VISIT TO ST. REGIS

Describes Something That Can Be Seen While the Leaves are Golden, How a Bleak, Barren Spot came to be known as St. Regis.

The Rounder in the St. Lawrence Plaindealer writes entertainingly of a visit to the St. Regis Indian Reservation as follows:

"I have some time in the past spoken of St. Regis and the Indian reservation. I know a man who took that trip recently, only he went to Hogansburg and never drove down the two miles to the Indian reservation. He did not see the wonderful old church and the priest's home; he never saw the wonderful sweep of the St. Lawrence at that point. He missed the sign, 'Ice Cream, Fish and Cold Beer Here,' on one of the Indian shacks and never got a chance to prove its truthfulness. He didn't have an opportunity to look the red man in the face and think of the 'story,' the remarkable history, of that collection of human beings. He probably had never read about the origin of St. Regis. He didn't realize that the Indians have been there one hundred and sixty years. He didn't know about the history of the old church bell that isn't there, or the Deerfield Massacre, nor that he could stand there with one foot in prohibition U.S.A. and the other foot in licensed Quebec. I am going to try and tell you something about St. Regis.

In 1760, St. Regis, bleak, barren, sandy, with only the broad St. Lawrence to attract with its fishing, was founded by the Indian sons of a Massachusetts Puritan. 37 years before about 1720, 3 Tarbell children of Puritan parentage were playing in a barn near the settlement of Groton, Mass. One eyeing their parents found their little girl lying on the barn floor with a broken leg. She said Indians had come and taken her two brothers. She had escaped to the rafters and had not been discovered. In climbing down after the boys she had fallen and broken her leg. The two brothers were taken to Caughnawaga, pronounced (Cog-ne-wa) an Indian village nine miles from Montreal.

There they grew up and married daughters of two Indian chiefs. As white men they towered mentally above the Indians and friction and factions. The missionaries could not untangle the tangle and finally begged the Tarbell brothers to leave and they with their wives and children and the parents of their wives finally departed some time between 1750 and 1760. They paddled up the St. Lawrence and finally pitched their wigwags on what is now the site of St. Regis. The brothers became chiefs of the tribe that gradually gathered there while in Groton today the Tarbell family has branched out and the descendants of the original Tarbells are well known. When you are at St. Regis contrast mentally the lines of descent of the Tarbell Puritans, the light and dark sides of their lives. The "dark Tarbells" named the place where they finally settled as Ak-wis-ses-ne. Where the Partridge Drums. In 1760, Father Anthony Gordon, a Jesuit priest of Caughnawaga, went up the river and joined the newly formed settlement, meeting Lord Amherst who was ascending the river to complete the conquest of Canada. Gordon named the place St. Regis after Jean Francis Regis of the society of Jesus, a zealous missionary in France who died in 1640, whose tomb has become a shrine. The missionaries of Montreal urged the Indians there to move to St. Regis to get them away from Montreal rum and sinfulness and several families did move.

If you are fortunate when visiting St. Regis you may witness a religious ceremony of some sort performed around the totem pole, erected on the village green opposite Uncle Sam's custom house. You will then push on a few rods down to the church. It and the priest's home stand in Canada but the road you drive on is in the United States. You can't miss the church. Go in, it is always open and free and you are welcomed. It has a history marked by sacrifice and toil seldom seen. If you know nothing of its history you will still marvel at its remarkable interior, at the walls which are four feet thick, and you should hear the bell. It is in a class alone. Father Gordon's first task in 1760 was to erect a church. It was of logs and he lived in one end of it. Two years later it was burned and he built a better church and secured a bell for it. Since that date the church records are intact. Father Gordon remained fifteen toilsome years when he was followed by other priests until 1785 when a Scotchman, Father McDonald, came and erected a stone church with walls four feet thick, with an interior quaintly decorated and he built him a stone home. He remains now rest beneath the church.

In 1865, the interior of the church was burned and it took 18 years of self sacrifice to rebuild it for the walls were damaged and the decorations ruined. Today the church stands a splendid monument to steady religious striving and almost undreamed of sacrifice on the part of its priests. A priest at St. Regis must always be lonesome and his task must oftentimes appear thankless. He must learn to speak in the Iroquois tongue, a language more difficult than the most modern tongues. The man who attends to the religious upbringing of these sons of the forest trail must be capable of any all self sacrifice and it is seldom that he witnesses the fruits of his labor for physical and spiritual progress is measured not by a few years but by generations.

If some one should tell you that the bell at St. Regis is 216 years old and that it has a wonderful history that it is the old Deerfield bell do not believe them. And yet the St. Regis bell has an interesting history. About eight-two years ago the old original St. Regis bell, which is said had been in constant use since the erection of the second church in 1762, became cracked and it was decided to have it recast. It was taken down and to Ogdensburg for the recasting. So great was the fear of the Indians that the same old metal, might not be used, that they appointed a committee to carry the bell to Ogdensburg, and to camp in the foundry until it was recast. The famous Deerfield bell was seized at Deerfield on the Connecticut river in Massachusetts, 56 years before St. Regis was founded. It was taken to Caughnawaga and put in the church there and it is not at all probable that when the Tarbells left that place they were allowed to carry away the bell, nor that it has since been removed. But because someone is liable to tell you that the bell at St. Regis is the old Deerfield bell, and because some of my readers may some day automobile down through the Berkshires and visit the old town of Deerfield and see its old church and the graveyard where the victims of the massacre lie they ought to know something about the old historic relic.

