Energetic rhythmic troupe returns to Place des Arts

Stomping out the beat of everyday life

By Mathew McCully
SPECIAL TO THE RECORD
MONTREAL

They're back-and ready to beat you to a pulp! After a successful run at Place des Arts last year, the "drumless percussion group" Stomp is back to wow viewers with more astonishing rhythmic feats played on any worldly item that isn't nailed down.

This year's show had generally the same layout as last year. It started with one man sweeping the stage. Then, slowly, others joined in, tapping their brooms at different times, each complimenting the other. After a few minutes the eight members of Stomp had created an incredible beat with their brooms that filled the entire auditorium.

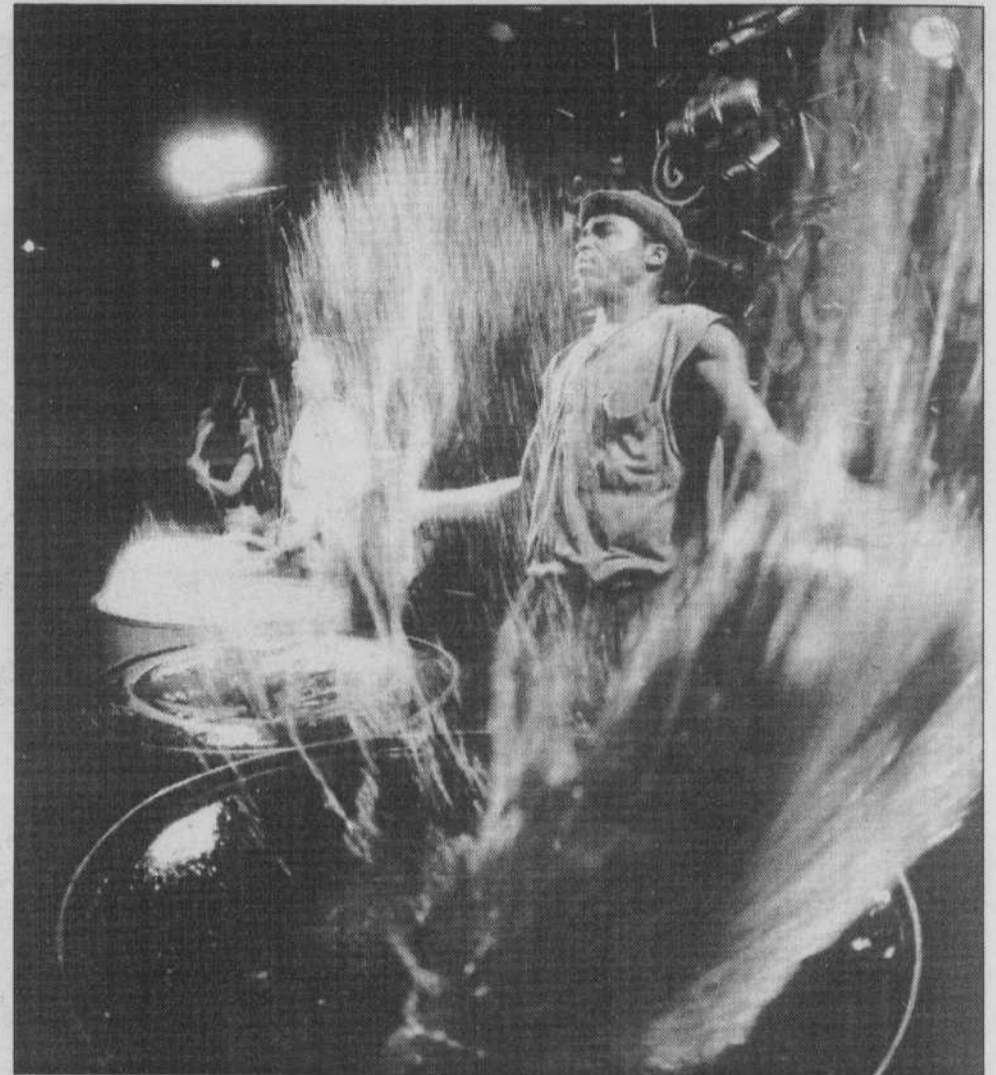

They then proceeded to display their skills with such "instruments" as zippo lighters, plastic bags and trash cans. My favorite section of the show was the "kitchen sink trio". Three men strapped sinks full of water and dishes to themselves and managed to drum out a fantastic song. They were able to create some very unique sounds by filling pots with different amounts of water to produce different notes. They even pulled the plug and used the sound of the water pouring into a bucket as a drum roll.

There wasn't a dull moment during the show. The beats became more and more complicated at each interval, and the intensity of the show grew steadily till the very end.

One change in this years show that proved almost more entertaining than the percussion, was the interaction between the members of Stomp and the audience. Rather than simply playing music and offering the occasional glance into the audience, this year's Stomp engages the viewer and demands constant attention. It is as though each person on the stage considers themselves to be the leader of the group, and every moment is a battle to win the audience over. While I assume every viewer had their favorite performer, what impressed me most was the group effort.

