CANADIAN GUESTS AT DUKE'S DINNER

Evidences of Bonds of Colonial Sympathy Shown at South African Function.

Australasian Indignation at Exclusion of Representatives Brings Up Treaty Making Question.

By Special Cable from our own Correspondent.

London, June 16.—Sir Charles and Sir Hibbert Tupper, also Sir Gilbert Parker, Dr Parkin and the Australasian Agents-General, were the guests of the Duke of Westminster at the great South African banquet last night. Many distinguished public men were present. The Canadian support of the Imperial South African Association was especially referred to in the speeches of Hon. Walter Long and Arnold Foster, both members of the last Cabinet, as evidences of the new bonds of intercolonial sympathy, and the commercial and political partnership springing up between colony and colony. Acute observers realize that this feature of Imperial development, as it will probably be developed at the Colonial Conference next year, will be a revelation to the English people, who may soon see every self-governing portion of the Empire knit closely together by preferential tariffs, leaving the British tariff alone unresponsive to this Empire movement. Australasia's indignation at the exclusion of her Ministers from the Anglo-French negotiations regarding the New Hebrides is likely to afford further opportunities for effective intercolonial partnership. Sir Wilfrid Laurier is expected to find here a chance for his treaty-making proposals.

CITY OPEN ONLY TO NATIVES.

Attempt Will Be Made to Photograph Life in Mysterious African Town.

Special Cable to The Monfreal Star.

London, June 16.—An expedition will leave London shortly, under the leadership of Mr. Brian Bellasis and Mr. Lionel Cooke, with the object of obtaining living picture records illustrating the wild life and the industrial activities of countries along the entire route of the proposed Cape to Cairo railway.

In the centre of Nyassaland is a mysterious native city where a warlike chief holds court. His city is completely surrounded by walls and is composed of stone kraals.

To the white man it is forbidden ground, no European having as yet entered its gates; but Mr. Bellasis and Mr. Cooke hope, by dint of many presents, to gain permission to enter and take records, which should be of great interest to the outside world.

When Broken Hill, the terminus of the southern section of the railway, is reached, the real difficulty of the expedition will begin. For many months but slow progress can be made, with the aid of native bearers, and when the northern shores of Lake Victoria Nyanza are reached the presence of hostile natives and the extreme danger from fever will render the journy somwhat precarious.

In Abyssinia the Emperor Menelek will be visited, and animated pictures of London will be shown to him, in return for which it is hoped permission will be granted to bring home to London records of life in the most gorgeous court in Africa.

From Abyssinia the expedition will strike back to the Nile, and proceed by steamer and rail to Cairo.

(Special Cable Service.)

Paris, June 16.—In the course of an interview with a representative of the Echo de Paris, M. Briand, the Minister of Public Worship, who is generally regarded as one of the principal authors of the Separation Law, said that, in his opinion, one of the fortunate results of the general election would be to give a legitimate authority to those reasonable Catholics who advocated conciliation and a fair trial of the law. He hoped that it would be possible for them to convert their opponents to their own ideas of conciliation and appeasement.

THE NEW YORK SUN ENCOURAGES LIPTON

Advises Him to Challenge With a Schooner and Compel New York's "Stand Patters" to Action.

New York, N. Y., June 16.—The Sun says: "Since the 'stand patters' in the New York Yacht Club are so unwilling to give Sir Thomas Lipton the opportunity to get in another challenge; since they are ready even to stultify the club by refusing to sail a race under the new rule made and adopted by the organization; since they wish to defend the old mug with the old defender, namely, Reliance, it would be a capital idea for Lipton to challenge with a schooner. The conditions of the cup races permit the building of schooners much larger than any of the sloops thus far engaged in the struggle.

"The 'stand patters'" could not meet such a challenge by merely turning the Reliance into a schooner, even if they were sure that she would be fast under the changed rig. They would have to build a new vessel. Having to do this, they would no longer possess any reason for insisting on sailing uider the old rule and the present absurd state of affairs would be brought to an end.

With the advent of the schooner nobody could be certain what the outcome would be till at least one series of races had been sailed. The America's Cup ought not to be at rest in the glorious New York Yacht Club's lookers.America should be compelled to fight to keep it, and Lipton seems to be the only man willing to come into the shindy. Let him come with a schooner. That will make the "stand patters" sit up.

PAINTINGS AND ARSON.

Insurance Companies Watch Carefully Fluctuations in Prices Quoted.

Special Cable Service.

London, June 16.—The recent sharp fall in the case of the pictures of certain artists lately sold at public auction has by no means escaped the attention of the fire insurance companies. Some of them, but by no means all, appear to be in the habit of issuing valued policies in respect of pictures, and it is pointed out that if the worth of a painting can drop in the course of a few years from so many hundred dollars to five or ten dollars, there would be every inducement to the possessor of a painting by the same artist to burn it as quickly as possible if he had a valued policy on it. Further, it is suggested that where there has been a slump in a particular artist's pictures, and they are the subject of valued policies, it might be worth anybody's while to buy up the supply, get the policies endorsed to him, and then leave the rest to fate. It is, of couse, not argued that auction vicissitudes in the matter of picture values necessarily lead to arson. Obviously there is the case of a picture protected by a valued policy of, say $2,500, which may be to-day worth much more money. All that is said is that in general, the issue of valued policies in the case of pictures is regarded as a mistake, as a rule, from a fire insurance company's point of view.

ECONOMY IN AUSTRALIA.

Cabinet Ministers of Western Province Have Salaries Cut.

Special Cable Service.

Perth, June 16.—Mr. Newton Moore, the Premier of Western Australia, delivered a speech on his policy at Bunbury, the other evening. He stated that the deficit on April 30, was $100,000, and, owing to the fact that there was a large decrease of receipts from the Commonwealth, the necessity arose for economy and taxation. The Ministers' salaries had been reduced by $1,000 each, and economical administration generally would be adopted. There would be a tax on unimproved land values, with certain exemptions for the purposes of revenue, and a subdivision of large unimproved estates; but this was not applicable to settlers for preliminary periods. Land settlement conditions were being further liberalized, and residence areas on the goldfields would be acquirable on easy terms as workmen's freehold blocks. The land revenue was exceedingly satisfactory, consequent on a continuous policy of encouraging settlement.

SHOULD PAY FOR HEALTH OFFICER

Ald. McConnell Thinks the Department is Imposed on in Many Cases.

BY-LAW AFFECTING FOOD

They Were Drafted at the Meeting of the Hygiene Committee Yesterday Afternoon.

There was considerable trouble in getting together a quorum for the Hygiene Committee yesterday afternoon, and when the city fathers did get together the warm weather and the lateness of the hour brought forth speedy action on all the items of business which came before the committee.

The question of the slaughtering of calves was first brought up, but after some discussion the matter was dropped until a later date.

Two by-laws were drafted, one to regulate the quality of milk, the other in regard to the inspection of fish, fruit and vegetables as well as the adulteration of foods.

Ald. O'Connell introduced a motion providing that citizens who get the Health Officer to make a special inspection of their dwellings should be made to pay for his services.

Mr. O'Connell said that houses were often inspected for personal reasons only, the Health Officer's opinion as to the unsanitary condition of a house being taken as grounds for a lawsuit against the landlord. Such inspections were quite proper and in order, but as the tenant was the man asking for the inspection and the one benefitting by it, Ald. O'Connel thought that a nominal fee ought to be charged for the services of the inspector. He suggested that the sum of $10 be charged, this amount to go to the Hygiene Committee.

The report from the Police Committee was read recommending that chalets de comfort be built near all the public parks, and such places, but it was decided not to do anything in the matter until the City Surveyor had made a report on the subject.

The tender for repairing the roof of the Gallery bath was awarded to the Standard Roofing Company for the price of $93, the roof to be built of asphalt and guaranteed to last for seven years.

Dr. Gadbois reported on the best means for legalizing the arrangements made between Drs. Daze and Builbault, and between Messrs. Hamelin and Levesque. Dr. Daze has been one of the city health officers for some time, but owing to ill health has had to retire, at the same time arranging with Dr. Guilbault to undertake his duties.

The appointment of Dr. Lanctot as Health Officer of St. Henri and Ste. Cunegonde Wards then came up for discussion, after which the meeting adjourned.

UNIQUE CEREMONY IN ST. PAUL'S CATHEDRAL.

Order of St. Michael and St. George Have Now a Sanctuary.

London, June 16. — The Order of St. Michael and St. George yesterday acquired a chapel of their own, a special recess in St. Paul's Cathedral having been dedicated to the service of its knights, who now for the first time in the history of the Order have a sanctuary in which to deposit their banners. The distinction of G. C. M. G. (Knight Grand Cross of St. Michael and St. George) has heretofore been somewhat secondary, but it is now raised nearer the level of the Orders of the Garter and of the Bath.

King Edward, who took the greatest interest in the dedication of the chapel, attended the ceremony in full state. The Prince of Wales was also present. Great military and heraldic pomp marked the ceremonial, and the interior of the vast cathedral was a blaze of gorgeous color, with the blue and crimson silken gowns of the knights, whose breasts glittered with the dazzling insignia of the Order.

Lord Aberdeen, Lord Strathcona, the Duke of Argyll, Sir Charles Tupper and Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson, were early arrivals, and as they wandered about the Cathedral, in their rich, flowing robes of blue and red silk, gave an additional touch of color to the striking spectacle.

In dedicating the chapel of the Order, Bishop Montgomery said: "These are men who have built up and defended the empire. They deserve all their honors. From many a land dark faces look gratefully towards them, mindful of their unselfish work. They are mutely thanking many in this company for making life possible for road makers and builders of the empire. What would England be to-day without these men?"

REDUCED RATES OF LETTER POSTAGE.

Washington, June 16.—The Post Office Department has given out the following statement:

"The universal postal congress, recently in convention at Rome, ordered a substantial reduction in letetr postage by increasing the unit of weight, effective on and after October 1, 1907, from 15 to 20 grams, and providing that while postage on the first twenty grams shall remain at 25 centimes (five cents), every additional twenty grams shall be at the rate of 15 centimes (3 cents).

"Great Britain and the United States strongly urged that the unit of weight for them should be fixed at one ounce, as it would be extremely difficult for them to express an equivalent weight for twenty grams, not having adopted the metric system. This request was granted. This will give the two countries exceptionally low rates for the exchange of letters. Under the reduced rates a letter to Great Britain will cost five cents, for the first ounce, and three cents for the second ounce, or eight cents for two ounces. In other words, when the new rates become effective, a letter packet weighing six ounces can be sent to Great Britain at the rate now charged for a two-ounce packet."

More Powerful Than Radium.

Rome, June 16.—Prof. Battelli, of the University of Pisa, has discovered a substance similar to radium, but which is said to have much more powerful properties.

RIOTS CONTINUE IN BIALYSTOK

Several Bombs Again Thrown and Fighting Continues Without Cessation.

DOUMA SENDS DELEGATES

Three Members of the Lower House Have Gone to Investigate—Official Account of Trouble.

St. Petersburg, June 16.—M. Vinaver, a Constitutional Democratic member of the Lower House, has received a dispatch from Bialystok dated 2.45 this morning:

"The rioting proceeded throughout the day with unabated fury, and is still continuing with no signs of cessation. It is impossible to send particulars of the horrors."

The troubles yesterday appear to have been even worse than Thursday. It is difficult to get details, as the telegraph office at Bialystok is kept closed most of the time. Semi-official messages from Grodno,however, state the trouble was started again by the throwing of several more bombs. The crowds, according to these despatches, then opened fire on the police, which the troops replied to, and there was a constant interchance of shots between Jews from their houses, and the soldiers from the streets. A mob of peasants, armed with clubs, scythes, etc., who had found their way into the city, was participating in the riot.

A despatch from Minsk states that the authorities had been fully forewarned of the possibility of trouble Thursday, and had recalled a battalion of infantry and several squadrons of cavalry from their summer camp to strengthen the garrison, but without over-awing the fomenters of trouble.

THE DOUMA INTERFERES.

The Lower House gave the Government a lesson in promptness of investigation by despatching a committee of three members of the Douma for Bialystok in the hope that the presence of representatives of Parliament will check the disorders and have a salutary effect on reactionary officials if the charges are true that they are inspiring excesses.

The commission includes Deputies Jacobson, a Jew; Arakantzeff, former procurator of Minsk, who was dismissed from office and banished because he recommended the trial of Governor Kurloff for inciting the anti-Jewish excesses at Minsk in November of last year, and ... Shepkin, of Odessa, who investigated the October riots in that city and demanded the prosecution of Neidhart, the prefect of police of Odessa, as the provoker of the riots.

The first evidence to be submitted to the commission will be copies of proclamations, which it is asserted were distributed in the streets of Bialystok the last ten days under the eyes of the police, calling on the population to rise against the Jews and intellectuals.

The end of the agrarian debate in the Lower House is now in sight, a ten-minute limit to speeches having been fixed.

AN OFFICIAL REPORT.

Vilna, June 16.—An official account of the disorders in Bialystok says: "In view of the popular excitement in Bialystok, especially after the murder of the chief of police, the Governor, foreseeing disorders on the occasion of the religious processions of June 14, took all measures in his power for the maintenance of order. A battalion and a half of infantry and several squadrons of cavalry were posted at necessary points in the town. During the processions of the Orthodox Church and the Catholics, in which enormous crowds from the environs participated and which were disturbed by roughs, shots were fired from several Jewish houses. It is impossible to state the number killed and wounded.

"The killed included two children who were carrying images of Saints and three women. Two bombs which caused no damage were thrown 50 paces from the procession. These criminal acts incited the peasants and working people wounded in their religious feelings to assault persons seen fleeing from houses from which shots were fired and they attacked other Jewish houses. The intervention of the troops and the Governor of Grodno resulted in the pogrom (outbreak )being confined to narrow limits, but the Governor's report states that the disorders which ceased last evening, broke out again this morning with renewed fury. Several bombs were thrown and the crowd fired on police officials. The troops replied, using their swords."

TO RETURN VISIT OF PRINCE LOUIS

GREAT NAVAL DISPLAY

Rear-Admiral Evans Will Have Squadron Equal to Lord Beresford's Mediterranean Fleet.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Washington, D.C., June 16.—Rear-Admiral Brownson, who commands four armored cruisers now attached to the Atlantic fleet, is to be sent with his division to Eastern waters. These ships will sail in September, and on their way to the Orient will visit England as a return call for that of the squadron of Prince Louis of Battenberg last year. Unless unforeseen circumstances occur the coming autumn will witness the assembling of the greatest fleet that ever has gathered in the waters of the western world—a force comprising sixteen battleships of first class, two divisions of torpedo craft, one of destroyers, another of torpedo boats, there will also be fleet auxiliaries. This Armada, which is to be placed under command of Rear-Admiral Evans, the present commander of the Atlantic fleet will equal in strength Great Britain's renowned Mediterranean fleet, which is now the most formidable aggregation of warships in all the seven seas—sixteen battleships, commanded by that redoubtable sea warrior Admiral Lord Charles Beresford. Six new battleships, some of which are already commissioned, and others receiving final touches, before being turned over to the Navy Department, will swell the September total to sixteen battleships of recent construction and high degree.

Edmonton, June 16.—The preliminary examination of d'Amour, the mail clerk, who was arrested at Winnipeg on a charge of stealing money from the mails, has begun here before Inspector Worsley. The only witness examined was Staff-Sergeant Wilson, N.W.M.P., who arrested the accused. The witness gave evidence as to the finding of 85 $10 bills in the toe of a boot found in the prisoner's trunk. The accused at first said the money had been placed there by another mail clerk, but later withdrew the statement. An adjournment for eight days was granted for the purpose of securing the attendance of an important witness from Montreal.

Books of the Week Reviewed; The Great Refusal.

By George Murray, B. A., Oxon., F. R. S. C.

The Great Refusal. By Maxwell Gray. (London: John Long. Toronto: The Copp, Clark Company.)

Miss M. G. Tuttiett, novelist, essayist, and poet, who writes under the pseudonym of Maxwell Gray, has, we think, never surpassed her first novel, "The Silence of Dean Maitland," which was published twenty years ago. She has been a careful writer, and has not produced even one book a year, while so many of her contemporaries have published two or three volumes per annum, with unvarying regularity. The present story calls to mind Dante's "Il gran rifiuto," and also the young ruler who, according to the Gospels of Saints Matthew and Luke, made "The Great Refusal," and is referred to frequently in Miss Tuttiett's story. But there is an important difference between her hero, Adrian Bassett, and the rich young man in the New Testament, who "went away sorrowful, for he had great possessions," after he had been told, "Go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor." Adrian really made the Great Refusal, inasmuch as he declined to share the enormous profits of his father's business, when he discovered that it was founded on commercial dishonesty, and was partly maintained in its prosperity by the oppression of the assistants employed. His father, Sir Daniel Bassett, a keen intelligent worker, overpoweringly masterful, with a look that at once revealed the self-made man of millions, whose two mottoes were, "there's money in it," and "business is business," behaved in the matter exactly as might have been expected of him. He simply said to Adrian: "Go, I say go, and see how you like starving on fine notions. Never darken my doors again! Go!" He had set his heart on having Adrian (who had lately recovered from an attack of typhoid fever, caught during his benevolent ministrations in the "slums" of East London), as a partner in his splendid business, and the brilliant schemes connected with it, and he thought that he would be able to starve him into submission. But the son was as iron-willed as the father, and though he was now unable to marry Lady Isobel Moystyn, to whom he was engaged with her father's sanction, Adrian quietly drifted away into obscurity as a common workingman, and in that capacity flung a couple of roses at the feet of Isobel, when in a short time she became the bride of the wealthy Marquis of Aynesworth. Much of the latter part of the novel is taken up with a description of the foundation and aims of the Brotherhood of the Golden Rule, that was to plant a modern Utopia in East Africa, regardless of its warlike tribes in a primeval state of civilization. The author is very severe on the luxury of the age, and seems to exaggerate the miseries to which the working classes are exposed; but her ideals are so much "on the side of the angels" that the story will no doubt be welcomed by all serious readers. It is confessedly a novel with a purpose, and contains many practical suggestions of great value.

The Wonderful Teacher and What He Taught. By David James Burrell, D.D. (Fleming H. Revell: Toronto.)

We have here a volume of twenty-five sermons which cover the main topics of the sermons of Christ, and they are distinctly able, well composed, and lucid discourses on subjects of unquestionable importance. But today, in respect of all theological topics, point of view counts for much. And it must be said plainly, that Dr. Burrell's point of view is out of date. As a contribution to our understanding of Christ, and what He taught, the book possesses but little value. To refute the errors, real or supposed, of an opponent, it is of the highest importance that his position be clearly understood. Now Dr. Burrell, like too many of the opponents of the modern methods of Biblical study, has evidently failed to master the subject, and hence, like Sir Robert Anderson, in some of his late writings, he merely beats the air. Space fails us to prove this in detail, but while we have no room to enter into minute criticism, we prefer to applaud a conscientious, sincere, and, in some respects, a useful work.

The Declaration. By J. B. Elwell. (Published by the Author.)

This pamphlet of twenty pages contains one of the lessons in Mr. Elwell's "Bridge Correspondence Course." Some readers have glanced at it in the book stores expecting to find in it a history of the Declaration of American Independence. The lesson, however, only teaches and illustrates the importance of the declaration of the trump.

The Misses Make-Believe. By Mary S. Boyd. (N.Y.: Henry Holt.)

Upon the death of their father Sir James Fleming, an eminent London physician, Belle and Eileen Fleming found that only by a great deal of clever contriving could any semblance of their former social position be retained. But the sharp eyes of their watchful acquaintances saw through their petty economies, and the expedients to which they were compelled to resort gained for the foo ambitious sisters the nickname of "The Misses Make-Believe." In the long run they had to acknowledge defeat, and to give up their town-house and on the advice of their guardian, John Hornecke who in spite of the contempt their mode of living had aroused in him had a tolerably well-concealed fondness for Eileen, they retired to a little far-away village in Devonshire, where they began to develop interesting qualities, and actually to enjoy life. Here Eileen, who had long ago become weary of pretending to be richer than she was, found scope for her active brain and clever fingers and after a time the haughty Belle discovered that living in the country has its charms, and she developed a more agreeable character. The grave, kindly John Hornecke the selfish Major Bryson and the somewhat erratic Dr. Felix Gundry all play their parts in the new existence of the two sisters. The story of their country life and the gradual transformation of the small cottage into the delightful Lavender Sea is at times very interesting, and the simple story, with its wealth of domestic details, is diversified by touches of genuine humor, and clever descriptions of English country delights. As one of Miss Boyd's British critics remarks, even details of the pantry and the toilet have a fascination of their own for some novel-readers, and with all who can enjoy a cheerful story on these lines the "Misses Make-Believe" should furnish diverting reading for a summer day.

Henry Northcote. By J. C. Snaith. (Toronto: The Copp, Clark Co.)

Nobody doubts the uncommon intellectual ability of the author of "Broke of Covenden," but the chief fault of the present book lies in an overflow of philosophical language unfitted for ears that cannot understand it, and in inordinately long conversations between the hero of the story and anyone who was willing to discuss any subject whatever with him. More might easily have been made of the motif of the story. Northcote is a briefless barrister who had been six years at the Bar, and had chosen the Common Law side. At the time the story begins, he is best known as a "starving mob-orator" who addresses large crowds in Hyde Park with great applause, but for some reason cannot keep the wolf from the door of his wretched chambers, in Shepherd's Inn, Fleet street, London. One evening, as the clock at the Law Courts was chiming nine, the unhappy man of law was without food or fire, with feet nearly frozen, and without a grain of tobacco. A knock comes to his door, and he opens it to admit a well-known solicitor, Mr. Whitcomb, who wishes to engage his services to defend a notorious woman who is accused of having poisoned her paramour. Nearly a third of the volume is taken up with the trial, which ends in Emma Harrison's acquittal, though the circumstantial evidence was strongly against her, and there was no moral doubt of her guilt. Northcote's clever cross-examination of one of the Crown witnesses is given in full detail, as well as his address in favor of the accused woman. Her subsequent visit to his chambers, and what subsequently took place there will fill ordinary readers with horror, and repel many of Mr. Smaith's admirers. But we have no desire to tell the story, and in justice to the author will leave his intending readers to learn the denouement from the book itself. As an able critic says in a recent number of "The Academy," much may be said in commendation of the story, partly as displaying, but more as indicating, the operation of some of the highest qualities of the novel-writer. Observation, insight, courageous description are all here, but all employed without art, and quite without harmony. The result is that while every chapter testifies to Mr. Smaith's capabilities for the work he has undertaken, none of the chapters suggests that he has turned his gifts to the best account. It is not a likely book to captivate any woman; but it has many striking scenes, is studded with admirable points of observation, and gives great hopes of what may hereafter come from the author's mind, if he cares to exert it.

The Election of Senators. By Geo. H. Haynes. (N.Y.: Henry Holt & Co.)

Dr. Haynes is Professor of Political Science in the Worcester Polytechnic Institute, and is already favorably known to the American public by his able work on "Immigration, and its Effects upon the United States." The volume now before us shows the historical reasons for the present method of electing Senators, and its effect in the Senate and Senators, and on State and local government, with a detailed review of the arguments for and against direct election. It aims to make clear the considerations which led the framers of the Constitution to place the election of Senators in the hands of the State legislatures; the form and spirit of elections thus made, and the causes which have led to the recent and pressing demand for popular control over the choice of Senators. It attempts, also, to forecast in some degree the probable effectiveness of such popular control, whether exercised under a loose construction of the present law, or in accordance with a constitutional amendment making possible the election of Senators by direct popular vote. There can be no doubt that the work is the result of much study on the part of Dr. Haynes, and it is the first to embrace these results in a volume for the general reader. The book contains eleven chapters, a complete index, and three appendixes, one of which is a six-page Bibleography of the subject carefully compiled by the Worcester Professor.

Literary Notes and Gossip.

Mrs. George Riggs (Kate Douglas Wiggin), made a week's visit at the Vice-Regal Lodge, Dublin, as the guest of Their Excellencies, the Earl and Countess of Aberdeen, last month.

The Neue Freie Presse contains the statement, on the authority of a friend of Ibsen, that a long, detailed, and intimate series of letters which the dramatist wrote to a Norwegian lady artist is in the possession of his widow, and that it will be published in due time.

A valuable collection of prints and portraits of events and men from 1759 to the present day in France has just been bestowed upon the Bibliotheque Nationale in Paris. The gift includes a copy of No. 678 of "L'Ami du Peuple," which is stained with the blood of Marat. A note on the margin, written by a Colonel Maurin, states that he got the paper from Marat's sister.

Bliss Carman has just received his degree of Doctor of Laws from the University of New Brunswick, which gave him his B. A. degree in 1881. His cousin, Prof. C. G. D. Roberts, received his doctor's degree at the same time. His father, a Canon of Christ Church Cathedral, and his grandfather received the same degree from the same university. The case is thought unique.

The new edition of Ibsen's works is to be a complete one, containing the text of all the later plays as well as that of the Norwegian's earlier works. There are to be eleven volumes.

Mr. Heinemann promises a book by an anonymous staff officer, disclosing a plan to provide England with an efficient army without any additional cost. That is a work which would be cheap at the price of £27,000, which it seems the Official History of the Boer War is to cost.

The Times of India, May 12, 1906, says: "The work to be done in India on the Imperial Gazetteer is now approaching completion. The Gazetteer will consist of four volumes on India as a whole, which will replace Sir W. W. Hunter's Indian Empire. Twenty-one volumes of articles arranged alphabetically, an index volume, and an atlas, all of the material prepared in India for the first four volumes, as well as the drafts of the atlas, have been sent home, and it is understood that two of the volumes are actually in type at the Clarendon Press."

The Cambridge University Press gives some particulars of its scheme of a comprehensive history of English literature on a scale and plan more or less resembling that of the Cambridge Modern History. The work will be published in fourteen royal octavo volumes, of about 400 pages each, and will cover the whole course of English literature from Beowulf to the end of the Victorian age. The action of foreign influences and the part taken by secondary writers in successive literary movements will receive a larger share of attention than is possible in shorter histories, in which lesser writers are apt to be overshadowed by a few great names. Each volume will contain a sufficient bibliography. The history will be edited by Dr. A. W. Ward, Master of Peterhouse, and Mr. A. R. Waller. The published price will be 9s. per volume. Subscription price for the complete work five guineas, payable in fourteen instalments of 7s. 6d. net on publication of the separate volumes.

The story of a queer coincidence is told by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle. While travelling upon the Continent, he visited a certain mountain inn, which was in winter, he learned, occupied only by two men. These men, prisoned in a waste of snow and ice, had for all that period no communication with the world below. Here was a situation for a novelist! And the novelist, accordingly began to let his imagination play about the possibilities of tragedy surrounding the two men on their mountain height. But the story was never written, for happening to come upon a volume by Guy de Maupassant, which was new to him, he found therein, under the title of "L'Auberge," the very story he had meant to write.

"Denis Duval," the novel upon which Thackeray was at work when death came to him, has just gone out of copyright—"thanks," says an English commentator, "to our copyright law which gives an author no power to assign beyond a forty-two-year lease the property which is more thoroughly his than any freehold." This is the book of which Charles Dickens said: "In respect to earnest feelings, far-seeing purpose, character, incident and a certain living picturesqueness blending the whole, I believe it to be much the best of all his works."

The eight chapters of "Denis Duval" show a power almost as great as that animating "Esmond." Would that the story could have been completed with its foreshadowed episodes of the French Revolution.

Walter Frewen Lord: "If there is something in Dickens that we would prefer to forget, there is at least as much that we cannot forget if we would. He is often a caricaturist, but at least as of en he is far above all caricaturists. He does not live with the Veroneses and the Titians, but he is far apart from the Caraccisti. He is hardly Rembrandt, but we cannot leave him with the Jan Steens and the Ostades. He is not academic, he remained to the last untrained, undrilled, recognizing no models, consciously or unconsciously—one would even say that he despised them. As a result, he often created, and he often driveled. He cheers us beyond any other writer that ever lived; and he bores us worse than the daily newspaper. He stands alone: Charles Dickens."

Upton Sinclair's "The Jungle," according to Doubleday, Page & Co., is not only attracting wide attention in North America, (it is in its fifth edition), but the English are also reading it, for a third edition of the book has been ordered by the London publisher. Apropos of "The Jungle," in so far as its conspicuous service to the public is concerned in securing an adequate inspection of meat, it has been placed in the same class with Charles Reade's "Never Too Late to Mend," which brought about reform in the English prison system; Sir Walter Besant's "All Sorts and Conditions of Men," which resulted in the establishment of the People's Palace in London, and Dickens's "Oliver Twist," which led to a change in the poor schools throughout England.

The London Times says of "The Jungle": "This book is published as a novel, and it might claim to be reviewed, therefore, under the head of fiction. But the very first thing to be said about it is that, if it is a novel, a work of imagination and invention, the conduct of an author who invented and published in a form easily accessible to all readers, young or old, male or female, such disgusting, inflammatory matter as this, would deserve the severest censure. Unhappily we have good reason for believing it to be all fact, not fiction. The action of the President, who sent commissioners to enquire into the truth or falsehood of Mr. Sinclair's statements, and the known tenor of the commissioners' reply remove all doubt, and give the book very great importance. By its truths or its untruths the story stands or falls, and it is with nothing less than horror that we learn it to be true. The things described by Mr. Sinclair happened yesterday, are happening to-day, and will happen to-morrow and the next day, until some Hercules comes to cleanse the filthy stable. If there is not actually in Chicago a Jurgis Rudkus, a Lithuanian immigrant, who has followed exactly the course set out by Mr. Sinclair, there are, we are compelled to believe, a thousand such who have followed, possibly in a different order, some parts of it, who have seen the revolting things Jurgis saw, and suffered as he suffered. The names alone are fictitious. The rest of the book is a faithful report of abuses which fill the reader with nausea and indignation, to leave him at the close solaced with nothing better than the conviction that a change must come."

An English reviewer of the recently published biography of Lever takes an unnecessarily mournful tone concerning that lively novelist. There was, we believe, no "tragedy of Charles Lever"—life was, on the whole, exceedingly satisfactory to him almost to the end. He had even more than family affection—he had devotion. He had work which was a delight to him in the doing. A blithe and witty soul, he was never without the congenial companionship he craved. Wherever he went he found friends. He lived in some of the pleasantest cities of Europe. He earned a large income, and if he never had enough money it was because the revenues of Golconda are not large enough for men of his spendthrift type. It is true that he was continually in debt and continually lamenting his lack of funds, but it is clear that he had an exceedingly "good time," even while lamenting, and it is not unreasonable to suppose that, like many persons of his temperament, he liked to have a little woe to dilate upon. He had gout, to be sure, the inevitable result of fine cobking and the best wines, but since he must have weighed those things against his pains, we can hardly regard that suffering as tragic. If he had an unrealized dream, it may have been that of social importance among the great of his time. There was, above all, no tragedy of the intellect in his career. He did the best work of which he was capable, and generally under agreeable conditions, and he did it with infinite zest. It may have been without serious purpose, but it gave much wholesome pleasure, and in that sense was far from futile. Few men have lived more happily and busily than he the life indicated by nature and circumstances.

Notes and Queries.

The Late James Thomson, the Poet.

A correspondent in Windsor, N.S., signing himself "Nemo," sends me the following:

Having come across Philip Marston's beautiful sonnet in memory of James Thomson, the author of "The City of Dreadful Night," I am anxious to acquire some information about this latter (Thomson) about whom I confess complete ignorance. Perhaps you would, in "Notes and Queries," tell me who he was, and whether his work (City of the Dreadful Night) is yet in print.

James Thomson, poet and dramatist, author of "The Seasons," "The Castle of Indolence," "Agamemnon," "Alfred," and several other forgotten plays, was born in 1700, and died in 1748. He was a poet of a very different type from that of his namesake in the 19th century, who was born, at Port Glasgow, in 1834, and died, in London, in 1882. As his parents had died when he was very young he was brought up at the Caledonian Orphan Asylum. After leaving school he acted as assistant school master at an army station, and though such work was naturally distasteful to a man of his temperament, he performed his scholastic duties thoroughly and conscientiously till 1862, when he resigned his post and became a fellow-clerk with is friend, Mr. Charles Bradlaugh, who was then acting as manager to a solicitor named Levison. In 1860 he became a contributor to the "National Reformer," then just established, and in its pages were published "The Dead Year," "To Our Ladies of Death," and his best known poem, "The City of Dreadful Night" (1874), which was at once recognized by competent judges as a work of genius, and was highly praised by George Eliot, W. M. Rossetti, Oliver Madox Brown, and other eminent critics. I omitted to mention that after leaving the solicitor's office he visited the United States in the interests of a mining company, and, returning in a short time from that mission, went to Spain as the representative of the "New York World" during the Carlist insurrections.

In 1861 he seceded from the "National Reformer" and began to contribute to the periodical entitled "Cope's Tobacco Plant." Other works by James Thomson, which deserve mention are: "Tasso to Leonora" (1856); "The Doom of the City," written in 1857; "Sunday at Hampstead" (1863), "Sunday Up the River" (1868), "Vane's Story" (1880), "A Voice From the Nile" (1881), and "Insomnia" (1882). Thomson's verse is full of brilliancy and vigor, and though its tone is generally that of profound despair, here and there we find touches of joyous and graceful humor.

Shelley may be said to have been his model, though he did not servilely follow him as an imitator. For the German poet, Heine, he cherished profound admiration. The Secularists claim him as one of them; but, though much in his writings, more especially in his work entitled "The Story of a Famous Old Jewish Firm," shows hostility and bitterness towards Christianity, still there is much also to be found opposed to the Secularistic doctrines. Much has been said about his pessimism, but his was not the pessimism of Schopenhauer, but rather the personal weariness of life, to which the loss by early death of the woman whom he loved, is said to have contributed. A "Memoir" of the late James Thomson, by Bertram Dobell," was published in London. The following few words of criticism are all that we find about him in Edmund Clarence Stedman's "Victorian Authology," (Houghton Mifflin and Co., Boston, 1895). "A singular but undoubted genius, whose life and death were infelicitous, but who has left his mark on English verse."

The Late Queen Victoria and the Bible.

Here are three letters on this subject from correspondents, to whom I return thanks.

Editor of "Notes and Queries."

In reply to M. A. C. in the Star of the 26th, I may say that I remember, when a boy, reading that the Queen of Madagascar had sent a message to Queen Victoria, and in reply Her Majesty sent a Bible with this message: "Tell the Queen of Madagascar from me, that the best thing she can do for her people is to be guided by the teaching of this book." This was before the conquest of that island by the French. The Queen may have sent similar messages to other persons, but this is the only one I remember.

J. H. KNIGHT.

(Lindsay, Ont.)

In reply to question of M. A. C., appearing in issue of Star, May 26th, 1906, asking on what occasion, following statement was made by the late Queen Victoria: "Tell the Prince that the secret of Britain's (not England's) greatness is the Bible." I have heard my mother say that this remark was made in reply to a question by King Cetawayo when he was brought to England at the close of the Zulu war in the 70's.

D. M. GILLAN.

(Ottawa.)

The story as to the "Secret of England's Greatness," enquired about by a correspondent, is as follows: An African prince, astonished at the powers of England, sent an amassador to the Queen, praying her to divulge the secret of attaining such a position amongst the nations. The Queen, in reply, handed the dusky messenger a Bible and told him to tell his master that "that was the secret of England's greatness.' The subject is more generally known than it would otherwise be, by reason of a picture of it, copies of which, plain and colored, are widely distributed. I have seen them in shop windows in Montreal. I wonder the Bible Societies do not give a copy to every Sunday school in the Empire; it would certainly stimulate the juvenile readiness to save pennies for missionary work.

May I be permitted to call in question your decision as to "should" and "would" in your column of 9th June? It is with the utmost deference that I venture to challenge your decision on a point of grammar, and beg you will not think for an instant that I fall in respect and admiration of your learning. It is simply a case, I think, of "Homer nodding." It is, of course, well known that "shall" was formerly a principal verb, meaning "owe," and this idea of obligation still attaches to it, whereas "will" indicates intention or resolution on the part of the agent. Consequently it is correct to say "I shall be glad to visit Ottawa to hear the debates," the idea to be conveyed being that debating gives me pleasure and that consequently, as a logical necessity, gladness will come to me. It would be bad English, and untrue to say, "I will be glad," in this case, or in any other, where the emotion depends not on the agent's volition, but on some outside cause.

Now "should" and "would" follow the rules of "shall" and "will," when employed in parallel circumstances: "I should," "you would," "he would," express contingent futurity; "I would," "you should," "he should," signify the past or recorded determination of the first person. When one is under influence from without, "I would" is improper; it is wrong to say "I would be surprised," "I would be obliged," "I would be delighted"; in none of these cases is the effect dependent on the speaker's will. The correct expression is "I should be surprised," etc. My authority is Alexander Bain's "Higher English Grammar."

If the above reasoning is correct, your sentence is clearly condemned. "I would have liked to visit Ottawa, etc.," implying determination, whereas the liking was something that came from an outside influence (the pleasure afforded by hearing debates).

I think I am also supported by the rule you quote from Booth's "Principles of English Grammar": "If the speaker is the nominative of the verb, and also determines its accomplishment; or if he is neither the nominative to the verb, nor determines its accomplishment, the proper auxiliary is "will"; in every other case it is "shall."

In your sentence the speaker is the nominative of the verb, but he does not also determine its accomplishment. The proper auxiliary is therefore "should."

Pray pardon my venturing to differ from you on this matter; it is, however, important that correct ideas should be disseminated on a subject wherein Canadian practice leaves so much to be desired.

C. F. DEACON.

(Montreal.)

Two letters (one from S. H. C., Carlquet, N.B., and another from W. H. Burns, Montreal), on the proper uses of "shall and will—should and would," seemed to require a fairly long answer from me. Accordingly, from a sense of duty, rather than from a desire to discuss the subject, I wrote a necessarily tedious article on the subject. For having thus "pestered my tediousness on the public," I have no valid excuse to plead, unless what Heine said on a similar occasion will serve my purpose. "If, reader, it has bored you to peruse this little essay of mine, pray pardon me when you reflect how inexpressibly it must have bored me to write it."

There can, of course, be no dictatorship in the decision of grammatical difficulties, and, while wishing to oblige correspondents, I have always said that I simply state my own belief and opinion—for exactly what they are worth, and no more; and I have never attempted to ram them forcibly down the throat of the public. Though I am not able to approve of all that the late Richard Grant White wrote about the English language and its grammar, I think there was much good sense in a sentence that I quoted from him on June 9. It was this: "He must be an insufficiently informed critic of English literature who does not know that even the most thorough-bred English writers themselves have not always been able to use 'shall' and 'will,' and particularly 'should' and 'would,' without some shilly-shallying between them."

That the "Great Chain of Literature," as Dr. Samuel Johnson was called, was not always attentive to the proper use of his "shalls" and "wills," (though, no doubt, he had carefully studied English grammar), is exemplified in the following passage: "You must make haste, and gather me all you can, and do it quickly, or I will and shall do without it." Dr. Johnson's letter to Boswell, 1774.

This is a curious anti-climax. The Doctor meant to lay particular stress upon the latter of the auxiliaries; and if he had employed them in the second or third person, the order in which they stand would have been correct. But "shall," in the first person, merely announced the intention to do a thing—"will," the resolution to do it. Johnson should, therefore, have said: "I shall and will do without it." When he said: "I will," he expressed a determination to which "shall" adds nothing but preposterousness. The case would be different if he had begun with "shall." The announcement of an intention to do a thing may be followed, without impropriety, by expressing a resolution to do it.

My correspondent, Mr. Deacon, writing of what he considers my own misuse of "would" for "should," makes a far too complimentary reference to the words of Horace in his "Ars Poetica":

"Quandoque bonus dormitat Homerus."

"To err is human," and I may say with Terence: "Homo sum, humani nihil a me alienum puto." But I must be convinced of my errors, before I repent of them in sackcloth and ashes. I wrote a sentence that began: "I would have liked to visit Ottawa, etc." My correspondent says that the phrase is unjustifiable, and I ought, of course, to have written: "I should have liked." He adds: "It is wrong to say 'I would be delighted.'"

I hold that in certain cases, of which I will give examples, "will" and "would" are what logicians call 'convertible (i.e., equivalent) terms," with "shall" and "should." I fail to see any impropriety in saying, "I will call on you to-morrow with much pleasure," or "I would be delighted, if I had the chance, to meet Mrs. Langtry." In these cases, "will" and "would" seem to me more urbane, courteous and strictly personal than the less refined "I shall call on you to-morrow," or "I should be delighted," which sound cold, and less gracious. However, it is almost useless to draw fine distinctions between the use of these auxiliaries, and, like Gallio in "The Acts of the Apostles," the public care "for none of those things." As Terance wrote in his "Phormio," "Quot homines, tot sententiae"—as many men, so many opinions—even in questions of grammar.

In conclusion, I quote a few passages from Shapespeare's plays, in which the auxiliary "would" is used. At the end of the first scene of the first act of "The Tempest," the honest old Councillor, Gonzalo, says: "Now would I give a thousand furlongs of sea for an acre of barren ground. The wills above be done! but I would fain die a dry death.'"

In the same play, Act v., 1, 175, Miranda says to Ferdinand:

"Yes, for a score of kingdoms you should wrangle,
And I would call it fair play."

In "The Two Gentlemen of Verona," Act iii., 1, 16, we read:

"And should she thus be stol'n away from you,

In "Measure for Measure," Act i., 2, 125, we find Lucio saying:

"Who I would be sorry should be thus foolishly lost."

In "The Comedy of Errors," Act iv., 1, 77, Angelo, the goldsmith, says:

"I would not spare my brother in this case,
If he should scorn me so apparently."

In "Hamlet," Act iv., 7, 119, the King says:

"That we would do,
We should do when we would; for this "would" changes,
And hath abatements."

Horace, who can always furnish a quotation which will suit any point that is under discussion, says of certain verbal quibbles: "Grammatici certant, et adhuc subjudice lis est", viz., the grammarians are disputing, and the matter is still undecided.

LEGAL QUERIES.

Ques.—Will you kindly answer the following question? Has our King, Edward VII., power to disband the navy and army? B says yes; A says no. Which is right?

CONSTANT READER.

Ans.—The King, who is Commander-in-Chief of the army and navy, might theoretically have this power; but he would certainly never exercise it without the consent of Parliament.

Ques.—A lodged with B and paid his board in advance. Can A legally leave B without giving notice.

RASTRIC.

Ans.—Yes.

Ques.—In January last "He" and "She" have a comfortable home. A comes along and offers "He" and "She" a position to manage a farm from May 1st. A induces "He" to give up his position and his house. May comes, and "He" goes but the house (which is being built) will not be ready for some months. A offers "She" a position in A's town house, but "She" did not engage for that. "She" is now homeless. Is A responsible for "She's" wages and board until the house in the country is ready?

M. S.

Ans.—Depends upon the terms of the engagement. If A distinctly engaged you both from May 1st, he is responsible to you both for your wages after that date.

Ques.—A owns a bowling alley. He lets some of his customers play on credit. I happen to be one of them. Now, I played on credit without my father knowing it, but he suspected it; so one night he went down and asked A if I played on credit, and he (A) said no. I happened to be getting good wages then. Now I have changed places and cannot pay him just now; but he is pressing me. Can he make me pay it? I want to pay him, but cannot at present, but would later on if he would only wait.

F. C.

Ans.—If you are a minor (not 21 years of age) he cannot compel you to pay.

Ques.—Is a Canadian, who was married in Canada and divorced in South Dakota, where the person remained a few months, then married for the second time shortly after, and now living in Montreal, legally married here? The second marriage was performed in the States, the party leaving here with the intention of getting married.

T. D. Q.

Ans.—When the parties go out of Canada to obtain a divorce and with the intention of evading the laws of Canada, our courts will not recognize the validity of such divorce.

Ques.—About five years ago I ordered a certain journal (monthly) to be sent to me for one year for which I sent the subscription price for one year. After the year was up I no longer wanted the journal, so did not renew the subscription. At intervals the paper has been sent to me, as I thought to revive my interest in same. About two months ago I received a bill stating that I owed four years' subscription, and requesting me to remit. Can I be compelled to pay for what I did not order? and has the proprietor of the journal any claim on me?

POULTRY.

Ans.—Although you did not order the paper to be sent you after the first year unless you distinctly notified the publishers that you wished to discontinue your subscription, or unless you sent back the journal on receiving it, you cannot escape paying the subscription.

Ques.—Can a debt contracted in Ontario be collected in the Province of Quebec, after parties owing have left for that province and sued for?

M. McD.

Ans.—Yes, upon compliance with the required formalities.

Ques.—If A rents a house and grounds from B, what steps can he take to stop the public from walking through the grounds and past the house, the way being a short cut to the village, and has been used as such for many years previous to A's occupancy. There is no mention of a public road in the lease. Can A compel B to stop nuisance, or in the event of B refusing to take active measures, could A claim damages?

R. OF C.

Ans.—If the trouble you complain of is so great as to seriously diminish your enjoyment of the premises leased, you may compel your landlord to cause the trouble, trespass, to cease.

Ques.—Will you kindly let me know if the Canadian law allows marriage without a license, and, if not, must both parties appear personally when the license is obtained?

M. J.

Ans.—Our Quebec law allows marriage without license upon publication of banns in church. To obtain a license the contracting parties do not both need to appear to obtain same.

THERAPION No. 2
for impurity of blood, scurvy, pimples, spots, blotches, pains and swelling of joints, secondary symptoms, gout, rheumatism, and all diseases for which it has been too much a fashion to employ mercury, sarsaparilla, &c., to destruction of sufferers' teeth and ruin of health. # HOW RUSSIAN PEASANT AND HIS RULER FIRST CAME FACE TO FACE

Dramatic Pen Picture of How the Young Czar Opened His First Parliament—The People and the Parasites.

One of the English correspondents present at the opening of the Duma gives the following account of the ceremony: To-day Russia's first Parliament met in the Winter Palace, and seldom has the old regime ever shown such brilliancy as in this, perhaps, its final, display. The magnificent functionaries, generals, admirals, privy councillors, and governors who filled the right side of the hall were in striking contrast to the men on the left, the members of the Duma, the horny-handed folk who are now going to take their share in the government of Russia, and who will, perhaps, take all the other shares as well.

On one side were all the colors of the rainbow, medals from every nation in the world, the beautiful Court ladies in their Russian dress, and the foreign diplomatic body, always a glare of color on such occasions.

On the other side was a crowd which, when first it filed into the hall, reminded me of a procession of the London unemployed.

ALL SORTS AND CONDITIONS.

Ten per cent. of the members had not got evening-dress, and more than a fourth of them wore the typical Russian Kaftan, a long robe which is generally tied at the waist by a brilliantly-colored sash. One man wore a long "shuba" or pelisse of white, untanned skin, and seemed to consider that he cut quite a brilliant figure in it. Many wore the high boots which workmen always use in Russia. Happily, a bit of color was introduced by the violet robes of the Roman Catholic Bishop of Vilna and by the white turbans and long flowing garments of the four or five Mahometan Mullahs who were present.

It was strange to notice, after all we have heard about the priest-ridden condition of the Russian peasants, that while there were six Roman Catholic priests present, there were only three Russian popes.

A cheering, but very surprising sign is the youthfulness of great numbers of the peasants. Another cheering sign is the self-possessed and independent way in which, despite their rude exterior, these young Muzhiks bear themselves. They do not wear frock-coats, but, for all that, they are gentlemen. Among the crowd of the newly-elected were some private soldiers—how the imposing gang of generalissimos on the other side glared at them! Several of the young peasants must have been in Manchuria, for they wore war medals. As for the Court flunkeys, they simply stood aghast at this invasion, but the objects of their wrath did not sink into the ground in consequence. Indeed, they seemed to regard the flunkeys simply as flunkeys.

THE AUTOCRAT.

In the centre of the hall, between the Commons and the "Tchinovniks," stood about a dozen of the highest ecclesiastics in Russia — huge, Impressive-looking old men, with long white hair, clad in golden vestments and with circular hats which sparkled with precious stones. Near them was a line of about twenty smooth-cheeked boys, wearing long robes resembling the Japanese kimono. These boys belong to the Imperial choir.

The entrance of the Tsar was very impressive. A distant band struck up the National Anthem, and instantaneously a dead hush fell on the Lords and Commons, and all eyes were turned to the door as if a supernatural being were about to enter. First came the Imperial banner, the regalia, the sword, the sceptre, the crown. Then came the Empress and the Empress-Dowager, then alone, the Tsar.

I was so interested in this central figure that I forgot all about the brilliant procession of grand dukes and duchesses who followed him. But, after all, it was only a young officer, a little shy, a little pensive, who marched with measured steps down the hall, inclining very slightly, now to the right, now to the left, with face a trifle strained and white. How difficult to see anything in common between this gentle-looking young man and the terrible barbarian who founded this city.

A LOFTY ISOLATION.

The Czar was met by one of the bishops, who tendered him a crucifix to kiss and holy water with which to cross himself. Then began a long religious ceremony, during which canticles were sung, the deep voices of the prelates mingling with the high notes of the boys.

During this time the Emperor remained standing in the centre of the hall, close to the officiating priests, his mother on his right and his wife on his left. His head was slightly bent, and from the movement of his shoulders it could be seen that once or twice he drew a long breath. Turning his head slightly towards the end of the ceremony he glanced at the new force which he has called into existence, but whether he was satisfied or not with these uncouth figures is impossible to say. He did not glance at all in the direction of the nobles and functionaries probably because their appearance possesses no novelty for him.

Once he put his hand to his head, perhaps to wipe away some beads of perspiration from his temples, whereupon his wife darted a swift look of enquirry at him. Did she fear he was going to break down?

The religious ceremony ended in an aged prelate solemnly blessing the Tsar and the Duma, at which point the singing pealed aloft like the swell of a great oratorio.

THE SPEECH FROM THE THRONE.

At the head of the great hall is a large fresco representing St. George slaying the dragon, and beneath this fresco stood the throne of the Emperor. With a step which was cautious rather than firm his Majesty ascended the throne and sat down for a second on the rich ermine robe which half concealed it. But he immediately rose again to take from the hands of an attendant a scroll of paper, from which he read his Speech.

From all I had heard of the Tsar's nervousness, I half feared that he would break down, but was reassured when I had heard the first sentence, for he never stumbled once, and though his tone was quiet, almost every word was heard at the end of the hall. In short, the Emperor performed his part of the great function with correctitude; nevertheless, it was impossible for me not to feel something like pity for this weak, well-intentioned young man, whose high position makes him so unutterably lonely. And I felt genuinely glad when, at the end of his speech, he marched out of the hall with a firmer step to the thunderous strains of the National Anthem and to the prolonged hurrahs of all his subjects present.

Superstitions of Devonshire.

Those who do not happen to have been born in Devonshire or to have spent part of their lives in the fair county will no doubt find it hard to believe what a strong hold the extraordinary superstitions enumerated below still possess over the minds of dwellers in remote parts of the Western shire. Even people born and bred in Devonshire towns fail to realise to what an extent weird forms of credulity still linger in rural parts of the county.

In many parishes in rural Devon it is believed that if a lady's surname after marriage begins with the same letter as her maiden surnam she will be very unlucky, and there is an old couplet:

Change the name but not the letter.
Change for the worse and not the better.

