ONE DOLLER AND FIFTY CENTS

The Week in Parliament

(Special to the Gleaner)

The past week in Parliament was devoted wholly to the debate on the Budget. While the debating ability of the new House is of a high nature, and practically every member has shown what he can do, the stop cocks on the steam of oratory might be closed now at any time without seriously interfering with the interests of the country. The most extraordinary feature is the lack of any constructive criticism of the measure. With the possible exception to the stamp tax on cheques there has been no opposition advanced which deserves consideration.

The amendment to the debate which was introduced by Sir Henry Drayton which was purely a political move having nothing to do with the tariff, but introduced wholly for the purpose of embarrassing the Government, has not accomplished what was expected of it by its mover, but has subjected the official opposition to a lot of criticism by its own press.

Hon. Mr. Stewart Minister of the Interior, in resuming the debate on Monday traced a great number of the events in the country's progress over a number of years and showed that Canada has experienced periods of depression and prosperity; and stated that while the prosperity was not wholly due to the fiscal policy of the times, it was at least due partly to it. Coming to 1911 when the reciprocity pact was introduced, he thought the country had made a mistake in refusing it. After showing that the ordinary expenditure for the current year would amount to almost $470,000,000 besides providing for the railways, $72,000,000, the amount of last year's deficit, he claimed that care had to be exercised in reducing taxation. He claimed that while the Liberal party in 1919 felt that the planks of their platform could be translated into legislation, conditions had changed to a great extent since. Coupled with the present financial condition of the country American market is now closed to us.

Mr. J. F. Johnston, Progressive, last Monday blamed the late Conservative Government for not taxing wealth during the war period, as now the profiteers had escaped and the country is faced with the proposition of raising large sums of money when it is least able to bear the strain. Mr. Johnston congratulated Hon. Mr. Fielding on his attempt to procure reciprocal arrangements with the United States and drew the attention of the House to the trade arrangements entered into by the previous government with the British West Indies, while no attempt had been made to procure favorable arrangements in the American market and Canadian goods. He stated that the total trade with the British West Indies last year was not equal to two weeks' trade with the United States.

Mr. A. J. Lewis, Progressive, Swift Current, stated that he is a free trader, but realized that the majority of the people in this great democracy of ours were opposed to his policy, and the majority had the right to rule. He commended the Government on its refusal to enter into negotiations with the United States for the construction of the St. Lawrence project, which would cost the country so much.

Hon. Dr. Manson, stated that he realized the Minister of Finance faced considerable difficulties in drawing up his budget. He criticized the stamp tax on cheques.

H. A. Fortier, Liberal, Labelle, argued that decreasing revenue made increased taxation necessary, and consequently it was necessary to make tariff reductions slowly. A. W. Neil, Independent, Comox-Alberni, claimed it was quite right to advocate free trade in Western Canada and Protection in the East, as different fiscal arrangements were required in different parts of the country. He stated that he would vote with the Government and against the amendment, as he intended to help the Government in every way during the present session in order to give them a start.

AGE AND BUSINESS

50 Years in Business Not So Old As it Used to Be

The fact that Toronto's venerable dean of the business world, Mr. John Catto who, with Mrs. Catto, has just celebrated his sixtieth wedding anniversary, and who, spite of his almost 90 years goes every day to his office and launches daily at his downtown club, brings to mind that, contrary to the trite dictum of the "efficiency expert and the correspondence school advertisement, a recent official canvass of the United States proves that it is not the man young in years who is conducting the nation's business. It seems instead, that the man of 60 and 70 years of age is holding the reins of business to-day that a generation ago were in the hands of the man of 40 and 50. And there are more men through the country whose years run up to 80 and above at their desks today than ever in the past.

So declares a writer in the New York Herald, "standing examples in Canada might be cited in the cases of Chief Justice Sir William Meredith who, at 82, is still on the bench, of Chief Justice Sir William Mulock, at 78, of Hon. Featherston Osler, who at the age of 84 is the active head of the Toronto General Trusts, or to mention other lawyers, Henry O'Brien, K. C., 86; Mr. Laidlaw, K. C., and J. E. Robertson, K. C., 80, and down at Ottawa, Hon. Mr. Fielding, aged 74, whose new tariff has just been announced. Notable in a list which might be extended indefinitely, John R. Booth, the Ottawa lumber king, who at the age of 95 still goes into the woods and in the office personally superintends the affairs of his tremendous business.

Scientific investigators say that the man of 20 years ago who was ready to retire when he reached the fifty is no longer to be found. Today he is not so old at 50 as he then was at 70. Particularly in New York, a place not calculated in the mind of a Torontonian to make for longevity, one finds men of 70 and above, active in the industrial and financial fields. Their fathers retired early in life and prepared for death at 60. In fact it is not so long ago that 60 was the carpet slipper age. These sons, 70, 75 and over today, consider nothing less than 90 as the carpet slipper time. "In fact," says Dr. S. A. Brown, Dean of Bellevue Medical school, New York, "the modern American business man does not know how to retire, and if he does so, does not make a success of it before he is 80. We have no leisure class in America and our men in the main have no hobbies. Now and then a man of 60 or so does retire and finds that to gratify his energies which still actuate his physical body, he must go to Europe or travel elsewhere. So as a rule he comes back to work, having learned that his retirement age really does not come until he is well on towards the nineties."

Charles Schwab, the steel magnate, who is at the 70 mark, has been thinking of retiring for the past three years, but according to Dr. Brown, his physician, Schwab is likely to stick at his desk for some years more. "A man at 72 on the job is far better mentally and physically than one not working" adds the medical man, adding that he knew of but one way to retire successfully—to die at the height of one's career. Edison at 75, Samuel Gompers, at 72, Lyman Abbott, at 87, John Wanamaker, aged 84 and Oliver Wendell Holmes, born in 1841 are all active men of affairs, to say nothing of such examples as Joe Cannon, still a member of Congress at 74, and Nathan Straus, of New York, who though retired from business, is an active philanthropist, having for years supplied quantities of free milk to the poor children of the big city Jew and Gentile alike, and lately, food to the needy in Palestine. His benefactions total a great sum. Luther Burbank, the man who is always inventing some new fruit or flower, is, though 73, still going strong.

A noted New York neurologist, Dr. A. A. Brill, makes the rather obvious statement that "man was created to struggle and that work is the natural and healthy outlet of his energies," but when he goes on to enunciate his theory—if indeed he actually did state just that—that "nervous breakdowns are not caused by overwork and that vacations are a neurotic fad which adjusted persons don't want and which are of no benefit to those who clamour for them" the average man can only smile.—Toronto Telegram.

