Lennoxville bank is held up

Armed bandits escape with $8,000

By PETER VERRAL (Record staff reporter)

Three armed men robbed the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, 93 Queen Street, Lennoxville of approximately $8,000 at 1:30 p.m. yesterday afternoon.

Michel Bordet 17, of 71 Academy Street Lennoxville, and Alan Rowe, 16 of Vaudry Street, Lennoxville, were at the Central Service gas station across from the bank when the robbery occurred.

"A blue 1967 Pontiac pulled up at the bank," Michel said. "There were four men in the car and they all were wearing ski caps.

"After about a minute, three of the men jumped out of the car and ran into the bank yelling, lie down on the floor in French.

"Two of the men seemed to have one black revolver between them while the third seemed to be carrying either a sawed-off shot gun or a sub-machine gun," Alan said.

"During this time," Alan added, "a fourth man remained at the wheel of the car.

"Two of the men were big and the other was short. I didn't see the man at the wheel very clearly.

"They must have known what they were doing," Alan continued, "for they were only in the bank a couple of minutes. Then the three men came running out of the bank clutching small bags that looked about the size of a lady's purse.

"As they pulled away from the bank they were almost hit by a Volkswagen. The robbery car accelerated rapidly and headed south on Route 5, he said. The two boys phoned the Lennoxville police when the armed men entered the bank.

Miss Ruth Carette, 18, of Cookshire was the teller of one of the two wickets that was robbed.

"I heard voices yelling lie down on the floor, then I looked up.

"One man jumped over the counter and took the cash out of my till."

There were three men who spoke French, she said. Assistant manager Arthur Lovelace Jr., said, "as soon as the three men came into the bank and yelled, everyone dived for the floor.

"I really had no idea how much money was stolen at the time," he added.

He said there were about six people in the bank at the time of the robbery but no one was injured.

Later yesterday evening Mr. Leve'ance said about $8,000 was stolen.

Guy Martin, 5 Glendale Street, Lennoxville, who is an employee of the post office, was just on his way out of the bank with an empty postal cash bag when the three men rushed in.

"One of the men grabbed the bag, looked in it and then threw it over the counter."

"The post office made its deposit last night and I was only taking the bag back," he explained.

"One man stayed by the door with what looked like a rifle or perhaps a submachine gun, one man vaulted the counter and scooped money out of the two tills, and the third man took up a position by a door at the far end of the room.

"I was lying by the man with the first on the scene to in-thought a muzzle could look so big," he said.

Mr. Martin was able to get the licence number of the getaway car which he gave to the Lennoxville police who were the first on the scene to investigate the holdup.

However, police believe the car was probably stolen.

"When the men first came into the bank," Mr. Martin added, "I thought I heard one of the tellers cry out, but I'm not sure.

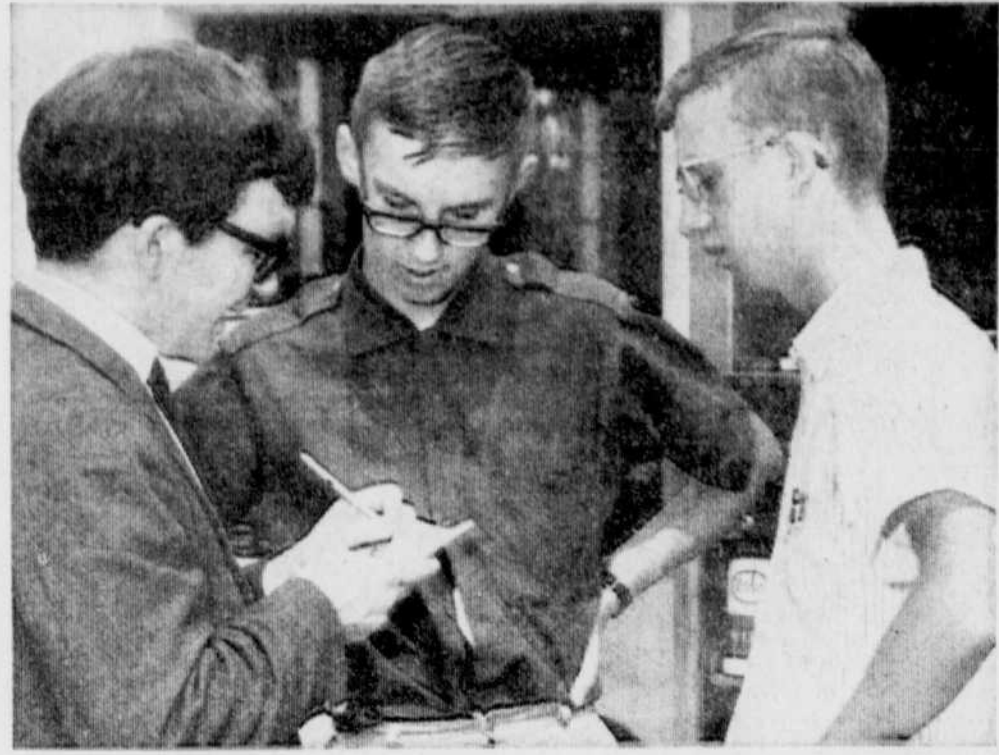

"The thieves must have been professionals for they were only in the bank about a minute and a half."

Bank officials, and eyewitnesses to the robbery seemed to differ as to the identification of the third weapon carried by the men.

Some people thought it was a rifle, while others described it as a sawed-off shotgun or sub-machine.

Constable W. Young of the Lennoxville police who investigated the robbery said, "most people in the bank were really too nervous to determine what type of weapons the men were carrying.

"The third weapon was quite probably a sawed-off shotgun," he said.

SHARP-EYED YOUTHS — Two alert youths were the first to spot three armed men entering the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce in Lennoxville yesterday. The boys immediately phoned the

Two Lennoxville youths alert police to holdup in progress

Two sharp eyed youths were the first to phone the Lennoxville police that three armed men robbed the Lennoxville Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce yesterday afternoon.

The two Lennoxville boys, Alan Rowe, 16, of 17 Vaudry Street, and Michel Bordet, 17, of 71 Academy Street were standing at the Central Service gas station, 92 Queen Street, which is owned by S. W. Rowe, Alan's father.

The gas station is approximately 50 yards across the street from the bank. "A blue 1967 Pontiac drove up and parked just outside the bank," said Alan who is an attendant at the gas station.

"There were four men inside and they all wore ski caps.

"After a couple of minutes three men jumped out of the car, shouted 'let's go' in French and then went into the bank yelling for everybody to lie down.

"Two of the men had one revolver, while the third man was carrying what looked like a sawed-off shot gun or a sub-machine gun. The fourth man stayed in the car."

Michael who was chatting with Alan when the men drove up said, "two of the men were big and the third one was shorter. I think one of them was wearing tan slacks.

"They came out of the bank after a couple of minutes," Michel continued.

"They were clutching small bags that looked about the size of a lady's purse.

"As they pulled away from the curb they were almost hit by a Volkswagen. The car accelerated fast and headed south on route 5."

News in brief

Can veto

ALGIERS (Reuters) — Only Algerian Premier Houari Boumediene stands between former Congolese premier Moise Tshombe and a death sentence in his homeland across the Sahara.

Boumediene has the right to veto a Supreme Court ruling Friday in favor of a Congolese request that Tshombe be extradited to Kinshasa where he faces the death sentence for treason.

Move out

QUEBEC (CP) — The Quebec government's office of information and publicity packed its bags and province-boasting literature Friday night and moved its press room for state visits out of the Canadian government's military drill hall here.

The move appeared to be yet another escalation in a wide-open battle between federal and provincial officials over details of the visit by President Charles de Gaulle of France, who arrives in Quebec City Sunday morning.

Flies home

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Queen Mother Elizabeth flies home to London today on an RCAF Yukon aircraft following her 13-day Centennial Year tour of the Atlantic provinces.

She is scheduled to board the direct flight from St. John's Torbay Airport at 10 a.m. NDT after inspecting a final guard of honor from the Royal Newfoundland Regiment.

Hit by train

DURBAN (Reuters) — Messages of condolence from all over the world poured in today to the humble home of former Zulu chief Albert Lutuli, 1950 Nobel Peace Prize winner and enemy of South Africa's racial laws. He died Friday after being hit by a train.

The funeral of the 60-year-old arch-foe of apartheid will take place Sunday from the Bantu Congregational church in Grootville, where he lived 30 miles north of Durban. He will be buried in a small cemetery next to the church.

Bitter end

UNITED NATIONS (Reuters) Soviet-Arab differences and bitter recriminatory speeches marked the end of the United Nations General Assembly's attempts to solve the Middle East crisis Friday night as it threw the problem back to the Security Council.

The assembly voted 63 to 26, with 27 abstentions, to adjourn its five-week Soviet-inspired emergency session on the Middle East so the council might resume "as a matter of urgency" its consideration of the crisis. Canada voted for the resolution.

Need money

MONTREAL (CP) — The United Nations pavilion at the world's fair requires another $250,000 to ensure its full operation for the duration of Expo 67.

Peter Casson, commissioner-general of the pavilion, said Friday night efforts are being made to raise additional funds and that United Nations headquarters in New York recently increased its contribution.

O Canada, We Stand On Guard

(Nineteenth Of A Series) By WALT McDAYTER

The soldier, who was once a symbol of war, is now evolving into the chief instrument for peace.

Wearing the United Nations flash on their uniforms, Canadian soldiers have patrolled many an uneasy frontier, serving an international role undreamed of by even such far-sighted statesmen as the Fathers of Confederation.

As a "middle power," Canada performs an essential role in the U-N's efforts to maintain peace. Not a member of the nuclear club, nor so powerful with conventional arms as to arouse fears among the smaller nations, Canada speaks nonetheless with an important voice, respected by both East and West, sometimes as a spokesman for the "neutral" bloc.

Since the creation of the U-N Emergency Force in 1956, and even before, her armed forces have been used consistently as referees in world trouble spots. In 1949, when Soviet aggression in Europe made the formation of NATO imperative, Canada was among the 12 founder members, and promptly allocated an army brigade, some naval units and RCAF squadrons for NATO use.

Wearing U-N badges, Canadian soldiers keep a vigil for peace on the "Green Line," which separated Greek and Turkish Cypriots in Cyprus.

At the outbreak of the Korean War in June 1950, Canada's contribution included a naval contingent of three destroyers, air transport, and a brigade recruited specifically for the U-N. After the war, Canada maintained this brigade for U-N use in collective defense, the only nation to do so.

In 1954, Canada, along with two other middle powers, India and Poland, was chosen to supervise the armistice in Indo-China. It was the Suez Crisis in 1956 that put Canada in the limelight as the U-N's No. 1 peacemaker. Lester B. Pearson, then foreign minister, proposed the formation of the U-N's Emergency Force to supervise the cessation of hostilities in the Middle East and provide a buffer between the warring Jews and Arabs.

With the speed borne of crisis, the U-N detailed a force of 6,000 men, 1,000 of them Canadians, to the Gaza Strip. Canadian Maj. Gen. E. L. M. Burns was commander of UNEF in the Middle East.

Gives lessons on dodging the draft

By AUBREY WICE

DETROIT — (TNS) — A tall, sombre-faced Anglican clergyman, Rev. David Gracie, 34, told me he sees nothing wrong with counselling young men on ways to avoid military service in the U.S. forces.