I would recommend Stomp to anyone looking for a truly energizing experience. The show was a fantastic spectacle of lights, music, humor and attitude. I guarantee that anyone who sees this show will never look at a paper bag or a broom stick the same way again.

Stomp will be playing from May 19 to May 31 at St-Denis Theatre in Montreal. Ticket prices range from $22.50 to $44.50, depending on the time. For more information, call 790-1111.

A little bit of Montreal is coming to Stanstead this weekend. The Montreal West Operatic Society is performing Gilbert & Sullivan's The Gondeliers at the Haskell Opera House.

The May 23 performance of The Gondeliers is the Operatic Society's last of the season, after shows at the Royal Vale Theatre in Montreal and at Theatre Lac Brome in Knowlton. The Gondeliers is Gilbert & Sullivan's third-last work, penned in 1889, and is a comedy about republicanism and social snobbery. The play takes place in 1750 Venice with two gondeliers finding brides while blindfolded. The audience later learns that one of the gondeliers is actually a King and in infancy had been betrothed to another aristocrat. The play takes off from there.

As in all G&S productions music is prominently featured. For example in Act 1 the first 20 minutes are without dialogue. For this production, the Montreal West Operatic Society features the talents of Anita Hayes who in 1997 was honored with the Best Supporting Actress award at the International Gilbert and Sullivan Festival in Philadelphia. There are two performances on May 23 at 2:30 p.m. and 8 p.m. at the Haskell Opera House. Tickets are available by calling the Opera House at 819-876-2020. Cost: $14 for adults and $10 for children under 12 in Canadian funds and $10 and $7 in U.S. funds.

Actor turned producer doesn't fear failure

Bullock pins hopes on Hope Floats

By Jamie Portman
SOUTHAM NEWS
PASCEDENA, CALIF.Sandra Bullock is contemplating what she'll do if her career really hits the skids.

Maybe, she muses, she'll manage a restaurant.

She figures she's simply being realistic. After all, she's had a fair number of box-office flops recently, and if the trend continues she could be finished in movies.

"I'm not afraid of what happens if I fail. I like what I did before I got into this acting stuff." Then she adds with a grin: "Waitressing is something I do well. But I can also see myself running a diner or a restaurant, or being the hostess of it."

So how come she doesn't sound nervous and uptight about the prospect of becoming a Tinseltown discard?

Maybe she's been tempered by her own experience of tragedy - events so painful she still can't bear to talk about them. Perhaps it's her belief that the film business is something of a crap shoot - an attitude which helps her maintain composure in the face of failure.

"I still feel very much the underdog," Bullock says. "I still don't feel that I have conquered anything in my life."

She's amazingly cheerful as - words flying out in all directions, hands in constant movement to underscore a point - she ventures into the treacherous shoals of self-analysis. She doesn't even take offence when reminded that, in contrast to the heady triumphs of Speed and While You Were Sleeping, most of her recent movies have been disasters: instead, she happily agrees and goes on to explain why they failed, and why the lessons she learned from these experiences triggered her decision to set up her own production company.

The value of such a move is that it gives her more control over the material she wants to do and makes her and her colleagues in a project less vulnerable to the whims of studio bosses.

The first film to come out under the banner of Bullock's Fortis company is Hope Floats, in which she plays a single mother who returns to her home town to try and rebuild her life after the collapse of her marriage. She had a wonderful time being an executive producer for the movie, which opens May 29. She loved every aspect of the process - from being involved in casting decisions, to working on the script with writer Steven Rogers and director Forest Whitaker, to discussing marketing strategies with Fox officials.

Actor/producer Sandra Bullock.

Lynda Obst, Bullock's co-producer and a veteran of the Hollywood trenches, says that Bullock is too smart to fail but adds that it's understandable why her 33-year-old colleague wanted to get involved in producing: it was an act of "self-protection" after the experience of movies like Speed 2.Trouble was - she was becoming associated with flops. She had hurtled into the public consciousness with her engaging performance as the reluctant driver of an out-of-control bus in the original Speed four years ago and then had cemented her bankability with The Net and While You Were Sleeping.But her box-office lustre faded with the failures of Two If By Sea, In Love And War and Speed 2. Still, each of these disasters taught her valuable lessons.She says that Two If By Sea, a personal project of co-star Dennis Leary, should have been a modestly budgeted film. "Unfortunately there was a poor director and a company involved which all of a sudden wanted to make another While You Were Sleeping. It didn't work, and you had to watch Dennis's little baby go to pieces."In Love And War was the real watershed for Bullock. "I found myself saying: I want to produce. I want to be in a position where I can stand behind my director and be able to say, make this movie the way you think it should be made."

