Postal standoff continues

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government and the striking postal union are continuing their hard-nosed standoff, with the union pledging to continue its national strike and the government proceeding with bids for court injunctions to end picketing.

government officials and the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) failed and union leader Jean-Claude Parrot said the strike "will continue for months if necessary until a collective agreement is signed." Although both sides are making tough statements, Acting Labor Minister Andre Quellet plans to meet the union again today. In the meantime, the government is going ahead with applications for provincial court injunctions in Halifax, Toronto and Winnipeg. Gordon Ash, vice-president of CUPW's Nova Scotia local, said Sunday the members will not obey an injunction ordering an end to picketing. "If we can defy back-to-work legislation, then to hell with any court injunction," Ash said in Halifax Sunday. NOT RETURNING The majority of the 23,000 mail sorters and postal clerks remain off work despite a back-to-work bill passed Wednesday by Parliament. Treasury Board president Robert Andras pledged in a national television address Sunday night "to get the mail moving again."

In Toronto:

Cops won't stop picketers

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto police have refused to stop striking workers from picketing post offices because it fears such action would result in a serious breach of the peace, says Police Chief Harold Adamson. But Adamson said police would step in to stop any law-breaking or intimidation on picket lines.

Meanwhile, the post office, in a 17-page document, has told its supervisors across the country to expect apathy and even hostility following any return to work.

In another development, the 23,000 inside postal workers, on strike since last Monday, are being urged in 30-second radio and television advertisements to return to their jobs.

In Toronto, leaders of the Canadian Union of Postal Workers have pledged to defy any injunction.

The injunction applications came after the union and most of its members refused to obey the law adopted last week, which ordered mail sorters and postal clerks back to work and imposed a combination of mediation and arbitration as the formula for settling issues in dispute.

Adamson made his remarks in a letter to Toronto area postal director Gordon Cunningham. The letter is contained in an affidavit accompanying a request by the federal justice department for an injunction against picketing. Hearings on the injunction applications are to be held in five cities including Toronto.

SADAT RETURNS PEACE DRAFT

CAIRO (Reuter) — President Anwar Sadat has sent back the final draft of a peace treaty between Egypt and Israel for further study by the delegations in Washington, a presidential spokesman said today.

The spokesman, Saad Zaghloul Nassar, said: "President Sadat has sent instructions to the Egyptian delegation in Washington saying that the draft needs further study in some of its parts."

The spokesman told Reuters news agency that Sadat made a thorough study of the draft with Premier Mustapha Khalil and Amal Osman, an expert in international law, and reached the decision that some parts of the draft need further examination.

He added: "This study is necessary before the treaty can be ready for signature."

The spokesman would not say which parts of the draft treaty need to be clarified.

Mrs. Osman is also Egypt's minister of social affairs.

In addition, the delegations must resolve several other issues, Sherman said, including terms for the sale of oil Israel discovered in the occupied Sinai, which will be returned to Egypt.

The breakthrough in the talks came Friday and Saturday, after the Israelis announced they were going home to consult with their cabinet about issues Foreign Minister Moshe Dayan said he was "very doubtful" the delegations could resolve themselves.

But the Israelis observed the Jewish ban on travel during the 24 hours of the Sabbath, beginning Friday at sundown. President Carter used that time.

He met until almost midnight with the delegations at the White House Friday. Then, the two sides met for four hours Saturday, Sherman said.

Trudeau or Turner: It's the same to Joe

MONTREAL (CP) — Progressive Conservative Leader Joe Clark said Sunday it makes no difference to him whether he faces Pierre Trudeau or former finance minister John Turner in the next general election.

Despite some anti-French sentiment in the country, the basic problem is still a fundamental ignorance of Quebec's aspirations, Clark said.

He added that the charge by some English-speaking Canadians of having French shoved down their throats is a minority view. More and more people recognize that Canada is a bilingual country.

Clark said the Conservatives have two things going for them in Quebec. First, there is the party's strong showing outside Quebec in last week's by-elections. Secondly, capable French-speaking spokesmen for the party are appearing.

In the by-elections the Conservatives made general gains in the popular vote in Quebec ridings although they lost St. Hyacinthe, one of their three Quebec seats. And in many ridings the party has been unable to draw well-known candidates to run in the general election.

Clark said he is no longer looking for big names to run for the party but instead wants candidates who can represent the province and its ridings effectively in the Commons.

In addition, if the Conservatives were to form the next government, they would use Senate appointments and other means to strengthen Quebec representation in the cabinet.

Outlaws?

Sherbrooke Post Office picketers are peaceful but much in evidence as they shelter from the rain in the doorway of the main post office on Couture St. It is this picketing which the government is trying to stop in court action across the nation today.

...AND TALK ABOUT FAITH

OTTAWA (CP) — The post office has so little faith in its own services that it spent more than $150,000 on telegrams last year, says a Conservative MP.

Perrin Beatty of Wellington-Grey-Dufferin-Waterloo adds that only three departments—supply and services, public works and national defence—spent more on telegrams than did the post office.

This apparent vote of non-confidence in the post office is echoed by other departments, which spent almost $7 million for private courier services in the last two years.

He was commenting last week on some of the mass of statistics and information tabled in the Commons in reply to questions from MPs.

The information, a foot high, touched on everything from post office telegrams, to diplomats avoiding traffic fines in Toronto and Ottawa to concrete steps that cost $400,000.

The answers are to questions that MPs, mostly from the opposition, submit for a variety of reasons. These reasons range from idle curiosity to seeking ammunition for partisan attacks.

If the post office's one-day assured service was as good as it says it is, thousands of dollars might be saved, Beatty said.

HOTLINE CALLERS WANT THE TROOPS

MONTREAL (CP) — In an open line poll conducted by English-language radio station CKO, 87.5 per cent of callers said they would be in favor of the government calling in the armed forces to sort the mail.

A number of the 35 callers suggested the government and Canadian Union of Postal Workers should submit the dispute to binding arbitration, while several others suggested the union should be decertified. A few said the job of sorting the mail should be given to those who are presently unemployed.

PQ 'giving away power'

By JAMES DUFF
EAST ANGUS — The Parti Quebecois may be improving its chances of winning the upcoming referendum with a softened question, but Premier Levesque is losing negotiating power in the process, says Union Nationale leader Rodrigue Biron. Interviewed following a well-attended Megantic-Compton County fund-raising breakfast yesterday, Biron said the PQ doesn't need a referendum to negotiate for more provincial power.

"Duplessis, Johnson, Lesage — they all worked toward increasing provincial autonomy within the federal system... why can't the Parti Quebecois do the same," Biron demanded.

The so-called 'soft-question' introduced two weeks ago by the premier — which hints strongly that the referendum question will ask Quebecers for a mandate to negotiate sovereignty-association status — could have been predicted a long time ago, the UN leader added.

"Two years ago, I saw they'd come out with a soft question, one to which nobody could say no."

Speaking to some 350 party faithful at the Hotel East Angus, Biron repeated his party's stand on the constitution:

"As we've always said, we'll vote against sovereignty-association or independence or anything of the kind as described by the Parti Quebecois, but we'll also fight to have provincial autonomy respected."

UN on comeback trail?

By JAMES DUFF
EAST ANGUS — Its leaders say the Union Nationale is on the comeback trail, and they've got the numbers to prove it — in Megantic-Compton, at least.

At yesterday's close of the three-week town-by-town fund-raising campaign in the county, the party had raised $9,254, well over the top of its $6,500 goal, with more to come.

"We'll return to our roots," UN director-general Andre Bellerose told 350 Union Nationale supporters at the Hotel East Angus.

"We have two years to organize, parish by parish. Our next goal is to reorganize the party in Montmorency County, and we'll teach

Mr. Levesque he should have respected local authority a little more."

The crowd at yesterday's fund-raising breakfast included close to 30 mayors, county councillors and county council prefects, many of whom actively solicited for the Union Nationale, organizers said later.

"On Nov. 1, the party will be holding a meeting of members in the Quebec region and on Nov. 15, we're having a big reunion at the Sambo Restaurant in Montreal, with Mr. Biron and Mr. Grenier," Bellerose told the crowd. "And you can guess why we chose that date."

Later, party leader Rodrigue Biron said the UN is only now gearing up again after the Liberal convention last fall.

"There was no point trying to get anything done, with the Liberals getting nearly $5 million free advertising in the various media during their convention," Biron said.

"But people are starting

Smoke detectors: One isn't enough

OTTAWA (CP) — No single smoke detector currently on the market provides homeowners with adequate protection against those fires which occur most often in the home, says the Consumers' Association of Canada (CAC).

In the October edition of its magazine Canadian Consumer, the association says tests of the two types of smoke detectors available—photoelectric and ionization—showed each responded well to certain types of fires, but poorly to others.

It recommended homeowners buy one of each as the two complement each other.

Tests were conducted at the CAC's Ottawa labs on 19 of the most readily-available brand detectors, 15 ionization and four photoelectric.

Each detector was rated according to how fast it responded to three different types of fires the association felt were common household threats—wood, fuel and paper fires.

FIRES DIFFERENT

Wood created a thick, slowburning fire similar to that of smouldering furniture. Fuel produced a sooty blaze with less visible smoke than wood. The paper fire burned quickly with little visible smoke.

Fires of each type were set and monitored in a large, draught-free room. When detectors reacted in the fuel fire test, the amount of smoke in the room was calculated by what per-cent-per-foot a person's vision would be obscured by it.

"At a one-per-cent-per-foot obscuration you would just be conscious of smoke in a room, eliciting the familiar comment 'do you smell something burning?'" the report said.

"At four per cent, watering eyes and coughing would make you painfully aware of its presence."

For the fuel and paper fire tests, the speed of the detectors' reactions were measured in time.

PHOTOELECTRIC BEST

"The photoelectric devices were by far the best performers" when used to detect a smouldering wood fire, the CAC reported.

Of those tested, the photoelectric Smoke Sentinel was the most sensitive, going off at two-per-cent-per-foot smoke. The best of the ionization devices—the Early One and Lifesaver—did not respond until there was nine per-cent-per-foot smoke.

But the reverse was true with a fuel fire; the ionization detectors reacted sooner to the faster burning blaze.

"The Centurion, Early One, Smoke Alarm, Smoke Signal and Travalarm Smoke Signal gave the alarm at approximately 30 seconds," the association said. "A number of devices reacted almost as quickly but three—Air King, Amway and Smoke Sensor—were much more tardy than the average."

The most efficient photoelectric detector was the Smoke Sentinel, sounding after about a minute and 45 seconds.

Burning paper produced a fast fire with little visible smoke. Again, Lifesaver and the Smoke Alarm, both ionization devices, responded first after a minute and thirty seconds.

Other ionization devices, the test report said, reacted more slowly while the photoelectric models ignore the paper fire completely.

The association rated the 19 models in the following way:

MEMO

Dominion Textile reports

MONTREAL — Dominion Textile Limited reported sale of $122.4 million during the first quarter which ended September 30, 1978. Net income was $2,503,000 compared with $2,156,000 last year and earnings per share were $0.31 and $0.28, respectively.

