COUGHS, SORE THROAT, INFLUENZA, WHOOPING COUGH, CROUP, BRONCHITIS, ASTHMA, and every affection of the THROAT, LUNGS and CHEST, are speedily and permanently cured by the use of DR. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY, which does not dry up a cough and leave the cause behind, but loosens it, cleanses the lungs and allays irritation, thus removing the cause of the complaint. CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED by a timely resort to this standard remedy, as is proved by hundreds of testimonials it has received. The genuine is signed "I. Butts" on the wrapper. SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, PROPRIETORS, BOSTON, MASS. Sold by dealers generally.

TO THE AFFLICTED.—Homœopathic Homœopastic, Electro-Medical, and an appropriate and systematized Hygenic Combination all properly adapted to the treatment and cure of those mental and physical derangements that so continuously and persistently flit their shadowy reflections from the dark back-ground of past indiscretions, filling the mind with evil forebodings, dispelling all hopes of future happiness. The names of the troubles caused by this self-begotten weakness is legion; such as nervous debility, nervous irritability, depression of spirits, loss of memory, loss of confidence, palpitation of the heart, neuralgia, rheumatism, epilepsy, hysteria, spinal disease, disease of the liver, disease of the urinary organs, imbecility, insanity, in a word, a general moral and physical disturbance of all the functions. Dr. Utley has spent much time and money to perfect his system for the cure of the above mentioned troubles, and an extensive practice of over fourteen years has given him a great deal of practical experience; during that time he has treated thousands from all parts of the world and in all the walks in life, and none that ever injured them and nearly all can say that he has cured them. Patients may be treated by letter, no matter how great the distance, but when it is possible Dr. Utly prefers to see his patients at his office, 191 St. James street, Mechanics' Bank Chambers. Office hours from 9 to 11 a.m., 2 to 4 and 7 to 9 p.m. Address M. H. Utley, M.D., Montreal, P.Q., Canada. 141

GEMS OF THOUGHT.

The greatest truths are the simplest; and so are the greatest men.

Be industrious in business, intrepid in dangers, vigorous in acting, prudent in concerting, and prompt in executing.

No woman can be beautiful by the force of features alone, any more than she can be witty only by the help of speech.

We should educate the whole man—the body, the head, the heart; the body to act, the head to think, and the heart to feel.

If you believe a thing impossible, your despondency shall make it so; but he that perseveres shall overcome all difficulties.

If men would but hate themselves as they do their neighbors, it would be a good step toward loving their neighbors as they do themselves.

Many have been ruined by their fortunes; many have escaped ruin by the want of fortune. To obtain it, the great have become little, and the little great.

The world is governed by three things—wisdom, authority, and appearance. Wisdom is for thoughtful people, authority for rough people, and appearance for superficial people.

Knowledge cannot be acquired without pains and application. It is troublesome, and like digging for deep waters; but when once you come to the spring, they rise up and meet you.

Cultivate consideration for the feelings of other people, if you would never have your own injured. Those who complain most of ill-usage are the ones who abuse themselves and others oftenest.

Revenge is a momentary triumph, of which the satisfaction dies at once, and is succeeded by remorse; whereas forgiveness, which is the noblest of all revenge, entails a perpetual pleasure.

Take life in your hands, and, for weal or for woe, go on with it, fearing nothing, hoping everything, leading even its forlorn hopes with a soldier's spirit to the very end. And you shall have a brighter present, and richer draughts as you go on, and fewer dregs when the cup is emptied.

To feel a conviction of immortality we must live for it. Let any one firmly believe that the soul is permanent, and live from that belief, and soon existence will seem permanent, too; the world becomes the veil of a brighter glory that lies behind it, and the unbelief is lifted off, since the mind, conscious of its own noted being, does not wait for immortality, "but is passed from death unto life."

It really matters little where or when a man may have been born; he is certain to rise up to his own level in every state of society which the world has seen; not perhaps in name, but in fact. Provided only he possesses the rudiments of education, he will come out of any dark and fiery trial whatsoever into the pure daylight of heaven the first time he has a chance if there is anything in him; and we all have chances enough and to spare—some that we spoil, some that we lose, some that we throw away disdainfully.

SCIENCE.

In photographing the sun, the intensity of the light renders it necessary that the exposure of the plate should be extremely brief; and we learn from a lecture by Professor S. P. Langley that the time usually occupied is only 1-150th of a second.

The influence of imagination in disease is strikingly illustrated by some experiments recently tried with magnets in France. A nervous patient was thrown into convulsions simply by being shown a piece of unmagnitized iron which he believed to be a magnet. Another became greatly excited when a magnet was placed in his hands, but was not at all affected by several large and powerful magnets hidden in a chair which he occupied. In this case the sight of the magnet appeared to be the sole disturbing cause.

The hypodermic injection of chloral has lately been accomplished with favorable results. A report of the experiment states that an esthesia was produced by injecting twenty-two grammes of a solution of chloral,—one part in three of water,—by a capillary puncture, into one of the radia veins. At the end of ten minutes, an esthesia was complete,—the patient falling into a profound sleep, which continued for twenty minutes, during which a painful operation was successfully performed. The patient was roused by the passage of a rapidly-intermitting current of electricity between the left side of the back and the epigastrium.

The muscles of the human jaw exert a force of 534 lbs. The quantity of pure water which blood contains in its natural state is very great, it amounts to almost seven-eighths. Kiel estimates the surface of the lungs at 150 square feet, or ten times that of the external body. A man is taller in the morning than at night to the extent of half an inch or more, owing to the relaxation of the cartilages. There is iron enough in the blood of forty-two men to make a ploughshare of twenty-four pounds or thereabouts. The human brain is the twenty-eighth part of the body, but in the horse the brain is not more than the four-hundredth.

In his address on mechanical science, at Belfast, Professor James Thompson emphasized the importance of providing for the escape of gas fumes from the apartments in which we live by chimneys or flues, in like manner as we have chimneys for our ordinary fires. "We have got, since the early part of the present century, the benefit of the light of gas in our apartments," he said; "but we allow the pernicious products of combustion to gather in large quantities in the air we have to breathe; and in winter time we live with our heads in heated and vitiated air, while our feet are ventilated with a current of fresh cold air, gliding along the floor toward the fire-place to be drawn uselessly up the chimney."

An extraordinary account is given in a French agricultural journal, to the effect that straw forms admirable lightning conductors. It had been observed that straw had the property of discharging Leyden jars without spark or explosion, and some one in the neighborhood had the idea of constructing straw lightning conductors, which were formed by fastening a wisp or rope of straw to a deal stick by means of brass wire, and capping the conductor with a copper point. It is asserted that the experiment has been tried on a large scale around Tarbes, eighteen communes having been provided with such straw conductors, only one being erected for every sixty arpents, or 750 acres, and that the whole neighborhood has thus been preserved from the effects not only of lightning, but of hail also.

An ingeniously contrived instrument has been introduced in Germany for testing color-blindness. It consists of a rotating apparatus which moves a disc whose centre is a circle, one-half black the other white; outside of this is a ring half red and half green, then another ring of violet and red, then the outside ring of violet and green. When rapidly rotated the centre appears to be colored grey—that is, black and white mixed. To a green-blind person the middle ring will appear grey, that being the result of a mixture of violet and red. The outer ring will appear grey to the red-blind patient, and the inner grey to the violet blind. It is stated that by the use of this very simple instrument, the adaptation of which to its purpose seems complete, a large number of patients may be simultaneously examined for one or more kinds of color blindness.

The velocity of thought is commonly regarded as unsurpassed in nature, a notion which is well illustrated by the phrase "quick as thought," so frequently used to express the utmost conceivable rapidity of action. But Mr. George F. Rodwell, in an extremely suggestive paper on the perception of the invisible, lately printed in Macmillan's Magazine, points out that "quick as thought" is not nearly as "quick as lightning;" for while, according to Sir Charles Wheatstone, a flash of lightning lasts only the one-thousandth part of a second, the experiments of Donders show that it takes about one-twenty-sixth part of a second to think. We believe, however, that the experiments made by Professor Ogden N. Rood, of Columbia College, during a thunder-storm in August, 1870, showed that the duration of the flashes of lightning then seen was twice as great as Sir Charles Wheatstone's result—or, in round numbers, the five-hundredth part of a second.

The fall of the leaf is invariably associated with the lowering of the tone of public health, and an increase in mortality. Has the fall of the leaf anything to do with it? There can be no doubt that it has. When the leaves fall we usually have warm, wet weather, and the ground that is strewn with leaves becomes a nursery of morbid influences. In places where the fallen leaves are much crushed and stirred by feet and wheels the evil is aggravated, and of course on heavy lands the evil is of a more decisive nature than on absorbing sand, or chalk or limestone. Where deciduous trees abound on clay lands, all the much-frequented roadways should be kept as clean as possible during the time of the fall of the leaf. The delightful odor that the fallen leaves diffuse in woods suggests their harmlessness, but on roads and walks where the leaves are hourly crushed and the dropping rain helps to make a paste of them, they are, without doubt, pestiferous nuisances, and parochial authorities and private proprietors should cheerfully combine to mitigate the severity of the mischief they are capable of effecting.—The Gardeners' Magazine.