In Bullock's world, failure and adversity are part of life's testing. She says three events - all tragic - changed her forever. "I don't really want to talk about them - but everything is for a reason - tragedy makes you whole. How can you protect anyone from tragedy? You can't. But I came out the other end OK. I'm still here."

It's a matter of achieving emotional resilience, she says. "I now have nothing to lose. I have absolutely nothing to fear."

All this explains why Bullock relates so strongly to Hope Floats and the character of Birdee Pruitt, the former local beauty queen whose perfect life crashes down around her.

Birdee finds herself back in her home town with her sullen daughter (Mae Whitman), again living with the mother (Gena Rowlands) she never really knew, and plunging into depression and self-pity.

"Birdee has built her life on this foundation and she thinks so highly of herself. It was such a false foundation - putting so much importance on popularity and marrying the right guy and having the right number of children and having the right lifestyle and getting out of that town to show that you're better than anyone else."

"Then, wham! Everything you've built this person on turns out to be not you. It's something very superficial, and although it's sad when it all falls apart, you now have to deal with life."

Bullock sees Birdee as someone who has never been honest about herself and never had to face up to reality. If she is to be saved, it will be because of the honesty of those about her - her mother, her daughter, her aspiring new boyfriend (Harry Connick Jr.) - and through being tested by tragedy.

"The only person who's dishonest is my character. My daughter's brutally honest, my mother's brutally honest. Everyone knows who they are because they've gone through enough crap and come out the other end. You need to have heartache, you need to have tragedy, to find out who you are. If you've been protected you're entire life, what good are you? She's avoided knowing how strong she can be in the face of tragedy."

Bullock's character takes terrible knocks in the film. Bullock herself has taken some terrible knocks in the business of filmmaking, and she knows she faces tough odds with Hope Floats - "a nice little film" arriving in the midst of such summer juggernauts as Godzilla and The Truman Show.

But she'll stand tall no matter how the film does. And nothing can take away the actual experience of making the film and being a producer for the first time. Still, she does have one confession: contrary to what people think, she's not always all sweetness.

"I have my bad days. I can be a bitch. I can be hard, because if you're producing you learn to say no, and I have learned to say no. But that doesn't mean people like you less - which had been my fear."

Mystery man

Grey Owl found peace in nature

By Richard McCallum
RECORD CORRESPONDENT

His adoptive tribe, The Ojibwa Nation called him "Wa -Sha-Quon-Asia" or He Who Flies By Night, but the world regaled him as Grey Owl.

He first appeared around the heavy wilderness of North Bay Ont in 1906 as an 18-year-old who earned his living as a trapper and hunter - in actual fact he was a natural woodsman. Even then many in the region thought him to be a Métis Indian, and he was rumored to be the blue-eyed son of an Apache mother and Scottish dad. For many years he lived with his first wife, the Ojibwa woman Angèle, until the outbreak of World War I. He enlisted in the Canadian forces and was a bona fide Canadian war hero. As a sniper he was an extremely valuable asset to the Canadian war effort, but the experience sickened him, and upon his discharge, Grey Owl became disenchanted with the material waste of the modern world. As he fled civilization, the naturalist began to know peace again. Taking as his second wife the Iroquois woman Anahareo the two lovers lived deep in the wilderness apart from any tribe.

In the winter of 1928-29 Grey Owl came across a mother beaver caught in a spring loaded trap. As he witnessed the tortured animal die a cruel and senseless death, the killer of men and beasts vowed never to take another life. He gathered up the baby beaver kits and reared them. Convinced by Anahareo to tell the world of the plight of the beaver, Grey Owl wrote a book on his life in the wilds which became wildly popular. Outfitted in a buckskin tunic and feather headdress, with stonelike facial features and a stern countenance, Grey Owl toured the world delivering lectures on conservation with a staccato speech pattern. Objectified as the epitome of a noble and brave savage, his fame reached true superstar status during the 30s. During one of his tours his enduring fame reached the King and Queen Of England. On the first anniversary of the abdication of Edward VIII, Grey Owl addressed King George VI and Queen Elizabeth (the current Queen Mother) and the princesses Elizabeth (now Queen Elizabeth) and Margaret Rose. In 1938, at age 50 he died of pneumonia. A day after his death, a fellow naturalist revealed that Grey Owl was in fact Englishman Archie Belaney from Hastings, England. The young Archie Belaney was raised by his aunts in Hastings. At 18, he convinced them to allow him to move to Toronto so that he could pursue his interests in farming. But as soon as he reached Canada he made his way into the northern wilderness. Upon his death, Grey Owl was vilified by the press for being a fraud. Others believe being an Indian is not about blood - it's about spirit, and Grey Owl had lots of that.

Movie greats choose pastoral setting for backdrop Grey Owl one of Canada's first conservationists

By Richard McCallum
RECORD CORRESPONDENT
LAKE MASSAWIPPI

It's a perfect spring day. The warm early afternoon sun shines brightly on the quiet lakefront that is the nature sanctuary of Grey Owl.