Sunday nights draft counselling sessions are held at his church, St. Joseph's Episcopal, on Woodward ave., not far from downtown.

But he says they'll likely be moved to a Methodist church because he is leaving for Philadelphia to work among the poor.

He told me Michigan diocese wasn't "overly enthusiastic" about his peace activities.

The draft counselling began last December and peace-minded members of various churches have a hand in it. The centre puts ads in the paper and hands out leaflets. Since it began Mr. Gracie estimates the centre has advised 500 young men seeking to avoid military service, and that there have been many deferments.

"We get 15 to 30 guys Sunday nights plus phone and mail inquiries." Some of the youths have been brought by parents. He said some want to know if they qualify as conscientious objectors.

What they do is tell young men what ways are open to them. Literature, prepared by students in Windsor and handed out at the Detroit centre, explains in detail how draft dodgers can settle in Canada as landed immigrants. It tells them how to dress, how much money to carry, advises on lining up jobs, night school courses and other things.

"Appearance and attitude may be important factors in any encounter with immigration officials..." is one point.

The literature states that while Canada doesn't encourage draft evasion this is no bar to entry. Some at the Sunday night sessions say they intend to fake military physical examinations, Mr. Gracie said. "We won't say do it, but tell them of the penalties."

Mr. Gracie told of a number of similar draft counselling centres in California Anglican churches.

Canada's Mid-East position, support the UN

WASHINGTON — (TNS) — Ironically the assassination of President Kennedy was part ly responsible for stalling legislation which would have imposed controls on mail order sale of rifles such as the one that killed him.

The assassination focussed so much emotionalism on the whole subject of the constitutionally guaranteed right of Americans to bear and keep arms that the first thoughtful bill produced in nearly 30 years languished and died in committee a few months later while the nation indulged in endless hearings.

The bill was mild enough. Produced after two years of quiet, behind the scenes deliberation intentionally sheltered from public airing, it would simply have provided police of every state with knowledge of who was buying guns, and from whom.

This was the work of Thomas J. Dodd, the censured senator from Connecticut, one of the biggest gun manufacturing states. Senator Dodd made a personal crusade of gun control legislation before the assassination — and long before his recent censure for misconduct

British writer-poet Robert Bryans considers Canada his second home

HALIFAX (CP) — Robert Harbinson Bryans is 21 books old and a recognized poet and travel writer in the United Kingdom—but is virtually unknown in Canada despite the fact he does all his writing here.

His latest travel book, Trinidad and Tobago, was released recently in Canada and had the distinction of being the first Canadian imprint by the London publishing house of Faber and Faber.

Bryans spends six months of the year travelling and gathering material for his books and divides the remainder of his time largely between Halifax and Victoria. "I like a view of the sea," he explains.

"Halifax was the first place I came to in Canada in 1949. I liked it then because it was a lovely little sea town of frame houses. It's totally different now, but the essential Halifax still remains because that is Point Pleasant Park, the islands and the sea."

The East Coast city is also a convenient jumping-off place for Europe, the Caribbean and South America, all of which he visits regularly.

received as well as his other works. "A novelist writes by the ear but I write by the eye. My travel books are a personal summing up of the region."

way to Khyber, was published in 1959.

His published works include poetry, travel, fiction, two volumes of short stories, art and architectural criticism, biography, history and archaeology.

He believes he is one of the very few writers in Canada living solely off the sale of his books, but he does not have a particularly high opinion of the recognition afforded to authors in Canada.

"If you are very successful money-wise, you will be accepted. If you happen to be a success from a literary point of view, well, they pass you by."

He regards Malcolm Lowry, author of Under The Volcano, as one of the greatest writers Canada has produced — "He was not just a great Canadian writer, but a master of the English language."

Bryans' autobiography brought him initial fame. The four books, No Surrender, Song of Erne, Up Spake The Cabin Boy and The Protege, describe his early life in Northern Ireland — he is a native of Belfast — his life as a cabin boy on a wartime Belfast dredger, where he taught himself Latin and Greek and also became a proficient barber out of necessity, and as a protégé of Britain's millionaire Willis family.

All his books are distinguished by their sense of poetry, while his travel books contain graphic and colorful descriptions of the people, architecture, customs and flora and fauna of the areas. His novels have not been

His published works include poetry, travel, fiction, two volumes of short stories, art and architectural criticism, biography, history and archaeology.

He believes he is one of the very few writers in Canada living solely off the sale of his books, but he does not have a particularly high opinion of the recognition afforded to authors in Canada.

"If you are very successful money-wise, you will be accepted. If you happen to be a success from a literary point of view, well, they pass you by."

He regards Malcolm Lowry, author of Under The Volcano, as one of the greatest writers Canada has produced — "He was not just a great Canadian writer, but a master of the English language."

Bryans' autobiography brought him initial fame. The four books, No Surrender, Song of Erne, Up Spake The Cabin Boy and The Protege, describe his early life in Northern Ireland — he is a native of Belfast — his life as a cabin boy on a wartime Belfast dredger, where he taught himself Latin and Greek and also became a proficient barber out of necessity, and as a protégé of Britain's millionaire Willis family.

All his books are distinguished by their sense of poetry, while his travel books contain graphic and colorful descriptions of the people, architecture, customs and flora and fauna of the areas. His novels have not been

SOUTH'S SQUEEZE WORKS SMOOTHLY

The late Edward Hynes was just about as good a dummy player as there ever has been. In addition Eddie was somewhat of a show-off when he could afford to be.

He sat South and let West's king of spades hold the first trick. This gave up the over-trick if hearts and diamonds both broke 3-3 but Eddie held both six, not seven. He didn't think that West would continue the suit but stranger things have happened and a 12 tricks in high cards.

West didn't fall into that trap. He shifted to the jack of diamonds. Eddie won with dummy's king and led the ace of diamonds. West discarded a spade. Eddie thought while and claimed the balance of the tricks. He said, "Perfect squeeze, if I need it."

East and West both protested so Eddie showed his hand and played it out as fast as he could get his opponents to play. He ran off four club tricks, discarding his six of hearts. Each opponent had no trouble discarding on that trick. West threw a spade; East a diamond. Then Eddie led to his queen of diamonds. West was down to queen-ten of spades and four hearts but he discarded a heart as nonchalantly as he could considering that it was just as if Eddie had pulled his last tooth.

Eddie remarked to West, "I don't know if you have already been squeezed or not but you can't have more than three hearts, come what may. I am now going to lead my ace of spades. If East started with one spade, four hearts; five diamonds and three clubs this will force him to jettison his own heart stopper."

"O.K.," said West. "We concede."

Africville slum finally dies after costly three-year program, most of the displaced residents relocated

HALIFAX (CP) — Africville, a Negro slum once described as "an indictment of society" will disappear this summer.

Once, almost 400 persons lived in the century-old collection of rickety houses and patchwork tin shacks on the bleak hillside overlooking the harbor at the north end of the city. Most have been relocated or have moved away.

Only 10 families remain and they are due to be relocated by late June as Africville dies at the end of a program that has taken three years and cost the city $200,000.

But the dying has not been easy. Peter MacDonald, a Nova Scotia government welfare officer on loan to the city for the move, says the break-up of Africville's community life has been a problem.

Its residents have been descendants of slaves who either came originally as servants to Nova Scotia with white masters or fled slavery in the United States. Negroes have lived in Nova Scotia for more than 200 years.

Although Africville with its lack of sewers and piped water was little more than a ghetto, many Negroes were hostile when plans were first made to shift them.

"The people of Africville were always a close-knit community," explained Rev. W. P. Oliver, member of the Nova Scotia Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Mr. Oliver said some of the people are happy in their new homes, while others have had difficulty adjusting to a new environment.

"Time will change some things, but I am afraid some of the people will never adjust. At least, the future is brighter for their children."

The officials, as well as the slum-dwellers, have had their difficulties.

Elks at Sherbrooke congress to propose centers for deaf

The Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks and the Order of the Royal Purple have proposed a unique project for approval at the 55th congress to be held at the New Wellington Hotel, here next week.

The name of the project is "3-D", signifying "deaf-detection-development", an idea which involves the establishment of a treatment-of-the-deaf center, and eventually, centers across Canada.

The proposal to set up such a center will be presented to the members of the order for their approval. If the idea is approved by the some 900 delegates, the center will be opened in Regina with the assistance of the Canadian Lodges and the Saskatchewan government, who will supply the building in which the unit would be situated.

The BPOE is sponsoring this project and they aim for a national project. This pilot program will be in full operation by the end of 1967, it is hoped.

The group will be using its own development program, but it will be necessary to locate an audiologist for the center, says Robert Coulling, Grand high ruler of Canadian lodges.

Mr. Coulling pointed out that the purpose for the "3-D" program was in order to keep up their activity in charitable work. They figure it is the best way to come into the national charity realm.

As part of their Centennial project for the site of the Dominion Congress, the Elks have decided to donate three pieces of equipment to the Sherbrooke Hospital and St. Vincent de Paul Hospitals.

Before the convention officially opens on Sunday, the executive committee will meet to discuss the proposals previously presented by the various members.

Other matters to be discussed at the convention will include membership development, how and where to organize new lodges, and national projects.

Only Victoria Cross was won without battle

Irish born Timothy O'Hea doused a flaming ammunition train in Danville, Quebec, in 1866 to win the only V.C. ever awarded for valor off the field of battle.

By WM. H. LUNAN. (Special to the Record) Arm of Erin - prove strong, but be gentle as brave And, uplifted to strike, still be ready to serve...

from Dr. W. Drennan's Erin Sixty-six years after they were put to rhyme, a young Irishman took these noble sentiments to heart and won the Victoria Cross for valor on Canadian soil.

As far as is known, it is the only occasion that the award recognizes a heroic deed off the field of combat, though it is linked with the Fenian raids which followed the Civil War in the United States.

Time hanging on their hands, misguided Irish fanatics, who had served with the North, banded together to invade Canada. They hoped in this way to blackmail Britain into granting home rule in Ireland.

Early in June of 1866 at Ridgway, near Fort Erie, 1,800 hastily recruited volunteers routed 1,400 undisciplined invaders. The Fenians deserted in droves on catching sight of the defenders wielding shiny pitchforks and rusty muskets. Fenian casualties - 20 dead and 80 wounded - were twice as severe as the Canadians. But, discovering that they could have inflicted a far worse defeat, had their battle plans not been bungled, the defenders in victory yielded to discord and suspicion.

Greeted as a conquering hero at a home town reception, a wounded captain publicly accused his superior officer of cowardice. For looking like a Fenian, a Canadian - born Buffalo printer was arrested at Fort Erie and bundled off to jail in Toronto. Identified as a "red-hot Orangeman," he was freed.

PRIVATE TIMOTHY O'HEA

officer of cowardice.

For looking like a Fenian, a Canadian - born Buffalo printer was arrested at Fort Erie and bundled off to jail in Toronto. Identified as a "red-hot Orangeman," he was freed.

Adding to the turmoil of Confederation a year away, Queen Victoria's Imperials were blamed for not defending the colony.

As a result, on June 9 when a 20-year old private, Timothy O'Hea, hailing from the seaport village of Banty, carried out his outstanding act of heroism, he did more than enhance the reputation of County Cork. For Timothy O'Hea was serving with the First Battalion of the Rifle Brigade - Imperials to the core.