The amount of liquid matter which passes through the microscopical tubes of the skin in twenty-four hours, in any adult person of sound health, is about sixteen fluid ounces, or one pint. One ounce of the sixteen is solid matter, made up of organic and inorganic substance, which, if allowed to remain in the system for a space of time, would cause death. The rest is water. Besides the water and solid matter, a large amount of carbonic acid, a gaseous body, passes through the tubes; so we cannot fail to understand that they are active workers, and also we cannot fail to see the importance of keeping them in perfect working order, removing obstructions by frequent application of water, or by some other means. Suppose we obstruct the functions of the skin perfectly by varnishing a person completely with a compound, impervious to moisture. How long will he live? Not over six hours. The experiment was once tried on a child in Florence. Pope Leo the Tenth, on the occasion of his accession to the papal chair, wished to have a living figure to represent the Golden Age, and so he gilded a poor child over with varnish and gold leaf. The child died in a few hours. If the fir of a rabbit or the skin of a pig be covered with a solution of India rubber in naphtha, the animal ceases to breathe in two hours.

TRAVEL, ADVENTURE AND NATIONAL CUSTOMS.

CHINESE IDEAS OF DEATH.—A wealthy man condemned to death will arrange with his jailor to buy him a substitute for a certain sum of money to be spent upon the poor wretch's interment and preservation of his body. Should he have parents, so much is usually paid to them in compensation for their son's life. Chinamen invariably help to support their parents; filial respect and devotion is the great Chinese virtue and religious precept, in which they rarely fail. Regarding death as inevitable, he makes the best of a bad bargain, and cunningly and comically gets paid for dying. The wholesale destruction of life in this country is greatly the result of indifference. Hence the massacre of Europeans, so terrible to us, seems to them a matter of little moment, and they cannot comprehend why we should make such a fuss about it. They regard our indignant protestation very much as we might treat our irate neighbor whose dog we had shot.

RAIN ONCE IN FIVE YEARS.—The tract of country known as the State Range Valley is probably one of the most curious that Southern California can boast of. It is there the immense deposits of borax were discovered something like a year ago; and at the time the whole lower or central part of that basin was covered with a white deposit, breaking away in some places in large soda reefs, in others resembling the waves of the ocean, and in still others stretching out for miles in one unbroken level, from which the sun reflected its rays with a glare almost unendurable. But one of the most remarkable features in connection with this district was the absence of rain or moisture; the days were ever sunny and hot, the nights without dew, and generally warm. For more than five years, it is said by those who claim to know, there has been no rain there, until some three months since the spell was broken. Suddenly, and with scarce any warning, rain commenced to fall, and unceasingly, unaccompanied by wind, but a thorough drenching rain. For two or three days it remained pleasant, when suddenly a water-spout was seen wending its way through the valley. It came in a zig-zag course across the upper end of the lake, striking the range of hills on the east side and coursing rapidly along them. The ravines and gorges were soon filled with water, which poured from them in fearful volume and spread itself out upon the bottom. In a short time it was over, and denizens of the place now look for another dry season of five years.

HIGH LIVING.—The highest spot on the globe inhabited by human beings is the Buddhist cloister of Hanle, in Thibet, where twenty-one priests live at an altitude of 16,000 feet. The Monks of St. Bernard, whose monastery is 8,117 feet high, are obliged to descend frequently to the valleys below in order to obtain relief from the asthma induced by the rarity of the atmosphere about their mountain-eyrie. At the end of ten years' service in the monastery, they are compelled to change their exalted abode for a permanent residence at the ordinary level. When the brothers Schlaginsweit explored the glaciers of the Ibi-Gamin, in Thibet, they once encamped at 21,000 feet,—the highest altitude at which a European ever passed the night. At the top of Mt. Blanc, 15,781 feet above the level of the sea, Prof. Tyndall spent a night, and with less discomfort than his guide, who found it very unpleasant. In July, 1872, Mr. Glaisher and Mr. Coxwell ascended in a balloon to the enormous height of 38,000 feet. Before starting, Mr. Glaisher's pulse beat 76 strokes per minute, and Mr. Coxwell's 74. At 17,000 feet, Mr. Glaisher's pulse had increased to 84, and Mr. Coxwell's to 100. At 18,000 feet, the hands and lips of the aeronauts turned quite blue. At 29,000 feet, Mr. Glaisher could hear his heart beat, and his breathing became oppressed. At 29,000 feet, he became senseless; notwithstanding which he ascended still another 8,000 feet, when his hands were paralyzed, and he had to open the valve with his teeth. In the Alps, at the height of 13,000 feet, climbers suffer from the rarity of the air; yet, in the Andes, persons can dwell, as at Potosi, at a height of from 13,000 to 15,000 feet, without inconvenience.

WOLVES IN THE ROCKY MOUNTAINS.—Although wolves are unknown in the thickly settled regions of the United States, they are still found in the wilder northern portion of the country. Richardson thus mentions them:—"Their footmarks may be seen by the side of every stream, and a traveller can rarely pass a night in these wilds without hearing them howling around him. They are very numerous on the sandy plains which, lying to the east of the Rocky Mountains, extend from the sources of the Peace and Saskatchewan rivers towards the Missouri. There bands of them hang on the skirts of the bison herds, and prey on the sick and straggling calves. They do not, under ordinary circumstances, venture to attack the full-grown animal, for the hunters informed me that they often see wolves walking through a herd of bulls without exciting the least alarm; and the marksmen, when they crawl towards a buffalo for the purpose of shooting it, occasionally wear a cap with two ears, in imitation of the head of a wolf, knowing from experience that they will be suffered to approach nearer in that guise. On the Barren Grounds through which the Coppermine River flows, I had more than once an opportunity of seeing a single wolf in close pursuit of a reindeer; and I witnessed a chase on Point Lake when covered with ice, which terminated in a fine buck reindeer being overtaken by a large white wolf, and disabled by a bite in the flank. An Indian, who was concealed on the borders of the lake, ran in and cut the deer's throat with his knife; the wolf at once relinquished his prey, and sneaked off. In the chase the poor deer urged its flight by great bounds, which for a time exceeded the speed of the wolf; but it stopped so frequently to gaze on its relentless enemy, that the latter, toiling on at a long gallop, with its tongue lolling out of its mouth, gradually came up. After a hasty look, the deer redoubled its efforts to escape; but, either exhausted by fatigue or enervated by fear, it became, just before it was overtaken, scarcely able to keep its feet."

NATURAL HISTORY.

FLIGHT OF BIRDS.—Wilds ducks are estimated to fly ninety miles an hour; swallows fly rather faster, and the swift flies above two hundred miles in an hour.

INSECTS.—The voracity of the larvæ of insects is so great, that Linnæus has asserted that the progeny of three female flies—each gives birth to 20,000 young, and a third generation is produced in a few days—would eat the carcase of a horse with greater speed than a lion. When first hatched, the larva of the silkworm weighs 1-100th of a grain; previous to its assuming the pupa state it weighs 95 grains, an increase of 9,500 times its original weight. The full-grown caterpillar of the goat-moth weighs as much as 72,000 fresh born ones. If this proportion existed in the human race, and a fresh born baby weighed 10 lb., its mother would weigh 160 tons, 3 cwt., 2 qr., 27 lb.

THE ELEPHANT.—The proboscis of the elephant is the most remarkable feature in his formation, and is capable of being put to a great variety of uses. Through it the animal breathes, drinks, and smells. It is so pliant that it can be made to move in any direction, and so strong that it is impossible to take anything away from its grasp. It is hollow from end to end, and divided throughout with a partition. At the very point of it, just above the nostrils, the skin is extended into the shape of a finger about five inches long. By means of this the animal is able to take a pin from the ground, untie the knots of a rope, and unlock a door. Œlian relates even a more wonderful use to which he saw it put. "I have seen," he says, "an elephant writing Latin characters on a board in a very orderly manner, his keeper only showing him the figure of each letter."

WONDER OF THE SPIDER'S THREAD.—That any creature could be found to fabricate a net, not less ingenious than that of the fisherman, for the capture of its prey; that it should fix it in the right place, and then patiently await the result, is a proceeding so strange, that if we did not see it done daily before our eyes by the common house-spider and garden-spider, it would seem wonderful. But how much is our wonder increased when we think of the complex fabric of each single thread, and then of the mathematical precision and rapidity with which, in certain cases, the net itself is contructed; and to add to all this, as an example of the wonders which the most common things exhibit when carefully examined, the net of the garden-spider consists of two distinct kinds of silk. The threads forming the concentric circles are composed of a silk much more elastic than that of the rays, and are studded over with minute globules of a viscid gum, sufficiently adhesive to retain any unwary fly which comes in contact with it. A net of average dimensions is estimated by Mr. Blackwall to contain 87,360 of these globules, and a large net of fourteen or sixteen inches in diameter, 120,000; and yet such a net will be completed by one species in about forty minutes, on an average, if no interruption occurs."