On the handhewn log porch of the rustic cabin, a strikingly beautiful Iroquois woman checks the budding teeth of a baby beaver. A moody Grey Owl silently passes her, but as he opens the cabin door to enter, he almost trips over the young kit.

"Cut. We're going to need another take on that please," says Lord Richard Attenborough, one of the industry's more respected movie directors, with a hearty laugh. "I just want to say on the record that I did not in any way harm or molest the young beaver!" responds actor Pierce Brosnan, better known as Naval Commander James Bond, secret agent 007 of Her Majesty's Secret Service.

The affable superstar has broken the tension on the set with this in jest and the cast and crew crack up into a gale of laughter as they set up to reshoot the scene.

From a ramshackled wooden bridge across the creek from the movie set, executive producer Jake Eberts smiles wryly at Brosnan's reference to the cruelty to animals inflicted by filmmakers which is well documented in Kenneth Anger's Hollywood Babylon.

The scene is re-shot quickly; when a Panavision camera rolls, the cost is over $1,000 a minute, and the assistant director calls for a lunch break. We are outside the picturesque village of North Hatley on the closed set of Grey Owl, a major motion picture starring Pierce Brosnan as the Ojibwa naturalist and one of the founding fathers of the conservationist movement in the 1930s.

The Canadian connection is Montreal-born producer Jake Eberts. Eberts was the founder and chief executive of Goldcrest Films (Chariots Of Fire, The Mission, The Killing Fields) and is a part time resident of the Eastern Townships. He has again teamed up with Lord Attenborough for the first time since their Oscar Award winning epic Gandhi.

Principal photography on the $30 million film started April 14 and the movie is currently midway through its 10-week shoot in Quebec. A largely Canadian crew of over 150 is on a whirlwind tour of the province, with locations reaching from the Laurentian Shield to the Eastern Townships, with Montreal as it's main base. The film then moves to Hastings, England for a three day shoot in mid June. Post production will be completed in the United Kingdom hopefully in time for a spring-time cinema release in 1999. The script is an original screenplay by screenwriter William Nicholson (Shadowlands, First Knight, Nell) which tells the dramatic true story of Grey Owl and his young wife Anahareo, who was as famous in his lifetime as Rudyard Kipling and Lawrence Of Arabia. An enigmatic figure, Grey Owl was one of the first modern conservationists who alerted society in the '30s to the squandering of Canada's natural resources. Upon his death, Grey Owl was revealed to have been Englishman Archie Belaney from Hastings, England, and later North Bay, Ontario.

Joining Pierce Brosnan as the female romantic lead for the picture is Canadian actress Annie Galipeau who plays Ana-hareo. Galipeau is an Algonquin Indian who lives in Manowaki, Quebec, close to the Indian reservation. She was discovered by Lord Attenborough over three years ago when he was first casting the part. Then she was thought to be too young for the part, but time was on her side.

Once Williamson's script had been completed, Eberts and Attenborough immediately sought out Brosnan for the leading role, but the talented superstar had a prior commitment to finish the Bond film Tomorrow Never Dies and its inherent global publicity obligations.

Brosnan, currently one of Hollywood's leading box office draws is riding high with the phenomenal success of his definitive portrayal of 007 and was thrilled with idea of working with Lord Attenborough who is often referred to as the quintessential actor's director.

"I am not playing the role as a hero. I am playing the role as a man," says Brosnan during a brief break from the film's hectic schedule.

"Grey Owl was a very complicated man who was not sure of his own identity. He was a man who ran away from himself, ran away from his childhood and the life he lived in England to become Archie/Grey Owl. He was a complex, fascinating, and tortured person."

"I think when he was out among nature on his own that he had the best contentment of his life, but when he tried to mix himself up with the rest of the world, things just fell apart for him. I'm sure in six months time there will be some residue of him which will remain with me, but in the meantime he is a wonderful character to live with."

When Richard Attenborough was a boy in Leicester, England in the 1930s he and his brother David queued for hours waiting to attend a lecture by the then celebrated exotic Red Indian Grey Owl who often toured Europe to promote his books and the cause for conservation.

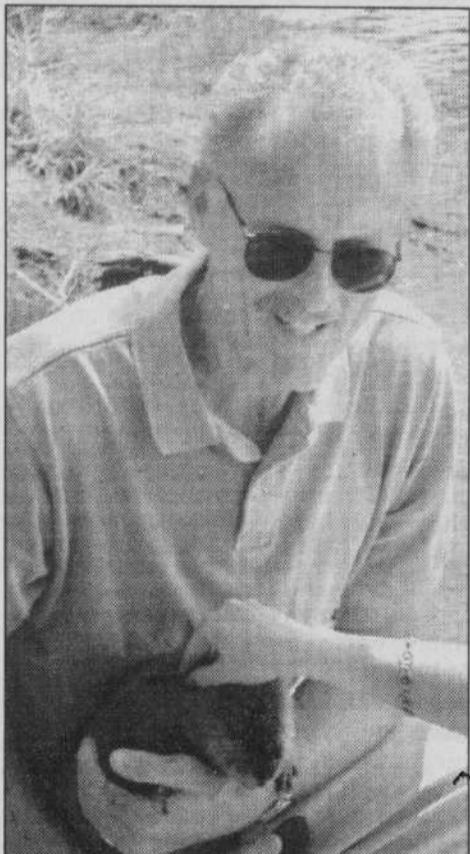

"I love biographical subjects," says the distinguished director. "Pierce and I are entertainers and our first concern is that people come to see our work."

