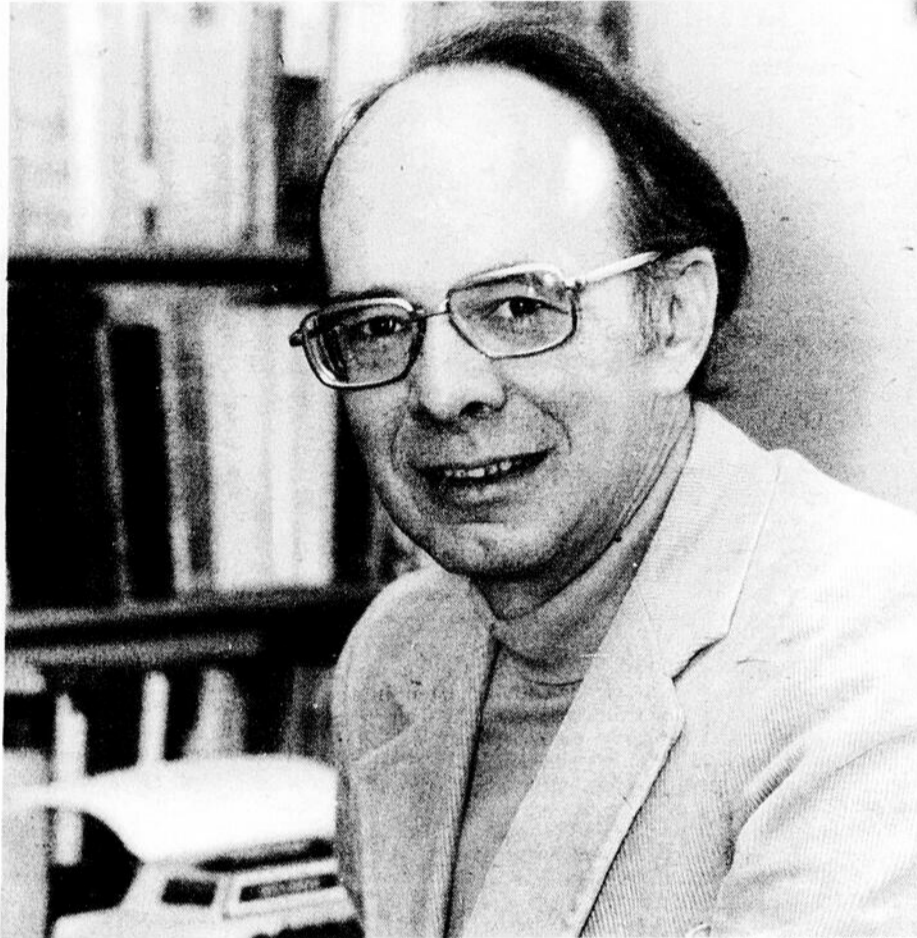

Are dailies becoming obsolete?

"I don't think so," Mr. Creery replied. "If dailies adapt themselves as they already have to radio and TV I think there is a future for them in the screenprint age but they will become a diminished segment of the mass media spectrum."

Sorry to see Star go

Mr. Creery said he was dreadfully sorry to see The Montreal Star fold, specially since he had worked on it for four years and still enjoyed reading it very much. "I'm afraid that we'll have to look to other media, including weekly newspapers, for the variety we used to enjoy by having a number of daily newspapers, although this is attenuated in Montreal by the fact that we still have three French-language dailies of very different types to read," he said.

Mr. Creery is a slim, quiet man of 53, five-foot-10, with keen, kind brown eyes. He has courtly manners and is definitely low-key, modest, not given to tooting his own horn. For 17 years Mr. Creery was with Southam News Services, four as editorial page editor for The Gazette from 1973 to 1977. From 1977 to 1980 he was editor of Report magazine and president of the Association for Report on Confederation. From 1980-82 he was director of research for the Royal Commission on Newspapers, Ottawa.

The first issue of Report came out in November 1977 and the last, September 1980. His wife, Carolyn, was associate editor. "It was a public affairs review," Mr. Creery said. "We tried to get contributors from all points of the political compass. The magazine itself was not advocating any particular line. We'd have Liberal, Conservative, NDP and Parti Québécois contributors. Most were non-political partisans. Almost all the entire editorial content was contributed without fee by the best political news journalists in the country, academics and other writers."

"It was a project in public service journalism supported by donations from businesses, labor unions, foundations and individuals."

Circulation reached 4,500

"In the three years we raised about $380,000 but never got a large enough circulation (only 4,500) to bring in the advertising revenue we would have needed to make the magazine viable."

Mark Farrell, one of the founders with John G. McConnell of Weekend Magazine, who was publisher of The Gazette when Tim was editorial page editor, was chairman of the board. "He was retired and came into the project as layout man, probably the only chairman-of-the-board layout man," Mr. Creery smiled.

The mainstay journalist contributor was Don McGillivray, the national economic editor for Southam. Members of the board who contributed were Dominique Clift, Gretta Chambers and Lise Bissonnette, now editor-in-chief of Le Devoir. Among others were Alan Fotheringham and George Bain.

Academics who contributed were Gérard Godin, MNA, a minister in René Lévesque's government; Richard Simeon, director of the Institute for Intergovernmental Relations at Queen's University, and Daniel Latouche, director of the French-Canadian studies program at McGill University and constitutional advisor to René Lévesque.

About his sojourn at The Gazette, Mr. Creery said: "Mark Farrell and I changed the editorial position of The Gazette considerably in an effort to reach out to a broader audience and to accommodate a wider range of ideas about Canadian society and the relations between the French and English in Quebec, and Quebec and the rest of the country in Canada."

Mr. Creery was born in Victoria. His father, Wallace B. Creery, 82, retired as a rear admiral from the Canadian navy and now lives in Ottawa. His mother, Monica Hutchison, like her husband, was from Vancouver. She died last year.

He has one brother, Raymond, who is twice retired and lives in Nova Scotia. He had a career in the Canadian navy from which he retired as a captain in the fleet air arm in 1969. Then he had a career as a northern administrator in the North West Territories. Three years ago he retired from that and became an apprentice boat builder. He has just graduated from a boat building course and plans to build boats in Nova Scotia.

His sister, Elisabeth, lives in Victoria. A social worker, she and her colleagues established the first transition house for women there.

Had naval stint

Mr. Creery was educated in primary schools in Victoria, Ottawa and Halifax. He then attended Rothesay Collegiate School in Rothesay, N.B. He graduated from the Royal Canadian Naval College, Royal Roads, near Victoria, in 1947. He served in the naval reserve for five years, leaving as a lieutenant. In 1949 he was a navigator with the marine biological research group, Ungava Bay. Other education included four months at Université de Grenoble and six weeks at Université Laval, studying French. In 1950 he graduated with a BA from McGill University.

His first job from 1950 to 1951 was agricultural reporter with the Evening Reporter, Galt, Ont.

From 1951 to 1952 he was on the police and provincial legislature beats for the Winnipeg Free Press.

In 1952, Mr. Creery was a city hall reporter for The Lethbridge Herald where he met Carolyn Willett, from Nova Scotia, who had just graduated with a bachelor of journalism degree from Carleton University. They went their separate ways until 1958 when they married and became the first married couple to work in the parliamentary press gallery in Ottawa.

From 1953 to 1954, Mr. Creery covered the courts and provincial legislature for The Telegram, Toronto. The summer of 1954 he worked as a deskman for Reuters news agency in London, England.

Then he tried copywriting for a London advertising agency from 1954 to 1955. He went to France to study French for four months.

He came back to Canada in 1956 to work as a reporter for the Ottawa bureau of The Montreal Star for four years. His main assignment was the House of Commons debates, also general political and government coverage, election campaigns, special assignments such as Khrushchev's visit to the United States in 1959. He did extensive radio and TV work in the later years of this period.