WAR HORSES.—When horses are hit in battle, they stop, tremble in every muscle, and groan deeply, while their eyes show wild astonishment. During the battle of Waterloo, some of the horses, as they lay on the ground, having recovered from the first agony of their wounds, fell to eating the grass about them; thus surrounding themselves with a circle of bare ground, the limited extent of which showed their weakness. Others of these interesting animals were observed quietly grazing in the middle of the field, between the two hostile lines, their riders having been shot off their backs; while the balls that flew over their heads, and the tumult behind, and before, and around them, caused no interruption to the usual instincts of their nature. It was also observed that when a charge of cavalry went past, near to any of the stray horses already mentioned, they would set off, form themselves in the rear of their mounted companions, and though without riders, gallop strenuously along with the rest, not stopping or flinching when the fatal shock with the enemy took place. At the battle of the Kirk, in 1745, Major Macdonald, having unhorsed an English officer, took possession of his horse, which was very beautiful, and immediately mounted it. When the English cavalry fled, the horse ran away with its captor, notwithstanding all his efforts to restrain him; nor did it stop until it was at the head of the regiment, of which, apparently, its master was the commander. The melancholy and, at the same time, ludicrous figure which Macdonald presented when he thus saw himself the victim of his ambition to possess a fine horse, which ultimately cost him his life upon the scaffold, may be easily conceived.

AGRICULTURAL.

Kindness Does It.

An experienced horse trainer in California thus writes us:—

In reply to your letter, I would say that the education of my colts has in a great measure been accomplished by kind treatment. The horse is so constituted that by proper management and kind treatment his confidence and affection may be acquired to such a degree that his will becomes completely absorbed in that of his friend and trainer. I will say, further, that the horse naturally possesses a far greater degree of intelligence than he has ever been given credit for.

Stables.

It is a lamentable fact that so little attention is paid to the condition of the buildings in which we keep our cows. Ventilation is something that is frequently entirely overlooked, not so much, I hope, from the inattention and negligence of the owner, as from his ignorance of its necessity. Warm, ill ventilated stables will save food, but at the expense of the health of the cow and the quality of the butter. Better the cold, open barn, than the close, poorly ventilated stable; but there is no need of either. A little study and application will generally enable us to remedy both.

Let the Horse Roll.

Horses that are kept in the stable during summer should be given daily the luxury of a roll on the earth. Rolling is the means given by nature for the animal to rid itself of vermin and skin diseases, and it tends to make the animal healthy. Some owners object to allowing a horse to roll on the bare earth, because it gets dirt into the hair and makes extra work to keep the animal clean, but the extra work pays, if rightly understood. We allow our horse to roll in the dirt when he is not moist with perspiration, and then stand an hour or two with his coat full of dust before being cleaned up.—Ohio Farmer.

Timely Thought.

It is too late to prepare for the rigors of winter when cold weather is upon us. The first storm of the season is most injurious, and the one from the effects of which stock that may be exposed to it does not readily recover. It is always harder to regain what is lost than to keep up a steady progress; and, if we would not lose ground by and by, it is necessary to look ahead. Sheds and buildings should be put into good order, ready for occupation when the first rain-storm arrives. In October this may be looked for, and at that time the feed has fallen off, and the system is already weakening and cannot stand the shock without a serious check. It is now that this event should be foreseen and provided for, lest it come unawares and the stock, most especially the young stock, should suffer at a time when it needs all the strength extra care can supply.

Harness-Chafing.

Harnesses that are much used generally become rough on the inside surface, particularly at the edges, with a collection of moisture, perspiration, dust and dandruff, which, if not removed, may very soon roughen up and wear off the hair and chafe the skin, making it very sore. Although it may not have the appearance of a fresh gall, it is very tender and painful, and may be found to be composed of a number of small, watery pimples. Great care should be taken, in currying, not to come across these sores.

"Prevention of cruelty" being our motto, we should suggest that the harness be kept soft and free from this accumulation of dirt, by scraping and washing often, and by shifting the harness so that it will not come in contact with these tender spots.—Exchange.

To Oil Harness.

Fill a large sized boiler or sugar kettle with water, say within two or three inches of the top. The water must be hot, just so that it will not scald the leather, in an operation similar to dipping candles. The oil or composition is put into the water, which of course will remain on top; you then double up the lines, leaving a short strip to hold by while you dip them into the vessel and out again; all the other parts to be served in like manner. Now it will be seen that the leather passes through the grease before it comes in contact with the water, which has no other effect than warming the leather just sufficient to absorb the grease or oil. A rainy day is just as good as any, as you are only required to dip them in and hang them up. One man by this process can oil four sets of harness before four men could oil one set of lines. Try it once.

Why Not Cultivate Speed in Oxen.

Our agricultural fairs have been very generally turned into mere horse-races, in the rage for fast roadsters. Speed in horseflesh is, to a large extent, the mania of the day. Good draft horses—sound, steady workers, of fine form and powers of endurance—have had to stand aside and let the trotters occupy public attention. But we have scarcely ever seen the importance of cultivating quickness of movement in working oxen alluded to. And yet there are farmers who will follow a yoke of oxen around a field, plowing or drawing loads at a snail's pace, now and then applying the gad with a shout of "go along," but making scarcely more than half a dozen rounds of a ten-acre lot in the course of a day. Oxen are proverbially slow, but they are capable of improvement in this respect as well as other animals, and more attention ought to be paid to cultivating in them a quick step. In Oriental countries, especially in India, they are used extensively for the road, in place of horses, and they may often be seen trotting off at a spanking gait. We do not need trotting oxen, but a fast walk is of great importance. Doubling their speed would double their value as working cattle. Why may not our agricultural societies offer prizes for the fastest walking oxen as well as for the fastest horses? It would take some years to rear a race of good walkers, but it is worth an effort, and worthy of encouragement from our agricultural societies. One of the strongest objections to the use of oxen on the farm is that they are slow. This objection can be and ought to be removed.

Farm Improvement.

What farmer does not wish his farm to be a little better for cultivation next year than this? Money expended in the improvement of lands hitherto unproductive, such as pulling stumps, removing rocks from the track of the plow, reaper, and mower, draining wet places, etc., does not pay down, but it is nevertheless sometimes the most profitable work a farmer does. Few farms in our country are yet so far improved that they cannot be made better with decided profit.

We heartily wish that our agricultural press would say more about enlarging farms within their own boundaries, resolutely attacking the unproductive parts of farms, whether large or small.

Our unproductive farm lands are to be made productive sooner or later. The change is coming. There is no doubt of this. It is a question of time only. We do not suppose that all our improvable land can be improved and made productive at once. The change is to be made by installments. Let us pay one installment, large or small, according to ability, this autumn.

A considerable part of the improvements will be in draining stagnant water from fields and meadows, and in some cases from pastures, especially where the water from a pasture can be turned upon a meadow naturally too dry. By land improvements the health of a farm and its neighborhood is improved. Striking examples of this are seen in England, Ireland, Scotland, and other parts of Europe. An unhealthy region is made healthy, and a fairly healthy region yet more healthy, and thus human life is prolonged and usefulness increased.—John A. Nash, in Independent.

THE CHICAGO EXPOSITION FAILURE.

[From the Times.]

The second Exposition closes on Saturday evening next, after a season of nearly five weeks. Though it has averaged successful, it has by no means aggregated the profit of last year. The first Exposition, to be sure, was kept open considerably longer than this will have been, but there are many natural reasons why this should have proved much more profitable than its predecessor. Last year's Exposition was an affair of ultra haste in its preliminary arrangements. Scarcely three months were consumed in erecting the building and filling it with goods. A national financial panic broke upon the country just as the Exposition opened. The managers of the Exposition were novices at the business. These were ugly drawbacks, all of them, yet the affair was prosperous beyond the hopes of the most sanguine of its projectors.

The present Exposition had none of these hindrances. There was nearly an entire year in which to prepare for it. The managers were presumably better informed as to the requisites for success. The showing of miscellaneous goods was as large as last year. The art gallery was filled with the noblest display of paintings ever brought together in America. A handsome floral department was added, and some other special features were introduced. There was no financial panic to pinch the purses of the public and preach economy to all the land. Yet the Exposition of 1873 was successful and an unalloyed pleasure, while the Exposition of 1874 has dragged in interest and been uncertain in patronage. There is an indefinite sense of dissatisfaction on the part of the public—a very definite sense of the same thing on the part of a large number of the exhibitors.

There seems to have been too much of the grandmother element on the part of the managers. Stupidity in advertising; indecision in all great matters and petty tyranny in all small ones; lameness and apprehension in everything involving outlay, and a general lack of enterprise, are among the follies charged. There has, also, been a conspicuous want of unity among the managers. Diverse private interests would not reconcile themselves to the common good. There were too many of the managers with individual axes to grind. A sample of the prevalent stupidity was the case of the president. In private meetings of the board he would growl because catchpenny devices for slightly increasing the value of his stock were not unanimously adopted. Afterward he would get into a disgraceful public jangle with some honest door-keeper, who would not admit his highness without a ticket, and would try to have the faithful fellow discharged merely for having performed his duty. Small bigotry in refusing to keep the Exposition open on Sunday has been another of the many causes of discontent.