"We are in the entertainment business but within the entertainment business there is still a context for talking about people who literally have affected the way that we see the world and Grey Owl did that."

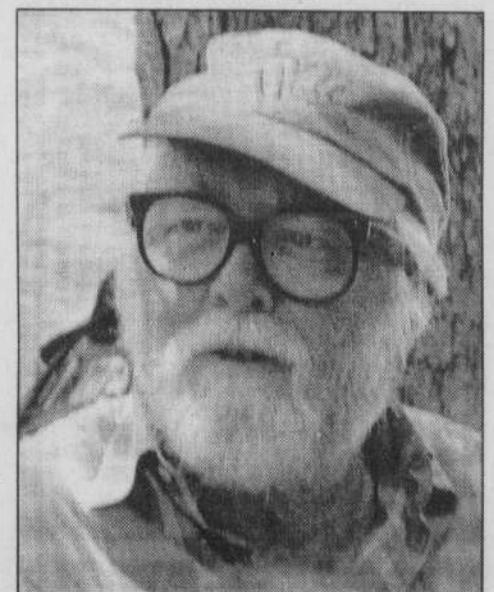

"After his death he was discarded and pushed aside, the respected thespian continues. "I feel that the case for the environment might have been considerably further advanced if the message had not been thrown out with the messenger. What Grey Owl had to say was true - whether it came from a villain or a hero. Grey Owl single-handedly saved the Canadian beaver and he began the whole campaign to save the Canadian forests.

"He was, quite simply a most remarkable man and his story has everything for the cinema-drama, humor, sentiment, a landscape and image that is quite extraordinary - the vast wilds of Northern Canada and its lakes."

"I find it very interesting that what he had to say could not be ignored," interjects Brosnan. "Here we are making a movie about him and during the 70s he was rediscovered, and that is because what he stood for was truthful, yet they say he was a dishonest man or a false fellow. But his sincerity and character as well as his caring for the wilderness, no one could take from him."

STEVE GROVES
Director Richard Attenborough

George Jones proves oldies still are goodies

Multi-talented Wariner releases one of his best

Come on over to the country" is one of the nicest invitations one can receive when it comes to music. On the country side this week there's many new releases and we'll take a look at what's hot.

STEVE WARINER.

Burnin' the Roadhouse Down, (Capitol)

Wariner has been blessed with an extremely fruitful career, producing 40 Top-40 hits between 1980 and 1994. Besides being a good country singer, he's one of the best guitar players in the music city.

He also masters the art of songwriting and tops it all with his skills as a painter.

For a while his career seemed to stall, partly due to the huge parade of newcomers with good looks and tight jeans. This wasn't enough to discourage Wariner, who persevered, turning his impressive writing skills to work for other popular artists such as Garth Brooks (co-writing "Long Neck Bottle") and Clint Black ("Nothing But The Tailights").

With the new album it's obvious the blond singer didn't give all his good material to other recording artists and kept a few good songs for his debut album on Capitol Nashville, one of the best of his career.