HUNTINGDON, Q. JUNE 8, 1922

NOTES OF THE WEEK

European Finance

The public treasuries of Europe are beginning to function once more in the right direction, so the Genoa conference was not altogether a failure. It centred the interest of the people on the problems of government receipts and expenditures and has shown them that house-cleaning is needed at home as well as abroad. The most important decision of the week was the postponement of the reparation payments of Germany for the present year. This postponement was granted on the condition that the Germans begin immediately to set their house in order and especially that the wholesale printing of marks be stopped. The offer came from Wirth who was able to carry the scheme through the Reichstag. It needed, however, determined efforts of the majority, and if Germany is honest in her promise a considerable change should be effected, not only along the German Rhine, but also throughout the whole of central Europe. France, the militant, is also buckling down to facts. Much as the people demand absolute protection from Germany, so also do they demand an improvement of present living conditions. As usual the government is looked upon as the cause of trouble and, while Poincaré received a decided vote of confidence on the exterior policies of the Republic, the deputies have given notice that the budget as submitted will not pass. This budget shows a deficit of 4,000,000,000 francs which it was proposed to cover by a loan, but the Chamber of Deputies demand that a balancing budget be submitted instead. One of the moves that is attracting much notice in the European press is the presence of Mr. Morgan at the conference of international financial experts. While the United States has steadfastly refused to participate in the doings at Genoa, or the proposed conferences at the Hague, nevertheless the presence of the great American banker with the semi-official endorsement of Washington, seems to mark the side door entry of the United States into European problems.

Trekking to Ottawa

When in the years of depression in the nineties Cox led his army of unemployed on to Washington it stuck the public fancy, but before the march was completed the effect had been lost and the scheme evolved into a farce. A repetition of any such stunt is a dull affair, and particularly so when the first attempt was a fizzle. Such therefore must the trek of 275 men from Toronto be considered. These men claiming to be all unemployed veterans marched the distance to show they were healthy, and yet when they reached Ottawa instead of making the demands of a husky man-for work-preferred rather to whine about the manner of re-establishment the government had attempted. They got a courteous hearing from the Premier and Dr. Beland which was more than they deserved. If they were able to walk from Toronto to Ottawa they were able to work. Plenty of farmers along that road and along many another road in Canada can offer them work, but few of them want it. They want to loaf. This sort of thing blackens the record of every returned man. It can't be prohibited, but there need be no slushy encouragements offered as were reported to be given to this party road to Ottawa.

The Old Gives Place to New

The worst has happened. Not only have politics gone to the dogs, but the Latin temperament of Premier Taschereau is being severely tested, in fact it must be on edge. And for all this one of the most French of the French papers in Montreal is to blame. It permitted its Ottawa parliamentary correspondent to start the report of a speech of a member in the following language—far more eloquently expressed in French than it is possible to convey in English—

Miss Agnes Macphail replied to him (Mr. Raymond). Angular, tall and pale, a high forehead, very dark hair brushed towards the back of the head, and in a somewhat sharp voice she tells us what she thinks about the tariff.... etc.

Think of it! Was it not bad enough when correspondents of the partisan press departed from the habit of stretching the libel laws to either tolerantly ignoring those of the wrong color or treating them as unfortunate misfortunes which must be borne with like Job's boils. Later the style was introduced of treating the "$4,000 brains" of the nation as matter for whimsical sayings which would pay for the bread and butter of the Fourth Estate. But now look at it! A Quebec paper and a French Quebec paper at that, starting off in the style of a woman's magazine or the reporter of a fashionable wedding, with inside dope as to how Miss Macphail brushed her hair. No wonder Quebec with its Latin temperament and incidental weakness for the ladies is troubled, it was a complete departure from form. The rule has been long laid down in the reporting of the province. Either the reporter must start off by declaring that the speaker was the proud father of at least fourteen children, which naturally was most unappreciated and impossible in this case, so the other theme should have been aired at once—the fact that a letter with a return address printed in one corner in English or French and with the address in the same language had been returned by the post office with "Non réclamé" or "Not Claimed" in altogether the wrong language. Such a thing as that immediately showed that the member properly appreciated the fact that he held the keystone position in the national arch. By no possible flight of imagination can the national unity of Canada be preserved by brushing the hair. Canada is headed for the how-boys with only the oft quoted Latin temperament of Premier Taschereau to save it. Still perhaps Miss Macphail might wear a shawl and postpone the inevitable.

The Budget Debate

The debate over the Finance Minister's proposed taxes has been nothing less than a dreary affair consisting of torrents of words bound for the pages of Hansard at the expense of a heavily mortgaged country. The keynote of the Conservative opposition was founded on the cry that the Mackenzie-King administration was violating its pledges, "that the people were being betrayed," "that they got something put over them on Dec. 6th," etc. It must have been an interesting and highly instructive sight on Tuesday when as the Canada Press reports Mr. Meighen declaring against the Liberal Convention of 1919. "Perhaps the Prime Minister thought he was not a party to it, and also the Minister of Justice. Yet they had adopted the Liberal platform to get the vote. They had reached it to get the vote. They had secured the vote, they had taken the people into camp. "Are they there by just right or are they there by usurpation?" Mr. Meighen demanded. Mr. King—"By the will of the people." Mr. Meighen—"By the will of a deceived people, and of a deceived minority at that." The wonder is if he ever thinks of the great demands and promises made by his Quebec favorite sons, Monty, Fauteux, Normand, etc., during November and December last. If it breaks his heart to think the Premier sidestepping his 1919 pledges he should remember that he would have needed an aeroplane to get over some of the promises made in this province by his lieutenants during November and December. Bah! The people of Canada from long experience know that election promises are made either without intent of fulfillment, or that later it is found they are injudicious.

Mr. Crerar made a test case of the parliamentary procedure on Monday when he endeavored to move a sub-amendment to the Budget proposals. It was rejected by the Speaker, but again places before the people the fact that the Farmers' party stands four square for free trade. This immediately threw the Conservatives into the Liberal camp, but Mr. Meighen declares that the party won't vote with Fielding. Even if the country wanted an election—which it doesn't—there is very slight possibility of it happening. None of the parties have achieved anything that they desire yet. On the contrary conditions have forced situations which in some cases would result in many present members being reported among the missing if an election were called. They will talk about the right of an appeal to the people, but each party will carefully watch that no step is taken in that direction.

ORMSTOWN

Miss Viau of Montreal is giving a Silver Cup as a special prize at our coming show stipulating that competition be open to the District of Beauharnois only, the cup to be given to the best light horse in harness. Miss Viau was in Ormstown on Wednesday and stated that she would have an exhibit of eleven horses at the show. The Academy Field Day Sports were held on the show grounds on Friday afternoon. Huntingdon Academy was the only outside school to send representatives to take part in the sports and they were successful in carrying away several of the first prizes. Workmen are busy in the arena adding two more rows of seats to the seating capacity of the building. This will add something like six hundred chairs and as they will be the best seats in the arena, being nearer the centre they will be sold as reserve chairs. The prospects at the present time point towards the largest show ever held in Ormstown.