These figures were released yesterday by Thomas R. Bell, president and chief executive officer of the company, at the annual meeting of shareholders held at Montreal.

Despite a significant decline in earnings from operations in the United States, he said that a substantial improvement in the results from Canadian operations and a modest profit in overseas activities helped to make this the highest first-quarter earnings in the company's history.

Concords recalled

BRAMPTON, Ont. — American Motors said recently it will notify 25 owners of early 1979 Concord two-door sedans that the front seat latch mechanism may possibly be damaged.

The company said the latch holds the back of the front seat in an upright position during sudden stops.

AMC dealers will inspect the latch and correct any deficiency at no charge to the owner.

Power sells Argus shares

MONTREAL (CP) — Power Corp., which failed in a bid to take control of Toronto-based Argus Corp. three years ago, has done a complete switch by selling its shares back to the new owners of Argus.

The deal, announced Thursday, ended a major threat to a takeover of Argus, which recently came under the control of brothers Montegu and Conrad Black, both in their 30s.

Power Corp., controlled by Paul Desmarais, announced an agreement to sell all its Argus holdings to Ravelston Corp. Ltd., a private company owned by the Blacks and which has voting control of Argus.

Ravelston will pay $80,478,000 for the Power shares—4,053,038 non-voting class C shares and 441,227 common shares—which represents about a 25 per cent interest in Argus. Of this amount, Ravelston will pay $65 million in cash and the rest by a note. Terms of the note were not disclosed.

Ford 'not at fault'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Being struck from behind by a heavier vehicle was probably a greater factor than an unsafe fuel tank in a fiery accident involving a Ford Pinto in which three young women were killed, U.S. government safety investigators said last week.

A county grand jury in Elkhart, Ind., last month indicted Ford Motor Co. on three counts of reckless homicide and one count of criminal recklessness in connection with the Aug. 10 accident.

The three women were in a 1973 Pinto stopped on a highway near Dunlop, Ind., when the accident occurred. The car's fuel tank exploded when struck from behind at 80 kilometres an hour by a van. The driver of the van was not indicted.

The grand jury said Ford knew the Pinto fuel tank was unsafe, but did nothing about it.

Alcan VP chairs 101 group

QUEBEC (CP) — Aime Gagne, a vice-president of Alcan Smelters and Chemicals Ltd., has been appointed chairman of a special appeals commission set up to deal with business provisions of the French language charter.

Gagne, 59, served on the 1974 Gendron Commission into the status of the French language. His nomination was announced last week by Camille Laurin, Quebec cultural development minister.

Other members of the three-member board are Jacques Brazeau, vice-dean of the faculty of sociology at the University of Montreal and Gilles Pepin, a law professor at the same university.

The commission is to hear appeals from corporations who have their francization certificates refused, suspended or annulled by the government's French language office.

Montreal leads price drop

OTTAWA (CP) — Consumer prices fell last month in six of 14 major cities, with Montreal feeling the biggest benefit. Statistics Canada reported last week.

The federal agency's consumer price index rose in seven other cities surveyed and remained unchanged in Winnipeg.

With food prices on the decline, the index fell nationally by about two-tenths of one per cent, the first drop in consumer prices in seven years. The 12-month rate of increase fell to 8.6 per cent in September from 9.4 per cent in August.

In September, consumer prices fell by one-half of one per cent, because of decreases in costs of fresh produce, beverages and beef. The decrease would have been larger but for higher prices for fuel oil, some clothing and gasoline.

The 12-month rate of increase in prices in Montreal was eight per cent.

CANADA'S BUSINESS

By Bruce Whitestone

Copy-Cat thinking

Geography is not merely "maps and chaps"; rather, it dominates Canadian economic life, no matter what administration is in power in Ottawa.

Quite obviously, our climate, the distribution of our warmest soils favor the growth of our population along our southern border. Further, our most valuable timber belts and our most convenient waterways are near the United States while, of course, many of their large industrial centres are near Canada.

However, some of our illusions and inhibitions about our North, our sub-Arctic lands, must be dispelled. Few realize, for example, that only one million Canadians live in the same latitude which now sustains forty million Russians. Recent oil discoveries in the Canadian Arctic will accelerate growth there; the great oil potential of the Beaufort Sea makes this inevitable.

The long, unguarded boundary between Canada and the United States about which so much has been written, paradoxically, has brought about many of our most severe problems and great opportunities as well. The very freedom of communication and the consequent growth of business relationships is the source of many of our economic problems. Corresponding race, political ideals, similarities of speech, and education on both sides of the border all tend to diminish "Canadianism".

For decades the Canadian Far West struggled with the difficulties of poor transportation facilities. Then too, the difficulty of heating houses and just existing in our more rigorous climate proved to be a deterrent to rapid growth here.

Subsequently, the development of transportation facilities in our West, the fact that the western frontier was "closed" in the United States whereas our West and North remained virtually undeveloped, led to more rapid gains on our side of the border. Canadian industries then began their period of modern development, further aided by the increased availability of cheap energy.

To understand the background of Canadian development is to underscore what is needed for further relative progress to take place.

The first, great stimulus for the occupation of the Canadian Northwest was a definite land policy. The single family farm will not prove to be the drawing card that it was in the 19th Century. Nevertheless, an intelligent agricultural policy that permits Canadian comparative advantages in production of both agricultural and mining to take effect will help our economy immeasurably, and our proximity to U.S. population centres can be of great assistance. Canada, with half of the world's fresh water supply, is in an enviable position to trade off this asset with greater access to the U.S. market for other items.

Our development depended in the past and will continue in the future to be contingent on imaginative and innovative transportation policies. For example, there is no reason why our sub-Arctic oil potential should not be the keystone of another "roads to resources" program. To be a mirror image of the United States with its automobile society and heir consequent expansion of suburbia hardly seems to be an appropriate answer for Canada now. This is even more evident as it becomes apparent that decentralization and regionalization are the real "waves of the future".

Scientific advances and technological changes can provide us with an opportunity to produce a distinctly Canadian society. It was discovered that quick maturing breeds of wheat could be grown almost as far north as rye and barley. The advancing front of settlement in Canada can be pushed further beyond the valley of the Peace River as a diversified economy can offset our severe weather. As with transportation, housing and manufacturing can be adapted to our situation. Increased utilization of renewable energy sources such as water power (in the Bay of Fundy) and solar power, should take place. Only a few tentative steps in this direction have been taken by any nation. Rather than "buying back" mature industries such as automobile manufacturing, we should concentrate on developments in sectors which will experience rising demand.

The entire Canadian economy has been molded by geography. While it must be taken into account, emphasis must be placed on the unique advantages it confers. All that it takes is a little bit of imagination and an absence of "copy cat" thinking.

'MAD' INVENTOR HAD ENOUGH

EBENEZER, Sask. (CP) — Add John Appelt's name to the long list of disgruntled Canadian inventors.

Earlier this month Appelt, his wife Molly and son Russell packed all they could carry in a converted armed force bus and headed for the United States, frustrated with the treatment the Canadian government and industry gave his latest invention, a grasshopper harvester.

Appelt, 42, who also works as an upholsterer, said he doubts he will return to this village 120 kilometres east of Regina, or to Canada to stay.

"A year ago, I was a solid Canadian and I thought it was the best country to be in," said Appelt.

But the skepticism and obstacles he encountered in trying to be recognized as an inventor have persuaded him he has no future here.

"You never get anywhere," he said. "They make you feel like bloody criminals. Then you deal with the States and they make you feel human again."

The interest shown by the Montana Energy, Research and Development Institute Inc. in Butte, Mont., helped make up his mind about leaving.

He has an appointment with officials of the firm, whom he says have shown a keen interest in his invention.

Appelt reserves his most scathing criticism for the federal agriculture department, which he says thwarted his attempts to get the grasshopper harvester recognized as a legitimate machine.

He believes that the department discouraged him because his invention would use mechanical means, not chemical sprays, for controlling the prairie pests.

McDonald's sees sizzling hot Quebec future

MONTREAL (CP) — McDonald's Restaurants of Canada Ltd. see a sizzling future for their $75-million-a-year operations in Quebec because outlets in the province have a higher rate of sales than anywhere else in the world.

Michel Mailloux, McDonald's marketing director for Quebec, said in a recent interview that the rate of sales "is explained by the fact that we have practically no competitors here in Quebec."

While fast-food chains have been multiplying quickly in the United States in recent years, the Quebec fast-food market is dominated by small french-fried stands, Mailloux said.

"In the United States, one meal in three now is eaten outside the home," he said. "Before Quebec reaches this level, there still is lots of room for many more McDonald's." McDonald's, a U.S. company with annual worldwide sales of $3.4 billion at 4,500 restaurants, has doubled the number of its Quebec outlets in the last two years to the current total of about 60.

One of the problems McDonald's has had in Quebec has been with its milk shakes which often are too thick and cannot be drunk through a straw, he said.

The milk shakes are thicker than those made in other places, perhaps because of the richer milk from milk producers in the province than that provided in some U.S. states, Mailloux said.

PROBLEM STUDIED

"We have tried to resolve this problem by various studies at our research centre in Chicago. But there is nothing to do.

"The liquid still is too thick. As well, Quebecers don't like to drink milk products with their hamburgers."

"At home, people don't drink milk while eating a hot dog. This is a difference with the rest of North America."

Asked who eats at McDonald's, Mailloux said "our studies show us that only one factor is important: the age of our customers, which for the large majority is between 18 and 34 years."

"Neither social background, standard of living, education or sex have any influence," he said.

A "big" McDonald's customer is considered to be somebody who eats hamburgers there at least once a week, he said.

CALORIES CONSUMED

The average customer leaves a McDonald's after consuming 1,200

calories. Quebec consumers prefer Big Macs, the double-decker hamburgers with sauce, as opposed to the drier ordinary hamburgers, Mailloux said. They also buy more hot apple pastries than the Canadian average.

The company has 300 restaurants in Canada with annual sales of $400 million. As for language of work, Mailloux said that in certain outlets in Montreal's mainly English-speaking west end there are employees who cannot speak French.

But the company has no difficulty in finding potential operators ready to put up $200,000 to run one of its restaurants. The company, which provides the building and the equipment, takes at least 8½ per cent of sales as well as another three per cent for various services.

FROM LITTLE HOUSE by KATHARINE SNOW

Coat hunt continues

As luck would have it, I did not get back my ancient camel hair from the rummage sale last week so, with a renewed burst of energy, I ventured farther afield this time in search of the elusive new coat.

I started out early in the morning in the optimistic belief that I would be among the first 10 to enter the much-advertised warehouse sale. I reached my destination about 9:30 a.m. and was among the first ten thousand, I think!

I was completely awed by the vast surge of pushing, clawing, struggling and laughing women who surged about me as I stood timidly in the doorway. Women of all ages, all types, all nationalities, united in a common dedication beat the system by a dollar or two. Having travelled 45 miles to arrive at this scene I felt that I could not concede defeat without even one small effort. I took one deep, Yoga breath, clutched my purse more firmly, and plunged.