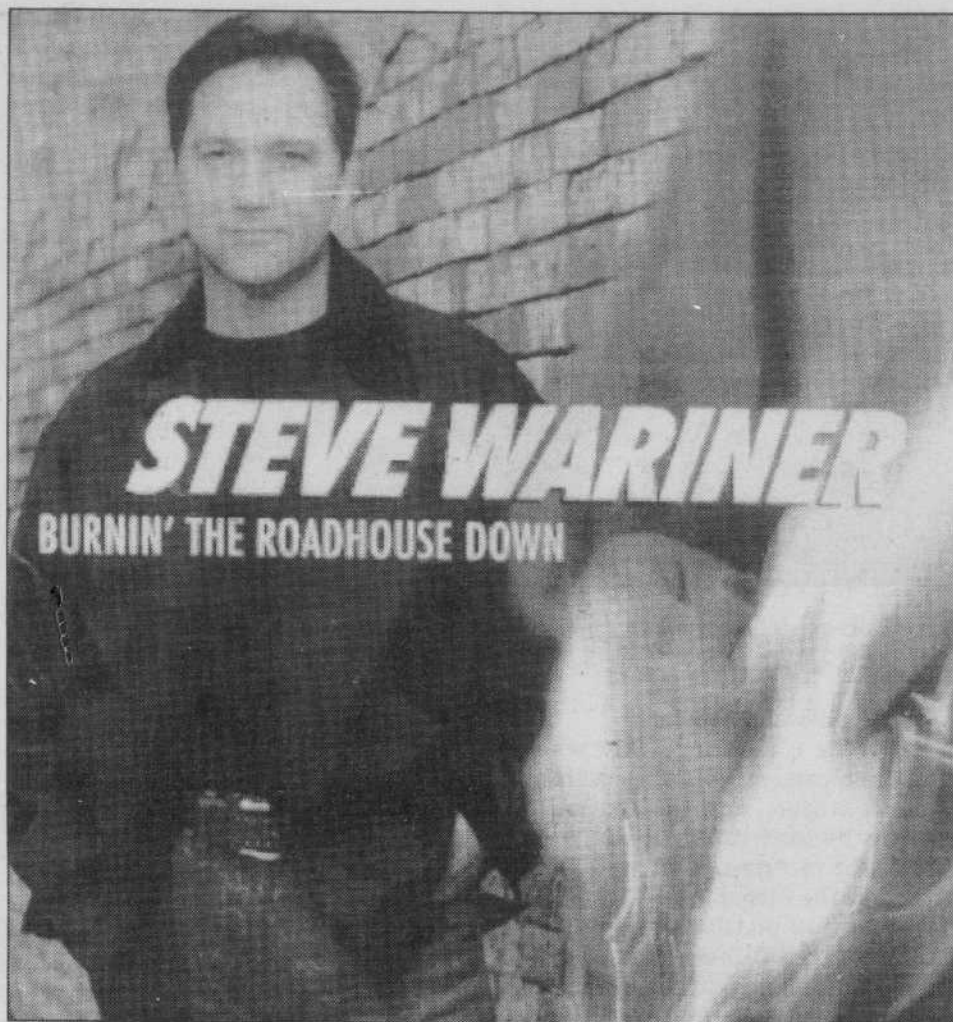

On the infectious, Texas-swing type title track, you'll find Garth Brooks singing along, returning the favor. They sound as if they've been sharing a stage forever.

"Holes In the Floor of Heaven," is a great and sentimental number that has already left a mark on the country music charts. Ballads are certainly Wariner's strength and this new collection offers a few highlights, such as the moody "A Six Pack Ago," with a classic country theme - losing and boozing - set to a beautiful melody.

Wariner provides a great rendition on the sweet and romantic "Love Me Like You Love Me," with the precious collaboration of Trisha Yearwood's magnificent voice. Another example of very good team work is provided by Anita Cochran on the recent chart-topper "What If I Said."

Steve Wariner produced this album himself and wrote or co-wrote 11 out of the 12 songs. This is most likely why it seems like he found where he wanted to be and sounds so comfortable.

GEORGE JONES, It Don't Get Any Better Than This, (MCA)

For five decades now George Jones has been charming country music fans with his remarkable voice and his capacity to pass emotions in anything he sings. Unfortunately, for the last few years radio stations haven't found it appropriate to play recordings by older singers.

How can younger people find out who paved the road for new stars like Alan Jackson, Garth Brooks, or Vince Gill? Did singers such as Jones, Haggard, Jennings and many more lose their talents because of age?

Certainly not, and Jones' new album is proof. The title cut "It Don't Get Any Better Than This," features all the greats, reuniting Jones with his peers Merle Haggard, Waylon Jennings, Bobby Bare, Willie Nelson and Johnny Counterfeit.

How can it get any better than this when some of the most revered and instantly recognizable voices get together to offer a stand-out performance. If radio don't pick it up, they're out of the right track.

For the rest of this new collection, Jones remains true to his style and his unique phrasing set to great musical arrangements. It includes a handful of Bobby Bradock tunes, some Cajun fiddle, and few Texas shuffles.

Of course, this wouldn't be a Jones record without some tear-jerkers that the barroom balladeer is so famous for. The highlights on this album include Jones' cover of an old Jeannie Seely hit "Don't Touch Me" and the playful "Small Y'All."

This is traditional country music at its best, the type of record you can play over and over without getting bored. It's also proof that veteran performers should not be overlooked in favor of playing the hot young artists of the month.

JUICE NEWTON, The Trouble With Angels, (River North)

It's been nine years since Juice Newton recorded her last album. The new collection teams Newton with her long-time producer Richard Landis, who first found success with the pop-country songstress' 1981 hit "Angel of the Morning".

This song set the way for her crossover success, and throughout the '80s her tunes were successful on country and pop charts. Some of her big hits were "Queen of Hearts," "Break It To Me Gently," and "The Sweetest Thing (I've Ever Known)".

The new album includes 10 songs - 7 of her past hits were rerecorded, leaving more room for Newton soulful vocals. The other three tracks are new material, such as the dreamy ballad "When I Get Over You," set to a more acoustic sound.