Thus reads the Deerfield bell legend. About 1700 Father Nicholas built a church at Caughnawaga, with a belfry. Assembling his congregation he explained to them the purpose of a belfry and described as best he might the peals of a bell. So vivid was his portrayal of the tones of a bell as it would sound in the forest aisles that he created a religious "bell frenzy" among the Indians and they saved and they saved and they saved and gathered together their furs and shipped them to France, the only place where a bell then could be obtained, to be exchanged for the coveted piece of metal. The bell was shipped but on the high seas an English privateer captured the French ship that was carrying it and brought the bell to Deerfield. The people there purchased it for the church then being erected by the famous Rev. John Williams. Father Nicholas must have been a blood-thirsty fanatic because when he learned where the bell was he called his braves together, told them how the sacred object was retained in purgatory by heretics and so inflamed them that they donned their war paint and took up their hatchets. Fortunately for them the governor of Canada was sending a force against the British in Massachusetts and the one hundred and fifty Caughnawaga Indians fell in behind the little army of two hundred Frenchmen. During that march of from two hundred to three hundred miles up the frozen Lake Champlain and on through the snow bound forests when the French were falling by the wayside these Indians plodded steadily on. Nothing froze them, nothing daunted them or stopped them. They won the unbounded admiration of the French soldiers who did not know the motive that spurred them on. After weeks of toilsome march they reached Deerfield in the dead of winter when a noisy crowd covered the deep snows. Two miles out of Deerfield the little army of French and Indians halted until after midnight, the 29th of February, 1704. Then they stole upon the little stockade, advancing and again stopping with each gust of wind, so that the crust breaking beneath their feet sounded like the ice blown from the forest trees at each puff of wind. The Deerfield people were sleeping when the assault was made. One hundred and twelve prisoners were captured, some of whom were later killed. 47 were massacred. Of all the buildings in the village only one was not burned. That building was the church containing the sacred bell.

The next morning the one hundred and fifty Indians appeared before Father Nicholas and asked that they be lead to the bell which they had reached through terrific toil and hardship. As they stood around the church he rang it for them. To their untutored minds it sounded like the voice of God. Four of them started with it hung on poles for Canada, but they could not carry it through the deep snows. Exhausted they buried it on the shores of Lake Champlain. That spring Father Nichols started out after it with a team of oxen and night later on the Indians of Caughnawaga heard, dimly distant in the great forest, a wonderful voice, the voice of the bell, and they went out and met it: They strewed its pathway with flowers and entwined it with garlands. It spoke to them in strange and enticing music and they placed it in the belfry made for it. Over a trail of blood it had come to them to lead them to better and nobler thoughts and modes of living, and even yet with the sundown it still sends forth its notes dwarfed by larger bells, but still the notes first heard in 1704. This is the story of the famous Caughnawaga bell.

I started to tell of the St. Regis you are going to visit some day this Fall when the golden leaves have come and the land is like a rainbow. I have digressed and taken you to Deerfield. I wish I had space to tell you more of the Indians at St. Regis, now living in two countries, Canada and the United States. They have been tossed hither and yon during times of warfare; how their lands have been in dispute; how they have asked for their "rights" from both countries; how their title to the lands they hold seems vague and legendary, but space is short and the story is largely statistical. At different times the French and English and the United States have disputed for the territory at St. Regis. The Indians there are one of the Seven Nations. The original Seven Nations consisted of the Iroquois, Algonquin, and the Nipissing tribes at the "Lake of Two Mountains." The Iroquois tribe at Caughnawaga, the Oswegatchie tribe at La Presentation, the Hurons at Lorette, near Quebec, and a settlement of Abenakis at St. Francis below Montreal. La Presentation was a French fort at Ogdensburg before Ogdensburg existed, and when that fort was given up the Oswegatchie tribe was scattered and the Iroquois at St. Regis were taken in to fill the vacancy in the Seven Nations.

These are the people you can see at St. Regis. There the village stands practically as it stood over one hundred years ago. For years the Indians lived on revenue from the chase and from fishing. When furs were no longer obtainable they took to weaving baskets and we saw many of them in our villages peddling their wares. During recent years we have wondered what has become of them. They still make baskets and curios. It is their main occupation. A firm sprang up in Bombay, four miles away, who realized their opportunity. They market the Indian wares throughout the United States. They furnish molds for the baskets to make them uniform and tell the Indians what to make and how to make it. The Shields Brothers' goods are known far and near, and they are the source of much of the prosperity at St. Regis.

THE DROP IN VICTORY BONDS.

Some surprise is being expressed locally at the recent reduction made in the price of Victory Bonds by the special committee that has the matter in hand. Naturally the holders of these issues who are compelled for one reason or another to realise on them are dissatisfied when they find that they cannot obtain the full amount they paid and are inclined to blame the government for not maintaining them at their par of value. The government, however, is not bound to redeem the bonds until their due date and cannot be expected to do this at an earlier date. The trouble arises from the abnormal state of the money market and the fact that securities of undoubted worth are being offered at higher rates of interest than those carried by the Victory loans. In addition, to the holders obliged to realise their bonds for personal and other necessary reasons, there are others who are attracted by the higher rates available and sell their bonds for the higher purpose of securing a more lucrative investment. This latter cause has thrown more Victory bonds on the market than there are buyers and the ordinary law of supply and demand prevails. There can be no doubt, however, that when these offerings reach the ultimate investor and normal money conditions are restored, the Victory Bonds will appreciate in value and pass beyond par. Holders of Victory Bonds who can afford to wait need not disturb them-seives about present prices, even should these drop farther before the reaction begins.

Even as matters stand, subscribers to the Canadian war loans are in much better case than the subscribers to the Liberty loans in the United States. On May 31 last there were outstanding across the border approximately $1,824,000,000 of Liberty bonds, bearing interest rates from 3 1/2 per cent. to 4 1/2 per cent., maturing at dates ranging from September 15, 1928, to June 15, 1947. That sum represents substantially what was paid for them, but to-day they are saleable only at discounts aggregating approximately $1,500,000,000. This last figure is the measure of the direct loss to those in the United States—mostly persons of moderate means—who bought the bonds in good faith and upon ot-

SHALL IT HAPPEN AGAIN?

Canadians are aware of a wave of feeling in the United States in condemnation of the actions of politicians in that land in blocking the passage of the Peace Treaty and the acceptance of the covenant of the League of Nations. From this distance it is difficult to estimate the extent of this feeling of dissatisfaction, continual evidences of which are furnished, first in one quarter and then in another. The following article from the Duluth Herald gives a glimpse of the feeling in the city where the incident occurred:

It happened in a restaurant. The door opened and a young man came in carrying another young man on his shoulders. The young man who was being carried had no legs—only stumps were left.

"The war?" somebody asked.

"The war," somebody who knew answered.

"Damn the Kaiser," exclaimed a man at a table near by; and everybody fervently echoed his sentiment. Everybody, that is, but one.

"No," said one, "don't damn the Kaiser. He's damned anyway. What we should do is to damn Lodge and all the others who have stepped in to prevent the carrying out of a plan—the only plan before the world—of organizing civilization to prevent a recurrence of a war such as that which blasted the life of that young man and of millions of other young men and that left the world in a state of disorder that this generation will not see the end of."