I never reached the coat rack; in fact, I never even saw it! I was diverted by the sight of nylon ski suits being offered at about $60 less than the current price.

I managed to reach that objective only to find that any suit in my size had only a jacket on the hanger. Coming up for a breath of air, I inquired of a woman beside me if pants were not supposed to accompany the jackets. She assured me that they were, but I must stoop down to a big box under the table and pull out a matching pair. I honestly tried, but the frantic terror or being pulverized into the dust of the warehouse floor forced me to my feet sans trousers.

Gasping and doing my share of pushing, I finally got hold of a green jacket in my size. How to try it on? Dare I put down the only coat I owned? If that were snatched, accidentally or otherwise, I would be facing a long, cold winter. There was my purse as well. I compromised. I somehow got the jacket off its hanger and holding my coat and purse on one arm, I wiggled the other arm into a sleeve and then reversed the process.

It would have been sheer folly to attempt to reach the mirror. I stood like a scarecrow, arms extended, clutching my coat and bag. I could tell from the rigidity of my arms and shoulders that this was not the jacket for me.

Having miraculously got into the thing, the problem now was how to get out of it. The elastic in the sleeves bit into my wrists and the nylon pulled dangerously across my hunched shoulders. I dared not release my hold on my belongings and I could not move. Thousands surged and bumped by me oblivious to my moanings and wild thrashings until finally, through despairing eyes, I saw a young girl coming toward me. She asked me, in French, if she might help me. How I blessed her! Without her, I am sure that I would have dissolved into a lump of green jell-o within the hour.

Even in my dire circumstances, a thought came strongly to my mind. We must never write off the young merely because their appearance does not conform to our preconceived ideas. This girl was about 18. She wore a bright orange jacket and had matching bright orange hair arranged in a wild and unsubdued halo around her small face. She was chewing bubble gum with enjoyment and no little show of skill, but her smile was amused and infinitely compassionate. We were immediately friends.

I abandoned all hope of every being on Waterloo's best-dressed list and was making a cowardly retreat toward the door when I spied a counter of miniature panties, each pair bearing the name of a day in the week. I have a friend whom I thought might like a set of these tiny garments for her little granddaughter. As I fought the good fight to the counter, I met an old and dear friend from my nursing days. We chatted and laughed together despite mob interference. I pointed to the counter and asked her what age she thought the panties were designed to fit.

She said, "It's easy to see that you live in the country; those are not for children. They are bikinis and we all wear them!"

I really did scurry like the country mouse for the door after that, I did not get a coat or a ski suit or even bikinis, but I did manage to arrive home with only minor scratches and a few bruises and one very happy impression — that no language problem exists at a sale! Both of our languages were flashed back and forth. If one were addressed and did not understand the language used, a near (and I do mean, near) neighbor would immediately make the translation.

Should anyone harbor an anxiety over the ability of French and English to come together in a shared bond of adventure, fun, and helpfulness, one toward the other, I would direct him to the next sale at our local warehouse.

Union Nationale

The Union Nationale wants neither independence nor the status-quo, Biron added, but a "redefined, renewed federalism."

The real threat to Canadian unity isn't from Quebec if the status-quo persists, he said, but from the western provinces.

"We have to face reality... we have to quit the status-quo or the end of Canada will come within five years — from the West. Quebec doesn't have enough money to separate, but the west does, and only a drastic change will prevent this."

Biron repeatedly lashed out at both the Liberals and the PQ for their language policies, describing the Union Nationale as the only party which recognizes both the historical existence of an English minority and the French reality of modern-day Quebec.

French, he said, must be recognized as the province's official language, but English must be given equal status in justice and legislation in recognition of what he described as Quebec's "articulate English minority."

Biron said French-speaking Quebecers have the same right to have their children receive high-quality instruction in English as vice versa, and one of his major points yesterday was to stress the need for better second language instruction in both school systems.

"Since the last election we've talked with specialists who say the answer is to have good-quality second-language instruction. We'll keep the English school system, and only those who truly speak English as their mother tongue will be allowed to send their children to the English system, whether they're from Ontario or England."

Biron described the fight he had in his home town of St. Croix de Lotbiniere to have sufficient English taught in the local French

"It shouldn't be that I can send my children to Montreal or Quebec where they'll get proper instruction in English, while my neighbor, through no fault of his children or himself, can't afford the same opportunity."

The Union Nationale leader blasted both the federal and provincial governments for their attitudes toward the agricultural sector, saying Quebec's proposed agricultural-zoning law is "just another example of state intervention."

"We accept the idea of agricultural zoning in principle, but there's no overall plan — it seems to be total improvisation."

Worse, he added, it was improvisation by technocrats and civil servants without any contact with farmers, county councils or the 1,500 mayors of Quebec agricultural communities.

"For the 60-year-old farmer, his retirement plan, his pension is his farm. If he can't pass it on to his sons, at least he can sell it. Now what's Quebec going to do to recompense him for this loss?"

Marketing boards, especially the milk marketing board, are examples of bureaucratic, top-heavy structures which return only a fraction of what they should to the producer.

"One good example of the way these boards work is the milk marketing board — it sells milk powder for 28 cents in Europe, 72 cents here. Our warehouses are packed with milk powder, yet the flour mills and bakeries are forced to buy soya meal from the U.S. to add protein to certain products when milk powder is better. It's just one example of how a little change in philosophy would mean a lot — the farmers are ready to produce more, but we need new markets," Biron added.

Uneasy truce reigns at Youville

SHERBROOKE (JD) — An uneasy truce reigns at the Youville Hospital this morning after stop-and-go labor protests left many of the hospital's 400 elderly and chronically-ill patients without food, clean linen and other non-medical services since last Thursday.

Marcel Descoteaux, president of the union representing several hundred non-medical staff at the hospital, said the union is satisfied with an agreement reached with Director General Michel Dubreuil reinstating a kitchen job, the abolition of which caused the sporadic stoppages.

Meanwhile, several members of the union claim they were threatened by union strongarms for refusing to join the wild-cat stoppages, and the kitchen employee who suggested to management that the kitchen post wasn't needed had all four tires of their car slashed.

Peace at the hospital came at the cost of a promise by management not to punish anybody for the illegal strikes, to pay the workers for a full week's work, and to meet with the union in coming days to hammer out a permanent peace.

Friday at the hospital was a repetition of a scene during the public service strike three years ago. Friends and relatives of hospital residents smuggled food and clean linen into the rooms past truculent union types, while many less fortunate patients were left — often for hours — on their own excrement.

"We have no idea whether we'll get to eat," one elderly patient said. "Often they'll start to do something, then they'll get pulled away by the union bullies and we won't see them again for hours."

Adamsville crash claims one

COWANSVILLE (JM) — One man is dead and five others hospitalized following a two-car collision on Route 139 two miles west of here at about 2:30 p.m. yesterday.

The victim was identified as Patrick Hugh Miller, 26, of 2243 Cardinal St. in Dorval. Four of the occupants of the other car were taken to the BMP Hospital and released after treatment. They include Richard Lajoie, Lise Champigny and Giselle Lefebvre, all of Cowansville, and Rejeanne Viens, of Granby.

Danielle Champigny, also of Cowansville, was held for observation.

A veteran QPF officer said the scene of the accident resembled a demolition derby, and both cars were total writeoffs. Police are still not sure just how the accident occurred.

Meanwhile, at least three other Quebecers died in traffic accidents across the province, while nine persons killed in a plane crash near Englehart, Ont. on Saturday were among at least 41 persons who died across Canada.

A survey by The Canadian Press from 6 p.m. Friday to midnight Sunday night local times showed 25 traffic deaths, five fire deaths, the nine persons killed in the plane crash, one boy accidentally shot and one man killed in a fall.

Police said members of two families from New Liskeard, Ont., were killed in the plane crash.

He admitted the 35,000-member party had lost almost all its support in the Montreal region and placed most of the blame on Pointe Claire dentist Bill Shaw, whose outspoken rift with the other 10 UN MNAs did the party irreparable harm among the West-Island English.

But he denied the closing of the party's office at 666 Sherbrooke St. West in Montreal recently had anything to do with falling support there.

"It was just because we had a duplication of offices in Montreal... the former director-general was there, but our new man is in Quebec, so we don't need two offices in Montreal," Biron said.

He also denied the counties which voted Union Nationale were getting less than their share of public works money.

"As a matter of fact, we had a different report last Friday; two UN ridings — Lotbiniere and Huntingdon — are among those getting the most from the Ministry of Agriculture and we're definitely getting our share of road improvements... certainly more than the Liberals..."

Dr. Jean Paul Dussault, B.A., D.V.M., M.Sc.V., NEW VETERINARY SURGEON

Dr. Jean Paul Dussault, veterinary surgeon, announces that he will soon practice at Lennoxville. He was born at Pointe-aux-Trembles in 1944. He graduated from Montreal University in 1970; he obtained a Master's degree in Veterinary Science from the same university in 1972. He is married and has three children.

Dr. Dussault first practiced at l'Assomption with pets and race horses until 1975; then he joined a group at St. Georges. He recently bought the hospital of the late Dr. Marcel Pellerin. Dr. Dussault may be called at 567-4695. Business hours are: days, Monday-Friday 14:00 to 16:00 hrs.; evenings, Monday, Wednesday, Friday - 19:00 to 21:00 hrs.

Townships talk

Archives costs reduced

SHERBROOKE (AF) — The cost of photocopying or obtaining municipal documents from the archives of any Quebec municipality is being reduced, by amendments to the City and Towns Act and the Municipal Code, the Ministry of Municipal Affairs announced recently.

Copies of all municipal documents 8½" x 11½" or 14" is 25 cents a page, down from 75 cents.

A copy of a by-law is decreased from 75 to 25 cents a page with a maximum of $35.

Copy of a financial statement has dropped from $7.50 to $2.

The cost of the following items remains the same: Accident reports (police services) - $3. All certificates - $2. Typed manuscript page (8½" x 11" or 14") - $2.50. Street plan - $1.50. Valuation roll excerpts - $.07 property line including name, address, cadastral number and area together with the evaluation.

Cadastral plan - Actual cost List of contributing residents - $0.1 a name All other documents such as director plan, urban plan, zoning plan, urban renovation plan - Actual cost

These rates go into effect January 1, 1979, but do not apply automatically; each municipal council must, from January 1 onward, adopt this rate or a lesser rate if it judges it appropriate. By virtue of the law, without adoption of such a resolution these documents are free.

Any municipal council which feels it necessary to charge more, must apply for specific authorization from the minister, indicating the reasons.

FTQ supports posties

SHERBROOKE (AF) — The President of the Conseil du travail de Sherbrooke (F.T.Q.), Yves Lamontagne, has announced his union's unilateral support for the postal workers, saying the right to strike and negotiate is a fundamental one and they cannot accept the Trudeau government using the postal workers to test it.

The Trudeau government attitude toward the postal workers demonstrates it wants to "put the screws" to all public as well as private workers and illustrates a first step in an anti-union offensive, said Eastern Townships F.T.Q. representative Rejean Leblanc.