Ladies who are "unlucky" in this respect are, however, believed to possess compensating advantages in that they are able to cure juvenile complaints. Whooping cough is included in the category, and when mothers of Chittlehampton found that dragging their children through three parishes in one day did not effect a cure they promptly took them off to be "doctored" by ladies who had not changed the first letter of their name by marriage. It is claimed that whatever such women give a sick child to eat will cure the complaint.

Other strange cures for whooping cough are heard of in various parts of Devonshire. Many there are who believe that the complaint can be completely eradicated from a child's system by letting the little sufferer wear a long hairy caterpillar in a small bag round the neck. Others think that if a hair is taken from a child's head, put between a slice of bread and butter, and given to a dog, the child will recover from its infirmity if the dog coughs, as it very probably will if the hair touches its throat.

SHEEP PEN CURE.

Another extraordinary belief still prevalent is that a child will recover from whooping cough if, while the dew is on the ground, it is lain face downwards where a sheep has been sleeping. Sheep are sometimes driven into the farmyards over night so that the farmers' wives may the more easily try this reputed remedy in the morning.

When, as of course frequently happens, the little sufferers are not relieved, it is said that the parents have not had sufficient faith.

There are cases on record where mothers have taken their offspring and placed them for a few moments in graves prepared for the reception of a body of the opposite sex, in the belief that they will thereafter not suffer any more of the infirmities that children are heir to.

Superstitious Devonians will, when suffering from a cough, put themselves to considerable inconvenience in trying to meet a man driving a white horse. Having encountered a person thus engaged, they ask him what he thinks will cure them, believing that if they carry out his recommendation they will soon be all right again.

To ensure that a wound caused by a thorn does not fester, true sons of Devon will eat the thorn.

Toads are supposed by many Devonians to possess remarkable curative properties. Persons suffering from sores of any kind are recommended to wear the corresponding part of a toad tied up in a little bag, or otherwise attached to the person. As a cure for warts there is, according to some people, nothing like a fat slug, which has to be placed on the parts affected. To cure an adder's bite the victim has to catch an adder, fry it, and put it on the spot where he was bitten.

CAT CHARMS.

Some of the cures recommended for minor ailments are more curious still. Many people believe that a stye in the eye will speedily disappear if a cat's tail is drawn across the inflamed part, or if the stye is stroked with a widow's wedding ring.

As is only natural, many of the medical superstitions associated with Devonshire are in conformity with the idea laid down in the old proverb which says that "Prevention is better than cure." Thus people carry about with them (when they can get them) double Barcelona nuts a a preventive for toothache, and a small potato or a lump of sulphur to keep them free from rheumatism. To a limited extent this latter course is practised in the Midlands.

If a cat sleeps on her brain
Its' a sure sign of rain.

And if puss sits with her back to the fire it is a sign that there will be cold weather. The coming of a stranger may be expected if a cat, when washing her face, puts her paw above either of her ears.

Many Devonian housewives will not on any account allow a kitten to be in the house at the same time as a baby, fearing that in such a case harm would come to the infant. In other households kittens born in May are always killed. The reason assigned for this harsh proceeding is that "May kittens bring home the vermin." Being interpreted, this means that when they grow up they will not be content with killing rats and mice, but capture and carry home all sorts of unpleasant creeping things.

The only time when kittens are regarded as being absolutely essential in a Devonshire household is when thirteen persons are expected to sit down to dinner. In such a case a kitten has to take a place on one of the guest's knees at the table. This makes thirteen at table lucky instead of unlucky.

It is regarded as being extremely unlucky for wild daffodils to be taken into a house. Farmers' wives believe that if this is done they will lose a lot of their chickens. On the other hand, when selling poultry in the market they believe they will have a good day if they spit on the first coin they take, "for luck."

Between superstition and witchcraft there is not a very wide gulf; but although reputed witches are not nearly so numerous in Devonshire as they were even a dozen years ago, there are a good many modern practitioners of the Black art in the country.

Civilizing the Red Man.

It is interesting to note the views of the educated red man on the effect of civilization. In an article "The Tribes of the North-West Plains" in June Scribner's, Mr. E. S. Curtis tells the following story:

In a cabin on the plains of Montana three of us sat talking; an educated plains Indian, a Government sub-agent, and myself. I was telling of the splendid advancement of the Apaches, and how well they would work. At the close of my story the agent turned to the Indian and asked him, "Why don't your people work like that?" All about the cabin, as a decorative frieze, was a row of buffalo skulls. The Indian looked up at those skulls, saying: "They tell you why. While those buffalo were alive we did not need to work. Only niggers and white people farmed. We were a superior people and had nothing but contempt for those who worked. Do you realize that I, a commparatively young man, know the days when if we wanted food we had but to ride out on the plains, shoot buffalo, or other game, and the women would go out and bring it into camp?

Do you expect us, in the fraction of whole life, and even to have forgotten the days of the old freedom when we were lords of all the great plains and mountains? In what way does your civilization benefit us? Before you had attempted to force your so-called civilization upon us we had every desire of the heart! An easy, simple, care-free life; and to the worthy and brave a certainty of a future life of plenty and comfort. What has your civilization done for us? Robbed us of our land, our strength, our dignity, our content. Even your religion has robbed us of our confidence in the hereafter. What have you given us in return? Desire, corruption, beggary, discontent. You have robbed us of our birthright, and scarcely given us a husk. You said we did not make use of the land as the white man would, so you took it from us and use it as you like. I could as well go to the man who has his millions loaned at three per cent. and say, "You are only getting three per cent. for this. I can use it and make ten. I will take it because I will make the best use of it."—

On one of his expeditions into Central Africa Professor Drummond found himself among cannibals, who cast longing eyes on his person. It became necessary to make an impression, so Drummond produced a powerful magnifying glass, and, after an eloquent exordium, called down "fire from heaven" by setting light to some long grass by concentrating the rays of the sun through the glass. After this the natives had no appetite for a white magician, and Drummond went on his way rejoicing, laden with native offerings.

Hard Coughs Have you forgotten that family history of yours, with its tendency to weak lungs? Your doctor has not, if you have! He will tell you the special danger of hard coughs in your case. Then ask him what he thinks about your taking Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. If he says it is a good medicine, why not take it? We have no secrets! We publish the formulas of all our medicines! J. C. "GOLFERS AS I 'AVE KNOWN."

(By a Caddie.)

Golfers I divides in me own mind into three clarses; them as 'its the ball, them as skratches it, and them as neither 'its nor skratches the blooming ball but turns rarnd and wants to 'it or skratch anyone as is small and 'andy. The first clars is very rare, the second is dreadfull plentifull, and the third, thank 'evins, can jeneraly be kep clear of by them as knows the ropes. Sich as meself.

Any himprovement in golfers, as a clars, is doo to the 'uge morril hinfluence of us caddies, 'oom some pretends to look down on. Much can be done, even wif the most 'ardened (and some of them golfers is dreadfull 'ardened), by firmness and hexample. "Show 'em from the fust as you'll stand no nonsense," is allus my words when the younger caddies gathers ararnd me for hadvice. Me being older than me years, as the sying is, and much looked up to. If, as I often 'ears say, there's less of langwidge and more of golf upon these 'ere links, it's doo in no small part to 'im 'oo pens these lines. 'Ooo's 'onnered nime is 'Enery Wilks.

I seldom demmeans meself to speak to the kulprits, for several reasons which I shall not go into, but I 'ave other meffods. There's sniffing, fer instance. Much can be done by jerdishous sniffing, which can be chinged to soot all cases. Or there's a short, 'ard, dryish larf, but that ain't allus sife. As a blooming rule, I relies upon me sniff, me smile and me eye. There's few of them as can meet the last when I chuses to turn it on. Not as I objecs very strongly to a little 'onnest cusing; it's hinjustice and false haccusashun as I will not stand.

Sich are me meffods to them as needs 'em, but don't think, becos at times I'm cold like and 'ard and stern, that I cannot be jentle wif them as call fer jentleness. No bloomin error! 'Enery Wilks is the lad to 'oom old gents in need of keerfull nussing should be hintrusted by their wives and keepers. I'm not allooding now to old tigers 'oos stiple food is red pepper in 'uge quantitties, 'oo turn up yer like blooming manniacks if yer blows yer nose quite inercent, and 'oo report yer before yer know if you're standing on yer 'ead or yer 'eels. No, I'm not alooding to old gentlemen like them! 'Enery Wilks 'as very little use for sich unguyverned creetures. In 'is erpinyun they should not be let obrord without a chine. But I am allooding to them 'oos pashuns ags 'as tamed, instead of blooming well hincreased, to jentle 'armless old fellers, 'oo will almost eat out of yer 'and, as the sying is, an sich a one is Mister Perceval Giggington.

Over sixty 'e is, and allus kind and civvil and respeckfull, but 'e 'as no more haptitood fer golf than a jeerarf. Sometimes I thinks, musing kindly like, as 'ow the old cove 'ud be yunger if 'e took the game less seerious. But 'Enery Wilks 'as little to reproche 'imself about; 'e, at least, 'as done what 'e could to 'elp old Giggs. 'Is wife came down to the Club 'Ouse wif 'im larst Toosday, jest as 'e 'ad one an old lidy as 'e's a gent. She drew me on one side and spoke konfidenhul like, while the old man was fussing and bleeting about 'is club. It seems as sh'd 'eard of me, and 'eard nuthing but good. Which is only right.

"'Enery," she ses, "me 'usband 'as set 'is 'art, as you well know, on going rarnd the course in under 'an 'undred and thirty strokes. It's beginning to tell on 'is 'ealth, the strine and disserpointment, and I wants it stopped E's going rarnd all one wif you now, as the course is clear, and I wants,' sh'd ses, "I want you to see as 'e does it"! she ses.

Well, nobody, except one ignerrant, gellous, preggerdiced skoolmaster, as 'ever dared to call 'Enery Wilks a fool, I took 'er meaning in a moment, and I touched me cap, quiet and konfident like. "Mike ye mind easy, Mum," I ses in my korteous way. "It shall be done, this very day, if 'Enery Wilks is spared," I ses.

She nods and smiles and slips a bob into me 'and, and then old Giggs finishes wurrying abart 'is clubs and we makes a start. The old 'un 'ands 'is card to me to keep, and I speaks to 'im, kind like but firm.

"I'll keep the score, sir," I ses. "Don't yer worry abart yer strokes at all. What you've got to do is to koncentrite yer mind upon yer gime. For we're a-goin' to do it to-day," I ses. 'E 'ears me wif a little sorrerful smile, and I lived up to them remarks. 'E'd arsk me at the end of an 'ole, that 'e'd fairly bitten along, 'ow many 'e'd taken, but I would never tell 'im. I jest kep 'im upon 'is legs wif kindly, jerdishous praise. Even after that 'ole where 'e'd strook me wif 'is ball from the drive, although standing well be'ind 'im, and been in each bunker twice or more, I give 'im a word of 'ope. It was niblick play and 'ope all rarnd the blooming course. And at the end, when I added up 'is card, strike me pink if 'is score weren't an 'undred and twenty-nine! And I sent 'im 'ome to 'is wife, as pleased as any child.

MY LADY'S BOOK-SHELF.

Graveyard Literature.

For those who delight in collecting curious epitaphs there is no such happy hunting ground as England. Here are some authentic ones recently culled from English graves. The first is reminiscent of Omar Khayam.

Beneath this stone lies Catherine Gray,
Changed to a lifeless lump of clay.
By earth and clay she got her pelf,
And now she's turned to clay herself—
Who knows but it, a course of years,
In some tall pitcher or brown pan,
She in her shop may stand again?

Here lies Robert Wallas,
The King of Good Fellows,
Clerk of All Hallows,
And maker of bellows.

Poor John Scott lies buried here,
Although he was both hale and stout,
Death stretched him on the bitter bier,
In another world he hops about.

There is a delicious blending of the spiritual and temporal in this:

Beneath this stone, in hope of Zion,
Doth lie the landlord of the "Lion."
His son keeps on the business still,
Resigned unto the heavenly will.

Temperance advocates should not read this epitaph:

She drank strong ale and punch and wine,

Here lies at rest, I do protest,
One chest within another;
The chest of wood was very good—
Who says so of the other?

There is a curious one on a tombstone in Hartland Churchyard:

Here I lie outside the chancel door,
Here I lie because I'm poor.
The further in the more they pay,
But here I lie as warm as they.

An American on England.

The other day we lighted upon a book about an American girl who married an Englishman. What the title was or who wrote it we shall not say, for some inquisitive person might be tempted to read it and we should hate to help on the sale of such a book. Suffice to say that the author is one of th best-known of American women writers. She always commands a large sale and writes constantly for Harper's Bazaar. Not so long ago she got married and has been writing stories about her baby shoes. If she would stick to babies and leave subjects alone that she knows nothing of, it would be a good thing.

In this book she tries to set forth the trials that await an American girl who married an Englishman. It is too ridiculous. The English husband has an awful old mother who, although she is of the aristocracy, has absolutely no breeding. She behaves like the proverbial fishwife. It would be utterly impossible to find an educated well-born Englishwoman who would behave as this lady does. But throughout the whole book the authoress makes the Englishwomen all beasts. They are either weak and insignificant, brutally frank and rude, or amusing and immoral. In the whole book there is not one attractive specimen of an Englishwoman. In contradistinction the American heroine is everything that is lovely in mind and appearance. There is not a flaw in her anywhere. She is Perfection.

The language attributed to this paragon's six hideous sisters-in-law is too funny. It is American of the broadest. They talk about "hooking" for stealing, and so on. It reminds the wrfter of Barrie's play "The Little Minister" as it was given in New York. The old Scotchmen were Yankee of the most pronounced type and anything funnier than to hear these men trying to imitate a Scotch accent it would be hard to find. They would say "Hoots mon" with a nasal twang reminiscent of Maine.

In this ridiculous book the authoress makes a series of blunders about England. One of them that comes to mind is the giving of the son and heir two god-mothers and two godfathers. It surely would have been easy for her to discover that in the Church of England a boy has two godfathers and only one god-mother, and a girl the reverse.

This is the sort of book that spreads an entirely erroneous impression among Americans about England. They get the idea that all Englishwomen and men are either dull or immoral. The immorality in this book is something to marvel at. According to this gifted authoress all the upper ten in England are frankly and hopelessly immoral. It is a pity that any reputable firm should publish such silly and untrue books about another country.

LIVING IN THE PRESENT.

Let to-day suffice to-day,
For itself to-morrow may
Fetch its loss,
Aim and stumble, say its say,
Watch and pray, and bear its cross.
—Christina Rossetti.

—Design by May Manton.

THE FASHIONABLE GRAY.

Gray is always a lovely color for warm weather wear, and this year is pre-eminently fashionable as well. This graceful and altogether attractive costume is made of linen dyed to a lovely shade and is trimmed with heavy lace medallions of self color, while the little vest is of white and the frills alf of narrow white Valenciennes lace, which gives a touch of daintiness that adds largely to the effect. The Eton is of the loose sort that always is cool on even the warmest days, and includes the favorite sleeves that are finished just below the elbows. It is plaited and the little vest is attached beneath the plaits at the front edge. The skirt is nine gored, extended above the waist line to give the princesse effect. In addition to the linen, the model will be found most desirable for all seasonable suitings, making up attractively in silk and in wool.

For a woman of medium size, the jacket will require 4 yards of material 21, 3 1-4 yards 27 or 2 yards 44 inches wide with 15 medallions and 10 yards of lace for the edging; for the skirt 12 3-4 yards 21 or 7 yards 44 inches wide if material has figure or nap; 9 yards 27 or 5 yards 44 inches wide if it has not.

A May Manton pattern of the Eton, No. 5364, sizes 32 to 40 inches bust, or of the skirt, No. 5318, sizes 22 to 30 inches waist, will be mailed to any address by the Fashion Department of this paper on receipt of ten cents for each.

LEAVES FROM A NOTE-BOOK.

Foot Comfort.

"Oh, if I could only change my feet with my shoes and stockings!" cried a tired woman the other day and her plaint is echoes by hundreds of others. It is dreadful to suffer from tired feet. You can enjoy nothing while your feet ache and ache with a dull persistent pain. What can be done to help those who suffer from their feet? Very much, fortunately.

Consider the stockings in the first place. Open-work stockings are not conducive to comfort. The unevenness of the surface is irritating, especially when the pattern comes below the top of the shoe, as it often does. Then, too, open-work stockings seem most unsuitable for wear in our dirty city. The dust filters through the holes and at night when the wearer of the open-work stockings takes off her footgear her feet are in a horrible condition. These fancy stockings are suitable for the house or the clean country, but not for the city. Lisle thread or cotton are the best and the girl or woman with a fancy for pretty things can indulge her taste as well with embroidered fronts and colored clocks as with openwork.

Then the all-important question of shoes. There is nothing of such vital importance to health and comfort as the footgear. In the first place no woman can be well and can stand a normal amount of fatigue if she wears high heels. High heels throw the whole body out of plumb. They tire the legs and strain the back. Anyone with a weak spine suffers dreadfully from it if she wears high heels, either the so-called military or French heel.

Another thing to be considered is the thickness of the sole. Some persons insist they are more comfortable in thick soles. This is a delusion, or else a state of affairs arising from a constant thwarting of nature. The persons who insist they are more comfortable in thick soles are on a par with the women who say they are more comfortable in corsets because, forsooth, they support the spine! As though a spine ought to be supported. Think of all the little bones in the foot and their use. They are meant to give our feet the power of rising and falling in the most elastic manner. Wear thick, unbending soles and the good of all the wonderful mechanism of the foot is set at naught. Take a primitive race such as the Indians and find what they wear on the feet. Is it thick, unbending shoes? No, indeed, soft, flexible moccasins. For persons whose feet have become super-sensitive a medium sole is sometimes necessary, but it should be flexible. Nobody who wishes to have foot comfort and an elastic walk should ever wear a shoe whose sole cannot easily be bent toe to heel. Might as well walk in wooden sabots as the heavy, thick-soled boots some people foolishly imagine are conducive to comfort.

Cold Water Treatment.

A clever old lady who knows everything, told the Note-Book that there was nothing that would give tired feet such relief as putting them under the cold water tap and letting the water run on them with force. Women or girls who walk a great deal or have to be on their feet all day in offices or shops will find this a great help when they get home at night with feet that ache unendurably. Either put the under the tap or pour cold water on them from a little height. The shock seems to brace up the tired muscles and they emerge fresh and equal to new demands. Then rub them with a little alcohol powder them and put on fresh stockings and different shoes and you will feel marvelously refreshed.

Sometimes when you have an evening engagement and get home with feet so painfully tired that it seems impossible for you to do anything this cold water treatment will work wonders especially if it is followed by half an hour's complete rest on a sofa, flat on the back. The Note-book suffers so frightfully from fatigue and tired feet that she has learnt all the dodges for resting oneself. Take her word for it and if all the tired women or girls who read this try her modes of relief they will find it well worth while. Low heels, broad comfortable shoes with rubber heels and flexible soles, soft stockings and applications of cold water when very tired will work wonders.

THE HOME-MAKER'S DEPARTMENT.

The Useful Banana.

There is no fruit in more general demand than the banana. It is found in every household in the land, among the rich and among the very poor. Most persons eat the banana raw, but it is said to be more easily digested if cooked, however slightly. It is considered especially suitable for a breakfast dish and is often combined with some breakfast cereal.

Bananas With Oatmeal, Etc.

Add a teaspoonful of salt to a quart of rapidly boiling water and sprinkle in two cups of rolled oatmeal. Set the saucepan into another dish of bolling water (double boiler), cover and cook at least one hour. Longer cooking is preferable. Have ready half a banana for each person to be served. The bananas should be peeled and cut in thin slices. Put a spoonful of the hot oatmeal over the bananas in the serving dishes. Pass at the same time sugar and milk of cream. Other cereals may be served with bananas in the same way.

Moulded Cereal with Banana Surprise.

Turn any left-over breakfast cereal, while still hot, into cups rinsed in cold water, half filling the cups. When cold, scoop out the centres, and fill the open spaces with sliced bananas; turn from the cups onto a buttered agate pan, fruit downward, and set into a hot oven to become very hot. Remove with a broad-bladed knife to cereal dishes. Serve at once with sugar and cream or milk.

Cereal with Sliced Bananas.

Pour left-over breakfast cereal into after-dinner coffee cups rinsed in cold water and set aside. When cold and ready to use, turn from the cups on to a buttered pan, and make hot in the oven. To serve surround with sliced bananas; whipped cream, clotted cream or plain cream with sugar accompanies the dish.

Baked Bananas, Porto Rican Fashion.

Select rather green bananas, put them, without removing the skins, into hot ashes or a very hot oven, and bake until the skins burst open. Send to the table in a folded napkin. The skins help hold in the heat and are not to be removed until the moment of eating. Serve plenty of butter with them.

Baked Bananas.

Select four or five rather green bananas, remove the skins and coarse threads, cut in halves lengthwise, and lay side by side on the botton of an agate baking-dish; squeeze over them the juice of a lemon or an orange, sprinkle with six level tablespoonfuls of sugar, add two level tablespoonfuls of butter in bits, six whole cloves and a few bits of stick cinnamon and bake in a quick oven. Serve hot with roast or broiled meats in the place of sweet potatoes. Half a cup of claret and water, or water alone, may replace the orange or lemon juice. Baste with the liquid during the cooking.

Sliced Bananas with Stewed Cherries.

Wash and then stone one pint of cherries; add water to the juice to make one cupful and in this stew the cherries with the pits from five or six of the stones until the skins seem tender; add water to replace the liquid lost in cooking and from half to a whole cup of sugar, according to the acidity of the cherries; cook five or six minutes after boiling begins, add a tablespoonful of lemon juice and set aside to cool. When cold, use as a dressing for bananas peeled and cut in quarter-inch slices. Serve with sponge or other cake as a dessert dish. Other fruit, as strawberries, currants, pineapple, etc., may be used in place of the cherries.

Sliced Bananas with Lemon Jelly and Cream.

Have ready a pint of lemon jelly moulded in a shallow dish; dip the mould into warm water that reaches to the height of the jelly and turn the jelly from the dish onto a clean paper. With a sharp knife dipped in hot water cut the jelly into small cubes. Have ready, also three bananas, peeled and cut in slices one-eighth of an inch thick and a cup of cream, mixed with one-fourth a cup of sugar and a few drops of vanilla and whipped to a stiff froth. Dispose the slices of banana and cubes of jelly in glass dishes, and surmount each dish with a spoonful of whipped cream. This dish is exceedingly dainty and attractive when jelly made of red oranges takes the place of the lemon jelly.

POEMS WORTH REMEMBERING.

In the Train.

As we rush, as we rush in the Train,
The trees and the houses go wheeling back,
But the starry heavens above the plain
Come flying on our track.

All the beautiful stars of the sky,
The silver doves of the forest of Night,
Over the dull earth swarm and fly,
Companions of our flight.

We will rush ever on without fear;
Let the goal be far, the flight be fleet;
For we carry the Heavens with us, dear,
While the Earth slips from our feet!
—James Thomson.

IN OUR LIGHTER MOMENTS

He—"I wish you could make the bread mother used to make."

She—"And I wish you could make the dough father used to make."

Mrs. Brown (telling about the burglar scare).—"Yes, I heard a noise and getting up saw a man's legs under the bed."

Mrs. Smith—"Goodness gracious! Was it the burglar?"

Mrs. Brown—"No, my husband. He had heard the noise too."

The Best Substitute.

[No young man or woman should be allowed to marry who has no hobby.—F. C. Gould.]

Amanda, through the livelong night
I scrutinize the stars above.
For sleep has vanished from me quite
Since I have been possessed of love.
But one sad thought oppresses me,
And partially my ardor damps—
How much more charming you would be
If you collected postage stamps!

A goddess well might grudge your grace,
A fairy envy you your form;
The sweet expression on your face
Speaks of a heart that's fond and warm.
There's poetry within your eyes,
And music in your limpid laughs—
You'd be, indeed, a peerless prize
If you went in for autographs!

Forgive me if I thus allude
To what is your one only flaw,
Nor, little lady, think me rude
If I on your indulgence draw.
This sound advice I trust you'll take,
When it is whispered in your ear—
Make up your mind at once to make
A hobby of a hubby, dear!
—London Tribune.

Too Soon.

"I am thirty-five years old," announced a woman of fifty-six at a tea last week.

"And I am twenty-six," said the woman of forty-five. Then turning to a girl of seventeen who stood nearby, she asked: "How old are you, Ethel?"

"Oh," replied Ethel, "according to present reckoning, I'm not born yet."

PRACTICAL FASHIONS

Walking Fashion Plates.

Actually a new dodge in advertising! Some London firms are said to be going to send beautifully dressed women to the smart watering places as walking advertisements. These women will promenade around and be seen everywhere. Other women will look and envy and then the walking advertisements will discreetly discant on the advantages of the firm who made their clothes. It really is most ingenious and will add greatly to the amusement of the places selected.

It is, of course, well-known on the other side that many smart women with a desire for pretty clothes that outruns their purses, accept frocks or hats from firms with the understanding that they will send other customers to them. This is but a variation of the idea only the fashion-plates will be labelled as such. Certainly a pretty hat or wrap or frock looks twice as fascinating on a smart, well-groomed woman as it does in a shop.

Theatre Hats in Paris.

Anyone who has been in "Gay Paree" knows what immense theatre hats they wear there. You may go to the most engrossing play and see absolutely nothing seated behind a woman with a picture hat laden with plumes. Some theatres have tried making regulations, but they have soon found that they played to empty seats. The Parisienne would rather forego the plan than her hat.

The reason for this is supposed to be because the women of the working class in France go very largely without hats. It has come to be a sort of class distinction. Recently, however, several of the leaders of fashion got together and held a conference at the house of the Countess de Greffulhe. It was to decide on compromise measures and to present them to observers as a solution of the theatre hat problem. Most of the models were designed by the ladies themselves, and were so beautiful as to win great admiration. At the same time they were so small as to meet with the approval of the Societe Philanthropique. So it seems fair to presume that the day of the enormous hat at the Paris theatres is over. A hat at this exhibiton made by the Comtess de Greffulhe, was of a tiara-fashioned jewelled crown garnished on one side with a long amazone black ostrich feather, and on the other side was a chou of black tulle. The idea is certainly clever and extremely becoming. The young Duchesse de Guiche was represented by a pretty toque. Open work gold stems effecting a basket calotte were trimmed with shaded pink roses, paillettes, and gold gauze rosettes. Another example was a circlet of twisted velvet finished with a jewel in front and a large osprey, while a long tulle string could be gracefully draped round the throat. There was a pretty model in gold lace encircled with a twist of black velvet, and finished on one side with a bunch of roses, an exact copy of a Greuze picture in the Louvre. Among those who designed coiffures and also made them were the Princesse Murat, the Comtesse Louis de Vogue, Comtesse F. Pillet-Will, Comtesse R. de Fitz-James, Comtesse d'Haussanville, Comtesse Jeanne de Noe, Vicomtesse de Galard and Comtesse Bertrand de Mun.

The Dark Touch.

For many reasons the "touch of black" in our light gowns has been more or less in favor; some summers nothing is considered smart without it, and this year again, it is very much en evidence. Myself, I think it requires great cleverness in the handling, if a hard or spoty effect is to be avoided, and very often the artistic beauty of the whole is sacrificed to the demand for smartness—always a pity, unless a woman is purely of the smart type, and she, of course, has scored very often of late! Witness the little perky tilted hat, which, I am thankful to think, is being run very close in our affections by the larger shapes worn on the head, not "on three hairs!" But the touch of black can be varied by a touch of color—dark color, of course—and really, if judiciously employed, this comes as a welcome relief. Have you ever tried the effect of a note of dark green, or of purple, for instance, the former to adorn, let us say, a light, putty-colored frock, or a stone-gray, the latter of ecru, a pale pink, blue, deep cream, or gray of a less yellowish tone. Dark brown again (though I object to the obvious alliance of this color with beige or champagne), or smartest of all, if very carefully utilized, elephant gray!

The New Shadow Applique.

Admirers of the beautiful shadow embroidery which has become so popular in the needlework field of late will no doubt gladly welcome shadow applique.

Almost every woman delights in dainty white embroidery, and since it has come to be lavished so freely on all her garments new forms of utilizing it are eagerly sought for.

The sheerness of the materials chosen for shadow-work calls to mind the ancient gauzes and muslins "of aerial lightness" with their delicate tracings of embroidery, giving still greater desirability to this form of needlework, and insuring it a firmer hold than is granted to mere "fad" or "crazes," delightful though they may be.

In the genuine shadow embroidery only designs showing petals or figures of long, narrow form are suitable, but in this new applique wide figures may be utilized with even more appropriateness. A careful choice of designs in any branch of embroidery is of the utmost importance, since artistic results are not obtainable even with the most perfect needlework unless fitting and characteristic designs are followed. In shadow applique less skill is required along this line than in the majority of cases. Unless decided extremes are indulged in there is little likelihood of marring the work because of a poorly chosen pattern if a reasonable amount of thought is bestowed upon the nature of the design as compared with the uses of the article it is to embellish.

The materials suited to shadow applique are filmy and delicate as those of the shadow embroidery. Bolting-cloth, sheer lawns, swisses, and batistes, as well as the fine handkerchief linens, are all appropriate for articles thus decorated. The fabrics to be applied must be more closely woven and of firmer texture; such as India linen or nainsook.

The process to be followed in carrying out this work is very simple, and, therefore, well suited to women of but little experience with the needle. The work, while somewhat exacting for the attainment of the best results, is by no means tedious, being on a par with the shadow embroidery in this respect.

The design is stamped on the right side of the underlay material, and the sheer fabric is basted carefully over it. The weave should run in the same direction in both pieces, and to avoid all possibility of one fabric shrinking more than the other when laundered it is always best to shrink both before beginning the work. This is accomplished readily by covering each piece with a clean wet cloth, and ironing until thoroughly dry.

After basting the two fabrics together the work is held in hoops or a frame while the embroidery is placed. The design shows with sufficient clearness through the upper material, and is followed with closely set stitches or on such parts as must form a firm edge for cutting out, buttonholing is substituted.

Centres of flowers are finished with groups of French knots. Even the highly favored eyelets may be used by piercing through both materials.

When boleros are sleeveless, it is far prettier to add a pointed cap-piece and set it into the armhole. It prevents that contracted narrow shoulder expression, both back and front, which all sleeveless waists are sure to have.

FOUND A LOST GOSPEL.

Christ's Sermon on Outward Piety Discovered at Oxyrhynchus—Now at Oxford.

The announcement that a fragment of a lost Gospel has been discovered by Dr. B. P. Grenfell and Dr. A. S. Hunt on the site of Oxyrhynchus, in South Egypt, is causing a sensation in theological circles which bids fair to rival that which followed the finding of the famous "sayings" of Christ on the same spot.

The "find" is at Queen's College, Oxford. It is a tiny fragment of velium, perforated by worms and yellowed by sixteen centuries, but still perfectly legible. The writing is almost microscopically minute, but the Greek characters and even the scarlet of the initial letters still show up vividly.

"It is certainly no part of an extant Gospel," said Dr. Grenfell, "but its theological value I must leave to the theologians. It is unusually well written from a literary point of view. There are some 300 words on the page.

"It begins in the middle of a speech. Jesus and his disciples have entered the Temple and have met a Pharisee, who rebukes them for omitting to go through some elaborate ceremonial of ablution. Jesus asks what the Pharisee has done, and the reply describes the process of purification minutely.

"This is deeply interesting for us, for no previous authority gives details of such a ceremony as the Pharisee describes.

"Then follows a powerful and eloquent denunciation by Jesus of mere outward purification. He says that He and His disciples have been purified with the 'living water' or 'water of life.' Another new point brought out by the fragment is the first mention of a portion of the Temple called the "Hagneuterion," or place of purification. This, too, has never been spoken of before, so far as is known."

Oxyrhynchus had once monasteries, with 4,000 monks, and Dr. Grenfell and Dr. Hunt have been working in mounds which were once the dust-heaps of the city.

'BILLY' MINER KNOWN AS NO. 782

An Interesting Sketch of the Man who has Started a Life Sentence.

IN GAOL AT TWENTY-ONE

Posed as Capitalist and Gave Many Sheriffs the Fight of Their Existence.

"Billy" Miner, known as "No. 782" in Pinkerton's National Detective Agency's records, recently sentenced to life imprisonment for having held up a Canadian Pacific train near Kamloops, B.C., has woven about his name a record of crime and daring that it would be hard to beat.

Miner, who has been known by many aliases, was born just over fifty years ago, and adopted the profession of a "road agent" very early in life; in fact, before he had reached his twenty-first birthday he was undergoing imprisonment at San Quentin, California, for being concerned in a stage robbery near that place.

He was next heard of at Denver, Colorado, in the fall of 1880, some six or eight months after his release from San Quentin, where he became acquainted with Bill Leroy, one of the most daring of the Rocky Mountain highwaymen.

Together the pair, with a recklessness which highwaymen only can assume, did all the principal towns of Colorado, and subsequently held up the Del Norte stage, securing some $3,600 for their trouble. Leroy was captured and hanged not for the Del Norte robbery in particular, but for a large number of previous misdeeds of a similar nature. Miner, however, got safely away with all the booty.

POSING AS A CAPITALIST.

Miner, making good his escape from Colorado, went directly to Chicago, where he purchased several suits of fashionable clothes. A few days later he arrived in the quiet little town of Onondaga, Michigan. Possessing naturally an easy, graceful carriage, Miner (or as he now styled himself, "W. A. Morgan"), with his Chicago-cut clothes, soon made himself a conspicuous object amongst the good people of the town. He proclaimed to all that he was a wealthy gentleman from California, and that he was in the east for the purpose of winding up an estate of which he was the sole surviving heir. His faultless attire, and the generous manner with which he dealt out apparently untold wealth, made plausible all of his statements and at once gained for him admission into the best society of the town. He was especially a favorite with the ladies, and the rustic swains became sore at heart over the advent of such a distinguished rival.

At the metropolis of Colorado, Miner fell in with Stanton T. Jones, formerly of Chillicothe, Ohio, whom he soon discovered to be a companion suitable to his calling. Together Jones and Miner started for the Rio Grande and Saguache counties on a pillaging expedition. In the latter part of March, 1881, they stopped the Del Norte stage again; but the booty they secured paid them poorly for the risk they had run. Stealing two horses from near Del Norte, they fled north, closely pursued by Lew Armstrong, sheriff of Rio Grande county. They abandoned their horses near the town of Saguache and crossed the mountain range on foot through Marshall's Pass into Gunnison county, where they went to work for a week or two on the Denver and Rio Grande Railway. About the first of May they quit work and again started on a pillaging expedition, taking with them a green gawk of a fellow named James East. Going back over Marshall's Pass towards Saguache they stole a horse and robbed a small store on the route. Near Villa Grove they stole two more horses and outfits and a fourth horse and saddle within a mile of Saguache.

After a tedious search lasting four days the robbers were seen at about dusk, riding leisurely across a bridge about forty miles from Del Norte. They were armed, but were finally covered by the rifles of the officers, and captured.

CAPTURE AND ESCAPE.

Sheriff Bronaugh tied the three prisoners with baling wire as best he could and putting them on a freight waggon started for Del Norte the same evening. They were compelled to camp at a place called Waggon Wheel Cap for the night. Bronaugh and his companion, James Goodven, were so completely exhausted that they fell into a deep sleep at about 11 o'clock, leaving the teamster in charge of the three prisoners. About 1 a.m. the officers were aroused by the loud cries of the teamster. Springing from their bed they were startled by the sharp report of a pistol. The shot broke Goodven's arm. The two men at once realized that Miner and Jones had succeeded in untying themselves, and with a pistol that had been overlooked in the search were making a desperate fight. The second shot broke the sheriff's right arm at the shoulder, and the third and fourth shots struck Goodven in the left arm, completely disabling him. The two desperados then dashed away in the darkness and were seen no more. East did not escape. He was convicted of horse-stealing and sentenced to five years in the Colorado penitentiary.

AGAIN IN CALIFORNIA.

Those who have travelled by stage from Sonora, Tuolumne county, to Milton, will remember the two miles of steep grade which the stage is forced to climb before reaching Copperopolis. It was near the summit of this hill in the early morning of November 7, 1881, that four highwaymen were secreted behind a huge oak tree. As the stage from Sonora came toiling up the hill the four men, with masked faces, appeared in the road, single file, each armed with a shot gun. In a few moments they secured $3,200 in gold coin. One of the passengers had hidden a sack containing $500 in gold dust under one of the seats. But this was not overlooked.

On the Friday night previous to the robbery John Curtin gave a ball at his new house, nineteen miles below Sonora, on the Knights Ferry road. Anderson was there, and as usual was the lion of the evening. Crum was also there, but kept discreetly in the background. At the ball, Mr. Anderson agreed to send his young lady friend some music from the city. Some two weeks later the music arrived, and furnished the first definite clue as to the course pursued by the robbers. After the robbery Miner and Crum went direct to San Francisco, travelling the entire distance on horseback, via Livermore and Oakland, arriving in San Francisco five days later. Miner at once visited a fashionable tailor and purchased an $85 suit of clothes and a $50 overcoat. At a pawnbroker's he bought a gold watch and chain, evidently intending to return to Chinese Camp, and with this gaudy apparel clinch the conquest so favorably begun. But he was frustrated in his plans by learning that Aull was on his track; Aull having learned that another ex-convict named "Bill" Miller had figured in the robbery. As Miller's mother owned a ranch near Woodland, and as Crum and "Bill" Miller were known to be warm friends, Capt. Aull turned his attention in that direction, and finally got his men.

THE CONFESSION OF CRUM.

The confession of Crum made the case an easy one. The culprits were taken to Sonora by Aull, Thacker and McQuaid. When arraigned they pleaded guilty, Miner and Miller getting 25 years each, and Crum 12 years. The fourth party to the robbery was known to be Jones, but he was never captured.

In 1901, Miner was released from San Quentin, having served 25 years less his good behaviour allowance. His later exploits are too well known to readers of the Star to need recapitulating here. Suffice it to say that he is now safe under "locks, bolts and bars" in the gaol at New Westminster, and that he will never have another opportunity of demanding the driver of a stage coach to "Halt!" or to "Throw down the box." And express messengers and locomotive engineers can ply their calling without the slightest fear of Miner one day holding a pistol at their heads and requesting that they turn their employer's property over to him.

'Little Stories of Courtship'

By Mary Stewart Cutting

"PAYING GUESTS"

A Practical Love Story.

"The idea! Attentive to her! Why, he—" Alethea escaped before the last words could reach her, smiling irrepressibly, as she had smiled over the glare of Malcolm Conway's at Miss Meyers last night. But she had another another for her lightsomeness—that was her birthday, a fact unknown save by herself and one other. She had always had a particular feeling about her birthday; it had been a day of gladness to her all her life long; she had her own little secret observances of it. All those who had loved her from her birth were no longer upon this earth, but she felt no gloom to-day in the fact, but instead a sense of happiness in their unwonted nearness, the real though unseen presence of love. She wasn't keeping a boarding-house; she was at the behest of no "paying guests" to-night; she was not owned by anybody—for a few hours she belonged to herself.

Her very step had in it almost the insolence of wealth as she trailed through the halls. She was oblivious to the glances cast upon her as she sat by herself in the chill sitting-room opposite the drawing-room, reading. Miss Meyers drummed on the piano, with intermittent journeys to the window to look down the white and snowy street and wonder aloud why Mr. Conway did not come back. There was an inferential disquietude in her manner possibly traceable to the repudiated Miss Bunny Schwartz. The others inaugurated a game of whist with the table moved near the fire; it was a game scheduled two weeks before by the Miss Cosletts, who planned their pleasure mathematically. Once Mrs. Meyers called over to Alethea and asked if she were not cold in there without anything around her, and there was an animated discussion as to what you had to wear to bed these nights; Mrs. Bruiwyne's head, as most sensitive to chill, required a worsted shawl around it, while Mrs. Meyers protected her feet—which she described metaphorically as being "perfect icebergs" with knitted shoes under the covers and a weighting pillow atop. The Miss Cosletts, on the other hand, found it more what they needed to wear woollen trappers that covered the back, though Sister was occasionally obliged to resort to a flannel around her throat, the reason for which was left in the dark owing to the discovery by Miss Honora, in gentle, but firm rebuke, that This was not Whist.

At ten o'clock the players departed promptly for bed, the unwilling Florrie called peremptorily by her mother a half hour later. Each person who said good-night to Alethea asked her if she were not going up also, and she had replied, "Oh, yes, soon." She waited until she heard the doors above locked for the night. Then she went in the other room, turned down the light, and moved a big, old-fashioned easy chair nearer the wood fire. She put more logs on and poked them into a blaze, and then leaned back, watching it. She could never get used to the custom of going to bed just as the evening was beginning, and she was going to give herself a little luxury to-night. Probably Malcolm Conway had forgotten his wish to speak to her, and wouldn't be home until the clock struck twelve. A perfectly causeless sense of well-being possessed her; she was calmly happy, although she was alone in the world save for a negligent brother and a disaffected sister-in-law across the seas; she was surrounded by people who regarded her actions solely in the light of their monetary value to themselves; kind Mrs. Fort, who had been thirty years "at it," was the only person who had really tried to help her. She was incapable of fulfilling that which she had undertaken; you couldn't ask people to pay for being experimented on! She was doomed to failure in this project, she didn't dare look at her accounts, all the misery, the anxiety, the degradation, grew like a grey wall closer and closer around her with each returning day, and yet—for a little space the old life had come to her. Alone in the empty room in this cozy chair by the firelight, in her soft gown, her daintily slippered feet pushed out toward the fire, the red, red rose at her bosom, she went back through the years for the glamor that love had always thrown around her birthday. The look of it was in her eyes as she raised them with that little radiant, welcoming smile through their dreaminess, when the front door unlatched and Malcolm Conway came in. She did not move or speak as he divested himself of overcoat and hat.

Almost ludicrously repelled by any sign of preoccupation or indifference, no man on earth was quicker to perceive and respond to the receptive mood in one he liked. The brilliant smile which leaped to his eyes was of forty-candle power compared with her little softly glimmering rush-light, as he drew up another easy chair beside hers, and sat down.

"I ought to go up to bed, you know," she said, basking happily in his radiance.

"Yes, but you are not going to."

"If Mrs. Meyers hears us—"

"For Heaven's sake! forget the Meyerses." His tone was so disgusted that Alethea hastened to placate.

"The roses were so lovely." She caressed the one at her belt and her glance thanked him sweetly. "How did you know it was my birthday?"

"I saw the date in a book I took up yesterday; I'm glad you liked the flowers."

"I have the others upstairs; you see I didn't put them on the table."

"I should hope not. If you had—"

They both laughed. They seemed to have dropped into an intimacy that needed no explanation, that was as if it had always belonged to them, and only lapsed for a while. He looked at her with an air of satisfaction.

"Red roses are becoming to you. You've heard that before, though, many times."

"I should have missed it if you hadn't said it," said Alethea, simply, still with the rare diamond sparkle.

"It was kind of you to wait for me."

"I didn't. I don't know, perhaps I did."

"May I look at this?" He touched the wrist that was shielded by the velvet. She held it out to him, and he untied the ribbon, looking with compressed lips and black and lowering brows, at the long, red mark, before he replaced the band, though he said nothing. Then he rose and turned the gas still lower, so that it was only a flickering pin-point, and seated himself once more by her in front of the fire, with a return to his former manner.

"Now isn't this cozy!—What in thunder's that?"

"It's Mrs. Meyers in the room above," answered Alethea.

"She rambles about like an elephant, doesn't she?" said Conway carelessly. "Heavens and earth! Is the house falling down?"

"No, she's only moving her furniture," said Alethea. "She often does it when she can't sleep. Hark! She isn't unlocking the door, is she?" Alethea stood up nervously. "Suppose she should come down here?"

"She won't—it's too late," said Conway with confidence.

"Too late! Oh! then, if she did—what would she think?" Alethea stopped and turned horrified eyes upon him. "I must go up."

"No, it's all right now," said Conway, after a moment's listening. His thin face with the firm lips relaxed, the dark, deep-set eyes seemed to glow from within. His pleasure made it impossible for her to chill it, but she murmured uneasily, "we must talk very softly."

"So you are thirty," he announced, looking at her. The words were brusque, but the tone subtly caressed; it said: "You are thirty and beautiful and young." "I know your age, you see, as well as the day. It's just a year less than mine, but no one would ever dream it."

"Ah, but for a man!" said Alethea. "Your life is just beginning; you have your career before you. I suppose a married woman of thirty would be young, too, but I—I always thought I'd mind, but I don't, not at all. I sometimes wish I were a very great deal older." Her voice sank almost to a whisper for a moment and she looked at him with a sudden scared helplessness that subsided gradually as it met the reassuring confidence in his eyes. Her look of dependence on him, this helplessness which required reassuring, was to Conway the dearest, the most touching expression a woman's face could wear. All the manhood in him longed to spring to her protection. He wondered—

"Why haven't you married?" he asked, abruptly.

She smiled. "I was engaged once."

"Well, aren't you going to tell me about it?"

"I don't see why." She meditated. "But there's no reason why I shouldn't. I was very young. He was a nice boy, and very good looking, but he was very jealous of me, and I didn't understand. He couldn't dance himself and if I danced with anybody else he wouldn't speak to me."

"Nice, unselfish kind of a brute," said Conway.

"And once I waltzed half the evening with my cousin, a fellow from the South, and Horace left without waiting to take me home. We had a quarrel. He said he would never come to see me again until I sent for him, and I didn't send. I did feel dreadfully about it, but after all it was a relief."

"I should say so," said Conway, energetically.

"And after that?"

Alethea laughed. "Oh, there were people—! I have always known men."

"Whom you refused?"

"Oh, no—nothing as far as that—there was a German count who proposed for me once, but when he found I hadn't enough money he gracefully retired. Of course, it's the custom there—but he was disappointed."

"Sad," said Conway dryly. He hesitated, and then asked in a particularly casual tone to cover his audacity, "And have you never really cared for anybody?" He couldn't help being curious, she seemed so sweetly and unaffected virginal in spite of her experience of the world.

The color rose to her face and overspread it. She covered her eyes with her hand for a moment, but when she lifted them they had a thoughtful serenity.

"I don't know whether a man would call it caring. I've had my dreams, like every one else. There was some one—I only met him a few times—he never thought of me that way, and I knew he didn't. But I have always been glad I knew him; it put something into my life—" she hesitated again—"that I might have gone without."

"No," said Conway, "I don't think a man would call that caring—much." His voice had a cheerful ring in it, although he found he had a dislike to pursuing the subject. "A man could feel that way to a good many women."

"To Miss Meyers, for instance?" asked Alethea, with a sudden feline impulse.

"Oh," said Conway savagely. A dull red flushed his face. "She's—the limit." He shook himself as if to get physically free.

Alethea hastened to interpose. "You haven't told me any of your heart history." The firelight was in her hair and in her eyes now.

"I haven't any."

"That means, of course, that you've been falling in love off and on ever since you were in frocks."

Conway laughed. "Just about."

"And have been engaged half a dozen times."

"No, once was enough."

"And why—?"

"She threw me over."

"Oh!" said Alethea, with unconscious resentment in her tone. "Didn't you—mind?"

"Yes, of course I minded. I was a fool. I've been glad since—after a fashion. She wouldn't have suited me now, I suppose. Still, I don't know that it's any advantage to get more and more critical as one gets older. My brother and sisters and nearly all my friends are married. The boy-and-girl-marriages are, perhaps, the best after all."

"Yes," said Alethea. "There was Isabel Carleton," she added.

"Yes, there was Isabel—she was a nice girl." He spoke heartily. "I'm awfully glad she's got such a good fellow." He went on thoughtfully: "One is apt to lose the trick of really falling in love after a while, I suppose. . . . It's a pity. I'm used to sliding down the track just so far, and no farther; to save my soul I can't get past a certain point. Yet there are times—" his eyes dwelt on her with a new mischievousness in them, tenderly, defiantly intimate with something more beneath—"there are times—"

An entirely unexpected exhilaration possessed him as he looked at her lying back in the chair, her soft trailing gown, the white hands clasping in her lap, the red rose at her breast, her soft hair, her soft eyes, the mingled glow and sparkle of her face. He changed his tone abruptly.

"How long are you going to keep up this murderous farce of taking boarders? You are the most ludicrously incompetent person I've ever seen."

"Oh, don't speak so loud," exclaimed Alethea nervously. "We must go upstairs. What are you doing?"

"I want to play on the piano," said Conway, straying over toward it.

"No, no, you mustn't!" said Alethea, in alarm.

He seemed capable of anything.

"Sit down, then, we haven't had our talk out." He looked so extraordinarily boyish and happy that she gave way again, though she was sure that she heard sounds above.

"I didn't show you the letter I spoke of. My friend is all right now, and is coming back for Sunday to take up his duties. Tought to get off to-morrow, but I cannot leave you without—Hark! What's that?"

"Something fell," whispered Alethea. "Listen!"

"Was that her door unlocked?"

"Yes."

"Hark! Great Heavens, is she coming down?"

A ponderous footstep had already begun to descend the long stairs, with a lighter one behind it. The eyes of Conway and Alethea met as they both rose. Then he pushed the chairs away from each other with incredible swiftness turned out the glimmer of gas, and the two, moved by one impulse, fled noiselessly on tiptoe back through the dining-room to the kitchen, standing there breathlessly in the darkness. Conway put out his hand and touched Alethea's face. He let his fingers linger there a moment. "I wasn't sure it was you," he murmured frivolously.

"Hush," whispered Alethea. A voice from beyond reached them: "See if the front door's fastened, Florence. The idea of leaving the fire here; we might be burned in our beds!"

The light of a candle, held unsteadily, wavered into view. It was coming through the dining room, toward the kitchen!

"Here!" breathed Alethea. Her fingers swiftly unbolted the cellar door and drew him blindly after her down the cellar stairs over toward the coal bin. They were none too soon, as the words of Mrs. Meyers showed.

"The cellar door open—such carelessness I never saw! The house might be full of thieves and robbers, and probably is. You may say what you please, Florrie, I know I heard breathing."

"Mother, don't go down there!" pleaded a weary voice, the voice of Florrie. "I wish you'd come upstairs and let me go to sleep."

"Florence Meyers, hold your tongue! You will go where I do." A heavy step on the creaking, wooden stairs was heralded by the light of the candle, which finally brought into the view of those crouching back in the darkness a weird and ferocious figure of strange shape, clad in a long and woolly gown. The features of Mrs. Meyers were at no time melting, but they had now an extraordinarily pronounced appearance, her Roman nose and double chin being framed by two little grey wisps of braided hair fastened neatly at the ends, at either side of her head, instead of the high roll with which it was usually topped.

Conway's arm drew Alethea further back into the shadow of the coal bin in the face of the advancing light. There was a ludicrously poignant movement. Another six inches—

There was a pause. Then the candle light wavered backward and the creaking step receded with it. A moment more—the door closed, and the bolt was shot into place at the head of the cellar stairs. "If there's anybody down there they can stay there," proclaimed the voice of Mrs. Meyers.

POISON ON POSTAGE STAMPS.

Fourteen Three Penny Ones in England Would Prove Fatal.

