Twins Lose Lives In Cottage Fire

Nantel, Que., July 22.—Two young members of a vacationing family were burned to death and three others injured last night when a flash fire following an explosion levelled a summer cottage near this village in the Laurentians.

The dead: Doris and Harry Whellan, 15, twin son and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Whellan of Montreal, owners of the cottage.

Injured: Miss Therese Rondeau of Montreal, 20-year-old provincial government employee vacationing with the Whellans. She suffered first-degree burns and cuts.

Robert Whellan, 19, brother of the twins, and Jean Benoit, 18, of Montreal, a friend. Both suffered minor burns.

Miss Rondeau, described as having a good chance of surviving, was taken to hospital in Ste. Agathe, seven miles from here. She said the twins came home about 10.45 p.m., and tried to light an oil lamp. There was an explosion which spread to a naphtha stove. The reservoir in the stove exploded, spreading flames about the one-story wooden building.

Miss Rondeau escaped from the burning building by jumping through a window. Eyewitnesses said she lay screaming and bleeding outside the cottage for half an hour before she was brought to hospital.

The girl told a nurse that she heard motorists, who stopped to watch the fire, discussing among themselves whether they should pick her up. She said they finally decided against it "because they would dirty the seats in their cars."

She was finally brought to hospital by detective Arthur Normandeau, a Provincial Police officer, who suffered burns about the hands in a vain attempt to rescue the twins.

Mr. and Mrs. Whellan were in Montreal at the time.

Miss Rondeau was to have returned to Montreal today.

An inquest was ordered for later in the day.

London Strike Cost Workers $1,600,000 In Wages—Vital Exports and Food Exports Were Held Up.

London, July 22.—London's dockers today voted at a mass meeting to call off their strike in support of the Canadian Seamen's Union and return to work Monday.

Harry Davis, C. S. U. president, told a mass meeting in Victoria Park that "in view of the present position" the C. S. U. had decided to call off the strike in Great Britain.

"Our struggle in Canada and the rest of the world will continue," Davis said.

The C. S. U. declared "white" the Canadian ships Beaverbrae and Argomont whose blacklisting brought on the dockers' strike a month ago.

Davis thanked the London dockers for their support. He blamed the strike on Canadian ship owners and "our Canadian anti-labor government."

"This was not a planned conspiracy directed by the Kremlin and Moscow," said the C. S. U. president.

Davis said the C. S. U. decision to clear the way for resumption of work was made with a view to "the wider interests of the English dockers and the whole people of England."

"We accept the promise of Canadian deputy minister of labor Arthur McNamara that if the union will call off the strike he will utilize the machinery of his department to bring both parties together," Davis said.

The dockers' unanimous vote to return to work followed a meeting earlier in the day between C. S. U. chiefs and the strikers' lockout committee.

The strike is estimated to have cost 15,500 strikers £400,000 ($1,600,000) in wages. Vital exports and food imports were held up while the government marshalled servicemen to work strike-bound cargoes.

Service personnel at work at the docks today totalled 11,397—only 4,000 fewer than the number of dockers on strike.

The dispute—one of the most bitter in Britain's general strike in 1926—began when dockers were suddenly told to unload the two Canadian ships held up in London by the C.S.U. strike.

When the dockers refused, the port authorities told them that they could not work other ships in the port. The dockers complained that this was a lockout by the employers but the government and employers described the men's action as a strike.

The government claimed the trouble was inspired by Communists and told the dockers they were being used as pawns in a Communist plot to sabotage Britain's economy.

The stoppage tied up vital British export cargoes, hampering Britain's drive to overcome her severe dollar crisis. Troops, concentrating on unloading food ships, have prevented any severe shortages in British food supplies.

In the House of Commons, Labor Minister George Isaacs was asked if the government now would call off the state of emergency the government had proclaimed because of the strike. He replied that the cabinet "really must wait until Monday, until we see what has been the effect of today's decision" by the workers.

"I hope my fellow workers among the dockers will realize that their loyalty has been played upon," Isaacs added. "I hope in the future they will listen to their trade union leaders and not to other people from outside."

While welcoming the end of the dispute, Sir David Maxwell Fyfe, for the opposition, criticized the government's handling of the situation. There were lessons to be learned by everyone, including the government, he said.

"We must ask for the greatest watchfulness in the light of experience over other fields of industry where similar dangers might arise," Sir David added.

Before accepting the back-to-work resolution the dockers passed one demand demanding that 76-year-old Lord Ammon be dismissed as chairman of the National Dock Labor Board.

Prime Minister Attlee fired Ammon as Deputy Speaker of the House of Lords last night in a clash over board policy in handling the strike.

The board has told the strikers they were jeopardizing the entire dock labor scheme, which guarantees them a weekly income. The cabinet repudiated that statement.

Ammon has more than a year to serve on his appointment as chairman of the dock board. Technical

Churchill Is Preparing Major Speech

London, July 22.—(A.P.)—Winston Churchill—fresh from a clash with Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin—is readying a new blast at the Labor government.

The wartime Prime Minister, now leader of the Conservative opposition, will make a major speech on general policy tomorrow before an expected 50,000 listeners at Wolverhampton.

The speech is timed to coincide with a Conservative statement of policy looking forward to the 1950 election.

Churchill's secretary acknowledged this week that the speech would be an important one, but declined to give details.

Some wondered whether it would be the opening gun of the election campaign.

Churchill has been warming up for the campaign for several months with sharp blasts at the Labor regime.

Last May, in an assault on the government's policies, the former Prime Minister charged that the logical end for socialism in Britain is a Communist-like state.

He accused the government of having "derided and reviled" the capitalist economic system of the United States.

In another address Churchill called on the Conservatives to mobilize for a possible general election this fall.

The opposition leader voiced confidence that the Conservatives can take next year's election.

Churchill and Bevin tangled yesterday during a foreign-policy debate in the House of Commons. Both wound up voicing misgivings about President Roosevelt's policy of unconditional surrender toward Germany.

Some Doukhobors May Quit Canada

Nelson, B. C., July 22.—(A.P.)—Some of the Doukhobors' doukhor sect may soon be leaving for greener fields.

The radical Sons of Freedom group—5,000 dissenters from the main Doukhobor sect—have given notice that they will leave the parent group and head for either Russia or Turkey.

John V. Lebedoff, chairman of the Spiritual Community of Christ, has asked for a general migration.

The Sons of Freedom, who more than once have been accused of blazing an incendiary path through the East Kootenay valleys of this province, broke from the main Doukhobor colony over the question of absorption of Canadian customs.

The Sons cling to the old religion and customs while the main group are to some extent assimilating Canadian ways.

The Sons of Freedom have not been totally ideal citizens. Their adherence to the old religion made them defy governmental edicts, including compulsory military service.

Their enmity toward their orthodox brethren is believed to have led to the death in 1928 of Peter Verigin the second, in a railroad dynamite explosion. He was the orthodox spiritual leader. Peter Verigin the first, brought the group from Russia in 1899.

Religious Conflict Stirs Newfoundland Legislature

By JOE MacSWEEN
St. John's, Nfld., July 22.—(A.P.)—Religious controversy hit the floor of the Newfoundland legislature yesterday and exploded before started members.

Peter Cashin, independent member for Ferryland, charged that "hell was let loose" and "sectarianism went wild" in the referendum campaigns before confederation.

He quoted Chesley Filler, grand master of the Newfoundland Orange Lodge, as saying in a circular letter that the Roman Catholic church made "an unwarranted attempt of and effort to dominate the right of free choice of the individual elector" in the referendum.