The postal workers union finally acquired the right to strike legally on October 12 after having pursued all other legal avenues such as conciliation, Lamontagne said. But he added, as soon as it attempted to exercise that right, Trudeau government stepped in and tried to take it away through a special law.

The postal workers were without a contract since June 30, 1977, and, said Lamontagne, subsequent negotiations proved management to show bad faith by trying to withdraw acquired rights from its workers, namely those concerning technological change.

Lamontagne said his union would not accept Trudeau using the postal workers to serve as an example in order to restrain the demands of other workers. This is why, he said, other workers would rally to combat this menace.

Monday's partial elections, said Lamontagne, served to demonstrate what awaits governments which attempt to quash workers.

Waterloo candidate

Lucille Milaenen, councillor of the south ward of Waterloo will run as an independent candidate in the November 5 municipal elections.

Mrs. Milaenen says she doesn't want to join any team because she wants to keep her right to dissidence and says that belonging to a team would make it more difficult. Also, she estimates that Mr. Roy's team has some weaknesses and does not want to lure her electors into supporting this group. However, she adds, her attitude during this campaign will not prevent her from collaborating with the other members of the council elected November 5th.

Labor, politicians hail Crown-corporation Post Office

OTTAWA (CP) — Government plans to turn the mails over to a Crown corporation have been hailed by some politicians and union leaders as essential to future peace in the strife-saddled post office.

"A Crown corporation will deliver," say promotional buttons worn by members of the 23,000-strong Canadian Union of Postal Workers.

"It would be a different ball game then," says Acting Labor Minister Andre Ouellet of the day when a Crown company would be in charge of the mail.

Others, however, point to strikes at such Crown corporations as Air Canada and the CNR and argue that a more business-like corporate structure at the post office is no guarantee of labor-management harmony.

But all agree the move, promised by Prime Minister Trudeau in August, is a step in the right direction.

It could streamline collective bargaining between those who run the post office and those who move the mail. And it could ease labor-management distrust in a department that has been plagued with problems reaching back 60 years and a 1918 strike by letter carriers demanding one day's rest in seven.

It is a solution that has been touted since 1968, when a postoffice commissioned report concluded that a Crown corporation was best suited to making the post office run smoothly.

TIMING IRONIC

Ironically, it comes at a time when the government is committed to getting out of some of its business operations. The government discovered earlier this year that it owned or financed 380 corporations, their subsidiaries and sub-subsidiaries.

Traditionally, the government set up Crown companies—the first was the Canadian National Railways in 1919—to put nation-building efforts on a businesslike footing. The same reasoning applied to Crown firms established to supply the country's war effort.

Converting the post office into a Crown corporation is not a solution in itself, says Postmaster-General Gilles Lamontagne. There must also be a major change in the attitude of inside postal workers.

Advocates of a corporate takeover at the post office say the change is needed to smooth bargaining procedures. Now, unions negotiate with both post office management and the treasury board, the government's own financial office.

Jean-Claude Parrot, leader of the inside workers, argues that the post office has developed an "Alice in Wonderland" management structure that has neither flexibility nor the authority to deal with unions.

A Crown corporation, he says, would provide post office management with both, eliminating "needless interference by politicians and other departments" and giving managers "the administrative framework and powers which would ensure better planning."

Essentially, however, the switch would free union members from the constraints of the Public Service Staff Relations Act, a law that puts limits on areas open for negotiation by civil servants.

The act puts job security, job classification, super-annuation, promotion and demotion clauses, transfers and provisions aimed at easing the effects of technological change outside the scope of collective bargaining for civil servants.

It's electoral-list revision time. The revision — described in a government ad which ran on Page 5 of Friday's Record — continues today through Saturday, and the list of those accepting revisions has been published several times.

In other words, there's no excuse if you're not enumerated. Everybody's got a chance and those who don't take it are fools, pure and simple. Anybody who doesn't get him or herself registered by Saturday doesn't deserve to have a vote. So check.

Senatorial guts

It took the jolt of being portrayed as a bunch of super-annuated old crocks to convince the Canadian Senate it had to fight for its life, but the venerable upper house has met Mr. Trudeau's challenge with a vengeance, as can be seen in Senate Government Leader Ray Perrault's angry denial of any ties "with some policy czar in the Liberal Party".

Mr. Perrault's scathing denunciation of the popular view of the Senate as a 'supine body of rubber-stamping bureaucrats' is as feisty a statement as we've ever heard emanate from the Upper House and we hope this re-surgent spirit continues.

We do not agree that the Senate isn't doing its job; the problem, as Mr. Perrault astutely put it, is that the Senate has lousy public relations.

This is all too true; if either the government or the Opposition recommended the abolition of all trade barriers between the United States and Canada, we haven't the slightest doubt it would be splashed across every front page in the country. But how many people know the Canadian Senate made just such a recommendation?

It came in the form of a two-volume report from the Standing Senate Committee on Foreign Affairs, entitled Canada-United States Relations, Canada's Trade Relations With the United States. The 22-member committee's report discussed the relative benefits and liabilities of the century-old trade policies between Canada and the U.S. and concluded they weren't doing either nation much good.

About the only thing we see wrong with the Senate is the system used to pick the senators. No party has abused this system more than the Grits under Pierre Trudeau; we feel it's only a matter of time before the system is changed to reflect proportional representation as Mr. Trudeau's constitutional reform proposals suggest.

The biggest problem in Canada today is that there aren't enough checks and balances on the runaway nature of the government; if a scheme were instituted empowering an upper house — call it what you will — to ride herd on the government, this nation would be better for it.

Montreal Le Devoir: Great joy, mixed with astonishment in the Catholic Church and the national church of Poland, greeted the election of the Archbishop of Cracow to succeed Pope John Paul I. In a renewed display of unity and determination, the conclave succeeded in agreeing not only to find a new pastor who follows a line of continuity and moderation but also to call upon a bishop from Poland.

What is especially striking is not that after four centuries the choice fell on someone from outside Italy, but that he comes from one of the national churches living under a socialist regime. These churches, long persecuted and gradually having learned to separate the wheat from the chaff, had come to consider themselves—and to be seen from outside—as communities more or less set aside by the "trial" of history. Now, on the contrary, with the Polish church, they are again following the road not only to Rome, from which they were never really separated, but also to the contemporary West, which seemed to have lost sight of them.

There is no doubt that the arrival of Karol Wojtyla in Rome is an event of historic importance, politically as much as spiritually. For believers and socialist non-believers alike, the election of the Archbishop of Cracow is also going to spark renewed interest in and attention to the Polish experience of confrontation and reconciliation between the Christian faith and socialism.

Several popes have come from poor families, but rare are those who, like Karol Wojtyla, have known clandestine living and forced labor and the enormous upheavals that struck Poland so hard during the last world war. A man of so many experiences can only bring moral richness, understanding, openness of spirit in the management of church affairs and the broader action in worldly affairs that is expected from the Bishop of Rome.

"If I make a mistake, correct me," were among his first words, speaking as a foreigner who just arrived in Rome but also as a man of old tradition, whose responsibilities do nothing to diminish the ties of brotherhood. The day of his coming is a happy day.—Jean-Claude Leclerc (Oct. 17)

Environmentalists win U.K. seal cull war

LONDON (AP) — The British government backed down—but insisted it was right. Environmental activists celebrated—but acknowledged their war is far from won. And 2,000 seal pups will live—at least until they are older and less winsome.

That was the status after a week-long dispute over a plan to "cull"—or slaughter—grey seals in the Orkney Islands off the North Coast of Scotland because they allegedly eat too much from dwindling fish stocks.

Because of "widespread public concern"—the prime minister's office alone received 16,800 protest letters—the government announced Monday it was calling off six Norwegian marksmen who had been hired for $40,000 to kill 900 adult seals.

Licensed local hunters, who were to have killed 4,000 seal pups, will be restricted to 2,000 as in the past, said the announcement from the Scottish office.

"We achieved what we set out to achieve: they're going to review the whole subject of the seal population," said Ken Weiland, 28, a spokesman for the Greenpeace organization.

Greenpeace stationed two dozen volunteers in tents on rocky islands pledged to stand between the seals and the hired guns, who were brought in, said the Scottish office, "because they are experts in killing the adult seals, which requires a heavier weapon than the pups."

The showdown never came off, although the Greenpeace trawler Rainbow Warrior shadowed the Norwegians' ship Kvitingen. Relations between the vessels warmed after Rainbow Warrior relayed a government message, which couldn't otherwise get through to the hunters.

But a change of heart? No, said Weiland.

"Governments don't change their nature overnight. It was pressure—pressure from us and pressure from the people. Still it's going to make the government more aware and make them be absolutely sure of their facts and figures before they embark on a course that's going to outrage a lot of people."

However, Scottish Secretary Bruce Millan repeated he is sure of his facts, and that three different advisory groups concerned with seals and other wildlife endorsed the six-year plan aimed at reducing by half Britain's grey seal population.

CONSUME FISH
 From a low of 500 in 1914, the greys in Britain have multiplied to an estimated 60,000—two-thirds of their species in the world, Millan said, adding: "There is no doubt that they are consuming a considerable quantity of fish, which has been put at a value of some 12,000 pounds ($24 million) per annum."

"I am also concerned that the future of the species is not endangered," he said. He said Greenpeace and other opponents of the cull have brought forward no evidence that the greys' existence would be threatened by the cull.

He said that in the end the decision is his, and that sparing seals now might just mean more to cull in the future.

Greenpeace, also known for daring mid-ocean harassment of whaling fleets, had objected to the lack of published evidence from the Scottish office. Weiland said supporters did "an immense amount of research in a very short time," combing libraries and talking with wildlife experts, and then decided to intervene.

"When the news broke we had all the volunteers we could use," said Weiland. "British, Dutch, French, Canadian—seven nationalities in all."

Mob-mouthpiece distinctions blurred by easy bucks

WASHINGTON — Organized crime could not function without the legion of high-priced lawyers, accountants and investments experts who teach the mobsters how to stay beyond the long arm of the law.

But the distinction between the professional advisers and the crooks they associate with often becomes blurred. Many of the legal and financial counselors succumb to the lure of easy money and become racketeers themselves.

A still-secret report, filed more than six years ago by a special task force of FBI and Internal Revenue Service agents, named Meyer Lansky and Morris Shenker as two of the most important financial figures in organized crime.

Lansky is an aged relic of a bygone criminal era. He started as a young street tough in New York City and rose to become the first and foremost of underworld money men. His Mafia associates considered him a genius in financial matters.

But Lansky's day is past. FBI wiretaps on his home recorded nothing but harmless conversation, according to our sources. Doctors who examined him at the behest of the Justice Department found him to be in poor physical condition.

Shenker is a different kettle of fish. A brilliant criminal lawyer out of St. Louis, he now lives in Las Vegas, where he owns the Dunes hotel and casino. The confidential report recommended that Shenker be prosecuted, but he has never even been arrested for anything. One knowledgeable source told us that the substance of five years' wiretaps concerning Shenker's activities "could be put on the head of a pin."