When more trouble threatened on the Niagara frontier, the arsenal near Quebec city dispatched a ton of ammunition, including 95 kegs of gunpowder, in two express cars. Both were hooked to the end of a Grand Trunk passenger train carrying some 800 German immigrants, bound for the West.

The circumstances of the case were as follows: Only some of the highest Railway officials were aware of the nature of the consignment. This was placed in charge of Timothy O'Hea and three other picked men of the Rifle Brigade.

As the train drew up by a station, Danville (90.6 rail miles from Quebec), O'Hea noticed that one of the trucks was on fire and gave the alarm, telling the contents of the trucks and called for assistance, in the Queen's name. According to his statement, the railway officials and a company of infantry, which was drawn up in the station yard, as well as his three comrades withdrew to a safe distance. O'Hea, having found a bucket and a short ladder, and water not far off, mounted the burning truck 19 times. Single handed, and entirely without assistance he succeeded in extinguishing the fire, a task which occupied him almost an hour, while his comrades and the others shouted to him to come back.

The immigrants, locked in their carriages and in total ignorance of the peril that awaited them, were enjoying the scene from the train windows.

A military board sat on an inquiry into the circumstances and recommended O'Hea for the Victoria Cross which was presented to him in the presence of several regiments.

Under the original rules of the warrant, the decoration could not have been made. "However on August 10, 1858, a permissive clause had been inserted. Timothy O'Hea's citation read, "FOR CONSPICUOUS COURAGE UNDER CIRCUMSTANCES

OF GREAT DANGER" Later this clause was revoked. Today the decoration is reserved for valor in battle.

O'HEA'S LAST DAYS On leaving Canada, O'Hea joined up with the "Andrew Hume Expedition", which was trying to trace a German scientist lost 27 years before among the aborigines

Dangerous driving said wrong charge

A charge of dangerous driving was rejected by Judge Benoit Turmel yesterday in Court of Sessions.

The accused, taxi-cab driver Roland Cadorette, of 205 Main Street West, Magog had pleaded not guilty earlier.

The man who arrested the accused, Ayer's Cliff police officer Gerald Lundeborg said he saw Cadorette speed through town and his radar locked.

The speeding car was then in a 30 mile-an-hour zone. Constable Lundeborg said he saw the speeding car which was travelling at 50-60 miles an hour. He stopped Cadorette asking to see his licence and registration.

The accused he said gave him the driver's licence which he started to copy down but had a hard time finding his registration.

While Lundeborg was copying the information the accused sped off he said and so he gave chase once more. This time Cadorette drove on the left hand side of the road—to prevent him from passing he concluded.

But finally he did pass him, jumped out of the car and put the handcuffs on.

Defence lawyer Leonard Bergeron said that usually in cases of dangerous driving there were some dead and injured and some proof of the reason for the charge that he could not find in this particular case.

Judge Benoit Turmel in rejecting the charge said that the accused might have been found guilty on a charge of speeding or some other accusation but not of dangerous driving.

In his eyes, he explained there was no proof that anyone might have been a victim of the act, for instance children near by or motorists.

A young man from Sherbrooke was fined $50 after he pleaded guilty to a charge of indecent acts before minors.

Crown Prosecutor Andre Langlois told the court that Jacelin Tremblay, 21, of 316 10th Avenue committed the acts in front of some young teenagers.

Raymond Gaulin, 21, of St. Marguerite de Lingwick changed his plea from not guilty to guilty on a charge of hit and run.

His lawyer said his client had no police record and had caused damages of $300 only. Judge fined him $100 and suspended his licence for six months.

Color is everywhere at Expo for the shutter bug

Last week it was Expo in black and white. Now it's Expo in color.

Color is everywhere. It makes up our visual world. It is used to please us and in some places to attraction or warn us of danger. Perhaps you don't know it but if your dog or cat shows little interest in your color pictures, don't be disappointed. Since they do not see color they make for an unappreciative color picture audience.

Man's best friend, other than man, is the monkey or even the goldfish or the canary for they are only members of the animal kingdom that can see color.

Non-mammals, like birds, insects reptiles or fish, can also see colors, but in limited ranges, apparently as a part of their natural survival. Color has been a talisman and a luck token for 'thousand of years.

Prehistoric man decorated his dead with red to give them eternal life. Egyptians and Babylonians wore special colors to gain favor of the gods. Hindus dabbed black on their children's forehead to ward off evil spirits. Ancient Chinese used red or yellow to chase out demons. The Greeks used yellow and gold as sacred manifestation of the sun-god Apollo.

Sometime after 1666, young Isaac Newton made the first modern breakthrough in the world of color. He discovered that by refraction of sun-light through a prism, color was made up of a full spectrum and proved it by collecting this band of colors through the prism again and producing white sunlight.

After finding out that your dog doesn't care, you take black and white or color pictures, see if you can improve them for man and monkeys.

The great Expo 67, in case you haven't found out, is a photographer's delight. However it is a big open expanse of pavilions sky and water; so on a sunny day one should watch out for balance of light between the color and in some areas the wide ex-

VANTAGE POINT—The katimavik at the Canadian pavilion at Expo provides a perfect vantage point from which to take excellence of white cement. This can be overcome by simple composition, like taking a camera position where a shadow or silhouette of potted trees or some other foreground breaks up the white foreground.

The use of filters, if you

are equipped to put them on your lens, would help the ultraviolet or even the 81 series, and warm up the scene. I prefer color on the warm side in this eliminates the blue cast in open scenes and will put a slight color like sunlight in the white cement.

When all the lights come out at Expo then what? How can you capture this world of fantasy?

Daylight film can still be used as there is no need to change films. You may also want to take some shots at La Ronde. Here are a few suggestions:

Color film of ASA 25, try lens at 2.8 and shutter at 1/30 sec.

With ASA film 50, try 1/60 sec. and ASA 100 or 125, try shutter 1/125. Lens stays at 2.8.

If you wish movement of color patterns created by twirling lights, you need a tripod and one second exposure, lens opening at F 22. Don't forget to try some shots after the sun goes down and there's still some light in the sky.

Also if you are lucky, a few sunset pictures showing Expo and the Montreal skyline as the sun sets behind the skyscrapers of the city making unusual picture possibilities.

Incidentally, probably the best vantage point in all of Expo for pictures, color or black and white, night or day, is the top of the Canadian pavilion, the katimavik. From the walkway around the top, you can see most of the pavilions, the island of Montreal skyline, the Notre Dame park and the St. Lawrence seaway.

The katimavik was built with photographers in mind. The walkways around the top are fenced with high glass panels, but every few feet, large round holes have been cut into the glass at eye level for photographers to stick their cameras through and take pictures. Otherwise, you would get reflections off the glass.

TEN YEARS AGO

The 40th convention of Rotary International — where 9,702 people were brought together through their interest in the similar principle, "Service Above Self" — was described yesterday by Sherbrooke Rotarians by local Rotarian and Canadian Director of Rotary International, Douglas Stevenson.

Mr. Stevenson attended the convention, held in Lucerne, Switzerland, last month.

"It is hard to put into words," Mr. Stevenson said, "the awe-inspiring feeling that the convention generated".

Mr. Stevenson said that the purpose of the convention was three-fold. It is the only legislative body in Rotary that considers proposed legislation and amendments to the constitution. However, only conventions held in even numbered years give consideration to legislation, so the 1957 convention did not.

It elects officers for the coming year.

It brings Rotarians from all the world over together in a spirit of inquiry and friendship.

Canadian Scouts and Guides, both English and French-speaking are invited this Saturday to a picnic at which the hosts will be their Polish counterparts.

The picnic, to be held at North Hatley beginning at two o'clock Saturday afternoon, will be on the premises of Frank Grysowski, Gray, formerly of Sherbrooke. The camping season began July 11 and will continue until August 3. This is the first time such a camp has been held in Canada by the Polish Scouts, Cubs, Guides and Brownies, whose numbers have been swelled since the Red occupation of their homeland.

Today, there are several hundred Polish boys and girls in the movement in Canada and 83 of them are at the camp on Mr. Gray's property.

They come from varying parts of Canada, including Toronto, Hamilton, Montreal, Ottawa and Granby. More are expected before the camp season concludes.

Four more committees are presently under formation at the Sherbrooke Chamber of Commerce it was learned this morning from the club secretary, Guy Dufresne.

Three committees are formed by chairman appointed at the annual general meeting of the Chamber.

Presently under formation are: The industrial development committee headed by Gilbert Young, the industrial advisory committee headed by George H. Carr, the reception committee presided by Roger Larose and the legislation committee under Arcadius Denis, attorney.

The purpose of these committees is to guide the many endeavors of the Chamber of Commerce in all fields of organizations stated by Mr. Dufresne.

COMMENT

by Lubor J. Zink

OTTAWA — For a while after I started writing this column my mail was pretty discouraging. Something like seven or eight out of every ten people who wrote to me heaped abuse on my analyses of domestic and foreign affairs, terming them anything from "reactionary" (because I dared to point out the near monopoly of the so-called left-wingers in our information media, our trade unions, universities, and youth and women's organizations) to "warmongering" (because I criticized the peace-at-any-price advocates). Then the tide started turning — I think the beginning of the shift became clearly apparent sometime after the Cuban missile crisis and the diembaic uproar over the Diefenbaker government's defence policy. By now only about two or three out of every 10 letters I get continue to give me hell.

Overwhelming support

The other 70 to 80 percent of my correspondents not only agree with my views but are either giving me tips on how to improve the effectiveness of the column or want to know what they personally could do to counter the influence of pro-Communist propaganda in our society.

Here are a few typical samples from these two categories of letters, which seem to reflect a considerable body of public opinion.

The first letter I selected for illustrating my contention that the "left-wing" voices which dominate the opinion-molding machinery need not be representative of a large percentage of "ordinary" Canadians came from a Toronto reader who writes:

"I would guess that for some Canadians your well-founded points of view do not penetrate very deeply because of emotional biases which have already become well established, and continue to be supported by influential people.

"For instance, it occurs to me the exaggerated periodical concern over neo-Naziism stems from the fact that Nazism is a simple, understandable, uniformly condemned evil which is a relief from today's more complex problems.

"It serves as a welcome straw man, and many people quite enjoy developing a good healthy hatred and righteous indignation (which also brings back the exciting, shoulder-to-shoulder atmosphere of World War II) as an emotional outlet and a means of adding some meaning to their life.

"Similarly, much of the sympathetic approach in this country to Communism derives, I believe, solely from the emotional fear of American dominance and the need to take an independent stand whatever the merits of the case.

"Could you ask Canadians to ask themselves what would be their posture in regard to Red China and Russia if the U.S. were to pull out of the Far East, out of NATO, slash the defence budget and generally cave in?

"Wouldn't many Canadians, with a feeling of some relief, suddenly change horses, trumpet the Communist threat to the world, and become new champions of free enterprise and democracy?"

An interesting thought. The second letter I selected came from two readers in a small Ontario town. It reads in part:

"We want to thank you for your criticism of our country's wishy-washy, dream world foreign policy. We had begun to believe that no one seemed overly concerned with the possibility that the entire world could find the word freedom erased from common usage because the term had become archaic and meaningless."