To Washington

From 1960 to 1963 Mr. Creery was Washington correspondent for Southam News Services. He covered the election of President Kennedy and most of the Kennedy period. He travelled widely in the United States, with special attention to the civil rights movement.

From 1963 to 1964 he was a reporter in the Ottawa bureau for Southam. He reported on politics and government, with special responsibility for covering French-speaking participation.

From 1964 to 1965 he was a Nieman fellow at Harvard University and concentrated on courses in economics.

From 1965 to 1967 Mr. Creery was Quebec correspondent for Southam, opening the news service's first Quebec bureau. Major areas of coverage included developments in the Quiet Revolution, relations between Quebec and Ottawa and other provinces, transfer of power from Lesage to Johnson and the growth of separatist movements.

Mr. Creery was outside Montreal city hall when de Gaulle shouted, "Vive le Québec libre!" "I thought de Gaulle did a tremendous service to France and a tremendous disservice to Canada," Mr. Creery said. "I think the Fifth Republic which he founded has proved to be a durable constitutional arrangement for France under which that country has made great progress and has gone through the acid test of a change in government from the Gaullist coalition to the socialist coalition."

From 1967 to 1968 Mr. Creery was back in the Ottawa bureau of Southam, reporting on politics and government and preparing to set up the Paris bureau. From 1968 to 1973 Mr. Creery was European correspondent, Paris, for Southam, opening their first continental European bureau. This involved extensive travel.

French-Canadian factor

"Most important in my newspaper career was waking up to the fact in the early 1950s that if one wanted to be a political journalist in Canada one had to open one's mind, one's eyes, and one's heart, indeed, to French-speaking Canada and, ever since that time, that I suppose has been the main journalistic theme I have written about," said Mr. Creery. "My other main theme has been the idea of democratizing our working life as well as our political life. I think the confrontation of management and labor is tremendously destructive and for the good of both needs to be replaced by the joint participation of both in the management of our economic enterprises."

Mr. Creery said he would love to realize his ambition of putting out a public affairs review but "I can't see after our experience with Report any way of being financially able to do so."

The Creerys have two daughters, both of whom graduated from Westmount High School. Monica, 21, who graduated last June with a BA from Queen's University, is now travelling in Europe.

Janet, 19, is studying fine arts at Concordia University.

"Our home on Elm avenue is our hobby," said Tim Creery.

Opening of day care here moves closer

The planned opening of a day-care centre in Westmount Park School in January moved a step closer this week, according to the centre's organizer, Barbara Kaiser.

Negotiations with the Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal (PSBGM) went much better than planned, says Ms. Kaiser.

By combining an afternoon day-care program for PSBGM kindergarten children with all-day care for younger children, Ms. Kaiser hopes to take advantage of government subsidies.

As an extension of PSBGM services, the day-care centre could qualify for a $1,500 renovation grant from the Quebec ministry of education, as well as a $20-per-month operating grant for each child in the after-kindergarten program. The grants would be administered by the school board.

In discussion with Mr. Duclos of the PSBGM, Ms. Kaiser found the board would be willing to bus children free-of-charge from Roslyn School and the FACE school on University street to the centre after morning kindergarten programs were finished.

Parents could leave their children at kindergarten in the morning and pick them up from the day-care centre in the evening.

Could be reduced

Under the PSBGM, the centre would have access to more of the board's facilities and services. Rental charges for the two rooms she intends to occupy also could be reduced.

To satisfy the school board's requirements, Ms. Kaiser must register a minimum of 10 children in the after-kindergarten program. The rest of the 30 spaces proposed for the centre would be filled by two-and-a-half- to five-year-olds.

Ms. Kaiser has "the full support and co-operation" of the principals of the three schools and a growing list of clients, but still requires a government permit.

She expects a visit by inspectors from the ministry of social affairs within the next two weeks to approve her permit application. "I don't anticipate any problems," she says.

Ms. Kaiser invites prospective users of day-care to call her at 933-4434.

Blood clinic set for plaza

The Montreal Masonic Fraternity is holding its blood clinic on Monday, from 9 am to 8:30 pm, at the Alexis Nihon Plaza, Metro level. Each donor will have his parking validated for three hours' free parking from 9 am to 8:30 pm.

Refreshments will be served including smoked meat, sandwiches and doughnuts.

Dear Readers of the Examiner,

It was a little under three years ago that Liberal members of Parliament, with the help of the New Democratic Party overthrew the fledgling government headed by Joe Clark during a period when economic problems were severe and the Progressive Conservative administration was taking temporarily unpopular measures to deal with them. "Short-term pain for long-term gain" in the words of the then-finance minister, John Crosby.

During debate in the House of Commons, and then in the election campaign that followed it, the federal Liberal Party, under the leadership of Pierre Elliott Trudeau told the Canadian people that measures such as the 18-cent-per-gallon gasoline tax were entirely unnecessary, and that the current economic difficulties were the fault of the policies of the Clark government. "Just put us back into power", the Liberals were saying, and if the problems didn't solve themselves, the Trudeau team would swiftly find the solutions for them.

According to the manifesto published by Donald Johnston, the MP for St. Henri Westmount at the time, the issue facing the electorate was whether or not it would choose "the Liberal team's ability to cope with the very difficult economic circumstances facing Canada today by offering sensitive and sensible government, by continuing policies of social priority tempered by fiscal responsibility." (italics Mr. Johnston's.)

With the help of such promises of sensitivity and intelligent government, the Liberals under Mr. Trudeau, and including Mr. Johnston, were returned to power. Along with other Canadians, the people of St. Henri Westmount have seen and lived through the results of that "sensitive and sensible government" ever since.

We, together with other Canadians, have seen the rate of unemployment rise steadily until it has reached the highest level since the Great Depression of the 1930s. We have seen jobs literally disappear as the climate for business has turned more sour than it has been at any time during the last forty years. The number of business bankruptcies has soared, with 1981 showing the largest number on record in Canada, and 1982 threatening to go even higher.

We have seen the Gross National Product in general and the level of industrial production in particular fall to a greater extent than has happened in the case of any of our major economic partners including Japan, Britain, Germany, the United States, Italy and France.

Even in this downward spiral of economic activity, we have seen the rate of inflation climb until, in 1981, it was (among) the highest in our history, and almost three times higher than in 1968, when Mr. Trudeau won his first national election as Prime Minister. It was three years later that Mr. Trudeau said that he had "wrestled inflation to the ground."

In 1980, one of the thrusts of the Liberal campaign was that a firm and sure hand — theirs — was necessary to deal with the public debt and control governmental deficits. So far this year, the Trudeau Government has upwardly revised its own estimates of the federal deficit from 12 to almost 20 billion dollars, and there are indications that another upward revision is yet to come. It is not only the highest deficit in our history, it is also an unprecedented example of total lack of knowledge on the part of a government about its own financial situation.

"Sensitive and sensible government" may or may not have been what the Liberals of 1980 had in mind, in addition to their undoubted goal of regaining power. What is certain, is that after three years back in power, they have not come close to achieving sensible government. Poll after poll shows that the present government has massively lost the confidence of the Canadian people, with only Quebec providing a temporary, and diminishing, source of comfort to the federal Liberals.

It is now clear that things are stirring here in Quebec too, as more and more people are realizing the spectacular extent of the failure of the "Trudeau team" to fulfil any of their promises or achieve any of their stated goals.

Nobody yet knows when the next federal election may come, but whenever it does, Quebecers in general, and the people of St. Henri-Westmount in particular, deserve to know well before election time that an alternative government and economic program are available. That is why we of the St. Henri-Westmount Progressive Conservative Association have decided to communicate on a regular basis with our friends and neighbors in this riding.