The IRS-FIB team looked into allegations that Shenker was accepting kickbacks on union pension fund loans. But Justice Department officials reluctantly decided the evidence was too fuzzy to take into a courtroom.

A source close to the investigation told us that Shenker had taken huge tax write-offs from California real estate losses. He allegedly bought into partnerships that were guaranteed to lose money.

Intelligence reports allege that Shenker has numerous associations with organized crime. As a skilled criminal lawyer, he represented several known racketeers.

Perhaps his most influential contact was former Teamsters Union president Jimmy Hoffa, whose presumed death is believed to have been engineered by underworld hoods. The association with Hoffa gave Shenker a pipeline to the union's Central States Pension Fund in Chicago and apparently helped make him a multimillionaire.

Shenker supplanted the notorious racketeer Moe Dalitz as the largest borrower from the pension fund, according to a special report by the Professional Drivers Council, a dissident Teamsters group.

Through partnerships with the late businessman Irvin J. Kahn, Shenker got more than $164 million from other unions and pension funds.

Shenker, who is given to acts of philanthropy, has always managed to stay one step ahead of the federal investigators who have been tailing him.

Shenker isn't the only financier to tap the Central States Pension Fund. Allen Glick, a reputed front for gangland interests, used a $62.7 million loan from the fund to build a hotel and casino empire in Las Vegas.

In a secret document filed in federal court, government investigators have alleged that Anthony ("Tony the Ant") Spilotro is the hidden owner of Glick's Argent Corporation, which controls two hotels and casinos in the gambling capital. Spilotro is a Chicago gangland figure who reportedly oversees syndicate operations in Las Vegas.

An obvious favorite of the pension fund, Glick has managed to borrow a total of more than $146 million from the Teamsters' fund. The 36-year-old Glick is truly one of the most mysterious men in the country. A former Army captain, he joined a real estate firm called the Saratoga Development Corporation in 1971. Virtually overnight, he became the boy wonder of San Diego real estate.

A scant two years later, with minimal experience in the business world, Glick became the largest stockholder in the Hacienda hotel-casino in Las Vegas. In 1974, he used a huge loan from the Teamsters' Central States Pension Fund to buy Reerion Corporation, the forerunner of Argent. Justice Department investigators believe the underworld helped Glick obtain the Teamsters loan.

Certainly Glick's casinos have some shady characters hanging around. Local and federal grand juries have indicted a number of Glick's casino employees in cases involving massive amounts of missing funds. The Nevada Gaming Commission recently fined Argent $100,000 for allowing skimming of the take from horse-betting operations. Two Argent employees face criminal charges.

We have learned that federal and local authorities are looking for a Flick associate who disappeared on a trip to Latin America after allegedly swiping $7 million in gambling revenues. The missing man, George Vandermark, was secretly indicted by a Las Vegas grand jury.

The FBI believes Vandermark may have been a victim of the mob. Although there's no hard evidence, the theory is that underworld figures actually skimmed the $7 million, blamed Vandermark and then killed him.

A Coffee Party is planned for Thursday, October 26 from 10:30 to 12 noon in the Lounge of the Church Hall, 200 Montreal St. at which all are welcome.

The ladies of St. Peter's Anglican Church Women held their regular meeting postponed a week from the usual second Tuesday, on Tuesday afternoon, October 17, with Mrs. Patricia Lathrop presiding. After opening exercises and minutes read by Mrs. Bernice Trollope, secretary, Miss Doris Giroux presented her treasurer's report, showing a healthy balance.

The Thrift Shop with fall and winter clothing on sale did well under Mrs. Dorothy Dawson as convener. Mrs. Lathrop will be convener the coming month with volunteer assistants. The shop will be open November 1st, the first Wednesday.

The Dorcas Committee convener Mrs. Dawson reported they are working on a quilt on the frame and have another promised, and have bought new material. Tickets are still available on the quilt drawing, to be drawn at the Coffee Party October 26, at the Church Lounge.

Church Calendars for 1979 are available from Miss Doris Giroux and a number were bought at the meeting. Contributions to the Cent-a-Day Fund, to the Thank-offering fund and the Bible Society were received. A letter from the Sisters of St. John the Divine was read, thanking us for used postage stamps collected and sent them. They outlined interestingly some of the work to which sale of used stamps contributes.

Rev. Archdeacon Yong of the Anglican Diocese of Sabah in Malaysia was introduced by Mrs. Joan Thomson and addressed the ladies on the work of the Anglican Church in his country with its Muslim government and population and its wild up-river interior. He displayed a map indicating churches and schools and interesting photographs and pictures. On leaving, he was given a donation to help, perhaps, in the purchase of a new motor for the river boat.

The next meeting will be held Tuesday afternoon, November 14, with Mrs. Myrtle Allen presiding.

Ager-Clarkwed

Mr. and Mrs. D. Clark and attendants.

On August 19, 1978, at 4 p.m., Angela Mary Ager, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Ager, of London, Ont., became the wife of David Leslie Clark, son of Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Clark, of Lac Megantic, Que. The wedding took place at St. George's Anglican Church, London, Ont.

The bride's gown was of polyester satin, with a high waist and rounded neckline, long sleeves buttoned at the cuff, and a short train. Her veil was of fine netting with flower appliques and scalloped hem. Her bouquet was yellow roses with white stephanotis and baby's breath.

Lesley Ager, sister of the bride, as maid of honour, was in a peach floral floor length sleeveless dress of polyester. She wore a gold pendant, gift from the bride, which complemented the rounded gathered neckline. The two bridesmaids, Claudette Broeders, Windsor, Ont., and June Wakeling, cousin of the bride, of England, wore yellow floral polyester dresses, with silver pendants. The bouquets of the three bridal attendants were white daisies with yellow and orange sweetheart roses and baby's breath. The bride's gown and the dresses of her attendants were made by the bride.

The groom was dressed in the traditional three-piece black suit, with white ruffled shirt and black tie. His boutonniere was of white stephanotis, Jack Cole served as best man. The ushers were Michael Ager, brother of the bride, and John Broeders, Windsor, Ont. All three wore suits with beige jackets and complementing brown vests and pants. The best man wore a boutonniere of orange sweetheart roses, and the ushers wore yellow.

The Rev. William Hocker performed the double-ring ceremony.

The bride's mother chose a floor-length light blue dress with a flowing cape, and white accessories. Her corsage was of yellow sweetheart roses. The groom's mother was in a floor-length yellow dress with a cape collar, and beige accessories. Her corsage was of white sweetheart roses.

The reception was held at the Ivanhoe Motel, London. The wedding cake was made by the best man, and decorated by a friend of the bride's family, Mrs. Dorothy Murphy.

For travelling, the bride chose a green plaid suit with a rust blouse. Her corsage was of orange sweetheart roses. The couple spent their honeymoon at Niagara Falls and Toronto, Ont. They are making their home in London, Ont.

Out-of-town guests were from England, Louisiana, Radisson (James Bay), Sherbrooke, and Lac Megantic, Que., Ottawa, Arnprior, Toronto, Kitchener, and Waterloo, Ont.

(Editor's note: Susan Nethery, a 32-year-old mother of four, underwent surgery for breast cancer in May 1976. In this series of excerpts from her new book, "One Year and Counting," she describes her adjustment to the physical and emotional scars of mastectomy while sustained by her close-knit family, sense of humor and deep religious faith. In this third of four parts, she considers the implications of her illness on her family.)

By Susan Nethery

I was still very weak. Dr. Garrett had told me I had had three pints of blood during surgery — and another in my room — because "everywhere I touched you, you bled."

But after the second day, Mama and I were able to sleeping in separate beds. We didn't discuss anything very serious. However, I did show him what was visible of my incision.

I had to get that over with right off the bat. I watched Jim carefully. I saw no disgust. He didn't turn away. He didn't say, "I'm filing for divorce tomorrow."

"I always liked the other one better anyway," he said. "Now, move that arm. We're going water skiing next week."

We were especially happy that night, for Dr. Garrett had come in earlier with good news about the final lab test.

There was no lymph node involvement. The cancer was an early lesion and had not spread beyond the breast. That's the best news we could possibly have gotten.

I didn't realize just how good that news was until months later, as I began to read all I could find about breast cancer. No lymph node involvement meant I had an 80 percent chance of a five-year cancer-free survival, as compared to a 40 to 45 percent chance if the malignancy had spread to the lymph nodes in the axilla.

Friends continued to come by my room constantly. There were no restrictions on visiting hours, nor on how many visitors could crowd into a room at one time. Many times my room was filled to capacity, but it kept me so busy trying to play the hostess and be interested and cheerful that I did not resent it.

In fact, I welcomed it. The steady flow of well-wishers gave me no time to think. Having someone near all the time gave me no time to feel sorry for myself.

I still had not had a good cry. I knew I needed it, but so far there hadn't been an opportunity.

My main concern, during my entire hospital stay, was the children. I knew they were being well cared for and well loved. Jim's sister, Jan, was seeing to that, as far as the little ones were concerned. Ross and Laura were staying home and were old enough to understand I would be home soon.

But the babies — I still considered 1-year-old Lana and 3-year-old Rick, the sister and brother we adopted in mid-1974, babies — couldn't really understand where Mommy was. Or that she would come back.

Especially Rick, poor little vagabond, who was just beginning, to realize what "mommy" and "home" meant. I could hardly stand to think of what he might be feeling. That caused me more pain than my surgery. I tried to force my feelings of love across the miles to him: Oh, Rick, my precious little son. Mommy loves you. I'm coming home soon. I didn't leave you. I didn't give you away.

And to God I pleaded, Please don't let him be hurt any more. Calm his fears. Let him be happy. Take good care of him for me. Please.

make it to the bathroom without calling a nurse. When the I.V. was removed and a few more days had passed, I could go alone.

Big deal, I thought. I'd never dreamed going to the bathroom by myself would be a major accomplishment.

Jim, my husband, stayed the third night with me, allowing Mama, who was satisfied that I was going to make it, to go home and get some rest.

Jim and I had a good time, despite the circumstances. It was like spending the night in a fancy hotel, minus the kids, except we were

LONDON (Reuter) — Nearly 40 per cent of patients under the age of 50 who died in hospitals contributed to their own deaths by overeating, drinking, smoking or ignoring their doctors' orders, says a study published recently.

The finding will come as no surprise to physicians, wrote Sir Cyril Clarke, director of the Royal College of Physicians' medical services study group, which conducted the survey.

"Doctors have been saying for years that the causes of many of the killing diseases of middle life are not mysteries, but are contributed to by overeating, excess alcohol and tobacco," he wrote in the British Medical Journal.

Of 250 patients studied, 98 cases of "self-destruction" were found.

Eight died of deliberate self-poisoning and six died of alcoholic cirrhosis of the liver.

Thirteen patients who died of cancers of the throat and lungs "were strongly addicted to cigarettes, some smoking as many as 60 a day."

Of those dying of heart attacks, 25 had one or more causal factors within their own control—12 were grossly overweight and 22 smoked large numbers of cigarettes. Three heart attack victims had had symptoms long before consulting their doctor.