"Like most people we know we love our country and would like to see a Canada firmly dedicated to the pursuit of freedom and justice. But what can ordinary Canadians do to wake up our Government and force action based on the actual will of the people?"

"It is such a frustration to watch the Communists and their helpers distort the truth and hear no strong voice denounce Soviet colonialism and Communist-fomented aggressions all over the world. Do we have to have another big war before someone somewhere in the free world has the guts to stand up and label Soviet Russia for the fraud she is?"

"We have been taught that Government is us, the people, but nowhere do we hear satisfaction and agreement with our foreign policy from the other little folk like us.

"What good does a letter of protest to the Prime Minister do, when the only answer received is a printed form letter signed by a secretary saying that your comments have been noted and passed on to the PM, when you know very well this isn't so?"

A callused cheek

"We do not want to continue to be ashamed of our country's unrealistic attitude to the sworn enemies of freedom and turning a cheek slapped so many times it must have calluses. We do not like our children attending universities where they are urged to listen to one-sided 'teach-ins'."

"We do not like the idea of Canadian wheat being offered as a gift to Egypt by Red China while we have our 30 pieces of silver for our abundant produce."

Unusual views? Not by any means. If you feel the same way, let me know. Perhaps enough evidence could be accumulated to shake our politicians' conviction that the "left-wing" chorus they hear is the voice of the majority of the electorate.

Adventures with God

A summer's fallow is needed for the renewing of nations

Nature and humans need times of rest. Even the good, old earth wearies of well-doing, and its power to produce diminishes after prolonged cultivation and fruit bearing.

Centuries before modern agriculturists came on the scene with their theories for land renewal by rest and summer fallow, the Biblical writers were urging the ancient people to let the land rest one year in every seven. Reading the account I was impressed with the idea of summer fallow, not only for the land, but for the inhabitants. There is a therapeutic value in allowing whatever will come up without coaxing it. Let it come to the surface and spend itself, throwing its weight around, for a season.

As the subway train nosed out of the underground into the sunlight one day in May a year ago, the green banks were dotted with thousands of dandelions gone to seed. They looked like little gnomes, each clad in nightcap looking for a place to bed down. I can now report that they found the place, and this year there are millions of those fluffy-headed weeds again looking for a place to bed down. The point is that no one has been ploughing the banks or sowing the good seed which crowds out the obnoxious weeds.

When I finished a busy schedule recently, I literally flopped into the old rocking chair and consoled my weary mind with the promise of summer fallow. After years of unbroken ploughing and sowing the good seed on the mental fields of my mind, my productive powers seemed to be diminishing and producing mediocre copy. But surprisingly, when I stopped trying to be productive, ideas like dandelions, plants, chick weed and crabgrass began to grow and multiply. In a few days my mental field was sprouting ideas like a fallow field sprouts mustard and thistles. They were not all bright ideas which would capture the imagination of a Marshall McLuhan or send a deeply spiritual reader into ecstasies, nor even lead a critical editor to pass them, but they were as fresh as a daisy's first bloom, clear and well formed, and they grew without effort on my part. The human mind, like the tired land, produces better when it is allowed to do what it likes to do when it is ready to do it.

Whittier must have been enjoying a summer fallow period when he wrote the Eternity poem:

JANE SCOTT

Goodness and: "O Sabbath rest by Galilee! O calm of hills above; Where Jesus knelt to share with Thee the silence of eternity; Interpreted by love. Drop Thy still dews of quietness, till all our strivings cease; Take from our souls the strain and stress; And let our ordered life confess The beauty of Thy peace." Hurry, hurry and worry are words descriptive of our go-go generation. The majority of us have been drawn into the turbulent throng and are being carried along like floats and jetsam east into a raging river. We keep grasping for something that will hold us steady until we get our bearings and command of situation. It is a relief for some of us when circumstances beyond our control force us to retire or cut down our activities before nature rebels at our demands on the mind and body.

Did you know that God promised to work a miracle for Israel if they would follow His program? He did. Read about it in Leviticus chapter 25. "When you come into the land which I give you, then shall the land keep a sabbath. Six years thou shalt sow thy field, and six years thou shalt prune thy vineyard, and gather in the fruit, but the seventh year shall be a sabbath of rest unto the land." Vs 1 - 4. Vs 21. "Then I will command my blessing upon you in the sixth year, and it shall bring forth fruit for three years. And ye shall sow the eighth year and eat yet of the old fruit until the ninth year; until her fruits come in ye shall eat of the old store."

Where have we gone wrong that there is so much physical and spiritual famine in the land? Is it not that we have broken the law and defied the Law Giver? We have not observed the seventh day of rest for our bodies and not allowed the land to lie fallow in the seventh year. We have ignored the ancient promise and defied and mocked the God who gave it, and we have turned everyone to his own way. We must blame ourselves, not God, for our predicament in which we find ourselves.

Listen to His word: "For thus saith the Lord God, the Holy one of Israel: In returning and rest shall ye be saved; and in quietness and confidence shall be your strength; and ye would not." The land and the inhabitants need a summer fallow for the renewing of the nations, and He will not revive either until we repent and return unto Him and follow His rules for power and prosperity. When we do, blessing will be released and rest will return unto our souls. (TNS)

English ladies of fortune

Irishmen, great lovers in 1742

LONDON (AP)—As long ago as 1742 Irishmen saw themselves unexcelled as lovers.

This is made clear in a 225-year-old book exhibited, but not for sale, in London during the annual Book Collectors Fair.

The Irish Register of 1742 gives a long list of eligible English women, and in a foreword an unnamed author of the Hibernian Society says: "No nation carries a better face or makes so good a figure as we do."

"Some struggling countrymen have, with a small stock of learning and vigorous constitution, crept into the arms of many a fine woman and affluent fortune."

and baronets, 27 widows of knights, 62 virgins with titles, 106 rich widows without title and 538 plain misses with money.

"We ought, by indefatigable tenderness and care of the English ladies of large fortunes, to redress our Ireland's present calamities by cultivating the valuable talents which nature has kindly provided us with," the author wrote.

"Hundreds of widows and maiden ladies of very great fortune lie unoccupied and neglected."

"For the number of deaths occasioned by the war has greatly enlarged the list of widows and the large body of troops gone abroad has made such a scarcity of gay fellows that I don't doubt if it continues you will have such a variety of things open to you as must unavoidably make our fortunes."

Indian maharajahs facing problems

Indications are that the next groups of people to suffer technological unemployment will be the fabled maharajahs of India, once considered among the wealthiest men in the world with almost absolute power over the subjects within their boundaries.

But within the past quarter-century, they have run upon foul times and apparently their lot is not improving. Their troubles date back to 1947 when India achieved its independence.

The maharajahs were neutralized and their separate kingdoms were formed into a single national entity, in compensation for the loss of their lands and powers some 300 rajahs receiving annual purses which were to be maintained in perpetuity as long as they had heirs.

During the past 20 years, many of the rajahs have gone to work, investing their purses in businesses and other ventures, but many of them found themselves ill-prepared for any productive efforts and have languished as virtual wards of the state.

Now the ruling Congress Party has decided that the time has come for the rajahs to look after themselves and the policy-making body of the party has passed a resolution to abolish their privileges and purses.

The pensions rajahs naturally are indignant over the proposal.

In a letter to the Indian government, the Nizam of Hyderabad expresses limited concern at giving up his now restricted rule over 16,500,000 subjects and 80,000 square miles of his kingdom but becomes really indignant when he discusses the proposal that his $900,000 annual purse be abolished.

It is enough for the maharajahs to organize a union or a protective committee or maybe hire a press agent to counteract the effects of the Congress Party proposal.

Haydn S. Pearson's COUNTRY FLAVOR:

The shagbark, a strong, true tree

The shagbark hickory is a tree of rugged individualism. It may not compete in esthetic qualities with the white pine or the white birch; it may not have the grandeur of a white oak or a patriarchal beech. But the shagbark is a strong and true tree.

Since pioneer days countrymen have used the strong, easily worked wood for axe handles, pick handles, hammers and whiffletrees. It was used for the spokes and rims of wheels and for buggy shafts, throughout the eastern part of the continent the tall tree with curved, shaggy bark plates has served man's needs.

In spring the four to six inch staminate catkins develop as the leaves are growing; the short pistillate catkins that receive pollen development into green fruits. When black frosts exert their pressure in mid-autumn, the thick outer husk splits into four sections and reveals a single sweet nut.

Farm boys and squirrels compete for the nuts. Many a pan of fudge made on a woodburning kitchen stove has been given added flavor by the fruits of this tree. No one can estimate the cords of shagbark burned in cabin fireplaces, in kitchen stoves and parlor heaters. The extensive stands of the shagbark are gone. But occasionally in a woodland or on a rocky pasture hillside one sees the distinctive tree with the scraggly branches and curled bark plates.

Economic Council report limited

The Economic Council's advice to the Government on how the Registrar General's department could be used to protect the interests of consumers provides a cautious guide to obviously long overdue administrative reorganization. Master of Fact

The Aztecs had a primitive cigarette in the form of tobacco stuffed into a hollow reed or cane tube. Other natives of Mexico, Central America and parts of South America crushed tobacco leaves and rolled the shreds in corn husks or other vegetable wrappers. The widespread use of the cigarette in the English-speaking world dates from the end of the Crimean War, which introduced the British soldiery to Turkish cigarettes.

US troops in Vietnam now fight VC guerrilla units

SAIGON (AP)—The majority of American troops in South Vietnam now are fighting local Viet Cong guerrillas rather than major Communist units.

This change in emphasis in the U.S. military effort is becoming apparent throughout the country. It exists despite the conventional North Vietnamese infantry thrusts across the so-called demilitarized zone and the Cambodian border.

What it means is that American troops now are required to shoulder not only the burden of destroying the North Vietnamese battalions and regiments that roam the borders and the Communist war zones but they must now also fight at the grass roots.

They must fight around the villages and hamlets where the enemy is often a farmer by day and a guerrilla by night, where women and children dig mines into roads and lay out booby traps.

VIETNAMESE ROLE

This was a part of the war that the South Vietnamese themselves were expected to handle while the U.S. forces launched campaigns against major enemy forces lurking at the edges of the populated regions.

Of the 25 American infantry regiments now deployed in South Vietnam, 14 are committed to the guerrilla war, getting little public notice because they seldom engage in major battles.

These American "pacification" units are suffering a steady toll of casualties. A brigade of the U.S. Army's 9th Division operating in the northern Mekong Delta has had 150 men killed and 1,000 others wounded since February.

Except at the demilitarized zone, where the North Vietnamese could launch a conventional invasion of the South supported by artillery, the U.S. command now rates the main enemy divisions and regiments less a threat than the guerrillas.

"We keep on destroying them (the guerrillas), yet they always come back," said a senior American officer. "And in the meantime nothing changes in the enemy position amongst the population. That is why we are now at the grass roots."

Background to the news war "is a calculated risk," one senior commander said. The threat of major North Vietnamese units is as real as ever.

Three divisions of enemy troops are known to be in the Communist war zones north of Saigon. The bloody fighting at the demilitarized zone and along the Cambodian border has shown the kind of price that has to be paid to stop them.

American troops have stopped cold every conventional North Vietnamese thrust into the interior, pushing the enemy back across the borders. Limitations placed upon them prevent American field commanders from giving chase across the borders—so eventually the Communists return, and the cycle begins again.