This is the first in a series of columns that will be appearing from time to time in the Examiner, in which we shall be explaining our position as Progressive Conservatives on the issues that we are all facing. The federal Liberal party deserves to be attacked, and we intend to attack it. But we shall also put forward the positive thoughts and the policies of our party and its leader, the Right Honourable Joe Clark. The Liberals may be on the ropes, but that puts all the more responsibility on us as Progressive Conservatives to present our own ideas and our own policies. We shall do this as well as we can.

Sincerely,
Bernard J. Finestone

Code system used to rate various buildings

Westmount buildings now are rated by a code system under the new "automatic" mutual aid system.

This means that anywhere from five to about 20 firefighters could be dispatched with the first fire call, though local crews would be expected to arrive first, followed by Hampstead and then Mount Royal.

If additional men are needed, they would be requested, as usual by Westmount fire officials at the scene. If mutual aid was not deemed necessary, those extra crews would be turned back.

The list involving automatic response from a second or third city consists of 110 Westmount buildings. There are 87 apartments, 13 houses of worship and seven institutions.

The city's more than 3,500 single and multiple family dwellings are Code 1.

Initial alarm

This means that they would bring out one fire station on the initial alarm, generally the West-mount Fire Brigade. Office and commercial buildings as well as most schools are also rated Code 1.

Almost all of Westmount's apartment buildings have been designated as Code 2, or an automatic two-alarm. These account for the greater part of the city's 110 chosen "target areas."

Most churches are Code 3, rating an initial response from three cities. So are some of the larger apartment buildings such as 4300 de Maisonneuve boulevard.

The Westmount YMCA also is a three-city response building as are the only three schools on the list: St. Léon, Institut Marguerite Bourgeoys and the Villa Ste. Marcelline.

Buildings were evaluated according to certain criteria which took into account the hazard potential, type of occupancy and fire safety devices or construction.

The Reddy Memorial Hospital, for example, is considered only a Code 1 because it maintains its own fire personnel.

The Montreal Children's

Hospital annex at 1040 Atwater avenue is a two-alarm address, however.

Manoir Westmount, the senior citizens' residence, is also excluded, although such residences and hospitals in Côte St. Luc are designated for outside mutual aid help.

Well-versed

Schools, which are vacant at night when major fires are more likely to take hold, by day are usually well-versed in evacuation by regular fire drill.

Both apartment complexes of Westmount Square, Nos. 2 and 3, are scheduled for Code 2 automatic mutual aid. The office building at No. 1 remains a one-alarm building, however.

So does Westmount's tallest highrise, the Plaza Towers, 4000 de Maisonneuve boulevard, whose sensitive fire alarm system brings a rash of calls to Westmount firemen. The alarm is usually activated by burnt food in apartments located in one vertical section of the 33-storey building.

Seven institutions appear on the list requiring automatic mutual aid including the Salvation Army hostel on Dorchester boulevard.

The only churches exempted are Westmount's newest ones: the First Church of Christ Scientist, the Church of the Redeemer and St. Andrew's United Church, the latter rebuilt in 1967 after the original building was gutted in a spectacular fire.

Nine apartment buildings rate Code 3 assistance. They are: the east and west wings of 4300 de Maisonneuve, 201 Metcalfe, 250 Clarke, 4800 de Maisonneuve and the 10-storey 200 Kensington, 418 Claremont, 4360 Côte des Neiges and 5010 Sherbrooke.

The new building containing condominiums at 4855 de Maisonneuve boulevard is a Code 2, as is the 18-storey apartment building at 4998 de Maisonneuve.

University of Florida where he studied on a full fellowship and subsequently served on the faculty.

Prior to his studies in Florida, Dr. Paré was a Jesuit priest for 22 years and was actively involved in the priesthood for ten years. The new chairman has also worked on the faculty of Dalhousie University where he established a counselling program.

Looking forward to the immediate challenge of planning for the newly acquired Mother House site as Dawson's permanent home, Dr. Paré sees the need for a strong and united board. "I hope to help develop an actively involved board of governors which works as a real team," he explains.

Dr. Paré's commitment to the Montreal community is typical of his family, many of whom are equally dedicated. His sister, Alphonsine Howlett, has been named a Great Montrealer, and his brothers, Peter and Paul, are head physician of the Montreal Chest Hospital and chairman of Imasco Ltd., respectively.

Married to Nancy, a counsellor and researcher, Dr. Paré and his wife have two children. They live in Notre Dame de Grâce.

Dr. Paré is replacing Henri Laurier, who has been chairman for the past three years and a member of the Dawson board for seven.

structures.

These will remain under the existing system whereby fire officers call for mutual aid help on the fire scene after assessing its need.

"Automatic mutual aid is an effort to increase the number of men and apparatus in the first response," says Director John LeGros, Mount Royal's fire chief, who has headed up the committee.

It will start out on a trial basis only, he told THE EXAMINER, noting that changes may have to be made once the plan is put into practice.

The idea originally was announced last year in a joint communiqué by the general managers of the six mutual aid municipalities of Westmount, Mount Royal, Côte St. Luc, Hampstead, Outremont and St. Laurent. (See story Dec. 17, 1981.)

The automatic aid is one of the recommendations of the Scottsdale fire report prepared by Arizona consultants.

Although Westmount is relatively isolated in the mutual aid system, the new procedure is seen as a particular benefit to those communities whose borders might be closer to the fire stations of neighboring mutual aid cities than to their own.

Under the new system, Westmount firefighters automatically will go to some 37 target areas in Hampstead and about 160 in Côte St. Luc, sources said. Lists are considered flexible, however.

In return, Westmount will receive automatic help from Hampstead and Mount Royal, the two fire departments bearing the brunt of the responding.

Côte St. Luc would not be dispatched on an automatic basis, while St. Laurent and Outremont would share only calls to Mount Royal.

It is understood that they would, however, provide back-up.

Fire officials said the plan had been worked out in such a way as not to deplete the emergency forces of the six cities.

The lists of buildings covered by automatic mutual aid have been prepared by officials in each municipality.

The Westmount Examiner, Thursday, October 28, 1982 - 9

Buildings were studied for their potential hazard and assessed according to construction, fire protection systems and types of occupancy and rated according to a code system. (See separate story.)

Single family dwellings generally are exempted throughout all communities, though town houses with common garages are included in Côte St. Luc.

All fire apparatus will start out on an emergency basis with lights flashing and sirens going, apparently at the request of municipal officials.

It is understood that fire oficials originally wanted their crews simply to proceed at normal speed.

If mutual aid help is not needed, the responding crews will be recalled by radio en route or after arrival on the scene.

Replacement firemen will not be called back to emptied fire stations until their city's pumper is actually committed.

The six municipalities have been divided into two sectors. Westmount, Hampstead and Côte St. Luc form the south. Mount Royal, St. Laurent and Outremont comprise the north.

In theory only Hampstead and Mount Royal firefighters will go automatically out of their sectors.

Urdu, Arabic and 25 other tongues noted here

Statistics Canada has identified more than 25 different linguistic groups in Westmount using the results of the federal census taken in June 1981.

Tabulations of the census results reveal 2,405 Westmounters spoke neither English nor French as a first language, a number representing slightly less than 12 percent of Westmount's total 20,480 population.

Of 30 different languages identified in the tabulations, totals are shown for Westmount in 26 of the categories. Native Indian, Inuktituk, other Indian languages and Icelandic are the four categories not represented here.

After anglophones and francophones, German speakers made up the largest linguistic group in Westmount, numbering of 420.

Italian is next, with a total of 240 speakers.

Next largest

Hungarian, Polish, Yiddish, Spanish and Greek, respectively, show the next largest totals. Each was spoken by between 100 and 200 Westmounters at the time of the census.

In descending order, Czech/Slovak, Chinese, Dutch, Arabic, Russian, Ukrainian, Portuguese, Yugoslavian, Danish, Finnish, Hindi/Urdu, Japanese, Vietnamese, Filipino, Croatian/Serbian, Norwegian and Punjabi are shown with totals less than 100.