Thirty-seven of the 98 did not follow the orders of doctors or hospital staff. "These attitudes were often encouraged by their spouses," the study said.

Sir Cyril concluded by quoting statistics to show that heart disease rates are falling among the professional classes but rising in others, indicating that better-educated people heed medical and health advice while others do not.

The "deaths under 50" project has begun to improve medical care but also to discover what factors lay behind the simple "cause of death" listed on death certificates.

Patients 'killing themselves'

ANN LANDERS SAYS:

Ignore in-law's table manners

Dear Ann Landers: What can be done about a 22-year-old son-in-law who has absolutely no table manners?

This young man eats with his mouth open, puts his head in his plate, shovels in the food as if someone is trying to take it away from him, and would you believe — he belches right out loud?

We have an 11-year-old son who idolizes his older sister's husband and imitates everything he does. I hate to tell him his "hero" eats like a pig, but I believe I should say something since he is beginning to take on a few of his boorish mannerisms.

Would it be best to discuss this problem as tactfully as possible with my son-in-law, or should I say something to my daughter? I need some guidance since I can no longer think rationally on this subject. — Tired Of Looking The Other Way In Louisville

Dear Tired: Don't say anything to your daughter or her husband. A 22-year-old who eats like a pig is not about to be retrained. What baffles me is why it bothers you NOW? Didn't you notice this when the couple began to see each other?

You should say something to your young son, however. Sample: "Harold is a very young man, and we are so fond of him, but unfortunately, he didn't learn table manners when he was young. Keep this in mind when you see that he doesn't eat the way we were taught in our family."

Dear Ann Landers: Please find room in your column for another response to clods who make remarks about the size of a child in his presence — such as the woman who asked the boy's mother if "unusually small people run on her side of the family or her husband's."

This came out of Sydney J. Harris' superb column — which I never miss.

When Lloyd George was campaigning for Prime Minister of Britain, a man said to him after a political rally, "You're much shorter than I imagined you'd be." Lloyd George replied: "In Wales, where I come from, we measure a man from the neck up, not from the neck down."

I venture to say a person who gets a scathing response will never make that thoughtless comment again. — Told Her But Good

Dear Good: You certainly did and I thank you.

Dear Ann: We live a half mile from my husband's folks. He is over there every day of the year. He and his dad farm together, about 400 acres. His mother seems to know more about our marriage than I do.

When I disagree with his folks on anything, he sides with them (right or wrong). Divorce is out for religious reasons. Don't suggest it, please.

When we argue, he threatens to shoot himself. I can't suggest counseling. His mother has had two nervous breakdowns and so has his sister. He thinks I'm putting him down if I mention it.

I have gone to work two days a week to get away from home and have developed hypertension in the last three years. I need advice. — Desperate In Dallas

Dear Dallas: People who threaten suicide often do it. Ask your family doctor to talk to your husband about getting therapy. The suggestion from a physician will carry more weight.

I suspect you need some counseling, too. Going to work can help but when you return, the "problem" will still be there and you must learn how to live with it.

Dear Ann Landers: Sam and I have been married nearly seven years and we have never had a serious problem until last week. I decided I had to be more independent. Part of the solution was to learn how to drive. So Sam is teaching me.

I was smart enough to graduate from college with honors and give Sam two fine children but suddenly I am the dumbest, most uncoordinated person he has ever seen in his entire life. He says my reflexes are so slow it's a miracle I'm still alive. The insults he has laid on me since he's been teaching me to drive would fill one whole page of your newspaper.

Can it be that I'm not doing very well because my husband is a poor teacher, has a short fuse, and no patience? — The Idiot (His Name For Me)

Dear Woman: Even a husband who has a long fuse and an abundance of patience should not attempt to teach his wife to drive. Relieve Sam of this nerve-racking job and enroll in a driver training school. Relatives usually make the worst teachers — and the poorest students.

CONFIDENTIAL to Going Crazy: The best way to discourage your daughter from going with "a jerk you can't stand" is to find something to admire about him. So long as you knock him, she'll have to keep going with him so she can defend her "judgment."

Do you feel awkward, self-conscious — lonely? Welcome to the club. There's help for you in Ann Landers' booklet, "The Key to Popularity." Send 50 cents in coin with your request and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11995, Chicago, Illinois 60611.

POLLY'S POINTERS Polly Cramer

Help for windows

By Polly Cramer POLLY'S PROBLEM

DEAR POLLY — I do hope you can help me with the problem I have with my windows. Regardless of what I wash them with they smear terribly. Even my mirrors are a mess. I have tried vinegar water, ammonia, club soda and kerosene. — DOROTHY

DEAR DOROTHY — Your trouble might be with the drying rather than the washing. Try rubbing with crumpled newspaper, which does a great job on windows and mirrors. One-half cup denatured alcohol in a couple of quarts of warm water is also good for washing windows, particularly in the winter when the temperature is near freezing. — POLLY

DEAR POLLY — I helped my window washing problem by using a corn starch mix in warm water. Each time I dip the rag in the water I stir the mixture since the corn starch tends to settle on the bottom. — MRS. M.D.B.

DEAR POLLY — Some time ago one of the readers asked what she could do with some wine glasses that had been broken where the stems joined the glasses. She could use them for lovely glass bells by turning them upside down and glueing in clappers of some kind that are attached to small chains. — BETTY Q.

DEAR POLLY — I find that empty potato chip cans make excellent wild bird seed containers. They are easy to carry and the food is easily dispensed. — JOY

DEAR POLLY — Recently I was given a baby shower and ended up with many wrappings with baby type prints on them. Many were far too wrinkled to re-use so I lined the nursery dresser drawers with them. They look so colorful and are more cheerful than the paper I had been using. — Joannie

DEAR POLLY — This summer I stepped in some chewing gum that stuck to the bottom of my sandal as well as to part of my foot. I stopped at a gas station, drizzled some gasoline onto a paper towel and easily wiped the gum off both my sandal and my foot. — LINDA

Diablos down Cougars
 By MATTHEW ELDER
 LENNOXVILLE — Trois-Rivieres Diablos held off a determined Cougar squad to win 11-9 before a crowd of 1,000 at Bishop's Stadium in a very close game Sunday afternoon.

Coach Tom Allen's Cougars have come a long way since their opening day drubbing at the hands of the Diablos. Although the results have neither shown on scoreboard nor stat sheet, they have become a spirited and tough ball club.

Yesterday the results of their perseverance finally did appear on the surface, as they scored their first touchdown of the season, an eight-yard run by Glen Collie late in the fourth quarter.

The Diablos had clung to a narrow lead since the first quarter, when they roared back from giving up a single point on a Bernie Docking punt to move the all 85 yards in two plays on a 73-yard run by Pierre Lefebvre and a 12-yard touchdown run by Alain Deschamps.

The Diablos sported a fine running attack as Pierre Lefebvre gained 121 yards and Alain Deschamps, last season's rushing champion, added 63 more. Quarterbacks Denis Marchand and Gerald Despres combined to pass for a total of 115 yards, most of which was attributable to Deschamps as he came out of the backfield.

Champlain rallied in the dying moments of the game and very nearly pulled off an upset, but an abortive outside kick attempt killed their hopes. Coaches Allen and Ian Breck commented that their team should have come out on top, but a problem with stupid penalties continued to plague them. Defensive coordinator Breck mused over the profusely of calls against his defence, but was quick to praise their overall effort.

"We didn't get beat up at all like we did in the first game," Breck said. "We have to give credit to the guys individually. It's hard to keep on losing and be able to resist the temptation to pack it in. For most of them, it's their first year and there are bound to be mistakes."

Sherbrooke girls take soccer nats
 The Sherbrooke midget and junior girls soccer teams, representing Quebec in the national finals, are reigning Canadian champions following victories yesterday.

In Vancouver, the local midgets took a 6-3 triumph over the Blue Mountain Rangers from Vancouver in their title match. Danielle Laverdiere, Sylvie Maheu and Chantal Sevigny scored twice each in the winning cause.

At the junior finals in Edmonton, Lyne Ferland scored three goals as Sherbrooke won 4-1. Lyne Provencal got the remaining goal.

Saints lose
 THETFORD MINES — Real Daigneault scored three goals and added three assists as the Fleur de Lys outshot Sherbrooke Saints 42-25 en route to a 9-5 Junior 'A' decision here Friday.

Francois Guoin had two scores while singles went to Gaetan Vachon, Carol Bibeau, Jean Charron and Dany Bonneville. Patrick Dodier scored twice for Sherbrooke while Marc Cloutier, Marcel Giguere and Gervais Nolet accounted for the remaining Saints markers.

The Saints' next game is Wednesday at 8 p.m. when they host Beauport. This will also be the official opening for the Junior 'A' newcomers.

Whalers drop Racers
 Wayne Gretzky did his best to justify his press clippings at Indianapolis on Sunday night but he was no match for the Howe family.

The stylish centre, whom the Racers lured from Sault Ste. Marie last summer amid protests that his junior eligibility had not yet run out, scored his third World Hockey Association goal and set up another as the Racers took on the league-leading New England Whalers.

But a three-goal performance by Mark Howe and a goal and assist by his father, Gordie, paced the unbeaten Whalers to a 6-3 victory.

Stanstead takes Howard trophy
 LENNOXVILLE (ME) — Stanstead College won the Senator C.B. Howard trophy for football from Bishop's College School with a 40-7 win over their long-time rivals Saturday.

Final score in the two-game total-point series was 82-21 for Stanstead.

Quarterback Gary Hindley led the Stanstead scoring with three touchdowns. Luc Lesage added two others, as well as two converts. Adrian

UCW Meeting

BISHOPTON — Mrs. Oral Downes entertained the U.C.W. at a dessert meeting on October 12.

Mrs. Rufus Stevenson opened the meeting with the Purpose, U.C.W. Creed and Lord's Prayer repeated in unison.

Mrs. S.N. Bishop led the Devotional period, reading "Bearing Burdens we Cannot Escape", Bible passages and prayer.

Roll call was answered by eight members responding with a Bible verse. Minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Mrs. Ralph Gilbert gave the treasurer's report, and Mr. Ralph St. Pierre reported several cards mailed.

A new order of church plates has been received, anyone interested in purchasing them should contact Mrs. Ralph Gilbert.

After several items of business had been attended to, the meeting was closed with the benediction.

The November meeting will be with Mrs. Ona Gilbert.

News Briefs

It WAS a Canaletto

LONDON (Reuter) — A man who picked up a box off a highway because he thought it might be a traffic hazard discovered Saturday it contained an authentic Canaletto painting worth $210,000.

Lawrence Ayres found the box on a London highway Thursday and took it to his suburban Redhill home. Opening the carton, he found a painting and told his wife, Anna: "It looks like a Canaletto reproduction."

Ayres said he planned to take it to police when he returned from a long weekend.

But Saturday, Mrs. Ayres heard on the radio that an art gallery director had lost a real Canaletto painting, of St Mark's Square in Venice, on the highway.