Mr. Cashin, a Catholic, said the letter was a "filthy" attack on Roman Catholics. When he went on to say that Premier Smallwood had backed this purported statement of the Orange Lodge, the Premier leaped to his feet and demanded that Mr. Cashin withdraw the remark or "I will demand that he be expelled from the House."

Mr. Cashin withdrew the statement and apologized after the speaker told him he was "skating on rather thin ice."

Only the day before opposition leader John Higgins had stalked from the Chamber after a bitter argument with Mr. Smallwood.

From nearby Clarke's Beach, Mr. Filler told the Canadian Press in a telephone conversation that the circular was "a private document issued through the mail to Newfoundland's 236 lodges." There are some 40,000 Orangemen in Newfoundland.

The circular, he said, was not meant for publication or for distribution except among those to whom it was addressed. Neither was it meant to be used for political purposes.

"I'm very much afraid Mr. Cashin has gone too far," Mr. Filler said. "I'm afraid he'll find himself before the justice department."

In a hammering speech, Mr. Cashin shattered a glass while pounding the podium and scattered some papers about the floor.

He quoted from two documents, one of them the Monitor, Newfoundland, Catholic monthly, and the Orange circular.

This quotation from the Monitor was an editorial that appeared in June, 1948, following the first referendum and before the second, which led to the island's union with Canada.

The editorial said it was "a matter of great regret" that responsible government was not returned to Newfoundland before the island—which lost Dominion status in 1934—decided its next form of government. It added:

"This constitutional mistake can be remedied by the people themselves, who now have the opportunity of restoring the Newfoundland Parliament. . . . We are unable to see how any other position can be justified. The restoration of the Newfoundland Parliament should be the aim of every Newfoundland."

Mr. Cashin said Secretary of State Bradley, now Newfoundland's representative in the federal cabinet, was one of the men "primarily responsible for the circulation" of the Orange lodge document.

Mr. Cashin quoted the Orange circular—in the form of a resolution—as saying:

"The nature of the campaign waged by the Monitor, the official organ of the Roman Catholic church, the attitude of its clergy, the nature of the arguments used by its adherents, and above all, the records of the polls in various settlements and districts, indicate clearly an attempt to influence the result of the said referendum upon grounds having no relation to the merits of the various forms of government submitted to the people."

"This, in the opinion of this Grand Lodge, constitutes an unwarranted invasion of and an effort to dominate the right of free choice of the individual elector."

"This Grand Lodge in regular session assembled condemns

New Strike Is Looming At Ford Co.

Detroit, July 22.—(A.P.)—Final moves are under way to enable the United Auto Workers (U.A.W.) to pull the Ford Motor Company production employees out on a wage strike.

Michigan's labor mediation board is preparing for a secret strike poll of the 75,000 Ford workers in this state.

A strike to back up current wage and contract demands—including $100-a-month pensions—already has been approved in a U. A. W. executive vote among 106,000 Ford employees.

That poll showed that they are 7 to 1 in favor of a walkout, if necessary, although they were idle for 24 days in a speed-up strike that shut down Ford plants in May.

But the state balloting is necessary to comply with terms of Michigan's labor law.

In other states, the strike vote conducted by the union is ample authorization for a walkout, and Ford workers may be called out by the U. A. W. executive board at any time.

The U. A. W. filed a 10-day strike notice with the mediation board yesterday, but said it would take no walkout action until the vote was completed. That may require three weeks, board chairman Noel P. Fox said.

Once such a vote is taken, there will be a legal barrier in the way of a strike.

Economic obstacles, too, are being cleared away by the union. Last week at Milwaukee, the auto workers international convention

Senate Approval Of Atlantic Pact Clears Way For Europe Arms Request

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER
Washington, July 22.—(A.P.)—Overwhelming Senate approval of the North Atlantic treaty cleared the way today for President Truman's formal request that the United States help arm its European allies.

This highly-controversial plan calls for more than a $1,600,000,000 worth of arms during the next 12 months. Truman was scheduled to send Congress a message on the subject shortly after noon.

The President's proposal was expected to provide a bar against giving European countries atom bombs. It was understood the government bill would specify that nothing in it would supersede the atomic energy act, which forbids release of atomic explosives.

The 20-year treaty won through to ratification late yesterday by vote of 82 to 13 after administration leaders had given repeated assurances that Senators who voted for the pact would not be obligated to vote for the arms bill. This means that now in urging passage of the bill the administration apparently will not be able to use any suggestion of obligation as an argument for favorable action.

On its face, the treaty is not a specific defense against any particular aggressor but its primary purpose is to provide security for the western European countries against any attack by Russia.

The 12 signers agree that on one as an attack on all. For the first time in history, the United States is joining with European countries in a military alliance.

Efforts by Senators Robert Taft (Rep. Ohio), Kenneth Wherry (Rep. Neb.), and Arthur Watkins (Rep. Utah) to tack reservations to the treaty were defeated. The majority of the Senate went along with Senators Tom Connally (Dem. Texas) and Arthur Vandenberg (Rep. Mich.). The 82-13 ratification vote exceeded by 18 the 64 votes required for two-thirds approval.

Two Democrats and 11 Republicans voted against ratification.

Most of the argument was whether the United States should state by reservation that in joining the treaty the United States was under no obligation to furnish arms, including atomic weapons, to other members. This was the gist of the Taft-Wherry-Watkins demand, which was rejected 74 to 21.

Two other Watkins proposals were treated even rougher. One, defeated 84 to 11, would have declared the United States not obligated to defend the North Atlantic area without approval of Congress. Another turned down 87 to 3, would deny that the treaty obligated Congress to declare war or use United States armed forces to defend a pact country.

Reds Say Excommunication Order Is Part Of Cold War

London, July 22.—(A.P.)—The Moscow radio charged today that Roman Catholic excommunication of communists was a Vatican contribution to "the cold war that Anglo-American reactionaries are waging against the camp of peace and democracy."

It said the ban was intended "to split the united front of people fighting for peace against the Anglo-American war-mongers," and added that it was bound to fail.

The English-language broadcast by commentator Boris Isakov was the first public Russian reaction to the excommunication decree of July 13.

The broadcast accused Catholic clergy of "preying on the religious traditions and feelings of many plain people in an attempt to disarm them morally to weaken their will to resist the danger of a fresh aggression which is threatening the world."

"But this manoeuvre is doomed to failure," the Moscow radio said. "The broad masses of the people have come to see very clearly that they can uphold peace only by crawling closer to each other; only through a staunch fight waged by a united front of working people

Centuries-Old Crystal Glass Craft Makes Comeback In U.K.

By H. L. JONES
Canadian Press Staff Writer
Stourbridge, England, July 22.—The centuries-old hand craft of crystal glass work is making a 20th century comeback in Britain—a comeback almost from the brink of extinction.

Britain's crystal glassware industry, now worth $5,000,000 a year, still relies on the skilled hands of the glassmaker as it did four centuries ago. No machines have been found to match the beauty, intricacy or even the precision of hand-blown, hand-cut crystal.

The craft almost died out during the war when factories went into war production. But now government officials and industrialists are waging a campaign to keep it alive, to teach it to younger hands.

In the factories dotting this Worcestershire-Staffordshire border area the glassmaker of today is aided by modernized furnaces and cutting lathes. But he still blows the glass with his own breath, moulds it with hand tools unchanged in centuries and cuts intricate designs with little more than his eye to guide him.