The figures also show 305 Westmounters spoke "other" languages not named in the census.

As reported in THE EXAMINER this summer, anglophones and francophones represent 70.7 and 17.5 percent of the population respectively.

mouth.

Like: "I'll get youse guys tomorrow."

When the next day rolled around I could be found chasing the two of them up Grosvenor avenue, threatening them with mayhem. The rascals would dodge in-an'-out of bushes roaring with laughter.

Like other humans

Being more or less like other human beings, I can't even remember the reason for disbanding the band. A marching band that sounded like a bunch of guys blowing on bazookas and beating on tin drums was simply bound to have a short life span.

Westmount had its own charm in those days and nice people. Not like the nouveau riche high-hats of the municipality today who are always on hand to beef about their taxes, but nowhere to be found when it comes to protesting against Bill 101.

The reason that I'm indulging in this bit of nostalgia this week is that I somehow got to thinking about a happy time and how it's becoming harder and harder to retain any popularity that I may have had, mainly because I'm constantly criticizing the English community (and deservedly so) for relinquishing their rights as Canadian citizens with nary a struggle. I can't even get an invitation to Bill McLeod's annual garden bean-roast in Montreal West, which gives you some kind of idea just how low my social standing has dwindled. And, recently, I dropped into Ma Heller's for a chat with Don Tynning and Bucky Knott, only to end up babbling to myself because the boys seemed more interested in staring at the ceiling.

I've shared with you today the kind of story that I never tire of telling my brother and sister-in-law when I'm with them although they sure as hell seem to doze off before I'm finished.

As I said before, I'll be damned if I'll allow Nick Auf der Maur to outbore me.

Encore Theatre is the name of the organization which sprang up after the demise of the Saidye Bronfman Centre Theatre last spring. It is an autonomous group which will be using the SBC theatre facilities beginning tonight, 8:00 pm, when they present the Shaw Festival production of The Desert Song. Encore will be presenting proven theatrical shows. The board of directors of the theatre feels there is a need and a market for first class professional entertainment and has received encouragement from the Quebec ministry of cultural affairs and the Canada Council. Desert Song first played on Broadway in 1926 with a cast of more than 100 persons, two live camels and a full orchestra. The Encore production has only 10 actors, two pianos and no live dromedaries or bactrian camels. Beth Ann Cole and Terry Harford star in this story of love and intrigue in the North African desert of the 1920s. Shows are Saturday to Thursday, 8:00 pm, with a matinee Sunday, 1:00. The Potato People are coming to Montreal Sunday to entertain children of all ages and discerning adults. They will be performing at 1:00 pm at the Tritorium, 255 Ontario street east, in the first of a series of four shows for children by different groups. The Potato People is the creation of a group called Theatre Beyond Words and they use masks, mime and music. The masks used in The Potato People were inspired by those worn in the winter carnival "Fastnacht" in Basel, Switzerland. The characters in this production include Bud the Dog, Mama, Papa and Nancy Potato, Bartlett Pearl Blossom III and Iodine Pearl Blossom and they are amusing just to look at. These mostly featureless masks depend on light and shadow for their expressions. The Potato People will take up the second half of the show while the group will perform seven sketches in the first part. Tickets are available at Bettina children's book store and Bead Emporium.

Oral school for deaf launching its campaign to raise $250,000

By JOAN CAPRÉOL

The Montreal Oral School for the Deaf (MOSD) launches its $250,000 two-week campaign for funds on Nov. 1.

Working on the campaign which stresses MOSD needs for continued public support to replace critically diminishing government funds are chairman Basil R. Cuddihy, personnel manager for Alcan world headquarters, Westmount lawyer William Fraiberg and Dr. Agnes Phillips, former professor at McGill and Dalhousie universities who was appointed MOSD principal last January.

Mr. Cuddihy is the father of a hearing-impaired 13-year-old boy who, like many other MOSD-associated children, attends conventional high school thanks partly to MOSD support services.

Mr. Fraiberg, whose two young children are not hearing-impaired, has been legal counsellor to MOSD since 1968. He feels the oral school has a unique program for teaching the deaf.

"Our objective is to allow hearing-impaired children to occupy a place in a hearing world to the limits of their capacity and this is done by capitalizing on the residual hearing ability which almost all deaf children have," says Mr. Fraiberg, a partner in the law firm of Mendelsohn Rosentzweig Shacter.

"The school considers that it has been successful when its children leave it to take their places in regular classrooms. A good part of the school's activity is involved in following up on these 'integrated' children on a regular basis and offering teaching of spoken language and special tutoring," he says.

Self-sufficient

"The thing I like most about my involvement is that the school is small and self-sufficient. It's staffed by dedicated professionals and assisted by enthusiastic parents. You can see results of what you do in a concrete way which you often can't with larger, more impersonal organizations."

Dr. Phillips says that early detection, diagnosis and management are crucial for hearing-impaired children. "Public support ensures that we can provide the services of a psychiatrist and social worker in the essential task of helping families cope with the complex problems a deaf child faces," she points out.

Dr. Phillips says that government cannot always supply the special help needed by children such as the MOSD's 170 students whose ages range from three to 18. "These students can learn to speak clearly and intelligibly enough, but it requires high quality education," she says.

Dr. Phillips and Messrs. Cuddihy and Fraiberg believe that dollars spent on such children now will pay returns several times through integrated, productive adults living full lives and contributing, in turn, to society.

MOSD statistics indicate that more than 65 percent of the school's children are partially or fully integrated into academic studies.

MOSD was founded in 1950 by five families who wanted their children to be part of an oral program and to be integrated socially as early as possible.

It was one of the first schools in North America to offer education to deaf children before the regular school age of five years. It was the first school for the deaf to be housed in a regular school and first to establish an integration program in 1965.

Nursery program

There is a nursery program at Iona School which includes 20

Dr. Agnes Phillips and William Fraiberg hearing and hearing-impaired children. There are also two kindergarten programs at John XXIII School and Wilder Penfield School. There are units at Westmount Park School, Pierrefonds Comprehensive, and Marymount and Outremont high schools as well as four self-contained classrooms at John XXIII School.

"The Montreal Oral School's integration program has been functioning successfully since its inception in 1965 at which time only half a dozen children were in the program," says Dr. Phillips. "Now we have more than 100 children who are fully integrated in their home schools. This allows them to be full members of their local community schools."

Mr. Fraiberg adds: "The school has no building to acquire or maintain. Its strength lies in the talent and diligence of its 38 teachers and support staff. The school has always adopted an improvisational and practical approach to the teaching of deaf children rather than isolate even the non-integrated children in a separate, expensive building. These children are placed in separate classes within existing schools of the public system.

"The school prefers to spend its funds on hiring the best talent available, purchasing the most up-to-date equipment and organizing imaginative and stimulating programs for its children."

Dr. Phillips says that the MOSD is involved in the training of McGill students, many of whom become members of the staff following graduation. "We are working hard to develop a parent program this year," she says.

Dr. Phillips co-authored the book Aural Habilitation which was published in 1978.

William Fraiberg, 41, graduated from Westmount High School and entered McGill University Faculty of Arts.

Contribution to the MOSD campaign may be sent to: The Montreal Oral School for the Deaf Inc., P.O. Box 68, Snowdon, Montreal, Quebec H3X 3T3. For information contact Bess Olfman, 739-8166 or 739-0189.

Lunden of Rosemount avenue, has worked steadily through the year making a variety of aprons, sunsuits, mop covers, cushion covers and knitting bags for the bazaar.

First opened in 1882, St. Margaret's offers elderly women a protected environment with varying amounts of nursing care.

Purse snatched from her

A purse was snatched from a 79-year-old woman Wednesday last week moments after she had stepped out of a taxi and was entering the apartment building at 250 Kensington avenue, police said.

The incident took place at 11:15 pm. Total amount of the theft was $190.