PRESIDENT GRANT IN THE SOUTH-WEST.

[New Orleans Picayune, 17th.]

We regret that President Grant could not make it convenient to accept the hospitalities of this city, tendered by our Mayor on his return from his visit to Texas. Besides the satisfaction which we hoped would be imparted by the courteous greeting that would have been extended him, the President would have enjoyed opportunities of enlightening his mind on subjects that deeply concern our welfare and his own fame as a just Chief Magistrate and patriot. He would have seen how grievously he has been deceived and misled by the baleful counsels of his partisan Attorney-General in regard to the temper and motives of the great majority of our population and the terrible wrong which had been done through the interference which he has permitted of the Federal Government in our domestic affairs. He would have detected the real cause of our troubles in the character of the men who have swayed the political destinies of this State for the last six years through the delusion and credulity of the immense negro vote—the men who have filled the offices in order to enrich themselves by plundering the industrious people. He would, too, have discovered the unwise and disastrous policy, in a partisan as well as in a political sense, of the course of the Federal Government in giving its support and encouragement to such a party. These important truths would have been impressed on the mind of the President, and their value and influence in controlling his future action on the Louisiana case would have rendered his visit to this city the most instructive and beneficial which he could make to any portion of the great Republic over which he presides.

DISRAELI'S PARTY DISCIPLINE.

[London (September 27) correspondence of Liverpool Post.]

The admirable discipline maintained in the conservative camp is illustrated by the withdrawal of Mr. Powell, one of the conservative candidates for Cambridgeshire. Four or five days ago Mr. Powell pledged himself to go to the poll against all comers; but a little reflection and a little judicious advice from headquarters quickly dissolved his resolution. Mr. Powell was led to understand that unless he yielded to the advice given him by his party leaders the countenance of the conservatives would be drawn from him in any future election contest. It became evident that Mr. Rodwell was the favorite with the farmers, and Mr. Powell has only by a timely retreat avoided a severe defeat at the polls.

CHINA wanted to buy the "Iron Duke," British man-of-war, now in the Chinese seas, but John Bull refused to sell.

AND now the French clerical party is forced to reflect that Thiers, bad as he was, kept the Orenoque at Civita Vecchia.

PRINCE LOUIS OF HESSE lately saved a lady's life at Blankenberg by swimming to her rescue, as she had inadvertently gone beyond her depth.

MULTUM IN PARVO.—The New York Herald pithily says :—

"Faith in Southern outrages is the test of republicanism in these days. If one does not believe that all the white men are shooting all the darkies the republicans of the pure blood say he is a democrat. This largely increases the number of the democrats."

The infamous Coolie Trade has received its death blow in the Republic of Peru by a treaty with China, in which peace and fraternity and the universal rights of man are the principal provisions. Chinese emigrants in Peru are to be treated with the same deference and justice as native citizens. It is to be hoped that this good example will be followed by other Spanish American nations and colonies.

A Good Suggestion.

In an article in the Fortnightly Review by Mr. Chamberlain, a prominent Radical, on the probable disestablishment of the English Church, it is remarked that: "The National Church cannot claim the rights and immunities of a private corporation; and whenever the State resigns its pretensions to dictate the doctrines and prescribe the constitution of the Establishment, it must reserve its control of property which belongs to the whole nation, and not to a particular sect. When this time arrives it may be doubted if any higher or nobler application can be found of the vast revenues which will remain for disposal than the creation of a great system of national, free, and unsectarian education, whereby may be tardily repaired the wrong done to the poor by the almost univeral perversion of educational endowments, originally intended for the benefit of the whole nation, but now claimed for a sect or monopolised by the upper and middle classes—a system by which all the children of the nation may be fitted for their duties as citizens of a great State, and qualified to take an intelligent part in its legislation, and in determining its policy, and which, by thus striking a deadly blow against ignorance, in temperance, pauperism, and crime, would go far to remove the greatest enemies with which religion has still to contend in this country."

Undue Zeal, &c.

The result of the Montreal West election case will, perhaps, surprise a certain number of quiet, confiding folks, who have been in the habit of believing that one political party is totally corrupt and the other perfectly pure, but to the average citizen the denouement will have very little astonishing about it. Despite their fine name and high-toned claims, "Reformers" are pretty well known to be much like other men, afflicted with the same ills, and subject to the same passions. 'Tis true, the leading organs of the party invent soft-sounding names for "Reform" offences, but the simple interpretation of "undue zeal" and "strenuous endeavors to elevate the standard of public morality" is "bribery and corruption." That's all.

But while, as regards indulgence in a pernicious habit, there is evidently little to choose between the two parties, it will have struck every impartial observer, that to the common offence the "Reformers" have added the hateful one of hypocrisy. It is now quite plain that most if not all of the gains of the present Ministerial party at the last elections were made through a vehement denunciation of an offence of which the denouncers were hourly guilty! That is one of the revelations of the election trials worth remembering. Those trials have revealed so much that it is much to be regretted that a general election was not long ago resolved upon. Many Liberal-Conservative papers called for such a purge, but the suggestion met with no favor from the party which might have been expected, from its professions, to be eager for an unequivocal expression of public opinion at the polls. However, as it is, a good many elections are already voided and a great many more may certainly be counted upon. Then with the new election law we may expect that there will be little or no show of "undue zeal" in the future, because it will be unlikely to be profitable. Then it is possible something may arise at the next session of Parliament to compel an appeal to the country. The Fish-Brown Treaty may do it.

The Canada Pacific Railway.

Mr. William Wilson, of Victoria, Vancouver's Island, has written a pamphlet complaining bitterly of the repudiation by the Dominion Government of the terms of union with British Columbia, so far as regards the most important condition, the transcontinental railway. "What," he asks, "has become of that blaze of national life which lighted up Confederation two or three years ago, when the Government, the press and the people were vibrating with the belief of a greatness to come, and were confident in their ability to work out that greatness?" Confederation he considers to have been a glorious achievement, but Confederation without a great transcontinental railway, uniting the Provinces of the Confederation, he regards as a mere deceitful mirage, a name, a word, without any correspondence in fact, the central Parliament at Ottawa notwithstanding. But, though he writes with the natural feelings of a British Columbian, disappointed in the realization of a great scheme, beneficial especially to his own country, it is not merely as a British Columbian that he takes his stand. He maintains that it is essential for the welfare and progress of the Dominion that her own west territory should be opened up, for "Westward the course of Empire wends its way." Figures are brought forward to show that the progress of Canada was one of remarkable rapidity until the northern stream of immigration flowing westward finding itself barred in its course by Huron and a rocky region, passed south of them to join a still larger stream, which was spreading itself over Michigan, Illinois, Iowa and other portions of the vast Western prairie. No further rapid development of British North America remained possible so long as a fur-trading company owned and kept closed the North-west territory, and so long as the Colonies continued separate in the position of rivals, jealous of one another's progress and prosperity. Hence the statesmanlike notion, applauded by the Imperial Government, of consolidating the whole of British America from the Atlantic to the Pacific, and making possible for the Dominion a brilliant future by opening out to it the Great West. To effect this consolidation practically two railroads were necessary, the Intercolonial and the Canadian Pacific. The former undertaking is approaching completion, the latter is delegated to a distant future, "so distant," says our author, "that it appears more like a phantom of the imagination than a practical work, necessary for the welfare of the Dominion." Hereupon he breaks into a tirade not very flattering to ourselves. This is what he says: "It appears as if the people of Canada were a dollar and cent people, and it were idle to talk to them of the terms of union made with British Columbia. Probably to speak of moral obligations is to render one's self unintelligible. It may be that the conscience of a new-born nation, like that of an individual, has only an embryo existence in infancy. Material motives, which are secondary in the civilized countries of Europe, are primary in the Dominion of to-day, and govern its actions and opinions."

As we repudiate moral grounds our author proceeds to argue with us on the lower level of expediency, and enquires why a scheme which two years ago was considered both practicable and necessary is now looked upon as impossible and ruinous. It is granted on all hands that what we needed was a western territory, inasmuch as without it over half a million of people were lost to British America. Well, Confederation having given this western territory, what are we to do with it? The self-evident answer is Open it up to settlement, and the only way to do this which is practicable in these days is by railroads. Then follow sarcastic remarks that Mr. Mackenzie allows all this in theory, yet in practice he remains the apostle of waggon roads and water stretches. Against all that Mr. Mackenzie has advanced about the utterly impracticable nature of Sir John A. Macdonald's scheme, and its large expenditure, Mr. Wilson is ready with a reply on the authority of Mr. Sandford Fleming's official report of the character of the country through which, if built, the railroad would run. It is impossible for us in our limited space to give even a digest of these contradictory assertions, but Mr. Wilson concludes his argument with the assuring statement that neither Ontario nor Quebec need be heavily taxed in carrying out the original scheme, and that it is the duty of the Govenment to frame a policy which will effectually develope the resources of the country without perpetrating an injustice upon any part of it, and that a Government which cannot do this is unworthy to live.