Lalonde urges trade with Arabs

MONTREAL (CP) — Marc Lalonde, federal minister for intergovernmental affairs, says Canadian companies are failing to compete for billions of dollars worth of small contracts up for grabs in the booming oil producing countries.

He told a group of 200 Quebec businessmen at a trade seminar that Canadian firms are ignoring smaller contracts of "very reasonable and profitable dimensions" in those countries.

Education enrolment drops

MONTREAL (CP) — McGill University's faculty of education reports that enrolment in its one-year diploma program has dropped by nearly half compared with last year.

Schools are closing all over the country, and teachers are losing their jobs, assistant dean Prof. Crandall Bockus said in an interview.

Drury in hospital

EDMONTON (CP) — Former federal cabinet minister Bud Drury was in good condition Sunday in a city hospital after suffering what hospital officials said was a bowel obstruction.

Drury, 66, was flown to Edmonton from Yellowknife early Sunday morning.

He resigned from the House of Commons in January and now is chairman of the National Capital Commission.

London 'climbers' arrested

LONDON (AP) — Two men who climbed the 57-metre Nelson's Column and snarled rush-hour traffic in Trafalgar Square were arraigned Saturday on charges of doing about $2,000 damage to the statue.

British-born Edwin Drummond, a 34-year-old writer living in San Francisco, and London store clerk Colin Rowe, 22, said they pulled the stunt Friday to protest South Africa's racial segregation policies.

Bread emperor dead at 80

TORONTO (CP) — W. Garfield Weston, who turned a Toronto bakery into a food-based financial empire, died in hospital Sunday after a brief illness. He was 80 years old.

Weston was a man of mystery and contrast. He was a publicity-shy businessman who operated for 50 years in relative secrecy, but his career included a stint as a British member of Parliament.

Miami Beach may legalize gambling

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — This aging resort, once billed as the "Sun and Fun Capital of the World," may be the next U.S. city to try casino gambling as a way to reverse a decade-long losing streak.

Florida voters will decide Nov. 7 whether to authorize privately-owned, state-controlled casinos on a 25-kilometre strip of oceanfront extending from Miami Beach north to Hollywood, Fla.

Iran rioting leaves five dead

TEHRAN (AP) — Police opened fire on students and teachers demonstrating against the Iranian government Sunday in the city of Hamadan, killing at least five persons and wounding 18, reports reaching the capital said.

The reports said the bloodshed occurred when protesters ignored warnings to disperse and began setting fires to banks and government buildings. Hamadan is 400 kilometres west of Tehran.

Mikoyan dead at 82

MOSCOW (AP) — Anastas Mikoyan, former Soviet president and the first of the old Bolsheviks to retire with honor, is dead at age 82, it was announced Sunday.

Nasty letter comes out

OTTAWA (CP) — The government will not oppose public release of a letter from a former revenue minister to a solicitor-general which says the RCMP were acting illegally in using confidential income tax information for criminal investigations.

Solicitor-General Jean-Jacques Blais says the government will not try to withhold the letter when cabinet ministers testify next month before the McDonald commission investigating RCMP wrongdoing.

Soviet theorizes saucer crash

MOSCOW (AP) — A respected Soviet scientist says a craft from outer space may have caused the explosion that scarred a vast area of Siberia 70 years ago and has baffled scientists ever since.

The explosion, known as the Tunguska Mystery, devastated a remote forest region in central Siberia on June 30, 1908. It levelled trees over a 3,220-square-kilometre area and was followed by intense radiation and a great fire.

Depressed dad killed kids, self

BARRYVILLE, N.B. (CP) — No inquest is to be held into the deaths of a father and five of his children who were asphyxiated in a multiple murder-suicide here early Friday, Coroner Charles A. McCoombs said Sunday.

Funeral service for Alvin Brideau, a 44-year-old unemployed woods worker, and the children are to be held today in this small northeastern New Brunswick community, 140 kilometres from Moncton.

The bodies were found in a car parked with the motor still running beside the grave of another Brideau child who had died in a fire a year ago.

Hatfield seeks third win

FREDERICTON N.B. (CP) — Premier Richard Hatfield will seek New Brunswick political history today as his Progressive Conservative government seeks a third-consecutive election victory.

If it does, it will be the first PC government in New Brunswick history to do so.

To ensure success, Hatfield, 47, launched a frantic 1,500 mile province-wide tour on the weekend.

Pope assumes throne

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II assumed the throne of St. Peter on Sunday before one of the largest crowds in Vatican history and reached out symbolically to Roman Catholics in the Soviet bloc.

"May he live a hundred years!" chanted Polish pilgrims waving the red-and-white flag of their Communist-ruled land as the former archbishop of Krakow was installed as leader of the world's 700 million Roman Catholics, history's first Polish Pope.

"Remember me today and always in your prayers, pray for me," the new pontiff asked in his homily. "Help me to be able to serve you."

He described himself as "full of trepidation," unconscious of his "unworthiness."

New Canada Savings Bonds increased to 9.25% Every year for 7 years

Questions you might ask...

Q Do all purchasers of this year's Canada Savings Bonds receive the higher rate?

A Yes, all purchasers will receive the new rate even though the application forms and the bond certificates have the old rates printed on them. The new rate is effective from November 1 to maturity in 1985.

Q I have already purchased my bonds. Do I benefit from the new rate?

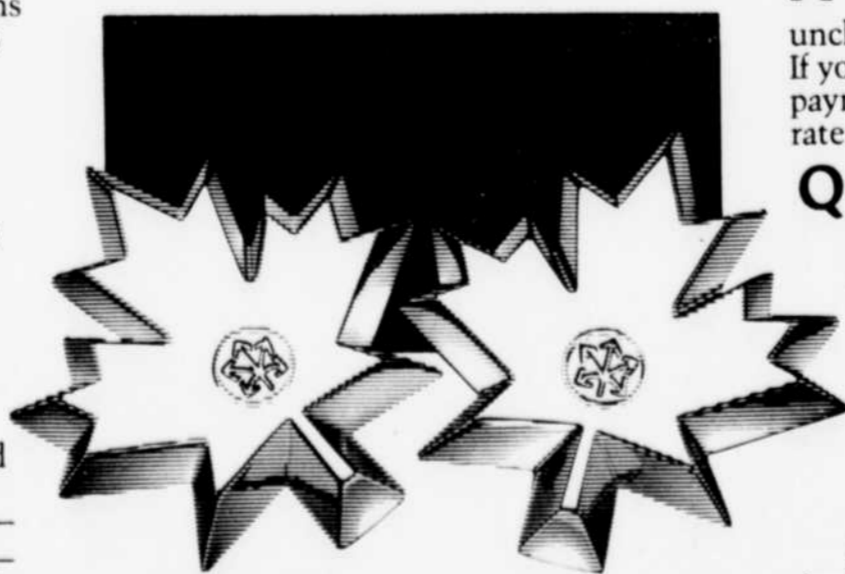

A Yes, if you have purchased this year's issue, you will automatically be entitled to the new interest rate.

Q What is the effect of this change on the two new bonds?

A With the increased rate of return on the 1978/79 Series a $100 Compound Interest Bond will now grow as follows:

Nov. 1	Value	Nov. 1	Value
1979	$109.25	1983	$155.63
1980	$119.36	1984	$170.03
1981	$130.40	1985	$185.76
1982	$142.46

With the Regular Interest Bond, the increased rate of return will now provide an annual interest payment of $92.50 for each $1,000 bond.

Q Are Payroll Savings Plan and Monthly Savings Plan buyers affected by this change?

A If you've enrolled before November 15, your payment schedule will be unchanged, based on the old rate of 8.90%. If you enroll after November 15, your payments will be based on the new rate of 9.25%.

Q What if I buy bonds for cash after November 15?

A Accrued interest will be charged at the new rate from November 1 to the end of the month of purchase.

Q Have any other changes been made to the 1978/79 Series?

A No, all other features and conditions of the new bonds remain the same. New Canada Savings Bonds are a safe, secure investment. They're instant cash anytime. And they now earn a higher return—9.25% every year for 7 years.

15-14 for Queen's

Gaels nip Gaiters on final play

Bishop's quarterback Peter Knee tries to gain yardage against Queen's Golden Gaels Saturday, as Ted Tyczka gets ready to make the tackle and Blair Shier looks on helplessly.

By MATTHEW ELDER
LENNOXVILLE — For the second consecutive year, Bishop's Gaiters lost the O-QIFC Eastern Division championship to Queen's Golden Gaels. The Gaels preserved to edge the Gaiters 15-14 Saturday in the final regular season game.

Had Bishop's won, they would have finished in first place ahead of Queen's; a tie would have meant second and a home field advantage in next Saturday's semi-final playoff round. Instead, the Gaiters have been dropped to third place behind the McGill Redmen.

The Gaiters gave Queen's their biggest challenge of their undefeated season, and it all came down to a punt single point on the final play of the game. The Golden Gaels had moved the ball to the Bishop's 30, following a botched snap on a Bishop's punt. Gaiter's coach Bruce Coulter sent Andy King and Dave Jardin back to receive deep in the end zone, with orders to kick the ball back out, thereby preventing the game-winning single. The Gaels' punter angled a low kick towards the right side of the end zone, and King elected to run it out, but was tackled a few yards shy of the goal line.

Though technically a tie could have been salvaged, the Gaiters could have moved ahead earlier. Coulter pointed to several key plays that prevented them from doing so. "If Kevin Bennett could have caught the ball in bounds on that reverse option pass from (Bruce) Gair, we'd have kept a scoring drive going." There were several other Gaiter miscues late in the game that could have averted the final play fiasco. Several times they were called for roughing, and then there was the disastrous punt play that gave the Golden Gaels good field position for the winning point.

Queen's opened the scoring the first time they had the ball on an 11-yard field goal by Brad Thompson. Bishop's finally put the ball across the goal line with 8:38 to play on a five-yard reverse by Bruce Gair. Nick Arakgi converted and, in addition to a single and a 45-yard field goal, Bishop's lead 11-4 at halftime.

Bishop's offence failed to move the ball and a 25-yard pass from quarterback John Lynch to All-Canadian receiver Bob O'Doherty resulted. Thompson's convert was wide, and the Gaiters hung on to the lead, 11-10.

Good field position allowed Thompson to kick a 37-yard field goal to vault Queen's into a two-point lead in the final quarter. Bishop's came back with a 33-yard Arakgi field goal. Queen's regained good position and moved to the Bishop's 35, but Thompson's field goal attempt went wide for a game-tying single point with 2:37 to play.

Queen's quarterbacks Lynch and Mullen completed only 6 of 16 passes for 85 yards, and Bishop's especially covered O'Doherty well, as the receiver caught just two passes. Offensively, Bruce Wilkins led the Gaiters with 105-yards rushing as the locals outgained the Gaels 238 yards to 208.

Beavers draw, win weekend tilts

Sherbrooke's Rejean Cloutier bangs Trois-Rivieres Captain Michel Leblanc as the fans eat it up.