And the vote was unanimous that this man was right. Brandon Sun.

Victory Bonds

I have secured a block of $100,000 of 1934 VICTORY BONDS, which I now offer to the people of Huntingdon County at $93 and accrued interest. It is the general consensus of opinion of all bond dealers, that this is the lowest point these bonds will touch, and as soon as the crop is moving from the West and money gets more plentiful, they will soon start to rise.

I would advise all my old clients who wish to invest, to secure some of these bonds, as they will net you 6 1/2 per cent. at the price I am selling them at.

Send your orders direct to me at Huntingdon, either by phone or letter and I will have the bonds shipped direct to your bank. All orders will be filled in their turn until this block is sold.

Do not delay, as this price will not remain long.

Last call for fall fruits

DO not miss your chance to preserve these last sun-ripened gifts of summertime. How your folks will enjoy them, and how pleased you will be to serve them when canned goods made with top-priced sugar are out of reach. The time for preserving foresight is when the fruit is still in season.

Lantic is your best friend in retaining the rare bouquet of luscious plums and peaches, of delicately-flavoured pears. Its tiny, snow-white crystals of purest cane dissolve so quickly into syrup of concentrated sweetness, that you can smile at the old-time caution "Let it simmer until the sugar is all dissolved"—because it's FINE.

Fruit will retain its natural form and colour because overcooking is unnecessary. Lantic WILL go further, and so costs less.

HUNTINGDON, Q. SEPT. 30th, 1920

NOTES OF THE WEEK

The Sinn Fein propaganda spread through the United States is becoming intolerable even to Americans and in order to get some truth about a question, which is none of their business, a committee of one hundred have formed for the purpose of investigating conditions in Ireland. The committee proposes to sit in New York and have the acting Lord Mayor of Cork, Lord Mayors of Belfast, Londonderry and Thurles, chairmen of towns and other prominent men appear before them to give evidence and a list of names has been sent to Sir Auckland Geddes, the British ambassador at Washington asking that it be transmitted to the British Government. How would the American Senate receive a request from an English committee of 100, asking that the Mayor of Detroit, the Governor of Michigan, the Mayor of San Francisco, the Governor of California and other prominent men appear before them in order that they might put them in the witness stand to gain some information regarding the negro riots in Detroit and the Japanese question in California? The efforts of Sinn Feiners, Socialists, and Bolshevik followers to persuade Government intervention in a friendly foreign country's domestic concerns is vicious, vile and foolish. The deliberate efforts to promote bad feeling between the United States and Britain is criminal and it comes at a time when many people believe that better relations between English speaking peoples is their duty and will promote good for all mankind. Led by an escaped convict from a British prison and assisted by the gutter press who live by what they can extort many of our neighbors are being deceived. Women sympathizers burnt a British flag in the streets of Washington. Bishop Gallagher of Detroit, newly elected President of the Friends of Irish Freedom, is reported to have issued a statement: "Americans of Irish blood supported and held up the hands of the senators who opposed the League of Nations and were one of the chief factors in preventing its ratification." Thus are the armies of Ireland, fanatics and Socialists, put before the good of the world and radicals are allowed to vent their venom against a friendly nation. Lloyd George would be justified in ignoring the request of the committee of 100 even though they may have made it with friendly intent.

During the past two weeks affairs in Ireland have taken a new twist. Police and military have reached the end of their forbearance and with the advent of a regiment of veterans who are styled Black and Tan police, Sinn Fein homes are burnt and their leaders are shot whenever any policemen are murdered by the Sinn Fein or barracks destroyed. These reprisals are drastic and follow swift on the heels of outrages and the populace must be terrified. The British Government have issued orders condemning these reprisals and are taking steps to prevent them, but with almost 100 policemen and soldiers murdered by the Sinn Feiners, it is not surprising that their comrades, though wrong feel justified in retaliating.

The announcement of decreases in the prices of necessities continues to please the public but as yet they have not had much effect upon the common purse; that will likely come later. Sugar, flour, ocean freight rates, some woollens, automobiles, butter, shoes, etc, show a drop in price but along with this pleasant news comes the alarming report of a likelihood that several manufacturing plants are likely to close or considerably lessen the number of their employees. Inflated prices and inflated wages apparently are to come down together, but they are unlikely to drop far or fast.

Cheaper material and a more plentiful supply of labor were given as the foundations for the opinion.

The war situation has not changed much during the week. The French in Paris are determined to stand a siege although many are suffering from want of food. Skirmishes between the Prussian besiegers and the French are of daily occurrence and much loss of life results.

Reports from the Red River district state small-pox is raging within 20 miles of Fort Garry (Winnipeg), and steps are being taken to cut off all communication in order to prevent if possible the spread of the disease.

La Patrie: "Whatever the political opinions may be in the different parties, nobody will refuse to acknowledge that the Right Hon. Mr. Meighen has firmly planted the landmark of his policy by his speech at Sherbrooke. Protection or free trade? Mr. Meighen is a protectionist, and all those who preach the abolition of the tariff and the free entry of foreign goods into Canada—farmers, Liberals and others—are his political adversaries. The barricade is there and one must be on the one side or the other. Assuredly, the Prime Minister is not wanting in a certain amount of swagger."

ORMSTOWN

The Academy held its annual Sports Day on Friday afternoon on the Show grounds. Howick school and several of the Parish schools sent representatives so that the different events of racing, jumping, pole vaulting, etc, were well contested. Quite a large number of spectators were present.

Saturday afternoon the Ormstown Bowling Club played its first friendly game in a two rink match with the Valleyfield Club on the latter Club's green. Although defeated as was expected by superior play the Club has hopes of making it more interesting for the Factory Town in the near future. The Ormstown team were very hospitably entertained by the Valleyfield Club. The players and score were as follows:

On Friday last when returning home by way of the Mill Dam one of our young financial men fell through the flooring of the flume into the water leading to the electric light wheel. Fortunately another party was along with him and seeing what had happened immediately got help from the caretaker of the mill and with a rope the young man was pulled from the water. He being a good swimmer was all that saved his life.

Dr. Margaret O'Hara of Dhar, India, was greeted with a large audience in St. Paul's Church on Sunday evening, when she told about her work in that far off country where she has spent thirty years in medical missionary work.