The Lancet warns the public against licking postage stamps. It has been found by analysis that the yellow coloring used in the 3d stamp is due to a poisonous salt, chromate of lead.

"A fatal dose, one-fifth of a grain, of chromate of lead would be contained in fourteen stamps," says the Lancet."

A London newspaper sought the opinion of a well-known analytical and pharmaceutical chemist on the foregoing statements of the Lancet.

"The sticking material of an ordinary stamp is not really gum," he said. "It is made from dextrine, which is a kind of starch, and cannot hurt any one.

"The poison is in the coloring matter, which it is not necessary to lick at all when touching a stamp with the tongue, and even then one would have to eat the fourteen stamps to absorb the fatal dose of chromate of lead."

LORD CROMER ON NATIVE SCHOOLS

Hopes for Improvement of Relations Between British and Egyptians.

NO RELIGIOUS TEACHING

Special Cable to the Montreal Star.

Cairo, June 16.—In a speech delivered at Victoria College, Alexandria, on the occasion of laying the foundation stone of the new and more complete institution, Lord Cromer after referring to the success of the public school system here applied, expressed the hope that all people of influence in Egypt would do their utmost to prevent the evil spirit of religious dissension from blocking the path of educational progress. Though frequently urged to move the Egyptian Government to place their educational policy in the matter of religious teaching on a different basis, he held that the proverb, "Leave well alone," was especially applicable to Egypt.

Referring to the number of races and creeds represented at the college, he hoped for the steady improvement of the relations between Europeans and natives and between Europeans of different nationalities. He had noticed during the last two or three years a distinct diminution in petty international rivalries, and he hoped that educated Europeans would realize that it was necessary to stand together as the representatives and champions of Western civilization. The furtherance of the fusion of the different elements of Egyptian society, and their guidance by harmonious co-operation in the direction of the country's welfare, was the noblest task for an Egyptian reformer.

PACKERS IN GREAT BRITAIN.

Swift and Armour Endeavoring to Deal Directly With Retailers.

Special Cable to The Montreal Star.

New York, June 16.—The amalgamation of three large provision firms of Manchester and Liverpool is for the purpose of protecting the English trade against American competition, especially among the retailers.

Within the past few weeks the Swift and Armour American combination has terminated its arrangements with commission agents and engaged a staff of nearly 300 agents and travellers to canvass and represent it exclusively in various parts of Great Britain. The Americans have centralized the working of this agency at a large suite of offices in Liverpool.

Mr. Lovell, one of the principals in the British firms, says that the prospects of the conflict were much in favor of the British firms, and that they would be quite able to meet the price cutting which the American trust intended to force with the object of securing a stronger hold on the retail trade especially in view of the recent troubles in America.

PREPARING FOR THE DELUGE

Special Cable to The Montreal Star.

St. Petersburg, June 16.—It is learned on high authority that the administration of the Imperial Appanages is negotiating with a Berlin syndicate for the sale of the imperial forests under its jurisdiction for $25,000,000.

This is to forestall possible confiscation of the estates by the people.

The Imperial Appanages consist of estates set aside by the Emperor Paul I., the revenues from which are drawn by more than forty members of the Imperial family not in the direct line of succession. These estates cover 32,000 square miles, being two million acres larger than Scotland, and the total revenue derived from them was recently estimated at $10,000,000 yearly.

Before the emancipation of the serfs 800,000 peasants were attached to these estates, and were included in the valuation of the property.

Berlin, June 6.—Princess Vrede, at whose castle were found quantities of silver plate which she had taken from various ho els in Paris and Berlin, has arrived here and has placed herself under the observation of several eminent mental specialists. She is stated to be suffering in a high degree from nervous hysteria, and is in consequence irresponsible for her actions.

TEMPERANCE IN IRELAND.

Important Delegation Waited on Lord Lieutenant.

Special Cable to the Montreal Star.

Dublin, June 16.—The importance, the earnestness, and the representative character of the deputation that recently waited on the Lord Lieutenant to advocate temperance legislation were beyond doubt or question. As His Excellency said, the very attendance of such a deputation, though no word had been spoken, was a most eloquent argument in favor of the movement in which they were engaged. The deputation was the outcome of the Conference recently summoned by Sir Andrew Reed, which gathered men of all classes and creeds on a temperance platform. The Catholic and Protestant Episcopacy were very strongly represented on the deputation. The Archbishop of Dublin wrote to express his very hearty concurrence in the movement, and his conviction of the necessity for legislation. He instanced the keeping open of public houses on St. Patrick's Day, in defiance of the healthy public opinion of the country, as a proof that the aid of the Legislature was essential. The speeches of the deputation were, as the Viceroy gladly acknowledged, moderate, but they were none the less earnest. No revolutionary or confiscatory measures were demanded. But certain urgent reforms were set out which, if carried into effect, would much mitigate the evils of drunkenness in Ireland.

LACK QUALIFIED TEACHERS.

Special Cable to The Montreal Star.

Glasgow, June 16.—The latest report of the Committee of Council on Education in Scotland shows that while in the year ended August 31, 1905, the estimated increase of population was 1.1 per cent., the increase of scholars on the register in schools under inspection was 1.34, and in average attendance 2.07.

In his latest report on the training of teachers, Mr Scougal senior chief inspector, points out that of all educational problems now under discussion, none is of more pressing importance than that of the supply of qualified teachers. He also declares that a special problem is that of increasing the supply of more highly qualified teachers to meet the demand occasioned by the rapid growth in the number of higher grade schools and departments.

Met Adverse Fate of Family.

Special Cable to the Montreal Star.

NORTH GERMANS DISTRUST AUSTRIA

BISMARCK KNEW IT

Special Cable to The Montreal Star.

Berlin, June 16.—One of the results of the forthcoming of the Kaiser to Vienna is that General Count von Moltke, the chief of the German Great General Staff, will make the personal acquaintance of General Baron von Beck, his Austrian colleague. General von Moltke will make the acquaintance of one of the most charming men in Europe, but that will be about all. For it is to be doubted if he will succeed, where his predecessors failed, in persuading the Austrian military authorities to recast their scheme of mobilization so as to bring their army from a peace to a war footing with something like the promptitude of the German forces. The German mobilization takes four days, while that of Austria takes from eight to twelve—no one knows the exact figure. Nothing the German Staff has been able to do could induce the authorities at Vienna to expedite matters. The excuse given is the difficulties of language which divide the Austrian army into so many watertight compartments, and the want of the proper railway facilities.

But what the German military authorities aver in the matter is the want of will. The North Germans do not trust the Austrians, and never did. One of Prince Bismarck's most trusted deutenants once said that the Chancellor's main idea in the Austrian Alliance was to prevent Austria being against Germany. He expected little active aid from her. This was proved by the fact that during the early days of the Triple Alliance Germany had a secret treaty with Russia, the existence of which was only revealed by Prince Bismarck after he left office.

VIENNA SINGERS FOR LONDON

Famous Society at Length Takes Long-Contemplated Trip.

Special Cable to The Montreal Star.

London, June 16.—The Vienna Maennergesang-Verein, which has been visiting London, consists of 230 members, who include the wealthiest members of Vienna society, some of them being millionaires.

Forty-five years ago the Maennergesang-Verein planned a visit to London. They were then celebrated in Austria and Germany as one of the finest male choirs, and it was proposed to visit the great exhibition which the Prince Consort and Queen Victoria had opened in Hyde Park.

In those days, however, a trip from Austria to England was a far more formidable undertaking than now, and the project fell through on the eve of its completion.

Since then this Viennese musical society has prospered marvellously and is easily the first of foreign choirs. They are enthusiastic over the manner in which they were received by the King and Queen.

BOERS LODGE A PROTEST.

Unless Dynamite Outrages Cease, Will Urge Chinese Repatriation.

Special Cable to the Montreal Star.

Pretoria, June 16.—Sir Richard Solomon, the Lieutenant-Governor, has replied to the letter in which General Botha stated that, unless the non-recurrence of such outrages as the recent cases of dynamiting or attempted dynamiting of farmsteads by Chinese coolies was assured, a deputation would proceed to England to urge the Imperial Government immediately to repatriate all the Chinese. His Excellency says that it is impossible to give the required assurance, but that the Government will do its utmost to induce the mines to carry out the recommendations of the Commission. If this is done Sir Richard Solomon believes that outrages will be stopped. The Lieutenant-Governor adds that the Government is considering the granting of compensation to the farmer Smit, whose farmstead has twice been damaged.

Special Cable to The Montreal Star.

Paris, June 16.—Mme. Canaby, the Bordeaux society leader, who was charged with attempting to murder her husband, was sentenced this week to fifteen months' imprisonment for forging prescriptions to obtain poisons. She was acquitted on the charge of attempted murder.

The court was crowded to overflowing, and there was a manifestation of sympathy with Mme. Canaby. Popular feeling has all along been against the judge, whose conduct was deemed unfair, and when Mme. Canaby appeared several voices cried out "Here she is again for you to torture!"

Mme. Canaby, who was dressed in black, was manifestly very ill. She walked slowly and with evident pain, and difficulty in breathing caused her great distress.

The lawyer for the defence was greeted with cheers when he arose, and during his eloquent speech Mme. Canaby was so affected that she fainted three times.

THE PATERNAL GERMAN LAWS

Man Fined for Sneezing Too Loudly—Another for Adorning His Dog.

Special Cable to The Montreal Star.

Berlin, June 16.—A man in Erfurt, having fixed a red hat on his dog on May 1, in token probably of the owner's Socialist leanings, has been fined five marks, or one day's imprisonment, by the police on the ground that the dog in this costume caused a nuisance and incited to public disorder. Not far from Erfurt, the other day, another victim to police zeal was fined three marks for sneezing with unnecessary resonance on the public streets. The fine was, however, remitted by the Superior Court, as the sneezer produced medical evidence that Nature had fashioned him for loud sneezing.

PRINCE FOUGHT A DUEL.

Natural Son of King Milan Defeated by Fellow Student.

Special Cable to The Montreal Star.

Budapest, June 16.—George Obrenovitch, the natural son of the late King Milan, who is at school in Klausenburg, Hungary, fought a sword duel with a university student named Eugen Fodor last week in consequence of a dispute in a coffee house.

The young Obrenovitch, who had the worst of the duel, was wounded on the head, the shoulder and the breast.

DIED OF PURE FRIGHT.

French Workingman Fell From Roof, Caught by Nail.

Special Cable to The Montreal Star.

Rome, June 16.—A curious accident happened this morning in the Rue du Poteau.

A workman named Frauchet was repairing the spouting at the top of a house when he lost his balance and fell. As he fell his blouse caught on a nail in the wall and he hung there suspended thirty feet from the ground.

A ladder was quickly brought, and Frauchet rescued, but he was found to be dead.

The doctor who examined the body certified that he had been killed by fright.

THE WHITE MAN'S BURDEN.

Must Stand Together in South Africa to Maintain Order.

Special Cable to The Montreal Star.

Johannesburg, June 16.—Lord Selborne reviewed the Transvaal infantry detachment for Natal prior to their departure for the front.

In addressing the contingent, he said:—

"It is absolutely necessary for all the whites in South Africa to stand together to maintain social order among the natives, who must to a large extent be regarded as children.

"We must rule with justice and mercy, always remembering to be merciful in victory."

No More Over-Crowded Street Cars.

If the law would compel every man, woman and child to use "Foot Elm" the public understanding would soon become so sound and healthy that people would think walking a pleasure. "Foot Elm" makes feet healthy and prevents sweating, chafing and blistering.

GOLDEN JUBILEE OF CATHOLIC SCHOOL

ITS ANCIENT ORIGIN

Special Cable to the Montreal Star.

Dublin, June 16.—The celebration of the Golden Jubilee of the Catholic University School of Medicine calls to mind a little known fact that on the site of the present world-famed Medical School an eminent Dublin apothecary named Wetherall had a house with large anatomical rooms in the years 1680 to 1684. In the latter year the Dublin Philosophical Society, founded by William Molyneux, the author of "Ireland's Case Stated," rented Wetherall's rooms, and erected a laboratory under the direction of Dr. Allan Mullan. In 1686 this Society established a museum and added a botanical garden, but the troubles of 1689 put an end to the existence of a too-little-known Irish institution, one of whose members, Dr. Narcissus Marsh, first suggested the term "microphone." In 1730, on the sit of Wetherall's Rooms, previously known as "Crow's Nest," the Crow street Music Hall was built, and was duly opened "for the practice of Italian musick" on November 30th, 1731. In 1758 the Crow street Theatre in Cecilia street replaced the Music Hall, and flourished for sixty-two years finally closing on May 13th, 1820. The Apothecaries' Hall purchased the site in 1836, and built the Medical School, which, in 1855, became the Catholic University School of Medicine.

COTTON FROM EGYPTION SEED

Value of the Indian Article Has Been Recognized by Buyers.

Special Cable to the Montreal Star.

Calcutta, June 16.—The record price recently paid in Liverpool for Sind cotton grown from Egyptian seed is likely to have a healthy effect upon Indian buyers. They have hitherto regarded such cottor with distrust, being unaccustomed to purchse high-grade produce. The Government had to make special arrangements in order to dispose of the crop grown last season, but the price offered by a few firms was believed to be much below the true market value. For this reason samples were shipped to Liverpool by the Bombay Department of Agriculture with a view to securing a real valuation. The result has abundantly justified the action of the Government. As 6,000 acres are under Egyptian cotton, the yield next season will be large enough to induce a brisk trade in the local market, so that the cultivator will be sure of getting proper prices and the extension of the cultivation will be stimulated.

THE SPANISH PRETENDER.

Special Cable to The Montreal Star.

Milan, June 16.—Don Carlos of Bourbon, Pretender to the Spanish throne, and his wife have had an exciting experience, which might easily have been attended with disastrous results. While returning to their residence at Venice in a motor-boat the motor caught fire, and the burning petroleum spread all over the vessel. The Prince and Princess managed to save themselves, and landed at a neighboring place, having sustained only slight burns. The driver of the boat had his hands somewhat severely injured.

THE VICTORS' SPOILS.

Special Cable to The Montreal Star.

Tokio, June 16.—The Russian trophies exhibited at Marunouchi parade ground, before the Imperial Palace, on the occasion of the great review by the Emperor, included the following:

11,150 sabres, 85 lances, 70,000 small arms, 132 heavy field guns, 192 quick-firing and machine guns, 178 siege guns of various calibre, 1,538 ammunition waggons, 624 army transport waggons, 11,612 cartridge cases, and one military balloon.

Where The "Montagu" Was Wrecked.

Rocks of Lundy are Among the Most Dangerous of all the Perils of the British Coast.

Lundy, the most primitive piece of England left, preserved, as it were, by the brine, is not advertising its sale at the end of the year as well as it might. It has a bad reputation for treachery to ships, and its sharp teeth have eaten up many a Welsh collier and tramp steamer. But hitherto it has not fed on taxpayers' property.

The Shutter Rock, by which the huge battleship Montagu struck, is the pinnacle of a shale ridge off the west corner of the south end of the island, a solitary spire rising high out of the sea. Ground swells, even in the calmest weather, are common from the west, long, powerful, swinging seas, with immense impetus, which will rock the great battleship like a tin bath, and, if she is balanced on the sunken reef, as appears probable, she will then rip and tear till she slips off and sinks in water that will cover her to her topmasts.

AMYAS AND THE SPANIARD.

The Shutter Rock figures in the final tragedy of "Westward Ho!" Amyas Leigh, it will be remembered, was running the Spaniard hard in the race—

"Land right ahead! Port your helm, sir! For the love of God, port your helm!"

"Amyas, with the strength of a bull jammed the helm down, while Yeo shouted to the men below.

"She swung round. The masts bent like whips; crack went the foresail like a cannon. What matter? Within two hundred yards of them was the Spaniard in front of her, and above her, a huge dark bank rose through the dense hail, and mingled with the clouds; and at its foot, plainer every moment, pillars and spouts of leaping foam.

"What is it, Morte? Hartland?"

"It might be anything for thirty miles.

"'Lundy!" said Yeo. "The south end! I see the head of the Shutter in the breakers! Hard a-port, yet, and get her close-hauled as you can, and the Lord may have mercy on us still! Look at the Spaniard!"

"Yes, look at the Spaniard!

"On their left hand, as they broached to, the wall of granite sloped down from the clouds toward an isolated peak of rock, some two hundred feet in height. Then a hundred yards of roaring breaker upon a sunken shelf across which the race of the tide poured like a cataract; then, amid a column of salt smoke, the Shutter, like a huge black fang, rose waiting for its prey; and between the Shutter and the land, the great galleon loomed dimly through the storm."

The English ship cleared the danger, but "the galleon gave a sudden jar, and stopped. Then one long heave and bound, as if to free herself. And then her bows lighted clean upon the Shutter.

"An awful silence fell on every English soul. They heard not the roaring of wind and surge; they saw not the blinding flashes of the lightning; but they heard one long ear-piercing wail to every saint in Heaven rise from five hundred human throats; they saw the mighty ship heel over from the wind, and sweep headlong down the cataract of the race, plunging her yards into the foam, and showing her whole black side even to her keel, till she rolled clean over, and vanished for ever and ever."

Just at the back of the Shutter, on the island, is a remarkable cavity with a depth of about 300 feet. It is round in form, descending into the earth like a funnel. At high tide the sea has access to the bottom of it. The natives say the Shutter Rock would just fit this strange earth opening, which they call the Devil's Limekiln.

Lundy is about three miles long, and averages half a mile wide. It is an undulating platform of granite about 500 ft. above the seas, and on all sides topples sheer to the waves, "steep-to," as mariners say, for the awful walls drop to deep water at once, nearly all round.

To view the sombre, sounding precipices from a little boat beneath, even in summer — the gray granite buttresses rising from the white seasmoke into indistinction above, the green fields apparently falling from the island top, so precariously do they slope above, chasms showing in the ruin of cliffs, black with shadows, the long green seas sailing quietly into those dark abysses, falling out again white and broken, to dreadful reverberations—to view the place so, even under the best conditions, makes it easy to realize what happens when a ship strikes Lundy. The lighthouse-keeper at the north end (the uninhabited end of the island—you make your way into the lighthouse waist deep in heather) told the writer that one night he distinctly heard a crash, and the sudden cries of men, which were as suddenly silenced. Nothing was ever seen of that ship. As others had before, she had simply rammed the walls, and rebounded into deep water.

It frequently happens that the first notice the inhabitants of the island get of a wreck is the survivors knocking at their doors, when they have managed to scale the cliffs to the platform above.

WINDING-SHEETS OF FOG.

Lundy enjoys a far more equable climate that even Devon, the western rain clouds, when they reach Lundy, dividing into two portions, and leaving the island clear. But it is very subject to fogs, which play fantastic tricks with the island, sometimes covering it with a tablecloth, sometimes wrapping the cliffs, but leaving the top of the island clear.

The island forms a fine natural shelter for ships, with the wind either east or west. But there are many detached rocks and spikes off shore, like the Knoll Pins, the Hen and Chickens, and the Seals' Rock, and these, with the puzzling and powerful tide races, make mariners give Lundy a wide berth, as a rule. Even the local men, the fishermen of Bideford, Clovelly, and Ilfracombe are chary of approaching Lundy.

SUSPENDED FOR BRIBERY.

Massachusetts State Representative Found Guilty.

Boston, June 16.—The expulsion of Representative Frank G. Bethro, of Boston, from the Massachusetts House of Representatives, is recommended in the report made public by the House committee on rules, which has been investigating charges of bribery during the present session. The committee also recommends that Representative Simon Swig, of Taunton, be censured. The committee finds that Gethro approached other members of the House and tried to influence them, improperly by suggesting a money reward for their votes against the so-called "bucket-shop bill," which was defeated at the present session.

MONTREAL BOY KIDNAPPED BY HIS FATHER FROM THE BARQUE "PASS OF KILLIECRANKIE"

He was a Victim of Brutal Treatment by a German Officer While Serving His Time as Midshipman—Horrible Tale of Brutality.

"It is hardly credible that in the twentieth century, on board a British ship, such inhuman treatment could be meted out to comparatively young boys, by a German second officer, named Woolfe, aboard the barque, Pass of Killiecrankie."

This statement was made by Mr. J. F. Maguire, of this city, father of one of the midshipmen, who were so cruelly treated on board the vessel mentioned above, who went on to say:

"On the 6th of August, 1905, the British barque, Pass of Killiecrankie, 1,700 tons, owned by Messrs. Gibson & Clarke, Glasgow, and commanded by Captain Vint, with a crew of about thirty, all told, including the young midshipmen of respectable families, who had chosen the sea as a profession, and aimed at becoming officers either in the mercantile marine or the naval reserve of Great Britain, sailed from Antwerp, Belgium, bound for Los Angeles, California, with a general cargo. Each of the young men had paid to the owners a fee of $155, or 30 guineas, and was indentured for four years.

"Aboard of this vessel was a second officer named Woolfe, who was the cause of untold misery and suffering to the middies. The ship had an exceptionally bad voyage, and for two months struggled against adverse weather in trying to round Cape Horn. The time was midwinter. The ship was driven 200 miles out of her course to the south, and on many occasions it looked as though she could not survive the repeated gales, which were accompanied by heavy snowfalls and very severe frosts.

"During one of these gales after rounding Cape Horn, another large barque of 2,000 tons was sighted in a disabled condition. The crew were compelled to abandon her, and with great difficulty were rescued by the Pass of Killiecrankie. The officers and crew of the abandoned ship after six weeks were landed at a point in Chili. The Pass of Killiecrankie then proceeded to Los Angeles where she arrived six weeks later than the regular time."

MIDSHIPMAN DESCRIBES TRIP.

One of the midshipmen on board, who joined the ship at Antwerp, was Gordon Maguire, son of the narrator. When the ship arrived at Los Angeles the boy wrote his father an account of the voyage, describing the cruelties and hardships experienced during the six months' trip. A day or two afterwards he wrote a supplementary letter, of which the following is an exact copy:

"Just a short note to tell you of a little excitement we have had. We have all been very badly treated by the second mate. I have had my nose bled and been kicked and knocked about several times, and about a week before we came into port, he lashed at me with a key on the end of a string, and gave me a nasty cut over the eye. If it had been a little lower it would have blinded me.

"Well, we all wrote to the consul when we arrived, and he came down yesterday and investigated the whole matter, and found it to be true, and told us if we had only told the captain of it, the second mate would be put in prison now and fined heavily, but as we did not report it, he, the consul, could only write the offence in the mate's papers, and give him a bad character for life.

"You can imagine the brute's rage, and he has sworn to give us as bad a time as he possibly can for the rest of the voyage. The captain is very cross too, and has told us he will not allow any of us to leave the ship as long as we serve in her. So I can't go ashore in Seattle. I wish you could be there.

"Immediately on receipt of this letter," stated Mr. Maguire, "I wrote the British consul at Los Angeles sending an exact copy of my son's letter, and asking him as to its correctness, as I wished to have the consul's official confirmation of the occurrence before taking any steps in the matter. I also wired the boy to telegraph me on the ship's arrival at Seattle, or whatever port she would arrive at next. The British consul, Mr. Charles White Mortimer, replied immediately as follows:

BRITISH CONSUL'S REPLY.

"'I am to-day in receipt of your letter of February 12th, addressed to me in my capacity of British Vice-consul. Your son's account of the conduct of the second mate on the Pass of Killiecrankie is substantially correct. I endorsed an account of the occurrence on the ship's articles, and warned the mate that if there were any further complaints he would probably lose his certificate when he got home. Just before the ship sailed he was taken seriously ill, and he is now in hospital at Santa Monica, having left the ship here. He is recovering, but slowly, and wants to rejoin the ship at Seattle. I do not think he will be able to do so, however. Your son and the other apprentices had not made any complaint of the captain, or I would have gone further into the matter here.'"

Continuing his story, Mr. Maguire stated that about the middle of February he received a telegram from his son at Tacoma that the ship had just arrived there, and asking his father to come to Tacoma at once. The next day the father started for Tacoma. Arriving there at 9 o'clock at night he proceeded at once to the dock to ascertain where the vessel lay. This accomplished, he waited until the next morning to rescue his son. On his arrival aboard the ship he sent his card to the captain, who appeared on the scene with promptitude, and asked that his son be allowed to come ashore with him so that they might have the day together. The captain complied with the request, but stated that the boy should be aboard again at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, as the vessel was to sail at 6 p.m.

To this Mr. Maguire replied "all right." The son walked away from the ship never to return to it. On the way east Mr. Maguire wrote the captain that the boy would not return to the ship again. By leaving in this manner (and this was the only way to do it) the boy lost all his kit and private effects.

Immediately on reaching Montreal the father wrote the owners reciting the facts of the case, and demanding a return of the fee, $155. To this a reply was received, stating that the company had not yet received a statement from the captain of the vessel, and that they could do nothing until the captain's report was received. The father again wrote, demanding a return of the fee, and to this second letter quite recently received a reply from the owners offering to take Midshipman Maguire aboard another vessel, but positively refused to return the fee, or make any compensation whatever.

MAGUIRE'S OWN STORY.

Hereunder is a description of the cruelties suffered in the exact words of young Maguire:—

"On one occasion the second officer made Cree and myself turn out of bed when off Cape Horn at night, and made us go aloft just as we were to the upper top-gallant yard to throw back a small rope called a gasket that had been blown over to the wrong side, and was of no consequence whatever. He would give us no time to put on any clothes, but we had to scramble up in our night dresses, without even boots or socks, while the rigging and deck was covered with snow and ice. When we came down we were in a bad way.

"I called the second mate one night, as was my duty at one bell, three times. He did not answer. Then I went up and shook him gently. He jumped up, caught hold of me, and lashed me over the head and face with a heavy sea-boot, and then kept me up when I should have had my 'watch below,' sleep, for shouting at him, as he said, 'like a dog.' The next time I went to call him I sang out three or four times 'one bell, sir,' and came away. He never got up, and again kept me from my sleep for not calling him properly. This was a frequent occurrence with the boys. It is considered almost a crime at sea to hit a man when up aloft, as he is in danger, of course, of falling, but this was often the time he chose to hit or kick us.

ILL-TREATMENT OF CREE.

"Cree, the poor fellow, had his foot badly frost-bitten off Cape Horn, but no consideration was shown him, and he had to turn out each watch with the rest of us. Our ship is what is known as a wet ship, that is, she has 2 or 3 feet of water rushing over from side to side on her deck in bad weather, her bulwarks being steel plates, not rails, and these keep the seas from running off her as they come on board. Well, this poor fellow had to go down on the main deck, and do his work up to his waist in ice cold water, which, of course, was very bad for his foot.

"This went on for a few weeks until his foot became so bad that he would cry like a child from the agony of his foot, and he kept the whole of us awake with his moaning. He would sob and pray to be allowed to stay turned in at the 8 bells, but would not be allowed to do so. Near the end, about half way up his leg became a mass of green and purple flesh, and most repulsive and sickening to look at. Things went on in this way until he could not stand up at all. The captain told the carpenter to make him a pair of crutches and he had to go around on these. It was pitiful to see him trying to get along the deck when the ship was rolling heavily, for with each roll of the ship the crutches would slip, and he would fall down, sometimes twisting his leg, and sometimes falling on it. Before he could be picked up, or picked himself up, a wave of ice cold water would come aboard and soak him to the skin, and they would not allow him to go below to change. He was compelled to stay on deck until his four hour watch was finished. When any of us went to help him get up, we were told to leave him alone and get on with our work, and if we took no notice and still went to help him the second officer would rush at us and kick us to the other end of the deck and then to the royal yards, for not obeying orders. He would then laugh at this poor fellow struggling to get up, and being washed from side to side by the water on the deck.

"At last his leg became so bad that the captain considered cutting it off himself; however, he decided not to do so, as port would soon be reached. Cree was a green lad, and good natured, and the second officer took every advantage of him. The officer would sometimes bring Cree up on deck, and make him strip in the coldest weather. The lad would almost shiver to pieces, and then the mate would laugh at him, as would the other Germans who formed a large part of the crew. Towards the end of the journey Cree became quite imbecile and appeared to be losing his senses.

Mr. Maguire has since learned that the second officer became sick after the British Consul's investigation, but later rejoined the ship, whereupon the two remaining middies ran away. On the second voyage not one of the six middies were on the vessel. Cree, who was landed at Los Angeles in a crippled condition, is still under the care of the doctors, and his father has instituted legal proceedings against the owners, and Mr. Maguire will also enter action in due course. The bill before the Imperial House of Commons to prevent the appointment of German officers on British ships has been greatly stimulated by the happenings on this voyage.

SUNSHINE FURNACE

Where Does Your Heat Go To?

You can't put your hand over the chimney when some furnaces are in use because so much heat goes up the chimney. Your hand would be burned. That is heat wasted, time wasted, because it takes so much more firing up when a large part of your heat is lost.

The "Sunshine" furnace is built to extract all the heat units from the fuel and distribute them through the house. It does not waste heat like common furnaces.

Talks on Orange Meat

(THE PURE FOOD)

Mixing and Flaking.

After the wheat is thoroughly cooked—all starch cells broken—and starch converted into carbohydrates—it goes to the mixing machines. Here, malt is added, which converts the starch into maltose (Malt Sugar), which makes ORANGE MEAT so nutritious and wholesome. Then the malted wheat is passed through special machines, which turn the wheat kernals into individual flakes. Orange Meat is then ready for the ovens, to be baked a deliciously crisp golden brown.

Mercerized paper lining of every package insures Orange Meat being always fresh, and clean. At all grocers in 15c and 25c packages.

Every 15c package contains a coupon, good for valuable premiums. 25c or "Jumbo" package contains 2½ times the quantity of smaller size. Write "Orange Meat, Kingston" for new premium catalogue.

Last of the "Pre-Disruption Ministers" Passes Away at Ripe Old Age.

FACTORIES IN SMALL TOWNS

This, It Is Believed, Will Prove Most Effective Means of Fighting Desire to Emigrate.

Frae Oor Ain Correspondent.

Glasgow, June 6.—What is it again the Sunday school hymn says aboot hoo ane by ane the years are passing by? I've been tryin' for some five minutes to get the hang o' the verse, an' aye, just when I think I hae it, awa' it slips, oot by some ither door o' my memory, an' I am left wi' "passin' by," "passin' by," "the years are passin' by," playin' hide-an'-seek through my heid, an' me nane the wiser. Onyway, there was sic' a hymn, an' when I read o' the passin' awa' o' the last o' the ministers who left the Auld Kirk in 1843 because the Government o' that day wad insist on meddlin' wi' the affairs o' the kirk, the air o' it began to hum through my heid, although the words wadna come. Dr. Thomas Smith, since a missionary in India, then minister o' a kirk in Edinburgh, then a professor o' theology, was born nearly ninety years ago, an' wi' his passin' we hae seen the last o' what was a dizzen years syne, a decent sized band o' "pre-disruption ministers." Dr. Smith was a mair than ordinar' learned man, an' a man that a'body thocht a lot o', but he wasna a great preacher. He was against the union o' the Free Kirk wi' the United Presbyterians for a while, but at last he took the ither side. Noo that he is awa' the Free Kirk itsel' seems to hae passed into history, for the kirk that is now the Free Kirk by law can ne'er be the Free Kirk o' the years afore the union.

We are aye comin' across some queer things connected wi' oor forefolk, things that puzzle us, an' sometimes puzzle a' the antiquarians. A fairmer in Orkney was settin' up a fence the ither day, an' when he was diggin' a hole for ane o' the posts his spade dropped clean oot o' sicht into the grun'. This was sic a queer thing for a spade to dae that the fairmer went an' got anither spade an' an antiquarian frae Kirkwall as weel, an' the twa o' them started to dig for the first spade. They discovered a fine room aneath the grun, built up wi' stanes, and wi' a wee door on ae side, some fower feet frae the surface. The room was 19 feet from east to west, an' 10 feet frae north to sooth, an' it had a roof o' flagstanes, kept up by nine ither stanes set on their ends. It was only two an' a half feet high, sae them wha lived in it canna hae been vera big, or they canna hae stood up muckle. Somebody maun hae lived in it sometime, for there were shells an' banes o' animals in it, but hoo auld it is naebody kens. Some antiquarian will be writin' a paper on it, an' then we'll get a theory o' some kind as to wha made it an' lived in it.

The big toons o' Scotland are willin' to dae somethin' to cure the drunkenness trouble, an' the Toon Councils, after two-three conferences in Dundee an' Aberdeen, hae drafted a new bill an' asked the Government to try to pass it. The idea is that there should be homes whaur confirmed drinkers could be sent to by the local authorities when they were proved to be confirmed drinkers. That is, confirmed drunkenness wad be made a case o' temporary insanity, to be treated in the same way. This seems a reasonable idea, an' the pity is that the Government, though in favor o' the principle, canna promise to dae onything in the meantime. They see that it wad mean the upsettin' o' a lot o' the laws already in existence, an' they already hae mair wark on han' than they are likely to get time for. But they promise to tak it up some day, an' we'll be livin' in hope. Them that live longest see maist.

There seems nae slackenin' aff in the tide o' emigration to Canada, but noo an' again somethin' happens which maks us think that Auld Scotia itsel' may some day be no a bad place to live in. The British Aluminium Company are daein' their best to keep as mony as they can frae emigratin' either to Canada or ony ither pairt o' the warl'. Already they've five works at the Falls o' Foyers, on the Caledonian canal,an' noo they're to mak big new works at Kinlochleven, an' create there for their workers a fine wee model village. As a start they've placed contracts wi' a firm o' builders to put up 207 cottages for workmen, some eight miles frae Ballachullish, an' no far frae Loch Leven. If only mair firms wad leave the big toons wi' a' their dirt, an' smoke an' want o' room, an' put up factories an' mills in the country whaur the workers wad get room to live, it wad be a guid thing for the country. There are only two things that can stop the rush frae the country to the big toons an' the colonies. These are works in the country an' the breakin' up o' the lan' into sma' fairms.

The Duke o' Fife—the King's son-in law — seems to favor the sma' fairm idea. But he gangs a bit farther than that. He seems to believe in each sma' fairm bein' the property o' the man wha works it. He has been sellin' lots o' his lan' in Aberdeenshire, an' the transactions hae caused some discussion up that way. Some say the Duke wants to benefit the folk wha live on the lan' by sellin' it to them, an' ithers say he is a cute, cute man, what sees that in the time to come lan' will hae far mair burdens in the way o' taxes than it has the noo, an' that he will be better to shift a' thae burdens on to ither folk afore the ither folk notice what he means by it. Onyway, he gave the maist o' his tenants the chance o' buyin' their fairms afore he looked for ony ither buyers. Aince the Duke had big estates aboot Turriff an' Macduff, spreadin' ower three parishes, but noo he has less than a dizzen fairms. Of coorse his plan couldna dae muckle good because it didna provide for a dividin' o' the lan' into fairms o' a suitable size. To sell each present fairm as it is means, after a', only a change o' laird, even although sometimes the laird works his ain lan'. Somethin' mair than that is needed.

A revival on a sma' scale is threatened a' the auld time war atwean England an' Scotland. It will be a peaceable war in which the railway companies will be mair interested than the soldiers an' sailors. The fruit growers up Blairgowrie way are plannin' to send their strawberries awa' doon into the big toons o' England an' sell them there, an' the English fruit growers are to pay them back by sending English strawberries up into the Scottish markets. This seems a bit o' a warfare when ye look at it first, but it isna serious when ye ken mair aboot it. English strawberries are ripe earlier in the summer than Scottish, an' they will come north afore the Blairgowrie men hae ony ready. Then Scottish are fit for use after the season is past in England, sae they can be sent sooth when they winna compete with English. It seems a fine case o' trade helpin' a' concerned. Even the public will benefit, for they will hae strawberries for a langer time each year. That is the public wha gang in for strawberries.

There's mair interest in Paisley in emigration to Canada than in ony ither place, because o' letters frae Mrs. Murray, wife o' Professor Murray, o' Montreal, askin' for emigrants to form a Paisley colony in some pairt o' the Dominion. She has written twa-three times to the Provost an' there's a plan for formin' a committee o' heads o' families an' unmarried men, wha micht gie sic a colony a start in Canada. Mrs. Murray's father was Baillie Wm. Polson, a weel Kent Paisley man in his day, and Professor Murray is a son o' a son o' a Provost o' Paisley. Sae it can hardly be wondered at that they are baith interested in Paisley, an' wad like to see a new Paisley in Canada. Whether ony respectable number o' Paisley buddies will emigrate a' in a lump is anither story. They are canny folk who live in Paisley.

Ane by ane the auld industries are changin' hans' or deein' oot, an' the big factories gettin' a' the trade. For nearly a hunder years there has been nae better kent buildin' in the east end o' Glasgow than Alexander's mill. Though the city a' roond has been changin' there it has stood, an' seen the auld streets swept awa', an' wide, new streets tak their place, the railway train comin' in an' makin' a big new station on ae side an' the trolly car rushin' by nearly as fast on the ither side, an' the city extendin awa' oot for miles an' miles into the country. A' the time it has been a thread mill, but at last the competition o' the great big companies at Paisley has been ower muckle for it, an' last week it was closed. Aince on a time the mill was driven by the Molendinar Burn, that cam doon past the Cathedral an' meandered doon to the Clyde, but the water wheel has been awa' for mony a year, an' the Molendinar is noo covered up an' used as a sewer. There's a warl' o' romance connected wi' Alexander's mill, an' its a pity it canna be saved. But its for sale, an' will likely soon be ta'en up by the railway company an' demolished. Then anither o' Glasgow's auld landmarks will hae disappeared.

To the ordinary person there dinna seem muckle life in the agitation for clearin' the Established Kirk o' a' its connection wi' the State, an' lettin' it support itsel' just as dissentin' kirks dae just noo. But the United Free Assembly thinks differently. At ony rate, it discussed disestablishment for power and oors ae day last week, an' at last, by a big majority, decided to dae a' it could to force on the disestablishin' o' the State Kirk. Dr. Koss Taylor, o' Glasgow, argued in favor o' a' the Presbyterian kirks comin' to some sort o' agreement on the question, an agreement that micht lead to some kind o' union o' Presbyterianism, but the majority of the Assembly thocht there could be nae agreement sae long as ae Kirk was supported by the State an' the ithers werena. There's nae doot that if the question was left to the present members o' Parliament for Scotland, the kirk wad be disestablished richt off, but the Hoose o' Commons isna easy to move, an' the Auld Kirk will be the established kirk for mony a year to come. At least that's my opinion, I'm no sure that I wad be sorry if it turned oot to be wrang.

The Scottish Liberal members o' Parliament think that Scotland isna gettin' fair play in the maitter o' money for the purposes o' education, an' they've written a lang letter to the Chancellor o' the Exchequer, claimin' nae less than £18,600 as a sum that Scotland has a richt to. The expense o' education north o' the Tweed is gettin' mair an' mair, but the Government is makin' nae provision for mair money. The result o' this is that the ratepayers in the different parishes suffer through the rates bein' raised, an' the members o' Parliament hint that maybe Scotland isna gettin' mair money because the folk haena been makin' a big row ower it. We've a far better system o' education in Scotland than they will hae in England, even if their new Education Bill passes, but someway England can aye get mair money than Scotland.

Professor Stalker o' Aberdeen has been comin' doon on the Italian hokey-pokey man. We've been makin' local laws for keepin' the Sunday clear o' wark, an' we've managed to keep it a day o' rest to a' except them wha are determined to mak' it somethin' else. But the hokey-pokey man wi' his ice cream barrow parades the streets, an' he keeps his shops open seven days a week an' collects the pennies o' the passers-by when a' the natives o' this country are at hame or at the kirks. It's queer hoo a' the ice-cream dealers are Italians, an' it's a pity that they are the only class we hae to gie us an idea o' what the Italians really are. They are, nae doot, fine folk at hame, but to us an Italian is aye a man wi' a barrow or a man dealin' oot ice-cream an' lemonade ower a coonter when we are passin' his door on Sunday. Still, what can we dae? We canna mak' a law sendin' them a' hame, an' there seems little chance even o' a law makin' them shut a' their shops on Sunday. Even Professor Stalker could suggest naethin.

AND CAN BE CURED BY

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

It is not the back that is aching, but the kidneys which are situated beneath the small of the back.

Therefore, dull pain in the back, or sharp, quick twinges, are warnings of sick kidneys—warnings of kidney trouble. Plasters and liniments will not cure a bad back, for they cannot reach the kidneys which cause it. Doan's Kidney Pills reach the kidneys. That is what they are for and that only. So, if you would be free from backache, swelling of the feet and ankles, frequent or suppressed urine, painful sensation when urinating, specks floating before the eyes, frequent thirst, brick-dust deposit in the urine, or anything wrong with the urinary organs or bladder, you must keep your kidneys well. Help them to work freely, and help them to flush off all the body's waste and impurities.

Doan's Kidney Pills are made from the purest roots and herbs, and have a remarkable healing and toning effect on the kidneys. Mrs. Barling, 26 Locomotive Street, Hamilton, Ont., writes: "I had been troubled considerably with my kidneys, using many remedies, but finding no relief. I tried Doan's Kidney Pills and found them to act directly on the kindeys, and making them strong again."

TELLS BY THEIR SLEEP

"I can tell by my little ones' sleep when a cold is coming on" said a mother when speaking of the advance symptoms of colds in children. "They toss about, are restless, their breathing is heavy and there are symptoms of night sweats. The next morning I start with Scott's Emulsion. The chances are that in a day or two they are all over it. Their rest is again peaceful and the breathing normal."

Here's a suggestion for all mothers. Scott's Emulsion always has been almost magical in its action when used as the ounce of prevention. Nothing seems to overcome child weakness quite so effectively and quickly as Scott's Emulsion.

Our London Letter.

From Special Representative of the Montreal Star Resident in London.

London, June 5.—The British manufacturer is being given something of a shake-up. As you know, the Commercial Intelligence Department of the British Board of Trade—that is to say the commercial branch of the British Government administration—are arranging for a deputation of representative manufacturers and British men to visit Canada this autumn to investigate how British trade can be stimulated within the Dominion and the Yorkshire Post seizes the opportunity to point out that it is a good deal the fault of the British manufacturers themselves if their trade with Canada does not bound ahead as it might be made to do under the stimulus of the Canadian preference. The British manufacturer is urged to go to Canada and see for himself how the enterprising American advertises his shoes and dress fabrics and pretty well everything else in likely Canadian places, and how he advertises it in a way to familiarize Canadians with his distinctive trade name and trade methods. He is also reminded of his neglect to take advantage of the offer which Mr. Fielding made during the tour of the Tariff Commission to the effect that the Commission would gladly fix a place and a time for the hearing of British evidence if any were offered, but none came. Everyone welcomes this tardy effort on the part of the British Government to wake up the British manufacturer. The subject is also to come before the Congress of Chambers of Commerce of the Empire, at which Canadian Boards of Trade will be largely represented, which is being held in London this July, and from these two sources of information the Colonial Conference of next spring should have something useful to talk about in the matter of trade relations. The last utterance of Mr. Winston Churchill seems to suggest that the Campbell-Bannerman Ministry are a little nervous, because of the empty handedness with which they will have to come before Colonial Ministers in London next April. They cannot talk British preference for they came into power pledged against it, so if Mr. Winston Churchill is a correct prophet they are to devote themselves especially to the encouragement of Inter-Colonial preference, such as is now being brought about between South Africa and Canada. One can indeed look forward to the day when there will be a series of inter-Colonial preferential compacts and the British tariff will be the only one which does not adjust itself to the family compact. Certainly the British people could not be given a better object lesson of the inadequacy of so-called Free Trade to fit present Empire conditions.

Though the British Ministry has pretty clearly indicated that it means to do nothing to remove the Canadian cattle embargo, the question is still an active subject of discussion in the British provincial press. The Association of English and Scotch Graziers and Consumers, of which Mr. Patrick L. Gray is the secretary, is still fighting the cause on the double ground of cheaper stores in this country and the need also of cheaper meat. If the present agitation against American tinned meats of all kinds spreads, and it certainly has excited no small sensation here, the demand for Canadian cattle should be greatly enlarged. The advocates of Canadian stores urge that a Canadian store beast can put on 14 lbs. per week upon British pastures as against only 12 lbs. put on by an Irish or English store beast, the Canadian animal being healthier than any other class of cattle. As against these contentions, it is pointed out that the British supply of home fed beef and veal is now larger by one million cwts. than in 1895, the number of cattle in the United Kingdom having increased from 10,753,000 in 1895, to 11,674,000 in 1905, and that as a matter of fact the British breeder, if freed from Canadian and other competition in store cattle, is well able to supply all live meat needs.

DISTRESSED YORKSHIREMEN FOR CANADA.

Reading the Journals published in various centres in this country one realizes how strong a hold Canada has now secured upon the attention of the English public. I see, for instance, that this week the question of Canadian settlement has formed the subject of eager discussion before the Leeds' Distress Committee. This committee, formed in the interests of the unemployed of one of the great centres of the Yorkshire woollen industry, has been sending emigrants to Canada this season under the auspices of the Salvation Army. In the case of the first batch everything went as well as could be wished, but in the case of the second batch there was some little hitch and on arrival at Liverpool the emigrants, it is said, were kept many hours without anything to eat. Probably many Canadians would agree with the chairman when he said: "It is a painful sight to witness these people leaving our shores, and one would be heartily glad if it was not necessary to adopt such a course." But the fact remains that England under her present fiscal system cannot find employment for these people, while Canada can. Another subject of discussion at the committee meeting was the desirability of accepting the offer of a steamship company of a free pass to a representative of the committee that he might visit Canada and report upon the prospects generally. In the end it was arranged that Mr. Ernest Terry, a member of the committee, should visit Canada as soon as possible, especially with a view to find out whether the landing and general reception arrangements in the Dominion were adequate to deal with British unemployed of the class which Leeds is prepared to send out.

WHEN "BUTTER" IS NOT BUTTER

There is continued interest in Anglo-Canadian circles in the inquiry as to butter adulteration which is still proceeding under the auspices of the British Government. The blenders are making a great fight against the proposed legislation directed to preserve the purity of Colonial butter and especially the suggested restriction of the amount of moisture to 16 per cent. One of the most important recommendations put before the committee was that by Mr. John Cansfield, for several years managing director of Pearks Limited, which has 210 branches in Great Britain. He proposes that there should be two standards, a standard for butter remaining in its original state, and a standard for butter which had been blended. All imported butter coming into this country should, he urged, have the Government brand.

One of the London police courts this week has been busy with a somewhat sensational investigation as regards butter adulteration. An employe of the Nutrium Products Company of London was summoned with endeavouring to persuade the managing director of the Wilts United Dairies Limited to mix "lardine" with his butter, stating as an inducement that by that means some firms in the West of England were making large sums weekly, while one firm in Holland was clearing £50,000 a year. According to the evidence the defendant told the English dealers that he had a special fat—the product of the cow—which would have become butter if the cow had lived. He said that this fat could be profitably mixed with butter without fear of detection if a scale he had prepared was carefully followed. In reply to an objection raised by witness, he said he regarded it as a legitimate trade which no law could stop. He said that the "lardine", as it was called, was white. Witness suggested that it should be colored, but the defendant said in that case it might be taken for imitation butter. Witness said he would think the matter over, and after receiving several letters from the defendant, he communicated with the Board of Agriculture. The case is still proceeding.

WINDERMERE.

Our Irish Letter.

From the Special Correspondent of the Montreal Star.

Dublin, June 5.—On Wednesday and Thursday, of last week, the Spring Show was held at the Balmoral Grounds of the Society, in Belfast. Sir Horace Plunkett, vice-chairman of the Department of Agriculture, accompanied by the Hon. John Dryden, Minister of Agriculture for Canada, one of the committee appointed to enquire into the working of the Department of Agriculture for Ireland, visited the Show on Thursday, and took great interest in all they saw. The weather, unfortunately, was very bad—raining hard both days. Still, the attendance was very good. The Canadian Minister of Agriculture should get a good idea of how farming is progressing in this country at present, as several important shows are now taking place.

Mr. William Ankers, chief engineer of the London and North-Western Company's fleet of steamships, is about to retire after fifty years' service. He calculated that he has crossed the Irish Sea some 13,000 times, and has travelled about 760,000 miles in doing so.

Irish millers are making a great effort to get Irish flour more used than it is here at home. The output of the Irish flour mills was estimated at the very substantial figure of 7,000,000 cwts. per annum, but it is said that if the people of Ireland would only give the preference to Irish milled flour, this quantity might easily be doubled, with the result that not only would increased employment be given in the mills, but many other trades would be benefited. Flour imports are said to have fallen off one half, while wheat imports have increased one half. Taking a line across the country from Drogheda to Galway, there are only ten mills north of the River Boyne, while with the exception of two in Galway, the remaining forty-nine mills are in southern countries. If the people of the north-east corner of the province of Ulster supported Irish milled flour, it would give a great fillip to milling. The only protection Irish millers seek is a preference for Irish flour over the imported stuff, and they say that the public should ask for "Irish" and "see that they get it." The wages bill of a miller turning out 1,000 sacks of flour weekly is about £25. To produce this quantity 1,500 barrels of wheat must be worked, so that in cartage alone the working man benefits enormously. The only trouble that I see is that the flour made in Irish mills is not nearly so good—as a rule—as the imported flour from Canada or the States.

The Irish language is brought to bear on many things in Ireland now, and one of them is on the election of dispensary doctors. On Thursday last there were two applications for the position of dispensary doctor for a district in the Oughterard (Co. Galway) Board of Guardians. One was from Dr. O'Brien and the other from Dr. Beirne, who was understood to have a knowledge of the Irish language. Both candidates were duly proposed for the position, but the chairman (Mr. Peter O'Malley) declined to receive Dr. O'Brien's nomination, as the advertisement of the vacancy, he said, contained an intimation that an Irish-speaking doctor only need apply for the post. He, therefore, declared Dr. Beirne elected. Mr. Patrick Conroy (a Guardian) said they had heard before of the Gaelic League interfering, but it was only when "soft jobs" like this came on that they sent round their well worn cry of "an Irish doctor for the Irish poor." The chairman, having declared the proceedings over, the meeting broke up in confusion. The supporters of Dr. O'Brien signed a protest against the chairman's decision.

Hopes were entertained that the Prince and Princess of Wales would visit Ireland this summer, and the Belfast people were nearly sure of it, but on writing to the Prince's secretary, got a reply to say that their Royal Highnesses having just returned from a seven months' visit to India, and having to go away at once to Spain, there would be no likelihood of their being able to come to Ireland this summer.

The Irish language, and a dog have succeeded in almost distracting a Cabinet minister, a Government department, an M.P., a petty sessions clerk, and a policeman. The dog belongs to a man in Cork named Murphy. Murphy applied for a license for the dog in Irish. The clerk said he could not read Irish, so Murphy left in anger. The police summoned Murphy for keeping an unlicensed dog, but as the summons was served on Good Friday, it was held to be illegal, and a second one was made out, on which Murphy was fined half a crown. Mr. Sheehan, the member for Cork, heard of the vicissitudes of Murphy's dog, and put in a printed notice enquiring if the Chief Secretary had heard of the transaction. Mr. Bryce, after making enquiries, gave the whole history of the case to the House. Thus the time of a Cabinet minister, and many Government officials, with a good deal of public money, has been wasted because Mr. Murphy applied for a license for his dog in Irish!!