HOWICK

Some three years ago, the play entitled "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was extensively advertised and drew a crowded house in Howick, although the entrance fee was higher than usual. The performance was far short of the program advertised and the performers were physically unfit to act, being more or less under the influence of liquor. A mob of young men rushed the actors and terrified them into refunding a portion of the proceeds, to be donated to local purposes. Since that occasion the public think twice before attending entertainments given by travelling companies. The same play was given last week in the Hall, Howick, by a bona fide company, who gave satisfaction, but evidently the public had not forgotten their previous experience, for the attendance was small. An unsuccessful attempt was made by Mrs. Alexandre Desrosiers on Monday to take her own life by swallowing a half bottle of Rundle's Liniment. She was not previously known to have a tendency that way and no cause can be assigned for the attempt. The refreshing rain which fell in abundance the end of last week had a pleasing, soothing effect on the somewhat anxious minds of farmers and others whose land was suffering from drought and dust. Boxes for crushed stone and tanks for tar are being placed in position along the road preparatory to making permanent repairs on the Caughnawaga to Huntingdon road.

ST. MARTINE

Monday the local council met at eight o'clock sitting until one o'clock Tuesday morning; all members present except Mr. Wilfrid Helecut from the Beau River concession. He came to the village in the afternoon to be examined by Dr. Patenaude, having been kicked by a colt while helping the veterinary surgeon dressing the same. He had no bones broken but was suffering so that he had to return home before the session of the council. Several accounts were ordered paid on byroads for ditching and fencing, but the work on two by-roads was not accepted and the contractor was given this week to complete his work or the road inspectors will have the same done next week at their own expense. The work on the by-road leading from the Grand Marais to the river near the Church was commenced Monday and so was the cement sidewalk in the village. The filling on Cote St. Joseph will be continued on Thursday until finished. The rain of Friday night and Saturday last is worth many thousands of dollars for the crop which has a good appearance. It is surprising what a change there has been in three days. An amount of corn was sown last week just before the rain and many silos will be built this summer. Farmers will benefit by their experience of last year and are taking advantage with corn for ensilage, the only thing that makes dairying pay when hay sells at $25 or $30 a ton.

BEAUHARNOIS

The Council is contemplating putting in a new up-to-date filter for the town water. This will cost about $20,000, but $16,000 of this is on hand, in connection with the loan which was made by the town some time ago. There is nothing the town needs more than a good filter. The mission at Woodlands and Maple Grove is to be under the care of Mr. Henry Consins, of the Presbyterian College, Montreal this season. There seem to be more vacant houses than usual along the lake shore this year. Why this should be no one seems to know. The Presbyterian congregation is taking steps to put its cemetery into better shape. New regulations and by-laws are being drawn up, and an amount of money is being raised, which will be invested, the interest on which will be used each year on the grounds, along with a stated amount which each will be expected to contribute each year for the upkeep.

ST. CHRYSOSTOME

Joseph Hebert, butter maker of this village has acquired the butter factory of Joseph Henry situated at Norton Creek. At the last meeting of the Cerele Agricole of the parish of St. Clotilde the following officers were installed. President, Victor Robert, Vice-President Camille Dupuis, Sec. Treas. Rev. Father Morin, Directors Emile Turcot, Edmond Riendeau, Stanislas Desautels and Noé Bombardier.

COVEY HILL

The death of Mrs. James Barr came unexpectedly to her many relatives and friends. She had been ill for some time and although her condition was serious it was not thought the end was so near. On Sunday about noon she had a sudden collapse. Drs. De Moupied and Moore, also Nurse Bustard and Nurse Odell were in attendance, and everything possible was done but she never rallied and passed peacefully away on June 5th. Mrs. Barr came here as a bride in 1892. She was a person of sterling qualities. She is survived by her husband, two sons, Stanley and Pincher, Alta, Tom at home and seven daughters, Mrs. J. J. McArthur of Havelock, Margaret, Ruth, Millicent, Mildred, Ethel and Lillian at home. The continued dry spell was causing much anxiety. A welcome rain came on Friday night and Saturday which has helped the situation. The outlook for crops is much better.

ALLAN'S CORNERS

Edson McWhinnie, 17 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. James McWhinnie, Allan's Corners, disappeared from his home Saturday night. A thorough search was made, but no trace of him could be found until late Tuesday night, when word was received that a boy answering his description had passed Arnold McKell's, Australia Concession Saturday night at 11 p.m. and further word that he had a meal in the vicinity of Havelock and was heading for Mooers. A car has gone to Mooers and we hope they will bring back a favorable report. Mr. and Mrs. McWhinnie and family have the sympathy of the community. Mr. and Mrs. Welsh, Franklin Centre spent Monday with their daughter, Mrs. George Hope. Mrs. Robert Greig left on Monday to visit her daughter, Miss Janet T. Greig, Vancouver, B. C.

HEMMINGFORD

Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Campbell entertained a large number of friends Friday evening. Mr. and Mrs. A. T. McKay and Miss Lois McKay spent a few days in Montreal recently. Mrs. Wm. Curry is entertaining Saturday afternoon in honor of Miss Eleanor Blair. Mr. Wm. Orr spent Saturday in Montreal. Dr. DeMouplie, Miss DeMouplie and Mrs. Andrew Ferns motored to Montreal Saturday. Miss Myrtle Miller, a former resident of this place, now of Montreal is at present a patient in the Royal Victoria Hospital. There were two concerts in town last week, "Uncle Tom's Cabin" staged Wednesday night was enjoyed by the young. The one staged Friday night was put on by the young people of Lacolle and was very good. At present there are two ice cream parlors in town and rumor has it there are to be more. The Masons are having their Annual Banquet Friday night. Seeding is nearly completed and the showers have done great good. The cut-worm seems to be unusually annoying this season.

BARRINGTON

There was a very pleasant community gathering at Shields school No. 8 Hemmingford, Que., on the afternoon of May 31st. The occasion being the long looked for 'Last day of school.' At two o'clock the chorus "The Maple Leaf Forever" was sung by the school, then followed a well rendered programme of songs, recitations, dialogues and monologues. After this the teacher presented each child with a report giving the result of the recent examinations also giving a prize in each grade to the one who had the highest number of marks and a treat of candy and oranges to each pupil. Three special prizes for good attendance were awarded to Winifred Merlin, Marjorie Ellerton and Elliott Brownlee, each one having been present every day in the term. The average attendance in the school is high, quite a number of children having only missed one or two days. Much credit is due to Miss Lena M. Marlin, the teacher, who has been in charge of the school for the past two years, for the high standing of the pupils, shown by the marks given below. She was the recipient of a large number of useful and pretty gifts. At the close of the proceedings lunch was served to all by the teacher and older scholars. Before the crowd dispersed a number of snapshots of different groups were taken as souvenirs of the occasion. Results of examinations in Shields school No. 8, Hemmingford, Que.