HOWICK

The changes in management of what is now named the Tourists' Hotel, might be termed kaleidoscopic both as regards its frequency and oddness of colors. These peculiarities, however, seem to be attractive rather than repellant, when the number of its frequenters are considered. The village authorities are not indifferent to the situation, but how to deal with itinerant proprietors is no easy question to solve. No doubt our Provincial laws are too loose altogether.

That large motor trucks of booze, piloted in advance by an auto with a chauffeur and a fat man with a cigar projecting from his face, can be allowed to pass through this prohibition district nightly without arrest, is a most discreditable state of affairs. And it is quite evident that cases of liquor are distributed along the route.

The Chateaugay River farm, previously owned by Joseph Turcot, V.S., son of the late Calixte Turcot, is being vacated by the present tenant, Mr. Crete, as it is sold to a Montreal buyer.

Programs for the coming S. S. Convention held next week have been received and complete preparations are being made for the reception of the numerous delegates expected.

RIVERFIELD

The sessions of the Montreal Presbyterial of the Women's Missionary Society which were held at Valleyfield last Friday proved as interesting as had been anticipated. The ladies who enjoyed the addresses given by Dr. Margaret O'Hara, regretted that more delegates had not been present. Dr. O'Hara has spent 30 years in India doing medical and missionary work. An opportunity will be afforded the ladies of this district to hear Dr. O'Hara tell of her work as she will address the Riverfield and Howick Women's Missionary Society in the Howick Church on Thursday evening, Sept. 30th.

The Sunshine Mission Band held their weekly meeting at 3 o'clock on Friday afternoon, when part of the time was spent in practising the music for Rally Day. After the program and business meeting, refreshments were enjoyed by all.

A large audience attended the special service in the Riverfield Church for Rally Day. The centre pews were occupied by the children who had decorated the church for the occasion with flowers and autumn leaves. Mrs. Jas. Dickell gave a very instructive and interesting talk on India, in addition to the inspiring address delivered by the Rev. K. L. Ballantyne, while the solo, "There were ninety and nine," which was sung by Mr. Weira of Howick was deeply appreciated.

The people of the fertile Creek Concession attended a delightful harvest Home Concert and social evening in their school house on Friday evening. The schoolhouse, which was beautifully decorated with Autumn leaves, flowers and fruit was filled to its capacity. The pleasure of the evening was increased by having both Dr. Whillans and Rev. K. L. Ballantyne present. The program proved especially interesting, as all the items were by home talent and of a varied nature, instrumental and violin music, Scotch dancing, dialogues and readings. Dr. Whillans, as usual, was very witty in his remarks as chairman. Ice cream and cake was served during intermission and an extremely pleasant evening was enjoyed by all present.

The classes for the Plowing Match to be held at Mr. Albert Brown's on Saturday, October 9th are very varied and should call forth many entries, thus making an interesting competition for honors.

The grounds for the War Memorial are being prepared by the committee and the erection and unveiling of the monument is looked forward to by the community.

BEAUHARNOIS

Mr. H. C. Courtney, late manager of the paper mill left town last week with his wife and family to take up his residence in the United States. Mr. Ferminger, the new manager at the mill, will reside in the house vacated by Mr. Courtney. This house was built by the company as a residence for the manager. The company has bought houses which belonged to the late X. F. Leduc, which are to be used as residences for the employees.

This town, like all other towns, is badly in need of comfortable houses, where people may have the opportunity of enjoying a little home comfort. A well is being drilled at the furniture factory to provide spring water for the houses.

We waited a long time for our roads, but the work is now being done well. The cement piers for the new bridge across the St. Louis River will soon be finished. A second pipe to carry water across the river is being sunk under the river. This pipe is not needed at present but will be kept in reserve in case anything happens to the present pipe, or in the time when more water will be required.

Mr. E. C. Budge had the satisfaction of winning first prize at the Toronto Exhibition for one of his Ayrshire heifers and also a champion prize. He has also sold one of his cows to the Minister of Agriculture in Newfoundland. Mr. Budge is working up a herd which will be second to none in the near future.

The Thank Offering meeting of the W. M. Society was held at the residence of Miss Kilgour last Tuesday evening, when an address was delivered by Dr. Margaret O'Hara of India. The gathering took the form of a social.

On the 12th of this month the town went back to standard time, but as many have to go down to the city each morning, having both times has been the cause of considerable confusion.

ST. AGNES

The community was shocked to hear of the sudden death on Tuesday of William Napier, one of the oldest residents of the district. Mr. Napier died dinner as usual and after leaving the table, went to the yard where he was found a few minutes later by his son. Death was evidently due to heart failure.

On Saturday evening the local Customs Officers at Dundee and St. Agnes made an attempt to stop a couple of American cars which had come into Canada after a load of liquor without reporting and had quite an exciting time of it. A barrier was placed across the road and the drivers were signalled to stop, but instead of doing so they put on more speed and rushed the barrier, breaking it down without injuring the car and continued on their way even though one of the officers opened up fire with a rifle and punctured one of the tires. The barrier was replaced on the road and a few minutes later another car drove in sight going the same direction as the first car while at the same time a third car came up the side road from another direction and both cars opened up fire on the officers. None of the officers were injured in any way and it could not be learned whether any of the occupants of the cars were hurt or not but tires on two of the cars were punctured by the rifle fire of the officers.

A short time after the above occurrence, still another car appeared, driven by one Derochie, who has quite a reputation as a booze runner. Derochie was signalled to stop but did not do so and was stopped forcibly by the officers, receiving some rather severe cuts about the face from the broken glass of the windshield.

A shooting affray, resulting in the death of Dan Bacon took place at Hogsburg, N.Y., on Friday about 6 o'clock. It appears that Dan and his brother, Ed, lived together and had a quarrel over a piece of property some time previously, not coming to any agreement. The two brothers visited the Fair at Potsdam on that day and Ed returning before Dan, proceeded to throw Dan's effects out of the house and locked the door. On Dan's return he broke down the door of the house and as he stepped inside Ed shot him. He was rushed to the Malone Hospital where he died the same night. Ed, was lodged in Malone jail. The murdered man was buried on Sunday.