His crystal, heavy and sparkling, which he boasts is "fit for royal tables," represents one of the few hand trades left in Britain. His ranks are small. Half a dozen "glasshouses" concentrated in the Stourbridge area employ no more than 2,000, about two-thirds of whom are glassmakers and decorators.

The war hit the little industry

Help Sought For Young Farm Hands

Walkerton, Ont., July 22.—(A.P.)—The old question of how to "keep 'em down on the farm" has come up again, this time before the Ontario legislature's select committee on conservation.

Answers suggested in a Bruce County brief presented to the committee at a hearing yesterday included financial assistance through long-term, low-interest loans and supervision "similar to that being given by the Veterans' Land Act."

Farm groups in this section of the province expressed concern that few young men are taking over as owners of farms. They said in the brief that many good farms are going out of production because young would-be farmers lack money and credit needed for a satisfactory start.

With farmers sons—and daughters—gone to seek city jobs, not only did the district suffer loss of prosperity but the land itself often fell victim of practices which lent themselves to soil depletion or erosion.

The brief called for legislation to prevent what it called the "robbing" of the land. It said sharecroppers, renters and absentee owners were interested mainly in taking as much as possible out of the land in the shortest possible time without regard for the future productivity of the soil.

A certain U-I producer did a slow-burn when script writers got their dates mixed on "Buccaneer's Girl," slugged the period for 1810 and then gave Yvonne de Carlo, being chased by a gendarme, the line: "Drop Dead."

Barbara Fuller, who has played Claudia for the last three years on radio's "One Man's Family," bowed out to the cast to concentrate on films. She was signed to a term deal at Republic following her work in "The Red Menace."

"Cash" Brady will "cash" in on his own name in "The Story of Molly X." His character name is "Cash" Brady. . . Lloyd Gough finished a role in "Sunset Boulevard," then went over to M-G-M for "Tension." Sounds like the life story of a Hollywood agent.

It's Jack Gifford's story about a little Hollywood brat in a swanky private school who persisted in annoying his teacher. Finally, in desperation, the teacher reprimanded him with: "Tomorrow I want you to bring a note from your psychiatrist."

Another big telephone sequence for Barbara Stanwyck in "The Lie." She cuddles up with a cradle phone for a chilling conversation with the villain.

It's a new-term deal with a big raise for writers Martin Ragaway and Len Stern at U-I. . . Producer Hal Wallis wants Sarah Churchill, daughter of Winston, for a movie. . . Warner Brothers and a Dava Clark have called it a day.

Note from reader T. K. Wright: "The length of film titles and the shortage of marquee space poses some important questions, as in 'Kelly and Technicolor in 'Out to the Game.'" Should Sinatra protest? Is Technicolor Kelly's new leading lady?"

that cradle-to-the-grave security, high taxation and all the rest of it does, as the British example proves, encourage the citizen to loaf.

The state needs to lower its expenditures, but there are manifold incentives for the citizen to milk the various state schemes for as much as he can get.

So what we are now seeing in Britain is not only an economic collapse, but a national dilemma; how to force into the consciousness of the British people the truth that their private interest can only be run in the direction of the general interest; how to revive, invigorate and release the individual's willingness to work.

port. Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Sicard gave a very interesting report of the Macdonald Convention. Quilt blocks were given in Mrs. McKenny and Mrs. McGovern are to complete the top ready for quilting. Roll top was answered by "Naming the most important person whom you have met." An article was read by the Publicity convener, Miss Alice Ashton, on "One of the New Inventions." As the president, Mrs. Barnes, was unable to attend, Mrs. Lyle Ashton presided. Following the business meeting, the drawing was held on a pair of pillow slips on which tickets had been sold. The winning number drawn out by Mrs. D. Collins, of East Farnham, was No. 80, held by Mrs. Irene Courtman, of Waterloo. Following the adjournment refreshments were served and a social hour spent. It was decided not to hold an August meeting.

Mrs. E. H. Ashton received word of the death of her brother, Mr. W. E. Senay, who passed away at New Westminster, B.C. on July 13, on his sixty-seventh birthday. Varied Problems Are Discussed At Special Session Of City Council

The purchase of additional land required in connection with the construction of the new bridge across the St. Francis River, the probable cost of the Ulverton power development and the classification of the City Hall employees for salary purposes occupied the Sherbrooke aldermen at a special session of the City Council yesterday afternoon.

In addition to Department heads, who are not covered by the classification provisions, the employees at the municipal headquarters are divided into some 15 categories, covering the list from assistant treasurers, assistant engineers and valuers and building inspectors who are in class "A" to elevator operators and janitors in Class "P."

The salary scale calls for a weekly wage of $50 to $80 a week in Class "A," dependent upon period of service down to $16 to $20 a week for typists with no knowledge of stenography who are placed in Class "N."

The schedule adopted at yesterday's session was prepared by a committee composed of the Treasurer and representatives of the Canadian Fraternity of Civic Employees.

In connection with the proposed Ulverton development, the firm of Crepeau, Cote and Lemieux were instructed to prepare a report comparing the probable actual cost at the present time with the estimates contained in a report made to the Council in 1938 by Engineers Crepeau and Acres.

Agreements were reached with Mrs. Saint Germain for the purchase of a piece of property in the West Ward for $11,000 and with the Noel Estate for the purchase of a lot in the South Ward for $12,000. Both these are required in connection with the construction of the new bridge approaches.

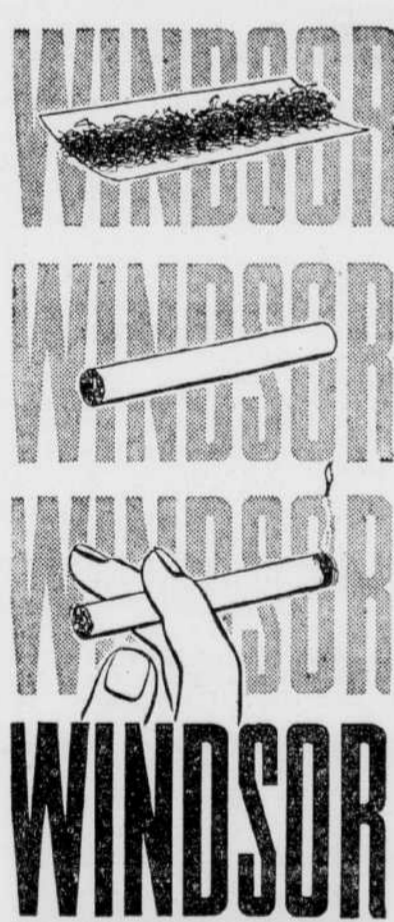

An agreement was concluded with the Sherbrooke Housing Co-operative for the sale of a number of lots in East Sherbrooke to members of the co-operative at one dollar each. In addition the City agrees to collect real estate taxation on only half the valuation for a period of five years. Certain restrictions are placed in the contract, providing for the early construction of dwelling houses on the lot and limiting the right of sale to non-members of the co-operative.

E. T. Crops Have Benefited From Fine Weather

Fine weather during the past week, following fairly general rainfall, has been beneficial to all crops in the Eastern Townships, the weekly crop report of the Bank of Montreal states today.

The report states that other grains are progressing favorably and a good average is in prospect. Cutting of hay is well advanced with a below-average crop being harvested in many districts. Canning of peas is under way and an average crop, both in yield and quality, is reported. Tomatoes are in good condition. Pastures have improved and are now reported to be in fairly good condition in many areas. Potatoes and other roots are doing well in most sections. Grasshoppers are beginning to cause some damage in a few localities. Strawberry yields were below average, but raspberries show good promise. Apple orchards are reported in good condition, with an average in prospect. Additional moisture would be beneficial in many districts.