"It remains to be seen whether the intelligence of the people of the Dominion, rising to the height of its duty and its mission, will shake itself free from the fetters of party and prove itself equal to working out the great scheme of Confederation and building up a united and prosperous Dominion; or whether British Columbia, despairing of justice from a Ministry whose professions have been hypocritical, designs treacherous, and actions dishonorable, shall at the next session, in a constitutional way, by a vote of the Provincial Legislature, rid herself of the bond of Union which Ottawa has broken, turning to her Imperial Mother, whose honor and glory it is to shield and protect even the weakest of her children from violence and injustice."

This is fine glowing language, but we trust that the people of British Columbia will look at things in a practical light and not insist upon impossibilities. The Pacific railroad will be built when it can be built, though not with the speed at first contemplated. If the Dominion Government honestly fulfils its promises to the best of its power, claiming merely that indulgence which must be granted to all great enterprises in this world of uncertainties and imperfect knowledge, British Columbia has no legitimate cause of complaint. That through communication with that Province will be completed by joint rail and water routes Mr. Mackenzie has pledged his word, and that this is only preparatory, if practicable, to an entire route by rail. That is no foolish proverb of the old Romans "Festina lente," and we hope that notwithstanding the eloquence of Mr. Wilson's pamphlet it will be taken into due consideration by our brethren dwelling on the shores of the placid Pacific.

ROUND TOWN.

—The annual McGill College sports take place to-day upon the College grounds.

—Mgr. Fabre, who is making his pastoral visits in the Diocese of Montreal, on Tuesday last confirmed 143 children at St. Hyacinthe.

—The first assembly of the season, under the auspices of the Victoria Silver Cornet Band, will be held this evening in Mr Fryer's elegant rooms, No. 910 St. Catherine street.

—A fire broke out last evening in a bedroom in the residence of Mr. G. Bowen, No. 176½ St. Denis street. An alarm was sounded from box 26, but the flames were extinguished, prior to the arrival of the reels, with a few buckets of water.

—The members of the Bar of this section hold their semi-annual meeting on the 2nd prox.

—Prof. Fowler lectures this evening in the Mechanics' Hall upon "Intellect, Memory, and their Culture." His lecture to-morrow evening is intended only for gentlemen.

—The international foot-ball match between representative teams of McGill and Harvard Universities will take place to-morrow afternoon on the grounds of the Montreal Cricket Club, St. Catherine st., at 2:30 o'clock.

—Alfred Cadieux, a young man, by trade a butcher, living on Jacques Cartier street, was arrested last evening by Detectives Bouchard and Arcand, on suspicion of having stolen $200 from M. Duplessis.

—Arrivals:—SS. "Vicksburg," Liverpool, general; barque "Cotopaxi," London, general. Cleared: Barque "Amelia," Quebec, ballast; SS. "Canadian," Glasgow, general; SS. "Commodore," Harbor Grace, Nfld., general: barque "Northern Chief," Liverpool, phosphate and staves.

—The Directors of the Bank of Montreal give notice that a dividend of seven per cent. has been declared upon the paid-up stock for the current half year. This announcement, in lieu of the usual six per cent. and two per cent. bonus, has caused a decline in the quotations. The Directors' intention is to increase the rest.

—A concert will be given in aid of the St. George's Society in the Mechanics' Hall, on the 24th prox.; on this occasion Miss Rosey Mayall, a lady from England, possessing a fine soprano voice, will make her first appearance before a Montreal audience, and an address will be delivered by the Rev. Mr. Stevenson.

—The Nouveau Monde, in a somewhat violent article with reference to the Lepine trial, desires to know whether, between a duty, of which a sound policy claims a prompt fulfilment, and an act of cowardice unworthy of committal, the latter alternative will be chosen; and calls upon Hon Messrs Fournier, Geoffrion and Letellier to reply. It predicts that hatred, disunion and discord will be produced by a conviction, and advises that if a scaffold is absolutely desired, that it be erected on the boundaries of Ontario and Quebec—as a symbol of mutual affection—when the nature of this act of "atrocious and disloyal vengeance," only inspired by hatred of their race and religion, will be better understood.

—The talented lecturer, Rev. W. B. Affleck, again appeared before a large and appreciateve audience last night in Association Hall. Having sung one of his soul-stirring melodies, he at once addressed himself to his subject, viz., "Home, Happiness, Honour, Hope and Heaven," which he treated very ably. At the close of his deeply interesting address, a large number of persons took the pledge of the St. George's Temperance Society. From our columns it will be seen that Mr. Affleck will give his farewell lecture in the same Hall to-night, subject—"How to Order the Child." A large attendance is expected, as the subject matter of this discourse will undoubtedly be replete with valuable instruction and advice.

SUDDEN DEATH.

We regret to record the sudden death of Mr. William Robinson, late Major in the Prince of Wales Rifles. He was in the employ of Mr. A. A. Stevenson as clerk, and seemed quite well up to eight last night, when he was at the office. He left with Mr. Stevenson and a friend and soon complained of feeling sick. He was placed in a cab and taken home. There he said he would take a powder; he took it and fell back dead. Deceased had complained of hoarseness, and last night spit some blood. An inquest will be held.

LA PERICHOLE.

This lively opera was given last night in a style that would have delighted the author. From beginning to end "the fun raged fast and furious," Mlle. Aimee being particularly at home. M. Dubouchet made an excellent Viceroy, playing the funny, foolish old doating lover to perfection. The other characters were well sustained. As on the previous evening, there was a large and fashionable audience, and nearly every song was vociferously encored. To-night, "La Fille de Madame Angot."

A WORD TO THE LADIES.

The great majority of the fair sex occupying seats in the stalls at the Theatre Royal conform with the common-sense rule of society, which prohibits hats or bonnets; but some do not, and it is painfully evident that those who persist in wearing their street head-gear are those who indulge in two-storey arrangements, topped by a great bunch of flowers or feathers, thereby effectually obstructing the view of those behind. In Paris a manager cured this annoying breach of etiquette by publishing a card requesting all good-looking ladies to remove their bonnets. Everybody could see after that. "'Nuf sed."

THE SHANDON.

The fine iron clipper-ship "Shandon," recently wrecked upon the Island of Anticosti, left Glasgow for this port on the 8th ultimo, with a cargo principally composed of Scotch refined sugar and pig iron. She was of 730 tons register, was built eighteen years ago, and for the past seventeen years made regularly three trips a season. The "Shandon" is owned by Messrs. W. Kidston & Sons, of Glasgow; was consigned to Messrs. Frothingham & Workman, of this city, and the cargo, which will likely prove a total loss, is largely, if not wholly, insured in New York Companies. The captain and a portion of the crew have remained with the wreck.

ARREST AND CONVICTION.

A few days ago we gave an account of a murderous assault on Mr. Tetu, notary, of Bonsecours, in the County of Shefford, by two men, Frost and Fyfield. On Thursday last Mr. Bombardin, constable, of Waterloo, very cleverly captured the second prisoner, Fyfield, at Emmerson's Junction, just as he was leaving by train for the "land of liberty." The two prisoners were arraigned before Stipendiary Magistrate Foster, and, pleading guilty to the offence, were sent for seven years to the Provincial Penitentiary at St. Vincent de Paul.

Mr. Bombardin is highly praised for the manner in which he captured both prisoners.

THE GOURLAYS.

The Gourlays gave their last performance in this city last evening. On this occasion Mrs. McGregor's Levee was shortened in order to make room for a charming and brilliant little sketch called "Woman's Rights," which for genuine fun was quite equal to its predecessor. The versatility of Mr. Gourlay's powers in representing the various phases of Scotch character, both male and female, is truly wonderful, while he is admirably sustained by Mrs. Gourlay through her excellent singing. One seldom hears a voice so clear, powerful, and well modulated. This is especially manifested in the Song of the Swiss girl. Nor must we forget the graceful acting of Miss Gourlay, who, in her songs likewise, as well as her acting, was received with loud and deserved applause.

A Herald reporter interviewed Governor Dix yesterday with the following result: He did not think it necessary that he should express his views on the third term question, and hence had not contemplated speaking. There was no truth in the statement, that he would not do so if requested. He had spoken freely to his friends, and would, if he spoke in public at all, express his emphatic disapproval of the third term, and he was satisfied the President had no idea of running again.

Baptist Missionary Convention.

LONDON, Oct. 21.

The Baptist Convention met at nine o'clock this morning.

The mission in Manitoba was the first subject up for consideration.

A letter was read by the Secretary from Rev. Mr. McDonald, at present laboring in that field, giving a very cheerful and encouraging account of his work there. It was deemed advisable by the Convention to send another missionary to that field, and already a considerable sum of money has been raised towards that object.

A religious service was afterwards held, when the Rev. Campbell, of Chatham, delivered an earnest and eloquent sermon.