HEMINGFORD

The Vaudreuil Dairy and Poultry Farm has purchased in this district 27 milk cows costing $4,000 and at Herdman 15 head costing $2,100.

Mr. G. Lowinsbrough has sold his property to Mr. Dunsmore, Emigration Officer, reported price $4,100. Mr. and Mrs. Lowinsbrough are moving to Regina.

Silo filling is the order of the day, corn has matured much better than expected.

Mr. John Brogan's tender of about $3,900 was accepted for the construction of the new Catholic school.

FRANKLIN CENTRE

A spell of wet weather kept the farmers back with their work and some grain was out for over two weeks. Much of it had to be cut with mowing machines and was considerably damaged. The crop of corn is good, but owing to storms which knocked some of it down, difficulty was experienced in cutting it.

INTER PROVINCIAL PLOWING MATCH

The inter provincial plowing match under the auspices of the Eastern Ontario and Western Quebec Ploughing Association will be held on the Macdonald College Farm, St. Anne de Bellevue, October 12th to 14th next.

The first day will be devoted to the setting up of tractors by machinery firms. The second day three classes will plough: men over 21, boys under 20 and boys under 17. In the first two classes the prizes run $50, $40 $30 and $20. In the latter class the prizes will be $10, $30, $20 and $10. The third day the plowmen using high cutting plows, the two furrow plows and farmer tractor competition will take place. Prizes in each class are the same as in class 1 the first day. Besides the prizes for ploughing, a silver cup and money prizes will be given for best team and equipment; a silver trophy for best plowed land and gold medal for best crew. High cutting plows are barred in both of these classes. A silver trophy will be given for each of the following: best ploughed land, best finish to all, and best crown in classes 2 and 3. A silver medal for best finish, open to all and a gold medal for best ins and outs, open to all, will be given. Contestants will be obliged to pay freight on team and plow one way but will be returned home free. Their teams will be looked after on the College Farm while there. We trust that a number of competitors will go from this district. For further information apply to L. C. McQuat, Secretary, Macdonald College, Que.

REV. C. S. DEEPROSE DIED ON MONDAY

The Rev. Chas. Deeprose, at one time pastor of the Huntington Methodist Church, died at his home, Kazubazua on the Gatineau River on Monday. He had been in ailing health for the past year or two, having spent some months in hospital last year when he still held the pastorate of Fairmount Methodist church in the north end of the city. From this illness Rev. Mr. Deeprose recovered sufficiently to attend the annual Montreal conference which was held at Kemptville, Ont. in May last, when at his request he was placed on the superannuated list; but the rally from a complaint which was beyond cure was only temporary, though the end came more suddenly than was anticipated.

Mr. Deeprose was born at Ninfield in the southern county of Sussex, England, on the last day of December, 1857, and came to this country as a young man and as a student for the ministry. He passed through the Wesleyan Theological College in Montreal, graduating in 1885 as class prizeman. Having been ordained three years later, Rev. Mr. Deeprose entered upon an active ministry of thirty-two years, first serving as assistant at Dominion Church, Ottawa, to which he subsequently returned as superintendent pastor, and in succession he "travelled" at Richmond, Coaticook, Huntington, Sherbrooke, Ottawa and Montreal. The funeral was held in Fairmount Methodist Church, Wednesday afternoon, and there was a large attendance. The service was conducted by Rev. Robert Smith, who was assisted by many other prominent ministers.

NELL SHIPMAN in "Back to God's Country," Adapted from the story "WAPI THE WALRUS" by JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD.

Shan Tung, the Chinese, was shot and killed in a gambling den of the Far North. Shan Tung had a savage dog, Wapi, the killer, a throw back from the white man's dog. There came to the ice-fields a beautiful white girl, a woman who loved and was loved. In the snowbound trading post the girl and the man she loved came into the power of a man known from Alaska to the Horn as an unscrupulous trader in gold and women. He coveted her. A heart of gold and iron, the girl battles with man and nature to save her lover—and her honor. And Wapi, the killer. Do you know what this great savage dog did? How he came to this girl in the time of her direst need, in a story of thrill and wonder.

An all-Canadian picture by an all-Canadian author. Zita's Orchestra will render a musical Concert during the Pictures. Admission to Pictures and Concert, 25c and 50c.

DANCING AFTER THE SHOW Mr. ZITA is preparing a special program. This will be the big dance of the season. Tickets $2.00.

ST. MARTINE FAIR

Beautiful weather favored the exhibition of the Chateauguay Agricultural Society and the attendance was the largest for years, the receipts being over $550. The entries of live stock was small, the horse classes being the only department which was at all well filled.

As a whole the cattle were a disappointment. There were but three exhibitors of Holsteins and only three or four animals. Jack Brown exhibited a fine heifer calf. The Ayrshire exhibit was fine what there was of it but there were only two herds, those of Edgar C. Budge, of Beauharnois, and Peter McArthur.

The sheep and pig pens were mostly empty. John Purcell being the only exhibitor of sheep and Hooker Bros., the principal exhibitor of swine. Jos. Primeau and J. Quevillon had a few exhibits. Both Purcell and Hooker had fine entries and would have appreciated competition.

The poultry entry was fair, John Graham having the largest entry. The show building was well filled, the entry of garden truck and roots being exceptionally good. There was a good entry of cheese and butter much better than seen at either Huntingdon or Havelock.

The Ormstown W. C. T. U. had a tent on the grounds where luncheon was served. There were many side-shows and gambling devices ran wide open. On the grounds there were few of the worse of liquor and the crowd was orderly and well dressed.

Police Magistrate Moore at Cobocok last week fined a man $15 and costs, $48 in all, for neglecting to advertise a tarpaulin he had found. Will the son of Belial who a few days ago possessed himself of this Page's second-best umbrella take note? Umbrellas are not cheap in these days, but $48 might pay for a dozen or more.—Orillia Packet.
She was a charming little thing, but she was not familiar with the country and its ways, and he had volunteered to show her round the farm, and by and by they strolled into the cowshed. "Dear me, how closely the poor cows are crowded together!" she remarked. "Yes," he said. "But, you see, we are obliged to pack them close." "Why?" So that they'll give condensed milk," he said, without a blush. And the dear girl smiled, and said she hadn't thought of that.
Wayne McVeigh, the lawyer, has on the outskirts of Philadelphia an admirable stock farm. One day last summer some poor children were permitted to go over his farm, and when their inspection was done, to each of them was given a glass of milk. The milk was excellent. It came, in fact, from a $2,000 cow. "Well, boys, how did you like it?" the farmer said when they had drained their glasses. "Fine!" said a little fellow. Then, after a pause, he added: "I wish our milkman kep' a cow."
"Father, Mr. Dubson will call at your office tomorrow and ask permission to marry me." "All right, daughter, I'll give my consent." "Of course you will, stupid. But can't you hesitate a little?"