Farce-Comedy Well Staged By CAT Group

By MARGARET DOHETRY

The choice of "Squaring the Circle," Russian romantic farce-comedy, by members of the Canadian Art Theatre as the second play in their current series, was a happy one if the audience's reaction is any indication.

Written by the well known modern Russian playwright, Valentin Katiev, the three act farce is a take-off on Communist party ethics with many a disdainful reference to "bourgeois prejudices."

The story concerns two young Soviets who share a pitifully shabby one-room apartment in comparative peace and content until each, unknown to his comrades, get "registered," in other words, married.

As a result there are some hilarious moments when each tries to explain to the other and to the respective brides the fact that all four will be living in the one room.

After much wailing, a solution is reached when Ludmilla, wife of Vasya, suggests that the room be divided in half. The other couple, Tonya and Abram agree. However, all is not as serene as it might be for Vasya soon tires of Ludmilla's domesticity and her efforts to take care of him, while Abram, on the other hand is becoming rather impatient with his life's companion who forever speaks of party policy, division of labor, and refers to love and other normal emotions as "bourgeois prejudice" and "feudal practices."

When it becomes evident that the two couples can no longer go on as they are, Abram discovers that "ethical or unethical" Ludmilla is the one for him, while the other two also realize that they are ideally suited to each other.

As all four are wondering whether they can dispose of their respective spouse, without causing people to talk, or the party to lose face, Emeljan, a wild Russian friend of the two boys, finds a solution by telling them that the Registrar, busy marrying people and entering their names in his book, can be persuaded that the names of the two couples are entered in the wrong columns, so a little erasing, a little rewriting, and everything is fine.

Although the ending does not come as a surprise, it being rather obvious after the first act, the bridegrooms would eventually change brides, still the play, which takes place during one of the five-year plans, is most interesting and amusing, particularly when given the good treatment it received last night by the C.A.T. players.

The responsibility for the comedy's success rests equally on the shoulders of both couples, who acquit themselves admirably. The roles of Ludmilla and Vasya are ably taken by Amelia Hall and Bruce Raymond, who were husband and wife under much more tragic circumstances in the initial play of the season, "Angel Street." Jackie Buck does well as Tonya, and Arthur Voronka, making his first appearance this year, is a most amusing Abram. The smaller role of Emeljan is portrayed by Neil Madden, who also is in charge of the lighting.

The production was directed and designed by Joy Thomson and was presented in Gertrude Scott Hall, Lennoxville.

Stoke Resident Is Killed In Road Accident

Roland Rousseau, 28, of Stoke, was fatally injured last Wednesday evening, when he was struck by a car, driven by Father L. A. Poulin, of Valcourt.

Rousseau, an employee of the Dominion Experimental Farm, at Lennoxville, was bicycling on the Cookshire highway from the Experimental Farm road, when, blinded by the sun, he failed to see the car which struck him. Father Poulin, in an effort to avoid the cyclist, swerved to the left, hit the ditch, and rolled over, causing slight injuries to himself and heavy damages to his automobile.

An inquest into the accident, which was reported by Provincial Police Officer J. R. Bergeron, will be held today.

A second accident occurred on the Brompton Road at 5:30 p. m. Thursday involving R. P. Wyse and Harry Evans, of Vimy Street.

Evans, who was following a truck, made an effort to pass it, but seeing another car coming toward him, he swerved in behind the truck.

Wyse, the driver of the other car, thinking Evans had made a definite attempt to pass the truck, turned into the ditch, which resulted in considerable damage to his car.

Provincial Police officer J. R. Bergeron, who also reported this accident, said no one was hurt.

DRONES IN PLANNED ECONOMY

Plain speaking from people within their own country has long been welcomed by the majority of Britons, so it is to be hoped that some recent remarks of Cecil Palmer, an English journalist, on the economic situation in the Old Country. Speaking before a United States audience he declared:

"What is wrong with Britain today is, quite frankly, that more and more non-producers are living on the backs of fewer and fewer producers. Over 2,000,000 men and women in Britain are directly employed in either national or local government. All their work combined does not bring a roll and better to the breakfast table. They do not create anything. They frustrate everything.

"The Government itself has put up posters all over Britain reminding everybody that we must 'work or want.' But every new dose of socialism makes it more certain that it will soon be 'work and want.' Every step into nationalization adds to the non-producing classes and automatically weakens those who must carry the burden of production. The efficient worker subsidizes the inefficient. The producer carries the parasite. Incentive is lost. Self-help is discouraged. State help is glorified..."

This prompts industry to ask: "What would happen if Mother Nature reversed the usual order of things in a bee hive and allowed the drones, those useless consumers, to take over the reins of the buzzing little community? Obviously, the poor old workers would be on the wing long after sundown to gather enough honey for the non-productive drones. Maybe, in desperation, the honey seekers would get fed up with carrying the burden of production for their new masters and slacken off in their flights among the flowers to such an extent that the busy hum of the hive would tail off into a bzz-bzz of inefficiency.

It all sounds a bit fantastic, and for the sake of the apiary people and those who like a bit of honey with their toast, let us hope that it never happens. But countries in the grip of socialistic experimentation are pretty much in the same sad state as our unnatural beehive. Government employees, like the drones, have taken over in ever-increasing numbers and economy of government has vanished in the expanding horde of red-tapeters.

A MARITIMES PROJECT

Their geographical position and physical contour give the Maritime provinces an unusual interest in transportation questions, as is evidenced by the length of the submissions of governments and private organizations in that area to the Royal Commission investigating transportation conditions in Canada. Among the projects strongly favored is the construction of a canal across the Isthmus of Chignecto, the eighteen-mile strip of low, marshy land that connects Nova Scotia with New Brunswick.

This canal, as a glance at the map will show, would provide a greatly shortened route between Bay of Fundy ports and those on the St. Lawrence, the Gulf, and Northumberland Strait.

In its brief to the Royal Commission on transportation, the New Brunswick Government is stressing the advantages of the recommended waterway. The canal proponents have a reasonable case, and it is one that should receive every consideration.

At this distance most persons will be inclined to regard the canal as a project that must be undertaken eventually, to rectify what may be classed as a geographical oversight.

The volume of marine traffic which would use the Chignecto Canal if it were to be opened tomorrow might be small, in relation to the investment, but this is not the way in which need for the development should be measured. Rather, an effort should be made to estimate the traffic, and new business, that the canal as a going concern would promote.

Viewed in this light, the Chignecto Canal shapes up as a good national investment, and a new encouragement to the Maritimes.

THE REDS IN ITALY

Further indication that the Communist party in Italy has passed its peak, for the time being at least, is contained in the decision of the Chamber of Deputies to approve the North Atlantic Pact by a vote of 323 to 160.

This action was taken despite an intense campaign by the Russians and their Italian sympathizers to block the passage of the measure as a violation of the terms of the peace treaty with the United Nations. The Russian note to Italy and the other powers was unusual to say the least but is perfectly in keeping with the general policy of the Communists to label anything which they do not approve as acts of aggression.

The opposition to the pact is a reflection of the real Russian attitude. The readiness of Moscow to call out aggression every time any other nation acts in its own interest can only mean that the Russians themselves have serious long-term aggressive ideas which might be curbed if the democracies decide to work together for a common cause.

It is significant, however, that the North Atlantic Pact contains no provision covering mutual aggression but rather is designed to limit the joint moves to defensive action in the case anyone is attacked — something the Russians do not understand.