NO IMPACT

The big battles in the Communist war zones and along the borders seem to have had no impact on the virulent guerrilla political and military structure in the populated areas.

At least half the population is under Communist control, yielding taxes and young men to the Viet Cong cause.

American policy now is to move into this area—sort of fending off the major North Vietnamese units with one hand and swiping at the guerrillas with the other.

"The whole thing is so unconventional that we are having a hard time understanding it," a senior American officer said. "The U.S. military organization doesn't fit to this kind of war. Our military terminology doesn't fit it either. It is difficult to paint a word picture of what is happening, even to military men skilled in the business."

One principle of war is that the aim is to destroy the enemy's main ground forces, winning control of the population.

"In Germany we didn't consider the hearts and minds of the people while we fought there," this officer explained. "But in Vietnam this triangle is turned upside down. We destroy divisions a couple of times over and yet the effect on the population is negligible. We still lose them."

CONTROL OF PEOPLE

"The objective in Vietnam is obviously not the destruction of the divisions. It is the control of the people."

U.S. involvement in the grass roots struggle is the third step in an ever-deepening American involvement in the war.

The original purpose of U.S. combat troops was to guard American bases so that the South Vietnamese regular army could get out and fight. The failure of the South Vietnamese led to the commitment of American ground troops directly against the Communists.

Now the United States finds itself fighting a guerrilla war that was meant to be handled by the South Vietnamese paramilitary forces.

American military commanders hope the presence of U.S. troops at the grass-roots level will stimulate the South Vietnamese military.

More South Vietnamese units are working with Americans than in the past, but progress is slow and the prospects for a South Vietnamese takeover of the job are far distant.

Mr. Johnson described de Gaulle as among great world leaders such as Winston Churchill "who have forged the history of the world." He was asked if de Gaulle might perhaps do some forging of Canadian history during the visit.

"Mr. de Gaulle is not coming here to play in Quebec politics," he replied. "The primordial goal of his visit is to repay kindness. We have been received royally in Paris."

Premier Johnson and former premier Jean Lesage have both made official visits to the French capital in trips arising from Quebec's developing relations with France, particularly in the educational and cultural spheres.

PREMIER'S VIEW

Asked whether English Canadians would understand what is expected to be a rip-roaring welcome for de Gaulle, the premier answered:

"It seems that this visit, along with Expo and all that it has done, will show that to the French in Canada is not a negative thing but a very positive contribution to a country like ours."

He said he hopes the visit demonstrates to Quebecers and to Canadians and all North Americans "that there is here a people determined to remain North American, but on the condition they can live and develop as French-speaking."

The visit is by far the most elaborately prepared of all state visits to the provincial capital this Centennial Year. Flags of France and Quebec are popping out all over. The routes to be used by the general are decked with decorations.

It marks Gen. de Gaulle's third visit to Canada as a government official. He came here in July, 1944, as chief of the Free French movement, visited

Dief praised at opening of dam

ELBOW, Sask. (CP)—Tributes to the vision both of his chief political opponent and of a former colleague were paid Friday by Prime Minister Pearson as he dedicated the Gardiner dam on the South Saskatchewan River, 15 miles northwest of here.

He praised Opposition leader John Diefenbaker, who was Prime Minister when agreement for construction of the dam was reached by the federal and Saskatchewan governments in 1958.

and the late Rt. Hon. James G. Gardiner, who urged building of the dam while federal minister of agriculture.

The three-mile-long dam has been named after Mr. Gardiner. The reservoir it creates for irrigation, power and industrial use has been named after Mr. Diefenbaker.

"Without the vision of the two men whose names we are formally enshrining in our history today, this accomplishment would still be no more than hope and aspiration," Mr. Pearson said.

Saskatchewan and therefore the good of Canada.

As such, he said it is a true centennial project which could not have been realized without the constructive co-operation of federal and provincial governments.

Mr. Pearson said that in the beginning the project would irrigate 40,000 acres but this can be extended in time to some 200,000 acres and perhaps more with improvements in irrigation technology.

The first power would be generated in 1968 and when the plant is completed, 800,000,000 kilowatt hours of electricity would be available in an average year—more than one-third of the total power generated by the Saskatchewan Power Corporation in 1963.

Control of the river also would improve the economics of developing hydro-power sites downstream.

Creation of a lake 140 miles long would provide a vast new recreation area within easy reach of half the population of Saskatchewan.

He said the dam and the lake are an example of "co-operative federalism at its best." Through the federal and provincial co-operation all the people of Canada had a part in the construction.

Through the co-operation of the prairie provinces uses of the previous water would be tremendously expanded.

Mr. Pearson said no group of men had played a more essential role than the engineers and staff of the Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Act which has been involved in the conservation and reclamation of land and water resources on the prairies since 1935.

De Gaulle visit seen boost to Quebec

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Daniel Johnson said Friday the state visit of President de Gaulle of France will likely make Canadians more aware of what he called the French "fact" in Canada.

Mr. Johnson held a news conference to discuss the visit of de Gaulle, who arrives at 9 a.m. Sunday to begin a five-day visit to Canada, including stops at Expo 67 in Montreal and Ottawa.

He compared the possible effects of the de Gaulle visit with Expo 67, the world's fair which he said is contributing toward greater awareness of the existence of about 6,000,000 Canadians whose mother tongue is French.

The premier said it was only normal that there have been disagreements at the protocol level between federal and Quebec officials over details of the de Gaulle itinerary.

These disputes "reflect the political situation," he said. "It remains that the international competence of the provinces, particularly the province of Quebec, is in full evolution."

BATTLES RAGE

Among battles between Quebec and Ottawa has been a fight over the first stop in the itinerary. Quebec wanted the general to go to city hall, but finally agreed with federal officials on the Citadel, summer residence of the governor-general.

Mr. Johnson described de Gaulle as among great world leaders such as Winston Churchill "who have forged the history of the world." He was asked if de Gaulle might perhaps do some forging of Canadian history during the visit.

"Mr. de Gaulle is not coming here to play in Quebec politics," he replied. "The primordial goal of his visit is to repay kindness. We have been received royally in Paris."

Ottawa in August, 1945, and visited Quebec, Montreal and Toronto as French president in April 1960.

Switching from French to English, Mr. Johnson said Quebec's interest in developing close ties with France is positive and has been expressed by his English-speaking friends who say: "If you are to remain French I hope you remain a good quality French."

This explained, he added, why Quebec had negotiated educational and cultural agreements with France under an umbrella agreement approved by the French and Canadian governments.

He said the dam and the lake are an example of "co-operative federalism at its best." Through the federal and provincial co-operation all the people of Canada had a part in the construction.

of Queensland.

The sad story of the ultimate fate of the party was fully written in the press at the time. The leader, Hume, and O'Hea, V.C., perished by thirst in Sturt's Desert, south of Cooper's Creek, early in November, 1874. The third member of the party escaped. O'Hea's remains were not discovered for some weeks; but were ultimately found by the blacks not far from those of Hume, and buried by Mr. T. Libery, Manager of Nocatunga Station, Queensland.

Such was the sad end of this brave man, who proved himself to the last a faithful to the charge which he had undertaken, as he had previously been in his country's service.

O'Hea left his VC medal and papers in charge of Henry S. W. Crummer, who has now presented them to the National Gallery in England.

A HERO'S MONUMENT

A monument to the memory of Timothy O'Hea was unveiled on the Town Hall grounds, Aug. 27, 1960, in Danville, during the town's Centennial celebrations. The day was set aside as "Legion Day," by District 8 of the Canadian Legion, Branch 41, Danville, were hosts.

In the dedication service, Mayor Myron E. Chaddock had the e words of praise: "The act of Timothy O'Hea will go down in Canadian history as a living testimony for the present and future generations."

J. H. L. St. Germain, of St. Hyacinthe, and first vice-president, Provincial Command of the Canadian Legion, placed a wreath on the monument during the ceremonies.

Sunday Sermon Subject for July 23, 1967
The Christian Science view that truth must be provable and demonstrable in religion as in mathematics, will be set forth in all Christian Science churches this Sunday, in the reading of the week's Lesson-Sermon on the subject "Truth." Relevant Scripture will include these words of Jesus as recorded by John: "If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed; and ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." Correlative passages from the denominational textbook will include: "Mortals try to believe without understanding Truth; yet God is Truth" ("Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy).

MUSIC ON RECORDS

By JOSEPH and SUSAN WEARING

LEONARD ROSE — Romantic Music for Cello; Leonard Rose, cellist; Samuel Sanders, pianist. (COLUMBIA stereo MS6985)

Before the title of the record can put off anyone looking for more than just after-dinner music let me explain that this is a recital of music from the "Romantic" period and includes some of the most beautiful music in the cello literature — Schubert's "Arpeggione" Sonata in A minor for cello and piano, Chopin's "Introduction and Polonaise Brillante" and Schumann's "Fantasy Pieces", both for cello and piano. Although Leonard Rose is the featured performer the pieces are actually all titled "for cello and piano". That Samuel Sanders' name is at the bottom in small print is doing him a great injustice in his role as Rose's partner. This is a collaboration of two musicians of the highest order. The performances are sensitive and vital, often very moving and, in the Chopin, exhilarating.

SCHUMANN — Carnival: Symphonic Etudes; Gary Graffman, pianist. (COLUMBIA stereo MS 6978)

Gary Graffman is both an exciting pianist and a fine musician. Occasionally he adopts a needlessly fast tempo, robbing the music of some of its character but he never exceeds the bounds of good taste. I found the "Symphonic Etudes" more satisfying on the whole than "Carnaval", which suffered more frequently from haste. The slower, contemplative sections in both pieces are most poetically played, and there is much sparkle and humour in the variations, along with some breathtaking climaxes. Graffman's left hand thunders out most effectively when needed. Technically, there is some echo and pre-echo on both sides in several places. The piano sound, however, comes across very cleanly.

The coin

by
j. e.
charlton, f.r.n.s.

As Canada observes its Centennial of Confederation, it is interesting to note that the hobby of coin collecting in Canada has also entered its second century.

It was in 1862 that the first catalogue of Canadian coins and tokens was published, following an article in the Numismatic Chronicle in London, England. About 85 coins and tokens were described. The same year the Numismatic Society of Montreal was founded and soon afterwards published a 16 page pamphlet describing 72 coins and tokens of Lower Canada or Quebec. In 1866 the name of the society was changed to the Antiquarian and Numismatic Society of Montreal. Two auction sales, the first on record in Canada, were also held the same year.

In 1869, Alfred Sandham published the first standard reference on Canadian numismatics entitled "Coins, Medals and Tokens of the Dominion of Canada". Other publications which followed included those by R. W. McLachlan, Leroux, Courteau, Breton, Less etc. In the old era the emphasis was on tokens and medals and it was not until 1937 that a catalogue by the late Wayne Raymond listed values for types of the Canadian and Newfoundland decimal coins and mintage figures. A second edition in 1947 listed values by date.

Also in 1947, an outstanding article "The Decimal Coinage of Canada and Newfoundland" by Fred Bowman appeared in the March Numismatist and was later reprinted in booklet form.

Due to greatly increased interest in Canadian numismatics, yearly editions of catalogues on Canadian coins have been published since 1952.

Many countries have found it desirable to use colorful paper money and the United States is now considering the advantages of varying colors on notes of different denominations.