GOOD DRIVER DOES NOT DO TOO MUCH HORN-BLOWING

Constant honking a sign of poor control, and should be suppressed.
The really good driver does not find it necessary to blow his horn except in emergency or actual danger. When I hear some of the tooting being done nowadays I am inclined to wish that Mrs. Isaac Rise and her Anti-Noise Society would get busy once more.
There was a time when the only sort of vehicle which required a noisy signal was the sleigh. On a dark night the sleigh moved along so silently that the bells were necessary to prevent accidents. The fish horn, the junkman's cowbells, or the milkman's hand bell were the only signals warning of the approach of a vehicle.
The silent-moving bicycle brought in a new era. It was necessary to warn people of its approach, but the warning was not intended to make people jump or rush violently out of the way. The bicycle rider was on the look-out for pedestrians and he desired only that they should not suddenly step in front of the wheel. The pedestrian had the right of way. When the automobile came into use, the bicycle horn or bell served the same purpose. It was understood that the pedestrian had the first right in the highway, and the driver must see that this right was preserved. When the car supplanted the horse in large part we began to hear the automobilist talking about his "rights," he insisted that pedestrians keep off the road, and the horn began its peremptory command to get out of the way or be run over.
There are some autoists who think they have prior rights on the road, and that pedestrians should keep to the sidewalk, but this is not a fact. It does not matter what ordinances or police regulations there are to the contrary, the pedestrian has the first right in any part of any highway. The United States Supreme Court has decided this point, and no ordinance can take away the rights of the pedestrians, according to that authority.
If all pedestrians were allowed to go as they pleased it would disrupt all automobile traffic, but nevertheless it is the law, whether we like it or not. Nevertheless, I suppose a lot of drivers will persist in disregarding those rights and in blowing the horn violently upon every possible occasion, insisting that people get out of the way. In fact, too much horn-blowing indicates the novice and seems to say: "I have not got my car under control, so get out of the way."
But there is coming to be, more and more, a set of drivers who realize that the courtesy of the drawing room or business office can be applied to the highway without discomf or delay. They have learned that it is not necessary to blow the horn every time they see someone trying to cross the street, or they meet another vehicle. A certain amount of signalling is needed in driving, but I am willing to assert that I can drive from the Battery to Harlem without tooting the horn half a dozen times, and this would be only to warn pedestrians or drivers who were running into unseen danger.
It is not necessary to blow a horn when you, the driver or pedestrian has seen you, or if they will be well out of the way before you get to them. If not seen, sound the horn once and be ready to stop. The man is foolish who, when driving through New York City, is not ready to stop instantly, and the foot should instinctively go to the brake pedal as the hand goes to the horn.
It is not necessary to blow a horn in passing a vehicle in the city streets unless there is a likelihood that the driver ahead may turn in front of you, and the rule says he shall indicate this purpose by holding out the hand before turning the wheel, so that by watching him you know what he is going to do.
Driving along a country road it is customary when desiring to pass the car ahead to blow the horn once. The other fellow responds by turning out slightly to let you pass. If he does not he either has not heard or he sees something ahead to prevent his turning out, and a second signal may be given. It is also proper to give a signal before reaching the top of a hill, particularly on a narrow road, to avoid the possibility of a head-on collision; also to sound the horn at crossroads where there is not a plain view, to make sure that there will be no collision.
In meeting another vehicle there is no need of sounding the horn unless the other fellow seems inclined to crowd you into the ditch, and most always, if he is trying to, you would better go there to avoid danger, because the other driver may be irresponsible, drunk or just a plain road hog who does not care. Get out of the way of all such, but take the number and report it to the police.
Try some time on a trip to see just how times it is really necessary to blow the horn, and probably you will be very much surprised. One of the places where you will not need to blow it will be at a railroad crossing when the locomotive is coming. That is one case where you would better mind the other fellow's signal. The only real use for the horn at a railroad crossing might be to wake the watchman to make sure that your passage across the tracks is absolutely safe.—World's Work.

The safety valve came hopping off at an international convention of engineers in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, when a big British flag was seen flaunting itself over the platform. No American flag of the same size was available, but the convention broke up until the Union Jack was removed to a less conspicuous place and the Stars and Stripes was located where the offending emblem had shone.

Those who have attended international gatherings across the border will be somewhat surprised that the engineers walked out of the hotel when they saw the conspicuous place accorded to the British flag. From pure surprise, they should have faintled; but, then, engineers are a hardy lot. They know something about shock absorbing. They marched back in good order to pass resolutions interfering in British politics, showing that although their nerves might have been temporarily upset their nerves remained unshaken. —Ed. Myers, section foreman on the Grand Trunk, is reported to have purchased the McEntee property on the corner of Bouchette and York Streets, the price being $2100.

—Alex. Small has purchased the property used as a garage by Finlay Morrison, from the Davis Estate at a figure around $1500.

—The property owned by the late Mrs. Spencer on Wellington St. has been sold to Richard Oulmet.

—The Movies continue to attract good crowds. The dance on Friday evening was well attended. Ed. Brady, John Dixon and Lloyd Kelly furnished the music.

—The district is being favored with this exceptionally warm weather for this time of year.

—At the sale of Cooper Bros. on Monday, 19 head of pure bred and high grade Holstein cattle were disposed of at an average price of $147.

—About 25 citizens attended the meeting on Monday night to hear the report of the committee as to the feasibility of combining a war memorial with a memorial athletic field. The committee had gone into the matter pretty thoroughly and reported that it would not be advisable to combine the two schemes and strongly recommended that a committee be appointed at once to go ahead with the erection of a monument to the memory of the men of the County who gave their lives in the service of their country.