The international polo match, England vs. Ireland, will take place at the Hurlingham ground on Saturday, 16th June. Ireland's representative team will be a strong one, consisting of Major C. R. O'Hara, and Messrs. P. O'Reilly, S. Watt, and A. Rotherham. The polo season in Ireland has commenced merrily, though the almost constant rain which has fallen nearly every day since the merry month of May began, has made the grounds very heavy and bad.

The next move of those interested in the total restriction of the sale of intoxicants in Ireland, is to be the introduction of a clause in the committee stage of the bill (which received its second reading last Friday) prohibiting the granting of special licenses to race meetings, horse shows, football and cricket matches, or any extension of hours on premises where extra facilities have in the past been granted.

The Irish fishermen suffer a great loss by not having sufficient carrying accommodation provided for them, and the fishery commissioners should see to it. From enquiries made in London last week, in the interests of Irish fisheries, it was found that mackerel, were a complete drug on the southwestern coast of Ireland. On the coast here mackerel were only bringing 4s to 5s per 120, while the fish in Billingsgate (London) fetched from 14s to 20s per 120, and were retailed at the very gates of the market at five-pence each. Further away from the distributing centre, the fish were, of course, much dearer. It seems a pity that the poor fishermen of the west and southwest of Ireland, should be so handicapped as not to be able to take proper advantage of the "harvest of the sea." Mackerel have been unusually plentiful on our coasts this spring, and it seems too bad that they had to be thrown over again into the water, as there was not a sufficiency of salt to cure them, nor were vessels available to carry them to a proper market.

Mr. Ross Kinloch Magillicuddy, Royal Artillery (The Magillicuddy of the Reeks), is going to be married to a Miss Dorothy Broadbent. "The Magillicuddy of the Reeks" is one of the few old Irish titles, which are still religiously kept up, and the bearers of them are really prouder men than if they held an old peerage. Indeed, I have heard one who is direct heir to an Earldom say that he would never dream of giving up the "The" to be a lord. Some of the most noted are: "The MacDermott" (Prince of Coolavin), "The O'Conor Don," "The O'Donoghue of the Glens," etc. The wifes of these chieftains are always addressed as "Madame" MacDermott, "Madame" O'Conor Don, etc. No greater insult can be given them by addressing or introducing one of the "Thes" as Mr. so-and-so.

It is pretty generally admitted that Ireland is over-judged, and that the amount paid in salaries is ridiculous—far more than Scotland—but it is not so well known that the Lord Chancellor of Ireland is the highest paid legal official in the three kingdoms. Such is, however, the case. The salary attached to the office is £3,000 per annum more than that given to the Lord Chancellor of England. The Irish Chancellor receives £8,000 a year, the English only £5,000, but the latter is voted an extra £5,000 a year by virtue of his office as Speaker of the House of Lords. Mr. Bryce is introducing a bill to reduce the salary of the Irish Lord Chancellor from £8,000 to £6,000—and plenty for him, too!

"The blue ribbon of the turf,"—the Derby—was won by Major Eustace Loder's bay colt "Spearmint," by Carbine, Maid of the Mint. Major Loder has so identified himself with Ireland, that next to a native-born Irishman winning the Derby, most of the people here would prefer him to be victorious. For some time past "Spearmint" has been a great "tip," and started favorite, having supplanted "Lally," who took the lead in the betting all through the winter. Major Loder has perhaps the finest establishment at the Curragh of Kildare, having purchased the late Mr. Linde's place, and spent a lot of money on it. Mr. Dugdale's "Picton" was second, and the Duke of Westminster's "Troutback" third.

Anybody who thinks that Mars does not rule on St. Helen's Island these days has only to pay a visit to that historic spot any day next week to become enlightened on the subject. The Field Battery is undergoing its annual training and metaphorically and practically speaking is "just tearing up the earth."

From Major Dodds down to the trumpeter every "Man-jack" of the outfit is hard at work and getting all the experience, knowledge fun and excitement there is to be had out of life Each man takes as much pleasure in his work as though he were personally responsible for the fitness of the battery, and even the horses seem to have caught on to the spirit which prevails and look quite interested pulling the twelve pounders into action. The horses really deserve a lot of praise. Green country equines most of them, they have never been driven by postilions before, nor did they have any idea as to which was right and which left wheel. Now it would appear as though they certainly were beginning to understand. The drivers do not have the least bit of trouble with them, and they stand fire remarkably well. The saddle horses are not quite so perfect although they too are beginning to improve. There are several kickers amongst them, and the sergeant-major's horse has worked up quite an unenviable reputation for himself.

Reveille blows at four o'clock in the morning, and by the time the smoke from the sunrise gun has blown away and the last note of the trumpet sounded one may see the drivers trotting their mounts down to the gun park all harnessed and ready to hitch in.

A smart lot of men they are, and what is more they take enough interest in their work to do it thoroughly and properly, and the maxim is well proven here that one volunteer is worth ten pressed men. No shouting at laggards and curses at the "grousers", the sergeant-major's work is made easy in this camp. "Just like the regulars" said one old veteran, "only they don't drink before breakfast and they 'as their 'eart in their work."

Squad parade blows at half past four, when the No. 1 men of each subsection fall in and make ready for the general parade at 4.45. This lasts until seven when the men are dismissed for breakfast, first of all watering and feeding their horses. This finishes the morning parade—two hours and a half of hard solid work.To show how quickly men and horses are picking up their drill work it may be mentioned that on the second morning of drill the battery took up three positions on the Island successfully, and by the time the whole number of drills has been put in greater improvements in proportion to the time are expected.

While those who have to are spending the day in town their more fortunate comrades are availing themselves of every moment of camp life, and getting some valuable instruction from Sergeant-Major Slade, the battery instructor from the Royal Horse Artillery, Kingston. The three systems of gun laying are taught according to the Dominion Artillery Association, direct, indirect and quadrant, at all of which the gunners are becoming remarkably proficient for the short length of time they have been at work. Then there is "fuse setting", namely the practice of making a shell burst at a given point in its trajectory, and signalling and observation. In this latter most important branch of artillery work there are two qualified signallers in the corps, Gunner Kaiser and Bombadier Seers, both of whom are very expert at Morse, semaphore and lamp signalling. Range finding is another important item in battery equipment, and this branch of the service is being picked up very quickly by the use of the micrometer.

On the whole and considering everything, the work of the battery this year is extraordinary. Sergeant-Major Slade has instructed and drilled every battery in Canada for the past sixteen years and he says that he has never seen anything like the way in which the men get down to their work and improve day by day. Out of fourteen non-commissioned officers in the corps ten are qualified men, all of whom know their work thoroughly. Of these Sergeant-Major Porteous takes the lead. He is acknowledged as the best battery sergeant-major in Canada, and has been greatly missed by getting accidentally hurt the first day of the camp. Luckily he is improving rapidly and hopes to get over to camp next week, if only to lie around and watch the manoeuvres. Sergeant Mason makes a very good substitute, and one finds it hard to believe that this is his first term at the sergeant-majorship. He has a good word of command, keeps the men in their places, handles them well, and all around shows what great benefit his training in South Africa has done for him. Another sergeant whose record would be hard to beat from a militia standpoint is Sergeant-Wheeler Kendels. He has been in the battery thirty-six years, and has only missed one parade during his whole length of service. He wears the Fenian Raid, life saving and long service medals, and has at different times held nearly every position in the battery including the sergeant-majorship. He was Officer Commanding for a week, and even had the honor of holding five ranks at one and the same time. He is a very interesting character, a good soldier and an example, which the younger generation would do well to emulate.

Of Captain Dodds no one can speak too highly, and as an artillery officer he is right in his element. He knows his work from the ground up, and with practically a new staff of officers and sergeants, is working wonderful changes for the better with his command. Enthusiastic, tactful, authoritative, but not overbearing, he is admired and respected by everybody, and there is not a man in the battery who would not jump to do a service for him. To command one man is to see ten offer to do the work.

Captain McCuaig's enthusiasm in military work has long been known, and requires no comment. Mr. Creelman, lately drafted from the Governor-General's Body Guard of Toronto, has a very good word of command, and is finding his cavalry training very useful in the artillery branch of the service. Mr. Roder, who will take a commission in the 21st when it is formed, and Mr. Spence are both green at the English Artillery methods, but have had considerable military experience and are picking up their work very quickly.

CLEANING KIT.

The battery is drilling according to the 1902 amended regulations this year. Next year the 1906 regulations will come into effect, which will make the work much more satisfactory and interesting. There are 101 men and 61 horses in camp this year, shortly under the strength of last year.

The dances every evening have been very largely attended and greatly enjoyed. This afternoon the military sports take place, the programme of which is as follows:

On Tuesday evening the non-commissioned officers of the Duke of York's Royal Canadian Hussars held their annual dinner at the Welland, Sergeant-Major Nutter in the chair. A very jolly evening was put in, the particular item of interest being a presentation to ex-Sergeant-Major Vittie by the members of the mess. The presentation was in the form of a large stein make out of bog oak and silver—a very appropriate and serviceable present for the ex-S.-M.—and was made by Sergeant-Nutter after a pleasant speech referring to the work Mr. Vittie had done for the corps and the fact that its present state of efficiency was due largely to his hard work. Mr. Vittie was much affected and in reply expressed his regret at severing his connection with the mess, but hoping, at the same time, to be able to do as much, if not more, service to the corps as an officer as he had done while a non-com.

The healths of the guests were proposed by Sergeant Littlewood and responded to by Sergeant-Majors Bown, Tardif and Color-Sergeant Mackay. Among those present were Sergeant-Instructor Medhurst, of the Royal Canadian Dragoons, St. Johns, the late instructor to the corps, and who came in purposely for the dinner; Sergeant Reid, of the 1st Prince of Wales and Sergeant Doherty, of the Engineers.

Sergeant-Major Bown, of the Vics., in proposing the health of the chairman, referred feelingly to the work Color-Sergeant Nutter of No. 2 Company of the Vics and a brother of the S. M. of the Hussars, had done in that corps, and what a pleasure it had been to all the members of the Vics to work and be associated with him.

Mr. Walker, a member of the Hussars, presided at the piano in a very pleasing manner, and several songs were rendered by Sergeants Allmond, Johnson, Kearns and Corporals Fulton and Palmer.

Major Brock and Captain Riley were the guests of honor, both of whom were toasted heartily.

Mr. Vittie joined the ranks of the benedicts on Thursday, and to him all are unanimous in wishing joy in his new state.

The 1st Squadron of Royal Canadian Dragoons from Toronto under the command of Major Nelles, has been transferred to St. Johns, and is now stationed there, taking the place of the infantry, which was transferred to New Brunswick some time ago.

The 2nd Regiment of Canadian Artillery held part of their annual inspection last week in the Drill Hall, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday nights. Major Poole, of the Royal Navy, was the inspecting officer on the 4.7 guns and expressed himself as very much pleased with the gun drill. The corps is not very large, but it is efficient in its work and right up to date. The equipment for the heavy field artillery, of which the 2nd is now a part, is expected from Ottawa every day, as it was requisitioned for some time ago. The balance of instruction and inspection will be carried out at Petewawa, when the corps goes into camp there on the 19th of August.

The regiment will go to St. Albans this year for its annual trip, leaving here on the 30th of June, and returning in time to spend Dominion Day in Montreal, when a detachment of the corps will then go to St. Helen's Island to fire the salute of twenty-one guns.

Sergeant-Instructor Sutherland has left for his regiment in Quebec, after completing courses of instruction in artillery training for the past four months. Sergeant-Major Wilson and the sergeants of the 2nd met at their quarters on Wednesday night to bid good-bye to their faithful and painstaking instructor.

As regards the reorganization of the 2nd from Garrison to Heavy Field Artillery, nothing can be done until the Scots move out of their present quarters to their new armory. Great interest is being taken in the gun work and the formation of this practically new unit, and it may be prophecied with a fair amount of conservatism that the 2nd will be one of the best equipped and manned corps of its kind in Canada.

The Scots' Armory is nearly completed and ready for occupation and moving will be commenced at once. No formal opening will take place until the autumn, however.

A matter which ought to be brought to the notice of the Militia Department is the uneven distribution of the warrant rank to the militiamen of Canada especially to Montreal. Toronto has now about eight and Quebec about the same number, while Montreal has a solitary one, in the person of Sergt.-Major Gardiner, of the infantry brigade. Surely the men of the Montreal brigade are as much entitled to it as those of Ottawa, Toronto and Quebec.

Now that the time for the militia camps is approaching, something ought to be done by the commanding officers of the different city regiments to stop a bad practice which has been going on for some time among the non-coms. and men of their regiments. Every rural regiment, when it appears in camp, has been recruited from the city regiments, and non-coms. in the city corps hold similar positions in the rural corps. According to the Militia Act a man cannot be a member of two corps at the same time. The militia strength of Canada is a farce on the head of it. The men are counted on the strength of the two regiments they belong to. Suppose the rural corps as well as the city corps were called out on active service, where would their strength then come from, as the men would certainly have to turn out with their city commands. A couple of years ago a number of men of the Toronto corps were brought from the Niagara camp and heavily fined when they appeared in a Toronto police court.

QUESTION OF TAXATION.

On account of a petition, that has been received at the City Hall from the Real Estate Owners' Association, asking that extra taxation be imposed in order to increase the revenue of the city, it is expected that the civic committee, now meeting to consider the revenue, question, will take the suggestion into consideration. The petition in question asks: "that a means of taxation be adopted, such as is in practice in Toronto, or that which is proposed for the city of Leige, in Belgium, or any other means which would include all property and all classes of citizens, to-day, exempt from taxation by the common law of the country."

HOME RUN HAGGERTY

FINDS THE GIANT OF SINGLELOOK, WHO BAT STEEL BASEBALLS, DON'T KNOW CURVES AND WORRY ABOUT THE COMING GAME WITH THE FOURWINGERS.

(Copyright, 1906, by Geo. W. Daley.)

"Copyrighted by Geo. Wm. Daley.)

"Did it ever strike you," says Pinch early one morning when our freight car was bumping over some rough road in South Dakota, "that us two fellers are like them heroes of old who went out an' sought the Golden Fleece nine, to play 'em?"

"The Golden Fleas?" says I. "What in thunder did they call 'em that for—because they were fast on their feet?"

"Not fleas, you mark—fleece. The Golden Fleece. They used to call nines funny names them days."

"What was the score?" says I. "Did they bring the ball back?"

"Lemme see," says Pinch. "It's so long ago since I heard the story I most forget, but I think they got beat. But it was their trip that cut ice. These here heroes went out an' rowed a long ways in a boat an' passed through two big rocks that near chewed 'em up, an' some beautiful females under shady trees, that beckoned to 'em to come ashore."

"Did they go?" says I.

"No, you ninny. If they' a-went they'd a-been et up, because they was sirens. You've heard the sirens down to Chi, on the lake front, ain't you?"

I said yes.

"Well, these sirens talked like that."

"Huh," says I. "I know what I'd a' done if one of 'em talked to me. I'd a' beat it. That's a foolish story. An' you can't get any beautiful female yarn by me. That siren down to Chi is nuthin' but a big w'istle an' can't eat nuthin' but steam."

Pinch looked like he was tired.

"O' course," says he, "they're only called sirens. The real sirens sang an' w'istled, an' played drums an' things so plaintive that it was impossible to resist. But the leader o' the heroes he stuffed chewin' gum in his players' ears an' they never heard the pretty wimmin. Only one feller, a good utility man, or a spare pitcher, he pulled the gum out o' one ear an' in a minute jumped over an' swum in. He never came back.

"Then they played a game with a nine o' giants with one eye, an' beat 'em. The giant ketcher got spiked in the face an' got blinded an' the heroes needed a run to win. They worked the squeeze, an' Jason—he was the manager—he come tearin' in f'm third. But the ketcher had the ball, an' he couldn't get by him, so he ketched a goat that was eatin' near by an' grabbed hold of the fur on his stummick an' let him drag him to'rds the plate. The giant ketcher let the goat by, but felt of his back to see that nobody was ridin' him. He forgot to feel under him, though, an' Jason made the plate, an' won the game. There was cagey players in them days."

"Must a' been a p'ticular bright bunch o' giant basemen an' fielders," says I, "that wouldn't tip their men off. B'sides, how could he ketch, an' him blinded? I think you're lyin' again."

"Honest Injun," says Pinch, "It's all in a book home. Well, as I was sayin', we're like them heroes. Here we go out lookin' for a leather-handed ketcher and a rubber armed shortstop, an' bunk into innumerable difficulties, like the Argue Nots."

"The who?" says I.

"The Argue Nots. I expect they were called that 'cause they didn't backtalk the empire. But what's this?"

The door of our car was slid open, an' the biggest head an' hair 'o shoulders you ever saw was pushed in, an' the feller had only one wicked little eye. He sees us with it an' yells:

"Wot're you guys do'in here?"

"Lookin' for a ball nine with a rubber armed shortstop an' a leather-handed ketcher onto it," says Pinch.

"Ball players, hey?" says he. An' he reaches in an' grabs us by the collars an' pulls us out, bag an' baggage.

My! He was a giant, an' no error. My feet didn't touch the ground when he had me by the collar. He snaked us across the tracks, through a stretch o' woods, over a lot o' plowed ground, up two hills, over a mountain, waded a wide river, jumped over a canyon a hundred feet deep, an' finally came to a desert with nuthin' but sand in sight. Then he w'istled an 'another guy like him come up, an' Pinch was passed over.

"We must a' travelled a hundred miles over that desert, an' finally at nightfall we come to a town of big houses.

"We had just time to see that all the people in town was as big as the two that had us, except them that was young ones an' growin' when we were chucked into a big, high stone room. There was somethin' to eat there and a light, and a lot o' skins to sleep on.

"To-morrer," says the giant that snaked us out o 'the car, "you shall teach the Singlelooker community the game o' baseball."

"Heres' a fine go," says Pinch. "We go thinkin' about the Argue Nots an' their giants an' run up against a bunch ourselves, an' all shy an eye. I wonder wot's the answer?"

Course there wasn't any, so we looked over the grub an' et some, and had a smoke, and in comes nine giants an' sets down.

"We're the Singlelooker ball nine," says the one who had stole us. They looked kind o' humble an' not at all fierce like they would eat us. So Pinch sets up on the table to get nearer their faces, crosses his legs an' lights a butt.

"I'm Pinch Hobbs, of the Alfalfas," says he. "This is my side partner, Home-Run Haggerty, the greatest batter that ever lived."

"Except Swottzy," says they all in a chorus.

"Bar none," says Pinch. "I can prove it."

"Speak," says their leader, the man that stole us, while the rest murmured, "Swottzy forever!"

"He's the best hitter in the world," says Pinch, "because he once knocked a ball 'leven miles."

They set up an' took notice.

Each eye begun to bulge out.

"Yep," says Pinch. "Does it right along. He's the best ever. He'll make your Swottzy man look like one dime, two nickles an' three cents."

"Tell me," says the leader, bendin' over to Pinch, a scared look in his face. "Tell me true, can he break a steel ball into three pieces?"

"A steel ball?" says Pinch. "Nobody said nothin' about a steel ball. A reg'lation dollar and a quarter ball is what I mean."

A low murmur of disgust went around the room.

"Shucks!" says all the Singlelookers, "we don't play with leather balls. We thought you meant a steel ball."

Mebbe I didn't feel small! Littler than a 4-year-old kid, and about as brash. But Pinch never turned a hair.

"O' course," says he, "steel balls ain't got quite the resiliency o' leather ones, but with Hag the results the same."

Mebbe that word resiliency didn't halt 'em for a minute. They looked stunned. Trust Pinch for hurlin' out the timely talk.

However ,they said they'd prove all that the next day. What they wanted now, they said, was to find out if we could help 'em beat the Fourwingers.

"The wot?" says Pinch.

"The Fourwingers—our rivals," says Slingemin, who was the one who first found us. "You see, we're up against it hard. Here's us with only one eye apiece, an' we're expected to win the champeenship f'm the next community to the north, where they all have two eyes an' an extry set of arms chucked in in the bargain."

"Extra arms?" says Pinch.

"Why, yes. That's why they're called Fourwingers. They all have four arms, an' four hands an' sixteen fingers an' four thumbs. What chance has a poor bunch o' one-eyed guys got with them, no matter how good we are? With two eyes it's mighty hard to watch a pitcher with two hands, but where do we get off watchin', with one bum eye, a four-handed twirler. See?"

We nodded ,holdin' our breaths with astonishment.

"Then there's their fielders. If they fumble or muff with one pair o' hands they got another pair to fall back on. Then they stand up to the plate with two bats."

"Two bats!" says Pinch.

"Yep," says Slingemin. "If they miss with one bat they clout her out with the other. That's why we're guessin'."

"With curves," says Pinch. "Benders, twists, jumps, 'coots an' slants. Ins, outs, ups, drops an' the spit."

"Wot's them?" says the Singlelooker bunch in one breath.

"Why, curves you ninnies," says Pinch. "Can't any o' you make a ball curve? Can't you apply the right pressure to a ball as it leaves your fingers so that at a point in its flight it turns abruptly f'm its onward course an' 'cause the batter to gash the gale."

The Singlelookers' single eyes bulged again. They're mouths was open so big you could a' dropped a football in each without touchin' a tooth.

"Course we can't," says Slingeman. "It's impossible."

"Friends," says Pinch, raisin' himself up on the table to his full height, "go home. Get rested. To-morrer I'll teach you to curve 'em an' we'll put it over these four-armed people so they'll wish they never seen Singlelook."

As we was rollin' up in the blankets an' skins on the floor Pinch says:

"Don't know curves. 'Je ever hear of the like' They may play with steel baseballs, but they're twenty-five years behind the age."

VARNISH CAUGHT FIRE.

Jamieson & Sons' Factory Damaged to Value of $10,000.

Fire, which broke out in the paint and varnish factory of R. C. Jamieson & Sons, 28 Nazareth street, yesterday resulted in loss estimated by the firemen at $10,000. The blaze was exciting while it lasted, owing to the nature of the building's contents, but there were no accidents, as the firemen were not allowed to enter the burning building. The fire, which started suddenly, had gained considerable headway by the time the men of No. 3 fire station arrived on the spot, but by good work in fifteen minutes' time they had the blaze fairly well under control. The firemen were unable to ascertain the cause of the fire.

And Escaped With Thorough Soaking With Paint.

A young painter named Caron, about 20 years of age, who was at work painting a roof on Delorimier avenue, near Rachel street, had a very narrow escape from death yesterday, about 11 o'clock. He lost his footing on the roof, and before any of those working with him could give him any assistance he slid off the roof and fell sixty feet to the ground. He got up almost immediately, and it was found that he was not in the slightest degree injured, and had got off with a thorough soaking with paint, his can having been turned over on him in his fall.

DO CAR FENDERS PROTECT LIFE?

CORONER'S ANSWER IS NO

Manager McDonald of the Street Railway is Doubtful, But Not Condemnatory.

The numerous street car accidents which have occurred in this city of late, several of which have proved fatal, have drawn public attention to this matter, and as in nearly all of those instances the accident has occurred by a person being run down by a car, and so bringing the fender into play, people are beginning to ask themselves if the fender is not partly to blame for the accidents, and if an improved type of this guard would not do much to decrease the number of cases in which people are seriously injured or killed. An average of thirteen or fourteen are killed every year in this city by the street cars, and many hundreds are injured more or less seriously. When the great amount of the street car traffic in this city is considered, this is not a very high average, but still it is far too many, and any improvement that would at all diminish it is very much to be desired.

DANGERS OF THE FENDER.

The present style of street car fender was adopted and recommended by the City Council after much experimenting and the trials of many different types of fenders. According to the testimony of those who have experience in these matters, it is regarded as the very best fender now in use. It is, however, far from giving complete satisfaction, even in the opinion of those who have recommended it, while some who have studied the question do not hesitate to say that no fender at all would be preferable. There are several objections to it, the principal of which are that it lessens the chances of escape of people running across the track in front of the car, and is apt to trip those who would otherwise get away, and, secondly, that when it strikes a person, instead of picking him up it is apt to slip up on the body in its way and merely roll and mangle it till it passes in under the wheels of the truck. These two difficulties are precisely the ones which fender inventors have made it their special aim to obviate, but so far it seems their efforts have been unsuccessful, and there is still great improvement to be made in these directions. A fender which would not protrude in front of the car, but would be fixed underneath it, and one also which might be depended on to pick up a body in the way instead of crushing it, is the great desideratum, but it is still to seek.

These are largely the opinions expressed by men of experience in this city, who have had reason to study the question and who have given consideration to the matter of safeguards on the street cars.

STREET RAILWAY MANAGER'S VIEW.

Mr. Duncan McDonald, manager of the Montreal Street Railway, when asked his opinion, said he found it difficult to say just to what degree the fender was useful. Opinions were largely divided on the subject.

"There is no doubt," he continued, "that sometimes the fender is the cause of a fatality instead of preventing it. The fender protrudes in front of the car about three feet, and it stands to reason that it diminishes by so much the chances of escape of one running past in front. Besides, in those instances a person is apt to calculate not by the fender, but by the front of the advancing car, and so he may be caught and tripped up by the fender for which he has not made allowance. On the other hand, when a person is struck down the fender may be the means of picking him up, and so saving him from being crushed under the wheels. I know of many instances in which this has been the case. But the great trouble is that in matters of this kind one is apt to remember only the fatalities which have been due to defective action of the fender, and to forget the instances in which it has been the means of saving life.

"Of course the protruding of the fender might be remedied by fastening it under the car, as they do in some cities. But in this climate we have such heavy falls of snow that scrapers are needed on the cars, and we have found, after giving that style of fender a trial that it cannot be used in connection with scrapers, and so we were obliged to drop it. In New York and Boston they do not use any fenders at all, and there are many who believe that it is the better arrangement. For my part, I could not give expression to any decided preference, for, as I have said, opinions are divided on the subject, and there is much to be said on both sides."

CORONER MACMAHON'S OPINION.

Coroner MacMahon, when asked his opinion of the efficacy of the fender in the prevention of street car accidents, said: "Of course, I come in contact only with those accidents in which the fender has failed; that is, those in which a person or persons are killed; but from what I have seen and heard, as well as from the testimony in the cases which are brought under my notice, I would judge that no fender at all would be as good as our present fender system, if not better. And in some large cities, notably New York and Boston, they have taken them off the cars. The fact of the matter is that in many instances the fender is a danger instead of being a protection. For instance, in the case of the little McElheran girl, who was killed by a car a few weeks ago, the testimony certainly gave me the impression that had there been no fender on the car the child would have escaped. She had passed the centre of the track when she was struck, and she had only to make another step to get out of the way of the car. She was caught by the fender, however, and instead of being picked up, was rolled under it and so under the wheels of the car. This is only one instance, but there have been many such in my experience. Every year the fatalities of this kind amount to about thirteen, and nearly all of them are due to defective fender action. Of course this number is not very large when the amount of the street car traffic is considered, but still if we had a better fender it might be further diminished.

"One of the greatest objections to the fender is that it is apt to catch a person running in front of a car. A person taking a chance of that kind is apt to count merely by the front of the car and not take into his calculations, which are made on the spur of the moment, the three feet or so of the fender which protrude in front of the tram and are very apt to trip him up. Besides, the presence of the fender is likely to give people a feeling of false security which encourages them to take chances they otherwise might not. In short, I have no confidence in fenders, and do not consider that they have proven themselves of much value."

Mr. Biron, the assistant coroner, expressed much the same opinion as Mr MacMahon, and declared that he remembered several instances of accidents, in which people had been caught up on the fender and then by the jostling of the car rolled off and crushed to death underneath the wheels.

DR. ROBINS WILL REMAIN PRINCIPAL

M'GILL MODEL TO BE FREE

Concession Made in Return for Increased Subsidy From the Protestant School Board.

At the last meeting of the McGill Normal School Committee the principal, Dr. Robins, informed the committee of his willingness to retain the principalship for another year, the Government having consented to a postponement of the date on which his resignation will become effective.

In order that Dr. Robins might be freer to attend to the general work of supervision and administration, it was decided to invite Mr. Gerhard R. Lomer, M.A., to deliver the required lecture in the art of teaching and to perform such other services as may be required in this connection. Mr. Lomer obtained the degree of M.A. from McGill University in 1904 and has since that time been taking a course leading to the degree of Ph.D. in the Teachers' College of Columbia University.

The committee were gratified to receive official information from the Protestant Board of School Commissioners of Montreal, in response to their request for an increased subsidy, to the following effect: That they were willing "to supplement the subsidy of $2,000 already settled on the McGill Model Schools out of the city school tax by such a sum as shall make it equal to a contribution from each Protestant or Jewish resident child educated in those schools of the net cost per pupil in the elementary public schools for 1905-6, as shown by the board's table of cost and maintenance, on condition that no fees are chargeable in the McGill Model Schools to Protestant and Jewish resident pupils." The offer was gratefully accepted, and the committee expressed the high appreciation of the fair manner in which the board had dealt with their request.

In consequence of the above arrangement, Jewish and Protestant pupils resident in Montreal will next session be able to obtain free education in the McGill Model Schools. Non-resident and other than Jewish or Protestant children will be charged the same fees as formerly. These are much lower than paid by non-residents in attendance at the city schools. The abolition of school fees in the public schools under the Protestant Board had an appreciable effect on the attendance in the McGill Model Schools last session. There is no doubt that the abolition of the fee for city children will result in a largely increased attendance next session.

You have No Reason for Not Using

Zutoo

Some people think that all headache cures are alike—that they all undermine the health, even if not perceived at the time of taking them.

Well, we'll admit that the drug cures do this, but that is no reason why you should not take Zutoo.

Zutoo is a harmless vegetable remedy. One ingredient is soda—just old-fashioned soda that our grandmothers used to take to settle the stomach, when they had sick headache. And there is nothing better.

The principal ingredient—the one that stops the headache, is a vegetable ingredient, imported for us from Japan. It wont hurt you any more than will the soda.

There is absolutely no reason why you should not use Zutoo.

If you suffer from headache there is every reason why you should.

Taken in time, two tablets will ward off a headache. Taken later, they will stop it in twenty minutes, and leave you feeling good every time.

If you are using a drug remedy, why not discard it?

Zutoo will cure just as quickly and will save you the penalty, that all must sometime pay, who take the drugs which these cures contain.

If you will give Zutoo one trial, you will never take any other headache remedy again.

OTHER OFFICERS OF ARCTIC EXAMINED

Physician Testified as to the Amount of Medical Stores.

PURSER WAS VERY OBLIGING

Signed for Articles When Others Assured Him They Were on Board.

Special Staff Correspondence.

Ottawa, Ont., June 16. The first witness examined by the committee of enquiry into the Arctic supplies on Friday afternoon was Mr. Patrick O'Brien, an employe of the Marine and Fisheries Department, who assisted in checking the goods placed on board. Quebec. Mr. O'Brien was examined with particular reference to the Bovril supplies. He declared that all the Bovril was placed on the Arctic.

Dr. F. D. Flood, the ship's physician, was then examined with regard to the medical supplies.

The witness said that, on the order of the department, he made out a requisition for medical supplies for fifty men for twelve hundred days. On the eve of the departure of the Arctic, electrical appliances were bought at a cost of $900. The total cost of the medical outfit was $3,300. Dr. Flood said he checked every case as it was put on board.

Mr. Northrup expressed the opinion that the medical list included about everything that could be purchased in a drug store. The doctor did not think so.

The witness, in describing the life at Fullerton said that the members of only one tribe were fed on the Arctic. Another tribe was attached to the Era, the American whaler.

The largest party around the Arctic at any one time numbered from 35 to 50. The Eskimo ladies attended the weekly entertainment and danced. The male Eskimos seldom danced.

Mr. Northrup asked if the Eskimo women went on board at night on other occasions. Mr. Macpherson who was in the chair, objected to this line of examination, and Mr. Northrup desisted.

The champagne was ordered for medical purposes, but some was used to christen Laurier Cape and Prefontaine Bay.

Examined by Mr Carvell the witness said the electrical apparatus was a necessity. Everything ordered might reasonably be expected to be required. Some medical supplies were left at Fullerton and Port Burwell. Those not left behind or used are on board the Arctic at Sorel.

Dr Flood could not remember that much fault had been found because no feast was held on St. Jean Baptiste Day. Mr. Duchesnay, he said, found fault on general principles.

The witness told Mr. Macpherson that champagne had been issued to several members of the crew as a medical comfort.

Mr. W. H. Weeks, the purser, who checked the goods as they were put on board was called. He said he marked down every item on a pad as it was received. He had nothing to do with supplies received before August 6, 1904. He admitted that he had signed a considerable number of invoices on the assurance of Capt. Bernier or Mr. Boudreau that they were all right. Mr. Bennett went over the invoices with the witness with the result that Mr. Weeks admitted that bills of lading aggregating $11,129 had been signed for by himself on the word of others. He was certain that all the kinds of goods mentioned in these invoices were on board, but could not swear as to the quantity.

CORNISH BOOM CONTINUES.

The stream of Cornish miners returning from foreign lands is swelling. Investigations are still being made, and leases are sought on every hand. In fact, if only one quarter of the mines which are being inspected and tested should be re-started, West Cornwell may become a great tin-producing district.

It is the opinion of experts that the mining revival will be permanent, as all the big landowners refuse to open negotiations with any but men of undoubted integrity; for Cornwall has suffered in the past at the hands of unscrupulous promoters.

DINKELSPIEL ON CZAR AND DUMA.

Geo. V. Hobart, writing as Dinkelspeil in the New York American, treats as follows of the Czar and the Duma:

Mein Lieber Son Looey—Ve haf receifed your letter from Harrisburg, Pa., und your mother und me vas glat dot pianes still keeps up moneymaking on der road.

I notice vot you say in your letter abould meeting a Roosian refugeezer in Harrisburg.

I vas glat to learn dot dis political refugeezer tolt you all abould der new Roosian parliament vich is called der Duma, in honor of Alexander Duma, und also abould der members of parliament, vich vas called Dummies in honor of our United States Senate.

Der next time you meet up mit dis Roosian refugeezer I vish you vould show him der following letter vich I wrote to der Sar of all der Roosians some time ago.

Der letter has nefer been answered, so I doan'd know vedder dit der Sar get it or vedder it go to some station vare dey vas holding a massacre und by dis means get in der dead letter office.

Anyvay, I vish, Looey, you vould show it to your Roosian friend, der political refugeezer, und haf him tell you vot he dinks abould it.

Dis is it, yet:—

New York, Yesterday.

Mein Lieber Sar of All der Roosians—Good morning! How is your Duma dis morning?

I haf been reading in der cablegraphs all abould der meeting of your faist Parliament und vile I can, mit-hould any inconveniencys, conceal, my admiration for its christening name, still I dink der idea a goot vun.

Is dis a nickname gifen by you, Nick?

I fear me not, Nicholas, because from der vay I size up der sitivation in St. Petersburg der truth is dot der Leedle Father vas crawling a leedle farther into der tall grass efery time der vord Liberty vas mentioned.

Mein lieber Nick, if you vas a fairst-class Kink vy do you gif such a good imitation of der four-spot?

My idea of a Kink is a man mit a firm und unsquinchable heart, like dor conductor of a street car vich vorks ould in der darkness all alone until he gets der trolley on vunce more und restores der light to his luffing subjects.

You know, Nicholas, yust because your family name happens to be Roamingoff dot is no goot reason vy you should pick ouid "Back to der voods" to be your vatchvord venefer a crisis calls you up on der tellyfone.

Nick, listen a leadle by your olt college chump, Dinky. Gif dem bum relatives of yours der frozen eye und make dem all go to vork for a living instead of sitting around der dining room at der Palace hanging medals on deir boozums for breaking der world's long-distance record in der matter of eating caviare samviches.

After all vas said und done, Nick, it vas olt Vox Popuii dot has to dig down in der jeans ven your salary days rolls around, und if you keep on gifing him der royal elbow, sooner or later Vox vill step up to der feet of der throne und hand you a complete lesson in Japanese jiu jitsu.

My idea of a Kink is to see him on der throne, mit der skepter in his right hand, mit der crown hanging rakishly ofer der left ear, mit a sveet smile on der Kinkly lips und luff usd compassion in der Kinkly heart for eferybody in der vorld eggscept der dramatic critics.

It vas impossible for me to imagine a real Kink mit a red sveater ofer his embonpoint und mit ball-bearing snowshoes on der feets hiking down der Neva Prospeckt Parkski, on und avay und avay across der barren steppes, yust because Tomovitch Smithski und Feteski Joneseff called at der family entrance to der Palace to present His Metchesty mit a kick against der gas company.

Remember, Nick, vot it say in der old Greek proverb, "A Kink in der throne is vorth two in der cellar," so come on ould und begin to cut a leedle ice.

Go on down to der morning session of der Duma und let Senator Tillmanovitch call you a liar in der goot olt Democratic vay.

If you treat your luffing subjects mit consideration, Nick, dey vill soon learn not to try to treat you mit dynamite efery time your buckboardski appears on der Speedvayovitch.

If you lead dem ofer to der chentle paths of fair play der busby viskered brigade vill not be so eager to lead you ofer to der third rail und set fire to your spark arrester.

Der poet vas right, Nick, ven he set it, "Kind hearts vas more den coroners, und simple faith den drawing blood."

You cannot eggspectation your luffing subjects to be full mit enthusinism ofer your Kinkly firevorks und shout "Sissovitch! Boomovitch! Ahski!" vile a red-viskered Cossack is picking flaws in deir short ribs mit a bayonet.

A Kink mit a perpetual grouch soon finds himself in der discard, but a Kink mit a glat heart is aces.

Please, Looey, ven you see your friend, der Roosian refugeezer, ask him vy der Sar doan'd answer my letter.

Yours mit luff,

D. DINKELSPIEL.

Most people, when they look at a magnificent cabinet of butterflies, think that each butterfly was caught by hand—caught, after a chase of a mile or two, with a net. As a matter of fact, large numbers of butterflies are raised on farms. There is such a steady demand for them that it pays to rear them. The stock room of a butterfly farmer is a rare and beautiful sight. It is a room of glass, in which hundreds of butterflies flutter and float.

An early incident in Lord Wolseley's career was characteristic of the spirit of the man. At the end of 1854, in recognition of his services in the Crimean war, he was gazetted captain. When it was discovered, however, that Wolseley was little more than 21 years, the captaincy was cancelled. But the young man protested so vigorously against the injustice that the cancellation itself was cancelled and the captaincy restored.

A curious plan for catching fish is used on the River Columbia. A number of wheels are set up in the middle of the stream, which, as they turn round, catch up the fish and cast them into troughs by the river banks. As much as five tons' weight of fish a day has thus been taken.

Only two American vessels have entered the harbor of Bordeaux in ten years, and those were private yachts which sought refuge during the Spanish-American war.

ST. LOUIS POLICE BREAK UP GANG

Five Toughs Who Have Been Terrorizing Citizens, Sentenced by the Magistrate.

The police of St. Louis have succeeded in dispersing a bad gang, who have been terrorizing the citizens of the town for several weeks, and whose last feat was to beat two citizens almost into insensibility. The young men, who were captured by the St. Louis police last night, after considerable skirmishing, gave their names as Georges Menard, Henri Menard, Q. Gagnon and E. Dufour. They were arrested on a charge of loitering and condemned by Recorder Pelletier this morning to one month's imprisonment.

The Recorder remarked that the next time they appeared before him he would deal with them much more severely. Raoul Vlau, who was also arrested in this connection, was found guilty of assault and condemned to two months' imprisonment.

Several citizens have been brutally assaulted recently; many of them were present at the office of Recorder Pelletier when the sentences wre pronounced. Two other citizens, Messrs. Ulric Leclair and Omer Monette, were attacked by the gang last Friday night, while on the way home, and were kicked and beaten almost into insensibility. They state that the ruffians were so numerous that they were squabbling to each get their turn to assault the two citizens.

Chief Clermont is determined to put a stop to the nefarious work, and has organized a special force of police to round up any other gang which may be found to exist.

Deserting Club Waiters Return.

Frederick Morgan and Henry Hollis, each 21 years of age, were charged yesterday before Judge Sicotte, in the Recorder's Court, with deserting service. They pleaded not guilty, and it was agreed between the different parties that they would go back to the St. James Club. The two accused, who came out from London only a few weeks ago, were arrested yesterday by Detective Demers, at Quebec. Morgan and Hollis had been engaged as waiters by the club, but deserted the service of the club to accept a similar position in Quebec.

Giant Cathedral For Christian Scientists

Christian Scientists from all over the world have been flocking to Boston this week to attend the dedication of the new $2,000,000 cathedral, which has just been completed.

This is the largest and most costly Christian Science Church in the world, and one of the most costly churches in America. St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York has a capacity of 2,800, and the auditorium of the Christian Science Cathedral here will seat more than 5,000.

The dome is more than twice the size of the dome on the State House. It rises 224 feet above the street, and has a diameter of 82 feet. There are eleven chime bells, the heaviest weighing 4,000 pounds.

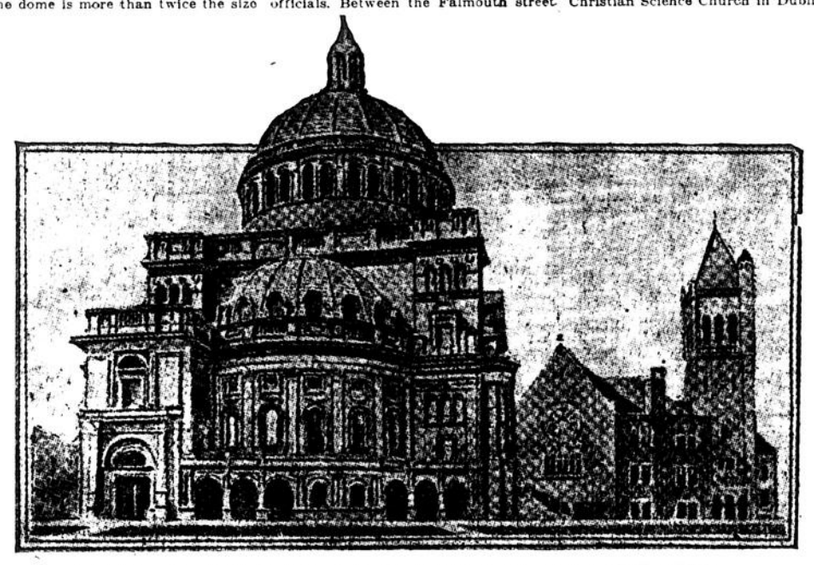
Members of the cult from nearly every civilized country on the face of the earth sent contributions for the cathedral, work upon which was started two years ago. Since then, 300 men have been employed day and night to hurry the structure to completion.

On the first floor are rooms for the president, secretary, board of directors, first and second reader and other officials. Between the Falmouth street entrance and the older church, which joins the new cathedral, is a reception room, and on the Norway street side is an oval shaped room for the Sunday School.

The great auditorium is on the second floor with two tiers of galleries on one side and three tiers on the other. The domed ceiling of this is supported by arches springing from stone piers. Colored and carved marbles, in designs symbolical of religion and scenes from the Bible decorate the walls.

In the auditorium is an organ which cost $40,000.

Among the notables who have arrived from England to be present at the dedication are Lady Victoria Murray, daughter of the Earl of Dunmore; Mrs. Porter, Christian Science leader and daughter of Lord Ashbourne, ex-Lord Chancellor of Ireland; Sir Gilbert and Lady King and their daughter, Mary. Lady King is first reader of the First Christian Science Church in Dublin.



$2,000,000 CHRISTIAN SCIENCE CATHEDRAL TO BE DEDICATED NEXT WEEK.

This handsome structure erected in Boston is one of the largest churches in the United States. The auditorium is twice the size of that of St. Patrick's Cathedral in New York, and the dome is more than twice as large as the one on the Boston State House. About $40,000 was spent on the organ. Christian Scientists from all parts of the world will be present at the dedication.

THE CHURCHES IN GREAT BRITAIN AND THE EDUCATION BILL

After a brief visit to Manchester, where I was engaged in making examination of some of the treasures contained in the John Ryland's Reference Library, and in consulting Professor T. W. Rhys Davids about the Chair of Comparative Religion, recently founded at Victoria University, I was hurrying back to London when, interrupting my journey at Birmingham, I learned that a great demonstration against the Education Bill, now before Parliament, was to be made in the local Town Hall two days later. Most of the speakers bore distinguished names, and some of them I had known earlier at Oxford. The chairman, Bishop Gore, had been one of my instructors at Pusey House. Lord Hugh Cecil I had heard and watched closely, as he often threw himself with all his heart into some animated debate at the Oxford Union. (Unfortunately illness prevented his presence.) The Bishop of Manchester, Dr. Knox, was sure to give utterance to his views in terms of beaming pleasantry and yet unmistakable vigor. The Rt. Hon. Alfred Lyttelton can always be depended upon for a bright and pithy speech. Hence, on various grounds, I did not find it hard to persuade myself to take a brief rest, confident in the hope that I would get into personal contact with an episode which would become notable in the course of the present keen and embittering struggle. As the issue proved, I made no miscalculation as to the probability of witnessing a scene that will long live in my memory.

A VISIT TO BIRMINGHAM.

The spare time that intervened before the demonstration began was very pleasantly occupied, as all who are acquainted with Birmingham might anticipate. Apart from visiting its art galleries and libraries, its fine wide streets and old churches, a forenoon was devoted to Bournebrook, the site of the splendid new university which Mr. Chamberlain and Sir Oliver Lodge are courageously providing for the city. The buildings are constructed in the form of a huge semi-circle, which begins and ends on University Road, a new thoroughfare which has just been opened. The magnificent Convocation Hall, which constitutes the central structure of the fabric and which will seat over three thousand persons, promises to be very imposing, and will have few, if any, rivals in the world. Land to the extent of nearly forty acres has been secured for a campus, recreation grounds, etc. But this topic, one upon which it would be easy to enlarge, I must not venture to write about to-day.

The place of meeting was within that great pile of marble, in form a massive column embellished Greek Temple, which has so often resounded with the eloquence of John Bright, Joseph Chamberlain, and fully a score of other Parliamentery orators. It is within these walls, moreover, that there have been held those renowned triennial festivals, which have already been carried on successfully for more than a hundred years, and which have been instrumental in introducing to the world many of its masterpieces in music. It was here, e.g., that Mendelssohn's Elijah, Gounod's Redemption, Gaul's Holy City, etc., were first heard by eager and critical listeners, and first ventured to claim for themselves a place among select and historic compositions. The hall will seat perhaps 2,600 persons, though it can be made to accommodate more than twice that number; in the present instance, though two huge overflow meetings were going on simultaneously, it was packed from floor to ceiling. The great organ which, when constructed, was admittedly the most powerful instrument that had been built up to that date, is still a marvel in many ways; and it contrived to keep the audience in admirable good humor while the ticket-holders were being rapidly ushered to their seats.

THE LOCAL ATMOSPHERE.

As the speakers of the evening filed in upon the platform, they were greeted with loud and enthusiastic applause. I may say that, for more than a week previously, the city had been placarded with giant posters, emphasizing the necessity of a prompt and impressive rally of the church's supporters. Moreover, all who managed to secure seats had to apply to the local clergy for cards of admission. Hence the audience, from the very outset, were in avowed and heartiest sympathy with the spirit of the occasion.

Yet another fact should be mentioned. A few days before the demonstration was held, Bishop Gore had written a letter to the Times, in which he frankly advocated a proposal that had previously been advanced by Mr. Chamberlain, viz., that, as it was plainly impossible that Churchmen could any longer enjoy the privileges which had been conferred upon them by Mr. Balfour's Act, they had better consent to the adoption of an entirely secular system of state education, provided the right of entry to the schools was secured to the representatives of all the churches for the purpose of imparting such religious teaching as the parents of the children might desire. His Lordship admitted that such a course did not fully commend itself to him; but, as being the best "second choice" that now seemed to remain open, he ventured to support it deliberately and earnestly. It proved, to many, an unexpected utterance. It foreshadowed a new and unexpected alliance. And, as if to lend an additional fillip to the meeting, Mr. Chamberlain's suggestion had been emphatically negatived within the preceding twenty-four hours in the House of Commons!

THE SPEECHES.

It is, of course, impossible to do more than give the merest outline of the arguments which the successive speakers thought fit to employ. The air was electric with the thrill of pent-up feeling. The chairman led off in unmistakably militant style, his opening sentence being: "We are here with all the exhilaration which belongs to the fighting Englishman." These words constituted the keynote of his entire address; and I could not but contrast them unfavorably with other words I had heard him use in St. Thomas' pulpit only two days previously, when he admitted that the somewhat arbitrary action, hitherto, of the Church of England—both before Wesley's time and since—was not without blame, for originating the present fierce and grievous agitation, and concluded his appeal by urging all citizens of Birmingham (irrespective of denominational connection) to observe the following Friday as a day of sincere humiliation and prayer. But no faintest reference was made to this meeting in the hearing of those who listened to him when he spoke in the Town Hall; the Government meanwhile had thrown down the gauntlet, and he was not in the least loath to stoop and pick it up. When he declared later that he had never found himself engaged in any controversy in which he advanced to face the issue with so entirely clear a conscience, he was cheered and re-cheered to the echo; but I wished that His Lordship had not so completely hidden his gentler and more winning characteristics beneath such an elaborate display of war paint. He declared finally that, although a Liberal politically, he intended to do everything possible to prevent the bill passing into law; and that, if it should pass, he would do everything he could to get it removed from the statute book.

Mr. Lyttelton's speech, alternately gay and grave, was heard with evident pleasure. The sentiments he voiced were uttered with great clearness and force. He took the line that the bill traduced every principle of genuine Liberalism, and he hurled many a skilfully-pointed gibe at his opponents in the Government. Mr. Asquith was singled out for particlar — and not wholly disinterested — attention. He held also that religious education, which, of course, he meant religious education in the Anglican sense, could not be divorced from the secular training of English elementary schools without harmful and even fatal consequences.

Mr. Lyttelton was supported by Dr. Knox, who was formerly a Vicar in Birmingham and who is deservedly very popular among all classes of its citizens. His smiling, merry face, his clear strong enunciation and his numerous apt illustrations made his hearers feel at home with him at once; and, keeping his audience in immense good humor, he utilized fully his opportunity to stiffen their necks and their backs. Truth to tell, I was not so much impressed with the weight of what he said as with the way in which he said it. When he exclaimed that the bill sought to separate forcibly millions of church children from the breasts of their mother, I could understand the abundant applause, but I quite failed to see how the statement could be vindicated; the Church of England is certain to be left free to nurse her children to the fullest extent of her ability, provided she does not insist upon nursing other people's children. Again, Mr. Birrell's proposal to recoup Churchmen for the large expenditures they have made in the interest of elementary education was not quite fairly dealt with; the minister's very generosity in suggesting an annual grant of $5,000,000 for this purpose was cited as a supreme evidence of the Government's ingratitude, inasmuch as it thinks seriously of disturbing an arrangement which has cost so much and which has proved in many ways so helpful to the State. In conclusion, the Bishop declared himself sure that no parallel to the iniquitous clauses of this bill could be forced in any measure that had been introduced by any party in the nation since the days of the Tudors, and I feel no doubt that the audience was perfectly sincere when it applauded this utterance in a markedly emphatic manner.

THE PRACTICAL RESULTS.