Gift for de Gaulle, story of French regime

QUEBEC (CP)—Quebec City officials have whipped up a special gift for French President Charles de Gaulle when he visits the city next week.

The gift which Mayor Gilles Lamontagne feels is especially appropriate for the occasion is a two-volume set of books entitled Quebec Under the French Regime.

The volumes, written by Quebec historian Paul Roy and bound by Jacques Blanchet, are valued at $1,200.

They are bound in dark blue leather covers lined with ornate patterns stitched in 24-carat gold thread and are accompanied by a velvet-bound folder which contains a message from the city.

Toronto yachts invade Expo 67

MONTREAL (CP)—A fleet of 72 yachts of all shapes and sizes moved into the Expo marina Wednesday.

The yachts, all from the Toronto District Yacht Racing Association, came from Lake Ontario for a week-long visit to the fair.

A spokesman for the group said many visitors plan to remain in the area for a few days only before continuing to Quebec City and other ports along the St. Lawrence River. They will return to Expo in time to leave for home Tuesday.

Dutch gift

THE HAGUE (Reuters)—The Dutch government has agreed in principle to give The Netherlands pavilion at Expo 67 to the City of Montreal as a gift, a spokesman for the Dutch Expo Foundation said Wednesday. He said talks on the transfer are being held in Canada. In making the gift Holland would follow the example of the United States, Australia, Belgium, Ethiopia, Iran, Mauritius and Tunisia, he added.

Expo site, peace center?

MONTREAL (CP)—City council has endorsed a suggestion to transform the Expo 67 site, after the fair closes in October, into a centre to promote world peace and the welfare of mankind.

The council unanimously passed a resolution urging that the city's executive committee consider the idea.

No decision had yet been reached on the future use of the site, to be turned over to the city by the Expo corporation. Several countries have donated their national pavilions to Montreal for use after the fair closes.

It has been suggested that "the site remain a public park in perpetuity and a centre for the popularization of human knowledge."

McClelland and Stewart has announced a new project which, they claim, will "change the face of Canadian book publishing". Because you will undoubtedly read, if not buy, at least one of the books in the new series they are publishing, you might like to "get in on the ground floor" by hearing a few of its publication details.

To begin with, the project can be summed up as "a series of heavily illustrated books dealing with all facets of Canadian life".

To quote further from the publishers, this is what you can expect:

"More than a quarter of a million dollars will be spent annually in commissions to writers, artists, illustrators, photographers and designers with beneficial results to the artistic community as a whole. More than 50 titles are now in various stages of planning. The series is an offshoot of the highly successful Canadian Centennial Library which was published as a Centennial project.

Editorial Director of the new division is Pierre Berton. Creative Director is Frank Newfeld. The Editor is Leslie Hannon, former Managing Editor of Maclean's Magazine. The first volume in the new series, THE COLOUR OF CANADA, reproduces in full colour more than 100 photographs by leading Canadian photographers. Text is by Hugh MacLennan.

The second volume is CANADA NORTH by Farley Mowat - a comprehensive look at the Canadian Arctic. The publishers expect sales of each book to exceed 100,000 copies. Future volumes in the series will include HISTORIC HEADLINES, edited by Pierre Berton, which tells the story of Canada's first century through the medium of major news stories. Eleven of Canada's leading writers were commissioned to write the text. In A TREASURY OF CANADIAN HUMOUR, Robert Thomas Allen, one of Canada's leading humorists, has assembled the best humorous prose and drawings of Canada's first century. J.J. Brown, author of two best sellers, START WITH $100, and LIFE INSURANCE: BENEFIT OR FRAUD, outlines in THE INVENTORS the history of Canadian inventiveness and relates how the gimmicks and gadgets of yesterday have become a vital part of our way of living today. CANADA AT WAR by Leslie Hannon tells about the role of Canadian soldiers at home, and in wars in Africa, Europe and the Far East. Stephen Franklin is the author of THE HEROES, a history of Canadian heroes and their great feats, and of how their courage affected the growth of the nation.

In the last volume of the series, William Kihoune's RELIGION IN CANADA tells the story of Canada's spiritual development and recounts the role the Church has played from the first dedicated French missionaries to the contemporary clergy. These books, extensively illustrated in colour, will sell for less than $5.00."

Oxford Press has just announced the publication of A HISTORY OF WAR AND PEACE 1939-1965 by Wilfred Knapp, a book which will have special relevance to today's readers in view of the latest developments in the Middle East. Two chapters, "Palestine, Israel and the Arab States" and "Abadan, Suez, and the Cold War in the Middle East" give an account of the circumstances that have led up to the new outbreak.

All the photographs — and they are numerous — are authentic culled from the files of the Glenbow Historic Foundation, the Calgary Herald, the Royal Ontario Museum, The Royal Canadian Mounted Police, the Dominion Archives of the Department of National Defence, and the Alberta. These photographs contribute much to making this story of Calgary, old and new, both more fascinating and more satisfactory.

In his foreword the author states: "History is the dra-

Black power used in a different sense

"KEEP THE FAITH, BABY!" by Adam Clayton Powell; Mussion Book Co.; Pp.: 293.

"Black Power" is an expression which arouses militancy and anger and fear in many a white heart. To most of us, it is synonymous with black violence and revolution.

But the Reverend Mr. Powell has used the expression in a different sense, to describe the spiritual power to overcome handicaps, to win over the hostile by peaceful means, to cultivate the virtues of faith, perseverance and forgiveness, until at last the black man obtains justice from his white fellow-Americans.

The author emphasizes the senselessness of the destruction wrought by some negroes. Their localized riots and outbreaks do more physical hurt to blacks than to whites, and also damage the entire negro cause. The frustrated blacks, who have real reason to feel hatred and despair, must find the road to freedom through faith in the eventual triumph of God's justice. Then may a land be built where all can live in brotherhood, freedom and peace.

Mr. Powell's Biblical scholarship is as vast as the viewpoint he presents. Though he reveals the cracks in the logic of those negroes who desire revenge on the oppressors, he also castigates the deadly hypocrisy and unrighteous indifference of many whites in their dealings with the poor, the helpless and the friendless of all races.

There is considerable discrepancy between Adam Clayton Powell's public image and the sound and moral ideas expressed in his book. The latter seems too sincere to have been written with tongue in cheek, and the question therefore arises: "Was his image tarnished deliberately by those who resent negroes in high places?"

It is impossible to answer this without full knowledge of the facts, which have doubtless been coloured beyond recognition. But regardless of whether Mr. Powell is as "black" as he is painted, his sane and lucid book bears the imprint of an intelligent, ethical personality, sensitively aware of all aspects of the negro problem.

A born leader, he is deeply spiritual as well. If his expression of Christian hope for a happy solution to his people's troubles reflects his true self, Mr. Powell certainly deserves a better press and a more favorable hearing. Even if it does not, his vital message is thought-provoking and encouraging.

The Jews portrayed without masochism

THE CHOSEN by Chaim Potok; Simon and Schuster; 248 pages.

Too many recognized Jewish authors write about their ethnic group with a kind of introverted masochism, portraying even in the midst of fine, graphic description, the worst aspects of their own people so that others get a completely false impression of the Jew.

It is, therefore, a particular pleasure to review Chaim Potok's THE CHOSEN for he writes of his people with compassion and understanding that is very moving and that presents Jewish people as they really are — brilliant, ordinary, broad-minded, bigoted, generous, proud, tender — as human beings.

The story is laid in the 1940's in the Williamsburg neighborhood of Brooklyn; where two boys, Danny Saunders and Reuven Maltz, have lived two blocks apart for each of their fifteen years without meeting. They could have as well lived two oceans apart, for Reuven is an Orthodox Jew who lives in the culturally free environment created by his writer-professor father, while Danny lives in the culturally narrow confines of the Hasids who believe that they and they alone are truly religious, that all other Jews are little better than infidels.

Because Danny's father is a rabbi, an inherited position through the centuries, Danny is expected to become a rabbi when his father dies. Danny is brilliant and rebellious, driven by a strong sense of duty to follow his father though he hates the idea and wants to be a psychologist.

His rebellion shows itself in a violent, defensive animosity which breaks out with drastic results when he and Reuven finally meet at an inter-yeshiva (parochial school) soft-ball game.

Hatred breeds hatred but mutual forgiveness brings its own rewards is a truism that Mr. Potok shows in the relationship that develops between Danny and Reuven and their fathers — the one father tender and broadminded, the other autocratic and bigoted. Having taught in a Hasidic yeshiva for five years I already was familiar with the attitudes of the Hasids and with many of the expressions used by the boys in THE CHOSEN. I was already conversant with the history of the group but I had not the compassionate understanding I now think I have. THE CHOSEN is a book I recommend to anyone who wants not only a fine story of people but a better knowledge of religious groups who think differently because circumstances have driven them to do so in order to exist.

KAROTON by George Faludy; Ryerson Press; 297 pages; $5.50.

George Faludy's first published novel, as dull as its title and jacket imply, would have best been left unwritten.

Set in Alexandria in the fourth century, the book describes the struggling of Christian sects against each other and against a hostile government. The characters are remarkable only by their strange names such as Astyanax, Eudoxos, and have a strange habit of speaking 20th Century slang. Only very occasionally is a sense of the times captured.

Approximately the first half of the story consists of Karoton's moral struggles with himself. He repeatedly falls into the arms of different women, after which he experiences tremendous guilt due to his religious teachings. He then seriously considers being castrated to solve his moral dilemma. About ten pages are devoted to this idea.

Finding it difficult to take the book seriously at this point, the reader continues on to description of Karoton's plans to become a martyr. Whatever he decided about being castrated, the book does let the reader know in any detail.

The remainder of the tale concentrates on the establishment of Christianity as the state religion, struggles between two sects, and Karoton's involvement in them.

Writes book

EDMONTON (CP)—Premier Manning says he has written a small book advocating a political realignment in federal politics but denied published reports that he, in effect, renounces Social Credit and throws his support behind the Progressive Conservative party.

The 100-page book, Political Realignment, a Challenge to Thoughtful Canadians, is expected to be ready for the presses early next month.

In an interview, Premier Manning said the book simply stresses what he has been saying for two years, that there is a desperate need in Canada for realignment of political thinking.

He was asked to comment on a published report, by Peter Newman of Ottawa, saying that in the book he renounces Social Credit, supports the Conservatives and that he is understood to have accepted an invitation to address a thinkers' conference planned by the Conservatives in Quebec City, Aug. 7-10.

Collecting in the Townships

The printing of stamps by three companies in Great Britain for over 225 countries and postal administrations earned over $4,000,000 last year. The printing in Great Britain of stamps for overseas administrations started in 1847, only a few years after that country produced the first adhesive stamp.

Three firms presently producing stamps exported 18,000 million stamps last year. It is interesting to note that a further total of 2,840,000 current British stamps were exported by the Post Office Philatelic Bureau in Edinburgh.

The first adhesive stamp was printed by Perkins Bacon and Co. This was the famous Penny Black and they obtained the order for the printing of the Pacific Steam Navigation Co. (Peru) in 1847. With the introduction of surface printed stamps in 1855 the De La Rue Company entered the market.

The British companies have produced some beautiful stamps through the years and are pioneers in the field. The business of printing and selling stamps is certainly a large and prosperous area today.