A committee composed of Mayor Crawford, J. D. Bicknell, Rev. J. B. Maclean, J. D. Murray, Neil Henderson, T. B. Pringle and D. J. O'Connor, was appointed to secure plans of a memorial that would cost in the neighborhood of $5000 and after a suitable monument had been chosen to proceed at once with the erection of same. Just where the monument will be erected has to be decided at a later date but there seems to be only two sites in question, namely, the triangular piece of ground in front of the Methodist Church and the Public Park.

—The potato crop is nearly all harvested in this district and a bumper crop is reported. In some sections they are rotting badly while others report no sign of rot. Buyers are paying 50c per bushel and getting choice goods.

—While operating a threshing machine one day last week, John Smellie met with an accident by which he lost the third finger and part of the fourth on his left hand. Mr. Smellie went to the hospital in Montreal where the operation was performed.

—The Thank Offering meeting of the W.M.S. held last night in St. Andrew's Annex was addressed by Dr. Margaret O'Hara, Medical Missionary from Dhar, India, who held the undivided attention of children and adults. The musical program consisted of a duet by Misses Walker and Stewart, two solos by Mr. Doe, from Bermuda; two Mission Band choruses; and hymns by the audience. Mrs. John Reid presided. The Thank Offering amounted to $130, of which the Mission Band gave $13.64.

—On Sunday evening, the Rev. Chas. Reid preached his farewell sermon to a large congregation. Mr. Reid leaves on Friday to take up his duties in South March, Ontario.

—On Tuesday evening, the ladies of St. John's Church tendered a farewell supper to the Rev. Chas. and Mrs. Reid in the Church Hall. About 100 of the members of the congregation and the local Orangemen were present and a very pleasant evening was spent. After supper had been served, the Rev. J. B. Maclean was asked to give an address and was feelingly replied to by Mr. Reid. Mrs. Allan Dawson then came forward and read an address while Mrs. George Hampson on behalf of the ladies, presented Mrs. Reid with a purse of gold. Mrs. Reid made a gracious acknowledgement and expressed regret at leaving this diocese. Mrs. George Hyde, on behalf of the Women's Auxiliary, then presented Mrs. Reid with a silver membership badge. District Grand Master Alex. Anderson of the Orange Lodge presented Mr. Reid with a well filled purse as a token of the esteem in which he was held by the local Lodges.

—On Tuesday night, American officers seized two Studebaker automobiles containing between 500 and 600 quarts of mixed bottled liquor ranging from champagne to beer. On Wednesday morning a truck load of Canadian whiskey was also seized. The autos were seized north of Chateaugay, the truck on the road to Burke. All were in charge of Italians from Utica who were taken into custody.

The Frenchman's play with his weapon was a revelation of skill, the more extraordinary as he held in his hand only a light dress sword. But the gun closed about him, and his keen defense could not avail him more than a few moments. Lady Mary's outcries, the rattling of her escort, and the shouts of the coach and attendant, did not interfere.

"Sir Hugh Guilford!" cried Lady Mary, wildly, "if you will not help him, give me your sword!" She would have leaped to the ground, but Sir Hugh held the door. "Be quiet, madam," he said to her. "The man on the box." "Drive on."

"If he does, I'll kill him!" she said fiercely. "Ah, what cowards! Will you see the duke murdered?" "The duke?" said the duke's valet. "They will kill him, unless he is rescued by the duke's valet. Ah—ah! Look at that! 'Tis a shame!"

"On foot, his hat gone, his white coat sadly red and gashed, tucked too, with red M. Beaucaire's feet, alert, brilliant, seemed to transform himself into a dozen leaping masters, and, though his skill appeared to be in delicacy and quickness, his play being continually with the point, sheer strength failed to beat him down. The young man was laughing like a child.

"You are hurt?" "It is nothing," smiled M. Beaucaire. Then, that she might not see the stain spreading, he held his handkerchief to the spot. "I am a little bruised—just a trifling bruise—'tis all."

"You shall ride in the coach," she whispered. "Will you be pleased, M. de Chateaurien?" "Ah, my beautiful!" she seemed to have before him like a shining mist. "I wish that ride might last for all—just a trifling bruise—'tis all."

"Monseigneur!" she said, with a note of raillery in her voice, but raillery so tender that she started with happiness. His movement brought him a hot spasm of pain, and he clasped his hand to a red stain on his waistcoat.

one made an angry gesture of assent. "Madam, I will be brief as I may. Two months ago there came to Bath a French gambler, calling himself Beaucaire, a desperate fellow with the cards or dice, and all the men of fashion went to play at his lodging, where he won considerable sums. He was small, wore a black wig and mustache. He had the insolence to show himself everywhere until the master of ceremonies rebuffed him in the pump room, as you know, and after that he forbore his visits to the rooms.

Mr. Nash explained (and was content to remain by indubitable information) that this Beaucaire was a man of unpeppable, vile, low birth, being, in fact, no other than a lackey of the French king's ambassador, Victor by name, de Mirepoix's barber. Although his condition was known, the hideous impudence of the fellow did not desert him, and he remained in Bath, where none would speak to him.

"If you farago night do, sir?" "A few moments, madam. One evening, three weeks gone, I observed a very elegant equipage draw up to my door, and the Duke of Chateaurien was announced. The young man's manners were worthy—according to the French acceptance—and 'twere idle to deny him the most monstrous assurance. He declared himself a noble traveling for pleasure. He had taken lodgings in Bath for a season, he said, and called at once to pay his respects to me. His tone was so candid—in truth, I am the simplest of men, very easily gulled—and his story so plausible, I did not for one moment suspect him, and, to my poignant regret—though in the WOMEN'S INSTITUTES AN AID TO RURAL EDUCATION The laws of our province are such that women are not given an active part in the making of laws pertaining to our schools. Nevertheless, rural education, better schools and 'back to the land' policy are outstanding lines of activity with the Women's Institutes of Quebec. The attitude of this organization is not that of destructive criticism, but to see where the Women's Institutes can lend their energies and co-operate to the end that every child in Canada shall have a fair chance to secure an education under conditions which make for the best mental, normal and physical development.

Provision should be made for education along practical lines such as agriculture, domestic science, manual training, etc., and every school board should be induced to take advantage of government aid in this respect. The school curriculum should be adapted to the needs of boys and girls who wish to apply their knowledge to the ordinary activities of the home, the farm, the shop and the business world.