PRESS COMMENTS

HAND-OUTS AND POSTWAR BOOM HELPED THE LIBERALS

The Telegram, Toronto
A reliable public opinion poll that would synthesize the reasons for the electors' preference for one political party over the others in an election would be a good deal more interesting and instructive than those polls which attempt to forecast the result on voting day.

The Financial Post has conducted a symposium on the subject, asking editors and reporters their opinions on the result of the general election. These newspapermen, who are as objective a class of observers as could be found, have given a variety of opinions. The highlight of the symposium is the widely held opinion that the monetary hand-outs in various forms from the Liberal governments at Ottawa and the postwar boom were major influences contributing to the victory of the Liberals. Of those replying to the Post's symposium seven mentioned the general prosperity as an important influence on the result and nine gave it as their opinion that the government side was helped as a result of family allowances, higher pensions, Wheat Board payments to western farmers on previous years crops, etc. These opinions gathered from many keen observers bears out The Telegram's comment on the result: "People will not vote against Santa Claus."

Final figures on the popular vote have not yet been received, but from the partially complete returns it is apparent that left wing electors who voted for third parties in the 1945 general election swung over to the Liberals in this year's election. Some of the editors in the Post's symposium have expressed the opinion that the left-wingers voted Liberal because they looked on the government as sympathetic to a mild form of Socialism.

Another important fact disclosed by the incomplete returns is that although the Conservative party lost seats in the House of Commons 200,000 more people voted for it this year than in 1945.

"ANCIENT RIGHTS"

Saint John Telegraph-Journal
We are reminded that at the opening of Newfoundland's provincial legislature parliamentary government was restored to that island after an unavoidable interregnum. Before proceedings began, the Speaker of the legislature asked the Lieutenant-Governor to return the "ancient rights and privileges" of the parliamentary form and his Honor replied: "I am pleased to grant you the request." It was doubtless a formality, but one packed with meaning.

BE CAREFUL!

Brockville Recorder and Times
Anyone who has had much to do with the river knows the necessity of being always over-careful in regard to gasoline and gasoline fumes when aboard any type of gasoline-powered vessel. Even experienced sailors are inclined to become careless at times and forget the power which can be unleashed by giving high-test gasoline too casual a treatment. Tremendous pressures are latent in these fumes and need only one spark to change them into a death-dealing agent.

FOUR YEARS AFTER

Canadian Grocer
Every week, newspaper clippings come to our desk telling of two or three retailers being fined in court on charges of selling something above the controlled prices.

The war has been over for four years. While it was in progress, we had, and perhaps rightly so, a system of controls to prevent prices on short items getting out of line. But we fail to see why the government, through the Wartime Prices and Trade Board, continues to persecute anyone at this late date for selling a dozen oranges or citrus juice above the maximum permitted.

Inspectors continue to draw government pay to wander through food stores to see if anyone is charging a cent or two more than he should. If most foods were still subject to maximum mark-ups or prices, there might be some reason for maintaining an enforcement staff. But with practically everything out from under wartime restrictions, is there any sane reason for doing so?

SMALLPOX AS NEW LOW

Metropolitan Life Bulletin
There were 59 cases of smallpox reported in the United States in 1948. This number, setting a new low record, was but one-third the total (173) reported in 1947, the previous minimum. The cases last year were less than one per cent of the number only a decade earlier; in 1938 there were 14,939 cases of the disease reported in our country.

In 1948, there were 27 states and the District of Columbia entirely free from smallpox, an area embracing about two-thirds of the total population.

No Rest for the Weary

The Order Changeth

By H. W. GENDREAU

Shefford County has a distinction all its own. No other county in the Province can claim as many place-names taken from the Bible as this historic county of the Eastern Townships. There is Canaan, in the Township of Granby; Berea, in the Township of Roxton; Bethel and Bethany, in the Township of Ely. The early settlers must have been well versed in biblical lore and appreciated the meaning of the names. It is a matter of regret that the Bible of being close to God, and again our imagination conjures a Bethany, a place set aside, where the Master's Spirit still lingers, and where honest toilers of the soil go, to rest, to commune, and to receive new life.

But times and circumstances have changed, and it is a matter of regret that these names and their first associations are now all but forgotten, and their traditions are likely to be lost to future generations. Berea is no more. Egypt is little more than a memory. Bethel and Bethany have lost their former meaning, and Canaan has degenerated into "Cannell"—a name without sense or meaning, which jars the ear and grates upon the heartstrings of those who are still sensitive to the memories of the past.

By a stretch of our own imagination, we can look back and see a cavalcade of loaded ox-carts moving slowly across the rocky ridges from Egypt to the more fertile land of Canaan—the leaders imbued with the same hopes that impelled the Israelites of old in their journey to a promised land. We can also imagine some intrepid missionaries travelling through the sparsely settled country, holding services among people of a different creed and being so well received that they named the place Berea. Again we can see in our mind's eye a modern Abraham, Jacob, or Samuel, building an altar in a remote part of this Canadian wilderness, and calling it Bethel because he had had a dream of being close to God. And again our imagination conjures a Bethany, a place set aside, where the Master's Spirit still lingers, and where honest toilers of the soil go, to rest, to commune, and to receive new life.

What the Canadians did in the Second World War is too green in memory to require recapitulation, but it can be said that the nation emerged from the victorious encounter much bigger in stature and greater in international admiration. Canada became a World Power.

That was not all. She became to Britain the big, strong brother of a mighty family better known as the Commonwealth of Nations, the members of which were proud to say "I am a Canadian." Today they will do so with increased assurance, for in a world that finds governments floundering near the quicksands, Canada stands firmly planted on a solid foundation of complete freedom and confidence. The nation is to be envied for its good fortune.

'If There Were More Countries Like Canada In The World'

From the Trinidad Guardian

Canada is one of the few countries that can be called really stable in every sense. Her recovery is sound and adequate, she enjoys political equanimity, and her people are renowned for their hospitality, balance and industrial toughness.

The potentialities of the country are immense, and the spirit of her people is so high that well may they claim it to be a privilege to say "I am a Canadian." Today they will do so with increased assurance, for in a world that finds governments floundering near the quicksands, Canada stands firmly planted on a solid foundation of complete freedom and confidence. The nation is to be envied for its good fortune.

The way Canada stood by the Mother Country and the great organization of free nations of which she was the central figure will never be forgotten, either in London or the other capitals of the Commonwealth. Nor will Britain lightly forget what Canada did for her in that way of assistance after the war, and is still prepared to do once a way is found to arrange the finances of the two nations, having regard to the chaos existing in the international money market. Canada's trouble is that she aspires to do too much for Britain and has to be kept in check. For there is always a tomorrow yet to come.

To that the great Dominion is looking with quiet confidence. There is no stampeding these Canadians, for they are progeny of excellent stock and know what they want. Convincing proof of this was shown in the general election just completed, for there was scarcely a voice raised for communism by these hardworking, sensible, ambitious and tolerant people who placed their trust in moderation and stability, in preference to reaction and confusion.

In this task Canada has not been and will not be found wanting. For this and for many other reasons the world owes her a deep debt of gratitude, higher wages for doing less work—and the delightful promise from the government that it will prevent unemployment and unpleasantness. The state needs more, better and faster production, but human nature being what it is, the fact

The Record Short Story

PROJECTION BOOK

By SANFORD JARRELL

Hank Vetter's beautiful blonde secretary—the "you oughta be in pictures, baby" type—was seated in the outer office when Hank's pretty young niece Polly arrived. She warned Polly: "Hank is in a terrible mood, Polly. He's been ripping and snorting all day. Do you just have to be his now?"