"The Trouble With Angels" takes a more pop-rock avenue finding the singer in top shape while "Red-Blooded American Girl," is about a woman's plea for romantic acceptance on the dance floor.

The choice of songs and the balance between ballads and uptempo material is very good. The new songs are great and the remake of her hits has a totally fresh sound. It's great to get a chance to hear Juice Newton again.

Here's the answer to a question I was asked last week about Rhett Akins new single "Drivin' My Life Away."

Dear Beverly, this song was originally a Number One for Eddie Rabbitt in August 1980.

It has been rerecorded by Akins on the soundtrack for the movie Black Dog starring Patrick Swayze and Randy Travis.

Unfortunately, country singer Eddie Rabbitt passed away at the beginning of May after fighting cancer for a few years. It is nice that his hit song will make another trip on the charts and I must say to Akins' credit that he covers it very well.

Eddie Rabbitt's version can be found the soundtrack to Roadie, a film that starred the singer Meat Loaf.

Have a nice week and until next week keep your country state of mind!

Expos take on the mighty Braves this weekend
Mountain bike racing on Outdoor Life

By Ted Shaw
TVDATA

Alison Sydor leads a group of Canadians at the next stop for World Cup Mountain Biking, in St. Wendel, Germany.

The event airs Wednesday, May 27, on Outdoor Life Canada, which is a specialty service of CTV. In addition to feature programs and series on recreational activities, the network offers regular coverage of alternative sports, such as mountain biking and snowboarding.

World Cup Mountain Biking includes both downhill and cross-country events. Sydor, of Vancouver, was the 1996 world champion in cross country and the silver medalist at the Atlanta Summer Olympics. She won the first World Cup event of the season in late March in Napa, Calif.

Other top Canadians on the circuit include Leslie Tomlinson of Vancouver and Andreas Hestler of Victoria.

There are two Canadian tour stops: Canmore, Alta., in July and Bromont, Que., in September.

The downhill competition is dominated by French cyclists Anne-Caroline Chausson and Nicolas Vouilloz.

• The Montreal Expos hit the road this week, and TSN is along for the ride, providing coverage of games with the Atlanta Braves on Wednesday and the Pittsburgh Pirates on Saturday, May 30.

Longtime Expos announcer Dave Van Horne has the play-by-play, while former Expos catcher Gary Carter provides color commentary.

The Braves, of course, have one of the National League's best pitching staffs, led by four-time Cy Young winner Greg Maddux.

The Pirates, like the Expos, are struggling in their division. The Expos have stumbled out of the gate in the NL East, but so far only the Braves have shown strength in the division.

• TSN also has four

Toronto Blue Jays games this week - two on the road and two at home.

On Sunday, May 24, the Jays are in Cleveland to play the Indians. They then travel to Boston for a game against the division rival Red Sox on Tuesday, May 26.

The Jays return to the SkyDome on Thursday, May 28, to host the Indians in a weekend series. The Thursday and Friday games are on TSN, while Saturday's game is on CBC Television.

-David Coulthard and Mika Hakkinen lead the field on Sunday at the next stop on the Formula One circuit, the Monaco Grand Prix.

Canada's Jacques Villeneuve will be there, too, trying to race his way back into World Cup contention.

TSN will have coverage.

CBC will show CART's Motorola 300 from Madison, Ill., on Sunday on a tape delay following late local news in most markets.

ENTERTAINMENT BRIEFS

Lauzard in North Hatley

North Hatley painter Lauzard will present a series of 12 large works at the Art-Inter Gallery in Sherbrooke. The works are "very detailed, very refined and painstaking," noted gallery owner Bertrand La Palme.

The Lauzon exposition will open on Friday, May 22 at 7 pm, and will run through June 15. The gallery is located at 121 Frontenac in Sherbrooke. Admission is free.

Gallery Hours for the exhibition are

Tuesday and Wednesday, 11 a.m.-5:30 p.m.; Thursday and Friday, 11 a.m. - 6 p.m.; Sunday noon - 5 p.m.

Bombardier fun day

For the third year in a row, the J. Armand Bombardier Museum will open its doors on May 24 for a day of fun for the entire family. Acts include clowns, make up artists, a one-man clown orchestra and balloon sculpture for the kids.

Admission is free for the open house.

The museum is off exit 90 on the Eastern Townships Highway. Follow directions to 1001 J.A. Bombardier Avenue.

Ben among other featured cartoons

For the ninth year in a row, Richard Langlois brings Made in Sherbrooke, a display of comic artists from Quebec. Included among the artists on display are the "Group of Seven" cartoonists from the region, which includes The Record's own "Ben" artist Daniel Shelton.

The exposition runs from May 16 to Oct. 4, at the Fine-Art Museum of Sherbrooke.