The ultimate outcome of the meeting, in all probability, will be to leave everybody standing just where he stood before. I heard little that was fitted really to enlighten the judgment. Churchmen, of course, can see practically nothing that is good in the proposed statute; it would be strange indeed, if its many definitely limiting restrictions should prove acceptable to them. The words spoken from the platform were brave words, and the tones in which they were uttered were often distinctly defiant; but it is plainly the people, not the bishops, who are going to settle the school question on this occasion. The introduction of divisive side-issues will no longer serve their purpose. It is true it was the church that first gave to England the benefits accruing from national elementary schools, and that that church has erected some 14,000 buildings at a voluntary cost of over $200,000,000, but it is also true that when many of these schools ceased to come up to the requirements of a more modern standard efficiency, they had to be superseded by something better. It is true that the church has promoted education enormously, in England; but it is also true that it has seriously retarded it. Nay more; when the church became powerful enough to do so, it not only imperilled the existence of schools, which were often superior to its own, but it secured authority to compel rate payers generally to contribute towards bringing the church schools up to an adequate level, and supplying better remuneration to their teachers. It is true that the Church of England has rendered inestimable service in seeking to impart religious instruction to every child in the kingdom whom it could reach and influence; but it is also true that it has in multitudes of cases covertly abused its privilege by forcing its instructions upon those to whom they were largely repugnant. It is true that 50,000 teachers, who sincerely believe the views which they have been imparting, are now no longer to be permitted to teach these views in the name of the state; but it is also true that the Bible and Bible instruction, by a vote of 477 against 67 in the House of Commons, shall not be abolished from the schools in which (in the future as in the past), it is to be given a place in the authorized elementary curriculum. The board school teaching of Scripture proved to be the very opposite of dangerous and unsettling, in the judgment of the great mass of the parents of the children; and such teaching is to be given in future, not "in accordance with definite doctrinal standards," but without denominational bias or tinge, either Anglican or non-Anglican.

The fact of the matter, in a nutshell, is that Churchmen and Nonconformists no longer trust each other. Experience teaches, it is said; and now each party is watching the other with a determined and unsleeping vigilance. Each side is striving to gain all it can, and to secure every additional privilege that may reluctantly be conceded to it; for no doubt all these points of advantage will prove useful in effecting the ultimate compromise. Hence, those charges and counter-charges, which are bandied to and fro between those who ought to be brethren. If feeling did not run so high, and if it had not at last become inflamed as the result of a long series of misunderstandings, a Bill that would meet all the just claims of moderate men on both sides could be framed without difficulty and passed within a fortnight. Meanwhile the Government, though it has more than once been twitted with exhibiting an unapproachable docility, is carrying itself through this crisis with equal firmness and dignity. It is endeavoring by means of Clause IV. in the Bill to arrive at some common ground of agreement, in virtue of which it is hoped that various incidental differences of opinion may be harmonized. But the fundamental principles of the statute, which aims at securing for England a truly national and thoroughly efficient system of primary education, have already been endorsed by huge majorities in the House of Commons. Only the House of Lords can now prevent these features of the new Act from becoming law; but will it exercise its perogative? Should it daringly elect to follow this course, then indeed, the heather will be on fire. In that event, the hereditary House will be asked to give its attention to a question that will prove to be domestic as well as national, and such a conflagration will speedily be kindled throughout Great Britain that not even the eloquence of a gladstone could either light or control it. The Lords are not specially anxious to provoke, and less than ever to-day, any such troublesome challenge.

The oldest tree in the world is said to be the famous dragon tree of Teneriffe, which is estimated to be from 4000 to 6000 years of age. This wonder of the plant world was 70 feet or more in height until 1819, when, during a terrific thunder storm, one of the large branches was broken off. A similar storm in 1867 stripped the trunk of its remaining branches and left it standing alone.

More Domestics for Canada.

The Dominion line steamship Canada will reach port to-day from Liverpool. She was at Quebec last evening, where she landed upward of 1,200 steerage passengers. If the housekeepers of Canada are still short of domestics, the fault does not lie with the Dominion line, for scarcely a vessel of this company comes into Canada without a large number of servants on board. The Canada the present voyage had one hundred girls sent out by the Hon. Mrs. Joyce, of London, while Mrs. Francis had twenty-five domestics out on the same steamship.

Re-Opening of the Dreyfus Case.

BEFORE the end of this present June, the Dreyfus case will be re-opened. "Faits nouveaux" — facts unknown at the last military trial — have been brought to the attention of the Cour de Cassation, or Supreme Court of Appeal, and the court this time being unswayed by sentiments of false justice, or the fear of revolution, is expected to declare ex-Captain Dreyfus to be innocent of the crime for which he has twice been sentenced and once pardoned. The new facts are the following: (1) The "petit bleu" (city tube telegram) sent by Colonel Panizzardi to Colonel von Schwarzkoppen about the transport of troops on the Eastern Railway in the event of mobilization was not written in 1894, as was believed when Dreyfus was tried at Rennes, but in the year following, when he was at Devil's Island; (2) At Rennes, Dreyfus was thought to have communicated a note on the different artillery regiments to the German Government, as it was supposed to have disappeared from the bureau where he was working. Now this very note has been since found at the War Office. (3) The fact that the initial "D" occurred in another "petit bleu" exchanged between the German and Italian military attaches was regarded as proof against Dreyfus. It has since been ascertained that the original initial was scratched out and replaced by the letter "D." (4) It has also been found that several documents in favor of Dreyfus were not submitted to the officers who tried him at Rennes. (5) Since 1899 a document has been discovered which shows that Dreyfus never made an avowal of guilt. (6) It is alleged that there is evidence of one false witness at the Rennes trial.

Thrifty Paris Women.

How to live on 3 francs a day is a financial problem which is troubling the Paris Syndicate of Women Workers. The budget drawn up by this association is a pathetic miracle of thriftiness. Rent heads the list for $30 a year; heating and lighting is down for $6.87. Expenses for meals are: Breakfasts, 3c a day; luncheons, 16c; dinners, 12c. Clothes include two pairs of boots, $3.12; one pair of summer shoes, 58c; soling and heeling, $1.68 a year; two blouses at 43c; two dresses at $5.83; three petticoats at $2.26. Some items are peculiarly pathetic: Matches, 2c a month; pen, ink and paper, 20c a year; postage, 36c a year; receipt stamps for quarterly rents, 8c; janitor's annual tip, $1; needles, thread, etc., $3; four hot baths a year, 50c; household expenses, $6.75; washing, $11.75 a year. The grand total shows a balance on the right side of the ledger of $1.94 a year. This has to cover all extras, such as omnibus fares, which are not included in the estimate. The budget has been drawn up by the syndicate for the benefit of its members, who find it difficult to make both ends meet. There are many women workers in Paris who receive even less than 3 frahcs a day. The poorest paid are the shop girls and the workers in the feather and artificial flower trades.

"Making Medicine."

All Indians are superstitious and have many ways by which they endeavor to propitiate the goddess of fortune, or, as they call it, make medicine, either to bring them good luck or to break a spell of bad luck. Each has his or her own peculiar medicine, which must be made in its own peculiar way. Sometimes an Indian will quietly leave camp, go to a secluded hilltop or ravine and sit there alone in the hot sun for hours, hoping thus to induce the power of medicine to come and abide with him. Another Indian on coming to a stream or pond will strike the water with his hand or bow or tomahawk or other weapon, at the same time uttering a prayer to the Great Spirit to send him good medicine; or he will dip up some of the water in a vessel and pour it on the ground where grass is growing before taking a drink, no matter how thirsty he may be. Others make a particularly strong and good medicine by standing naked in the rain until their hair is thoroughly wet through. If the rain lasts but a short time it is thought that the medicine has been broken and will be "no good." Some of the Indian women make medicine by standing in the water and cutting their arms and legs with a knife, believing that the deeper the cut the more powerful will be the medicine. Indians also have what they call medicine horses, medicine dogs, medicine arrows, medicine bags, medicine bones, and medicine images of men and beasts, all of which are supposed to bring their owners good luck. The medicine horse is often painted and decorated in the most fantastic manner, and is thought to be able to carry his rider safely through every battle. The medicine dog is used to bring good luck when on the chase, and sometimes to cure or prevent disease. So long as the dog proves to be good medicine he is safe from the pot; but woe to him when his medicine fails, for into his master's stomach he goes, as soon as water and fire and strong teeth can take him. Medicine bags are very common, and are supposed to be filled with good medicine that will ward off disease, bring good luck and preserve the wearer from all harm in hunt or fight. Whenever an Indian has ill luck he is quite sure that it was caused by some one or some thing having broken his medicine, and he will immediately endeavor to find out who or what made the break and to repair it by making good medicine.

Dietetic Value of Fats and Oils.

There is a remarkable misapprehension, particularly among many persons of the more intelligent class of our people, says the Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette, as to the food value of the fats and oils. The muscle or red meat is a valuable source of proteid, but the excessive consumption proteid invites various diseases which figure very prominently in the causes of death. The fats and oils increase our resistance against cold and some of the causes of disease. The health of many so-called scrofulous children would be improved by teaching them to eat more fat. Fats in abundance constitute a very essential part of the dietary of the tuberculous patient. A larger proportion of the fatty elements of foods would go a long way in adding to the robustness of many persons and saving them from the subsequent development of tuberculosis.

Describes Uganda Protectorate.

The statement was made at the Place Viger yesterday by Mr. Harold T. Hammond, who in his journey around the world made quite a trip through Central Africa.

"It was Speke, the explorer, who gave us the first definite information about Uganda, and gradually the district came under the protection of the British crown.

"The father of the present young king was a menace to the protectorate, to the Europeans, and other tribes of the country, and was finally deposed. The young king, his son, who succeeded him, is now receiving his education from an English tutor, and the training he will receive should fit him to become a sensible African monarch.

"This young man will reign under a native home rule government, with British power to prevent anything like gross tyranny or civil war. They would be given every chance to make use of their native institutions provided barbarous and cruel methods were eliminated, and to educate the natives to live within their own land so ruled.

"The building of the Uganda railway brought law and order through the districts which it traversed, and this road will in time be of the greatest value in developing the trade of the district. Uganda is a great banana country, and the natives almost live on fruit.

"There are now about sixty English families in the country, who, apart from the inconveniences of living in a tropical country, are quite content to live in Uganda. The natives are extremely hospitable and very tactful, and the country is a regular paradise, so far as beauty and climate are concerned.

"These English families live like nabobs out there, and I believe it would be difficult to induce them to leave this far away African country."

New York Night Bank.

"There is only one New York, and she is always to the front," declared Mr. Frank A. Griffin, at the Queen's, last night.

"New York has now a night and day bank, which will be open from 12 o'clock Sunday night until 12 o'clock the following Saturday. This is an innovation, but the directors are well known business men of the city, who are determined to make it go.

"This bank has been organized for the purpose of keeping pace with the all-night service of cafes, hotels, restaurants, subways, cabs, etc., and has for a long time been a very necessary institution.

"It will also give ready access to his funds to the Broadwayite, the business man and the visitor in case of emergency, and will allow people to deposit or withdraw during any hour of the twenty-four.

"Very often mercantile transactions are put through in great volume long before banks are open, and often in still greater volume after the banks close. Then again there are personal necessities and emergencies which call for banking facilities as urgently in other hours as between 10 o'clock and 3.

"The custom of the cashier or proprietor counting the cash in business houses, or hotels, on an evening, and then carrying the stuff away, most often to the home for safekeeping, where it causes him a great deal of worry and makes him turn pale at his own shadow, will now be a thing of the past, and these people will appreciate to the full extent the advantages offered by a bank with its doors open during the night time."

American Cattle Going North.

Mr. Tom Peabody, of Seattle, talking about ranches and ranching out west, stated at the Carslake last night that this season some 8,000 or 10,000 sheep will be taken into the Yentna district of Alaska.

"Negotiations," said he, "are now in progress between the owners of the sheep and the tranportation company for the removal of the herds. During the summer months the vegetation in this district is very heavy, and would support sheep and cattle without any difficulty whatever.

"The idea is to supply the miners with fresh meat, as the present method of shipping meat to the north has proved costly and unsatisfactory. Having the herds of sheep and cattle in the country and allowing them to run wild and gain their sustenance on the range, it is possible that the price of meat will be materially reduced. In addition to the sheep, a number of cattle will also be taken in.

"A steamer has been chartered and the people, about eighty in number, are now on their way to map out a new town. The party will also number some miners and prospectors. If possible, the town site will be established at the head of navigation, possibly at the head of the Takasitna River.

"When the town site is finally located, each person on board, including the crew, will be allowed to take their pick of the lots, and in this manner will be established another new town in the Alaskan district.

"This is the first time that anything of this nature has been tried, and if it is successful, no doubt many herds with their accompanying settlers will be headed north."

New York Undergoing Changes.

"New types of dwellings are rapidly improving the aspect of old New York" said Mr. Frank E. Fellowes, of that city at the Windsor, yesterday.

"The Bronx district a few years ago was only a suburban wilderness, with farm houses scattered here and there among large estates and tracts of forests. To-day this district is a compact city.

"Washington Heights, which for years has been a dormant place, is now possessed with the building craze, and the hills there will certainly make splendid sites for buildings. It is a wonder that the craze did not take effect long ago.

"Everywhere block after block of flats are being erected, and new streets are being opened up across gardens and fields. The buildings going up are generally of white and light wood, and built to receive lots of light and air, due to the new tenement house laws which were framed with the idea of ensuring safety and comfort to the occupants.

"These flats, or the greater number of them, have lifts, mail chutes, telephones, and all modern conveniences, and, judging from the amount of buildings going up, there will be no lack of houses for the rapidly-growing population of New York."

Dignified Practical Joker.

One can hardly imagine that dignified and zealous temperance advocate, Lady Henry Somerset, as a practical joker, and yet it is a fact that she, together with her cousin, Lady Dudley, once dressed up as a pair of French tourists and in this guise and heavily veiled visited her place at Eastnor Castle and went all over it. But apparently she was not sufficiently impressed by the beauties of her own residence, for afterward her housekeeper confided to her that "that Duchesse de Montmorenci"—the name which Lady Henry had given herself—"was a disagreeable creature."

THE ANTI-USURY BILL.

While Parliament is delaying action on the Anti-Usury bill, the usurers are at work. If the bill had been treated as an emergency measure—which might well have been done—it could now be the law of the land. But it is not the law and the usurers are still singing their siren songs and endeavoring to lure young men and hard-pressed fathers of families and even poor widows to their fatal havens.

A circular letter addressed to a young man on salary in a responsible position has just been laid on our desk. It begins by assuring him that "to be happy each day you must have money to pay your way,"—a sentence containing both truth and poetry — and then adding that the writer of the circular makes it "a business of supplying happiness in the form of money to the worthy in need." Where could a man find a nobler mission?

Note that it is only "the worthy," who are to be helped. This is a highly moral enterprise. It is so moral, indeed, that the writer assures the "worthy" young man to be assisted that "all transactions" will be "treated confidentially." He wishes to "do good by stealth," and hopes to escape blushing to "find it known."

The circular then proceeds to state that the writer advances "money to regularly employed wage-earners in sums of $5.00 to $500.00 without security." He certainly could not be asked to do better than that. Any man with security can get money anywhere. That is a mere money lender's transaction. But this philanthropic enterprise for "the worthy" does not approach the question in any such callous manner. It is no sordid commercial transaction with him. He does not ask for "security"—a rude personal question at best.

In fact, he is even more generous than this. He will lend money to "people out of work or only temporarily employed," provided they can get the endorsement of some relative or friend who is permanently employed. Moreover he will also "advance money to retail merchants, small manufacturers, boarding-house keepers and people in the teaming and trucking business. I wish you to call," he adds, "and have a personal interview with the managers of my office if in need of financial assistance, that they may be able to present to you clearly our advanced method of doing business."

At this point the circular is beginning to get a hard metallic business ring, not at all what we would expect from a man who is dealing only with "the worthy"; but any unpleasant impression which might arise from this is immediately removed by the following touching paragraph:

"I not only offer you help now, but any time hereafter when you may need help; in the hour of sickness or whenever misfortune or financial reverses of any kind befall you, whenever you have pressing debts or obligations to meet, also for vacations, improvements, comforts or any business opportunities."

As for profits, the writer of the circular desires only the most modest returns. He admits that he hopes to make a profit, "the same as the market man or the grocer, who sells you supplies"; but he will ask only "a small per cent. of the profit that they get," and will give something "not obtainable upon credit at every street corner." As a guarantee of stability, he mentions the fact that "I have offices in the 53 principle cities of this country"; and he gives a list of them for the benefit of people who may not know that we in Canada have "53 principal cities," running from Albany, N.Y., to Worcester, Mass.

It seems hardly necessary to add that the man who signs this circular is a usurer. The circular itself bears all the earmarks of coming from such an office. His wide connection in the United States is also a suggestive feature.

Parliament should not lose any time in pushing the Anti-Usury bill through. Every Parliamentarian knows that, having reached so late a date in the session, every day's delay now is an additional risk that the bill may not be passed at all. It will be easy already for it to be jockeyed along until a disagreement with the Senate over it may send it to the shambles in the hurry before prorogation.

THE AUTOMOBILE AND THE PEOPLE.

The value of the automobile is now beyond question. It has come to stay; and is a decided addition to the machinery of civilization. This makes it necessary that we should reckon with it; but it is also necessary that the motorist should reckon with us. In no other way can the automobile industry suffer so much harm as by exasperating the people into passing legislation which will make the use of the motor car a doubtful pleasure. We have more than once pointed out to chauffeurs and those who "honk" that the mere fact that the vehicle they are in is speedy gives them no special rights over the rest of the world. Pedestrians and people driving in horse teams have the privilege of remaining on earth, too.

There is a feeling which has already found expression in the columns of the papers, from angry correspondents, that the city of Montreal must take some decisive action to protect life and property against the reckless chauffeur. He seems to believe that as long as he toots the warning horn, he can drive people and teams out of his way. He will "whiz" around a corner or over a crossing at high speed, blowing dust or mud (which ever happens to be on duty) in the faces of the crowd, in a way which would lead to immediate arrest if a horse vehicle were being used. But he is storing up trouble for himself. The Legislature of Ontario has passed a law throwing every responsibility that can be thought of upon the "auto" driver. It has been enacted there as follows:

"Every person having control of a motor vehicle shall, whenever approaching any vehicle drawn by horse, operate such motor vehicle in such a manner as to exercise every reasonable precaution to prevent the frightening of any such horse, and to ensure the safety of any person driving the same. Outside the limits of any city or town he shall not approach such horse within one hundred yards or pass same going in an opposite direction at a greater speed than seven miles per hour. If any horse appear frightened he shall reduce its speed and shall not proceed further towards such animal unless such movement be necessary to avoid accident or injury. Then he shall at once stop his motor vehicle, when signalled by a driver to do so by raising his hand, or otherwise requested, and shall remain stationary so long as may be necessary to allow such driver to pass, or until directed by such driver to proceed; and in any case if any animal driven appears to be frightened, the operator of such motor vehicle, and any occupants of the same, shall upon request render assistance to such driver in control of such animal or animals."

In case of accident a motorist must give all assistance and also, if requested, write out his name and address for any one who asks for it. The penalties for infringement of the act are very severe. Some similar enactment is demanded here. It looks, too, as though a Montreal city by-law might fill the bill. It has been decided that the city must not issue automobile licenses, that the revenue from such a source must go to the provincial treasury. This will not, however, prevent the passage of a by-law compelling all automobile drivers using the streets of Montreal to register at the City Hall and show on their machines numbers assigned to them, even if no fees are collected. Three-quarters of the automobiles in this province are owned in Montreal; and the action of the city would soon be followed by all other municipalities. It is possible to so surround the running of the machines with restrictions as to practically prohibit their use. It is not desired to do this, but the "auto" man cannot afford to collide with public opinion.

THE SAND EATERS.

Fads have been many and curious in these latter days, and the dietetic cranks have not been the least curious of the faddists. We have the health foods for those of dryasdust taste. We have the starvation panacea, whereof Montreal has possessed a shrine and prophetess. We have the fruit dietist and the dietist to whom vegetables are the only way of salvation. In the distant past they tell of one who chewed his cud of lush grass. And now even he has been made ashamed for commonplaceness by the devotee who finds life not worth living unless allowed to eat sand.

The latest of the faddists has made his appearance in the good city of Toronto. He is not of the teetotal race, who will eat nothing but his favorite food, but is liberal enough to include with it all other of nature's good gifts. It is not his sole diet, but is the beneficent agent that, taken in proper doses, enables him to get the best out of all eatables, and guards him from all their noxious effects. There was a theory that the sand diet was one of nature's wondrous provisions to supply an alleged lack of that element in the constitutions of the good citizens of that burg, but we understand that this theory has been discarded by scientists in favor of an hypothesis that it is due to the hunger of Torontonians to get something "gritty," even if it be only in the way of mastication. Neither of these theories, we understand, has its source with the sand-eaters, however, who put it down to a desire to avoid dyspepsia.

It is very important that one should have the right kind of sand for this dyspepsia cure. The best is that taken from the "virgin earth," and which "has never been trodden by the foot of man." It is washed, sifted, baked to sterilize it, and then bottled for use. The theory of its devotees is that it works as a sort of internal sandpaper and keeps the stomach and other digestive apparatus in a cleanly condition. One might fancy that it might incidentally bring on a few cases of appendicitis, but one of its disciples avers that a fellow sand-eater was recently operated on for the vermiform trouble, when in spite of six months' assiduous sand chewing not a grain was to be found in the appendix.

The fad originates in the sunny south, along the shore of the Father of Waters. After a storm it was found that there was less sickness than at other times, and by some, perhaps by the local water supply company or civic corporation, this was attributed to the presence of sand in the drinking water, though it is quaintly added in the records, "people were found who had different ideas on the subject." Then an observant professor noticed that the birds always stopped at a certain sand bar in the Mississippi and filled their crops, when it occurred to him that what was good for birds must be good for humans; so he tried it himself and found it good, when he started the propaganda to spread the news to his fellow-creatures. The records do not explain whether this learned gentleman has taken the bird as his model in all matters of diet, but they do add that sand from this river bar is sold at the rate of twenty cents a pound, or $1,000 a ton. And thence has the fad spread as far as Ontario, and there are said to be now at least a hundred of the citizens of the Queen City who trust to a sandy dietetic foundation as their defence against indigestion.

THIS DATE 30 YEARS AGO.

The Late Marquis of Dufferin

June 16, 1876.

The Earl and Countess of Dufferin and suite passed through the city this morning by G. T. R. for Quebec, where they will reside for a month in the Governor-General's quarters in the Citadel. Their Excellencies leave very shortly on a tour of Manitoba and British Columbia, etc.

THE Governor-General, the late Marquis of Dufferin and Ava, made the trip to British Columbia over the Canadian Pacific Railway to San Francisco and thence to Victoria, B.C., on a British cruiser. While at the coast, by his silver tongue, Irish wit and great tact, he allayed the agitation raised over the putting off of the construction of the Canada Pacific which the Federal Cabinet very much desired to carry out at the time. The pathetic closing of his long and useful diplomatic career, a few years ago, is still fresh in the minds of the Star's readers.

The Postmaster-General has decided to recommend establishing a post office at Lake Tallon. The office is to be placed near the line of the proposed Canadian Pacific Railway, and will accommodate the lumber trade and a large and rapidly increasing settlement, which has hitherto been subject to great inconvenience from want of postal communication.

THE late Hon. Lucius Seth Huntington, Q.C., was Postmaster-General at the time mentioned. He was appointed on October 9th, 1875, and held the office up to 1878, when the Liberal Cabinet failed in carrying the general elections. He was one of the Dominion's ablest statesmen, an orator of great force, and a close reasoner and debater. He passed away many years ago.

A very successful concert was given in the school room of Sherbrooke Street Methodist Church last evening in behalf of a family in great distress, and a very handsome sum was realized, and the programme was an excellent one. Prof. Andrew contributed a couple of choice readings in his usual able style.

THE late Prof. Andrew was for many years attached to the staff of the High School as master of elocution. He was a very good teacher, and his pupils were very well trained in the difficult art of reading intelligently and reciting with correct expression. He was carried away in the eighties.

Our Dublin exchanges have very eulogistic criticisms of Mr. T. C. King's performance of "Othello," which is described as intelligent in conception and not devoid of force and cleverness.

THE late Mr. King was a very popular tragedian and well known here and throughout the Dominion and United States. He went on the stage of the Theatre Royal, Birmingham, at the age of fifteen. In 1851 he appeared with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Keane before the late Queen Victoria at Windsor Castle. He acquired a fine reputation as a refined actor, free from ranting and mannerisms. He died at King's Heath, Birmingham, about fourteen years ago.

Edinburgh's Old Musician.

George Croal, who celebrated his 95th birthday recently, is Edinburgh's oldest musician and enjoys the distinction of having conversed with Sir Walter Scott. He is, indeed, probably the only survivor of those who heard him avow his authorship of the "Waverley" novels. The occasion was a theatrical fund dinner, and Mr. Croal recalls the suppressed eagerness of the assemblage in expectation of the historic announcement. Of all the singers he has heard in his long life he most admires Catalini, who died in 1849. In recent times, he says, only Patti at her best has rivalled her.

WHO'S WHO?

THE GRAND DUKE OF HESSE.—

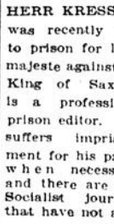
The Grand Duke of Hesse is said to have an interest in the Jordan Water Market, a company recently formed for retailing water from the Jordan to those who desire it for use at baptisms. A bottle of the water costs 15s., with a discount of 4s to clergymen.

HERR KRESSIN.—Herr Kressin, who was recently sent to prison for lese-majeste against the King of Saxony, is a professional prison editor. He suffers imprisonment for his paper when necessary, and there are few Socialist journals that have not a prison editor.

INVENTOR OF MOTOR-CAR PAWNSHOP. — Mr. Levy has fitted up a large motor-car with a cash-safe and a strong-room, and has applied for permission to ply the profession of pawnbroker on American racecourses. He is likely to do good business.

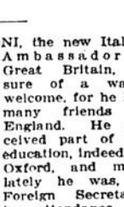
HERR MAX GRUBE. — Herr Grube was playing in "William Tell" at the Theatre Royal, Berlin, when the Kaiser noticed that in the "Apple Scene" he rode in buskins instead of boots. This annoyed His Majesty, with the result that the actor's contract was cancelled.

THE REV. CUNNINGHAM GEIKIE, L.L.D., D.D., who died recently at Bournemouth, was born in Edinburgh in 1824. He was the second son of the Rev. Archibald Geikie, a Presbyterian minister of Toronto. He was educated in Edinburgh, and served as a minister in Canada and Nova Scotia from 1848 to 1860, when he devoted himself to literary work in England. In 1871 he received the degree of D.D. from Queen's College, Canada. In 1876 he was ordained deacon to the curacy of St. Peter's, Lordship Lane, Dulwich, and priest in 1877. In 1879 he was appointed rector of Christ Church, near Neuilly, Paris, where he remained for three years. He accepted the vicarage of St. Mary's Barnstaple, from the Bishop of Exeter, in 1883, and in 1885 the Bishop of Norwich (Dr. Pelham) collated him to the vicarage of St. Martin-at-Palace, Norwich, which he resigned in 1889. Dr. Geikie was given the degree of LL.D. by Edinburgh University in 1891. Among his many works may be mentioned "Hours with the Bible," in twelve volumes, "The English Reformation," "A Short Life of Christ," and "The Vicar and His Friends."



MR. H. L. BRAEKSTAD, the Anglo-Norwegian journalist and litterateur, has just been appointed Norwegian Vice-Consul in London, a position he is eminently qualified to fill, having resided in this country for thirty years. Mr. Braekstad, who is an old and valued contributor to these pages, has always been an enthusiastic champion of the rights of Norway in her struggle with Sweden. In the literary world he is best known as the introducer of several standard Norwegian works to English readers.

MARQUIS TITTONI, the new Italian Ambassador to Great Britain, is sure of a warm welcome, for he has many friends in England. He received part of his education, indeed, at Oxford, and more lately he was, as Foreign Secretary, in attendance on King Victor Emmanuel during His Majesty's memorable visit to King Edward last year. Marquis Tittoni is still young for an Ambassador, being only just over fifty. He married nearly twenty years ago, and has two children.



MRS. COOPER, the original of Dickens's "Little Dorrit."—All lovers of Dickens will be interested to learn that the original of "Little Dorrit" is still alive. Mrs. Cooper, who, as Mary Ann Mitton, was a playmate of Dickens and the sister of his school chum, has lived at Southgate for more than half a century. She is now over ninety years of age, but is still in full possession of her faculties.

African elephants cost from $6000 to $7000; an Indian elephant about $5000. Giraffes are worth about the same price as African elephants on account of their scarcity. A fine hippopotamus may be purchased for $3000; an African lion for $1000, and a lioness for $800. Bengal tigers are worth $800, and camels from $400 to $500 apiece.

Criticism and Christian Dogma.

Professor Charles A. Briggs contributes an important article to the June number of the North American Review entitled "Criticism and Dogma." Dr. Briggs defines Criticism, and distinguishes the departments into which it must be divided as Philosophical Criticism, Historical Criticism and Scientific Criticism. Biblical Criticism is a section of Historical Criticism. There are two entirely distinct questions with reference to the relation of Dogma to criticism. Dr. Briggs remarks that the burning questions of Dogma at present are the Virgin-Birth and the bodily resurrection of Jesus Christ; and, taking the former dogma, he examines it in the light of Biblical Criticism, Historical Criticism, Scientific Criticism and Philosophical Criticism, with the result that he finds that the dogma is not invalidated by the process. Dr. Briggs says:

"General History, if it cannot verify the fact of the Virgin Birth, verifies the dogma as appearing in the most primitive Christian creed, not later than the middle of the second century, as the unanimous consensus of the Christian Church in all its great historical organizations until the present time, as a dogma which has determined the history of Christian doctrine, and through Christian doctrine the Christian Church and Christian civilization for nineteen centuries. It is not possible to explain the history of the world without recognizing that there is a God in History, and that, to use the words of Lessing, 'The History of the world is the divine education of the race.' It is not possible to explain Christian History without the recognition of Christ. History, and if Christ, then what Christianity has always recognized Christ to be, the Incarnate Saviour, who by Virgin Birth identified Himself once for all and forever, not with an individual man, but with human nature, as the Head of redeemed humanity. These things are dogmas interpreting History, which cannot be verified by Historical Criticism as realities attested by the human senses and human experience; but, without them, Christian History is unintelligible, inexplicable, a mass of heterogeneous facts and events without harmony and without unity."

TALK OF CANADIAN CARDINAL AWAKENS MEMORIES OF MGR. TASCHEREAU

Ceremonies in Connection with his Elevation to Rank of Prince of the Church were Among most Gorgeous Canada has Ever Witnessed.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Quebec, June 16.—In no part of the Dominion has more interest been manifested in the report that Canada is to have a new Cardinal than in the city of Quebec, the only one in the whole of British North America, which has yet been given the honor of a Prince of the Church, selected from among its people.

Though there is satisfaction at the rumor that Mgr. Duhamel, His Grace the Archbishop of Ottawa, is likely to be elevated to the dignity when the Holy See decides to again confer this honor on Canada, there is, I some quarters, a disposition to regret that the honor should not be reserved for Archbishop Begin, the distinguished successor of Cardinal Taschereau in the archiepiscopal see of Quebec; not only because of the great learning and piety of that revered prelate, but also because of the antiquity of the original Canadian see, the mother of so 150 dioceses in North America, and whose early occupants exercised ecclesiastical sovereignty over the whole continent north of Mexico and Florida, with the single exception of New England. The claims of Ottawa as the capital of the Canadian Dominion, and the seniority of Mgr. Duhamel in point of episcopal consecration will doubtless be taken into consideration, while if the magnitude of the see itself were to be weighed together with the tact, the brilliancy, the devotion and the ability of its episcopal occupant, it is quite recognized here that it would be difficult for the claims of Mgr. Bruchesi, of Montreal, to be overlooked in this connection.

In any case, the story that Canada is to have a new Cardinal is the cause of very general rejoicing in Quebec, and while the official confirmation of the rumor is anxiously awaited, people are busy recalling the interesting details of the historical fetes attending the conferring of the Cardinalate dignity up on the late Mgr. Taschereau, in the Ancient Capital, by the special delegates of the Pope, just twenty years ago.

CARDINAL TASCHEREAU.

The late Cardinal Taschereau belonged to one of the very best and very oldest of Canadian families, and one that has given more judges and legislators to the state and more members of the clergy to the church than can be counted upon the fingers of one's two hands. The founder of the family in this country was Thomas Jacques, originally from Touraine, son of Christophe Taschereau, King's Counsellor, and Treasurer of the town of Tours. Thomas Jacques came to Canada about the beginning of the eighteenth century. He was named Treasurer of Marine, and in 1736 obtained the concession of a seigneury on the borders of the Chaudiere. In 1728 he had married Marie Fleury d'Eschambault, whose mother, Claire Jolliet, was the daughter of the discoverer of the Mississippi. At his death in 1749, he left eight children, all of whom with the exception of Gabriel Elzear, either died without posterity or returned to France. Gabriel Elzear had four children, of whom the youngest was Judge Jean Thomas Taschereau, who died of cholera in 1832. This latter had married Marie Panet, daughter of a former Speaker of the Canadian House of Assembly, who became the mother of His Eminence Cardini Taschereau.

The future Cardinal was born at the seigniorial manor of Ste. Marie de la Beauce, on the 17th February, 1820. He entered the Quebec Seminary at the early age of eight years and was remarkable even then for his close application to study and his aptness as a scholar. When sixteen years old he had completed his school studies and visited the principal countries of Europe with the Rev. Mr. Holmes, of the Seminary, remaining some time at Rome, where in the following year he received the tonsure in the basilica of St. Jean de Lateran. At the end of that year he returned to Quebec for his theological studies, and in 1842 was ordained priest, subsequently becoming professor of philosophy in the seminary, of which he was destined still later to become the head. In 1854 he returned to Rome to study canonical law for two years, and after receiving his doctor's degree, embarked for Quebec, where he assumed the chair of theology in Laval University, of which he was one of the founders and later, the rector.

In 1847 Mr. Taschereau had a narrow escape from death. With a number of other priests, he devoted himself to the succor of the unfortunate Irish immigrants at Grose Isle, who were the victims of typhus fever, and contracted the disease, which reduced him to the very brink of the tomb. His consecration as Archbishop of Quebec, of which diocese he had been for some time the Vicar-General, took place on the 19th May, 1871.

During Mgr. Taschereau's occupancy of the archiepiscopal see, two delegates of the Holy See, Mgr. Conroy and Mgr. Smeulders, came to the country to settle existing difficulties, and upon both occasions His Grace's position in regard to them received the highest approbation of the Roman Court.

ELEVATION TO CARDINALATE.

As early as the month of March, 1886, the newspapers announced the rumors of Mgr. Taschereau's approaching elevation to the Cardinalate, though it was only at the secret consistory of the 7th June of that year that the appointment was made. At the same consistory, the hat of a cardinal was bestowed upon Mgr. Gibbons, of Baltimore, and also upon the Archbishops of Rheims, of Rennes, and of Sene and Auxerre. The new Cardinals resident in Rome, were immediately summoned to the presence of His Holiness, while two of the Gardes-Nobles of the Pope were notified to leave the same day for America, to notify the new Cardinals there and to convey to them the red "calotte" or skull cap, which is part of the insignia of a Cardinal. Count Charles Gazzoli was charged with the message to Cardinal Taschereau and at the same time two Ablegates were sent to convey the barrettas to the American cardinals, and to receive their oaths of fealty to the Sovereign Pontiff. The Ablegate sent to Quebec was Mgr. Henri Bryen.

The news of his nomination was cabled to Mgr. Taschereau, immediately upon the termination of the Papal Consistory, and thanks to the difference in longitude, the message was received at His Grace's palace, at 8.25 a.m., and before evening the news was published all over the world. Immediately upon receipt of the official intelligence, Mr. Legare, Vicar-General, according to the etiquette of such occasions, drove to the residence of His Excellency the Marquis of Lansdowne, Governor-General, who was then in Quebec, and subsequently to the Lieut.-Governor, to communicate to them the news of Mgr. Taschereau's creation as a Cardinal. Written notification of the fact was also sent to all the official dignitaries of State and also to the Speakers of the two branches of the Archbishop Duhamel, of Ottawa.

Legislature then sitting at Quebec. The news was officially made known in town by the firing of a salute of twenty guns from the Terrace by the Quebec Field Battery, at three o'clock in the afternoon, while all the bells of the different parish churches and convents in Quebec and Levis were rung in honor of the occasion, flags being flown from all the public and many of the private building in town.

ADDRESS OF CONGRATULATION.

Telegrams and letters of congratulation immediately poured in from all parts of the world upon the new Cardinal, and on the day following the reception of the news, the two Houses of the Legislature, headed by their Speakers, their Sergeants-at-Arms and the Gentleman Usher of the Black Rod proceeded to the palace of the Cardinal and presented a joint address of congratulation, which was read in French by Mr. Boucher de la Bruere, Speaker of the Council and in English by Mr. (afterwards Judge) Wurtele, Speaker of the Assembly.

Immediately after the presentation of the address from the Legislature, His Eminence was particularly gratified to receive a visit from His Grace Archbishop Bond of Montreal, accompanied by Archdeacon Evans, Canons Carmichael (to-day Coadjutor Bishop of Montreal), Mills and Anderson, Hon. George Irvine and Messrs. A. F. Gault and Richard White, of Montreal, who called to tender their congratulations, an example which was later followed by Bishop Williams, of Quebec, and Bishop Hamilton, of Niagara, now of Ottawa.

FETES WERE MEMORABLE.

The fetes in connection with the investiture of the first Canadian cardinal were of the most imposing character, and will never be forgotten by those privileged to witness them.

Count Gazzoli, who bore the red calotte to His Eminence, arrived in Quebec on the 29th of June, 1889, and was met by the Vicar-General and the Cardinal's secretary, Mgr. Marois, and conveyed to the palace. His Eminence having taken his place upon the throne in the reception hall of the palace, Count Gazzoli entered in the magnificent costume of one of the Pope's Noble Guard — red tunic, with gold trimmings, white trousers, long patent leather boots, silver helmet, with black plume, and wearing at his side the sword of his office. He carried in his hand the casket containing the "calotte rouge," which he deposited on a table while he saluted His Eminence and handed him the sealed package containing the official notification of his appointment, sent by the Papal Secretary of State.

His Eminence broke the seals and then handed the document signed by Cardinal Jacobini to Abbe Louis Paquet, who read it in Italian, Latin and French. There was also a letter from Cardinal Pecci, brother of the then reigning Pope, which, translated, read as follows: "In the secret consistory of this morning, His Holiness has raised to the sublime dignity of cardinal Mgr. Archbishop of Quebec. The undersigned Cardinal, brother of His Holiness, informs your Holiness of this mark of the consideration of the Sovereign Pontiff." A third document certifying to the appointment was signed by Cardinal Mertel, "Vice-Chancellor of the Holy Roman Church."

After the reading of the documents, Count Gazzoli addressed His Eminence, expressing his sense of the honor done him in being entrusted with such a mission, and the more so that he knew how great and how illustrious was the new Prince of the Church, and how flourishing and how much respected and venerated in Europe was Canadian Christianity, of which His Eminence was the first cardinal. He concluded by saying: "Your Eminence's three names will forever remain engraved upon my heart; that of your Eminence, that of Quebec, and that of Canada, and in pronouncing this last name I bind to your Eminence the calotte of a Cardinal."

Count Gazzoli having opened the casket containing the calotte, took it out and passed it to His Eminence, who placed it upon his own head, and expressed his thanks to the Count for coming across the ocean to bring him the first insignia of the Cardinalate, for his elevation to which he also expressed his gratitude to His Holiness.

THE INVESTITURE.

The crowning solemnity of the fetes in connection with the investiture of the new cardinal only occurred on the 21st of July, after the arrival at Quebec of Mgr. O'Bryen, the Ablegate of the Holy See, and the bearer of the scarlet barretta to His Eminence. There was a most gala reception to His Excellency the Ablegate upon his arrival at Quebec, and he was met and escorted by an immense procession from the wharf to the Cardinal's palace, being driven in a state coach drawn by four horses. After greeting His Eminence and presenting his credentials from Rome, His Excellency called upon Mgr. Lynch, Archbishop of Toronto, who had come to Quebec the day before, to present him with the documents authorizing him to confer

Outside of Rome, where this ceremony is usually performed by the Pope in person, the conferring of the scarlet barretta is generally confided to the head of the State, provided he is a Roman Catholic. As the Governor-General of Canada was not a member of that faith, the Holy See had delegated the Venerable Archbishop of the barretta upon the new cordinal. Toronto to perform the ceremony.

On the 20th July, in the interior chapel of the Cardinal's palace, Mgr. O'Bryen received from His Eminence the solemn oath of fealty and obedience to the Holy See, required of all princes of the Church. By the terms of this oath every new cardinal obligates himself to defend the rights of the Church, even, if necessary, to the shedding of his blood, and from this circumstance is derived the emblematical color of the calotte and the barretta, with which the princes of the Church are invested.

Magnificent, almost beyond description, were the crowning ceremonies of the Cardinalate fetes, in the gorgeous Basilica of Quebec, on the 21st of July, 1886. Thousands of people composed the procession which escorted the new Cardinal from his palace to the Basilica, and on the detour made during the return to permit of passing under the score and more of beautiful arches erected over the streets in honor of the occasion. Thousands more crowded the open spaces, such as that on and about Dufferin Terrace and the Place d'Armes and that in front of the Basilica. On the old site of the Jesuit barracks, where the new City Hall has since been erected, the Quebec Field Battery was stationed and fired one hundred guns during the progress of the procession and subsequent ceremony, while all the church bells were rung at the same time. Over twenty bishops and more than five hundred priests took part in the procession and their entry into the church was a most imposing affair.

On the opposite side of the square from the church, the bishops and Cardinal donned their robes in a kiosk erected for their accommodation. The Ablegate and the Cardinal followed the clergy and bishops, the barretta being borne upon a silver tray and covered with a scarlet veil. Guarding it with naked sword, marched Count Gazoili, the Noble Guard of the Pope. Within the sanctuary, motionless as a statue, the representative of the personal body guard of His Holiness stood for over three hours, with drawn sword, helmet on head, by the side of the stand upon which was placed the barretta, near the throne occupied by the Papal Ablegate.

After the imposing ceremony of the mass and the preaching of an eloquent "sermon de circonstance," by Mgr. Gravel, Mgr. O'Bryen handed the papal brief of his appointment to His Eminence, who gave it to his secretary, Mgr. Marois, to read. When this had been done, the Ablegate addressed His Eminence in a congratulatory manner and handed to Mgr. Lynch the authorization of His Holiness for the conferring of the barretta. This document, like the former one, was also read in both Latin and French. After an expression of "appreciation of the honor done him by this commission from Rome, Archbishop Lynch received the barretta from the hands of Mgr. O'Bryen, and placing it upon the head of Cardinal Taschereau, said in Latin: "In virtue of the apostolic authority which has been given me by the Sovereign Pontiff Leo XIII., I confer upon you this barretta, in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost. Amen."

His Eminence retired to the sacristy, and robed himself with the remaining insignia of his new dignity, including the rochet once the property of Bishop Laval and the red cappa. Upon returning to his throne he delivered an allocution to those present, in both Latin and French, addressing himself first to the Ablegate, and then respectively to the Apostolic Delegate, Archbishop Lynch, the remaining bishops, the clergy and the laity.

The ceremony concluded with the solemn singing of the Te Deum, after which one of the most emotional and most impressive scenes ever enacted in the old city of so many dramatic events, occurred opposite the main entrance of the Church. As His Eminence appeared on the balcony of the splendid arch of triumph, erected as a peristyle to the Basilica, to pronounce the first solemn benediction given by the new prince of the Church in the name of the Sovereign Pontiff, the immense throng of people in the open square in front, and in all the adjoining streets, estimated to have numbered from twenty to twenty-five thousand, fell upon their knees, no inconsiderable number of them fairly sobbing with emotion and joy. It was a scene, described by the visitors from Rome, as one of which they had never seen the like, save upon the very unique occasion upon which the Pope himself solemnly gives the benediction "Urbi et Orbi," at the main entrance of St. Peter's.

MANY CONGRATULATIONS.

As usual upon such occasions the new Cardinal was the recipient of most magnificent presents from his clergy, from the Legislature, from the citizens of Quebec, from the various Roman dignitaries, and from personal and ecclesiastical friends in every part of the world, including money gifts to the value of over $21,000; all of which was required for the payment of the expenses of the Cardinalate fetes, including the complete furnishing in red of the grand saloon of the palace, the portraits of the Pope and Cardinal, the banquet to Count Gazzoli, the banquet to 500 guests by the Cardinal, the costume of the latter, the decorations of the Basilica, the music, etc., the fees to Count Gazzoli, to Mgr. O'Bryen and to the different officials at Rome having right to the same, the coach of His Eminence, the entertainment of the visiting bishops and priests, and the journey of the Cardinal to Rome to receive the Red Hat.

The papal delegates were also the recipient of many gifts and much hospitality during their stay in Quebec.

Following another custom, the new Cardinal gave a banquet on the afternoon of his investiture, the guests numbering five hundred and including all the principal dignitaries of church and state in the Dominion, as well as the distinguished visitors from Europe and the United States. The dinner was given in the old music hall.

At the conclusion of the fetes of the day, Cardinal Taschereau, Archbishop Lynch and Mgr. O'Bryen all cabled to Cardinal Jacobini, informing him of the brilliancy of the ceremony, the enthusiasm, the demonstration by both Catholics and Protestants, the illumination and fireworks, the presence of twenty-two bishops, the gratitude of Cardinal and people, and the speeches by the Cardinal, the Ablegate and the Governor. Cardinal Jacobini cabled back to His Eminence: "Your telegram read with joy by the Sovereign Pontiff, who, thanking, blesses you."

The illumination and fireworks at night were exceedingly beautiful and terminated the official fetes.

THE CARDINAL'S HAT.

There was still another insignia awaiting the new Cardinal, namely, the Cardinalate Hat. This is red in color, and dependent from it on either side are fifteen tassels. It is only conferred by the Pope in person and some Cardinals die without ever receiving it. It is said that it is never used but twice. Placed upon the head of its recipient when conferred, it is deposited upon his mortal remains after death. Thereafter it occupies a prominent place in the diocesan church to which the former Cardinal was attached. There are churches and cathedrals in Europe where two and even three of such hats are still to be seen. Canada possesses but one,—that of the revered Cardinal Taschereau. He died on the 12th April, 1898, and the red hat conferred upon him by the Pope in the spring of 1887, in the Palace of the Vatican, is suspended from the roof of the venerable Basilica of Quebec.

The Cardinals are known as Princes of the Church and form the sacred college which assembles in solemn conclave after the death of a Pope, to elect his successor. When assembled under the presidency of the Sovereign Pontiff they constitute a consistory, which is really the Pope's Privy Council. Their number is limited to seventy, but it is seldom that there are not some vacancies in the ranks of the Sacred College.

The first Canadian Cardinal has left behind him the most gratifying souvenirs. He was as much distinguished for his liberality as for his learning, his devotion and his piety. Protestants and Catholics alike mourned his decease and attended the funeral ceremonies over his remains, the bells of the Anglican Cathedral being tolled during their celebration. A striking instance of his hatred of intolerance came within the experience of the present writer. After the City Council had adopted a series of resolutions congratulating His Eminence upon receiving the dignity of the Cardinalate, it was attacked by a weekly Quebec paper for having had the resolutions in question supported by one of the aldermen who was a Freemason. This alderman was amongst those who were received a few days later at the public reception held by the Cardinal at his palace, and in greeting him, His Eminence said, with an evident reference to the newspaper in question, that he was much gratified with the congratulations of the City Council, and the more so that they had been supported by aldermen representing all nationalities and creeds of Quebec society.

His mortal remains are interred beneath the chancel of the Basilica, over which his red hat is suspended, and in his tomb were deposited the certificates of the various offices of dignity and responsibility which he had filled in the service of the church, as well as a number of his mandements, and medals representing respectively Pius IX., Leo XIII., Mgr. Laval, first Bishop of Quebec, and the Cardinal himself.

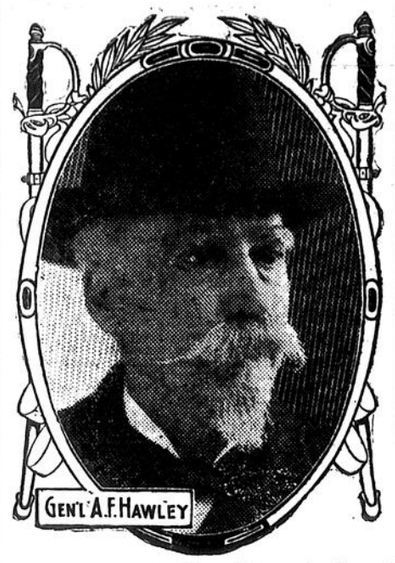
Systemic Catarrh of Summer



Affects Every Organ of the Body.

"There is no better remedy in the world than Pe-ru-na for systemic catarrh."

S. B. Hartman, M.D.

A War Veteran's Experience.

General A. F. Hawley, 1336 25th street, N. W., Washington, D.C., writes:

"I have used Peruna and find it very beneficial for kidney trouble, and especially good for coughs, colds and catarrhal trouble."

Spring and Summer Catarrh.

There is a form of catarrh especially prevalent in spring and summer, called by Dr. Hartman systemic catarrh.

This form of catarrh especially deranges the stomach, bowels and other organs of the abdomen. The whole mucous tract lining the stomach, liver, bowels and kidneys is in an inflamed condition, and these organs fail to perform their proper function.

Systemic catarrh may be or may not be accompanied by catarrh in other parts of the body. In some cases there is a hacking cough. It may be also associated with catarrh in the head.

But, in typical cases of systemic catarrh all the organs of the abdomen are in a weakened and sluggish condition.

Dyspepsia and Biliousness.

Sometimes it is called dyspepsia, at other times biliousness, or the patient may be suspected of having kidney disease or appendicitis.

Peruna has for a long time been regarded the remedy par excellence for conditions of this kind.

The accompanying testimonials are sufficient to indicate the promptness with which Peruna relieves these symptoms and the satisfaction which people express concerning the use of Peruna.

We have a multitude of such testimonials. They are from all parts of the Western Hemisphere. They fairly represent the sincere and unbiased testimony of the people.

Catarrh of Stomach.

Mr. W. R. Callahan, proprietor of Big Hill Farm, and a prominent fruit grower and stock raiser, Glenvar, Va., writes:

"I write to express my kindness toward you and your good medicine, Peruna.

"I had a very bad spell of sickness and could not eat anything at all.

"My head, stomach, in fact my whole body ached, and it looked as though nothing would do me any good.

"I had almost given up. I decided to try a bottle of your Peruna, and before I had taken half the bottle my appetite came to me and my head became all right.

Liver and Kidneys.

Mr. Joseph Klee, 215 E. 4th street, Topeka, Kas., writes:

"My wife took Peruna for liver trouble and a rundown condition incident to the same. A few bottles built up her health and strength.