Miss Lelo Cameron of Malone, N. Y., spent a couple of days visiting at the home of her parents Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Cameron during the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. McCracken of Huntingdon spent the week end at the home of Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Moody. Mrs. Peter McLaughlin of Montreal attended the funeral of Mr. John Gordon.

Death has again visited our community and removed one of our aged and highly respected friends in the person of Mr. John Gordon. Since the death of Mr. McBain which occurred some weeks ago Mr. Gordon has had the distinction of being the eldest person in Dundee. He leaves to mourn his departure his daughter, (Jessie) Mrs. A. W. Vass, and two sons, Boddie of North Dakota and Arthur who remains on the homestead, also several grandchildren and many other relatives.

ATHELSTAN

A visit to the Athelstan creamery this week shows how rapidly Mr. Gardner is getting his business back to normal. A new butter churn is now being installed and should be ready for use shortly. It is Mr. Gardner's present intention to ship such butter as he may make in bulk and does not intend making prints for the present. The popularity of the creamery is demonstrated by the fact that on Monday over 40,000 pounds were taken in.

The Song of Slumber. "What I object to about a musician," said Farmer Cortnessel, "is that he's liable to be so blame inconsistent." "But your boy Josh aspires to be a musician?" "Josh is an illustration of my idea. Since I bought him a new bugle he keeps the family awake all night practicing 'taps.'"

Reynard's Menu.

Fox-breeding, looked upon as a speculative craze a few years ago, has now become a stabilized industry in Prince Edward Island and is being practiced in other provinces with success. Investigations carried on under the auspices of the Council for Scientific and Industrial Research at Ottawa and dealing with such questions as the origin and extirpation of intestinal parasites, dieting of animals, and minimum age for mating, have produced much data of value to the breeders.

Rat Harvest Light One.

The last of the rat harvest, which has been much lighter than usual, arrived April 30 from Kawartha and Rice Lakes. The late movement of ice and high water proved a combination against the trappers and they lament a poor catch. The light harvest reacted on the price, however, and the season closed with number ones bringing $2.25, as compared with $2.05 the first of the season.

Jellied Fish.

The newest method of preserving fish is to cut it into pieces of suitable size, pack it in a can, and fill the latter with hot fluid sea-mosses gelatin. The gelatin cools and solidifies at a little above 100 degrees. The filled can is sealed and cooked. When it is opened, the consumer finds the contents an attractive preparation of cooked fish in jelly.

I Never Thought Running a Car Cost So Little.

That's what many folks say when they learn that the average cost of operating an Overland is only $4 weekly—the price of a couple of theatre tickets. Reckoning 5,200 miles a year, here are the items of the average Overland driver's expense for running his car a week:

Table with 2 columns: Item and Price. Gasoline (4 gals) at Toronto price $1.46, Oil (1 pint) .25, Distilled water for battery, and grease .08, Tires .00, Incidentals 1.21, Total $4.00

Think of the economy of this car, averaging 26 to over 30 miles to the gallon of gas! Think of its saving in upkeep, due to Triplex Springs that protect both car and passengers from road shocks!

As little as $825 buys the 5 passenger Overland touring car, completely equipped from electric starter to speedometer. As little as $4 weekly pays for its operation. Take a demonstration ride to test its comfort and you'll recognize it is the soundest automobile investment.

TO BRING ABOUT DOWNFALL OF MAN

"Ultra-Feminists" are Laying Plans For a War in England, Says Author

A feminine war against man is well under way in Great Britain, according to Elliott O'Donnell, English author and investigator.

O'Donnell has been investigating the efforts of certain "ultra-feminists" to bring about the downfall of man for some time.

He says he is in possession of absolute evidence that "ultra-feminists" are laying plans for a sex war in England, and he has no doubt that their organization extends to the United States.

"I am not making a hostile attack on women," O'Donnell said recently. "For women, as women, I have always had the greatest respect and admiration. I have always held that it is only fair and right that women should enjoy the same privileges and advantages as men."

"I am convinced, however, from my investigation that the cult of man-hating is being fostered by a very definite organization in London.

Tenets of the Man Haters.
The tenets of the "ultra-feminists," who are organized to un-throne man, are, according to O'Donnell, as follows:

In the beginning there was only one sex, the feminine. Man was a mistake, a mere after-thought.

There is no need for any sex other than feminine.

Love between the sexes is only weakness, temporary madness. Life begins as female; life is feminine.

Secret meetings, from which men are rightly banned, are being held repeatedly, and the doctrine of man hatred is subtly but vigorously propounded," O'Donnell said.

"The chief aims and objects of the movement are in the field of politics and economics.

"The 'ultra-feminists' are particularly anxious to gain control over the police.

"If the cult of man-hating goes on increasing until it gains ascendancy, even were it possible to propagate the race without the assistance of man, the end of the world would be assured.

"Nothing Constructive"

"In the past history of the human race sex-hatred and antagonisms have been the prelude to great national catastrophes, and I venture to suggest that this nation should take heed lest a like fate befall it. There is nothing constructive in "ultra-feminism," it is destructive from start to finish."

O'Donnell said that the "ultra-feminists" are of three types, as follows:

The type that apes the masculine. The anaemic, fretful type of woman.

The patently abnormal woman.

Dissemination of the cult of the "ultra-feminists" is being accomplished by well-organized propaganda, O'Donnell charges.

VALUE OF CHEESE AS A FOOD

Its Consumption Three Times More Per Capita in Britain Than in Canada

A companion pamphlet to Miss Helen G. Campbell's "Why and How to use Milk" has been published by the Dominion Department of Agriculture, Ottawa. This pamphlet is entitled "Why and How to use Cheese". Besides giving a history of cheese making and of the different kinds of cheese—of which it will surprise most people to hear there are some 250—upwards of three dozen methods are described in which cheese can be used to make savory and nutritious dishes.

All cheese making in Canada was carried on as a farm industry until 1864, when the first factory came into existence in Oxford county, Ontario. In the following year a factory was established in Missisquoi county, Quebec. The progress of factory establishment was so rapid that in a few years the system was generally adopted, and farm-made cheese became a rarity. While every one of the nine provinces has its cheese factories, about 97 per cent of the production has to be credited to Ontario and Quebec.

Incidentally it might be mentioned that the total value of the cheese made in this country runs up to between thirty-five and forty million dollars per annum, and the quantity totals up to around a hundred and fifty million pounds, sometimes over and sometimes under.

The variation in production is considerable, as will be understood when it is stated that in 1914 it was 169,478,340 lbs. and in 1920 nearly twenty million pounds less.