At the afternoon meeting the following office-bearers were elected for the Home Missionary Convention in the usual way: Charles Raymond, Esq., of Guelph, President; Rev. W. Stewart, B. A., Secretary; and George Bell, Esq., Treasurer.

A fund was started to sustain an Evangelist to visit the different fields hitherto neglected, but where there are scattered families of Baptists eager to join in their favorite form of worship, and organize Churches; $300 of the $1,000 required was at once subscribed.

Visiting brethern were then introduced as follows: Rev. Mr. Botterill, lately arrived in this city, and who is to officiate at the East End; the Rev. Dr. Jewett, a missionary just returned from India, who was received with great applause, and gave a short and interesting account of his stewardship in the far East; Bro. Ayer and Bro. Lemay, from the Eastern Baptist Convention; Bro. Younhill, a delegate from the New York State Convention; Rev. Mr. Guidenhagen, from the Colored Baptist Convention of Amherstburg; Rev. C. Goodspeed, lately settled in Woodstock, and others

Delegates were then appointed as follows:

To the Eastern Convention, Rev. Mr. Porter and Rev. Mr. Turner.

To New York State Convention, to meet in Hornellsville, Rev. Mr. Stewart, Dr. Fife, Rev. Mr. Porter, Bro. Perrin, and Bro. Torrance.

To the Amherstburg Colored Convention, Rev. Mr. Campbell.

To the Lower Province Convention, Rev. Bro. Goodspeed.

The meeting then adjourned.

The annual Missionary meeting was held to-night.

THE PIANO HUMBUG.
I will sell in Montreal, with a warrantee of ten years, Six first-class seven and one third-octave Rosewood Pianos, carved legs and square over-strung bass, agraffe treble, and one large first-class organ walnut case, eight stops, for a less sum than an advertiser in to-day's Witness has the audacity to ask "the gentry" of Montreal to pay for ONE of his instruments.
Moreover, I will, on the above sale, make a very fair commission, not so much, I am free to own, as the gentleman who invites "the gentry" to purchase his pianos at about FIVE times the absolute cost of their construction.
Nor are these Pianos that I thus offer (six, and an organ for the price of one) made of "Refuse Material, but of the best and soundest material. The largest size (7½ octaves), the Rosewood, Ivory, Wires,—all first class. The guarantee is also something, considering that it is well known that the manufacturer I represent is of long standing and great wealth, not accumulated by selling his instruments at five times their cost, and spending nearly the whole of the profits by paying exhorbitant commissions, in the vain attempt to establish a fabulous value.
And now, having said so much, I would "Caution" the gentry of Montreal (for these are the only people likely to make such a blunder) not to pay more for a Piano than it costs to build the cut stone house in which they may reside, and if they want a handsomely carved valuable Rosewood Piano, perfect in all its parts, and guaranteed for ten years, for a small advance on the cost of making it, they can call on the Wholesale Agent,

It makes a perfectly smooth, warm and durable wall. In case of accident it can be easily and cheaply repaired. It is not affected by dampness in the atmosphere.

QUESTION:

Where is the Cheapest Place to buy a fine, durable, clear, brilliant, powerful toned, 7-octave Rosewood PIANO?

ANSWER:

At SHAW'S splendid new Piano Warerooms, at the corner of Craig street and Victoria square.

WHY?

BECAUSE he is the Wholesale Agent for some of the largest and best makers in the United States, and sells the Pianos at a small advance on the cost of manufacture.

ARE THEY GOOD?

YES: Several of them have been sold after eight or ten years' use for more than the original cost. Each Piano receives a guarantee for ten years, signed by Mr. Shaw; and there are several hundred of them now in use in the leading families of the city, who speak highly of their power, sweetness, and durability.

ARE THEY CHEAPER THAN OTHER PIANOS?

YES: They are sold at the wholesale price, which is from $125 to $200 less than the retail price, and no commissions are paid to music teachers to puff or recommend them. As a proof of their cheapness, it may be stated that they are sold in Mr. Shaw's "warerooms, all duties and expenses paid, delivered free, and kept in tune for one year, at from $50 to $75 less than the Government estimate or their wholesale value in Boston and New York.

IN CONCLUSION,

Mr. Shaw will sell a magnificent, new, carved Rosewood Piano, largest compass, 7-octave, deliver it free in the city, keep it in tune for one year, and guarantee it for ten years, for

Call and examine them, at

724, 726, & 728 CRAIG STREET,

CORNER VICTORIA SQUARE.

The Government experts have appraised the wholesale value of these Pianos in New York considerably above the price at which Mr. Shaw sells them in Montreal, duties paid. This proves that the public can get the worth of their money by buying these Pianos.

Old Pianos taken in exchange, and long credit given to purchasers.

Fine Pianos on hand to hire by the month or quarter. 249

Another Election Voided.

[Special to THE STAR.]

NIAGARA, Oct. 22.

Chief Justice Hagarty delivered judgment in the Niagara election trial this morning; he held that there had been bribery and treating by the agents of Mr. Plumb, but not with his knowledge or cognizance. He therefore declared the election voided, but did not hold Mr. Plumb to be disqualified. Respondent pays the costs.

OTTAWA, Oct. 22.

The Premier and Mr. Geoffrian have gone to Montreal. It is said to look after the Lachine Canal Job.

The City Agricultural Society have purchased eight acres adjoining their grounds, on which to erect a Crystal Palace for the provincial exhibition.

A clerk, named Roberge, was sent for trial to-day on a charge of abstracting a registered letter from the city Post-office. Several robberies recently induced the Post-office Inspector to set a trap for the thief.

News of Quebec.

QUEBEC, Oct. 22.

Messrs. Landry, Blackwood, Nassure and Gaudet, who have been nominated Commissioners by the Agricultural Council, left here on Tuesday via L'Islet, to visit the School of Steanne De La Pocatiere. They will afterwards inspect the Veterinary School at Montreal and the Agricultural School at L'Assumption.

Yesterday the wedding ceremony of Miss Honoria Sharples, daughter of the Hon. John Sharples, and Edouard J. Duchesnay, Esq., caused a little excitement in the upper circles. The marriage services were performed in the parish church at Sillery by His Lordship Monsignor Persico, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Gauthier.

TORONTO, Oct. 22.

An inquest, opened yesterday on the body of Mrs. Elizabeth Townsend, Jarvis street, who died under suspicious circumstances, was adjourned till this evening.

An inquest will be held to-day on the body of Mary Newby, who died under suspicious circumstances last night on Terauley street.

The decision in the South Huron election trial is that Mr. M. Cameron was guilty of bribery by his agents, but without his personal knowledge. Respondent to pay costs.

The body of a man named James Good was found in a swamp at Tavistock yesterday. It had been there some days.

Patrick Kelly, of Guelph, received several severe wounds by falling under a train he was attempting to enter while it was in motion at Berlin.

Mr. Jacob Walsh and Mr. Joshua Gregory were out shooting at Moorefield yesterday when Gregory's gun went off, the charge lodging in the thigh of Mr. Walsh. Amputation will be necessary.

On Tuesday a farmer named Alex. Anderson, living near Cape Rich, hanged himself in his own barn. No cause can be assigned for the deed. The day before there was a threshing bee at his place, and he sat up until late chatting cheerfully to the men, apparently in his usual spirits and soundness of mind. He must have left his bed shortly before daybreak to commit the rash act.

Yesterday a young man of 20, named Stoddard, in the employ of Mr. John McArthur, while driving a team fell from the waggon and the wheels passed over his chest; he died in about fifteen minutes after.

As the noon train going east on the Toronto, Grey & Bruce Railway was crossing at Macville it ran into a buggy, in which were Mr. William Williamson, an old and respected resident of Albion, and Miss Ann Dean; Mr. Williamson was instantly killed and Miss Dean badly injured.

The Lepine Trial.

[Special to the STAR.]

FORT GARRY, Oct. 19.

The prosecution closed at noon.

Mr. Chapleau opened the case for the defence this afternoon.

The first witness Thomas Bunn, Secretary of the Provisional Government. Thomas Bunn was intoxicated, and nothing definite could be got from him, he contradicted himself frequently.

Bishop McLean, who is now on the stand deposes that the second election of the delegates, was prompted by himself and Donald A. Smith in order to save Major Bolton's life. The evidence shows the Provisional Government was not responsible to the English speaking people.

Mr. Bruce continued the evidence this p.m. In cross-examining for the defence, it was elicited that Bruce was first President of the Provisional Government only nominally. Those who composed the committee that elected him were all French half-breeds, nominated by Riel, who acted as Secretary. Bruce opposed taking the Fort, also taking the Schultz party. Documents and proclamations were issued in his name, though he never saw them. He was informed by Goulet that Scott was not dead when put into the box, and that one of the guards put an end to him.

Mr. Chapleau entered a protest against this evidence, but his Lordship ruled it regular.

Francis Chasette and Pierre Grades were examined this p.m. They both saw the execution of Scott. The former repeated the story of the Bastion, and said he heard Scott crying out in the Bastion "Oh, Lord! oh, Lord!" De Lorme, who was guarding the door, told him it was Scott.