The problem of selling a stamp collection are many and varied. The average collector is disappointed many times with the offer made by a dealer and in some instances this is justified. You will find that most dealers are not particularly interested in general collections which contain common stamps and there is a reason for this, they are able to purchase from wholesale companies collections made up in books of a thousand each and running up to 20,000 different.

These books contain the stamps mounted in Scott catalogue order. The prices asked for these is quite low and the dealer does not have to remove the stamps as he would have to do with a collector made lot. It is suggested that if you have stamps in your stock sheets in a neat and orderly manner, write the catalogue numbers either by them or underneath. You could leave the common stamps in the album.

You should also remember that used albums have little or no value. For some unknown reason collectors like purchasing second hand albums, and in the case of the medium and low priced world wide albums you will find that in most instances these are gift items.

Collections of Canadian, United States stamps, British Colonies, or any other country or topical collection, could be left in the album. A factor that every dealer has to consider is the ability to sell the stamps he purchases in a reasonable length of time. This means that a dealer who operates a store or mail order business dealing in general stamps will have trouble selling a specialized collection of Nepal.

Collections formed a number of years ago are always wanted simply because they will contain stamps that are difficult to find today although they may be of low value. A well arranged collection will always sell better than a collection that is mounted with little or no care. The discovery of a stamp with a thin spot will immediately place the dealer on his guard and he will then want to check all the higher priced items. If you have an extensive collection you should have an inventory placed in the front of each album.

While it is seldom done, and no one knows why, you should advise your wife or husband of the disposition to be made of your collection.

Cowansville W.I. reviews history arranges reunion and anniversary

COWANSVILLE — The Women's Institute held its July meeting at the home of Mrs. Jenne at Seiby Lake with five guests attending.

To mark the country's 100th birthday Miss MacIntosh presented a graphic review of the 33 Fathers of Confederation, the entry of various provinces into the Dominion of Canada.

A letter was read from Mr. Glen Brown, M.L.A. for Bromo, containing excerpts from a debate by the provincial government. A resolution was passed that the Cowansville Branch preferred to remain a part of the Department of Agriculture, rather than that of Education. The Secretary was instructed to send a copy of the resolution to the county president.

Mrs. Lewis, convener of agriculture, spoke on the growing of radishes. She also read an amusing paragraph entitled, "The Gardener's Prayer."

Mrs. Bibby, for education, described the opening ceremonies of the Home for Retired Teachers, a former residence in Cowansville, recently acquired by the P.A.P.R.T. and adapted as a Home.

Miss Symons, for health, spoke on summer itches caused by mosquitoes, poison ivy, and recommended rubbing alcohol as a cure.

After consideration of various handicraft projects, it was decided to make a hooked rug of Centennial design. Mrs. Haines generously offered to make the rug. Tickets on the rug will be sold later.

A white elephant table yielded $7.15 and a drawing, won by Mrs. Bibby, netted $2.40.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Jenne and Mrs. Phelps, and a social hour enjoyed. The next meeting will be held on Sept. 5, with the Misses Hopkins and Mrs. Miner as hostesses. The theme will be Experiences at Expo.

Institute tours Clairol Plant at Knowlton

WARDEN — As convener of Home Economics of the Waterloo — Warden W.I. Mrs. May Durrell had arranged for the members to be shown through the Clairol Plant at Knowlton on July 5. Fourteen members and two guests enjoyed seeing the process through which these products pass in the making.

Later the group met at the home of Mrs. L. Maynes, of Waterloo, for a short business meeting. A financial report, given by Mrs. Sicard, showed a balance of $210.68.

Centennial pins were given to all present. After some discussion, it was decided to have a table of home cooking for sale during Waterloo Centennial Week. It is to be held in conjunction with the A.C.W. tea, if possible.

One member paid in to the birthday box, Pennies for Friendship, were collected and the parcel for Care was won by Mrs. Maynes.

Refreshments were served by hostesses, Mrs. M. Durrell, Mrs. A. Bazinet, and Mrs. Sicard.

The next meeting will be held Aug. 2 with program planned by the convener of welfare and health, Mrs. Ramsay.

Bury W.I. hears report on bus trip to Expo

BURY — The meeting of the Women's Institute was held in the Legion Hut on July 6. In the absence of the president, the meeting was in charge of the second vice-president, Mrs. Bruce Peleman. The treasurer's report was given by Mrs. E. Morrison.

Reports were given by several convention and plants are being sent to two sick members.

Mrs. R. Aulis reported on the bus trip to Expo, sponsored by the branch. Another trip may be planned for a later date.

The program was in charge of the citizenship convener, Mrs. L. McGee, who had asked Mrs. W. Coates, to give a talk on her recent trip to Paris.

Refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. P. Kirkpatrick and Mrs. E. Berwick.

The next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Gordon Dougherty with Mrs. A. Olson and Mrs. G. Olson as joint hostesses.

St. Johnsbury couple observes silver wedding

SEYMOUR LAKE — Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Miller, St. Johnsbury, and their daughter, Merlin, are spending the summer at their summer home at Seymour Lake, Morgan.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller recently observed their silver wedding anniversary and were guests of honor at a luncheon held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Spooner, Greenfield, Mass., where the Millers resided for several years.

The couple received the good wishes of numerous friends there and from their daughter, Merlin, who accompanied them to Greenfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller were presented with a money tree set in an unique replica of the patio at their summer home in Vermont. They also received several other gifts and congratulatory cards.

Later, on returning home, Mr. and Mrs. Miller entertained neighbors at the lake for afternoon tea, which included the serving of a layer of the beautiful anniversary cake. Mrs. Miller's mother, Mrs. Golda Standish, Rock Island, was there for the tea. Mrs. Miller was the former Sybil Standish, of Rock Island.

BULWER

Mr. and Mrs. Morris Smith and family have returned from Cowansville where Mr. Smith has been employed.

Mr. L. L. Lowd has returned from the Sherbrooke Hospital where he underwent surgery.

The July meeting of the Bulwer U.C.W. was held July 14 at the home of Mrs. Stuart Merrill. The business meeting, chaired by the president, Mrs. Wolters, opened with a short worship period. Final plans were made for serving a strawberry supper and Sept. 9 was set as the date of the annual roast turkey supper. Refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. K. Johnston, Mrs. R. Drake and Mrs. Merrill.

MAPLE HILL —

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Nugent were in Howick recently to attend the wedding of Mr. Geo. Anderson and Miss Margaret McKell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Math McKell, in Howick United Church. The following day they were present at a reunion of the Whiteford and McNeil families held at the Arthur Henderson home in Upper Ormstown.

COOKSHIRE —

Mrs. H. V. Burns has returned from a short holiday with Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Scott and family in Grand Mere, and with Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Kerr in Dartmouth, N.S. Mr. and Mrs. Kerr and daughter, Diann, Dartmouth, N.S., are spending a holiday with Mrs. Burns.

Don't let your small boy drive the tractor

Should a boy be allowed to drive a tractor? This is a problem which has been bothering farm safety experts for some time.

A recent report from the National Safety Council shows that each year more fatal tractor accidents occur in the 10-14 age group than in any other age category.

"This seems to point up the fact that young people who don't know how to handle tractors are being allowed to operate them," the Council said.

Safety Training
"If it is absolutely necessary for a youth to drive a tractor, he should be thoroughly trained in all phases of tractor safety before he takes over the wheel," the Council warned.

A teenager—or anyone who operates a tractor for that matter—should be aware of the need for regular safety inspections, should know the proper way to handle a tractor in any situation or on any terrain and should use extreme caution at all times," the Council added.

Ignorance and Chances
The Council said carelessness and ignorance are responsible for most tractor accidents.

"Too many chances are taken," it added.

The Council said one of the biggest chances is taken when more than one person rides a tractor.

"This is just inviting trouble," too often, someone hitches a ride. And that can lead to tragedy. Tractors are made for one person to operate—no more. But

Children Killed Riding

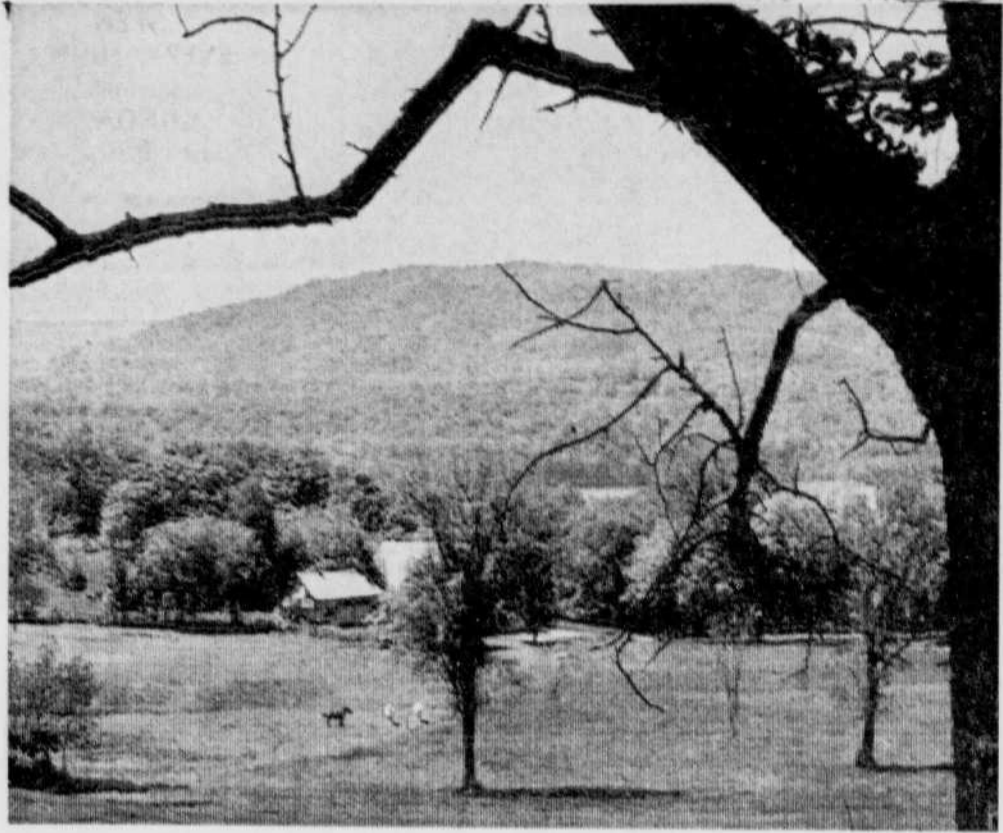

The Council said the majority of children in the 4-9 year old group killed in tractor accidents last year were riding a tractor. Not operating one—just along for the ride.

A farmer once told a Council official, "I would rather hear a child cry because he was refused a tractor ride, than to hear him cry because he got hurt riding one."

In general, accidents with farm machinery are decreasing, the Council's report showed, but tractor accidents are on the upswing.

"It is alarming," the Council said.

"And the only way farm persons can lick the rising tractor accident rate is to use every safety precaution available."

Monday marks start of Farm Safety Week

Monday marks the beginning of Farm Safety Week in the Eastern Townships and area. Now is the time to take a good look and make sure your farm is safe for you and your family.

Accidents are the principal cause of death of children. In one year 11,121 children between the ages of 1 - 14 years died as a result of accidents.