The victim told police she had left the taxi and was at the door of the building when someone came up from behind her and grabbed her handbag.

The black purse was valued at $50 and contained a red wallet with $20 as well as personal papers and credit cards.

It also held a 10-karat gold medal in the shape of a star engraved with the victim's name. It was believed to be worth about $100.

$631 collected

Police report they collected $631 in unpaid traffic warrants from a 29-year-old photographer picked up last Thursday in front of 4036 St. Catherine street. The tickets all had been issued in Montreal.

Funeral services held for student hit by vehicle

Funeral services were held Friday for a 19-year-old student of Westmount's Dawson College who died in hospital Tuesday last week after being hit by a car.

Anne-Marie Howlett, who lived in St. Lambert, died in the Montreal Children's Hospital, a few hours after she was hit at 8:11 am while crossing St. James street at Place St. Henri near the Metro station.

Police said the death was accidental.

The car, a brown Honda, was driven by a Châteauguay man, also believed to be a Dawson student.

Police said the girl was crossing from south to north in the middle of the block about 55 feet east of the pedestrian crossing zone when she was hit by the car travelling east with the one-way traffic.

Witnesses, they said, reported that the victim had crossed between the cars.

She was taken to hospital in police ambulance 23-15, suffering multiple injuries.

Donations are being made to the Dawson College School of Nursing in memory of the second-year nursing student.

Adventures in cooking

Retired Westmount businessman and teacher RICHIE PRAGER recounts some of the experiences into which he has been led by his accomplished hobby, gourmet cooking. His stories and recipes are illustrated by his prominent artist wife, EVA PRAGER:

WE spent several spring holidays in Greece, particularly on the lovely island of Mykonos. Madame Sofia managed friendly and efficiently the beautiful hotel, where she always gave us the same room overlooking the harbor with its many-colored ships.

Madame also was very artistic, and her guestbook contained entries by many famous artists, and my wife was also asked to contribute a drawing of a Greek landscape.

My special connection with Madame Sofia came via my interest in cooking, and she allowed me occasionally to spend some time with her excellent chef. However, he did not like to part with his recipes, but watching him I made some mental notes. Madame Sofia helped by giving me, when we left for home, a big glass of their special herb mixture, and soon after some Greek dishes appeared on my dinner menus.

The greatest success with our guests was a spinach and cheese soufflé rolled in phyllo leaves (available in international foodstores). The Greeks call it Spanakopita, and here is my version of it.

USC CARDS

For 18 years, Mrs. Prager has designed the annual Christmas gift cards of the Unitarian Service Committee. This year the card is carrying the picture of Dr. Lotta Hirschmanova, who has now eased up after 37 years with the agency and has been named founding director. It is intended that Mrs. Prager resume the designs in 1983. The USC sends a card to someone of the donor's choice for each $2 minimum donation for the aid of children worldwide. USC Canada's address is 56 Sparks Street, Ottawa, K1P 5B1.

spinach until just done. Drain and let stand in colander to eliminate as much liquid as possible.

Slice 2 large onions and 2 bunches of scallions, including the green tops and sauté them in ½ stick of butter. When onions and scallions are golden, add about ½ cup each of minced fresh dill, minced parsley and the drained spinach and sauté slowly for about 10-15 minutes. Let it cool a little and put it into a food processor with the steel blade or a blender. When smooth add to the mixture in the machine ½ lb. crumbled feta cheese and ½ cup grated parmesan and process again until everything is well mixed.

In a large bowl beat 4 whole eggs until they are frothy, pour the processed spinach mixture onto them and mix well.

The phyllo leaves have to be treated very carefully and quickly. While preparing each roll keep the remaining leaves covered with a slightly damp cloth to prevent drying and breaking.

Spread 1 phyllo leaf on a flat surface and brush it quickly with melted butter. Put another leaf on top of the buttered one and brush its surface with melted butter. Repeat this until you have 5 leaves neatly on top of one another.

Spread about a third of the spinach mixture along one of the long sides of the prepared leaves about 3 inches away from the edge. Fold the 3 inch edge and the sides over the spinach and roll it up. Brush butter all over the roll and put it on a buttered baking sheet, seam side down. Repeat this with more rolls until the spinach is used up. You can make smaller rolls by spreading the spinach mixture along the smaller side of the leaves.

Bake the rolls in a preheated oven at 350F for about 50 minutes or until the pastry is nicely brown and crisp. On serving, each roll can be cut in 2-3 inch slices.

HORIZONS...

for other sections of the Youth Horizons network.

Accepted clients

Over a period of 28 days, the unit accepted 10 clients from other divisions who required emergency placements of up to three days each.

Howard Martin, Youth Horizons' executive director, wanted to "provide something that the system needed that the people (working) in detention could do."

The arrangement was negotiated with the employees' union, CUPE local 1511. Earlier proposals to occupy the workers productively had been opposed by either the union or management.

Anticipating the end of the notice period, the union's displacement procedure began at the end of September.

One of the 13 workers, the only one not having worked the two years necessary for job security, was laid off. Another resigned voluntarily and collected a cash payment equal to six months' salary.

Eight workers were referred to the Service de placement des affaires sociales to be reassigned elsewhere. More than 1,000 other workers in Quebec's social services sector are awaiting jobs through the service.

Until permanent placements are made, the eight will serve on a replacement team for Youth Horizons, reporting to work regularly and collecting full salary.

Three workers were able to "bump" into the reflection unit of Youth Horizons because of their seniority. By bumping, three other workers were displaced, of whom one resigned, one was assigned to the replacement team, and one again displaced a secretary.

The displaced secretary also will be referred to the Service de placement.

Phil Huint, president of the CUPE local, says the union met Oct. 1 with the deputy minister of social affairs, who agreed to act on the situation.

Mr. Huint is "at a bit of a loss as to what is going to happen next," since the ministry has not communicated with the union since the meeting.

He claims the transfer of the detention unit to St. Jérôme results in increased costs for transportation and rent. Ideally, Mr. Huint says, the detention unit for juvenile girls would be relocated at Weredale House.

Smokers start two fires here

Firefighters were called out during the past week to extinguish two fires started by smokers' materials, one in a mattress and one in a cushion.

The first call came at 5:48 am last Thursday after a mattress had caught fire in a private home at 330 Wood avenue.

MUC police already were on the scene when firemen arrived. The mattress had been removed from the house but was still burning, fire officials said. There was no damage to the house, but damage to contents was estimated at $100.

They were also called on to put out a fire in a cushion Monday at 1:55 pm at Youth Horizons, 6 Weredale Park, (formerly Weredale House) which fire officials said started accidentally, again from smokers' materials. Damage amounted to $50.

Pond ready for wet run

The watercourse in Westmount Park should be ready for a wet run "by the middle of next week," according to city officials.

Reconstruction work fell behind schedule earlier in the fall because of bad weather, but considerable progress has been made during the recent spell of fair weather.

Most of a membranous lining has been sprayed into place and masons are in the process of finishing the brickwork at the watercourse edge.

Both operations should be finished by the end of this week, in time for next week's proposed test.

Hallowe'en celebrated with dance

By REBECCA ELBOURNE

Hallowe'en is being celebrated on Friday at Westmount High. Everyone is expected to come to school in costumes that will be judged for effectiveness and originality.

In the evening, there will be the annual Hallowe'en masquerade dance. This gala event is being organized by Janice Edwards, head of the social committee, a sub-committee of the student's council. The dance, which is the first major social event of the term, is open to all students of any grade and their guests. It should be a big success.

Grad committee raising funds

The grad committee is busy organizing the grade elevens to sell Christmas wrapping paper to raise funds for graduation night celebrations in May. A packet of ten large sheets in five different designs sells for $4, which is comparable to shop prices. Remember, it is not too soon to be worrying about wrapping presents: the post office recommends overseas parcels be sent off by November.