In Canadian factories, the manufacture of cheese is mostly confined to what is known as Cheddar, but genuine Stilton is turned out on the Dominion Experimental Farm at Agassiz, B. C., and the Trappist monks at the Oka Agricultural Institute in Quebec make what is known as Oka cheese.

Another form of cheese made in this country is Cottage cheese, which is made in many households from sour skim-milk without the aid of rennet. For cream cheese there is also a demand of some dimension. Miss Campbell dwells upon the advantages of cheese in the diet, tells how it can best be kept, and suggests that Canadians would be well advised to eat more of it than they do. This suggestion gains force from the fact that the consumption of cheese in Britain is about four times per capita more than it is in this country.

NEW FATE PUZZLE FOR STAR READERS

Seventh Son of a Seventh Wife

Harlan, Ky., June 4.—Robert Baker, 84 years old, has become the father of his thirty-third child. Mrs. Baker, the mother, is just past her thirty-fifth year, and she, too, is rejoicing, for though her married life is only 14 years in length, this was her eighth child. When she and Baker married she was 21 and he was 70. She is Baker's seventh wife, his sixth wife having died many years ago while they were on a ranch Baker owned near Seattle, and where he married the seventh mate.

Baker says he is counting on excellent health until he is 100 years old. Baker is a native Kentuckian, and operates a dairy. He lived for years near Seattle, and after he married his present wife, a native of Washington, they moved to Keokee, Virginia, where he engaged in the coal industry. Then they returned to Kentucky.

Baker said the thirty-third child had been named before he left home, but he had forgotten what it was called.

Many of the 33 children have died, but messages of congratulations on the birth of the latest baby are coming in from surviving children.

FOUR EXPELLED IN THIRTY YEARS

The condemnation of Horatio Botonolby to seven years' imprisonment gains added publicity from the fact that he is being expelled from the British House of Commons. His is the fourth case in the past 30 years. The first was Jabez Balfour, Member for Burnley. He was a stock promoter and a smash in 1892 showed a deficit of 25 millions of dollars. In 1895 he was sent to jail for 14 years. Hastings was the next case. He was an advocate and was sent down for seven years for lapses in professional duties. Verney was the third case. He was member for Buckinghamshire and was sent to jail for three years. His crime was for immoral conduct.

STATE ROAD TO CHATEAUGAY

Work Nearing Completion

What was probably one of the worst roads to a neighboring American village is now being made into the best. It is the road leading to Chateaugay. The grade at Marble river was unusually bad, but is now being rapidly cut down and cement laid. The Chateaugay Record reports:

Contractor Semper is rushing work on the Federal highway and each day sees added completion of sections of the road. The work of grading at Marble river hill shows that a decided improvement will be the result at that point, which heretofore has been the bane of all travellers who were obliged to travel that way. The work of laying the cement southward from the Canadian line is being pushed with vigor, but many more weeks of hard labor must intervene before the highway will be open to public travel.

Propose Levy on Prosperous Methodist Ministers

Regina, June 1.—A proposal to collect a pro rata contribution from all Methodist ministers in Saskatchewan receiving more than the minimum salary of $1,500, the fund to be used in bringing up to that figure the stipend of those who are receiving less, was discussed at a meeting of the Regina district and will be put before the provincial conference at Moose Jaw next week.

Rev. A. J. Tufts declared that many ministers in "hard hit country charges" were contemplating leaving the ministry unless something were done to meet their necessities.

ONTARIO INDEMNITY INCREASED

The members of the Ontario Legislature have become the subjects of severe attack because they have for the present session increased their indemnity from $1,400 to $2,000.

The Legislature was elected on the basis of $1,400 for the work of the year. We are not arguing that such a figure is sufficient or insufficient, because that is apart entirely from the question.

DIVORCE METHODS MAY BE DISCUSSED

M. P.'s Claim Situation is Fast Becoming An Evil in Canada

Ottawa.—The whole matter of divorce legislation by the present method of granting private bills may be reviewed in the Commons when the Dagenais Bill, against which there was such a determined fight in the Private Bills Committee, comes before the committee of the whole House on private bills.

It is not likely, so far as can be learned, that opposition will take the form of an attempt to "talk it out" as was done with the Montigny bill last session, but rather that when it is introduced members who opposed it will make this the ground for a review of the divorce situation which they claim is fast becoming an evil in Canada, and ask for a change in procedure governing the granting of divorce bills.

One of the questions likely to be raised is that of granting annulment of marriage in certain cases without including in the bill the right to marry again. However, this is likely to meet with strenuous opposition. It is pointed out by other members that while Parliament has full right to pass a bill granting a divorce without the right to marry again.

BUSINESS ON THE MEND

The improvement in business continues. There is still good deal of unemployment in the Dominion, but week by week, here, as on the other side of the border, factories are extending their operations and adding to the number of their employees.

The improvement in business continues. There is still good deal of unemployment in the Dominion, but week by week, here, as on the other side of the border, factories are extending their operations and adding to the number of their employees. The marked increase in building construction, and the necessity of carrying out deferred maintenance operations on the railways of the Dominion, have had not a little to do in bringing about industrial activity.

The intimate relationship between the United States and Canada industrially is once more illustrated by the report of the United States Department of Commerce, in which it is shown by an analysis of statistics for April that building construction and motor car manufacture are setting the pace in the movement back to normal business conditions. In Canada generally building construction is not yet so active as it is across the border, but in Toronto and other centres of population, where there have been house famines for years, there are building "booms" of varying intensity in progress.

It would appear, therefore, that the call for more homes, for good roads, for motor cars and for railway improvements has given business, generally a fillip, and brought about activity in many industries that were hard hit by the collapse of 1920. The Collector of Customs at this port, Mr. Bertram, gives an indication of how widespread the improvement is when he states that the Toronto excise revenue for May shows a gain of approximately $766,000 over May, 1921. The bulk of this revenue comes from the Sales Tax on domestic goods and the duty and sales taxes on imported goods.

dities that bulk largely in customs and excise returns is the depletion of the stocks of distributors and retailers. The buying demands of the ultimate consumer have exceeded expectations.

The Globe does not wish to suggest that Canada is on the threshold of immediate and great prosperity. Conditions in the West, are still far from normal, and until the grain growers reap what promises to be a very good crop, and obtain a remunerative price for it, there can be little improvement there. What hurts the West impures the manufacturers, factory employees and traders in the East who make and handle goods for the Western market. The return of prosperity may be retarded all over the Dominion by untoward events in the West between now and harvest time. If, however, the West obtains a crop approximating to that of 1915, which experienced observers regard as not improbable, the upward trend of business all over the Dominion will be accentuated during the coming fall and winter.

Canada has very great resources and an enterprising and highly skilled agricultural and industrial population. A war-weary world, back at work again, must inevitably need a great many things that Canada can provide—food, raw materials, paper, ores, lumber, and at least some manufactured goods in which we have been specializing, such as farm machinery and motor cars.—Toronto Globe.