About ten witnesses for the Crown are yet to be examined.

Bishop Tache, of Cookston, yesterday, while jumping out of his waggon, broke his leg. He will not be a witness.

The Court is sitting to-night.

LATER.

Since the last report left, Mr. Bannatyne, Xavier Page, Narcisse Marion and Michael Dumes were examined in the Lepine case.

ROUND TOWN.

—Judge Torrance this afternoon annulled the election in the Western Division; costs against the respondent. The petitioners did not press the personal charges.

—An investigation has been opened by Mr. Austin, Fire Commissioner, into the St. Sulpice street fire. Jas. C. McArthur, one of the members of the firm of McArthur & Son, and Jas. Dougall and Robert Farquhar, two of their clerks, have been examined, but nothing has been discovered with reference to the origin of the fire. The stock was valued at $160,000, and was insured for, or over that sum.

The Herald's silence anent the result of the above contestation is not inexplicable when we see that the minor and more active Government organ is apparently not quite certain whether the election has been voided or not. It remarks that: "Even Mr. Fred. Mackenzie" "appears" to have been unseated.

People are talking a good deal about Mr. Stewart's evidence. The general opinion is, that for a commercial authority, his system of keeping accounts is rather loose.

The junior organ of the Government insinuates that because Mr. A. A. Stevenson did not petition for the seat, he feels that he or his agents have been guilty of corrupt practices. The fact is, it is useless to petition for a seat, unless the petitioner can prove that every one of the votes making the majority are illegal. When the contest has been very close this is worth attempting, but it would have been almost impossible to accomplish where the majority is counted by hundreds. The influence of the money spent by the Mackenzieites at the election in question was soon felt and early cause the Stevenson party to desist from the attempt to elect their candidate.

If Mr. Stevenson does not intend to run again, this would be a good opportunity to bring out Mr. Thomas White—a gentleman now well known in our midst as a ready, thoughtful, practical speaker, patriotic to a degree, thoroughly posted in national affairs, and knowing well the country's wants. We are not aware that Mr. White courts nomination, but we feel sure he would be a very popular candidate, and equally sure that he would reflect credit upon the constituency.

ERLE GOWER;

OR,

THE HEIR OF THE RACE.

"Well, sir," iterated Sir Harris, "a path is now open to you to honour and wealth. You have excellent intelligence, a cultivated mind, youth, activity, and energy. I am prepared to place in your hands at any moment from to-day a lucrative and honourable appointment in the Government of India, to provide all preliminary expenses, to fit you out, and forward you to your appointed post with the equipments of a nobleman, and to engage that, in a comparatively brief term, you shall return to your native land rich, honourable, and master of a situation to which you may now perhaps lift your eyes hopefully, but which, without any aid, you can never conquer."

Erle mused for a minute. The temptation was great. It would be a grand way to win Lady Maud. He knew that she would be faithful to him in his absence; and he reflected on his return, loaded with the honours a clear head, a bold heart, and great energy would obtain for him—alas! he knew nothing of the Indian Government—and with the wealth he should speedily amass, he could, with an unbrased conscience, take her from home and friends to his heart, if they, as no doubt they would, refused their sanction to his union with her. It was, indeed, a path which seemed to open before him direct to all he coveted. He was young, very young; what would be a few brief years if, by enduring their trials, he won Maud, and won her nobly, too! His heart swelled at the thought.

Sir Harris Stanhope watched him closely; he saw that his imagination was at play by the enlargement of his eyes, by their quick and brilliant flashes, and by the restless play of his lips.

Presently he turned to Sir Harris, and said, slowly, and somewhat earnestly—

"What is the reverse of this pleasing picture?"

"You mean, of course, should you reject my proposition?" said Sir Harris.

"I do," replied Erle.

Sir Harris shrugged his shoulders.

"I have told you," he rejoined, "that you are absolutely in the power of a merciless enemy. You will no longer be permitted to minister to the revengeful machinations of Horace Vernon, you will at the same time be thrust into the world as an outcast, hunted from place to place, knowing no peace nor no rest. There are modes of persecution of which the law can take no hold, but which are, nevertheless, murderously destructive in their character, and you would be pursued until you found life such a burden——"

"Hold!" cried Erle, with a contemptuous gesture. "You are speaking of me as if I had neither will, energy, nor power of action—as if I had no voice to make my wrongs heard, no strength to battle with my persecutors——"

"Stay," interposed Sir Harris, hastily, in his turn. "We are discussing the reverse before I have pointed out the whole of the merits of the obverse. I have invested the appointment I have offered to you with the chances of honours and wealth; but there remains a yet greater and more fascinating inducement to accept the post than any I have named."

Erle recoiled a little.

"What is that?" he asked, mistrustfully.

"I have it within yon chamber. I will show it to you," he said, rising abruptly from his seat. "Attend to me, if you please," he added, with a low chuckle.

He took hold of Erle's arm in a playful manner, and pushed rather than led him into an adjoining apartment.

Erle had barely entered, when Sir Harris, quitting his hold, retreated from the room, and closed the door.

Erle's eyes ran round the apartment; he saw a female seated at a table, apparently bending over a book or picture. The noise of his entrance caused her to turn her head, and seeing him, she immediately rose up and advanced towards him.

He looked behind; he found that Sir Harris had disappeared, and that he was alone with Beatrice Stanhope.

When, on first returning to consciousness, he discovered that he was in the house of Sir Harris Stanhope, the probability of some such interview as this presented itself vividly to his mind. He hoped with much fervour that it might not come to pass, because it would be imperative upon him to deport himself with coldness to her; but his hopes were frustrated, and she was now alone with him; and to render his condition more painfully embarrassing, her father's last words respecting the fascinating inducement to accept the appointment he had offered to him were ringing in his ears.

He seemed at a glance to see the whole thing clearly, and he felt that had not his heart been already surrendered to Lady Maud, it would have tried his powers of self-denial to the utmost to have declined the appointment and the lady.

As Beatrice turned her pallid face to him, and gazed upon him with a melancholy expression in her large, dark, brilliant eyes, he recognised the face that had bent over him watchfully, or had flitted about the room during his illness, and it was not possible to repress a grateful emotion taking possession of his breast.

But he remembered, too, their last parting, and he feared to display the really kind and friendly sentiments he entertained for her because she might misconstrue them; yet, out of genuine gratitude for her watchful tenderness in his sick chamber, it was impossible to treat her with apathy or indifference. Indeed, she did not give him the chance.

She had been prepared by her father for this interview, and she had dressed herself with exquisite taste. Charming as she was naturally, her beauty was materially heightened by her admirably-fitting dress, the arrangement of a flower, a ribbon, a trinket, and the elegance with which her luxuriant and glossy hair was disposed so as to perfectly suit the contour of her face.

She approached him with a joyous smile, and held out both her white, small hands to him. He took them, and she pressed his frankly and warmly, as though, independant of all other influences or emotions, she was really pleased to see him.

"I am so glad to see you again. I feared—I thought you would die."

He saw a tear glisten in her eye, and he felt that an expression of pain passed over his features, which she instantly observed.

"I thank you, Beatrice," he said, in a voice that slightly trembled, "with earnestness and sincerity. I am deeply sensible of your kind attentions to me when stretched upon my sick couch; be sure that I fervently appreciate them. Yet, if I might dare express such a wish, I would that you had been less kind to one who has it not in his power to make a just return."

"Nonsense, Erle," she replied, softly, while a rosy blush stole over her pale cheeks. "You know we are friends. You remember when last we met we agreed upon that point—and friends, you know, reciprocally return kindness for kindness."

"I should be glad to know," he responded, quickly, "how I might be able, if inadequately, to make, as a friend, an acceptable return for——"

"Playing the nurse when you were ill," she interrupted, with a low, musical laugh. "Pray consider that you have amply repaid me by getting well. Do not make any further allusions to it, Erle, because it makes me blush. Now, though roses on the cheek are desirable generally, they are not welcome when we know they have no business there. Sit down, Erle."

"Nay——"

"Do as your nurse tells you, like a good, obedient boy," she said, forgetting her own injunctions to him. "There," she added, as he sank on a couch, "that is proper, and—may I sit by your side, if you please?"

This was said in a light tone of banter, which disconcerted him, and he was not any the more composed to find that, before he could reply, she placed herself so near to him that when she spoke her shoulder touched his.

The eloquent blood rushed into his face and crimsoned forehead and neck. He turned, cast his gaze of the window, fearing that an eclaircissement was but the question of a very few minutes.

"Have you seen Carlton?" she said, as she found him remain silent.

He replied in the negative.

PIRACY IN THE CHINESE WATERS.

A Steamer Seized and the Officers Murdered.

(Macao Correspondence of Japan, Yokohama Mail.)

A terrible tragedy occurred last evening on board the steamer "Spark," on its voyage from Canton to Macao. Chinese pirates who had embarked as passengers made an onslaught on the crew and passengers near Bocca Tigris, murdered the captain, mate, and purser, and wounded, most dangerously, the only European passenger and the whole crew.