"I took Peruna for a cold which settled in my kidneys, giving me much pain. In two weeks I was much better, and in a few months I was well."

MICHAEL DAVITT'S WILL.

The will of the late Michael Davitt is an interesting and pathetic document. After making his wife his sole legatee, it proceeds:—

Should I die in Ireland I would wish to be buried at Straide, County Mayo, without any funeral demonstration. If I die in America I must be buried in my mother's grave at Manayunk, near Philadelphia, and on no account be brought back to Ireland.

If in any other country outside of Great Britain to be buried in the nearest graveyard to where I may die, with the simplest possible ceremony. Should I die in Great Britain I must be buried at Straide, County Mayo.

My diaries are not to be published as such, and in no instance without my wife's permission; but on no account must anything harsh or censorious written in the said diaries by me about any person, dead or alive, who has ever worked for Ireland be printed published, or used so as to give pain to any friend or relative.

To all my friends I leave kind thoughts; to my enemies, the fullest possible forgiveness; and to Ireland the undying prayer for the absolute freedom and independence which it was my life's ambition to try and obtain for her.

NORTHMOUNT!

Is the Mecca of those who are seeking a quiet spot in which to build a home.

There is nothing to compare with it on the Island of Montreal. It commands a magnificent panoramic view of the surrounding country, and cool breezes abound on the hottest summer day.

We are hard at work improving the property, laying out and grading roads, laying sidewalks, planting avenues of trees, etc.

Whether you are seeking to build, or to hold for an advance, Northmount lots are BETTER THAN GILT EDGE BONDS.

We are building many superior houses which will make the property very valuable, and create a good demand for lots.

Present Prices, 15c to 25c a Foot.

The best investment for your money that you can get anywhere to-day. In our whole experience we have never had a more attractive proposition.

SPECIAL—To any one visiting Northmount on Sunday we will reimburse the fare, on application at the office on the property.

Savings Banks' Interest Put to Shame, as Daylight Shames a Lamp.

Have you ever heard of men attaining a position of wealth and influence through the hoarding of money in savings banks at 3 per cent. interest? As a matter of fact, has not most all great wealth found its beginning in modest, yet timely, investments in promising real estate property in close proximity to large cities and in the line of their march of improvements?

GRASP THIS OPPORTUNITY! Invest in Westmount Plateau building lots while you can still secure them on such fine streets as Sherbrooke, Western avenue, Cote St. Antoine road, Old Orchard Plateau and Highland avenues, from $400 up, payable 10 per cent. cash and $5 per month or more. BUY NOW and double your money during the summer. Don't be like those slow-thinking, slow-moving fellows, who doubted and hesitated while their neighbors and friends secured lots in Westmount at $500 and sold them a few years after at $5000. The building restrictions prevailing in Westmount Plateau will ensure a good class of buildings and a desirable class of people, causing a rapid and constant increase in values.

The undersigned offers for sale a farm of 144 acres, beautifully situated on the north side of Lake Beven, overlooking a two mile exposure of water, in the vicinity of Arundel, County of Argenteuil, Que. This property is all under cultivation, and is in every respect a high class farm. The soil is rich marl clay, with heavy clay sub-soil. It is very productive, yielding as high as four tons of hay per acre. Twenty-eight years ago the place was a virgin forest, and the last field was cleared only six years ago. The farm is free from stumps and stones and is well drained and fenced. It is in a thriving neighbourhood, convenient to cheese factories, stores, blacksmith shop, saw and chop mills, express office, post office, schools and churches. The farm furnishes feed for 60 head of farm stock, and in addition produces for sale from 50 to 76 tons of hay per year. There is on it a good brick dwelling house, with extension kitchen, and stone basement. It is heated by a furnace, and has all the necessary ice-houses, etc., to constitute a fine dairy farm. Water is supplied by windmills to all the stables, and is also brought to the house by pipes. The situation of the farm is an ideal one for summer resort, the boating facilities being exceptionally good. Any one desirous of securing a model farm, or a comfortable summer house, should see this property before purchasing elsewhere. It is situated at easy distance from Montreal, a train leaving Viger Station at 5 p.m. arrives opposite the residence at 9.15 p.m., where lodgings will be willingly given over night to prospective purchasers. Also for sale 300 acres pasture and timber land. Address Wm. Morrison, Weir P. O., Quebec. 137 6 law

ASQUITH MOBBED BY SUFFRAGISTS

ONE CARRIED A WHIP

Riot Occurred in Which Socialists and Roughs Took Part.

London, June 16.—The women suffrage agitators have carried out their threat to "make things Manchesterish here" when Mr. H. Asquith, Chancellor of the Exchequer, on the occasion of his delivering a political speech at Northampton. The demonstration, however, ended in the discomfiture of the agitators after a four-hour tussle. The police had, however, to eventually protect Mr. Asquith from the violence of a street mob. The Chancellor had hardly begun his speech when three notorious "suffragettes," Messrs. Kenny and Billington, and Mrs. Ravood, were among the crowded seats allotted to women, screaming denunciations at the Minister as the chief Ministerial opponent of their claims, and making the usual demand for votes. The hall was instantly in an uproar. The bulk of the audience shouted, "Turn them out." Stewards rushed to remove the women, but the "suffragettes" shrieked above the din, and waved flags inscribed, "Votes for Women."

USED WHIP ON STEWARDS.

These were snatched by women around the demonstrators, and after a desperate struggle were torn to pieces. Meanwhile the stewards reached the disturbers, but they no sooner landed their hands on Miss Billington than she drew a short whip from beneath her cloak and lashed wildly at the men. Three of them, however, seized her, and fighting like a tiger she was hundled down the steps screaming. Her companions remained shouting. More men hastened to put them out and with the help of other women who are not "Suffragettes," they were hoisted up on the shoulders of the men and hundled out, struggling and shrieking. As soon as they were gone a party of Socialists in the body of the hall started an uproar on behalf of the ejected women. It took longer to deal with these and the uproar and struggle lasted for half an hour.

MISS BILLINGTON EJECTED.

Mr. Asquith then began to speak again, but he had hardly started when Mrs. Parkhurst, another Suffragette came to the front of the women's gallery and started making demands. The audience was less tolerant of her than of her predecessors and her utterances were drowned in shouts of "Throw her out." The stewards ultimately ejected her and Mr. Asquith then delivered his speech, but meanwhile Miss Billington had stirred up a crowd of Socialists in the street to back her in attacking Mr. Asquith as he left the hall.

The news of the disturbance had spread and soon the Market square, which was the scene of the historic Bradlaugh riots, was filled with a mass of howling roughs, eager for a shindy. Extra police were hastily brought in from the suburbs. Their arrival and an opportune rainstorm thinned the crowd. A number of them however got into the hall. By the time Mr. Asquith had finished the police were strong enough to hold the mob, but Miss Billington and her supporters, desperately but vainly, tried to assault the Minister as he passed through a double line of policemen to his automobile, in which he was whizzed away amid a roar of jeers and groans.

INTERNATIONAL TENNIS.

Doherty Brothers Likely Winners Again This Year.

London, June 16.—The contest between the United States and Great Britain for the Dwight F. Davis international tennis challenge cup opened yesterday on the All-England tennis ground, at Wimbledon. Cold and threatening weather prevailed. Through the incapacitation of Reals C. Wright the Americans have admittedly uphill chances to play, especially in the doubles to-day. Owing to Wright's accident, the Doherty brothers are confidently expected to retain the cup here.

In the first match of the series Raymond D. Little, Americans, fell somewhat an easy prey to S. H. Smith, British, not scoring a single set. The American appeared to be nervous. Once or twice he rallied in good shape, but this did not last. His services was rather erratic. Smith had the best of matters throughout.

Ward subsequently met his fate at the hands of the British champion, H. L. Doherty, the later playing such a slashing game that the American did not win a set. Ward's game occasionally showed brilliancy, especially in the second set, but with the exception of this set Doherty always appeared to have the match in hand.

OTTO MAY BE DEPOSED.

Mad King of Bavaria to Be Replaced by Regent.

Vienna, June 16.—In well-informed quarters here it is considered probable that King Otto, of Bavaria, will soon be deposed. When Prince Regent Luitpold was in Vienna, recently he took part in a discussion in court circles as to the advisability of ending the absurdity of Bavaria being ruled in the name of an insane sovereign and of the Vienesse court communicating this view to the Bavarian government. Prince Luitpold, it is understood, was assured that both the German and the Austrian court circles approved the plan for some time actively discussed in Bavaria of making him King. A change in the Bavarian constitution, however, would be necessary before this could be done and it is doubtful if the Diet would assent to the project.

KING EDWARD MEETS THE LONGWORTHS.

London, June 13.—Seldom has the entertainment of the representative of any foreign Government attracted the attention of the social, diplomatic and political world more than did the dinner and reception given by Ambassador and Mrs. Reid at Dorchester House last night for Representative and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, and at which King Edward, by his presence and attention to President Roosevelt's daughter, marked his esteem for the United States, and the chief executive.

Park Lane, in the vicinity of Dorchester House, drew immense crowds as the carriages of distinguished guests passed through the fashionable thoroughfare to the residence which, since Mr. Reid took it a year ago, has welcomed the most famous Englishmen and visiting Americans and foreigners. In many respects, however, the gathering this evening was distinctive, for besides King Edward, who was attended by Lord Granard, Lord-in-waiting and Capt. Holford, equerry, and Mr. and Mrs. Longworth the company included Cabinet ministers, political leaders of both parties, diplomats and persons of prominence in English society.

At the dinner there were present to meet the King besides Mr. and Mrs. Longworth, Miss Reid, the Duke of Richmond and Gordon, the Duke and Duchess of Buccleuch, the Duke and Duchess of Marlborough, the Duke of Roxburghe, Lord and Lady Crewe, Lord Tweedmouth, Countess Grey, wife of the Governor-General of Canada, Lady Townley, wife of the secretary of the British Embassy at Washington; Lord and Lady Lansdowne, Lord [illegible], the French ambassador, and dean of the diplomatic corps, with Admiral Fournier, of the French navy; the Earl and Countess of Powis, the Earl and Countess of Rosebery, Lord Curzon of Kedleston, Mr. and Mrs. Jos Chamberlain, Sir John and Lady Lister-Kaye, the Countess of Yarborough, Mrs. Don Cameron, wife of the late Secretary of War of the United States, Mr. and Mrs. Ogden Mills, J. Ridley Carter, Secretary of the American Embassy and Delancy Jay, private secretary to Ambassador Reid.

THE COMMISSION

Searching Examination Into the Affairs of the North American Life—A Highly Satisfactory Showing—Company Never Held Any Unauthorized Security.

On the opening of the Sitting of Monday, May 21st, Mr. L. Goldman, Managing Director of the North American Life Assurance Company, was first called to the witness chair. Insurance men have had every reason to be proud of the appearance their leading men have made before the public in the trying position of the "Examiner." It requires a good combination of sound qualities to answer in the right way a constant succession of questions for several days at a time. Mr. Goldman deserves the thanks of all concerned for his testimony, and the way it was given. Every reply showed his complete grasp of the subject, and his appreciation of the important work the Commission is doing.

The Company was chartered in 1899, and began business in 1901 with Hon. Alexander Mackenzie as President and William McCabe as Managing Director. Mr. Goldman was the first Secretary, leaving the Confederation, in which he had seven years' experience as an Accountant. He succeeded to the Managing Directorship of the North American Life in April, 1903, on the death of Mr. McCabe. The Company was first called "North American Mutual," but this was changed after a year to the present name. There was a Guarantee Fund of $100,000 subscribed, later increased to $300,000. Of this $5,000 had been paid up, and on this paid-up amount a dividend of 10 per cent. has been paid for fourteen years past. The shareholders have never received more in any shape than this 10 per cent. The policyholders have voting rights—one vote for each $1,000 of participating insurance.

Before the day closed Mr. Shepley led the witness to a discussion of the cost of procuring business. Mr. Goldman admitted the heavy cost, and said that it was due largest to the practice of rebating by agents, a practice which he condemned, but which he saw no practical means of stopping under our present law. The rebating system tended to perpetuate the persistency of business, and so increase the debit against new business.

On Tuesday came up the question of investments, which has been the principal theme of attack by critics of the Company, it being constantly alleged that the Company has greater foreign securities than are allowed by the law. Mr. Goldman made it clear that the Company had never defied the Insurance Department, as so many critics have said, but that whenever the Department had given a clear ruling, the Company had carried it out. In every case the Company had acted upon legal advice, and had done only what it believed it had a perfect right to do. The removal of $227,000 of Halifax Bonds to Albany to form part of the reserve provided for under the law of New York had made those bonds a "foreign" security, according to the contention thus far put forth by the Department. Except for these Halifax bonds, the Company was very little over its margin of power to invest in foreign securities. Mr. Goldman showed his own complete consistency in the matter by saying that he personally regarded Sao Paulo bonds as a foreign security, but had been almost three years getting a ruling from the Department on the point—not, he believed, because of any delay on the part of Superintendent Fitzgerald or his officers, but because the matter had to be referred to the Department of Justice.

Later on, in connection with the subject of investments, Mr. Goldman said that in his opinion any changes in the law on this point should emanate from the Insurance Department, whose officers had had experience which would enable them to judge in what way, if any, the Company should be restricted. Personally he believed that our law should strike the golden mean between the extreme of restriction under the new Armstrong laws in New York State, and the extreme freedom allowed in Great Britain. He believed that public service corporations, like electric railway companies, gas companies, and so on, and which were paying concerns, should come within the range of investment powers of life insurance companies. Canadian companies should be given power to invest in such securities in the United States.

Replying to the people who dogmatized about the need of "safe" investments for insurance companies, he pointed out that even British Consols, supposed to be the best of all gilt-edged securities, had slumped in recent years in so much that the Equitable of Great Britain had to write off £92,000 for depreciation, mostly in Consols, and the Life Association of Scotland had been obliged to pass its dividends because of losses largely on the same securities.

Mr. Hellmuth's examination of the witness, which was brief, seemed designed to show that the profit-sharing system benefited the rich man at the expense of the poor, a position that Mr. Goldman would not agree to. He pointed out that no man was obliged to take a policy he did not want, and that policies, large or small, held by rich or poor, were under the same administration.

Mr. D. E. Kilgour, M.A., A.I.A., the Company's Actuary, proved an excellent witness, and gave much and interesting information pertaining to the Actuarial Department of the Company—"Office and Field."

It is well to mention that while the profits paid under investment policies have fallen short of the estimates given out many years ago, and this applies to all companies issuing that form of contract, yet the North American Life has done as well for its policy-holders under Deferred Dividend policies as the leading companies on this Continent.

MR. A. R. M'DONELL ON THE STAND

The Macdonald-Russell case occupied the attention of the court, for but a short time yesterday afternoon. The only witness heard was the plaintiff, Mr. A. R. Macdonell.

He said that Mr. David Russell had spoken to him in regard to disposing of Caledonia water otherwise than by the two bottling concerns to be built, one at Toronto and the other at Montreal. Later on he mentioned other means and he spoke of selling the property. It was in the spring of 1905 that he learned that there had been no profit made at the hotel the year before.

It was in January, 1904, that he was first interviewed by Mr. Russell in reference to the purchasing of stock. He had been to Caledonia Springs but once and that was with Mr. Macmaster, his legal adviser. He discussed the matter with Mr. Russell as a business investment, and Mr. Russell told him of the proposal to build a big hotel, etc., and from his description he thought it would be a good thing.

Mr. Russell talked of enlarging the hotel, having a sanitarium and pleasure grounds, and argued that by advertising it thoroughly it would no doubt be a paying affair. The general scheme was presented with a rosy color, said the witness.

Witness first saw the prospectus in Mr. Russell's office, but he did not think that he questioned Mr. Russell about it, at least he did not remember asking him any particulars.

The case was adjourned until Monday morning.

THE MACDONELL - RUSSELL CASE.—The plaintiff and defendant in court.

SOME VERY GOOD TROTTING YESTERDAY

A Six Heat Race Was the Feature of the Meeting at Delorimier Park.

Warm weather, with a slight breeze blowing, and a track that was in fine condition after several days of exposure to a strong sun, were the accompaniments of the fifth performance at Delorimier Park. Over one thousand people were present and they were rewarded by the sight of some close and exciting finishes.

The feature of the afternoon was the 2.25 class trot. Six heats were needed to reach a decision, as Graham and Major Henry were very evenly matched. Graham succeeded in getting away with the first two heats, taking and holding the lead from the start. Major Henry got only a third and a second did those heats. In the third heat however, the tables were turned, Graham running a close second to Major Henry's first.

When the fourth heat was reached the betting was very even, and the supporters of both horses seemed at a loss as to the probable result. The crowd were wildly excited, as the horses made a clean start, running neck and neck for the first round. In the second round Major Henry took the lead. But when the stretch was reached Graham, with a fine dash, managed to reach the leader, but could not pass him, and amid the enthusiasm of the spectators, both horses passed under the wire nose and nose. The next two heats were easy money for Major Henry, who thus won the race.

In the 2.19 pace Nettie Wright won three heats straight without any difficulty. R. & R. came second.

MEMBERS WANT PASSES.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Ottawa, June 16.—A movement is said to be on foot among members of the Parliament to make electric railways holding a federal charter carry them free of charge. The railway act of 1903 states in its interpretation clause that a railway means any railway which a company has power to construct. Several railway and legal experts of the Commons are of the opinion that electric railways come under this definition, and that those with federal charters must comply with the clause which states that: "The company shall furnish free transportation upon any of its trains for members of the Senate or the House of Commons of Canada with their baggage." The matter, it is said, will be brought to a head at an early date by a question to Hon. A. B. Aylesworth, Minister of Justice.

FOR GAELIC LEAGUE.

Dr. Douglas Hyde Raised Large Sum in America.

New York, June 16.—Dr. Douglas Hyde, president of the Gaelic League in Ireland, and Mrs. Hyde sailed for their home in Ireland yesterday, on the White Star Liner Celtic. Dr. Hyde took back with him a cheque for $50,000 to aid the cause of the Gaelic League in Ireland. This sum was raised at the public meetings which Dr. Hyde addressed during his seven months' visit.

WRESTLING GAME IN OLD ENGLAND

Madralli Has Been Twice Beaten In Straight Work and Hackenschmidt Stands Alone.

London, June 16. So far as England is concerned wrestling for the season of 1905 and 1906 may be said to have closed with the match at the Olympia between Hackenschmidt and Madralli. The Russian now stands out by himself, head and shoulders above all rivals. For years he has held sway as a Graeco-Roman wrestler, and now he has set the seal on his fame by defeating, in the easiest manner possible, the man who was supposed to have no equal under the more popular code known as catch-as-catch-can. Hackenschmidt has no need to pay attention to the barks and whines of the small fry, men who will be only too pleased to take the mat with the Russian for the sake of the advertisement, and the losing end of the purse, that would cover the loss of the stake. He can afford to ignore the challenges that will no doubt sooner or later be hurled his way, for he has proved beyond a doubt his superiority as regards both skill and strength.

Seeing as Madralli was in the business, interest in the sport was sustained. The Turk, however, has fallen, and that too, in no uncertain manner. He was beaten at Olympia in a fair and square match, and in a fair and square manner, and all the bellowing of the few behind him will not make the public think otherwise. It is easy to talk on matches in private, in cellar or cock-loft, when the challenger knows the odds are a million to one against an acceptance of such a wild and absurd offer. Madralli has fallen for the second time, and his greatest admirer cannot in his heart believe that he has gone down unfairly. With the Turk off the map, as it were, Hackenschmidt stands out alone, and, until the Russian is confronted by a man who has just claims to throw down the gauntlet, match wrestling looks like having a rest—anyway for some months to come.

Soon Followed Sister In Death.

Mrs. St. Germain, 71 years of age, died suddenly yesterday afternoon, at 412 East Dorchester street. She came to the city a few days ago from St. Jerome to attend the funeral of her sister. She had not been feeling well since, and retired to her room early yesterday afternoon to have a rest. She was found dead an hour later.

Mr. Thomas Fyshe Knocked Down.

Mr. Thomas Fyshe, former manager of the Merchants' Bank, was knocked down by careless cabman, on St. James street yesterday afternoon. Fortunately he escaped with a shaking up and a few bruises.

Wheel Meet at Waterloo.

There will be a great bicycle meet and races at Waterloo, Ontario, on the second of July.

Many of the old timers who have been before at Waterloo on similar occasions will take part. Mr. Louis Rubenstein has been asked to act as referee, and any information desired will be gladly furnished by Mr. Clayton Wells, Waterloo.

A Coming Attraction.

The Grand Trunk Railway System Exhibit Car which has just concluded a most successful trip of three months, through a portion of the United States, is now visiting some of the principal towns and cities along the main line of the Grand Trunk. It will be open for the inspection of visitors at the Bonaventure Station, Montreal, on Monday and Tuesday, June 18th and 19th, between the hours of 9.00 a.m. and 9.00 p.m.

All who can make it convenient should not miss this opportunity of seeing a novel and instructive art gallery on wheels, in which is found an extensive collection of large photographic prints depicting scenes in the many famous summer resort districts reached by this up-to-date railroad. The special features of the car are interesting to the tourist, sportsman and angler. Magnificent specimens of mounted fish and game are included in the exhibit.

Special Notice.

Everything that can be done to improve the land is being carried out at Northmount. Good roads, sidewalks, avenues of trees, etc., are among them. Every dollar spent this way renders the property more valuable, and increases the price. You will not be able to buy at the present prices for long. E. Gobier & Co., 71 St. James street.

PRESIDENT TAYLOR OF EASTERN LEAGUE

He Arrived In Town This Morning and Thinks Montrealers Should Feel Encouraged.

President Taylor, of the Eastern Baseball League, arrived in this city this morning from Buffalo. He proceeded at once to the Windsor Hotel, where he was met by Mr. McCafferty, manager of the Montreal Baseball tea, and Mr. Walter Hagar. Speaking of the prospects of the different clubs in the Eastern League, Mr. Taylor said to a Star representative that in his opinion the teams in the league were all playing good ball, and that at present any of them, even the tail-enders, had a fair chance of coming out on top. It was still too early to be able to make predictions about the standing of any of the clubs. "What do you think about the Montreal team and their chances?" was asked. "I think their chances are very good," he replied. "Of course, they are somewhat handicapped now, and so far have not had a very great success. But they have played good games, and their present position which is rather near the end of the line, is largely due to bad luck.

THEIR LUCK MAY CHANGE.

It may be that their luck will change, and that even in the near future they will rise to a good position in the league. In this connection, the tail-enders of the league are playing much better ball than they are given credit for. Toronto, for instance, has lost fifteen games by one run each, and, in fact, they might be called a one run team. Of course, this does not alter their place at the end of the line, but it goes to show that they are not in point of good playing, very much below teams that have better place, and with good luck they might easily forge to the front. In the matter of hitting, Montreal's team is especially good, and their pitching, too, is excellent. The only explanation I can give of their low position in the league is simply—hoodoo."

THE ROCHESTER GAME.

Mr. Taylor was also asked about the famous game with Rochester, which was forfeited by Montreal on account of their late arrival on the field because of an accident to their 'bus. The game was played, nevertheless, and won by Montreal. It is in some parts of the country put to the Royals' credit, while in others Rochester is regarded as the winner.

"It is an unfortunate occurrence," Mr. Taylor said, "but the umpire only acted in accordance with the rules of the league, which are quite clear on this point. It would be the same if it were a train wreck. Montreal was late by the small margin of four minutes, but that was sufficient, according to the rules. The whole question, however, has been referred to the directors of the league, and will be decided by them. What the result will be it is very difficult to say. The umpire himself expressed regret to me over the occurrence and the necessity under which he lay of declaring the game forfeited. Montreal has good reasons to back its plea, and it may very well be that the directors will see things in that light."

STAYS HERE TO-MORROW.

Mr. Taylor will remain in Montreal till to-morrow evening. It is the first time he has been in Montreal, and he expressed enthusiastic appreciation of what he had so far seen of the city.

Kipling and "The Wall."

In the June number of McClure's, Rudyard Kipling continues the adventures of the young centurions Parnesius and Pertinax in the second story of the series entitled "On the Great Wall." The illustrations by Andre Castaigne add considerably to the charm of the narrative. Below is the description of the great wall of Hadrian:

"Just when you think you are at the world's end, you see a smoke from east to west as far as the eye can turn, and then, under it, also as far as the eye can stretch, houses and temples, shops and theatres, barracks and granaries, trickling along like dice behind, always behind, one long, low rising and falling, and hiding and showing line of towers. And that is the Wall!"

"Ah!" said the children together.

"You may well," said Parnesius. "Old men who have followed the eagles since boyhood, say nothing in the Empire is more wonderful than first sight of the Wall!"

"Is it just a Wall? Like the one 'round our garden?" said Dan.

"No, no! It is the Wall. Along the top are towers and guard-houses, small towers between. Even on the narrowest part of it three men with shields can walk abreast, from guard-house to guard-house. A little curtain wall, no higher than a man's neck, runs along the top of the thick wall, so that from a distance you see the heads of the sentries sliding back and forth like beads. Thirty feet high is the Wall, and on the Picts' side, the north, is a ditch, strewn with blades of old swords and spear-heads set in wood, and tires of wheels joined by chains. The Little People come there to steal iron for their arrowheads.

"But the wall itself is not more wonderful than the town behind it. Long ago there were great ramparts and ditches on the south side, and no one was allowed to build there. Now the ramparts are partly pulled down and built over, from end to end of the Wall, making a thin town eighty miles long. Think of it! One roaring, rioting, cock-fighting, wolf-baiting, horse-racing town, from Ituna on the west to Segedunum on the cold eastern beach! On one side, heather woods and ruins where Picts hide; and on the other, a vast town—long like a snake and wicked like a snake—a snake basking beside a warm wall."

English Conservatism.

It is like the philosopher's stone, Hyperborea, the Greek Kalends, and Mrs. Harris:—let us say, and be done with it, that, except in domestic drama, there is no English reserve. It is a fiction, a superstition, a sawdust dolly. As in every stage of the world school girls are fond of remarking impressively: "I have a sad face, when I am not smiling!" and get believed or, little or no evidence, so some primeval Briton must have slapped his brawny chest announcing that bottomless depths of unparaded passion lay within; and he has had all society, all rumor, and all legendry take him at his word.

Let us beware lest what we call reserve be only ignorance of the science of expression. It is to be noted that though expression is an accident it has great reflex power. Personality waxes or wanes according to the measure of free play self-accorded or self-denied.

Until you learn some expression in speech, in art, in conduct, you can accumulate but very little to express. Neglect of expression means atrophy for any human qualities in question. The person who never "gushes," if commended as such, and worth her salt, or his salt, should be a person capable of the most rank redundance of emotional language. Then only does that abstinent tongue become worthy of our golden negative praise. The authentic exponent of "the quiet life" should be one who, if he chose, could revel with native gusto all day long in spangled purple, and all night in a spectacular limelight. It is a minor treason, however, of the common people, to attribute "governance of blood" to many characters wholly devoid of strong feelings or of masterful energies. The average Englishman, certainly is still; and he is so not because he is a paragon of restraint, but because spiritual inertness is the basis of his being.

NUMEROUS SOCIAL AND ECONOMIC REFORMS.

French Cabinet's Declaration of Policy Read in the Chambers.

Paris, June 13.—The Cabinet's declaration of policy was read in the Senate and Chamber of Deputies yesterday. It provides for numerous social and economic reforms, including an income tax, workingmen's pensions and a reduction of the hours of labor. It says that the Government intends to carry out with firmness, but without reprisals, the law providing for the separation of Church and State, and to introduce a general amnesty measure covering strike and religious offenders.

Concerning the movement to be undertaken at The Hague peace conference to reduce the navies of the powers the declaration says:—

"While continuing its entire confidence in the army and navy, France hopes that the nations will gradually recognize right as a basis for the solution of international differences, until universal opinion permits the nations to decrease the weight of their military expenses."

M. Poincare, the Minister of Finance, attended the Cabinet Council, thus disposing of the report that he had tendered his resignation.

M. Jaures, on behalf of the Socialists, attacked M. Clemenceau's suppression of the strike movement, and called the Government's action a violation of the liberty of workingmen. He also declared that his party favored the expropriation of capital.

According to the Berlin correspondent of the London Telegraph, a local journeyman mason, named Baumgartner, has been sentenced to three months' imprisonment for throwing obloquy on the name of Martin Luther and the doctrines with which the reformer is associated. Playing with Luther's name, he called him a "Luder," an abominable person. The extraordinary sentence is interesting, adds the correspondent, in that it was passed by a Roman Catholic court on the prisoner.

WEAK, PUNY MEN

Try This Cure

It is is no longer an experiment. It is hailed by thousands with loud praise because it cured them. "It cured me. I am well and strong as ever. What more could one ask?" writes a man with a heart full of gratitude.

Do not be in error. This grand appliance is like no other. It is new. It has all the good points that are known in electricity. It gives a powerful current but does not burn or blister, because my special cushion electrodes make the current a warm, gentle glow, which exhilarates and relieves at once.

Dr. McLaughlin's Electric Belt

has made thousands of home happy. It is as good for women as for men. Man and wife can use the same Belt. The regulator makes it strong or mild to suit the wearer. It is the only Electric Belt in the world that can be regulated while on the body. You feel the power, but it does not burn and blister, as do the old style bare metal electrode Belts. If you are weak or in pain, it will cure you. Will you try it?

CURED OF DRAINS, PAINS AND KIDNEY TROUBLE.

Dr. McLaughlin, Lachine Locks, Que., April 2, 1906

Dear Sir,—It gives me much pleasure to state that your Belt has done me an invaluable amount of good. It has cured me of those deadly drains, also pains and kidney trouble. I will heartily recommend your Belt to any one whenever I get a chance. Wishing you every success in your good work, I remain, yours sincerely, GEORGE DUNCAN.

You have been selling the readers of this paper what my Belt will do. If you don't believe me, write to me, I will furnish you with the names of thousands of people, old men, who, out of gratitude will write you. They will tell you just what they have told me. It has no equal. They feel as hearty and as youthful as they did at eighteen.

How often that is said by men who have been cured of Nervous Debility by the Dr. McLaughlin Electric Belt! They are all every day. Men who have been weak, gloomy, irresolute, and who had no confidence in themselves at all are now holding up their heads in pride, with the knowledge that perfect strength is restored, that they are as good as any men that walk and better than any man of their size. You know you are weak now, and wish you could say that you were as good as any man of your size. You can if you will use this grand invigorator. The proposition I make is a fair one, and should remove all doubt as to its ability to cure all forms of weakness in men and women.

I HAVE AN ELECTRIC BELT THAT DOES CURE, and I am offering it to you in such a way that you take no chances whatever. Give me your name and address, with a statement of your case, and I will at once arrange a Belt suitable for your case, and

Some of the things I can cure are: Debility of any organ of the body, decay of youthful vigor and every evidence of weakness of kidneys, stomach, liver, rheumatic pains, poor circulation, constipation, and general ill-health.

I can give you the name of a man in your town that I have cured, I don't care where you are. Tell me and I'll give you his name, and you can ask him about me.

A VERY, VERY SAD AFFAIR OUT AT THE BALL YARD

Mr. Bannon's Athletes Were Downed 7 to 2 and to Add to the Joy of the Event Two Performers Pulled Off a Neat Little Scrap.

A vast throng to the number of about 500 went out to the ball yard yesterday and viewed a very sad affair.

What Toronto did to the J. Bannon's was in wholesale lots. The score was 7 to 2, but statistics fail to do justice.

To relieve their pent up emotions some of the more energetic of the onlookers went out and threw anything that was handy at the western pirates as they departed for the hotel.

Montreal fans rarely assault visiting ball players after the game with bombs, nitro-glycerine, rocks and other harmless missiles, but in other cities the spirit of anarchism is abroad and frequently we hear of visiting ball players being bodyguarded to the hotel by the police and cavalry detachments from the regular army.

There was a sad affair of assault and battery some time ago, and the case is duly set forth in Mr. Charles Dryden's personal reminiscences of war and baseball.

The New York Nationals were departing from the Philadelphia grounds after a stormy session and the world beaters got into cabs.

Mr. Bowerman, the New York catcher was sitting calmly in his vehicle when some bright young thug tip-toed up behind him making a noise like considerable silence. Mr. Bowerman heard him not.

The assaulter lifted Mr. Bowerman's cap, cracked him on the coco with a ginger beer bottle, hung the cap on the lump that had been raised by the blow and slunk back into the crowd.

It was a neat piece of work.

The year Montreal won the championship (great year that) Buffalo played a double header here to wind up a very hilarious season.

Montreal used to win from 28 to 30 games at a stretch in those piping times, and suddenly Buffalo came along and trimmed us.

Aroused to madness at the unexpected sight, the fans departed quickly at the close of the affair and gathered ammunition to await the appearance of the Buffalo gentlemen flushed with victory.

The visitors, blissfully unconscious that they were so near to a Vesuvius affair, got in and also on top of the 'bus.

When everything was ready the firing began, and the crowd swept the decks.

They shattered every window in the 'bus, knocked two players off the top, and one man was arrested by the angry police in the act of trying to bite a Buffalo player through the boot.

When our sporting blood gets roused in this calm and peaceful town there is no stopping us.

THE WONDERFUL MR. THONEY.

The disaster yesterday was due largely to the wonderful stunts performed by Mr. Thoney, of Toronto. He was a busy boy.

Mr. Thoney was up five times, and peeled off three singles and a triple against the advertising literature on the left field fence.

In addition to that, Mr. Thoney ran bases like a deer, made catches entrancing to behold, and had the limelight trained on him at all stages.

Thoney is the fastest man in the Eastern League and why he did not enter for the Marathon event at Athens, or use the Stadium to hurdle over, is a mystery to all lovers of athletics.

Mr. Thoney and his pals on the same pay roll used up two of our esteemed pitchers, Messrs. Mattern and Whalen.

Between the bunch of them they poled out 14 stinging swats, and nothing that our hurlers had in their curve repertoire was too puzzling for the merry gang from the wooly west. They were next to everything.

And to make matters worse a Mr. Meek, the Toronto first baseman, not contented with killing off two good pitchers and winning the game, went over to short stop, and, fiend that he is, hit our Mr. Hartman a swift biff in the eye.

Nobody knows exactly how the horrible feud started, but there was a play at second, and Hartman and Meek got tangled up in it.

Both fell to the fruitful soil together, and in trying to separate themselves, it was found that Mr. Hartman had a boot in Mr. Meek's mouth, and Mr. Meek's shapely limbs were curled around Mr. Hartman's neck.

This seemed to be a friendly tangle, but not so.

Upon being pried apart, Mr. Meek arose, counted his legs to see if any were missing, and then went at Mr. Hartman with a few motions made popular by the late Mr. Robert Fitzsimmons.

Mr. Meek is about four sizes larger than Mr. Hartman, and is said to carry a knock-out punch with every wallop.

He landed twice on the finely chiselled features of Mr. Hartman, and produced a few minor changes in the contour of his good looks.

Mr. Hartman responded with a couple of highly creditable thumps, when the merry scrappers were separated by the friends of law, order and decency.

The Ump. ran up, gave two majestic sweeps of his mighty arm, and banished the pugilists from the game.

Then the non-combatants gathered at the scene of strife and engaged in a horrible war of words.

The stand could not hear the debate, but it was full of sparks. Mr. J. Bannon spoke freely, and Mr. White responded on behalf of the opposition.

Meantime Mr. Meek and Mr. Hartman glared at one another from a safe distance, and Mr. Hartman described the disaster that would overcome Mr. Meek if his big brother was only around.

INVESTIGATE THE PEANUTS.

In addition to this pleasing scene there was a great performance in the first innings.

Matern whipped the ball to second base and caught Thoney napping.

Thoney danced up and down between second and third and the whole Montreal team joined in the chase.

Thoney is a cool performer. His foot work was all to the beautiful. Half a dozen times he was within an ace of being caught and at last, after the longest chase of its kind ever seen at the ball yard, Hartman had the ball too long, and the Toronto sprinter got back to second safe and sound.

It was a punk piece of work, viewed from a local standpoint, and costly, too, for Mr. Yancey followed with a single and Thoney crossed the plate.

Toronto stole bases at will during the event, and to add to the horror of the affair, the Ump's lamps went out and he handed the enemy a run by going blind on a home plate decision.

One steady consumer of this popular vegetable dipped his hand into a bag and drew out a piece of rope.

After he gets through with the Chicago packers, President Roosevelt should investigate the peanut graft.

It's the limit in food adulteration when we are asked to substitute rope for peanuts in our daily diet.

Buffalo Braced Yesterday.

Buffalo, June 16.—The Bronchos of Rochester have been having great fun with the Buffalos for the past week owing to the fact that the local players did not get along well together, and two or three threatened to go to the outlaw league. Matters were amicably arranged all round Thursday, and yesterday the visitors found themselves up against the real thing, for the Bisons played championship ball and never allowed the Bronchos to get beyond second base. Brett pitched winning ball, while on the other hand McLean was easy picking, and Walters, who relieved the first twirler, fared little better. Murray's hitting was the feature. Score:

M.A.A.A. SPRING HANDICAPS.

They Will Be Held Next Saturday Afternoon.

The annual spring handicap meeting of the M.A.A.A. will be held on the grounds next Saturday, 23rd inst., and from all appearances it will be a well attended meeting of local athletes.

Entries will be taken up to 9 p.m. on Wednesday, 20th inst.

The programme will consist of the following events:—

100 yards run.
220 yards run.
440 yards run.
880 yards run.
One mile run.
Three miles run.
120 yards hurdles (3 ft. 6 in.).
220 yards hurdles (2 ft. 6 in.).
Running high jump.
Running broad jump.
Putting 16-lb. shot.
Throwing 56-lb. weight.

In addition to above there will be four junior races, open only to junior members of the M.A.A.A., and it is expected that about sixty of Mr. Long's boys will be on hand, and a number of the lads have been busy at the grounds training for these races.

A fine lot of prizes have been selected for all the events, which should induce a large number of M.A.A.A. members to compete.

To-night's Yachting Club Dance.

The first dance of the season will be given to-night at the Royal St. Lawrence Yacht Club, Dorval. Ratto's orchestra will play. Trains will leave Bonaventure Station at 6.15, 7.10 and 8 o'clock, returning at 10.30 via Grand Trunk, and 11.55 trolley from Lachine.

COMMENTS HERE AND THERE.

Now that trotting is in full blast again, the question of a speedway has come up once more and those of the better class of trotting horse owners claim that a speedway in the West End, built and maintained by the city, would be a great attraction to Montreal, the same as it is to other cities in America.

One well-known horse owner says:

"Montreal drivers own as many fast horses for a city of its size as any other place either in Canada or the United States. And it is principally in the winter time that we want to enjoy fast sleighing. It is almost an impossibility in the winter time to drive along the streets where there are car tracks, for the company lay so much sand and salt in their tracks that the roads become very bad, in fact, in many places dangerous, and as a result of this use of salt and sand many horses every year die or have to be shot from the results of the salt getting into their feet and developing into diseases.

"We have to pay $6 a year for having a horse and rig, besides our many other taxes, and we receive little consideration for it. The police parade Sherbrooke street, and if any one attempts to speed he is arrested and fined. There are very few towns in the States or Canada that cannot boast of either a speedway or a place to step. A man who invests a large amount of money in a fast horse just to have a little fun for the winter, will not derive very much from his investment at present."

Some years ago a body of horse owners started to make arrangements for a speedway west of Westmount, but for some reason the plan fell through.

THE NEW OTTAWA BASEBALL TEAM

It Is Expected That the New Northern League Will Do Some Great Business.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Ottawa, Ont., June 16.—Most of the players of the new Ottawa Northern League ball team have arrived in the city, and open the season to-morrow with an exhibition game against Nationals, one of the strongest clubs in the City League. The Ottawa team is composed mostly of players from the big American colleges, and their calibre can be judged when it is mentioned "Doc" Hildebrand, the ex-Princeton star, who pitched for Pittsburg last season, is included in the string of slab artists. The men have been working out on 'Varsity oval the past three days, and look capable of putting up a class of ball never before seen in the capital.

Organized ball was tried in Ottawa in 1898, when the franchise of the Rochester Club in the Eastern League was purchased and transferred here. The team was a good one, but poorly managed, and as a result the promoters lost several thousand dollars on the venture. Since then baseball has been a dead issue as far as a league team was concerned. But in the past year or two it has become so popular, local fans decided to try league ball again. The Northern League circuit includes: Montpelier, Barre, Plattsburg, Burlington and Rutland. The following players have been signed by Manager Daley, of the Ottawas:—Dorman (Georgetown University), Ray (University of Illinois), Durkee (Western League), Cox (Pacific Coast League), Hildebrand (Princeton University and Pittsburg), Ball (New England League), Murphy (Northern League), Rice, Sanger and Hobbs.

Polo Players at Practice.

A very good practice game was held on the polo field at St. Lambert those who took part being: Major Meighen, Capt. Macmillan (of the St. Johns Cavalry), Dr. Mignault, Messrs. Harry Robertson, G. A. Simard, F. Gaudmore, Victor Morin and Paul de Bellefroid. The latter played Mr. Beaudry's pony. Capt. Macmillan is leaving for camp, but will be back in a couple of weeks for the rest of the season. This year promises to be by far the best at the St. Lambert Polo Field. Work is quickly advancing on the draining of the practice field, where it will soon be possible to play every day, so that one field can be kept in perfect condition for the fall tournament, which is to be held here this year. Weather permitting, there will be a game this afternoon.

POLO IN EUROPE

London, June 16.—The arrival here of Foxhall Keene has made it possible to organize an American polo team to compete for the James Gordon Bennett Cup in Paris. The team which left London for Paris consists of Foxhall Keene, J. E. MacKay, J. P. Pierce and Craig Wadsworth. The contest will take place June 17.

At the annual meeting of the Valleyfield Boating Club, held last evening, it was decided to hold their annual regatta on July 21st. The usual good programme of races has been prepared and in addition the gasoline launch competiton promises to be specially interesting.

ITALIAN CUP ENTRY IS NOW ON THE WAY

Three Fiat and Two Itala Cars to Represent the Nation in Vanderbilt Race.

New York, June 16.—Nomination by the Automobile Club of Turin of a complete Italian team for the Vanderbilt Cup race on October 6 is on the way to this country by mail. This news was cabled yesterday to E. Rand Hollander, who was also apprised that he had been named as the Italian delegate in the Vanderbilt Cup Commission.

The Italian team consists of three Fiat and two Itala cars. The drivers of the former will be Lancia, Nazzaro and Dr. Wellischott, and of the latter Cagno and Fabry. It is said there will be few changes in the Fiat cars from those driven in the last cup race. Both makes will be of about 120 horse power.

The Fiat team will leave for America immediately following the Brescia Cup race on September 2. The letter from the Italian club, which was mailed June 9, contains a draft for the team entry of $5,000.

TRACY TO DRIVE IN CUP RACE.

New York, June 16.—News of great interest in connection with the Vanderbilt Cup race was learned yesterday. Several months ago it was reported that the Locomobile Company, whose car finished third in the last Vanderbilt race, would not be represented in the next cup event. Following this announcement, Joseph Tracy, who drove the Locomobile racer, was sought on behalf of half a dozen prospective entrants in the 1906 race.

The news comes from Bridgeport, Conn., that the Locomobile Company have constructed two machines, both duplicates of last year's racing car, for the eliminatory trial in the fall. The motors are to be of four cylinders each and will develop nearly a hundred and fifty horse power. Joseph Tracy is to drive one of the cars, and several drivers are now under consideration for the other car.

STALLION SOMERSAULTS.

Several Horses Go Down at London Trotting Races.

London, Ont., June 16.—The London trotting and pacing associations meet closed here with the standard of high class trotting and pacing well maintained throughout. The card uncovered a most promising youngster in W. B. Kitchen's Wilkes Medium, who tiptoed his field in each heat of the 2.27 race, through his first. This splendid stallion's performance was a feature of the day. In the second heat of the race Gladstone fell and turned a complete somersault, throwing Driver McGirr high in the air, but the horse and driver rose unhurt. A little later, in the race for three-year-old colts on the first score down, Sadie Bars went down and Independent Boy became tangled in the upturned sulkey. No injuries. In the 3-4 mile run, Bar Le Duc outstayed the game Fanny Blazes, who had the unusual impost of 129 pounds. The meeting in every way has been most successful. Weather fine, attendance 4,009.

Golf at Westmount.

A match takes place on Westmount links this afternoon between the Victoria Golf Country Club and the Westmount Club. As the clubs are playing thirty or more men each there will be considerable interest in the contest.

The committee of the Westmount Club ask that its members refrain from using the links as much as possible during the time of the match as they will be fully occupied by the players from both sides. There will probably be ample time after the match is over for any members who wish to play to do so.

THE CORNWALLS ARRIVE READY FOR THE BATTLE

Nationals Have Gone to Toronto to Meet the Torontos There This Afternoon—Montrealers Have Great Hopes of Success for To-day's Match.

Although the weather looked a little threatening early in the morning, the Montrealers and Cornwalls were both looking forward with great pleasure to to-day's match on the Montreal grounds.

Rain does not interfere with the Canadian National game as it does with other sports, and therefore a little rain will not spoil what ought to be a exceptionally good meeting.

Nationals Have Gone.

They are in pretty good condition and they are trying to-day to show that they can play as well from home as at home.

SMILES FROM THE OLDER YACHTSMEN

The Vigilant, Once Cup Defender and Now Yawl Rigged, Still Shows Much Speed.

New York, June 16.—In sailing for its spring cups yesterday the New York Yacht Club really began its racing season, and the result, though attended with drawbacks, was very satisfactory. The club one week ago gave a race for the one design class of 30-footers, but yesterday's regatta was open to all classes, and thus commenced the season—a season promising with important contests.

There were very good yachts in the starting fleet, in fact, some of the best in the club. Of the more noted were the schooners the Elmina, the Corona and the Invader. The latter was making her first appearance in a race and much interest was centred in her possible performance. Then the 70-footers, the Rainbow and the Yankee were there, and everybody was glad of it. More than that, the yawl Vigilant was sailing with them in a special race in addition to their own class contest, and this added to the pleasure and satisfaction of the occasion.

Since the days when Mr. Percy Chubb owned the Vigilant the yacht racing community has lost sight of the old cup defender. Mr. W. E. Iselin now owns her, and he means that she shall renew her youth and possibly have more winning marks against her dear old name. Many on the Sound yesterday saw her defeat the Valkyrie II back in 1893, then a sloop, and were positive that she still retains her fighting looks. She made the fastest time over the long course—twenty-eight and one-quarter miles—but wasn't quite nimble enough to win the special cup, the Rainbow beating her on corrected time, though the exact figures for this have not yet been given out by the committee.

Of the other performers the Neola and the Weetamoe, the sister bronze sloops, four years old, were much in evidence. The Neola has a new owner, one of the younger members of the club, and he means to be a racing yachtsman. He has courage and perseverance, and must succeed. The Weetamoe had not met her sister in racing dispute for two years, and the meeting was almost sensational, so much interest was attached to it.

STARRS OUT WITH CAPS.

He Is Expected to Strengthen the Capital Team.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Ottawa, June 16.—Billy Starrs has turned out with the Capitals, and will be played at centre throughout the season. Starrs' acquisition will greatly strengthen the Senators. As a fielder he is one of the very best in the business, being possessed of speed, brains and shooting ability. Capitals had a full turn-out at practice, the feature being Pete Green's coaching. President Foran, of the N.L.U., said Capitals would become an important factor in the league race, with the recent additions to the team. He anticipated a victory against the Tecumsehs on the 23rd, and believed the Capitals have an equal chance with the Shamrocks in Montreal on the 30th of this month.

TO-DAY'S BIG MATCH.

To-day, June 16, all interested in soccer football would spend their time well by attending the above game on the National ground.

Both teams are on the top of their form and it would be a difficult task to select the winner. Up to date neither team has lost a match. The Points (runners up, 1905), have defeated Y. M. C. A. (away), Rosemount (away), M. A. A. A. (home), and drawn with Valleyfield (home). The C. P. R. (champions, 1905) have defeated Rosemount (away) Y. M. C. A. (away), Westmount (home), Valleyfield (home). Every preparation is being made by the C. P. R. trainers, Marsh and Murphy, to place their men on the field in the height of condition, whilst President Kyle, of the Points, is personally seeing to the training of his men. It is anticipated that this match will prove one of the fastest, cleanest and most evenly contested games in Montreal.

INTERNATIONAL GRAND PRIX RACE

Will Not Be Very Interesting Because Neither England Nor America are Represented.

New York, June 16.—In spite of all talk this year's Grand Prix race, on June 26 and 27, will be nowhere near as interesting a contest as the past races for the International Cup. Neither England nor America will be represented in this year's race, leaving only Germany and Italy to dispute the title with France. Entries for the event closed last week with a total of thirty-four cars, all but nine of them representing France. The machines and their respective drivers are as follows:

Three Darracqs, Henery, Wagner and Henriot; three Panhards, Heath, Teste and Tart; three Brasiers, Harras; Lebrun and Barilier; three Dietrichs, Gabriel, Rougier and Duray; three Renaults, Sisz, Edmund and Richez; three Hotchkiss, Leblon, Shalleran and Mr. Elliot; E. Shepard; three Italas, Cagno, Grazziani and Fabry; three Fiats, Lancia, Nazzaro and Wellisshott; three Bayards-Clements, M. A. Clement, Villemain and Latrouboubre; three Mercedes, Janatzy Baron de Caters and Florio; two Gregories, Tacenaux and M. Civelli de Bosch; one Gobron, Rigolly; one Vulpes, Darrlaux.

There is some talk of establishing a Pari Mutuel betting adjunct to the Grand Prix race. Opinions, however, are divided for and against. One authority argues that Pari Mutuel betting would increase the attendance by fifty thousand, and it is said that the Automobile Club de France will ask permission from the Government to carry out this project.

De Dietrich—1, 14, 25.
Fiat—2, 15, 26.
Renault—3, 16, 27.

Beauty And Attractiveness of Bermuda Recognized by All Tourists

"Bermuda is the right country for a jaded man to loaf in. There are no harrassments; the deep peace and quiet of the country sink into one's body and bones, give his conscience a rest and chloroform the legion of invisible little devils that are always trying to whitewash his hair."

The above is a passage from one of Mark Twain's many works and is only one of dozens of complimentary things which that well known humorist and traveller has said of the lovely Bermudas.

Semi-tropical in character though lying only six hundred miles directly east of the State of North Carolina, these islands have a temperature which does not vary much over twenty degrees the year round; that is the mercury reaches eighty in the summer and rarely falls below sixty in the winter. It is a place of perpetual summer without any of the thousand little inconveniences which try a man's soul and temper in the tropics.

IMPERIAL TREASURES

The islands for two centuries have been treasured by England at first on account of their great productiveness, and latterly as an impregnable fortress. Millions of pounds sterling have been laid out in cutting roads and erecting and building the island forts, while nature has provided in the coral formation, unfailing drainage to every spot, rendering the islands far-famed for their healthfulness. The British Government has substituted an ocean cable, bringing these islands into telegraphic communication with all the world. The expediency of having cables and telegraphs where one goes for a holiday and a rest, is doubtful. However, one might arrange to have communicating friends slaughtered upon returning to the outside busy world.