ORMSTOWN SHOW

More Entries Needed Gilbert McMillan Expect Good Selling Market

The Ormstown Show is now only two weeks away and all those who are going to enter stock should get busy. This is the emphatic opinion of Gilbert McMillan, who as the Huntingdon director is most anxious that there be a big turnout of stuff. The prize-list is the largest on record, $17,000 without taking account of the numerous special prizes offered should offer sufficient attractions in themselves to draw the exhibitors, in addition Mr. McMillan thinks the breeders should turn out because it will help keep up the name of the County and especially because it is good business. "There are lots of men today looking for some stuff to buy, also lots of men need the odd head or so to take the place of stock lost when tested for tuberculosis. These men will come there willing to buy. The breeders in the district have the stuff and it will be well worth their while to show it. Looking further ahead, Mr. McMillan thought there lay a most important reason, explaining that the Federal government had cut their grants to all fall fairs. Ormstown escaped the knife because it was a winter show but next year it would be in danger. To show reason why the grant should be increased or at any rate kept at the same figure as now, it should

Battery Headquarters We Know Batteries!

Repairing batteries may look easy—but it isn't!

To be successful, a repair man has to know just how to handle the plates that hold the active material that keeps the battery. He has to know how to take care of the insulators that keep the plates apart. He has to know how to re-charge them. He has to know when it is cheaper for you to buy a new battery than to have the old one repaired.

Bring your battery in to headquarters—no matter whether it's a Willard or not. We'll tell you what in needs, anything, now which the best will be—and whether repairs will pay or not.

This strip of road is flooded in the spring when the ice jams in the Trout river. Tenders were called for it some years ago, but objection was made to the specifications and the matter was dropped for the time being. It was also decided to call for tenders for gravelling the Ridge road from Lee's Corners as soon as specifications were received from Quebec.

In respect to the bridges that on the Barrett side road was ordered to be covered with cedar, Coun. McLean was instructed to inspect the bridge over the Hall Creek and also the little bridge leading to the island at Dewittville, and to report at the next meeting.

Automobile Insurance

The Five Kinds of Policies and what They Provide For

Comparatively speaking few automobile owners carry automobile insurance, and a great many of those who have insurance do not know what insurance they have. The advisability of carrying protection on a car is obvious. The investment is extremely high considering the life of the machine, and the danger of fire or accident is always present. In La Presse on Saturday advice and information about automobile insurance in general is given. Parts of this follow. The five classes of insurance referred to being, responsibilities for accidents, collision, damages, fire and theft.

The Most Important

Of the five regular risks, there is not the least doubt but that the first mentioned is the most important, the responsibility in case of accident. All others are insignificant, if we compare them with the one protecting the proprietor against damages caused by his vehicle. In cases of damages of property, the losses are limited by the value of the vehicle or other property damaged by his vehicle. Following an accident in a collision damages are limited according to the value of the assured's vehicle, and likewise in case of theft and fire. But on the question of responsibility the sum of the damages is set according to what a jury see fit. So we say that if for some reason or other a proprietor intends taking only one risk, it should be the one for protection in case of accident. In general these policies are for the amounts of $5,000 and $10,000. The first is applied in a case where only one person is injured, and the second, if two persons have been injured in the same accident. The rates of insurance for responsibility vary according to the cost of the vehicle and the district in which it is driven.

The second class of assurance for damages to property, is to protect the proprietor from demands for damages, caused by his auto, either to other vehicles or to stationary objects. In other words, it covers damages caused to the property of others just as the one of responsibility covers damages caused to him. Naturally, the limit of reclamation in this assurance is much less than in the above case and the cost of assurance for damages to property is consequently much less than the other.

A Common Error

In securing assurance for damages to property, there is one point which may puzzle the average car owner. Claims for damages caused by an accident will probably include claim for damages arising from the fact that the aggrieved person has been deprived of his vehicle for a certain time. Thus, if your auto collides with that of a doctor's and damages it to the extent that renders it unserviceable for three weeks the doctor will probably sue you for damages to his car, and moreover the amount which he would have to pay for the use of another vehicle during the time his was under repair. It is for this reason that we advise proprietors to see that their certificate contains a clause which deals with the loss of usage of the damaged car. Some certificates do not contain this clause, and the proprietor who thought himself entirely protected comes to court to find out that he had no protection whatsoever on this ground.

In Case of Collision

This classification is insurance in case of accident. This policy is adapted to protect the proprietor against losses arising out of damages to his own vehicle, following a collision with some other object, either moveable or stationary. This is a good protection for damages to property, assuring you for damages caused to the vehicle or other property of another person.

The collision assurance is divided into three subsidiary types known by the names of complete protection, a guarantee in excess $25, and a guarantee in excess $100. The first type does not necessitate any explanation, the full amount of losses due being under the jurisdiction of the assurance company. The policy of over $25 provides that the first $25 be paid by the assured, and that of $100 be paid by the proprietor. Naturally the premium of the conditional certificate of $25 and $100 is much less than that required for a complete protection. These certificates only protect in cases of severe accidents and compel the assured to pay the costs of minor accidents. The complete assurance is without doubt the most advantageous, but the conditional certificates give good protection against severe losses and the annual costs are much less. This is left to the proprietor's judgment and no serious mistake would be made in which ever he chooses.

Theft and Fire

Assurance certificates against theft and fire cover exactly the loss when the vehicle is in use or being conveyed by train or boat. The regular certificate against theft is to protect the different accessories of the vehicle, except tools, clothing, carpets or other objects used by the driver which must be protected by a special certificate if the proprietor wishes to have this extra guarantee. It is well for the proprietors to know that by certain precautions they can decrease the cost of their assurance against theft and fire. There is a reduction of about 15 per cent on the premium against theft, if the vehicle is equipped with some locking scheme approved by the company. There is also a reduction of 10% on fire assurance, if an extinguisher, approved by the assurers, is continually in the car.

In certain parts of the country a reduction of even 20% is made on assurance against theft and fire if it is a closed car. The motorist should read and understand each one of these points in the policy when he takes out an assurance certificate.

Another Important Point

There still remains one important point in which we deem it advisable to draw the proprietor's attention. That is, that there are two different types of certificates. The first is for the full value paid for the machine while the second is only for the value of the machine at the time of the accident. In case of accident if one holds the first mentioned type, the company pays the full amount as shown on the certificate. If it is the second the actual value of the machine is paid. Between the two premiums there is a difference of 25%. Even with the reduction on the premium, the first certificate is considered more advantageous because it eliminates all troubles and tardiness in settlement which the valuation of a vehicle generally brings about.