Polly said, "I'm not afraid of the old bear," and Barbara, the secretary, shrugged a pair of as pretty shoulders as you can find in Hollywood and said, "Okay, Polly. You asked for it. He's all yours."

Polly Vetter looked like a million in a trim grey tailored suit as she opened the door leading into the private office of the publicity director of Fairfax Studios. This office was like a barn, if you can imagine a barn paneled in worm-eaten cypress imported from the Everglades; a waste of money. Hank always said, when there was so much redwood right here in California. Furthermore, barns may be carpeted in new-mown hay and all that sort of stuff, but the carpet in Hank's sanctum was so thick that a troop of cavalry wouldn't make much noise in proceeding the vast distance to where he sat enthroned.

The girl had made that journey in good times and bad and was familiar with every foot of the way, and there were a good many feet between the door and the huge desk behind which sat 250 pounds of bone and muscle puffing away at a dollar cigar. When Hank Vetter wasn't smoking a corncob pipe, he was smoking a dollar cigar. He had the greatest contempt for imported briars and meerschaums, and he said he wouldn't be seen dead with the average cigar, say a three-for-a-dollar brand.

The Chief—the headman of Fairfax—thought this was perfectly silly, because he had found a rum-flavored cigar in a crooked shape that retailed for six cents which he wouldn't have traded for any dollar cigar in the market, and the Chief was not stingy nor nickel-nursing and had plenty of moola.

Hank glared at his niece as she finally reached her destination and bought a kiss on his cheek. Most any other man in Hollywood would have been delighted, but not the publicity genius of Fairfax. He was thoroughly mad at Polly and at the world in general. Things were not doing so well. He had told off his crew of publicity boys and girls plenty that day. And it was partly Polly's fault.

Yesterday had been his niece's birthday and he had given her a nice big check, saying, "Polly, you haven't bought a new frock in a couple of years. I know you're smart and make most of your own clothes, but now I want you to splurge and get something nice, something semi-formal." And then, a tremendous concession for Hank, he added: "You get all dolled up in a new frock, and I'll get into a dinner jacket, and we'll go places."

This really was something. Hank only put on formal clothes maybe once or twice a year, when he couldn't get out of it, and he almost never went to the night spots where tourists go to gaze at the stars.

Well, sure enough, last night he showed up at Aunt Martha's home in Burbank, where Polly lived, and she looked lovely. She was in something white, frilly and very simple, and he knew he had seen it before. On the way to a famed night club in the Sunset Strip, he asked her: "Don't tell me you bought that frock with that birthday check?"

"No, darling," she replied demurely. "I didn't. I'll tell you tomorrow what I did with it. It was a beautiful present, the best present any girl ever got from her uncle."

He blew up, but took her to dinner and let some of the young men around the Fairfax lot who happened to be at the same place dance with the divine creature. But all things considered, he was mad. Just another fly in the ointment. Then, this afternoon when she appeared just as cool as a cucumber and about as unresponsive as he was tempted to turn her across his knees and administer a good old-fashioned spanking.

"I'll show you, darling," she said, "what I did with that birthday check."

"Set up some drug store cow-boy," he said with some bitterness.

He entered the building and a pleasant-faced woman with gray hair greeted them. Hank introduced her to Hank as "Mrs. Bell, the superintendent. The older woman said, "You're right on time, Miss Vetter. We're ready for you. And for you, Mr. Vetter. I understand that you're really responsible for what?" Then he thought better of it. They followed Mrs. Bell down a spotless corridor, into a room where there were three beds.

In the centre bed lay a little girl, about 11, who was on her back. On the ceiling was the reflection of a page of a book, words and an illustration. The child was staring upward fascinated.

"It's time to turn the page, Helen," asked Mrs. Bell. "Just a minute," replied the girl. Then, in a new frock, and I'll get into a dinner jacket, and we'll go places."

"Now's the time. I'm pressing the button." The page turned. Another illustration, some more simple words and a picture. The little girl seemed to be in another world.

"Helen has been flat on her back for seven months," Mrs. Bell said softly. "This is the greatest thing that has happened to her in all that time. It has put a new spirit into her, getting to see this Projected Book every day.

"And it's all due to your generosity, Mr. Vetter," she added, simply, and he knew he had seen it before. On the way to a famed night club in the Sunset Strip, he asked her: "Don't tell me you bought that frock with that birthday check?"

"No, darling," she replied demurely. "I didn't. I'll tell you tomorrow what I did with it. It was a beautiful present, the best present any girl ever got from her uncle."

Sprays Reduce Pre-Harvest Apple Drop

The pre-harvest dropping of apples is a problem which annually confronts the commercial grower. The discovery of a chemical which would reduce the pre-harvest drop of apples was made by the United States Department of Agriculture in 1935.

effective on the summer than fall and winter varieties. The relatively high temperatures prevailing when the summer apples reach maturity are considered to be the main contributing factor. Melba and Yellow Transparent respond well to these sprays, while McIntosh is inconsistent.

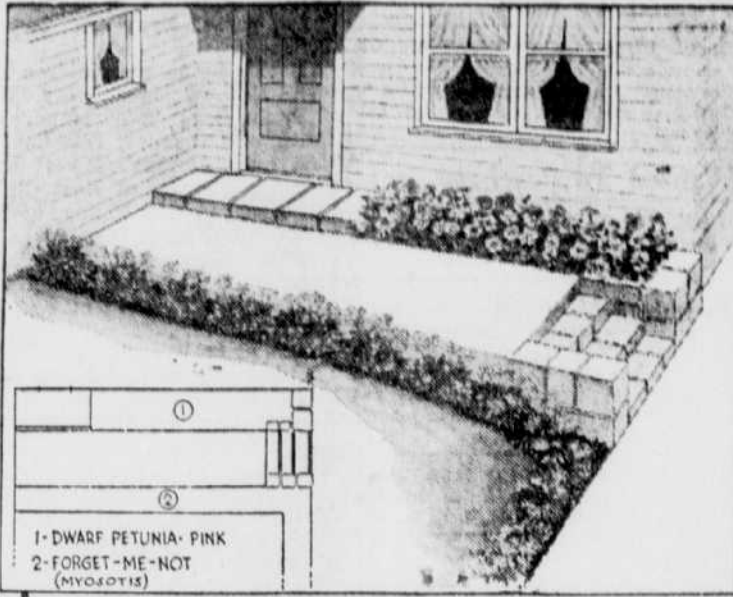

Up to date naphthaleneacetic acid, the sodium salt of naphthaleneacetic acid, and naphthaleneacetamide, have been the chemicals commonly used. Although most varieties respond favourably to these chemicals, it has been found that McIntosh, the main commercial variety in Eastern Ontario, does not respond to treatment in some seasons, while in others the effect of this treatment is short-lived.

Foot Health Important To Dairy Herd

Foot health and comfort is an important item in the care of the cow herd. In summer, when the cows are turned out to graze, their feet should be in good condition to carry them over the pastures and back and forth to the barn to be milked.

Every spring at least, the whole herd should be checked over, cows and young cattle alike, to see that their feet are in suitable condition. Those individuals requiring attention should have their feet trimmed. Usually cattle which stand on cement stalls need less trimming as their feet wear off on the concrete.

Flower Bordered Path Is Inviting Entrance To Home

A frequent planting problem with new homes is presented by a sidewalk approach to the front door, as shown in the illustration. Between the walk and the house is a narrow space where it would be difficult to mow lawn grass; and with low modern houses, shrubs and tall evergreens should not be planted there.