The topography of the island as you approach on the steamship, shows to advantage. Yonder upon Gibbs' Hill—is the chief lighthouse, a shapely tower 130 feet in height, the hill itself being 245 feet above the sea.

CLARITY OF THE SEA

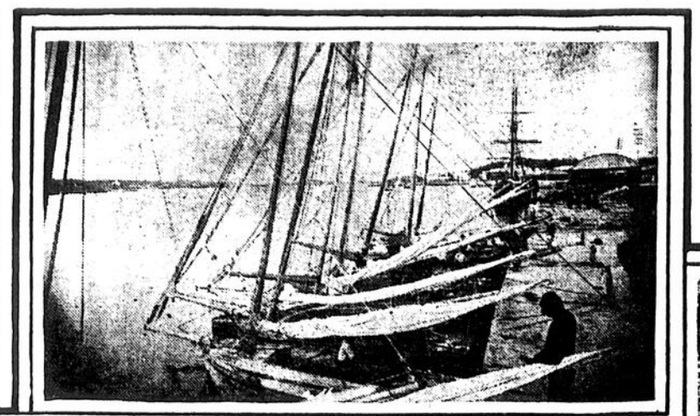
A stranger floating over the white shoals of a coral reef for the first time, will be wonder struck by the marvellous clearness of the sea water, and the strange effect of deception as to depth. Objects, which appear to reach nearly to the surface, are found to be so deep that the vessel passes safely over them. The sunlight reaches many fathoms down upon this vast submarine plane, displaying everything clearly to the gaze as the ship glides swiftly along. And then the color, that beautiful bewildering green; just the shade that one catches in the gleam of an opal or the tint of a milk-white. Painters have sought in vain to rival it with their pigments.

A thin but rich soil covers the hills, being deeper in the valleys from which the vegetation springs. All forms of vegetable life in these islands, as among tropic lands, derive their sustenance largely from the air. The raising of Easter lilies for exportation has since 1878 become a leading Bermuda industry. Some of the fields planted with lilies are thirty and forty acres in extent, and, when in blossom, present a sight strikingly beautiful.

A great point in favor of Bermuda is the absence of fresh water marshes. The porosity of the rock causes the absorption of rainfall at once. All the water used for domestic purposes is caught from the rainfall in reservoirs placed upon the hills or in tanks, with which all the houses are supplied.

FAMOUS LIGHTHOUSE

One of the most interesting excursions at Bermuda is the visit to Gibbs' Hill lighthouse. This was erected in 1845, and was at the time one of the first iron structures. The height of the gallery is 105 feet, and this is reached by a circular staircase inside the tower from which a magnificent view is obtained. For 22 feet from the ground the tower is filled with concrete, and for over 50 years it has maintained one of the largest and most powerful lights in the world. Every improvement which has been made during these years has been introduced by the Government. The lamp being 362 feet above high water is visible from the deck of approaching vessels for thirty miles.



FISHING FLEET

Bermuda has long been celebrated for the high educational standard of the natives and this is especially so when the colored population is compared with that of any other colored people in the world. There is a very liberal government allowance for schools.

Churches of many denominations are numerous and for many years those of the Church of England were directly assisted by the government, the vestries of each parish being authorized to levy taxes for the Church establishment. There are several branches of the Presbyterian, Methodist and Roman Catholic Churches, and others.

One of the standard attractions is the great dockyard at Ireland Island. A steam launch maintains regular services between Hamilton and this point. A large arsenal establishment and an extensive basin which will accommodate a whole fleet at anchor are found here.

Harrington Sound, a beautiful sailing lake of considerable length, having a very narrow outlet into the sea, is about five miles from Hamilton. Upon the northern shore of Harrington Sound are the famous Walsingham Caves, Paynter's Vale and Joyce's Dock, also a cave ornate with stalactites. Moore's storied calabash tree is found close to Walsingham. Neptune's Grotto, a natural well containing a great number of beautiful fish, is at the southeast corner of Harrington Sound. This is generally called the Devil's Hole, and is worthy of a visit. "Fairyland is an exquisite inlet, the banks of which are overgrown with mangrove bushes and many beautiful descriptions of aquatic plants. It may be reached either by land or boat, one mile from Hamilton. Such are a few of the many resorts of local note, which serve as objective points for delightful drives.

GEOLOGICAL MARVELS.

The caves at Bermuda are well worth a visit and a fuller description than can be attempted in such an outline account as this. A Stalagmite now in the museum of Edinburgh was taken from one of these caves, and geologists compute it must have taken six hundred thousand years to have attained its present size, at the ratio it grew during a period of 44 years while under examination. The Paget sand banks also afford much interest to the geologist. A close study shows whole hills of sand, apparently as firm as the mountains, but in fact undergoing general movement of the whole mass of millions of tons of these disintegrated parts, which threatens in future ages to envelope a considerable part of the island.

FEW PARTS OF THE EARTH ARE SO BEAUTIFUL AS JAVA

Singapore—We had not thought of visiting Java, but we heard so much of it from returning tourists as we journeyed through Japan, China and the Philippines that we turned aside from Singapore and devoted two weeks to a trip through the island. Steamers run to both Batavia (which is the capital and the metropolis of the western end of the island) and Soerabaja, the chief city of eastern Java, and a railroad about 400 miles long connects these two cities. A tour of the islands can thus be made in from 10 to 15 days, according to connections, but unless one is pressed for time, he can profitably employ a month or more in this little island, attractive by nature and made still more beautiful by the hands of man. There are excellent hotels at the principal stopping places, and the rates are more moderate than we have found elsewhere in the Orient.

The lover of mountain scenery finds much in Java to satisfy the eye. The railroad from Batavia to Soerabaja twice crosses the range, and as the trains run only in the daytime, one can, without leaving the cars, see every variety of tropical growth, from swamp to mountain top, from cocoanut groves and rice fields on the low land to the tea gardens and coffee plantations of the higher altitudes, not to speak of mountain streams, gorges and forests.

FULL OF VOLCANOES.

Java is the home of the volcano and contains more of these fiery reservoirs than any other equal area on the earth's surface. While only about 600 miles in length, and from 60 to 120 miles in width, it has, according to Wallace, 38 volcanoes, some of them still smoking, and all of them interesting relics of a period when the whole island was deluged with molten lava. Some assert that almost all of Java has been built up by the eruption of volcanoes. Two extinct volcanoes, Salak and Gedeh, can be seen from Buitenzorg, and from the top of Boro Boedoer temple nine volcanoes can be counted when the air is clear—at least, Groneman so declares in his description of this temple, although not so many were visible the day we visited there.

It is only 23 years ago that Krakatau, which stands upon an island of the same name in the Strait of Sunda, just off the east end of Java, startled the world with an eruption seldom equalled in history. It began smoking in May, 1883, and continued active until the 26th of August following, when explosions took place were heard at Batavia, 80 miles distant, and the next day the explosions were still more gigantic being audible 2,000 miles away. The loss of life caused by the mud and ashes and by the waves set in motion by the eruption was officially estimated at over 36,000. Various scientific societies especially of Holland, England and France, made exhaustive reports on the Krakatau eruption. The Royal Society of Great Britain estimated that the volume of smoke arose to a height of seventeen miles and that several cubic miles of mud, lava and stones poured forth from the crater to the ruin of a large area. At one place the water rose more than 75 feet and threw a steamship over the harborhead into a Chinese market, but under the influence of a tropical sun and abundant moisture the slopes of the volcano soon grew green again, and now the natives speed their skiffs through the adjacent waters and the inhabitants of this volcanic belt live and move with little thought of the mighty forces which have so often demonstrated their powers in the archipelago.

THE BOTANICAL GARDEN.

If one is interested in the study of trees, plants and flowers, he can employ himself indefinitely in the famous Botanical Garden in Buitenzorg. While Batavia is the nominal capital of Netherlands India, the governor general lives at Buitenzorg—a city built on a mountain slope 40 miles from Batavia, where an altitude of some 500 feet gives an average temperature of eight degrees below that of the seacoast. The Botanical Garden surrounds the palace, and for nearly a century the authorities have been collecting specimens of the flora of the tropics.

The present superintendent of the garden, Herr Wigman, is an enthusiast in his line, and we are indebted to him for a most enjoyable tour through the garden. The main entrance leads through an avenue of gigantic kanari trees, set some 40 feet apart and forming a verdant roof that entirely excludes the sun. The officials believe that they have made this the most attractive driveway in the world, and so far as my observation goes they are justified in their claim. Climbing vines of every variety have been trained upon these trees until their enormous trunks stand like so many columns draped in living green. One climbing vine, with a trunk one would mistake for a tree if it stood alone, has festooned a row of trees 300 feet long and is still reaching out for new conquests. Herr Wigman shows this monster vine with pardonable pride, but he has found on his visits to Europe that he could not give a truthful description of it without endangering his reputation for veracity.

We saw here, also, rattan vines of seemingly endless length, hanging from lofty limbs or coiling on the ground like a colony of serpents. A specialty has been made of orchids, as is evidenced by a collection of between two and three thousand varieties. Some of these are remarkable for their curious and variegated leaves, others for the beauty and delicacy of the flowers. We were shown three kinds of pitcher plants; one kind is fashioned like a rat trap, the tiny spines pointing downward so that the insect can enter but cannot escape until the flower withers; another drowns his victims in a syrup-like water, while a third poisons the unlucky prisoners lured into the recesses of the blossoms. Several plants growing on tree trunks have porous bulbs which seem to be designed for ant houses; at any rate the ants are always found in them. By an admirable reciprocity the ants pay their house rent by protecting the plants from other insects. (Some of the European nations have defended their occupation of oriental countries on the same theory, viz., that they give protection in exchange for a domicile, but there is no evidence that the ant lives on the plant, while colonialism is always a burden to the natives.)

In the Botanical Garden, as elsewhere in the island, are to be found all varieties of the palm—the royal palm, than which there is no more ornamental tree, the cocoanut palm, with its myriad uses, the sugar palm, the sago palm, the oil palm, the betelnut palm, which furnishes the Malay a substitute for chewing tobacco, the nipa palm, so helpful in building, the fan palm, etc., etc.

Nature has been prodigal in her gifts to the people of the tropics, and besides giving plant life in confusing abundance, her generosity is shown in a number of trees, each of which can be put to many uses. Reference was made to the bamboo in one of the articles on Japan, but the Javanese have not only the bamboo, but the palm as well, and from this one tree they could build their houses (though the bamboo is usually used for frames and floors because it is lighter, the trunk of the palm might be employed), and secure food, drink and light, and, in addition, a fermented liquor and a narcotic.

The lakes and pools of the Buitenzorg gardens teem with lotus and water lilies of many colors. One variety, brought from New Guinea, has blue flowers of various shades, and is as yet unknown in Europe and America. One water lily has enormous flat, circular leaves with the edges turned up like a pie pan. Some of these leaves are four feet in diameter; and an imaginative writer has pictured them as frying pans on which the natives bake hot cakes.

The papyrus, from which the ancient Egyptians made their paper, grows here, though it is no longer found in Egypt. Here, too, are flowering trees and shrubs of many kinds, one whose pods are so exactly like tallow candles that it is called the candle tree. But it would occupy more space than I have at my disposal to give an adequate description of the beauties of the garden with its mighty banyan trees, its waving palms, its graceful bamboos, its odorous sandalwood and tangled vines, its rose garden, its depth of shade and wealth of bloom, its upas tree (not deadly, however, as tradition has it, but quite innocent of any criminal intent), its winding ways and really moss-grown paths, and its secluded little cemetery, where rest those members of the families of the governors who died in the island. No wonder Buitenzorg is the Mecca of the botanist and the one spot never neglected by even the casual tourist in the island.

MANY RICE FIELDS.

Java reminds one of Japan in the appearance of its rice fields, its cultivated hills and its terraced mountain sides. Though the island is diminutive in area, containing a little less than 40,000 square miles, half of which is tillable, the land is so wisely used that it supports a population of 28,000,000. With so many mountains and with a rainfall amounting to ten feet per annum in some places, the island has, as might be expected, an abundance of springs and running streams, and these make possible a very perfect system of irrigation which has converted Java into a vast garden. Sugar is the chief export, followed by tea, coffee and copra, although rice is the product to which most attention is given. It is the chief article of food, and so much is required to support the dense population that its importance as a crop is not indicated by its place in the table of exports.

As a traveller is more impressed by the unusual things than by things with which he is familiar, one who visits Java immediately notices the numerous fruits peculiar to the island. They have, here, all of the fruits usually found in tropical countries, and several that are not found elsewhere. The pineapple grows in perfection and can be bought in he market for about a cent a piece. The Java orange is not equal in taste or variety to those of California or Florida, but the banana, of which there are more than 100 varieties, makes up for the deficiency. Mrs. Scidmore, in her book on Java, is authority for the statement that 4,000 pounds of banana will grow on the space required to produce 99 pounds of potatoes or 33 pounds of wheat; if her calculation is correct and the ratio of productiveness anything like the same in the case of other fruit, one can understand why the problem of living is so simplified in warm countries.

A fruit closely allied to our grapefruit is found here, a variety of which grows in China and Japan. The papaya, which we first tasted in Honolulu, the mango, whose season had passed in the Philippines, the sour Manila, and the durian are all to be bought in the market here. The last named fruit has succeeded in arraying into ardent friends and unsparing critics the tourists who have ventured to eat it. Some declare that it is delicious, while others cannot bear the taste, and all agree that the odor is exceedingly repulsive. It is rough-skinned, very large, sometimes weighing 10 or 15 pounds, and resembles in appearance both the bread fruit and the nangka.

Among the fruits which we have tasted for the first time the mangosteen and the rambutan are rivals in popularity. The first is a delicately flavored, orange-shaped morsel of pure white, encased in a thick hull of deep red. It melts in the mouth and leaves a memory of mingled flavors. Its fame has spread abroad, and there was for years a standing offer of £30 to anyone who would put Queen Victoria in possession of a ripe mangosteen, but it decays so quickly that not even ice will preserve it during a long sea voyage. The rambutan has not received as much praise as the mangosteen, but I am not sure but that it is superior for continuous use. The word rambutan means hairy, and the name was given to this fruit because it has a covering something like a chestnut burr, except that the so-called hairs are soft instead of spike-like. There is a variety of the rambutan which has a smoother covering, without the hair-like projections, and this is very appropriately called the kapoeassen (which means bald) rambutan. The usual covering is a bright crimson, but there are several different shades, and the trees present a very attractive appearance when laden with ripe fruit. The pulp of the rambutan resembles a pigeon's egg in size and shape, and contains a single seed. The flavor is half tart and half sweet, and recalls all the good things one has ever tasted.

Another Javanese fruit is the doekoe, which on the outside looks like an apricot, but is divided into sections like an orange and has a taste peculiarly its own. The jamboa, or Java apple, is conical in shape and has a white, waxy appearance. But enough has been said to indicate the variety of fruits exposed for sale on the street and peddled at railway stations. The natives usually carry an assortment of fruit as they go to or return from market, and the floor of the third-class railroad coaches is always littered with rinds and peelings. Verily, one can revel in fruits to his heart's content in Java.

A FORGOTTEN TEMPLE.

One of the most interesting days that we spent in Java was devoted to a trip to Boro Boedoer, the great Hindu temple near Djokpakarta. Leaving the through train at this station with the jaw-breaking name, we went by tram line about 20 miles and then drove six miles further. Near the temple the road crosses a ferry, the substantial bridge which once spanned the river there having been swept away, and when we reached this point we found the stream so swollen by recent rains that the natives were not willing to risk their boats in the angry flood. We returned to the tramway station and spent the night in the hospitable home of the Dutch stationmaster, the only white man in the town. Returning to the river early the next morning, we found that the waters had sufficiently subsided to enable us to cross, and we reached Boro Boedoer while yet the sun was low. And what a monument is Boro Boedoer to the zeal of the Buddhist priests, the skill of the Hindu architect and the patient industry of the Javanese! As a temple it is not surpassed, in labor expended upon its construction it is comparable with the pyramids, and in artistic skill displayed in design and execution, it is even superior to them.

According to archaeologists it was built about 1,200 years ago, when the Javanese were worshippers of Buddha, but the invasion of the Mohammedans of the fifteenth century was so complete that that stupendous pile was first neglected, then deserted and at last forgotten. It was so overgrown with trees and shrubbery that the Dutch traders were in the country for two centuries before its presence was discovered. When it was found and unearthed during the occupancy of the English under Sir Stamford Raffles in 1814, the people living in the vicinity were as much surprised as the foreigners, for all tradition of its existence had been lost. This seems hardly possible when it is remembered that the temple stands upon the summit of a mound, is 200 feet square at the base and towers to the height of 100 feet. The structure is pyramidal in form and rises in eight terraces, the first five being square and the last three circular. Each terrace has a wall at the outer edge, which, with the wall of the next succeeding terrace, forms a roofless gallery, either side of which is ornamented with bas reliefs descriptive of the life of Buddha. These carvings, if placed side by side would, it is estimated, extend for three miles, and the story which they tell has been interpreted by eminent archaeologists who have visited the place. These pictures in stone not only portray the rise and development of the great Indian teacher, but they preserve a record of the dress and customs of the people, the arms and implements used, and the fauna and flora of that time.

At the centre of each side there is a covered stairway leading to the summit, and there is evidence that the galleries were once separated from each other by doors. In the niches along the gallery walls there are 432 stone images of Buddha, life-size and seated on the ever-present lotus. On the three circular terraces there are 72 open-work bell-shaped structures, called dagabas, each containing a stone image of Buddha. Surmounting the temple is a great dagaba, 50 feet in diameter, and in it was found an unfinished statue of Buddha similar to those found on the various galleries.

As the stone employed in the construction of the temple was of a hard variety, the bas reliefs are well preserved. No mortar was used for cementing the stones and no columns or pillars were employed.

Besides Boro Boedoer there are hundreds of other temples scattered over the island. Within two miles of the elevation upon which the great temple stands there are two religious edifices, one, a shrine of exquisite proportions, restored in 1904, and another, a temple of considerable size, now being restored. As Branbanan, about 20 miles east of Djokpakarta, there is a large group of temples, scarcely less interesting than Boro Boedoer. One of the reports received by Sir Stamford Raffles describes this territory as the headquarters of Hinduism in Java, and the temples as "stupendous and finished specimens of human labor, and of the science and taste of ages long since forgot."

I must reserve for another article my observations upon the people and upon Dutch rule in the island, and will conclude this paper with the suggestion that Java should be included in a tour of the world, whether undertaken for instruction or pleasure, for few sections of the earth have been so blessed by the Creator's bounty, so beautified by the skill of the husbandman, or are so rich in ruins.

JAVA'S FAMOUS BOTANICAL GARDEN.

The J. W. Harris Excavator.

For the last few days large crowds of people have been attracted to the corner of Craig and St. Urbain streets, where the foundation for the new Montreal Light, Heat & Power Company's new building is being excavated to a depth of 19½ feet by one of the J. W. HARRIS EXCAVATING MACHINES.

This Machine will excavate to any depth required and dump the earth right into the carts, the operation does not take a minute.

The only difficulty experienced is that carts cannot be furnished quick enough to keep the machine going.

The excavation on Craig Street has now reached the bed of the old St. Pierre River, which years ago ran through where Craig Street is now.

These Machines are adapted for deep excavations for large buildings, railway construction and other work of that description, and will be great money makers for contractors, as one machine will do the work of 100 men.

By the use of these machines, a contractor can calculate exactly what labour will cost him.

This machine is operated by a sixteen horse-power engine, and can be moved from one position to another without any difficulty.

Experts who have seen the machine working, pronounce it the greatest labour-saver they ever saw and predict a great future for it as the demand for such a machine is unlimited.

BIGGEST CANDLE EVER MADE

Offered by Sicilian in Tampa in Gratitude for Husband's Recovery.

New York, June 16.—Rassale Dellacroce, a native of Sicily, was taken ill with rheumatism in his home in this city a year ago. His wife, Carmelo, prayed daily to her patron saint, St. Calogeria, and at last vowed to offer the largest candle ever manufactured should her husband recover. He moved to Tampa, Fla., and there regained his health. By Mrs. Dellacroce's order, the candle was shipped yesterday from a local store to Tampa.

Mrs. Dellacroce had vowed that the candle should weigh as much as her husband, and the one she ordered weighs 182 1-2 pounds. It is 15 feet high, 18 inches in diameter at the base and 12 inches at the top. Upon it is painted a picture of the Madonna and the Child.

The candle cost $250 and, according to the manufacturer it will burn for a year and a half. It will be lighted in a Tampa church next Saturday at the celebration of the feast of St. Calogeria.

After a struggle lasting several years, the respectable portion of the English community in Burma has succeeded in securing the passage of a law forbidding the employment of women as barmaids. The Lancet hopes that this example will be followed in England.

GRAND TRUNK TRAIN SERVICE.

Important Changes to Be Effective June 17.

The summer schedule of train service on the Grand Trunk Railway system will take effect on June 17th, with additional changes to take effect on June 24th. The principal features of the change on the 17th inst. that will effect eastern territory are as follows:

DECLARES HACKETT IS NOT THE MAN

Marie Anne Leduc is Positive in Exculpating the Prisoner.

MRS. HACKETT'S EVIDENCE.

Wife of Accused Corroborates Other Witnesses' Testimony in Support of an Alibi.

One witness at yesterday afternoon's session of the Court of King's Bench in the Hackett trial swore that Hackett was not the man that she had seen.

Marie Anne Leduc, who is one of the important witnesses for the defence, swore that the man she had seen pass in front of her home on Gault street, Cote St. Paul, on the afternoon of the third of April, was shorter and taller than Hackett, and that she could not make a mistake, as she had seen the man for at least five minutes.

He had passed by her door with a bundle, and had gone in the direction of the church, and when she saw him come back he did not have the bundle with him.

Bernadette Primeau was called, and she explained the handkerchief story by saying that she did not notice the red dots on the handkerchief at the time the detectives showed it to her at the house of Hackett on account of her being so nervous.

HACKETT NOT ASHAMED.

Alexander Lefebvre was first called. He was one of the party who went to Place Viger Station. He and James Walsh entered Chief Carpenter's office, after they had returned from the station. When there Walsh had spoken to Hackett and asked him his name. The man then answered in the following words: "My name is James Hackett, and I'm not ashamed of anything I've done."

The reason Lefebvre was called was to give evidence which had not been given by Special Constable Carter.

William Clerk, bookkeeper in the Montreal Steel Works, was next called. He stated that Hackett, according to their records, commenced work on January 25th, 1904; was discharged February 29th, 1904; reinstated February 9th, 1905. Marks commenced working on November 14th, 1904. This was all the evidence he was asked to give.

Sydney Dean, clerk in Montreal Steel Works, who has charge of making the pay-rolls, stated that Hackett did not work in the Steel Works in November, 1904. He could not say whether Hackett worked in April, 1906.

Crown asked no question, and witness stood down.

THE PRISONER'S WIFE.

Mrs. James Hackett, wife of the prisoner, was next called. She gave her evidence in French, being a member of a French family before she was married, and not speaking much English.

Mr. O'Sullivan—"Do you remember the 3rd April?"

Mrs. Hackett—"Yes, because my little cousin entered the convent at Cote St. Paul on that date."

She continued her evidence, saying that she saw her husband at home between 2.30 and 2.45 o'clock. About five minutes to three she and Mrs. Martin met her husband at the corner of Shearer and Centre streets. She stated that she was on her way to a hardware store at the corner of Napoleon street. She then proceeded to Hackett's mother's house, and later returned home and reached there about five minutes past six. She stated that on that evening Mrs. Mooney had given her husband his supper, and he had gone to bed, and was asleep when she came in. She asked him if he had taken any supper. He told her yes, and she then went out to her cousin's, Mrs. Martin, and had supper there. Mrs. Hackett and Mrs. Martin then returned to the house about 10 o'clock and she was told by Mrs. Moone, that her husband was still asleep. Mrs. Hackett went back with Mrs. Martin and passed the night there, returning home in the morning about ten minutes to seven. That is the Wednesday morning.

Mr. O'Sullivan—"Does your husband wear gloves?"

Witness—"No."

Gloves were produced, and Mrs. Hackett said she never saw them before. She further stated that her husband never wore mits or gloves.

Asked by Mr. O'Sullivan if her husband ever read papers, and if he discussed the murder case, she said yes they talked together about it. She said that on April 3rd her husband was not nervous, neither was he nervous any days after the murder had taken place.

Cross-examined by Mr. Lafontaine, witness stated that she had been married 12 years, but although she had heard her husband often speak about Cote St. Paul she had never gone there with him any time. She thought he knew the place pretty well.

HACKETT WAS NOT DRUNK.

Mr. Lafontaine—"When you came home and saw your husband, had he been drinking?"

Witness—"No, sir."

She further stated that there was no drink kept in the house. When asked if she did not think it queer to see her husband in bed so early she stated that whenever he was not working he went to bed very early. She did not know why he did not go to work on that night.

Mr. Lafontaine—"Can you speak English?"

Witness—"No."

Mr. Lafontaine—"Not at all?"

Witness—"A few words."

Mr. Lafontaine—"Do you know Chief Carpenter?"

Witness—"No."

Chief Carpenter was sent for and in the meantime the evidence of Marie Anne Leduc, was heard. She lived on Gault Street, Cote St. Paul, behind the church.

DENIES IT WAS HACKETT.

She said on April 3rd she saw a man passing her door about half past six about thirty feet from the house, the man was drunk and he had a parcel under his arm. This man, she continued, went towards the church and when he passed back again she noticed that the parcel was gone.

She said she was taken by Chief Dore to try and identify a man at the detective office, along with four or five others.

Mr. Rondeau—"Is the man you saw at Cote St. Paul the man at the bar?"

Witness—"No; the one I saw was a little stouter and taller."

The question was asked by Mr. Rondeau, if, while she was in the hallway, waiting outside to give her evidence, if some one did not come and speak to her, witness answered yes, she was spoken to by Chief Dore, who told her to say that the prisoner is the man she saw.

Mr. Guerin—"But was it not that Chief Dore said, "examine Hackett well?"

"No, sir," replied the witness, "that was not what he said."

While being cross-questioned witness said that the evening of the third was bright and clear, and that she saw the man for at least five minutes from where she was standing on the gallery of her home.

She noticed that the man had light hair and light moustache, he walked with his head down, he had no overcoat on but she could not say whether the coat he did wear was faded or not. She did not pay much attention to that.

A juryman asked the witness if she understood by Chief Dore's question that he wanted her to tell a lie in court. Witness, with some hesitation, answered "I think so."

Mrs. Hackett was then re-called. She remembered seeing Mr. Charpentier, but she could not remember Chief Carpenter or Mr. Berrigan, because there were so many people in the office when she was first brought there. She was asked if she did not state in Chief Carpenter's office that she had supper at her own home on April 3. Witness answered that she was excited then, and may have said it, but, now that she is under oath she said "No."

Amelia Hackett, wife of Wilfrid Martin, cousin of the prisoner, was next called. She remembered very well the 3rd of April last, because on that date her mother had taken her little sister to the convent.

She corroborated the evidence given by Mrs. Hackett telling the story of what she and Mrs Hackett had done during the afternoon and evening.

Mr. O'Sullivan asked witness if from the time of the murder until the time he was arrested, did she notice if Hackett acted very nervously, or like a man that had committed a crime. Witness answered "No."

She also stated that Hackett never wore gloves or mitts.

Witness then described the events of the night when Hackett was taken by Captain Coleman. She stated that Captain Coleman and other gentlemen had called and had talked with Hackett privately in a room for about five or ten minutes, after which, witness said, they went out, Hackett saying he was going into the city.

Cross-examined by Mr. Lafontaine, witness made the same statement over again.

STORY OF THE HANDKERCHIEF.

Bernadette Primeau was then called, and was questioned as to the handkerchief finding behind the bureau. She said that three men had come to the house and that the handkerchief had been found behind the bureau, and Mrs. Hackett asked her if this was her handkerchief. Witness answered she could not swear that she had claimed the handkerchief.

She then stated that she had taken a white silk handkerchief on the Sunday before Hackett was arrested from a young man.

Handkerchief was produced and witness was asked: "Did you ever see this handkerchief?"

Witness—"Yes."

Mr. Rondeau—"Has it ever been in your possession?"

Witness—"No."

"Will you please produce handkerchief you took from young man."

Nicely ironed, and washed, witness took from her coat pocket a white handkerchief, saying: "This is the one I took from the young man."

Witness stated that she did not claim that handkerchief as hers at the house of Hackett when Sub-Chief Charpentier showed it to her.

She then went on to explain that the handkerchief that she had taken from the young man was a white one, and did not have any dots on it. She stated that from the way the detective held the handkerchief at Hackett's house she could only see the white part and not the dotted border, otherwise she would not have said it was the one she took from the young man. She said that on account of her being nervous she might not have examined the handkerchief close enough or as she would have found out her mistake.

This finished the evidence for the afternoon.

One of the jurymen requested that they be allowed to have the child's clothes and the map used in the case in their quarters for the night, so as they could have a talk and make an examination.

Plays and Those Who Play Them—Gossip From Stageland

With the closing of Karn Hall, the Theatre Francais, where the Fuller Company is playing a stock engagement, remains for the present the only indoor theatrical attraction. The parks in spite of changeable weather have done big business so far this season, and seem to have established themselves firmly in the public favor.

THEATRE ROYAL.

For the second week of their engagement at the Francais, the Fuller Stock Company will present Chas. E. Blaney's latest play, "The Factory Girl," which tells a story of a factory girl's love and devotion, and is said to teach a moral lesson in a popular way. Among the many scenes which follow each other in rapid succession, are the great factory scene with a vast amount of poudrous machinery, the electric dynamo, real switchboard and the great steel plunger; the pay day scene at the factory, the interior of the county gaol, an amusing court room scene; and a pretty country home in mid-winter. Specialties by Baby Minerva, Miss Lillian Daven and Mr. Worthley will be introduced.

KARN HALL.

Alterations are being made in the Karn Hall building, which involve the tearing out of the front of the lower story, so the Cinmetoscope exhibition there has been closed, but continues at the corner of Montcalm and St. Catherine streets.

AT THE PARKS.

At Dominion Park next week Professor Herman Weedon, the German animal trainer, will have on exhibition his den of African lions. Weedon not only gets into a large cage with the lions, but he puts them through a series of amazing feats. They are said to fight every inch of the way, and that Weedon fights back with utter recklessness. The Duss band finished its engagement at the park last evening and will be followed to-day by Vander Meerschen's band, a local organization which has been strengthened by outside talent.

At Sohmer Park next week the attractions will include Herbert's performing dogs, which were very popular when they were here a season or so ago, and which have learned a number of new tricks. Fourteen years ago two little girls, seven years of age, known as the Hengler sisters, created quite a sensation at the park. Since then they have been all over the world and so clever has their act become that they now return to Montreal with a salary ten times what it used to be. Their act next week will be a novelty. Louis Cyr, Montreal's famous strong man, has entered into a partnership with Decarrie and they are to introduce a number of entirely new feats. Manello and Martinitz troupe of acrobats and head balancers will be one of the newest features. There will also be Skatinella, a juggler gymnast, who is said to be both clever and funny. Lavigne's band is still attracting much attention and a new programme has been arranged for the week.

The vaudeville programme at Riverside Park, is changed each week, and is proving to be a big attraction for this resort. For the coming week, Adge Sheriff Cosonsk, will appear in his Mail Bag Mystery, a performance that mystifies the audience, and their representatives on the platform. Kosonsa's big feature consists of being locked in an ordinary mail bag, and releasing himself, generally within the short space of one minute. The Hillman Trio, in a novelty wire act, have been winners with their turn, wherever they have appeared. The Faust Family, will be the big acrobatic feature for the week. La Nole Bros. will perform on the horizontal bars, a troupe of Japanese, and the Younes, will give their order working specialties. For the Bioscope, side pictures of the San Francisco disaster will be shown on the canvas.

MR. RENAUD'S RECITAL.

Mr. Emiliano Renaud gave his fourth pianoforte recital Thursday evening in the Archambault music hall, St. Catherine east. The programme which was rendered throughout in Mr. Renaud's usual brilliant style, was as follows:—

A—Momento Capriccioso (op. 12.)..
..... Von Weber
Vecchio Minuetto ..... Sgambati
Valse (en do dieze mineur)....
..... Chopin
Prelude (de l'opus 35)..Mendelssohn
Gavotte ..... Gluck-Brahms
Nocturne ..... Paderewski
Scherzo (de la Sonate op. 5)....
..... Brahms
B—Aufschwung .....
Grillen .....
..... Schumann
Arabesque .....
Traumes Wirren .....
C—Nocturne No. 3 ..... Liszt
Valse (Espagnole) .....
..... Emiliano Renaud
Etude sur des fausses notes"..
..... Rubinstein

The Chopin Valse and the Nocturne from Paderewski were distinctly the favorites in part A of the programme. Of the Schumann numbers, the Arabesque and Traumes Wirren were most delightfully played. The Liszt Nocturne, however, was undoubtedly the most sympathetic of all the selections. After the final Etude, which was perhaps the most difficult number on the programme, the pianist was recalled and responded with an encore.

DOINGS OF THE PLAYERS.

Mrs. Sweatman, wife of Willis Sweatman, who played Sassafras, in "The County Chairman," here this winter, died a few days ago, at their country home in Pennsylvania.

In an interview in London recently Dr. Charles Harriss said:

"I have arranged for a concert at Queen's Hall on the evening of June 27, the programme of which will consist exclusively of British music, and I am glad to tell you that the King has granted his patronage to the scheme. I have engaged the London Symphony Orchestra, and Sir Alexander Mackenzie has selected a choir of 250 voices.

"The programme will be novel in another character. Every work will be conducted by its composer. Sir Alexander Mackenzie will direct his 'Canadian Rhapsody,' which he wrote as a souvenir of his tour in the Dominion; Sir Hubert Parry conducts his beautiful cantata, 'Blest pair of Syrens'; Sir Edward Elgar will conduct the work familiarly known as the Welsh fantasia; Sir Charles Stanford directs a performance of his second Irish rhapsody; Dr. F. H. Cowen conducts his charming 'Butterfly's Ball' overture; and Mme. Albani will sing some arias.

"I shall have the privilege of introducing my little work, 'Pan,' a choric idyll, set to a poem by Josephine Preston Peabody, for soprano, tenor, and bass soli, chorus, and orchestra. The soloists engaged are Miss Pauline Donalda (the Canadian prima donna from Covent Garden), Mr. John Coates, and Mr. D. Ffrangcon Davies. I want to impress upon London musicians that this is a specimen composition of a child respectfully offered to the consideration of the mother. We want the mother to support our endeavors to progress in art.

"I am aware that there is no nationality in music, and I know that you will only have the best in London; but I wish your concert givers would do more for native composers."

Miss Lillian Daven, who will appear in "The Factory Girl," at the Francais next week.

It is said Nance O'Neill has signed with new managers for next season, and will be starred in a new play, therefore her trip to the Orient will be postponed.

May Irwin, who is at her summer home in the Thousand Islands, returns to New York in August to rehearse a new comedy by George V. Hobart.

Lulu Glaser has purchased the dramatic rights of the novel, "The House of a Thousand Candles."

Alice Lonnon, who is a Californian, will again be Mr. Willard's leading woman for another season. Just now she is visiting her home in the West.

Grace George's play for next season which was first called "The Richest Girl in the World," has been re-christened, "Dolly Proposes."

Ellen Terry's popularity was proved this week on the occasion of the benefit in honor of her jubilee at which the receipts exceeded $30,000, and at which not only nearly every one prominently identified with the English stage was in evidence, but to the success of which many American and foreign stars contributed.

In Paris this month Jean de Reszke gave his first pupils' recital and several wonderful voices were then heard. Those attracting particular attention were an American, Mary Tracy, an Australian, May McCaulay; an English girl, Miss Tate, and a Canadian, Mr. Binyon.

The original company and production of "The Man on the Box," headed by Henry E. Dixey, goes to England next November for a London presentation.

It is just twent-five years since A. W. Pinero's first play, "The Money Spinner," was produced at the St. James's Theatre, London, where his latest offering, "His House in Order," is having such a successful run.

A movement is on foot in England for the formation of an "Actors' Day," on which all actors, playwrights, etc., are to consent to forego salaries, royalties, etc., the proceeds to be devoted to certain theatrical charities.

Creston Clarke, last season here at the Academy in "Monsieur Beaucaire," is to have a new play next season by an English playwright. It will be called "The Ragged Messenger," and Mr. Clarke will play a clergyman.

The big matinee hat is doomed. The Countess de Greffulhe has started a crusade against it, and has formed a league for the encouragement of the wearing of the small theatre hat.

Rudolph Aronson has made a contract with Ruggiero Leoncavallo, by the terms of which the latter's new opera, "The Youth of Figaro," the words by Sardou, will be initially produced in the United States.

After a successful tour in Canada and New York, during which they took part in twenty-five concerts, Mr. Partovitz and Miss Alys Bateman have sailed for England to fill engagements. They return in October for another Canadian tour.

Montgomery and Stone, formerly of "The Wizard of Oz," will star next season in "The Red Mill," by Victor Herbert.

Fritzi Scheff, who is in Vienna, will spend next month touring the Black Forest in an automobile.

Reeves Smith, who played William Ashe here this season, has sailed for London, and on his return to this country will, it is said, appear at the head of his own company.

Ada Rehan and her cousin, Lady Barrington, have sailed for England. The actress was so ill she had to be almost carried on board.

MORE IRREGULARITY IN CIVIC CONTRACTS

Account Presented to the Finance Committee for Unauthorized Repairs.

DRAINS ARE BADLY NEEDED

Houses on Forsythe Street Will Be Given Drainage Facilities as Soon as Possible.

When the Finance Committee met yesterday afternoon another peculiar story came up of ex-Aldermen ordering civic work to be done without consent either of civic committees or the consent of the City Council.

Mr. Benard, contractor, came before the committee and said that last year he had been given orders, by ex-Alderman Sauvageau to make certain repairs to No. 2 Police station. He had acted under the instructions and had done work to the amount of $175. After the work was completed he saw ex-Alderman Sauvageau and asked him how he must act in regard to getting paid. He (ex-Alderman Sauvageau) told him to send in his bill later on. This course was pursued. The bill had been sent in, but for one reason or another, it had not been paid. Mr. Benard now asked that there be no more delay in regard to the payment.

ACCOUNT MUST WAIT.

At this juncture Ald. Proulx, the present chairman of the Police Committee, asked Mr. Benard if he (Ald. Proulx) was connected in any way with the orders which had been given to do the work on the station.

In reply to this Mr. Benard said "No, you had nothing to do with the matter, Ald. Proulx."

Ald. Proulx said he was satisfied with the answer.

It was the opinion of the committee that it was regrettable that work should have been ordered in such a manner. It was pointed out that all work ordered was supposed to receive the sanction of civic committees and of the City Council.

In regard to the account in question it was decided to allow it to remain over for further consideration.

It was incidentally pointed out by a member of the committee that at the very last meeting of the committee a bill for $1,200 had been presented to the committee by a contractor, who had stated that he had received orders from ex-Ald. Sauvageau to do work on a fire station. The feeling of the committee that such a way of doing civic work ought to be stopped.

DRAINS BADLY NEEDED.

Ald. Bumbray appeared before the committee and said that a large number of houses on Forsyth street were not getting proper drainage. The fact was that on the street in question there was stagnant water; a bad smell emanated from it and there was danger of an epidemic breaking out. He explained that many new houses had been built on the street, and that they ought to be provided with proper drainage facilities.

In further explanation, he showed that the proprietors were willing to pay about one-half of the cost of installing drains.

After some consideration the committee decided to build drains in the street. The cost will be about three thousand dollars.

Golf Match at Westmount.

A match takes place on the Westmount links this afternoon, between the Victoria Golf Country Club and the Westmount Club. As the clubs are playing thirty or more men each there is considerable interest in the contest

SEEKS TO RECOVER CHILD.

Mr. Odilon Grise Takes Action Against the Child's Aunt.

In the Practice Court yesterday a petition was presented from Mr. Odilon Grise, asking for a writ of habeas corpus for the recovery of his child. He alleged that his child, Yvonne, upon the death of her mother, was given in care to Mrs. Louis Halle, the child's aunt, and that Mr. Louis Halle now refuses to give him back his child. The court ordered a writ of habeas corpus to be issued, returnable on June 21st.

REAL ESTATE SALE.

Protestant Benevolent Society Purchases Elks Club Property.

The property now occupied by the Elks Club, No. 43 Belmont Park, has been sold to the Irish Protestant Benevolent Society. Upon the formation of the Canadian Order of Elks, in this city, the property on Belmont Park was acquired. It was soon found, however, that the location was not sufficiently central to suit the majority of the members, who preferred a street which was in direct line between the business and the residential districts uptown. The opportunity offered and the property was sold to the present owners.

The Elks are now negotiating for other quarters, the matter being in the hands of a committee, and it is expected that within a few days this committee will have made some decision.

Wholesale Druggists Meet.

At the annual meeting of the Canadian Wholesale Druggists' Association held at Gananoque, Ont., on Wednesday, the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:—Hon. president, H. H. Lyman, Montreal; president, C. W. Tinling, Hamilton; first vice-president, W. S. Elliot, Toronto; second vice-president, H. R. Barker, St. John; third vice-president, E. D. Martin, Winnipeg; treasurer, W. C. Niblett, Hamilton; secretary, J. Pattison, Montreal. On invitation of Mr. Thomas M. Henderson, of Vancouver and Victoria, it was decided to hold the next annual meeting in one of the cities named.

Autoists Must Observe the Law.

The municipal authorities of Dorval and surrounding places have decided to enforce the law regarding fast driving in automobiles. Two, autoists Messrs. H. W. Prendergast and Georges Versailles, were arraigned yesterday at the complaint of the Municipality of Dorval through their counsel, Mr. Alphonse Decary. Mr. Prendergast pleaded guilty, and was fined $20, and Mr. Versailles pleaded not guilty and was remanded until next Friday, for trial in the Police Court.

Mr. Decary stated that since the opening of the season the municipal authorities of Dorval have had to complain of many cases of reckless driving, which were the cause of accidents.

A BRYAN BOOM AND STOCK PRICES

THE FEATURES OF THE WEEK

Interesting Gossip From Wall Street on Some of the Things Talked About.

New York, June 16.—Influenced by varying news from the wheat belt, security prices were irregular last week. On Monday and Tuesday the market was strong and increased public activity was apparent, but there was a drop to the old dull level on Wednesday. The next day saw another spurt, but on the two closing days of the week came a relapse to listlessness and prices declined with some urgency, especially on Saturday. A majority of observers do not look for any very pronounced weakness, and, in fact, there are many reasons why the larger speculators should do all in their power to push the market up for a time. The San Francisco fire spoiled a promising bull campaign, and left some of the heaviest of professional speculators and the pools which they had formed to bull the market high and dry with big accumulations of stocks they had hoped to sell to the public at fancy prices. But the public has been wary and still refuses to buy to any great extent, and as prices have not recovered much more than half from the slump that came after the San Francisco disaster, the speculative pools are obliged to carry stocks at a great loss. The whole course of the market in recent weeks has been professional, with constant efforts to advance a variety of stocks, and thus persuade the public to buy.

CROPS AND STOCKS.

The main factor in stemming an advance was the unfavorable reports from the wheat-growing sections. In the North-West the farmers are crying too much rain, while in the Middle West drought is causing deterioration. Naturally after so promising reports in winter wheat, these crop scares, which, of course, should not be taken too literally, make for considerable conservatism, since a continuance of present business activity is largely based on another year of average harvests.

The Government cotton crop report was of a different character than the poor wheat advices, a condition of 84.6, comparing with 77.2 a year ago, while the acreage has increased 1,686,000 acres, indicating a very favorable prospect. General trade conditions continue most active, as is suggested by the bank clearings for May, which were the largest on record for any month except January, 1906, and December, 1905. Railroad earnings, another criterion, are showing up splendidly, the gross for May being over 15 per cent. higher.

A FINE OUTLOOK.

Accounts from the iron and steel industry, which is usually regarded as a barometer, indicate little let up in new orders, the capacity of the plants being taken well into 1907. The packing industry, it is true, is suffering from the effect of the unsavory disclosures, which must result temporarily at least. In a large falling off of domestic as well as foreign business, but a removal of bad conditions should cause a reaction in public sentiment.

THE CROP SCARES.

Everyone experienced in Wall Street affairs appreciates the fact that the season has approached when the amateur agriculturalists who happen to be committed to the short side of the market feel called upon to bring about heavy precipitation in the crop regions or to cause drought in accordance with their own market position. The usual crop scares are, therefore, expected during the rest of the month, but the more sober-minded element is not disposed to pay much attention to such factors, as the Government report and private advices received by the various railroads quite uniformly foreshadow an excellent out-turn of the products of the soil for this season.

It is believed that the granger roads, as well as the more prominent coalers, will continue to lead the active speculation. The copper shares also are looked upon with a good deal of favor owing to the fact that the metal maintains its high-level price of about 18 cents, and is likely to do so for a long time to come.

GOLD EXPORTS.

Wall Street's attention is directed to the possibility of gold exports by the sharp advance in sterling incidental to the heavy amounts of maturing finance bills. This is in a way due to the easier money conditions, which render it less profitable for Europe to lend money here. The return flow of funds from San Francisco already about $15,000,000, may cause money rates to decline to a point where exports of the yellow metal will result. Much depends upon whether New York bankers are successful in placing further loans abroad, no definite announcement having yet been made of the Pennsylvania flotation in Paris. London authorities disagree as to the amount of New York finance bills held abroad, the more optimistic claiming that $200,000,000 is the maximum. With a trade balance of some $500,000,000 in favor of the United States, however, the liquidation of this indebtedness should cause little trouble. The rise in wheat with the packing house scandal is suggestive of a decrease in exports, which, in turn, means less exchange. It is doubtful if the gold export movement, should it take place, will assume large proportions, since the immediate result would be to raise money rates here, which, in turn, would bring European funds into the market, thus causing a speedy readjustment. European advices suggest the readiness of foreign countries, particularly France, to finance the needs of America.

THE BRYAN BOOM.

The bearish element fought the advance of stocks on the theory that accidents are liable to happen, and this seems to be about the only ground on which the bearish position is based. With the splendid business outlook and the further favorable developments in the money market, some of the most conservative and experienced operators contend that it will require an accident of a severe nature to impede the upward progress of prices. The prospect of a "Bryan boom" was cited by some traders as a bear argument on stocks. The broader aspect of speculation, however, which has developed within the last few days is taken as a particularly gratifying indication of a continued improvement of prices.

REAL ESTATE.

Banking interests state that one of the most salutary measures would be a check to the real estate boom, which is more responsible for present halting conditions than even Wall Street. There is some indication that the so-called cheap issues are being taken in hand by prominent operators who doubtless base their transactions on the belief that this class of stock has not enjoyed the enchantment to which it is entitled by the actual appreciation which has taken place in its intrinsic value. Equities in the non-dividend paying shares are increasing in value, and in time the low priced railway issues, which are not at present in the dividend column, will be in a position to make returns to their owners.

There was an excellent demand last week for Kansas & Texas, Colorado & Southern, the Wabash issues, Erie, and a number of the so-called specialties in which the character of buying suggested the probability of much better quotations in the course of the current year.

FINANCING PLANS.

Preparations are being made to bring out a number of large financing plans affecting railroad corporations, notably in the case of St. Paul & Wabash. There is continued talk of valuable "rights" to holders of St. Paul stock. The United States Steel stocks continue to "bull hard." It is not to be denied that efforts have been made to carry these issues higher, but thus far they have been met with failure. The most conspicuous attempts have been confined to the common stock, and on several occasions the stock has had the appearance of being in for a move, only to be checked by heavy offerings. The preferred, meanwhile, has been left to take care of itself.

Shrewdly enough, the western contingent, who are the backstay of the movement in Steel common, realized that this Morgan specialty, because of its wide distribution, should have an immeasurably greater influence upon the sentiment than closely-held railroad stocks. Apparently the pools have confidence in their ability to attract a large portion of the $150,000,000 July disbursements.

ST. PAUL A FEATURE.

St. Paul was the most conspicuous feature of the trading this week. In fact, it was the only consistently strong feature of the market. The buying of the stock was described as "good," but the selling was said to be equally as "good." At any rate, several of the firms which have been the heaviest purchasers during the past few days were noticeable in the profit-taking. Notwithstanding this the price continued to advance, reaching the high level of 181 1-2. It is believed that the talk of "rights" on the stock has been the means of reducing the short interest, which, in a measure, weakens its technical position, though there is reported a good demand for the stock in the loan crowd. Whether this is more fictitious than real time may be depended upon to reveal, as well as the character of the recent buying.

THE READING POOL.

Reading, for the time being, is commanding less attention on the part of the pool, and the stock gave evidence of profit-taking. The pool in Reading is said to have switched to other stocks temporarily, being now quite active in St. Paul. In some quarters the calling of loans by Morris & Jesup was held to suggest Standard Oil buying of stocks, presumably St. Paul. The method of reasoning was that Morris & Jesup were Standard Oil brokers, and could only be calling loans in order to finance purchases of stock. Of course, the action was open to other interpretations.

The financial plans of St. Paul will probably be announced in detail next week. The general opinion is that some part of the authorized $25,000,000 of new stock will be issued. Whether the expectations of the bulls will be realized remains to be seen, as the directors are keeping their secret well. It is probable that the strength of the stock is due in a great measure to the attempts of the big short interest to cover. There was very heavy selling of the stock in mid-week by a firm which frequently executes orders for the Morgan and Hill interests, and this led to the belief that the legitimate move is practically at an end. The plight of the shorts, however, may cause a still further rise in the securities.

A GOOD REPORT.

The Government crop report, made public Tuesday, was generally regarded as satisfactory. Not only does it show a condition which promises a good yield for the cereals according to the figures gathered up to June 1, but the consensus of opinion among those with the best private information on the crops is that a considerable improvement in conditions has taken place since the date of compilation of the figures. The recent reports of crop damages and general deterioration are regarded as effectually refuted by the Government statisticians, and consequently a good deal of the bear ammunition was lost.

TRADE THROUGHOUT CANADA.

Little Complaint is Heard—Activity Out at Coast—Values Firm.

Montreal trade reports to Bradstreet's say: There is still a quiet tone in some lines of wholesale trade here, although warmer weather has had a good effect upon the retail movement of summer lines of dry goods. The prevailing tendency to textile prices is towards firmness, and some lines of woollens are advancing. General hardware is meeting with a good seasonable movement, and metals and heavy lines generally are brisk with prices about steady. Country trade has shown some improvement since the finish of seeding, particularly during the past week or two, and with a good outlook for crops there is every reason to expect continued good business conditions throughout the summer and fall. Receipts of country produce are larger. The make of both butter and cheese is heavy, and prices are showing easiness. But the farmers are still doing well in this direction, and there does not seem to be much expectation that prices will go much lower. Exports of cattle are fair although the demand in Europe is none too active. Large quantities of grain are going from this port and the shipping trade is generally active. Collections are generally fair. Money for call purposes is easier, although there is still a good demand for all purposes.