INJURY HOBBLER HAWORTH

SHERBROOKE (BP) — Alan Haworth was out but not down as he joined the ranks of the injured or non-playing Beavers last night at the Sports Palace as the locals took on Chicoutimi.

The 18-year-old Sherbrooke rookie missed his first chance to play against his former Saguenee teammates in regular season play because of an injured leg, suffered Friday against Trois-Rivieres.

Haworth warmed up with the Beavers Sunday but didn't see any action, stating that the torn ligament in his leg was hurting too much. He did say, however, he'll try it again in Laval this evening and hopes it will be all right.

The centre with 17 points to date watched the game from the stands along with injured defenceman Pierre Tremblay and Robert Breen. Tremblay hasn't played at all in regular season, still recovering from a pre-season game ailment. He is expected to receive a knee brace shortly and begin practicing immediately afterwards.

Several family members were also in attendance for the weekend home contests. Fred Leverman, his wife Elsie and 16-year-old John and the Laforest family, Victor and Jeannita and sons Daniel and Roland were all watching last night's game against the Sags. Only the Laforest's didn't see Friday's contest against Trois-Rivieres.

It was the first time any of the families had been to Sherbrooke to watch games this season, though Mr. Johnston has made the pilgrimage for the past two years and Mr. Leverman saw his Jeff play in Quebec City at the season opener. All expressed hopes of coming back at least once or twice more during the season despite the long trip from the maritimes.

Mr. MacKenzie was very satisfied with the two games he viewed over the weekend, calling them "very disciplined" and playing a style of "hard-driving hockey." He termed the Sherbrooke organization as "an excellent set-up."

By BRUCE PORTER
SHERBROOKE — The Beavers picked three of a possible four points during weekend Quebec Major Junior Hockey League action by downing Chicoutimi 4-2 yesterday afternoon while tying Trois-Rivieres on Friday night 6-6.

Rookie Jean-Marc Gaulin scored his first QMJHL goal in the second period and complemented it in the third with the winner while goaltender Corrado Micallef fended off 29 Saguenee shots Sunday as the Sherbrooke club notched its fifth victory of the season before 2,187 fans.

After a hard-hitting scoreless first period, Chicoutimi hit the mark behind Micallef early in the middle frame on Michel Champigny's shot. Gaulin shovelled the puck past Samuel St. Laurent midway through the stanza during a goal-mouth scramble for his first-ever major junior goal, with Guy Perreault getting his premier point in the league with an assist.

Jimmie Mann's 16:46 waist-high drive from the top of the circle culminated in a series of frustrating plays where the Beavers couldn't get untracked after leaving numerous good plays all but complete.

A low shot to St. Laurent's stick side by Gaulin gave Sherbrooke a 3-1 advantage and the winning margin at 2:57 pm the last period, followed by Louis Begin's short-handed breakaway tally when he picked up the loose puck as a result of it bouncing there on a Luc Richard shot from the point.

Chicoutimi's lone tally in the closing twenty was a weak one which Micallef admitted he took his eye off of. The Gilbert Delorme shot from 40 feet out trickled through the netminder's pads.

Friday at the Sports Palace, the Beavers came from a 3-1 deficit in the first period to hold 5-5 and 6-6 ties following the second and third stanzas.

Jean-Gaston Douville, Trois-Rivieres' 33-goal scorer last season, connected for three goals on three shots against Yvan Charbonneau in the opening twenty to send the Draveurs off to a fast start. Alan Haworth got the lone Sherbrooke marker to tie the score at one when he stole the puck behind the Draveur net and tucked it around the goalpost before goalkeeper Jacques Cloutier could get there.

Haworth scored at 0:31 in the second frame, again unassisted, to bring the home club within a goal of Trois-Rivieres but Rene Marchand best Charbonneau while Haworth was in the penalty box for tripping just over a minute later. Jimmie Mann and Jean Chouinard tallied back-to-back for the Beavers by 7:55 to even the count at four and renew hope for the 3,029 spectators. Alain Labelle scored for Trois-Rivieres and Louis Begin replied for the Beavers before the period concluded.

Jean-Francois Sauve's flip shot off a rebound got by a downed Sherbrooke netminder after 52 seconds in the closing period to put the visitors in front once more. Delage countered Trois-Rivieres' three steady lines with just two for most of the third, and even the second line was hindered a bit by the handicapped Haworth.

Mann tallied his second goal of the match at 15:03 to equalize the Draveur advantage and finish off the scoring.

The Beavers head to Laval tonight for their first outing of the season with the Nationals, who currently have the same number of wins as the Sherbrookers.

In other play Sunday, Trois-Rivieres routed Laval 10-6. Cornwall dumped Hull 8-3. Quebec downed Shawinigan 5-2 and Verdun and Montreal battled to a 4-4 draw.

HABS REBOUND, CRUSH KINGS

MONTREAL (CP) — Rejean Houle and Steve Shutt scored two goals each to help Montreal Canadiens overcome Los Angeles Kings 8-4 in a loose National Hockey League game Sunday night before 16,089 fans.

Yvan Lambert, Guy Lapointe, Jacques Lemaire and Pierre Mondou scored single goals for the Canadiens, who forged a 5-1 first-period lead, saw it cut to one goal and then rallied to snap a two-game losing streak.

Dave Taylor had two goals for the Kings, with Butch Goring and Rob Palmer adding one apiece.

The Canadiens had 42 shots at Los Angeles goaltender Ron Grahame, while the Kings countered with 20 at Michel Larocque in the Montreal net. Larocque was giving a rest to Ken Dryden, the victim in a 7-5 loss to the Flames in Atlanta on Friday night.

The victory gives Montreal a 4-2-0 record in the Norris Division, while the Kings are 2-3-0 in the same division.

The Canadiens carried a precarious 5-4 lead into the third period, but Shutt scored his first of the game and second of the year just 2:25 into the frame to give the Stanley Cup champions some breathing room.

CLOSE OUT SCORING
Mondou scored midway through the period and Shutt scored on a power play with Bob Murdoch serving a holding penalty at 14:28.

KNOWLTON Kay Taylor 243-6177

Congratulations and best wishes from their many friends are extended to Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Taylor, who celebrated their 59th wedding anniversary on October 13.

Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Ladd attended the Charby-Edgington wedding in St. John's Church, Brome and the reception which followed. Following the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Robert McCune of Mascouche Heights, Mr. and Mrs. Bryan Norton and Mrs. Gladys Norton, all of Waterloo, returned to the Gordon Ladd home where they were dinner guests on Saturday night.

On Sunday, October 8, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Ladd were present at the christening of their grandson, Andrew Mark, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Ladd at the St. Lambert United Church. They were accompanied by Mrs. Stanley Peron of Cowansville. They were later guests at a luncheon at the home of the baby's parents which was attended by friends and members of the family.

On Tuesday, October 10, Mrs. Gordon Ladd attended a birthday party in Waterloo in honour of her grandmother Mrs. Cora McGill who was celebrating her 98th birthday, with a number of relatives and friends present on the happy occasion.

October 3rd - It was a busy two weeks for Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Morson, commencing with their 39th wedding anniversary on September 23, retirement from the Post Office by Mr. Morson on October 2nd, and the celebration of a "milestone" birthday on October 3rd! Mr. and Mrs. Morson recently spent a week in Moncton, N.B., where they were guests of Mrs. Leila Bulloch and Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Bulloch.

Mr. Percy Gaylor, Monroe, N.H., Mr. and Mrs. Harry Call, Barnet, Vt., Mr. Allan Gaylor, Lyndonville, Vt., and Mr. and Miss Estes, Burlington, Vt., were evening guests of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Morson, following their attendance at the funeral of Mr. Evelyn Gaylor who passed away suddenly at his residence in Mansonville, on October 3rd. The funeral service, October 6 was taken by the Reverend Peter Joyce with interment at Fulford.

Mr. and Mrs. Grant Payne entertained Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Morson at dinner on September 23 on the occasion of their 39th wedding anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. William Rousseau arrived from their home in Red Bank, N.J. on Saturday of the holiday weekend to visit the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Taylor and be with them on the occasion of their wedding anniversary. On Thanksgiving Sunday, they were guests at a family dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Miller at Brome. They were accompanied at night to South Stukely by Mr. and Mrs. Taylor to call on Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Wright and their son-in-law and daughter, Rowland and Joyce Blampin who were visiting from Maniwaki for the holiday. Mr. and Mrs.

Gordon Taylor and daughter Julie joined his sister Marguerite and Bill at the Sydney Taylor home to celebrate Thanksgiving Day.

While here, Mr. and Mrs. Rousseau were calling on Mr. and Mrs. O. Leland Stanley at Richford on Tuesday afternoon and at night were supper guests of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Sherrer at Abercorn. Wednesday evening, they enjoyed the Hymn Sing at Brome. They spent the afternoon with Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Taylor where they were joined by Mrs. Rousseau's cousin and her husband, Mr. and Mrs. J. Inglis, whom they had not seen for a number of years. The latter couple stopped in at night at the Harold Battley home before returning to Sherbrooke.

Mr. and Mrs. George Hall of Magog spent several days with Mr. and Mrs. H.J. Devlin.

Mr. Ray Duboyce returned home Monday evening after spending the holiday weekend with friends at Georgetown, Ont.

Mr. and Mrs. D'Arcy Aldridge returned recently from a week's holiday touring Vermont and in Ontario where they visited Mrs. Aldridge's brother Gerald Burnham and his family at Prescott. On their way home, they called on Mr. Robert Taylor at the home of his daughter Mrs. Verna Taylor in Ottawa, and chatted with him of friends and happening in Knowlton.

Mr. Malcolm Royea returned to Kingston, Ont., on Thanksgiving Sunday, after visiting his mother, Mrs. Irene Royea for a week.

Mr. and Mrs. D'Arcy Aldridge were Thanksgiving dinner guests of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond McClay.

Mrs. Irene Royea entertained her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Fuller and the Dennis Taylors at dinner on Thanksgiving Day.

Mrs. Follin Fletcher has returned to her home in North Hatley after spending three weeks with her brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. D'Arcy Aldridge.

rounds in case a defender takes his ace and leads that second trump."

Alan: "What South can't afford is that third round. If his king is allowed to hold and he continues, West can take his ace and lead a third trump. South will wind up losing one trick in each suit."

Oswald: "South must plan to ruff his two little spades. After taking his king of trumps he must play aceing and a third spade. He ruffs in dummy, comes back to his hand with the ace of diamonds, ruffs his last spade, leads dummy's queen of trumps and loses three tricks, not four."

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Oswald: "Beginners are taught to draw trumps. This is good policy for beginners and is followed by experts most of the time, but there are other occasions when you really can't afford this."

Alan: "A good general rule is that you don't pull trumps when you need dummy's trumps for some other purpose."

Oswald: "South ruffs the second club and there is no reason not to lead his king of trumps. He can afford one round of trumps, or even two

A Wisconsin reader wants to know if we open one notrump.

We certainly do. For years experts have opened almost all 16 point 4-4-3-2 hands with one notrump. Today standard American bidders still require that a doubleton include the jack or higher so this hand meets everyone's standards.