WHS students are being urged to donate unwanted shoes or boots to a collection being taken up for the children of Poland. Large bins for contributions will be found in front of Christ Church Cathedral and Mary Queen of the World Cathedral tomorrow and Saturday. This project was launched in response to an urgent appeal from the Church of Poland and so far it has been met with enthusiasm.

Students do well in running meet

Westmount High did extremely well at the cross-country running city championship meet at Mount Royal Park last Tuesday. Both Jennifer Williams and Andy Matthews won gold medals in their respective categories and Kirk O'Dea won a bronze. These three — plus two other WHS students, Dominique Montreuil, fifth juvenile girl, and Rebecca Elbourne, fourth midget girl — will be among those representing the Greater Montreal Athletic Association at the provincial championship in Forestville on October 29 and 30.

The girls' volleyball team is also enjoying a successful season. They are in first place in their division with a record of nine wins and three losses.

White paper gets no support here

The platform lineup at WHS auditorium

Camille Laurin's white paper on school board reorganization found no support among the 200 persons attending a panel discussion and information meeting on the paper last Wednesday at Westmount High School. Even David Payne, Parti Québécois MNA and nominal spokesman for the English within the party, admitted that he represented a divergent opinion among the Péquistes on parts of the proposal.

The tone of the evening was set by several panel members who criticized the proposed legislation. Joan Rothman, Westmount's commissioner on the Protestant School Board of Greater Montreal, objected to the fact that only about 30 percent of the population would be enfranchised for selecting members of the new regional school boards. At present, all citizens of voting age may vote for school commissioners.

Mrs. Rothman also claimed that the plan would cost more to implement than the present system and criticized the government for not providing specifics of cost. She said that the government is asking the citizens to trust it after spending excessive amounts of money on Sidbec and losing large quantities of wine through improper storage.

Ken Watkins, external chairman of the Roslyn School committee, chairman of the Central Parents' Committee and a member of the panel, told the audience that their children's education would be badly marred by the plan and called it "a disaster of immense proportions."

See changes

Mr. Watkins was quick to point out, however, that he was not a total supporter of the present school board system, but "would like to see changes from within — to see it evolve." He criticized Mr. Laurin for believing that after the present boards have been destroyed, "from the ashes you will have an institution which, at the push of a button, will give your children education instantly."

By RICK KERRIGAN

Mr. Watkins also scoffed at any pretence the government is making at consultation on the white paper, saying the green paper several years ago was the consultative document.

Prof. Donald Burgess, a specialist in educational administration from McGill University, claimed that the white paper was inconsistent and that it will, while claiming to do otherwise, give little power to parents. He noted that the white paper includes laws and regulations severely limiting the services decided upon by the schools and regional boards.

"Control over the means is more important than control over the objectives," he said.

Among the examples of inconsistency noted by Prof. Burgess was one section that says parents will run the schools and a later statement that says "obviously" it will be hard to find parents willing to run the schools.

Prof. Burgess also took exception to the white paper's statement on the one hand that the future society is built in the schools and, on the other hand, limiting eligible voters for the regional boards.

Prof. Burgess said the government is trying to sell the document to the public on the basis of parents having power, but real power will stay with the government.

one understands and a consultative process that no one can believe in." In response to Mr. Payne, Mr. French said that the Liberals had taken longer to formulate a policy concerning the white paper because they did not have civil servants at their disposal. He told Mr. Payne, however, that they have consulted with the population and that a policy will be forthcoming soon.

Responding to questions of constitutionality, Warren Allmand, MP for N.D.G. and a panel member, said "what is proposed in the white paper could, in my opinion, only be passed by constitutional change." He added that the white paper could be challenged in court if it became law.

Murray Magor, principal of St. George's School, asked Mr. Payne about the status of private education under the proposed legislation. Mr. Payne responded that private schools will be encouraged to become more involved with the community and to increase cooperation with public schools.

Answering another question, Mr. Payne said that the white paper would encourage alternate and special education schools and provide opportunity for their development.

Study opens new facilities

The Study private school will open officially its new wing and facilities Nov. 4, 5:30 pm, when Peter MacEntyre, former mayor of Westmount and chairman of the school's board of governors when it moved to Westmount in 1960, cuts a ceremonial ribbon. Parents, teachers, the senior class and friends will attend.

Students have been using the four new classrooms and multi-purpose room since the beginning of the school year. Construction began in 1981.

While the school has gained new facilities it will be losing its headmistress, Jean Scott, at the end of this academic year when she retires. The school now is seeking a replacement.

Radio stolen

A $300 radio was reported stolen from a car left in a parking lot near 2 Prospect street Sunday night into Monday, police said. Entry to the car had been made by smashing the left rear window.

Temple's 100th anniversary sees service, jumbo party and dance

Temple Emanu-El - Beth Sholom

The 100th anniversary of Temple Emanu-El - Beth Sholom will be marked this weekend by a reconsecration service, a jumbo birthday party and a gala dinner-dance.

A photographic exhibition, a prelude to the centennial celebrations, was officially opened at Westmount Public Library by Mayor Donald MacCallum last Tuesday.

The exhibition was organized by Rosemary Lydon, Westmount's assistant librarian; Betty Ginsberg, curator of the temple's Aron Museum, and Faiga Fisher, the centennial's publicity chairman. It will remain on view until Nov. 7.

Tomorrow evening at 8:15 pm, special guests from the community and government will join with members of the congregation's the Canadian Centre for Ecumenism; Archdeacon J. N. Doidge, Canon Kenneth Cleator, Rev. Alec Farquhar and many prominent members of the Jewish community.

A reception organized by the temple's brotherhood and sisterhood is to follow the service. Bernard Isaacs is chairman of the evening's activities.

On Saturday morning, the temple's religious school has planned a jumbo birthday party to begin at 10:30 am. After games and party events, a birthday cake is to be presented to Rabbi Bloomstone.

A dinner and dance Saturday evening at the Queen Elizabeth Hotel will be held to honor the descendants of the temple's founders and those who have been members of the congregation for 50 years or more.

The evening will be chaired by William Gittes and has been arranged by Mrs. David Lissner and Norman Rill.

'Spare a pair' of shoes for children of Poland

In the wake of the increasingly sombre news coming out of Poland a group of Montrealers has launched a project to do something practical to help the people of that country.

Bishop Czeslaw Domin of Katowice who is co-ordinating the distribution of aid through the church in Poland, recently sent an urgent message regarding the need for shoes for children for this winter. "Not only are there practically no new shoes available in Poland," he said, "but used shoes for children of school and pre-school age which have a winter's wear in them are badly needed. Many families would accept such a gift with the greatest enthusiasm."

A committee has been formed jointly by Mary Queen of the World and Christ Church cathedrals to launch a project in response to the bishop's appeal.

All day this Friday and Saturday, Oct. 29 and 30, there will be bins in front of both cathedrals where shoes can be deposited. Mary Queen of the World is located on Dorchester boulevard next to the Queen Elizabeth Hotel. Christ Church Cathedral is on St. Catherine street between Eaton's and The Bay. Shoes also can be left at the municipal skating rink at 4675 St. Catherine street west in Westmount.

"Spare a pair for the children of Poland" is the theme of the project whose organizers stress that they are seeking used shoes and boots in good condition — clean, with good laces and with a year's wear still in them.

Once collected, sorted and packed the shoes will go by ship to West Germany. From there they will be taken by truck by representatives of the cathedrals who will deliver them personally in Poland. Their intention is to give Montrealers of every background the chance to participate in a practical way in demonstrating to the people of Poland that they are not forgotten and that Canadians do care.

Church choir will perform

The choir of the Church of St. Andrew and St. Paul, under the direction of Wayne Riddell, will perform Benedicite, Dona Nobis Pacem and Toward the Unknown Region by R. Vaughan Williams, with orchestra, on Sunday, November 7, at 8 pm.