Such an area is ideal, however, for a planting of dwarf growing annual flowers, which will give a gay welcome to visitors, and also provide many a floral decoration for the living room, or the dinner table.

If this bed is balanced with a border of flowers on the opposite side of the walk, a doorway garden will result, which will be a constant joy all summer.

Annual flowers which bloom all summer are numerous, and two of the most reliable are marigolds, and portulaca. Both revel in the sun, and like hot weather. Dwarf marigolds come in many varieties, with either single or double flowers. In color they range from primrose yellow to deep maroon. Flowers of the Harmony type have yellow centers, surrounded by maroon petals, giving a striking two-tone effect. The single-flowered variety Red Head is the nearest approach to bright red which has been achieved in a marigold. All are easy to grow from seed, and may be transplanted easily. They bloom until the plants are killed by freezing.

Portulaca is one of the most popular flowers in this country. It belongs to the same family as the No. 1 weed, pursley; and once it gets started is almost as difficult to kill. But no one wants to kill the beautiful portulaca, whose bright red, orange and lavender flowers, both single and double, are ideal for a border in the full sun. All the varieties grow from seed, germinating quickly in warm weather. They stand dry weather remarkably and like a sandy soil. They will spread over the ground and cover it with a colorful blanket, bearing flowers freely until winter. It is not good for cut flowers, as they usually close up when cut.

"The Three County Fair of the Eastern Townships" SHEPPARD - BROME - MISSISSQUOI

Three Horse Races Every Day

On August 12th, the first day, all cattle will be judged. There will be three horse races and the usual attractions in the Grand Stand.

Special Calf Club Classes will be held in the evening.

On Saturday more than 100 contestants from Calf Clubs and Junior Farmers will compete for honors in the new Arena.

Entries for all classes of livestock are coming in steadily and the stalls will be well filled. These will include all breeds of dairy cattle as well as beef cattle. Numerous horses from distant counties are also entered. In cattle there are additional classes for junior yearling heifers and bulls as well as a separate class for dry two-year-old heifers.

Everything points to the biggest and best show seen in Waterloo. The new Arena is an attraction for the cattle-men - Competition from outside the three counties is an attraction for horse exhibitors. The best of judges have been selected, and it promises to be a great show with long desired competition from several counties.

The Waterloo Fair is the show that gives a real cross-section of the Eastern Townships.

Prize lists will be available soon and early reservations are requested so that stalls may be allotted. For prize lists or further information write -

Livestock Sales Listed For The Week

Montreal, July 22. - This week the two Montreal livestock markets offered for sale 2,504 cattle, 1,832 sheep and lambs, 2,981 hogs and lambs, 2,981 hogs and 2,965 calves.

Near the end of the week heavier cattle receipts were beginning to come in. Approximately 600 steers were offered, the balance of the receipts were cows of all qualities.

Trading was fairly active and good steers were 50 cents higher compared with last week, but cows and bulls were down $1 on all categories.

Top price paid was 23 for about two leads of mixed good and choice quality steers; good steers were 22-22.50, medium 20.50-21.50 and common kinds 14-19.

A few good heifers reached 20 with some tops at 21, medium were 17-19 and common 11-16.50. Good cows made 15-16 with some tops (good westerns) at 16.50 and 17; medium cows were 13.50-14.50, common 11.50-13. Canners and cutters were 8-11. Good bulls sold from 17.50-19, common 12-16.50.

Calves moved slowly at prices $2 lower than last week. Sucker calves ranged from 17-21, tops 22. Drinkers or pair fed calves brought 10-14; grassers 10-12.50. Lambs were easier. A few good lambs brought 24, with mixed lots of medium and good lots selling at 20-23. Sheep were lower, ranging from 4-10 according to quality.

Hogs reached a high of 35.25, with some at 35. Sows started the week at 22-23 dressed, but were selling at 21 at the close of the week.

Trenton, Ont., in 1948.

Recommendations—Use either naphthaleneacetic acid, the sodium salt of naphthaleneacetic acid, or naphthaleneacetamide at five ounces to one hundred imperial gallons. On the basis of one year's results 2-methyl-4-chlorophenoxyacetic acid appears to be promising as a Harvest Spray for McIntosh at a rate of five ounces to one hundred imperial gallons.

Market Prices Are Lower Than Week Ago

Market prices have fallen considerably since last week, especially in the case of vegetables. Eggs were the only exception and have risen from two to six cents a dozen. Large quantities of local cucumbers, lettuce, rhubarb, beets, and radishes, on the market have sent prices to a new low for the season. Most meats were down from two to 10 cents a pound, as in the case of calf's liver.

London, July 22. - (Reuters) - Three aliens with Communist affiliations concerned with the dispute at the London docks are to be deported, Home Secretary James Chuter Ede announced today. Two are United States citizens and the other a Dutch national.

Ede told Parliament: "It was reported to me yesterday that three aliens with Communist affiliations, one a Dutch national named Blankensee, and two American nations, Goldblatt and Maletta, had landed in this country."

"After satisfying myself that their visit here was concerned with the dispute at the London docks, I decided it was conducive to the public good that they should be deported and I signed deportation orders in respect of the three men who as a result were detained by officers of the metropolitan police today."

Unusual Trophy At Chicago Exhibition

The competition at Chicago's International Live Stock Exposition and Horse Show will be keener than ever this year. Large increases in prize premiums have been promised show winners in recognition of its 60th anniversary.

In the classes for purebred Aberdeen-Angus, Hereford and Short-horn cattle, prize money is increased by $3,000 over last year—from $6,000 to $9,000—on each breed. When the steer classes are also included, cash premiums offered in each breed total $20,000, the highest in the history of the world fairs show. Increased prizes are also scheduled for the sheep and swine classes.

An unusual trophy for the forthcoming International Shropshire show is a silver cup which was originally won by the Perth, Scotland, show in 1899 by the Earl of Strathmore, father of Queen Elizabeth. It will be presented to the exhibitor of the champion Shropshire ram.

The Exposition will be held November 26 to December 3 in the International Amphitheatre at the Chicago Stock Yards.

The Doctor Says.

PRECAUTION WITHOUT PANIC IS BEST BET FOR AVOIDING POLIO

By Edwin P. Jordan, M.D.
So far, medical science has not been able to offer a sure way of warding off poliomyelitis. But when an epidemic of polio is in the community everyone should be aware of the danger and should call a doctor at the first signs of illness. This is not only for their own sakes, but also it helps to avoid exposing others.

The National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis recommends several precautionary steps which seem worthwhile following:

Keep flies away from food. Use the purest milk and water. While the exact means of spread of the disease is not known, contaminated water and milk are always dangerous and flies have repeatedly been known to carry the infantile paralysis virus.

Hygiene Important
Pay careful attention to personal cleanliness, such as thorough hand washing before eating. Hygienic habits should always be observed.

If possible avoid tonsil and adenoid operations during epidemics. Careful study has shown that such operations, when performed during an epidemic, tend to increase the danger of contracting infantile paralysis in its most serious form.

Maintain community sanitation at a high level at all times.

Do not swim in polluted water. Avoid all unnecessary contact with persons with any illness suspicious of infantile paralysis.

Avoid overting and extreme fatigue from strenuous exercise. While fatigue and chilling cannot cause infantile paralysis, they may cause the attack to be more severe. The question of closing schools and swimming places has not been settled. Some doctors think there is more danger from contacts which children make when they are at school. Also there is a difference of opinion on the danger of contracting polio from swimming pools. Swimming itself is not considered harmful but if the water is contaminated by sewage and human pollution, there may be a definite danger.