After the pirates had been in possession of the steamer for six hours a junk came over from the shore to take them and their booty. The Chinese engineers brought the steamer over to Macao, where it arrived at half-past twelve this morning. Viscount Sam Januario immediately sent the gunboat "Camoens" to search the Canton River, and is taking all the necessary measures. The town is in a state of excitement and everyone is horrified.

DETAILS OF THE BLOODY DEED.

The details of the bloody deed go to show that $7,000, in notes of the Hong Kong banks and in silver, were taken from the purser. The incentive to the outrage is supposed to have arisen in a rumor to the effect that a gambling house proprietor was going down to Macao from Canton in the "Spark," with $18,000 in his possession. This appears to have been a false report; but that the pirates had belief in its accuracy is borne out by the fact that they ransacked and rifled the luggage of all the passengers, whom they forced below and kept there, battening down the hatches. The account that Captain Brady and the other murdered men went below to quell a factitious row among the passengers is correct. The pirates were more than twenty in number, and took passage at Canton, as at first stated. They got up a disturbance by fighting with sticks. The mate went down to part them, when the men assaulted him. He called the captain, who also went down.

A BRAVE DEFENCE IN THE MIDST OF A TERRIBLE SCENE.

The pirates fired at Captain Brady, one bullet striking him in the shoulder. He ran to the upper deck, got a revolver and returned below. He then attempted to fire on the pirates, but his weapon repeatedly missed fire. The unfortunate captain was thus entirely at the mercy of his assailants, and a fierce onslaught was made upon him. One of the pirates stabbed him in the knee; another cut him on the wrist with a sword; others shot him, and some again speared him. There were thirty-two wounds upon his body when found. On the lower part of the back was a serious wound which probably proved fatal, and having severed the spinal column must have at once disabled him. Captain Carroll describes the scene on board the "Spark" as horrible. The decks were covered with blood. Brady was found in his cabin, dead, lying on the floor, with one arm raised in the air, his body a mass of wounds and saturated with gore. Mr. Mundy was on the fore deck fearfully wounded and still insensible. Near him lay four dead sailors.

Mr. Mundy was the only European passenger on board, and he offered a brave and determined resistance. He knocked down two of the pirates and was engaged with others when he was stabbed twice in the breast. The weapons were evideatly aimed at his heart, but fortunately did not reach there. The left lung is believed to be pierced; but last night Mr. Mundy was much better than might have been expected; and there are good hopes of his ultimate recovery. Had he been able to effect his purpose of joining the Captain a better account might have been given of the robbers.

Nine persons altogether were killed in the affray—namely, the captain, the mate, the purser, one fireman, one Chinaman and four passengers. The Chairman was occupying the cabin of the Compradore, and the pirates no doubt mistook him for that officer. It is impossible as yet to say who are the dead passengers; but it is thought they formed part of the gang of pirates.

There were about 150 passengers on board in all.

BROTHER JONATHAN MORTIFIED.

(N. Y. Herald.)

The special despatch from London provokes a mortifying comparison in the minds of patriotic Americans who recollect the high national tone of our diplomacy under former administrations. The British government has recovered from Spain adequate pecuniary damages for the brutal outrages committed in Cuba against the ill-fated subjects captured on board the steamer "Virginius" and put to death in violation of law, justice and humanity, whereas the American government, whose honor was insulted, its flag outraged and its citizens wantonly butchered, has received no corresponding reparation. Our claim to compensation is every way superior to that of Great Britain. It was against us that the chief outrages were perpetrated. According to the natural and proper course of proceeding our government should have been the first to enforce satisfaction for that great affront and injury. We were the principal party in the controversy against Spain, and it was due to the national honor that our claim should stand first on the list and that reparation should have soonest been made to us as the chief complainant. It is the shame and scandal of the American administration—a shame and scandal which should bring blushes to the cheeks of the Secretary of State—that our demand for justice has been prosecuted with less vigor and success than that of England.

A QUARREL AT SEA.

The London Daily News of the 26th ultimo says:—

"On Wednesday afternoon a large American vessel, the "Samuel S. Hersey," commanded by a captain of the same name, left Penarth Dock, Cardiff, for Montevideo, in the tow of a powerful steam tug, the "Lord Derby." Shortly after clearing the Point a terrible disturbance seems to have broken out on board the vessel; the whole crew appeared to be fighting, and two of the men, in order to escape fatal violence, leaped overboard and attempted to swim to the shore. They were observed and picked up, greatly exhausted, by a boat sent to their assistance. One of them, named John Johnson, exhibited a cut over the mouth, the result, as he alleged, of a violent blow by the captain. He further deposed, at the police station, that most of the crew were the worse for liquor, and on getting out of port they commenced quarreling.

"The captain gave orders that were not attended to, and he struck several of the crew. One of them, a Dane, resented this violence, whereupon the captain seized an iron bar and struck the sailor a blow from which he died instantly. Johnson declares that he saw the man, and that he never moved afterwards. The captain still had the iron bar in his hand and it was the fear that he might be struck as the Danish sailor had been which induced him to jump overboard and attempt to swim to shore, in company with a German named Abrot, the other fugitive, who corroborated Johnson's statement. We learn, however, by telegraph from Cardiff, that the story of these two men is doubted at that town. Last night the pilot who towed the American vessel down the channel returned to port, and, while confirming the deposition that a melee took place on board the "Hersey" immediately on putting out to sea, he declares there is no foundation for the report that a murder was committed."

THE PHYSIQUE OF THE ROYALTY OF EUROPE.—By all the laws of the physiologists, the Royal caste, which intermarries much, which is bred unavoidably in luxury, and which is at least as dissolute as an artistocratic group, ought to be losing its physical vitality, but it is not losing it at all. The sovereigns, actual or potential, of Europe, would make a formidable squadron of dragoons. The Emperor of Germany is perhaps the finest man, physically, who has reigned since Charlemagne. Any colonel in the guards would accept his son as a most hopeful recruit. His nephew, the Red Prince, is as formidable a hussar as ever rode. The Emperor of Austria is as stately of presence as an ideal king. The eldest Wittlebach is a wild rider, who delights in furious midnight galloping. The Prince of Wales, whose pedigree stretches, if not to Odin, far past Egbert, rides as straight to hounds as a professional whip. The King of Italy, the coronet of whose ancestors was closed before Charlemagne died, is a successful chamois hunter, a good cavalry officer, and a man for whom danger has an actual charm. His eldest son is as strong as himself; and his younger son, Amadeo, a man of reckless personal gallantry. The eldest Romanoff is almost gigantic, and endures uncomplainingly fatigues which try the constitutions of his aides-de-camp. The Bourbons seem more worn, but one of them, the Duc d'Aumale, is the very type of the cultivated, but over-stern General; Don Carlos is six feet one; another, Don Carlos's soldier brother, is a Murat; a third, the Comte d'Eu, is believed in Brazil to be a General of unusual capacity; and a fourth served with distinction throughout the Franco-German war. It is very well to write about cretins, but there is no evidence whatever that the caste is cretin physically, and not much that it is wearing out in mind. It is badly bred, no doubt, particularly in Catholic countries, and has a certain liability to brain disease, when it is mentally bothered by the clash between modern ideas and the ideas it is convenient for a reigning caste to hold; but if the whole of it were shovelled into the British Upper House, the Peers as a body would be abler than they are.

ARCHBISHOP MANNING ON THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC.—Archbishop Manning, addressing a meeting last night in Manchester of a Catholic temperance society founded by the Bishop of Salford, under the name of the "Salford Diocesan Temperance Crusade," said he hoped that no Catholic who had prospered in the world sufficiently to save money would ever invest that money either in the making or selling of any intoxicating drinks. He did not wish to pain any honest Catholic already a brewer, or publican, or distiller, because they had been encouraged in their trade by the unwisdom of Parliament and the avarice of capitalists, but he would say to such Catholics that he wished them a better trade; he wished them great prosperity and speedy profits that they might get sooner out of it; and he hoped that no other Catholic would be tempted by his successes to invest his money in the same way. He believed the working people, and the people generally, favored the principle of the Permissive Bill; and that capital came with its influence between Parliament and the people, and prevented their wishes being carried out.—English Paper, 29th Sept.

MASTODON BONES IN MICHIGAN.—The Adrian [Mich.] Times says that on Tuesday, 29th ult., as Oramon Tuttle was engaged in digging a ditch on his farm at Seneca, about twelve miles south of Adrain, he discovered an immense bone, probably that of a mastodon. Further search revealed sundry other bones and pieces of bones, the whole forming quite a collection of interesting relics. Mr. Tuttle took to Adrain a tooth about four inches square, and weighing one and a half pounds. This tooth is broken off at the base, but the enamel on the upper part is perfect. Mr. Tuttle also showed three pieces—about nine feet in all—of a rib, of which, perhaps, a foot or two has not yet been found. He found, also, a horn or tusk, which is broken off at both ends. This is eight feet seven inches long, and three feet from the butt end, measures twenty-two-and-one-half inches in circumference.