Admission is free; a voluntary offering will be collected. The church is situated at the corner of Sherbrooke and Bishop.

1,000 families for a service of worship and thanksgiving in the temple sanctuary.

Rabbi Alexander Schindler, president of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations and reform leader, will deliver the centennial sermon.

DISARMAMENT WEEK

The Westmount YMCA, The Voice of Women and Project Ploughshares present: Swadesh Rana from the Centre for Disarmament, United Nations, New York. She will be speaking on Third World Perceptions of Development and Disarmament. Date: October 28, 1982. Time: 7:30 pm. Place: Westmount Baptist Church corner of Roslyn ave., and Sherbrooke street w. Everyone welcome, admission free.

Book review:

Westmounters help compile informative guides on law

Current Issues in Medical Law; The Constitution: Getting Our Act Together.

Three Westmounters are among the Legal Information Research Group of 14 McGill University law students which has produced two books in four months this past summer. They are project director and employer Renée Vézina, 1982 law graduate, and writers Celia Rhea and Helen Rioux-Morrison, who are still at law school at McGill.

The group has been active since 1978 in the field of public legal information and operates with funding from the federal department of justice.

The books entitled Current Issues in Medical Law and The Constitution: Getting Our Act Together are available at no charge at Wilson and Lafleur on Notre Dame street in Old Montreal. Anyone can go there and pick up copies.

The clear, informative books are addressed to the general public—the lay person—and not lawyers. They are cleverly illustrated with cartoons by Hélène Cossette.

The first part of "Current Issues in Medical Law" outlines the general duties and liabilities of the doctor, the patient, the hospital and its staff. The second part concerns current issues, largely touched upon by the media. They are sterilization, child abuse, artificial insemination, euthanasia and donation of organs.

Raises question

One chapter deals mainly with the sterilization of the mentally handicapped. It raises the question of whether the sterilization of the mentally handicapped in order to prevent pregnancy is an intrusion on their freedom and privacy.

It was estimated in 1972 that at least 250 children are injured in a non-accidental way for every no legal relationship should exist between the donor and the artificial insemination child. Furthermore, donor anonymity should continue as long as the information he gives concerning his genetic and medical history is accurate to the best of his knowledge.

First case

The first case to focus on euthanasia was the American one concerning Karen Ann Quinlan. The American courts concluded that the respirator could be turned off if there was concurrence among the physicians in charge, the hospital ethics committee and a guardian or parents. Thus, it was not a court that made the decision; rather permission was given to those parties involved to make the ruling. (The respirator was turned off.) Recent cases of euthanasia are also discussed in this chapter.

The Constitution: Getting Our Act Together gives Canadians both the background to the debate and an explanation of the recent changes to Canada's constitution.

The following questions are answered in the book: What was wrong with the old constitution? Why did Quebec disagree with the final outcome? How will the new constitution affect Canadians?

Quebecers and other Canadians ought to know why Quebec disagreed and should judge for themselves whether the new constitution is all that bad.

—Joan Capréol

Caught in shop, man charged with entry

A 23-year-old St. Hubert man has been charged with breaking and entering after local police caught him inside a shop on Greene avenue early Saturday morning.

Police said the suspect, who was on parole, also attempted to strike police with a piece of wood during the arrest.

The incident took place shortly before 5 am when police responded to a call at the store and saw a long, dark coat outside the store at the entrance.

They also found the front show window broken.

Searching inside, they found the suspect hiding among boxes under the counter.

Police said he had taken $200 cash.

The suspect was reported to have a dossier for armed robbery, violence, possession of dangerous weapon, break and entry, theft and failure to appear in court.

Police were called to the scene by a person living nearby who heard glass breaking and thought there had been a traffic accident.

Camera material reported taken

Camera equipment valued at $670 was reported taken from an apartment at 4652 Sherbrooke street last week, according to police.

There were no signs of forced entry, but someone might have been able to enter through an unlocked window accessible from rear stairs, police report.

The theft took place sometime between 5 pm Wednesday and 12 noon Thursday.

$6,000
diamond stolen

A $6,000 diamond was among a number of items reported stolen from a car parked Wednesday last week in front of 4032 St. Catherine street, police said.

Total amount of the theft was $6,500.

The car, which belonged to a Laval man, had been left unattended between 6:30 and 8 pm.

Among the missing items were a man's handbag worth $200, personal papers, two $100 bills, keys, the diamond, an $80 umbrella and a Western hat.

Police said it was not known how the car had been entered.

Boy, 15, taken to hospital after bike hits vehicle

A 15-year-old Victoria avenue boy was taken to hospital Friday night after the motorbike he was driving collided with a car at Claremont avenue and Parkman Place, police said.

The victim sustained serious leg injuries after he was thrown off the vehicle and over the car, which was driven by an 19-year-old man living on Parkman Place.

The boy was taken to the Montreal Children's Hospital by Urgence Santé ambulance.

Firefighters were called to the scene at 8:40 pm and flushed away a spill of gasoline.

Police said the accident took place when the car, a beige Plymouth, was driving north on Claremont avenue and was attempting to turn left onto Parkman Place. The driver told police he suddenly saw a faint bike light but was unable to stop in time.

The victim, who had been heading south on Claremont, reported he was unable to stop when he saw the car turning left.

THE LAW

Few people are aware that it is forbidden by law to smoke while walking or working in the forest. If you really are unable to stop smoking, at least stop... to smoke and extinguish your cigarette stub thoroughly before throwing it away.

In a vehicle, use the ashtray; a cigarette stub thrown from a window could start a fire.

Heed GAROFEU's call and prevent forest fires.

Remember that, in the province of Québec, one person out of every seven earns his living from the forest.

Brazil, Argentina win championships

By GARY ROUSE

The championships in Westmount's soccer program were decided in final games this past Saturday.

In PeeWee, it was Brazil who came out on top as they battled it out with Sweden for most of the year, and managed to finish just two points in front of the second place club. Team Brazil was coached by Manton Davis, and Neil Ferguson, and they both did an excellent job with the kids.

The following are the members of the 1982 PeeWee soccer champions; John Mulder, David Redwood, Michael Campbell, Christopher Campbell, Chris Calafatis, Mark Cameron, Emmanuel Vaisman, Mark Lofthouse, Robby Velan, John Shannon, David

Jacobs, Michael Coyle, Alex Pless, Douglas Naudie, Jonathan Giacomelli, and Jason Safdie. Congratulations to team Brazil.

The Bantam division was terrifically competitive, as any one of three teams could have the championship. However, it was Argentina who managed to pull it out as they finished one point ahead of both Germany and Hungary. Argentina finished with 15 points while the other two had 14.

Team Argentina was coached well by Vincent Leuzy.

The 1982 Bantam soccer champions are as follows: Alain Turcot, Elan Packer, Eric Keleny, Christopher Dodson, Paul Cosgrove, Manuel Vallee, Guy Kaye, Pascal Lacroix, Thierry Leuzy, Rustom Metha, Keyes Lessard, and Julian Brisset. Congratulations, Argentina!

Next week we will have the champions of both the Novice and Atom soccer leagues.

Touch football also came to a close as the Atom final was played. The Jets overcame the Raiders who had had the bye going into the finals. The Jets built up an early 9-0 lead and then held on to win 9-6, despite a last-minute come-back attempt by the Raiders.

Aryan Lirange did an exceptional job coaching the team, as they hung in there all season long. The champs are: Sean Pattee, Sean Hurlburt, Michael Henderson, Leigh Lefebvre, Jeremy Blumer, Sean Madden, and Matthew Ray. Congratulations, Jets!

'Good season' of soccer ends

The boys' soccer program organized by Westmount parks and recreation department ended last Saturday after a 12-game season.

Department officials credit participants, volunteer coaches and referees with the "very successful" operation of the program. There were 240 boys registered in the program, working with 20 coaches and 10 referees.

"We've got a good season under our belts," said John Garland, superintendent of the department.