Until more is learned about the way in which polio is spread, reasonable caution without undue alarm is the best policy.

YOU CAN'T BUY A BETTER MOTOR OIL

Not one but the three things you want most in a motor oil can be found in PEERLESS: 1. PERFORMANCE: PEERLESS maintains cleaner working parts in engines and provides faster heat transfer from hot engine surfaces. 2. QUALITY: PEERLESS is refined from carefully selected crude oils, and to the refined product, certain protective agents are added to produce the PEERLESS Alloyed Oil.* 3. ECONOMY: Economy starts with better lubrication. PEERLESS reduces friction and heat caused by metal-to-metal contact, thus reducing the causes of many motor failures.

* To improve Peerless Motor Oil, chemical agents are combined with refined mineral oils to form the alloy. The added protection given to the oil by the "alloying agents" increases its resistance to high engine temperatures—helps protect engines from corrosive acids—keeps them cleaner.

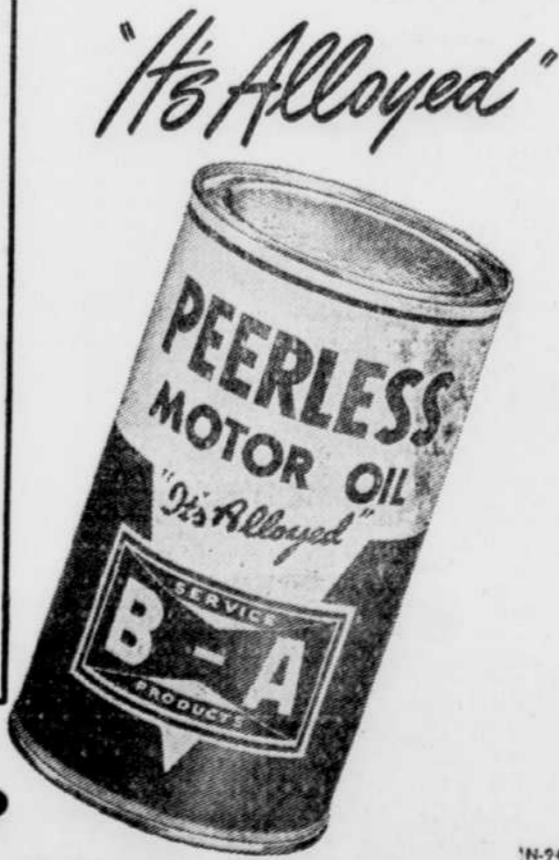

"Peerless certainly has what it takes for hot summer driving, motors run cooler—and longer—with fewer expensive repairs," says Dollard Marchand, Marchand Automobile Co., Magog, Que.

"I wish every motorist could realize, like a mechanic does, the benefits of using Peerless. It pays off in cold cash," states Gordon Gibson of Gibson's Service Station, Main and Hawthorne Sts., Ottawa, Ontario.

"Our Peerless customers never seem to have very big repair bills. There certainly must be something to the Peerless economy story," says W. T. A. "AB" FLAVELLE, President, Mar-Lin Motors Ltd., Saskatoon, Sask.

The climax of all ELECTIONS

In the early days, the vote on Vancouver Island was limited to those holding 20 or more acres of land. In the celebrated Nanaimo election of 1859, the candidate was Capt. John Swanson—and Capt. Charles Stuart was the only qualified voter! Swanson was duly elected by a majority of one, causing the "Colonist" to remark, "This caps the climax of all elections that were ever heard of."

In contrast to the controversy which this state of affairs caused, there is remarkable unanimity among connoisseurs over the palate-pleasing quality of Harwood's Canadian Rye Whisky. Mellow, smooth and aged in the wood, Harwood's today is, indeed, Canada's finest!

DOROTHY DIX

Unsympathetic Mother

Provision For Home Entertaining Important To Youth

Dear Miss Dix: My mother will not let me have any parties at home where boys are present. The reason of this is at one time I had a little gathering and she came in and some of the boys and girls were holding hands and others dancing and she said she would not have such goings on in her house. My friends are nice girls and boys and behave themselves properly and I am 20 years old and able to take care of myself. Don't you think my mother is wrong?

ROSE.

Answer: I certainly do. Any mother who does not let her daughter receive her company at home is simply forcing her out on the street for the protection that a home background gives her.

I would think that any woman who had a grain of intelligence in her head would realize this, and that she would be so glad that her daughter was bringing her friends home with her, instead of running around to roadhouses and Heaven knows where, that she would welcome them with open arms and not be too critical of their holding hands, or even of their petting a little. For she may be very sure of one thing, and that is, there is no better chaperon than a girl's own house, and that there won't be so much hand-holding and drinking and kissing there as there would be in parked automobiles or night clubs or places where parties are likely to get rough.

A lot of things that the younger generation do and see no harm in doing are shocking to their parents brought up in a stricter tradition. But it gets fathers and mothers nowhere to forbid their children to do these things and to shut their doors on their children's friends, because the youngsters are going to do as the others of their set do and they are going to have their friends secretly if they can't have them openly. All that the parents achieve by their sternness is just to alienate their children from them and keep their children from confiding in them, and this prevents them from having any influence over the youngsters and perhaps being able to steer them in the right direction in some time of need.

If a girl is not permitted to bring her boy friends to the house, her parents cannot know with whom she is associating, nor whether they are fit companions for her or not. Mother and father may think that they are keeping her away from boys, but instead they are simply forcing her to pick up boys on the street and at the corner drug store and exposing her to all the danger of blind dates and making her the more boy crazy because boys are forbidden to her.

But if a girl can have all the boys she wants and all the parties she wants at home and mother makes things happy for her, she is willing to listen to mother's rating of them because she knows that mother isn't a spoilsport.

Dear Dorothy Dix: What can an older sister do to keep her brother of 22 from making a marriage that will wreck his life? My brother is a talented young chap, full of promise, and he has fallen in love with a silly little doll who is selfish, greedy and spoiled and thinks of nothing but indulging herself in her very whim. Her sister, of the same type, has already wrecked the life of a fine young man whom she married and left in a few months when she found out that he could not give her all the finery she wanted. Can you help me avert this fate for my brother?

PEGGY.

Answer: When a boy becomes infatuated with that sort of sexy little creature he is deaf to all reason and there is no use in arguing with him about it. Every objection that you bring up merely fans the flame of his passion because it makes him become her champion. The only remedy is to try in some way to throw them together for a few weeks in such a manner that he would have a chance to get bored to death with her chatter and see how brainless and self-centred she is. If he had to put up with a few of her tantrums when she was crossed and see how unreasonable she is, and especially if he had to make a few sacrifices for her it would cure him.

Dear Miss Dix: Would you overlook the fault of conceit in a boy if you liked him?

ANTONIA.

Answer: Surely. Provided, of course, that he was not so egotistical that he was unendurable. No virtue that a boy could possibly have would atone for the boredom of having to listen to him eternally monologue about himself, about how great and wonderful he is, and how all the girls fall for him.

But a fair amount of self-conceit one can stand, provided it is offset by other good qualities. Indeed, conceit is sometimes a virtue, for we can only do what we think we can do and occasionally it is an incentive to a boy to live up to his own opinion of himself. But why not do some missionary work in deflating his ego?

The Record will be pleased to receive any letters to this Dorothy Dix column. These will be forwarded to Miss Dix who will answer them as quickly as possible.