Conditions vary the meaning of the insurance policies and it is well that the motorist in taking out insurance should thoroughly understand what is in his policy and what it is intended to convey. An instance of misunderstanding terms was recently given in the Supreme Court of Canada during the hearing of a case for damages. The plaintiff had taken out an insurance policy in which was the clause: "This policy is extended to cover the insured" while on "a ferry or inland steamer" subject to the condition "while being transported in any conveyance by land or water—stranding, sinking, collision, burning or derangement of such conveyance, including the general average and salvage charges for which the insured is legally liable." The automobile in this case was being transported in a ferry, and when running off the ferry went into the water between the ferry and dock. The claim was filed and the company fought it. The decision of the Supreme Court of Canada was that the liability of the insurer only attached in the case of loss or injury from one of the specified causes, stranding, sinking, etc., and did not extend to the case where the automobile only was damaged by falling into the water between the end of the ferry-boat and the wharf.

AT THE METHODIST CONFERENCE

Lay Problems Discussed

While the ministers were deliberating on Thursday the laymen met in the afternoon in Chalmers Church, where a long discussion on the condition of rural churches was held. Mr. W. F. Stephen, of Huntingdon, Que., spoke at length on the subject, declaring that there were too many churches in the country, with the result that ministers had to preach in as many as three churches on the one day and before a handful of people in each church.

Elmer Davis, of Kingston, introduced the subject, saying that the depletion in population of the countryside had brought about conditions which had not existed ten years ago. The ministers, he said, were becoming discouraged, and felt that they were not doing a man's job. There was no question of lack of faith or disloyalty to the church on the part of the population, he added, but the actual decrease in numbers had necessarily created the condition.

As the best remedy Mr. Davis advocated a centralized and consolidated church system, on the same principle as the consolidated school system. He thought that the church could render a great service, not only to the faithful ones, but to the entire country, in helping to stay the depopulation of the countryside, and keep the farmers on the land. At this time, he said, that the standards of the church be revised.

Mr. Stephen approved of the consolidation idea and spoke warmly for church union. Before this could be brought about, however, the consolidation of the church must come. A community church, he thought, would solve the problem. The best example of success in consolidation could be found in business, and the church should follow it.

Immigration Problem

James Winter, of Ormstown, Que., in his annual address, as president of the Laymen's Association, declared that the Methodist Church could occupy itself with the immigration problem. A policy of securing desirable immigrants from Great Britain, he said, ought to be one of the principal duties of the Church. He viewed with some alarm the influx of the southern and south-eastern Europeans, and the way the fine lands of Canadian farmers were passing into their hands in many cases. The Church, he said should have a definite policy and should have immigration agents who could help the settlers in this country.

AN IMPROVED RED CLOVER

The Experimental Farm at Ottawa has succeeded in developing a red clover type that is shown to possess an unusually high degree of "perennialism." That is to say, it contains an unusually high percentage of plants which under Ottawa conditions live for more than two years. The variety was produced by breeding, and has been named "Ottawa Perennial Red Clover." While the variety is an improvement in this respect, it is not entirely immune to winter killing. Indeed, winter killing is in most cases due not to a lack of hardiness but rather to a heaving of the soil by alternate freezing and thawing. This has the effect of snapping off the root a few inches below the crown. In some cases when the root does not snap off, the plant is raised sufficiently to strip off many of the fibrous roots, causing death. Breeding work is being continued with a view to developing a variety combining hardiness, durability and high yielding power.

VALLEYFIELD CITY COUNCIL

Daylight Saving At Last Adopted

Valleyfield, June 1.—The Council has had a troublesome time over the daylight saving question. It has been repeatedly before the council, and resolutions have been passed declaring for normal time. A referendum was taken which resulted in favor of the longer daylight. A week ago it appeared that the question was settled, but at the council meeting last night Alderman Lesperance moved that the matter be reconsidered. On a vote being demanded Alderman Lesperance was supported by Gendron, Boyer and Oscar Sicotte; against, Cholette LeBlanc, Loiselle and Faubert. The vote being equal the Mayor had to cast a vote which he did in favor of reconsideration.

Alderman Cholette raised a point of order claiming that the Mayor ought not to vote on a question of reconsidering past business, but was overruled.

Immediately Alderman Lesperance moved, seconded by Boyer that the normal time of this city be advanced one hour and that daylight saving be put into effect in the city from the 20th June at midnight to the 30th September.

The vote was the same, the Mayor voting in favor of the motion which was declared carried.

At the meeting a discussion arose as to the powers of policing the exhibition grounds during baseball games. It was decided that the city police had no power to act on the grounds and in consequence it was decided to notify the Exposition Company to make the necessary other arrangements.

A letter was read from Mr. Numa E. Brossolt, acting on behalf of Arthur Argois who objected to the lotteries in the vicinity of his restaurant. As a result of this customers were being lost. The council gave the matter friendly consideration and referred the letter to the Chief of Police for action. It was also recommended that a special traffic policeman be posted at the corner of Jacques Cartier and Victoria Sts.

HUNG FOR KILLING WIFE, DAUGHTER INSISTS

Indianapolis, Ind.—William Donovan of Bloomington, Ind., convicted of wife murder, was put to death in the electric chair last Thursday. It was revealed that the State Pardon Board, in denying commutation of sentence, had been influenced by a letter to Governor McCray from Mahel Donovan, 17 year old daughter of the condemned man.

"In behalf of mother," the letter said, "I want to say to you and the Board of Pardons I don't want this sentence changed."

The girl added that her father had shot "without cause" and that the "sentence given him is what he surely deserves."

Donovan shot his wife as she held their 2-year-old child in her arms. He then asserted the woman had shot herself.

PRODUCE MARKETS

Butter

There was no important development in the condition of the market during the past week. An easier feeling prevailed in the early part of the week, and prices touched the lowest level of the season to date, when at the auction sale of June 1st, pasteurized creamery sold at 30c. per lb.; finest at 29c., and fine at 28c. The change upward was in effect by Monday when an advance of 1 1/2c to 1 1/4c per lb. was made. This was attributed to the demand from outside buyers and the keener competition for the different lots offered.

Cheese

The export trade has been very quiet indicating that English importers are quite indifferent to securing supplies of Canadian cheese for the present.

There has been a fairly good demand from American buyers for our cheese, which has resulted in a fair business being done in this direction, and this coupled with the much smaller offerings than a year ago at this period has created a firmer feeling in the situation, and prices closed higher than a week ago.

The offerings at the boards throughout the country last week showed some increase, but they are still considerably below last year.

Hogs

The feature of the live hog trade has been the stronger feeling that developed in the market, and prices in some cases scored an advance of 25c per 100 lbs. This was due to the fact that supplies were none too large to meet the requirements, and the competition between buyers for the selected stock was keen. An active trade was done, with sales of selects at $15 to $15.25; light and heavy weights at $13 to $13.50 per 100 lbs. weighed off cars. A much stronger feeling also prevailed in the market for dressed hogs, and prices were marked up $1 per 100 lbs. The demand was steady for small lots, and a fair trade was done in city abattoir fresh-killed stock at $21.50 to $22 per 100 lbs.