The girls' soccer program, in which 40 girls registered, ended one week earlier.

Unity club holds carnival for Hallowe'en

Tomorrow evening is Hallowe'en Carnival Night at the Unity Boys' and Girls' Club, 1090 Greene avenue, from 4:00 until 8:30 pm.

A spook house, carnival games and a magician's visit have been arranged for general entertainment. Admission is free for club members with a small fee for non-members.

Children belonging to the club will stage a play which can be seen for a nominal charge.

The movie, An American Werewolf in London, will be screened at 6:30 pm, also for a nominal charge.

For further information call Ann Pompura, Unity's new program director, at 931-6202.

Gary Aitken 'very pleased' with marathon

Gary Aitken, 106 Blenheim place, was one of 13,500 runners who finished in the New York Marathon last weekend.

The marathon, perhaps the biggest in the world, went "very well" for Mr. Aitken. He completed the course, just over 42 kilometres, 11 minutes faster than his previous best time for the same distance.

After training all summer, he is "very pleased" with finishing in four hours, 17 minutes and 44 seconds. He was the 11,215th runner across the line.

To put things in perspective, he says, the winner was crossing the finish line as Mr. Aitken passed the half-way point.

Lottery held

More than 60,000 runners applied to compete in the marathon. A lottery, held in August, determined the 16,000 who would be allowed to start.

When his name was chosen, Mr. Aitken "didn't want to pass up" the chance to run through all five boroughs of New York City. Apart from the excitement of the meet, "it's a good way to see the city," he says.

More than 3,000 runners from 70 countries outside the United States took part, among them some of the best runners in the world. Mr. Aitken expressed his disappointment that fewer than 300 Canadians participated.

Mr. Aitken has run in the last three Montreal Marathons. He has no immediate plans for future marathons, but he says, "I've changed my mind before."

Girls too

Not only is soccer played by boys in the City of Westmount, the girls too have a very competitive and fun league of their own. This past week the Cheetahs were declared champs. A great deal of credit should go to coaches Miss Lydia Gabbay and William Balfour along with the girls themselves: Sarah Balfour, Jessica Day, Jennifer Aitken, Mary Root, Amanda Dawson, Michele Shashoua, Antonia Miller, Natasha Teola, Deirdre Raymond, Chantal Lemieux, Natalie Burman, Allison Quinn, Bonnie Johnson, and Natalie Rosenberg.

Westmounters will be able to use hard-surface tennis courts and outdoor playground equipment as long as the weather warrants it, according to the city's parks and recreation department.

Tennis courts in Devon Park, King George Park, the Westmount Athletic Grounds and the junior courts in Westmount Park are open from 7:00 am to 7:00 pm Monday to Saturday. Sunday, hours are 7:00 am to 6:00 pm.

Playground equipment in all city parks will not be removed for winter storage until weather conditions make its use impossible.

Children offered programs at Y

The Westmount YMCA's community branch is offering professional-day programs for elementary school children on three different days in early November.

Roslyn School has set aside Nov. 4, 5 and 12 for professional days. Nov. 4 and 12 are professional days at Westmount Park School.

The Y's programs, which begin at 9:00 am and end at 2:30 pm, include general recreational and educational activities.

Cost for each of the day-long programs is $10 per child. To register, contact Nancy McDonald at the Y, 931-8046.

Citizens' course in CPR offered at fire station

A citizens' course in cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) will be offered again on four consecutive Tuesday evenings from 6:30 to 10:30 at the Westmount Fire Station on Stanton street beginning Nov. 9.

The courses are sponsored by the Rotary Club of Westmount in co-operation with the City of Westmount, and lead to certification by the Quebec Heart Foundation.

Students will learn basic life support techniques to be used with both adults and infants. The course involves practice with mannequins and requires that participants be in good physical condition.

The November course is the last scheduled for this year. Another is planned for February. The course is to be given in English, but additional courses may be offered in French next year if there is sufficient demand.

Westmount fireman and other local residents will instruct the course, for which registration is limited to 24 persons.

Fees for the course are $35. Those interested should register at the Westmount YMCA, 931-8046.

Hit-and-run checked after car hits bike

Police are investigating a hit-and-run accident in which a woman and her four-year-old son were knocked off a bicycle at the northeast corner of Sherbrooke street and Mount Pleasant avenue Wednesday last week.

They were uninjured, police said. Witnesses were reported to have taken the licence number of the car, which was described as a big brown vehicle.

Police said the woman, a 35-year-old resident of Oxford avenue in N.D.G., had been driving the bicycle with her son in a child's seat behind her. They were knocked to the sidewalk when the back of the bike was hit by the car.

Both the car and the bicycle were heading west on Sherbrooke street when they approached the Mount Pleasant-Greene avenue corner.

Police said witnesses reported the car appeared to have intended making a right-hand turn north up Mount Pleasant when it hit the bicycle, which was next to the sidewalk. The car then was seen to have continued west along Sherbrooke, instead.

The case was turned over to the MUC hit-and-run squad.

It pays to know streets

If you're running away from police in Westmount, it pays to know the streets here.

Police arrested a motorist Monday night after they cornered him on Lorraine avenue — a short, dead-end street off Claremont.

They had chased the car through three red lights on Sherbrooke street.

Police said the man had to be forced into handcuffs after he apparently refused to identify himself. He told police he didn't need a licence to drive.

Police said the car had been loaned to the 21-year-old Montreal man.

He was spotted by police when he was driving west on Sherbrooke. He reportedly continued through a red light at Victoria avenue.

Then another at Prince Albert avenue.

And another at Claremont.

Further investigation revealed the man owed unpaid traffic warrants worth $62.30.

Rotary scholar learns much from program

Lorri Jewett, a Rotary Foundation scholar from California, spoke to the Rotary Club of Westmount last Wednesday at the club's regular weekly luncheon meeting in Victoria Hall.

Miss Jewett is being hosted this year by the Westmount club as she works toward a master's degree in McGill University's graduate program in communications. Before commencing her studies this fall she attended the McGill French Summer School.

In addition, Miss Jewett works for CFCF-12 television, reporting segments of the Sunday evening program As It Is with Bill Haugland.

Through the Rotary Foundation, 1,250 scholars are sponsored each year in 65 countries. The scholarship program, part of the foundation's commitment to promoting international peace, "really works," Miss Jewett said.

"I've learned so much about Canada, about America and ... about myself," she said. For Miss Jewett, who plans a career as a television journalist, "it's all very worthwhile!"

Established in 1947, the Foundation has sponsored 16,000 students like Miss Jewett.

News director

Before coming to Montreal, Miss Jewett worked as news director and reporter for a television station in northern California. She earned a BA in communications at the State University of California at Chico.

Miss Jewett travelled 9,000 miles across the United States en route to Montreal in a small red truck this spring. Using slides, she presented a travelogue of her experiences to the members.

Miss Jewett was introduced by her Rotary counsellor, John Sancton, and was thanked for her "warm delivery" by George Sklivas.

Rotarians visiting from Miami, Toronto and Montreal attended the meeting chaired by Rotary President Raymond Vallières.

Springate talks with publisher

George Springate, former member of the National Assembly for Westmount, is to discuss weekly newspapers with John Sancton, publisher of THE WESTMOUNT EXAMINER and the TOWN OF MOUNT ROYAL WEEKLY POST, Tuesday, Nov. 2, at 12:10 pm on his weekday television show, Midday, on CBM, channel 6.

Tomorrow, Friday, in the same time slot, Mr. Springate will hold a timely interview with another Westmounter, Mrs. Yolande Masella, 5 Springfield avenue, new national president of UNICEF Canada, which has a special interest in Hallowe'en — when children collect for the organization.

Next Wednesday Mr. Springate's guest is to be Brendan Madigan, known to many Westmount women for his locally-conducted Osmos courses on "Women and Finance."