Quebec's naïve artists to exhibit in France

This summer, some 15 naïve painters will get together in the coastal town of St. Malo in France for an exhibition which will begin with the private viewing on July 10. This event will take place at the St. Sauveur's Hall from July 9 to August 9 thanks to the efforts of Sherbrooke naïve painter Mario Longpré, and Jacotte Barran Klipfell, president of the Association of Artists of the Emerald Coast, in France. Longpré and Klipfell organized the event to help promote naïve painting.

Captain James Cook sails on in History TV miniseries

By David Migicovsky
TV DATA

It has taken more than a decade for the Australian Broadcasting Corp. miniseries Captain James Cook to reach North America. Obviously, the show had to sail through rougher waters than the legendary captain did: James Cook discovered the continent of Australia in far less time.

The miniseries finally sees our shores on Sunday, May 24, as History Television begins airing the epic. The high-priced project continues over the following three Sundays.

Cook is played by Australian-born actor Keith Michell, most recently seen in Canada as Dennis Stanton during the 1990-91 season of Murder, She Wrote, but best remembered for playing another historical figure, King Henry VIII in The Six Wives of Henry VIII.

Cook was a fascinating man, given the times in which he lived. Born in 1728, he was the son of a farm laborer and joined the British navy as an enlisted man. It was only after his discovery of Australia that he was given the rank of captain.

That accomplishment was just one of many in his life. Cook also played a rather significant part in Canadian history. His charts of the St. Lawrence River made the 1759 British attack on Quebec City possible, and his charts of the East Coast were used until the early 20th century. In 1778, he became the first European to set foot on what is now British Columbia. Of course, these events are given somewhat short shrift in Captain James Cook, which is, after all, an Australian miniseries.

In all likelihood, though, it is not the lack of Canadian (or American) content in the story that prevented it from being sold to North American broadcast networks. It is, rather, a combination of factors. Perhaps foremost is the non-American look that is common to foreign series.

The briefest glance at Captain James Cook lets viewers know that no American studio or network was involved in its production.

This is not to say the costumes and sets (including Cook's ship, the Endeavour) are not painstakingly accurate. It is obvious that the filmmakers took great care to re-create the era properly, but the slickness common to American series is not present.

Nor, fortunately, is the invention of characters and events to make the program more accessible to audiences. Viewers won't find Cook's wife, Elizabeth (Carol Drinkwater), stowing away in order to create dramatic conflict. Also, don't look for Cook to have a passionate affair during any of his voyages.

The program has some spectacular scenes, including the opening, in which Cook is attacked by islanders. That tragic event really did occur, ending the remarkable life of a man who made the world a little larger.

Keith Michell plays Captain James Cook

In search of Canadian Klingons

What happened to Newsroom's Tanya Allen?

TRACKING DOWN TANYA - I was a big fan of The Newsroom and really enjoyed the character that Tanya Allen played. I also liked her in the movie Platinum. Do you know where I can write to her? -Darrell Porter in Saskatoon.

Allen, who played Audrey, recently shared a Gemini Award for best performance in a comedy series or special with the rest of the Newsroom cast. She also appeared this season in the TV movie White Lies and was one of the guest hosts of The Nine O'Clock Show.

Allen is living in New York these days and is working on independent films.

You can write to her care of her agent, Oscars Abrams Zimel & Associates Inc., 438 Queen St. E., Toronto, ONT M5A 1T4.

KLINGON CONFUSION - On Star Trek: Deep Space Nine, is the actor playing Worf's grown-up son Alexander the same person who portrayed him as a child on Star Trek: The Next Generation?

Also, the actor who plays Worf's brother sounds like the actor who once portrayed Jake Sisko as an old man. Is it the same person? I have the feeling he has played other roles in the series as well. -Barry Owen in Calgary via e-mail.

Alexander is now being played by Canadian actor Marc Worden, who got his big show business break as a Mouseketeer on the late 1980s Mickey Mouse Club revival. On Next Generation, the role was previously played by Brian Bonsall, who is still a bit too young to play adult roles. It seems that Klingons grow up more rapidly than humans; Alexander was conceived on a Next Generation episode that aired only nine years ago.

Tony Todd plays Worf's brother, Kurn, in addition to having played Jake as an old man. Those are the only roles I could find for him on Deep Space Nine, but he appeared as Alpha Hirogen on Star Trek: Voyager earlier this year.

WORLD, MEET JACK - What is the real name of Jack on Boy Meets World? Also, where can I write to him? -H.T. in B.C. via e-mail.

Jack is played by Matthew Lawrence, one of the three actor brothers.

You can write to him c/o ABC-TV, 5th Floor, 2040 Avenue of the Stars, Los Angeles, CA 90035.

Send questions of general interest to Canadian Viewers' Voices c/o TVData Features Syndicate, 2482 Yonge St., P.O. Box 45124, Toronto, ONT. M4P3E3 or e-mail to justask@tvdata.com. Only questions selected for this column will be answered. Personal replies cannot be sent.

Tanya Allen won a Gemini for her work on the comedy series Newsroom.