Toronto—Wholesale trade here is usually quiet at this season of the year, so there is little complaint about present conditions of trade. In some lines, indeed, the movement is unusually active. Heavy demands for hardware and groceries have to be met in the newly-opened portions of Northern Ontario, and these demands are having considerable effect upon the general volume of trade here. Hardware houses are particularly active, owing to the heavy demand for all lines of building materials from all parts of the province and Western Canada. The dry goods trade is mostly of the sorting up variety. The outlook for the fall movement is bright. The retail dry goods trade has been more active on account of the warmer weather. Collections in all lines are fair to good. Country trade is generally satisfactory. The movement of country produce is generally heavy. Butter and cheese deliveries are more free and prices are easier. The export demand for both continues good. Grain is firm. Good lots of cattle are coming forward, and the demand for them is active at steady prices. Hogs hold steady at the high prices ruling a week ago, although they are expected to come lower. Provisions are firm in sympathy. Wools and hides continue firm.

Winnipeg—Warmer weather during the early part of the week gave some impetus to the movement of retail trade in summer lines throughout the West, and wholesale trade is now reported more active. The dry goods trade is doing a seasonable business and fall orders are good. Hardware lines are moving well, and the grocery trade is brisk, with values firm. Crop prospects too, are brigat. Warm rains have assisted the growth and Westerners are beginning to talk of a 100,000,000 bushel crop. Just such a crop as this is needed to ensure a continuation of the steady growth of the country as it is going forward now. Farm produce is offering freely. The deliveries of butter and cheese are large, and collections are generally good.

Vancouver and Victoria—Trade all along the coast continues exceedingly active. Large shipments of wholesale goods are going to the country as the result of the activity in the mining and lumber trades. Other lines of industry are also busy. The building trade is active, and real estate values at Vancouver are very firm. Values of commodities are firm, and no complaint is being heard in any quarter regarding collections.

Hamilton—Summer trade in general lines has been showing more activity during the past week or two. The wholesale dry goods trade continues a little quiet, but hardware and groceries are moving well. Collections are fair to good and trade prospects generally are bright.

London—General trade conditions continue satisfactory. Local industries are busily engaged and wholesale houses report a seasonable movement on general lines. Crop prospects hereabout are good and trade has generally a healthy tone.

Ottawa—While the volume of actual business moving is not large there is a fairly good tone to all lines of trade. Activity in local industries and a good movement in dairy produce are having their effect upon general trade. Crop prospects are fair to good.

CANADIAN WOODS IN ENGLAND

Arrivals on Other Side in May Smaller Than Year Ago.

Farnworth & Jardine's wood circular, dated Liverpool, 1st June, 1906, reads in part as follows:

Arrivals from British North America in May were 9,462 tons register, against 14,553 tons register in May, 1905, and the aggregate tonnage to this date from all places during 1904, 1905 and 1906 were 131,783, 150,663 and 141,696 tons respectively.

Business has been very similar to preceding months, being of a quiet but steady character. The arrivals all round have been moderate, deliveries fair, and values firm. Stocks are light, but sufficient.

Canadian Woods—Pine timber.—Waney—Import consists of a small parcel to Manchester; demand quiet, stocks light and values firm. Square Pine—Little enquiry, stocks small. Red Pine—Stock is nominal, and demand limited. Oak—No arrivals, but rather more enquiry, stock low, and prices firm. Elm—Demand slow, but stocks are not heavy, and values rule high. Pine Deals—Arrivals have been moderate, deliveries fairly satisfactory, and stocks moderate; values steady, with tendency to improve. Red Pine Deals—Little change.

New Brunswick and Nova Scotia Spruce and Pine Deals—Arrivals to the Mersey were 3,580 standards, against 4,310 last year; consumption satisfactory, stocks moderate, values steady. Stocks of galatz whitewood and lower grade Baltic goods, which come in competition however, run into large figures. Pine Deals—No change in demand.

Birch Logs were imported freely, though rather less than previous month, deliveries fair, stocks increased, and values declined. Planks—Arrivals large, consumption fair, stocks heavy, and prices easier.

Pitch Pine—Arrivals were 7 vessels, 5,382 tons, against 9 vessels, 14,711 tons last year. Hewn—A fair quantity imported, prime wood continues in demand, values unchanged. Sawn imported freely; consumption satisfactory, stocks very light, values eased to some extent. Deals and boards imported freely; a fair consumption, stock is quite sufficient for present requirements; values firm.

British Columbian and Oregon Pine—No arrivals; deliveries increased, and prices firm, stock is still large, and consists practically of logs, stock of lumber being about exhausted.

BUTTER MARKET IN ENGLAND.

Mail Advices Export a Steady Market With Increased Deliveries.

Dewdall Bros., Manchester, write under date of Saturday, June 2nd, of the butter market, as follows:

After a late spring reports of most favorable growing conditions flow in from Ireland, Holland, Canada and the United States. Abundant rains have fallen, accompanied or followed by warmer weather.

Denmark says that production is large and increasing, and the supplies are fully equal to the demand. Tinpackers buying largely at good prices. Foreign orders fairly good. Tone steady, but no more. The official "top" quotation is unchanged, and stands at 92 kroner. Last year it stood at 84 kroner until June 5th, and in 1904 at 77 kroner for top in May and up to the middle of June. Whilst first Corks stood at 83s in June last year, and at 74s in July, 1904, Canadians are still about 10s higher than the lowest point of last season. Manchester was dull last Tuesday and did not realize the half of the last official advance. Our annual Lancashire Carnival next week will give us a holiday and breathing time to gauge more closely the soundness of present prices, which are comparatively dear for the period of the season.

The German markets are weaker and partly lower. Russian shipments are increasing. From Central Siberia grass-made butter is now arriving. Danish and Swedish advised for next week, 26,841 casks, or 1,206 less than last.

FIRM FOOTWEAR MARKET.

There is now talk that the price of boots and shoes may be advanced in Canada before long, owing to the recent strength in the price of hides. Raw hides advanced about 10 per cent. last year and a similar amount this year, this increase applying necessarily to the cost of the leather produced from the hides. Recent wars, such as the South African and the Russo-Japanese, occasioned a heavy demand for footwear, and the increase in the supply is declared not to be proportionate.

Sir Gilbert Was Annoyed.

The House of Commons Standing Committee on the Merchant Shipping Acts Amendment Bill recently discussed Clause 38, providing for return by masters of ships and passengers, under pain of penalties by either.

Sir Gilbert Parker (U.) asked what information passengers would be required to give. He had had most impertinent questions put to him in the past. For instance, he had been asked what was his age—(laughter)—occupation and where he was born. He guaranteed that nine ladies out of ten would not give their correct ages, and in many respects the returns were not accurate. On one voyage his form was filled up by the steward, who described him as a Scotsman and a banker, and put his age as ten years more than it actually was. He submitted the information asked was absurd, and of no use to the Board of Trade.

Mr. Lloyd-George defended the questions asked of passengers. He said that if it was left to the steward to state a passenger's nationality he would naturally judge it by the tip given him. (Laughter.) Therefore, he was surprised that Sir Gilbert was taken for a Scotsman. (Renewed laughter.) It was necessary to have information of the people who left the country for emigration statistics.

Mr. T. Cairns (L.) hoped questions such as he had to answer when he went to the United States would not be introduced here. He did not object to polygamy, because he had never tried it, but there were other questions equally absurd.

Assurance was given that details could be discussed on the schedules, and the clause was allowed to stand part of the bill.

VEINS—Nine well-defined veins have been disclosed, one of which has been stripped on the surface for over 600 feet.

DEVELOPMENT—Two shafts have been sunk to a depth of fifty and sixty feet, respectively; 280 feet of tunneling, all in pay ore, has been done.

EQUIPMENT—A complete mining plant has been installed. The Buffalo mine is considered one of the best equipped mines in the camp.

SHIPMENTS—Shipments have been made to the Belbach Smelting & Refining Co., of Newark, N.J., and to the Delamar Copper Refining Co., of Chrome, N.J. Out of the first shipment TWENTY TONS OF ORE PRODUCED $20,000 NET. FIVE CARS have been shipped since the first of May, 1906.

ORE—Mr. Charles L. Denison, President of the Company, estimates there is $75,000 worth of ore on the dump, which is being assorted and bagged for shipment.

VALUE OF ORE—We personally have had an assay made by Messrs. Thos. Heys & Son, of Toronto, of the ore taken from the sixty-foot level. This assayed $2562 of SILVER TO THE TON.

(Copy.) Cobalt, Ont., April 24th, 1906.

Charles L. Denison, Esq.,
New York, N.Y.

Dear Sir,—In reply to your letter of enquiry as to the quantity of ore on hand for shipment, will say that we will have a thirty-ton car of No. 1 ore, which would run from $1,000 to $2,000 PER TON, ready in less than ten days. Two, or perhaps three, cars of No. 2 ore, running over $300, and two cars of No 4 ore, running over $160. We are sacking these now, and making preparations to move same for shipment.

As to our estimate of future production, based on thirty days from this date, we expect to hoist and ship monthly approximately the following tonnage: 30 tons No. 1 ore, which will average $1,000 to $2,000 per ton; 126 tons No. 2 ore, including middlings, which will run $300 or more per ton; 75-100 tons No. 3 ore, which will average $150 per ton; 500 tons mill rock, $40 per ton or better.

Yours very truly,
Signed (Thomas R. Jones, Supt.

A Philanthropic Whisper

One of the Wall Street Stories.

There have been all manner of big stock operators and "leaders" in Wall Street—gentlemanly, well educated leaders with a gift of epigram and foul spoken leaders who knew as little of grammar as of manners; leaders to whom the stock market was only the Monte Carlo of the Tape and leaders to whom it was a means to an end, cool, calculating, steel-nerved leaders and fidgety, impulsive, excitable leaders; leaders who were church pillars and total abstainers and leaders whose only God was the ticker and whose most brilliant operations were carried on during the course of a drunken debauch. But never before, in the breathless history of Wall Street, has there been a leader whose following was numbered by the thousands and included not only the "shoe-string" speculators, but the very richest of the rich! Never before a leader whose word took the place of statistical information, whose mere "I am buying it" created more purchasers for a stock than all the glowing prospectuses and all the accountants' affidavits and all the bankers' estimates.

At first Wall Street said the public was suffering from an epidemic of speculative insanity, that Colonel Treadwell was merely a bold operator "backed" by a clique of the greatest fortunes in America; that he was not a skilful "manipulator" of values, but by sheer brute force of tremendous buying he made those stocks advance with which he was identified and that, of course, the public always follows the stocks that are made active; and many other explanations. But in the end Wall Street came to realize exactly to what it was that the blind devotion of the speculative public for the colonel was due. Defying all traditions, upsetting all precedents, violating all rules, driving all the "veterans" to the verge of hysterics and bankruptcy by his daily defiance of accepted views as to the art of operating in stocks, Colonel Josiah T. Treadwell founded a new school: He told the truth.

The colonel sat in his office alone with his thoughts. The door was open—it was always open—and the clerks and customers of Treadwell & Co. as they passed to and fro caught glimpses of the great leader's broad, kindly face and shrewd, little, twinkling eyes that seemed to smile at them. They wondered what new "deal" the colonel was planning. And then they wished with all their souls and purs s they knew the name of the stock—merely the name of it—so that they might "get in on the ground floor."

The famous operator sat on a revolving chair by his desk. He had turned his back on an accumulation of correspondence and he now rotated from right to left, and from left to right. The tips of his shoes—he was a short man—missed the floor by an inch or two and he swung his feet contentedly. A ticker whirred away blithely and from time to time Treadwell ceased his rocking and his foot-swinging, and glanced jovially at the ticker "tape." From his window he could see a Mississippi of people, or a bit of New York summer sky, but his restless eyes were roaming and skipping from place to place. And the clerks and the customers wondered whether the market was going the way the colonel had planned. The ticker was whirring and clicking, impassively, and the colonel wore a meditative look. What was the "old man" scheming? The bears had better be on their guard! As a matter of fact, Josiah T. Treadwell was thinking that his brother, Wilson, who had left him a few minutes before, was certainly growing bald. He also wondered whether people who advertised "restorers" and "invigorators" were veracious or merely "Wall Streety" as he put it to himself.

"Come in, come in," called out the colonel, cheerily. "Won't you walk into my parlor?"

"Good- morning, Colonel Treadwell," said the lad, diffidently.

"Who are you, and what are you, and what can I do for you ?" said the colonel, extending his hand.

The youth did not heed the chubby outstretched hand. "My name," he said, very formally and introductorily, "is Carey. My father used to know you when he was editor of the Blankburg Herald."

"Well," said the colonel, encouragingly, "shake hands anyhow."

Carey shook hands, his diffidence vanished. He was a pleasant-faced, pleasant-voiced young Yellow, Treadwell thought. He was a good-hearted, jocular old fellow, unlike what he had imagined the leader of the stock market would be, Carey thought.

"Yes," went on the colonel, "I remember your father very well. I never forget my up-the-State friends, and I am always glad to see their sons. When I ran for Congress, Bill Carey wrote red-hot editorials in my favor, and I was beaten by a large and enthusiastic majority. I haven't seen your father in twenty-odd years—not since he went wrong and took to politics."

"Well, Colonel Treadwell," laughed Carey, "I guess Dad did his best for you. And if you didn't go to Congress you're better off, from all I have read in the papers about you."

You would have thought they had known each other for years.

"That's what I say; I have to," chuckling.

"Colonel," said the young man, boldly, "I've come to ask your advice."

"Most people don't ask it twice. Be careful now."

"Do you mean that they get so rich following it that they don't have to come again ?"

"You are a politician, young man. You'll wake up and find yourself in Congress, some fine day, unless your father goes back to newspaper work and writes some editorials in your favor."

"I have saved up some money, Colonel."

"Keep it. That's the best advice I can give you. Go away instantly. Great Scott, youngster, you are in Wall Street now."

"Oh, I—I'm safe enough in this office, I guess," retorted Carey.

The famous leader of the stock market looked at him solemnly. The boy returned the look, imperturbably. Then Colonel Treadwell laughed, and Carey laughed back at him.

"What are you doing to keep out of State's prison ?" asked Treadwell.

"I'm a clerk in the office of the Federal Pump Company, third floor, upstairs. I have saved some money and I want to know what to do with it. I read an article in the Sun the other day. It said you had advised people to put their savings into Suburban Trolley and how well they had fared."

"That was a year ago. Trolley has gone up 50 points since them."

"That shows how good the advice was. And you also said a young man should do something with his savings and not let them lie idle." The young man looked straight into the little, twinkling, kindly eyes of the leader of the stock market.

"How much money have you ?"

"I have two hundred and ten dollars," replied the lad with an uncertain smile. He had felt proud of the magnitude of his savings in his own room; in this office he felt a bit ashamed of their insignificance.

"Dear me," said the millionaire speculator, very seriously, "that is a good deal of money. It's a blame sight more'n I had, when I started in business. Got it with you?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, I'll introduce you to my brother, Wilson, who has charge of our customers. Come in, John."

"John" came in. His other name was Mellen. He was a slim, quiet looking man of about five and fifty. His enemies said that he had made $1,000,000 for every year he had lived and had kept it.

"Sit down, John," said Colonel Treadwell, shaking hands with Mr. Mellen, "I'll be back in a minute."

At the door he shook hands with two more visitors—a tall, ruddy-faced, white haired, and white whiskered man, Mr. Milton Steers, after-dinner speaker and self-confessed wit, and, incidentally, president of a railroad system; also Mr. D. M. Ogden, who looked like an English clergyman and was the owner of the huge Ogden buildings in Wall Street. They had come to discuss the advisability of a new deal in "Trolley." They represented, they and their associates, more than $500,000,000. But Colonel Treadwell made them wait while he escorted his new acquaintance to his brother's room.

"Wilse," he said, "I've brought you a new customer, Mr. Carey."

Wilson P. Treadwell smiled pleasantly. He was a tall, slender man with a serious look. The firm did not desire new accounts, for there was already more business than could be handled. They were the busiest and the best known stock brokers in the United States. But the Colonel's friends were welcome, always.

"I'm very glad to meet Mr. Carey," said Wilson Treadwell. The firm had some very youthful customers; but their means were in inverse ratio to their years.

"I think," said the colonel, "that we had better buy some Easton & Allentown for him." He was smiling; he generally did. Moreover, he was thinking of his brother's mistaken impression of the new customer.

"That is a good idea," assented Wilson. "You ought to put in your order at once. The stock is going up very fast, Mr. Carey."

"Well, young man, give him your margin and let him buy you as much as he thinks best," said the colonel.

"Five thousand shares?" suggested Wilson Treadwell.

Colonel Treadwell chuckled. "Five thousand? A paltry five?"

"Well, fifty thousand if he wants them, and you guarantee his account," said his brother with a smile.

"I guess," said the leader of the stock market, slowly, "that you had better begin with one hundred shares."

Then Wilson, who knew his brother thoroughly, said "Oh!" and smiled and gave an order to a clerk to buy one hundred shares of Easton & Allentown Railway stock at the "market" or prevailing price, for Mr. Carey, and took the boy's two hundred and ten dollars with the utmost gravity. The smallest Stock Exchange house would not accept such a pitiful account. Treadwell & Co. being the largest, would and did.

The colonel shook hands with young Carey, whose father had once edited a country newspaper, but who had never been an intimate friend, told him to "Come again, any time," and went back to his accomplices.

Easton & Allentown stock was the feature of the market that week and the next. Ten days after Carey had bought his hundred shares at 94 the stock sold at 106.

The young man went into the office of Treadwell & Co., on the eleventh day. He knew he had made a great deal of money—more than he had ever thought of having at his age—but he did not know what to do now. He heard one man say to another: "Take profits? Not at this price. E. and A. is sure to go to 115."

Carey figured that if he waited for the stock to sell at 115, he would make nearly a thousand dollars more.

"There is no use of being a blamed hog," the man continued, with picturesque emphasis, "but where in blazes is the sense of throwing away that much money by selling out too soon? Limit your losses and let your profits run."

They stood in the corridor of the partitioned office, the crowd of men, all of them customers of Treadwell & Co., excepting the newspaper reporters who had called for their usual daily interview with the famous leader of the stock market. There were two United States Senators; an ex-Congressmen; a score of men who had inherited fortunes and were doubling them in the stock market; three or four gray-haired shrewd-faced capitalists whose names appeared many times the financial pages of newspapers; a baker's dozen of prominent municipal politicians, a well-known western railroad president with a ruddy face and snow-white beard; two famous physicians; the vice-president of a life insurance company; a half score of wholesale merchants and a low-voiced insignificant little man, with a quiet, almost apologetic look, who seldom spoke and never smiled, but who, next to the colonel himself, was beyond question the heaviest "plunger" in the office.

The Colonel came out of his office to go to his brother's room, where, seated about a long polished table were several directors of the Suburban Trolley Company—men to whom the newspapers always referred not by name but as "prominent insiders." It was a very important gathering. It involved no less than a final understanding in regard to the great "Trolley pool" whose operations, later on, were to become historical in Wall street. It was, as one of the speculators outside put it, "a case of show down"—the cash resources available for pool purposes were to be ascertained, each man announcing the proportion of the 100,000 shares for which he was willing to "put up."

Carey was standing by the door of Wilson Treadwell's office. He did not feel altogether comfortable, among so many elderly and obviously very rich men. His diffidence was the saving of him, for as the colonel passed he paused and said, in a low voice: "Got your stock yet?"

The customers in the corridor, men who, by the colonel's advice, were "carrying" from 500 to 10,000 shares each of Easton & Allentown, leaped forward eagerly. All were men who, north of Wall street, would not have stooped to listen to others' conversations if their lives depended on it. In a broker's office, when the leader of the stock market was speaking, such notions were absurd, almost wicked. Certainly, at that moment, twenty pairs of eyes were looking fixedly at the great leader of the stock market, and the young clerk.

The colonel felt this intuitively. He confirmed it with a quick glance of his sharp little eyes. He had not sold all his Easton & Allentown, but was disposing of it just as fast as the market would take it. It was not likely that the stock would go much higher. Wall Street, ever loath to believe well of any stock operator, used to comment sneeringly on the fact that the world heard much about the "Treadwell buying," but never a word about the Treadwell selling.

If the colonel gave a hint to the customers there would be an avalanche of selling orders that would make the price of the stock break sharply, and this would not benefit anyone. He had advised them to buy the stock at 90 and at 95—it was 105 now. He had more than done his duty. If they did not sell out, in the hope of making more, it was their own lookout.

But there was the boy with the one hundred shares, the pleasant little clerk from up-the-State, who had brought in his entire fortune, his accumulated savings of two hundred and ten dollars. He was a stranger to Wall Street. But supposing he should tell that he had been advised to sell? There would be the deuce to pay!

The colonel took chances. Out of one corner of his mouth, so that he did not even turn his head toward the boy and so that the watching customers could not suspect what he was doing, he shot a quick whisper—a lob-sided but philanthropic affair—at him: "Look at the color of your money, boy! Take your profits and say nothing!" And he walked into the room where the Suburban Trolley magnates awaited him impatiently.

Carey, thrilled but taciturn, gave his order to sell his Easton & Allentown, unsuspected by the mob. They sold it for him at 105 1-8. Deducting commissions and interest charges the colonel's whisper had put $1,050 in the young clerk's pocket.

And the stock went a little higher and then declined slowly to about 90. The customers all made a great deal of money as it was, but not as much as they would have "taken out" of the Easton & Allentown "deal" if they had overheard that one of Colonel Treadwell's many whispers—lob-sided but philanthropic affairs!

WESTERN UNION FIGURES.

Western Union Telegraph stock pays 5 per cent. per annum, and the company is earning about 5.9 per cent. on its $97,370,000 of stocks. The yield at the present price is approximately 5.4 per cent., as the stock is selling with the dividend on in the neighborhood of 93.

The earnings of the company for the last quarter of the year, partly estimated, are practically the same as were those for the same period of 1905. It does not seem probable that the actual earnings will show an increase.

The returns for the full fiscal year are practically at hand. The earnings for three full quarters have been reported, and it was necessary to estimate only a small part of the last quarterly period. It is possible, therefore, to get a fairly accurate idea of the year's operations.

It seems that the tendency of the earnings to decrease had been stopped. Last year a large portion of the decrease was ascribed to the loss of revenue due to the discontinuance of the race news service, but in 1906 that factor cannot be so important in making comparison with 1905.

The company is now in operation doing a business throughout Canada in the sale of Brazing Equipments and Brazing Compound, as well as carrying on the work of brazing broken and cracked castings, at its factory, No. 63 Dalhousie Street, Montreal, having acquired an exclusive license to certain patents which give it a monopoly in Canada, in this business.

1. Selling Brazing Equipments and Brazing Compound to factories, mills, railway shops, mines, quarries, public works, dredging companies, steamship companies, contractors, and all users of machinery who repair their broken and cracked parts by the use of our process and Brazing Compound. THIS SAVES THEM THE COST OF NEW CASTINGS AND THE GREAT LOSS OF TIME USUALLY INVOLVED, especially when new parts have to be brought from distant points, as is frequently the case.

2. Doing Brazing in our Montreal Shop and opening up Agencies in all the principal towns throughout Canada, these are no charge on the Company as they consist in granting a license for the use of our Brazing Process to parties in each town who purchase from us our Special Brazing Equipments in addition to using our Patented Compound FROM THE ANNUAL CONSUMPTION OF WHICH A LARGE REVENUE IS DERIVED.

W. H. C. Mussen & Co., Railway and Mining Supplies, are handling the Mining Branch of the business through their agents and salesmen from Halifax to Vancouver.

In the United States nearly all the Factories have installed Brazing Equipments, and do their own repairs.

Machine Shops in every town have taken up Agencies, and are making money, and at the same time pleasing their customers.

Blacksmiths in country villages are using the Process for repairing Agricultural Implements.

It is only a question of time before our Brazing Equipments and Process will be as extensively used throughout Canada.

From the amount of highly satisfactory business already done in the short space of time we have been in business, we see the almost unlimited field there is before us for doing a most profitable business, and we feel justified in stating that our shareholders, due to the low capitalization of the company, should realize dividends of over 30 per cent. on their investment, as the cost of operating a business of this nature is very limited.

The company commenced operations in February, and has already supplied Brazing Equipments to the following companies:

The C. P. R. Angus Shops, Montreal.

ROAD MENACE TO MACKENZIE & MANN

Pacific and Eastern Railway Company Granted Charter in Spite of Protest.

MANY BILLS WERE ADVANCED

Amendment of Senator McMullen Defeated After Much Debate—Other Companies Incorporated.

Special Staff Correspondence.

Ottawa, Ont., June 16.—In the Senate on Friday on motion for the third reading of a bill to incorporate the Pacific and Eastern Railway Company, a line from Victoria, B.C., to Fort Churchill on Hudson Bay, Senator McMullen moved in amendment that the portion of the line from Edmonton to Fort Churchill be dropped. His reason was that a road to Hudson Bay had been begun by Mackenzie & Mann, and the granting of this charter would interfere with their financing, when the Pacific and Eastern had shown good faith by building from the Pacific ocean to Edmonton they could obtain a charter for the remainder of the distance to Hudson Bay. These views were supported in speeches by Senator Kerr, of Toronto, declared the project was a bona fide one. The names of Sir Henry Pellatt and Mr. Hugh Bain showed the good faith of the enterprise. The country was big enough for the charter to be given this company without interfering with the Mackenzie and Mann project. This view was supported by Senators Bostock, Edwards, Gibson, and MacDonald, of British Columbia. The amendment was defeated by 23 to 17. Before the vote for third reading Senator Davis spoke again, criticizing the proposal, and questioning the ability of any one to build such a road on the twenty-five million dollars capital asked for. The debate was adjourned by Senator Davis.

The following bills were given a third reading: To amend the Rocky Mountains Park Act; To make further provision respecting grants of land to members of the militia force on active service in the Northwest; Respecting the Huron & Erie Loan and Savings Company; To incorporate the General Accident Insurance Company of Canada; To incorporate the Chartered Bank of London and Canada; To incorporate the Inter-Ocean Fire Insurance Company.

THREW OUT APPLICATION.

Private Bills Committee Refused Quebec Lady Divorce.

Ottawa, June 16.—The Commons Committee on Private Bills, after an animated discussion threw out the divorce application of Mrs. Eileen Mary Mackintosh, of Quebec, who is seeking dissolution of marriage from her husband, Charles St. Lawrence Mackintosh, formerly of Rossland, B.C. Mr. Chrysler, K.C., made a strong appeal for the applicant, while Mr. Ritchie, of Ottawa, was equally vigorous for the husband. The vote stood 18 to 13 against the bill, which consequently was rejected, although the Senate had previously passed the measure. It is noteworthy that all the medical men of the Private Bills Committee who were present, voted for the measure.

FRISCO AGAIN SHAKEN.

San Francisco, June 16.—A severe earthquake was felt here at 9.41 p.m., Friday. It lasted about five seconds. It was probably not heavy enough to do damage, but possibly it may have caused some of the ruined walls to fall.

Two more slight earthquake shocks were experienced at 11.35 last night.

Many Accidents Reported in Canada.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Ottawa, Ont., June 16.—Industrial accidents occurring to 360 work-people in Canada during the month of May, 1906, were reported to the Department of Labor. Of these 114 were fatal, and 246 resulted in serious injuries. In addition, accidents to 23 workmen, of which three were fatal, were reported, which took place prior to the beginning of the month. The number of fatal accidents reported in May, 1906, was 48 more than in the preceding month, and 64 in excess of May, 1905, the non-fatal accidents numbered one less than in April, 1906, and 100 less than in May, 1905.

Bessie Owens Acquitted at Kenora.

Special to the Montreal Star.

Kenora, Ont., June 16.—At the Assizes yesterday the Grand Jury brought in true bills against Bessie Owens, charged with attempted murder, and the Indian, Tushwequex, charged with murder. The case against Bessie Owens was proceeded with, and given to the jury in the afternoon. After being out two hours the jury brought in the verdict of "not guilty." The girl was immediately discharged.

Coal Strike Settled.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Glace Bay, N. S., June 16.—The two hundred men at No. Six go to work again to-day, after being out three days. A conference took place this afternoon with the superintendent of Mines for the Dominion Coal Company, Mr. Charles Fergie, and the men working the longest at the colliery will receive the preference.

Considers Re-opening Dreyfus Case.

Paris, June 16.—The Supreme Court to-day began consideration of the results of the inquiry which has been going on for the past twenty-seven months, relative to granting Alfred Dreyfus another trial. A decision is expected at the end of the month.

Died in Ancestral Home.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Queenstown, Ont., June 16.—Miss Hannah H. Hamilton, niece of George Hamilton, after whom the city of Hamilton was named, died in that city yesterday while on a visit.

It has been figured that a horse can draw on a bad earth road about four times as much as he can carry on his back. On a good macadamized road he can pull ten times as much; on a wood-paved one, twenty-five times as much, and on steel rails, fifty-eight times as much.

WITH THE CANADIAN EDITORS.

When Senator Cox finished his examination of the insurance commission the latter is alleged to have heaved a sigh of relief.—Toronto World.

Dr. Torrey says he cannot convert Ottawa with British hymn books. We rather fancy it will keep him hustling with any kind of hymn books.—Toronto News.

Although Colonel Gourdeau and Commander Spain are positive that the Arctic had not one drop too much aboard, some one may object that the Colonel and the Commander have the Rideau Club notion of bare necessities.—Toronto Star.

The Chicago meat packers have sent a man to Washington to ask a lot of congressmen and senators to go to Chicago and spend a week, and see with their own eyes how clean the meat packeries are. We have no doubt whatever that they are clean—as clean as they can be made—now.— Hamilton Spectator.

Congress has passed a bill authorizing negotiations with Great Britain for the preservation of Niagara. The bill declares the right of the United States to take an unlimited supply for such purposes as are served by the Chicago drainage canal. This will naturally establish our right to take as much as we want from the Niagara River.—Toronto Globe.

The Canadian West does not like to be constantly described as "Northwestern Canada," and the point seems to be well taken. Minnesota and the Dakotas, just across the international boundary line, are quite properly classed as "Northwestern" States, but that is no reason why Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan should be designated by the same adjective. These Provinces lie along the southern boundary of Canada. As well call Texas a Northwestern State as Manitoba a Northwestern Province. The term "northwestern" should be relegated to the Yukon, Northern British Columbia and the lower reaches of the Mackenzie River.— Toronto News.

There is nothing that warrants a departure from the regular Parliamentary practice of investigation by committee, whether by the general right of inquiring into the public accounts or in investigating a definite charge made on the responsibility of a member. Sir Wilfrid Laurier has declared that the fullest and freest opportunity will be given for probing into any circumstance that appears suspicious. This is the keynote of the situation. It is what the public will expect. The Opposition may be depended upon to be zealous, and the supporters of the Government should not, from a mistaken desire to thwart their political foes, allow themselves to be put in the position of being less zealous.—Toronto Globe.

One of the party organs urgently advised the Government to submit the question of the honesty of the Interior Department management to a committee as proposed. That paper stated that were such a course taken the Opposition would be in a dilemma at once. The innocent Sifton, and the equally innocent Oliver, could appear before the Parliamentary tribunal and could floor their enemies and establish their freedom from guilt. Why was this not done? Why was the Government afraid to follow up Sifton's foolish bluff? Does anybody believe that Sir Wilfrid Laurier would have refused an enquiry if he had supposed that an investigation would have resulted in the confusion of his opponents.—Toronto Mail and Empire.

Compulsory voting does not appeal to the average mind as a desirable addition to the electoral machinery of Canada. It is asked, to what purpose shall a free elector be dragged as it were with a rope around his neck to mark a ballot, which he is still privileged to spoil? The purely mechanical act of dropping a piece of paper into the slot is nothing if it fails to register the will of the voter. On the other hand, abstention from the polls is a more or less valuable index of the drift of popular feeling. Where a voter is dissatisfied or indifferent he should have the right as a citizen to express it in his own way, by voting or not as he may think best. As an interference with personal liberty the proposal of compulsory voting is to be unhesitatingly condemned.—Bruce Times.

No Fair at Peterboro.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Peterboro', Ont., June 16.—The directors of the Peterboro' Industrial Exhibition have decided not to hold a fair this fall. They asked the city for a guarantee of $1000 or a cash grant of $600, and the council granted only $400 on condition that the county council gave $250. The directors have had personally to make good a deficit for 1905. The exhibition has been in existence some thirty years.

The Migration of Birds.

In the last publication of the British Ornithologists' Club it is mentioned that 15,000 records of the arrival of bird immigrants in Great Britain were made. Twenty-nine species of birds were under observation, and maps are made showing not only their "ports of arrival," but the successive stages by which they probably travel up or across country. In the case of the swallow and the chiff-chaff it appears that the chief periods for migrants crossing the Channel last year were, respectively, April 9th to 12th, April 26th to 28th, and May 7th to 9th, and that these migrations were made in spite of weather. The house martins came on April 10th to 16th, April 18th to 19th, and April 24th to 27th. All these migrations were traced northward; but later immigration of martins on May 7th and 8th could not be traced, and it is likely that these birds flew to more northern breeding grounds than England. The swallows arrived in a broad front all along the south coast; the martins concentrated their arriving squadrons on Hampshire and Dorset.

THE WEATHER

PROBABILITIES FOR THE NEXT 24 HOURS

Mostly fine and warm; but some local showers or thunderstorms.

To-day began rather threateningly. The sun had hardly peeped over the horizon's rim when the sky became clouded and seemed to forebode rain, much to the disappointment of those who had intended to take advantage of to-day for a trip to the country. But the weather has proved so continuously fine of late that even if Old Probs' prediction of local showers or storms should be realized no one would have a very good right to complain.

Montreal Weather Statistics.

Readings by Hearn & Harrison's Standard barometer:

At noon yesterday, 29.89; at 8 a.m. to-day, 29.90, 11 a.m. to-day, 29.92.

The sun rose this morning at 4.10 o'clock, and will set this evening at 7.51 o'clock.

Improvements at Manoir Richelieu

During the past winter a Swimming Pool has been built at the Manoir Richelieu, which will compare favorably with any in the country. The salt water of the St. Lawrence, salt as the ocean itself will be pumped in and heated to between 60 and 70 degrees, the entire pool will be open to the sun, and with the dressing rooms has been built south of the present Billiard and Amusement Hall, to which the Bowling Alley has been added, thus combining all indoor sports virtually under one roof, Billiards Pool, Shuffle Board, Ping Pong, Bowling and Swimming. The water in the pool can be arranged at from the wading depth for the children to five feet and over for the most expert Water Polo game, and around the edge are placed Spring Boards, a Chute, Rings and a Trapeze. The sections with dressing rooms for men and women have their respective Shower Baths, with Hot and Cold Needle Sprays, etc., and over those dressing rooms is an Observation Gallery for spectators to watch the swimming, water polo or sports which may be going on in the pool on the one side and on the other the bowling or bowling tournaments which may be going on in the Bowling Alley. A position for the Orchestra has been arranged, and a Musical Programme will be rendered daily between eleven and one or during the popular swimming hours.

HIS ADVICE WAS NOT DESIRED

So Members of the Roads Committee Politely Told Alderman Daniel Gallery.

The question of the Montreal Southern Counties Railway Company again came up before the Roads Committee yesterday afternoon. The president and vice-president of the company appeared before the committee and asked to be allowed to make use of the city streets in running their line into the city. The City Attorneys were consulted and their answer was that a by-law would have to be passed by the Council before permission could be given to the company. It was therefore decided to bring the matter before the Council.

The discussion of a sewer, which it was claimed the Markets' Committee had ordered to be put in without the authorization of the Roads Committee led Ald. Giroux to criticize the conduct of City Surveyor Barlow in having prepared specifications for the Markets Committee at the request of Ald. Levy and without the knowledge of the Roads Committee.

Ald. Giroux proposed that a motion be passed to the effect that Mr. Barlow should write to the Markets Committee and let them know that the Roads Committee disclaimed all responsibility for the work. The whole question was held over, however, until the matter should come before the Council at its next meeting. Ald. Gallery, who had entered the committee room during the discussion, interposed and made some remarks which Ald. Giroux regarded as being opposed to his proposal and opinions; and the latter in a brief but pithy speech informed Ald. Gallery that he believed the Roads Committee could look after its own concerns without any assistance from the outside, be it from what source it might. Ald. Gallery in rebuttal explained to the chairman that any member of the Council had the same privileges as the members of the committee in the matter of joining in their discussions. The chairman, however, seemed to differ on this point from the representative of St. Ann's, who shortly after withdrew from the arena and assumed the role of interested spectator.

Mr. R. Bolte was appointed secretary of the committee after a service of several years in the capacity of assistant-secretary.

A Chance For Their Lives!

Shall the Mothers and Babes Have an Outing This Summer!

There was something pathetic yesterday afternoon in the sight of young mothers walking about the dusty streets, wan and tired looking, carrying in their arms little white-faced babies. As summer weather goes in large cities, yesterday was not such a terribly hot day. Indeed those who had houses with a little bit of ground about them or a shaded balcony, would not have suffered any discomfort. To the people who live in large numbers in small rooms it is different. The babies moan and cry pitifully. The mothers must take them out doors. The only place for them is the street; the sidewalks have absorbed the heat of the sun and hold it even long after they are on the shady side; the roads are ill-kept and dusty, but it is better than indoors.

When the hot weather begins the death rate follows the thermometer. It is shocking to think of, but one of these days which lead some of us to say, thoughtlessly: "Getting warm to-day," often means death to scores of babies, and anguish to many poor mothers.

It is to relieve something of this distress and give as many as possible a chance for their lives that the Fresh Air Fund was organized. The committee are doing all that they can with the means at their disposal. If contributions are generous the good that they can accomplish will be correspondingly greater. Many mothers and children are eagerly scanning the columns of the papers to-day to see what their chances of a brief trip to the lake front this year are going to be. The Star acqnowledges the following additional contributions since last week:

METHODISTS AND ANDREW CARNEGIE

Special to The Montreal Star.

Toronto, Ont., June 16.—In presenting the report of the educational department of the Toronto Methodist Conference yesterday, Rev. Dr. Potts admitted having, with Chancellor Burwash, sent a letter to Andrew Carnegie, representing the readiness of Victoria College to share in the big steel manufacturer's munificence. They had hoped to get $100,000, but Mr. Carnegie had kept them on the tenter hooks of expectation, and, only after requesting further details, promised $50,000 for a building on condition the college raised a like amount.

Dr. Potts also reported that negotiations for the building of a Methodist Ladies' College, that would be a credit to Canada, were in progress.

In speaking of the work of the Sunday School committee, Dr. Crews stated that all Sunday Schools had been purged of every work that was disloyal to the Motherland, that favored card playing and dancing, or that used profane expressions.

JAPANESE TO BE EXCLUDED FROM AMERICAN NAVY.

They Have Been Learning Altogether Too Much About American Service.

New York, June 16.—All Japanese are to be excluded from the American navy on July 1 unless they produce citizenship papers or a signed declaration that they intend to take out the same. In the future no Japanese will be allowed in the navy unless he renounces the Mikado in favor of the Stars and Stripes. Orders to drop the names of all alien Japanese from the papers of every warship in this country have been issued by the Secretary of the Navy, Mr. Bonaparte. He further directs that the places of Japanese who have been employed as stewards and servants are to be filled by American negroes.

Officers of the navy yard in Brooklyn say that it has been discovered that the Japanese Government has been able through its subjects on board American ships to learn altogether too much about the Yankee service, not only as to the personnel, but also as to plans for future defence. Hence Secretary Bonaparte's order. The story is told by officers of the American battleships now at anchor in the North river that less than a month ago a midshipman discovered a Japanese steward making plans of the business section of the turrets of one of the latest types of warships. His personal effects were searched by order of the commander of the ship. It was discovered that he had been working for weeks on plans of the ship, and that he was a remarkably fine draughtsman. The matter was reported to Washington, and was doubtless one of the things which caused the order issued against the Japanese.

SWEPT OVER NIAGARA.

Three Saw Unknown Man Carried Over Falls.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Niagara Falls, Ont., June 16.—An unknown man was carried over the Horseshoe Falls, this morning, before the eyes of A. McEachren, a hack driver, and two men who were in his carriage at the head of Goat Island. The man came down the river in a boat, but soon after he struck the White Horse rapids the boat overturned and he was thrown into the water. The current, which sets across the river for the Horseshoe Falls above the Three Sister Islands caught him. The man struggled desperately, but made no headway and, being two hundred feet away, the men on shore could render no assistance. No one is reported missing in Chippewa, nor are any boats out. It is possible that the man started from Lasalle or Tonawanda, on the American side.

Toronto University Appointments.

Toronto, Ont., June 16.—The following provincial appointments have been made: Mr. M. R. Riddell, an honor graduate of the University of Toronto, to be lecturer in mechanical engineering at the School of Practical Science; Mr. Clarkson W. James, private secretary to the Minister of Education to be also secretary to the educational department. Technically the new university act went into force to-day, but the Board of Governors, which it provides for, not having yet been appointed by the Government, Ontario's great educational institution will go along for a little while under its present rulers. It is expected that the board will be announced early next week.

Municipal Ownership in Ottawa.

Ottawa, June 16.—The first report of the Ottawa Electric Commission just issued shows that after meeting all operating expenses during the ten and a half months the electric plant has been owned by the city, there is a balance on the right sight of a little less than one thousand dollars. Under civic operation there has been an increase of forty per cent. in the number of customers.

Special Notice.

At the Food Fair, recently held in the Victoria rink, on Drummond street, perhaps the most unique exhibit on record was that of the popular bread merchant, Jas. Strachan. The booth was cleverly decorated throughout with loaves of bread and buns, and in the centre was a huge barrel filled with loaves of bread. Around the booth an immense and eager crowd of people gathered—for what? The point of interest was right in the foreground of the booth, in the shape of a handsome three hundred dollar Lindsay Piano, to be presented to the person who would come nearest to guessing the number of loaves and buns contained in the booth and barrel. Six persons in all guessed the exact number and their names are as follows: Miss A. Langevin, 935 St. Andre street; W. E. Sullivan, 51 Church street; C. DuMouchel, 5 Monte du Zouave street; B. Lamontaigne, 150 Drolet street; Willie Murray, 55 Fort street, and W. A. Murray, 164 St. James street. As there is only one piano to be divided among six people, the way out of the difficulty has been arranged by the six successful persons mentioned above, agreeing to meet at Lindsay's Piano Store, on St. Catherine street, at 3 p.m., Monday, June 18, where they will draw lots for the piano.

The spirit of enterprise which actuated Mr. Strachan regarding the Food Fair, has followed him throughout his business career, and he has trebled their capacity and enormously increased their output in the last five years. At the present time he is extending their premises in order to keep pace with the demand for Strachan's Bread.

OLIVER WITHDRAWS PROPOSED TAX

COL. SMART'S RESIGNATION

House Discusses Conditions Under Which Indians Shall Surrender Lands.

Special Staff Correspondence.

Press Gallery, House of Commons, Ottawa, Ont., June 16.—Government bills relating to departmental matters occupied the entire sitting of the House yesterday. The Immigration bill was up again when the Minister of the Interior withdrew the clause proposing a poll tax on immigrants coming to Canada. Good progress was made with the business before the House.

Immediately after the opening of the House, Mr. Oliver introduced a Government bill to amend the act respecting roads and road allowances in Alberta and Saskatchewan. The bill, said Mr. Oliver, proposed to make the existing law more workable. It was read a first time.

LT.-COL. SMART'S RESIGNATION.

When the House was about to proceed to the orders of the day, Dr. Daniel, Conservative of St. John, rose to enquire about the reported resignation of Lieut.-Colonel Smart, of the 13th Dragoons.

The answer of Sir Frederick Borden was to the effect that the resignation had not taken place. He had enquired at noon of the officials in his department respecting the matter, and up to that time no such resignation had been received.

The House then went into committee of the whole on the bill of Mr. Lennox, Conservative of South Simcoe, respecting judges of the Provincial Courts. The bill prohibited judges from acting as arbitrators, referees, or valuators, except at the instance of the Crown or to decide issues arising out of suits. Mr. Lennox aimed at cases where a judge often, to the neglect of their judicial duties, acted for corporations or individuals, as arbitrators, for the purpose of earning an addition to his salary. It was not in the interest of the proper administration of justice.

MINISTER OF JUSTICE OBJECTS.

The Minister of Justice pointed out that the bill would defeat the object aimed at. The law of last session ordered all judges to devote all their time to their judicial duties, but under the bill two parties to a dispute could secure an arbitration before a judge by first suing out a writ, for the bill allowed a judge to arbitrate issues arising out of a suit. There was other criticism, and finally the committee rose and the bill stands over. It is practically killed for the present session.

The House then went into committee on the bill respecting penitentiaries. This is a long measure, containing 75 clauses. It is practically a consolidation of the law relating to penitentiaries, containing provisions respecting penitentiaries and their limits, inspection, staff, privileges of visitors, transfer of juvenile offenders to reformatories, dealing with insane prisoners, treatment of prisoners, discharge of convicts, etc., also the pay of penitentiary officials. One clause provides that all convicts shall be kept constantly at hard labor during ten hours a day, except on Sundays and religious holidays, "but no labor shall be let out to any company or person."

The bill was passed in committee and read a third time.

The House in committee then returned to the bill consolidating the law respecting immigration and immigrants.

HEAD TAX STRUCK OUT.

Mr. Oliver, Minister of the Interior, moved that the clause proposing to place a poll tax of $2 on all adult immigrants coming to Canada be struck out. He did this, he said, because of the opposition that had developed to the clause and in order to facilitate the passage of the bill.

Mr. Wilson, Conservative, Lennox, objected. He was in favor of the clause. The only objection to it was to the effect that it was inconsistent with the policy of bonusing immigration, but that policy might be abandoned, and then it would be well for the Government to have the power to put in force such a tax as the clause proposed. It was time, said Mr. Wilson, to place some restriction on immigration.

However, Mr. Oliver had his way and the poll tax clause was dropped. The committee proceeded to deal with the clauses that had been allowed to stand when the bill was considered on Wednesday last. They related to matters of detail and did not affect the principle of the measure. The bill was passed in committee and now stands for a third reading.

Another Government bill entitled an act respecting forest reserves was also considered in committee of the whole and passed.

INDIAN LANDS ACT.

The next bill considered was that to amend the Indian act so as to facilitate the surrender of land held by the Indians.

As the law stands now the Indian upon surrendering, receives only ten per cent. of the price. That is not a great inducement towards surrendering and the bill proposes to increase the proportion paid down. The ten per cent. was paid the Indians and the balance went into a trust fund for the benefit of the Indian bands surrendering the land.

According to the treaty with the Manitoba Indians, each family of five was entitled to 160 acres, but they held 326,000 acres, being 106,000 acres more than the family arrangement entitled them to.

In Alberta and Saskatchewan each family of five was entitled to 640 acres. They held 2,619,154 acres being more than the treaty arrangements called for to the extent of 824,500 acres.

These excesses came about by reason of a want of exact information respecting the Indian population when the reserves were set aside. But the reserves were created and the Indians' title was good.

Mr. Henderson, Conservative, (Halton), objected to the Indians being allowed to sell their lands. They were increasing in value. Col. Sam. Hughes took the opposite view. These lands ought to be thrown open to settlement. Mr. Boyce (Algoma), thought abuses were committed by railway companies expropriating Indian lands.

The bill was reported back to the House with amendments. The amendments were given a second reading and the bill stands for third reading as amended. The House adjourned at midnight.

Liverpool, June 16. — Two more of the crew of the steamship Haverford, who were injured by an explosion of naphtha fumes while unloading the ship, died yesterday, making the known deaths ten. Three men are missing. As to them, the police theory is that they were blown overboard into the dock. Others of the victims are in a most critical condition, and their deaths are expected at any moment.

WHEAT ACREAGE IN MANITOBA LARGER

Special to the Montreal Star.

Winnipeg, June 16. — The spring crop report of the Provincial Department of Agriculture, showing the acreage planted this season, has just been issued. It gives the information that the wheat acreage has increased by half a million over last year's record figures, bringing Manitoba over the three million mark for that cereal alone. The land sown to oats was 1,155,361 acres, an increase of 124,722, while the barley acreage has nearly reached half a million, being, in fact, 474,242. The total increase in the grain acreage over last year is 655,836. The other crops also show an increased acreage.

SUIT IN PARIS OVER FAMOUS NECKLACE.

Jewels Were Formerly the Property of Marie Antoinette.

Paris, June 16.—The famous necklace that once belonged to Marie Antoinette and is now the property of Don Jaime de Bourdon, has been the subject of a complicated lawsuit in Paris.

The Prince some time ago sought to sell the necklace, and went to M. Froment-Meurice, a well-known jeweller. The latter said that it would take some time to find a purchaser, so in the meantime, as a matter of precaution, the necklace was pledged at the Mont de Piete. Some time afterward the Prince instructed the jeweller to redeem the necklace. Then there appeared on the scene a man who was known to the jeweller as a friend of Don Jaime. This person represented himself to be the secretary of Don Jaime, and induced the jeweller to hand over the necklace to him. He then took it to Messrs. Pollak and Rothschild, the bankers, and negotiated a loan upon it, still representing himself as the owner's representative.

The pseudo secretary was subsequently prosecuted for fraud and sent to prison. Don Jaime then asked that his necklace should be returned to him, but the bankers demanded the money advanced upon it. Don Jaime sued the jeweller and the bankers for damages, and the bankers in their turn sued Don Jaime for the money advanced to the false secretary.

The whole affair was threshed out, and the court, in a judgment worthy of Solomon, apportioned the blame all round. It held that all three parties to the action had been culpable in some degree or other; the Prince for admitting to his intimacy a man capable of fraud, the jeweller for parting with a necklace without a written order, and the bankers for dealing with an intermediary without making due enquiry. Don Jaime gets no damages, and each of the parties concerned has to pay a third of the cost of redecming the necklace.

Special to The Montreal Star.

Winnipeg, June 16.—The Electric Street Railway have announced a schedule of rates for power and lighting, consequent upon the completion of their electrical power plant on Winnipeg River at Lac du Bonnet. The schedule is very satisfactory to the citizens, guaranteeing a reduction of from 50 to 75 per cent. in rates.

Power is cut from 12 and 12½c per hour for elevators and motors to 6 and 4c, respectively, and lighting will cost 10c instead of 20c. Further reductions are promised when the plant is working properly.

Michael Davitt; a True Gentleman.

(New York American.)

Michael Davitt showed his quality of mind and heart in the will he left behind him when he died almost as much as in the life he lived.

In life he was a man devoted earnestly, sincerely and self-sacrificingly to the cause of his country, Ireland. Never a rich man, never at any time free from the necessity of doing his day's toil in his profession of journalism in order to earn his day's bread, he never stepped aside from the straight path of devotion to the cause which he had made his own.

A good fighter, he was like most good fighters, without personal rancor. We doubt if there could be found in the memorials of other dead and gone champions of a hard-fighting cause words that ring more true, that appeal more thoroughly to the best in the hearts and minds of both friend and foe, than these quoted from Michael Davitt's will:

"To all my friends I leave kind thoughts; to my enemies the fullest possible forgiveness, and to Ireland my undying prayer for her absolute freedom and independence, which it was my life's ambition to try to obtain for her."

His diaries, he says, must not be published as such, and in no case without his wife's permission. "But on no account must anything harsh or censorious about any person, dead or alive, who ever worked for Ireland be printed or published, or used so as to give pain to friend or relative."