Are your children safe from this threat? Are your home and farm safe place for your children? They can be, if you take the time to make them safe places.

You may say, "But that's impossible — accidents just happen."

Yes, accidents do happen. But there is a reason for every one of them.

Accidents don't just happen they are caused.

Accept this fact and accept your responsibility to prevent accidents.

Find out why accidents happen, how they can be prevented. Then you begin to build a safer life for your family.

First, consider your children.

Does your toddler go unwatched as he explores his constantly expanding world?

He needs your constant attention except when he is in a playpen or fenced area where his activities are limited. Exploring is important for him, but you need to be sure he isn't left free to explore animals pens, the farm pond or the highway. Small children need to be kept away from electricity, fires, ladders and other similar hazards. Children too young to protect themselves need to be protected by you.

Older children demand more freedom, but they need your help in recognizing dangers.

Do you know where they spend their time? Are they swimming in a creek filled with

THINK AND ACT SAFELY

Hunting and fishing in the E. T.

By NORM NICHOLL

With the hot humid weather of the past week it might have been noted by some anglers that around the shores of some lakes the number of dead fish (perch) seems to have increased. A recent bulletin from the Vermont Fish and Game Dept., might have some of the answers as to why this occurs, and a solution to overcome the situation if it should strike other species.

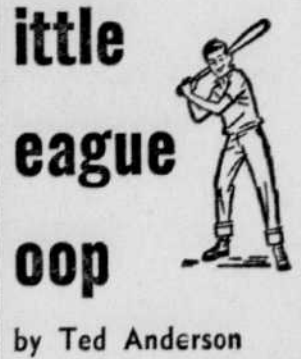

Lake Megantic and Memphremagog seem to be vying for honors as to which lake will produce the larger fish this season. Grey trout have been reported being caught at Megantic ranging from 15 to 22 pounds while as shown below another fish over 14 pounds was hauled from Memphremagog.

Don't think that you're going to pull one in without doing some real fishing, the fish are there, but according to the fellows fishing there it can be pretty dull until they decide to bite. The picture shows Marius Pouliot of Magog with his 14 lb. 3 oz. brown trout which he took last Saturday while trolling near the Hermitage Club on Lake Memphremagog.

The league executive should have the play-off schedule in their hands any day now. The league umpires had a lot of fun playing the North Hatley - Waterville Legion last Friday night and the return game will be played in Lennoxville next Friday evening July 28th. No doubt the legion boys will be out for revenge.

Starring this week Randy Warner, Yankees; Marc Aubrey and Timmy Aubrey, Red Sox.

The list of infractions prosecuted by the Protection Service shows that they handled some 209 cases and netted $5,897.00 for the coffers.

little league oop by Ted Anderson

It's been a week of surprises in the Sher-Lenn Little League this past week. The Yankees are up to their old tricks again acting as spoilers.

Red Sox and Senators battled to a one all tie and the Red Sox won a close 8-7 win over the Orioles. Twins took a leaf from the Yankees book and hit the White Sox with a 4-1 loss.

It is very noticeable in games played in the past week how evident it is that the players have improved so much in their knowledge of the game of baseball. The close scores in most of the games played proves this again it must go to the good work of the coaches.

Coach Dave Perkins will name his All Star team this week end and the youngsters selected will be bucking down to hard work for the next two weeks as the Regional playoffs should get underway at the end of this month.

Canadian swimming team in "best form ever" for Games

WINNIPEG (CP)—Heat, muscle twinges and a Latin-American bongo beat are keeping Canada's Pan-American Games swimmers awake nights—and they're thriving on it.

Coaches say Ralph Hutton of Ocean Falls, B.C., who won eight medals in the 1966 British Empire Games in Jamaica, is in his best form ever.

Marilyn Corson, the Parry Sound, Ont., butterfly threat who lives in Fort Lauderdale, Fla., said: "Some of the girls—me for one—are sleeping on towels on the floor because it's cooler."

Miss Tanner injured a shoulder muscle playing tennis prior to the Canadian swimming championships here recently and aggravated it playing volleyball, but says Eynon, it has responded so well that he has entered her for eight events.

In addition to the 100- and 200-metre butterfly and backstroke and the 400-metre individual medley and two relays, Mighty Mouse will swim in the 100-metre freestyle.

Miss Warren, also 14, was born in Cornwall, Eng., and lives in Vancouver. "Tanner should get a first in the 100- and 200-metre backstroke or butterfly, but Corson should be right up there in the butterfly—she beat Elaine in the nationals," Eynon said.

"In the 800-metre freestyle it should be Coughlan or Jeanne Warren."

more height and thus a longer arc in his swing. However, no matter how narrow his stance, he will not be able to utilize an upright swing because of the general shortness of his arms.

A very tall player should widen his stance at address so that his base will remain solid and able to handle his tall structure. Also, because of his lengthy arms, he will have to use an extremely upright swing.

At address, heavy golfers should stand farther from the ball so that their arms get away from their bodies to provide more room to work. And the tall and thin can stand closer to the ball for the desired upright or vertical plane.

Hall of Famer Jimmy Foxx dies

MIAMI, Fla. (AP)—Jimmy Foxx, Hall of Fame first baseman of the famed Philadelphia Athletics "million dollar infield," died Friday. He was 59.

Sheriff's detective Walter Seward said Foxx's death was apparently from natural causes.

Foxx, who lived in Miami, was at the home of his brother, Sam, Friday evening when he became ill. Seward said the brother told him Foxx had a heart condition.

The brilliant career of Jimmy Foxx was capped with a total of 534 home runs. Foxx was among the top home run hitters of all time.

NICKLAUS BLASTS FROM TRAP

Tommy Aaron pots nine birdies for record 65 to slip into PGA lead

DENVER, Colo. (AP)—Title-starved Tommy Aaron, without a victory in seven years as a pro, exploded nine birdies—eight of them in the space of 10 holes—and somersaulted over a 29-year-old assistant teaching pro from Seattle, tied at 139.

The borrowed, white-headed putter that carried him to the U.S. Open crown last month, deserted Nicklaus, whose opening 67 had put him only a shot back of Hill's pace setting 66.

Jack three-putted the first hole from 15 feet, missed a number of other putts for pars and birdies and finished with a three-over-par 75 for 142.

That put him seven strokes back of the lead going into the final two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

Arnold Palmer, who is bidding for the PGA crown he's never won, remained in contention with a 71 for 141, but he wasn't a happy man.

"The course lost all its character today," he complained. "It was too dry out there. The ball is going so far, you can't control it. I was hitting three-woods off the tee to keep from going through the fairways and I still was going too far."

Sikes almost collapsed at the 13th hole, and emergency oxygen was rushed to him. He recovered enough to birdie the 14th and 17th and finished with a 70, but he had to receive additional treatment in the men's locker room.

Doug Sanders had to knock in a hole-in-one with a four-iron on the 194-yard 16th and finished with 143.

Odds for a playoff berth appear threatening as Als play three big games, meet Braves twice

When theorizing about the Sherbrooke Alouettes, all previous laws and conclusions must be discarded, for the Als set their own laws. Therefore, to theorize about their chances to make the league play offs would be futile, for Guy St. Vincent's squad are as fickle and unpredictable as the weather.

So we'll present the facts and allow the local fans to theorize for themselves. The Alouettes are currently eight and a half games off the pace set by co-leaders Lachine, Plessisville and Granby. But the top spot is mathematically out of reach. So the Als look at Quebec and Thetford, each tied at five and a half games behind the leaders. Now, if Sherbrooke should win its next four games and both Thetford and Quebec lose the same amount, we'd probably be watching playoffs on Park Avenue.

And the Als have about twenty games to play, give or take a few because of the confusion in the schedule due to postponed games. Sound pretty good? Well, in your deductions, you must consider that pulling out of the cellar has been the major task of the Als since the second game of the season and they haven't succeeded so far. So maybe the club should start out on a new tack before the close of the season, like playing under a full moon, or setting up a ouija board in the dugout. When you have a poor harvest, you have to start clutching at straws.

The only thing we can say for sure that the Als are scheduled to play three big games this weekend. Tonight, the tough Lachine Mets come to the Park Avenue Stadium to meet the last-place Sherbrooke squad. George Birth may be on the mound and he's the man to watch on the Alouette team now.

Tomorrow afternoon, the Als take on another high-grade team as they start off at 1:30 against the Plessisville Braves. This, you will remember, is the game which offers the special $2.00 entry fee for the entire family.

Chuvало's injury may end his boxing career

TORONTO (CP)—Heavyweight boxer George Chuvало is in hospital with a fractured bone under his right eye and his boxing career possibly at an end.

The Toronto fighter suffered the injury in the fourth and final round of his fight with Joe Frazier at New York's Madison Square Garden Wednesday.

Doctors will operate today to remove bone fragments and replace them with a mesh.

It will be three weeks before the results of the operation are known and another six to eight weeks before doctors decide whether Chuvало can fight again, manager Irv Ungerman said Friday.

He's had double vision ever since the fight," Ungerman said. "It's the same type of injury Ernie Terrell suffered in his fight with Cassius Clay."

Chuvало will be in hospital for a week, Ungerman said. The New York fight was stopped by the referee when Frazier hit Chuvало in the eye after 16 seconds of the fourth round and Chuvало was unable to continue.

Ungerman said Friday he was disturbed at reports Chuvало gave up. "Obviously they didn't realize how badly George was hurt because he would never quit. In fact, it might have been an unintentional butt that caused the injury. George was cut above the forehead early in the first round and everyone knows that doesn't come from a glove."

Veale finds rhythm, allows three hits as Pirates blasts Houston 9-1

Bob Veale, Pittsburgh's enigmatic pitching ace, Friday night fired a three-hitter for his first complete game since April 28 as the Pirates defeated Houston Astros 9-1.

"I had rhythm tonight for a change," said the 6-foot-6 fireballer, who had failed to finish in 15 straight starts before taking the Astros. "If you got good rhythm, you got good control. Without rhythm, you have nothing."

While Veale called the tune against Houston, Chicago Subbedged San Francisco Giants 5-4 in 12 innings and crept within one game of the National League leading St. Louis Cardinals, who bowed to Atlanta Braves 4-1. Philadelphia Phillies overtook Cincinnati Reds 5-3 and Los Angeles Dodgers blanked New York Mets 3-0 in other games.

Veale's route going victory boosted his season record to 11-4.

Veale did everything the right way until the ninth inning, when an unearned run cost him a shutout. Maury Willis booted Jim Wynn's grounder and Rusty Staub, who had two of the Astros' hits, followed with a double before Wynn scored on an infield out.

Bills Mazerowski drilled three Pirate hits, scored twice and drove in a run; Manny Mota delivered two runs with a homer and triple, and Roberto Clemente, back in the lineup after missing four games with a sore knee, smashed a two-run triple to key Pittsburgh's 15-hit attack.

The Cubs closed in on first place again by snapping a 4-4 tie in the 12th on a walk, a sacrifice, an intentional pass and Willie McCovey's two-base throwing error. The Giants' first baseman threw wildly past second on an attempted force, allowing Al Spangler to score the winning run.

Willie Mays sent the Giants ahead 4-3 with a sacrifice fly in the seventh, but the Cubs tied it in the bottom of the inning on Ernie Banks' RBI single.