The following article is taken from the Journal of Agriculture, England, and shows that Women's Institutes in the motherland, of which Her Majesty, Queen Mary, is an active member, are working along similar lines. The improvement of the social and intellectual life of the village is essential for the maintenance of a vigorous rural population. Unless country life provides more avenues than are open at present for the employment of leisure time, it is certain that the drift to the towns, which was so noticeable in the past, will continue. In order to prevent this exodus to the towns the great need of the village is the improvement of the social life of the country side. The rural problem is essentially a problem of re-creating the rural community, of developing new social traditions and a new culture. What is needed is to establish in the village a living nucleus of communal activity which will serve as a centre for the satisfaction of the social and intellectual needs of the people. Such a nucleus is the village institute. The institute should be the headquarters of organized local activities of all kinds, friendly societies of one sort and another, adult schools, and classes arranged by voluntary organizations. Women's Institutes, schools for mothers, chess clubs and so forth, should be encouraged to use the institutes and one or more rooms, as may be necessary, should be provided for the purposes of their meetings. The institute should contain a hall large enough for dances, kinema shows, concerts, plays, public lectures and exhibitions. At the institute there should be a public library and local museum. If arrangements can be made for games and sports so much

For an example of really bad luck, it is difficult to beat the following: Bill Sykes was arrested for loitering with intent, and when brought before the magistrate was sentenced to "three months—hard." Upon hearing his sentence, Bill Sykes leaned over the rail of the dock and snatching up a metal inkpot from the solicitor's table flung it with all his might at the magistrate. The magistrate ducked and the inkpot smashed its way through a beautiful stained glass window and out into the street. The ink here spilled over the new dress of a young lady along the pavement, and she shrieked so much that her voice frightened a horse drawing a cab containing two persons. The horse bolted down the road and ran into a crockery shop, injuring the two passengers, at the same time smashing up about £100 worth of crockery. And now the point where the hard luck comes in is that the proprietor of the crockery shop, the two injured passengers, the cab driver and the lady whose dress was ruined are all suing the magistrate for dodging the inkpot.

The passengers on the pleasure steamer, having just finished dinner, were enjoying the beauties of the evening to the full. A majestic Highland ravine came into view, all under greys and shimmering browns and blues. Mrs. de Vere held her breath till they had passed. "O John," she said, "what a lovely gorge that was." "Yes, darling," he said absently, "quite the best feed we've had since we left London."

The suburban night was being made hideous by the howling of a dog, and the policeman paused to speak to the resident, who standing at his gate, was evidently listening to the canine wails. "Awful racket," the constable observed. "Terrible," the citizen agreed. "Want to make a complaint?" the man in blue suggested zealously. "Why—er—not until I am sure," the resident responded. "Sure of what?" "Why, whether it is my dog or Brown's. If it is my dog—O, well, we have to put up with a few little annoyances in this life, you know; but if it is Brown's—why, by George, I don't propose to have my life made miserable by a nuisance like that."

The happy gentleman, with Lady Carlisle upon his arm, went about the room with the humblest spirit I have shown myself since that very evening I had the shame of presenting him to yourself.

"The shame, sir?" "Have patience, pray, madam. As the shame! You know what figures he had cut in Bath since that evening. All ran merrily with him until several days ago Captain Badger denounced him as an impostor, vowing that Chateaurien was nothing."

"Madam," replied Molyneux humbly, "Sir Hugh's leg is broken. Lady Rellerton graciously permits him to be taken in."

"I do not permit it," M. de Chateaurien rides with us."

"Sir! Leave the wretch to groan by the roadside," she cried fiercely, "which plight I would were that of all of you! But there will be a pretty story for the gossips to-morrow! And I could almost find pity for you when I think of the wits when you return to town. Fine gentlemen, you, hardy bravos, by heaven, to leave one man to meet a troop of horse single handed while you huddle in shelter until you are overthrown and disarmed by a servant! Oh, what a wretch! Heaven save you from the wits!"

"Madam," "Address me no more! M. de Chateaurien, Lady Rellerton and I will greatly esteem the honor of your company. Will you be so good?"

She stepped quickly into the coach and was gathering her skirts to make room for the Frenchman, when a hoarse voice spoke from the shadows of the tree by the wayside.

"Lady Mary Carlisle will, no doubt, listen to a word of counsel on this point."

The Duke of Winterset rode out into the moonlight, composedly untying a mask from about his head. He had not shared the wits of his followers, but had retired into the shade of the oak, whence he now made his presence known with the utmost coolness.

"Gracious heavens, 'tis Winterset!" exclaimed Lady Rellerton.

"Turning to the duke, she cried, and cut-throat!" cried Lady Mary.

"No, no," laughed M. Beaucaire, somewhat unsteadily, as he stood, swaying a little, with one hand on the coach door, the other pressed hard on his side, "the only overcast, He is a great man, but he don't want all the glory!"

"Barber," replied the duke, "I must tell you that I gladly descend to banter words with you. Your monstrous impudence is a clean to rank I cannot ignore. But a lackey who has himself followed by six other lackeys—"

"Ha, ha! Has not M. de Duc been busy all this evening to justify me? And I think mine must be the best six."

"M. de Chateaurien," said Lady Mary, "we are waiting for you."

"Pardon," he replied. "He has something to say. Maybe it is best if you hear it now."

"I wish to hear nothing from him—ever!"

"My faith, madam," cried the duke, "this saucy fellow has paid you the last insult! He is so sure of you he does not fear you will believe the truth. When all is told, if you do not agree he deserves the lashing we planned to—"

"I'll hear no more!"

"You will bitterly repent it, madam. For your own sake I entreat—"

"And I also," broke in M. Beaucaire, "Permit me, mademoiselle. Let him speak."

"Then let him be brief," said Lady Mary, "for I am earnest to be quit of him. His explanation of an attack on my friend and on my carriage should be made to my brother."

"Alas that he was not here," said the duke, "to aid me! Madam, was your carriage threatened? I have endeavored only to expunge a debt I owed to Bath, and to avenge an insult offered to yourself through—"

"Sir, sir, my patience will bear little more!"

"A thousand apology," said M. Beaucaire, "You will listen, I only beg, Lady Mary?"

"It is all false?" she whispered.

"The moa' fine art, mademoiselle. How long you think it take M. de Winterset to learn that speech after he write it out? It is a mix of what