Live Stock

There was practically no change in the condition of the market, prices being well maintained owing to the continued small offerings and the demand being more than ample to absorb the same. The top price paid was $8.75 per 100 lbs. for a lot of well finished steers, weighing 1,000 lbs. each, and a load of Winnipeg steers averaging 1,275 lbs. each, brought $8.50 per 100 lbs., and some other loads of fairly good steers were weighed up at $8.25 to $8.50 per 100 lbs., and medium steers and heifers at $7.75 to $8., while lower grades sold at $7.25 to $7.50, and some common at $6.50. A few choice cows were disposed of at $7 to $7.25 per 100 lbs.; good at $6.25 to $6.50, and the lower grades from that down to $4.50, while lots of good bulls realized $6 to $6.50 and the common ones sold from that down to $4.50. Owing to the increased offerings of sheep a weaker feeling prevailed in the market and prices show a decline of $1 per 100 lbs. as compared with a week ago. Sales of good light lots were made at $5 to $6 per 100 lbs., and common ewes and bucks sold at $4 to $4.50. The market for spring lambs was stronger on account of the improved quality, and sales of choice lots were made at $10 to $13 each as to size. The tone of the market for calves was steady under a good demand for the best lots at $7 to $8 per 100 lbs.; fairly good at $6.50 to $8, and common at $4.50 to $5.

The number of cattle in Great Britain increased in the year ending June 4, 1921, by 122,600 or 1.5 per cent, and the sheep by 866,400, or 3.5 per cent., showing a slight recovery in domestic supplies which had been declining. Importation of meat into the United Kingdom during the year 1921 exceeded all records. Excluding livestock and fresh killed meat, amounting to 26,330 tons, a total of 917,414 tons of beef, mutton and lamb were imported into Great Britain in 1921 compared with 810,415 tons in 1920, some 528,354 tons in 1919 and 720,258 tons in 1913. Since the domestic production in 1921 was 1,056,400 tons, 47 per cent. of the total production was imported during that year, while ten years ago only 23 per cent. was imported. Last year, the review states that only one Londoner out of seven could count upon having domestic meat for his table. But, it is pointed out that in the past seven years of unrest any pre-war bias against imported meat has been removed, since the people in the United Kingdom are continually more dependent upon foreign meat supply sources. Continental conditions show that the world's trade in mutton, lamb and beef, frozen and chilled, was cut during 1921 due to a falling off in Continental requirements. Shipments from all sources amounted to 970,300 tons, compared with 1,076,700 tons in 1920, and 1,111,500 tons in 1919. The Continental trade in general was, it is stated, a disappointment. Importations of frozen meat, including pork, into France, Belgium, Holland, Germany and Italy were 186,000 tons in 1920, a decrease largely due to low European exchanges. Other causes were the lack of money in most of the European countries, improvement in livestock production, definite attempts to check imports of meat, the high prices quoted by exporters.—Review of the Frozen Meat Trade.

The town of Nicolet has voted against beer and wine by a majority of 60. Out of 400 possible voters 304 exercised their right to vote. 182 were opposed to granting the right of sale, while 122 were in favor. The council had voted 4 to 2 in favor of granting licenses but on a referendum being demanded Revd. Father Joachim took the stand and by fiery eloquence denounced the right of sale.

ROAD REPAIRS

The work of reconstructing the Chambly highway has been resumed by the Bishop Company, between St. Hubert and Chambly, and the road for the entire distance will be closed between the hours of 7 a. m. and 8 p. m., as it is physically impossible to arrange for detours at or near the immediate scene of operations, owing to deep ditches on either side of the road. Between 8 p. m. and 7 a. m. motorists may use the highway, but at their own risk. The detour between St. Hubert and Chambly will be indicated by signboards. With favorable weather, the highway is expected to be completed within two months.

Our Educational System

A New York schoolboy has married his teacher, aged forty-five! We do not know what school he belonged to, but he doesn't seem to have learned very much.—Punch.

London, April 15.—(By Canadian Press)—Scotland Yard, naturally, is a clearing house for lost articles, and in a city of this size it may easily be surmised that the lost article feature of the metropolitan policeman's business is somewhat extensive. However, it is not the large number of things lost that is of special interest, but the apparent indifference of many of the owners as to whether they ever get them back or not. Most of the losses occur in public vehicles. Umbrellas, of course, lead the list, a fair average year's gathering in of these useful, if despised articles being 23,000.

Everything found in a public vehicle and not claimed within three months is returned to the driver who handed it in, if on a final appeal by the police, just before the three months expire, the owner is not forthcoming. If the goods are claimed, the driver gets 12 1/2 per cent of the value thereof, except as to jewelry, upon which he gets 15 per cent. up to the value of £10, after which the percentage dwindles down. The police notify the public through advertisements in the newspapers, yet last month 500 articles were distributed among the drivers of vehicles because there were no claimants for them.

Among the lost articles which have been in the cupboards of the police for almost three months are an ostrich plume fan and a beautiful fur stole, worth £100. These are certainly worth claiming if the owners are still in London, which may be doubtful.

One of the "lost" things picked up by the police not long ago was an African tree bear, which its owner left asleep in a taxicab. How ever the owner turned up the next day and recovered his pet.

JAMES OLIVER CURWOOD A Modern Romance

Copyright 1912, by Harper & Brothers

"I do, Pierre—I do—I do—" "I have guessed it," said Pierre. "You will help me—to save her!"

"Then you will go with us to Fort o' God, and from there you will go on canoe to your camp on Blind Indian Lake."

Philip felt the sweat breaking out over his face. He was still weak. His voice was unnatural, and trembled.

"You know—" he gasped. "Yes, I know," M'sieur replied. "I know that you are in charge here, and Jeanne knows."

Philip was silent. For the moment every hope was crushed within him. He looked at Pierre. The half-breed's eyes were glowing, his haggard cheeks were flushed.

"And this is necessary?" "It is absolutely necessary," M'sieur said. "Then I will go. But first, Pierre, I must know a little more. I cannot go entirely blind. Do they fear my men—at Fort o' God?"

"No, M'sieur. "One more question, Pierre. Who is Lord Fitzhugh Lee?" "For an instant Pierre's eyes widened. They grew black, and burned with a strange, threatening fire. He rose slowly to his feet, and placed both hands upon Philip's shoulders. For a full minute the two men stared into each other's face. Then Pierre spoke. His voice was soft and low, scarcely above a murmur, but it was filled with something that struck a chill to Philip's heart.

"I would kill you before I would answer that question, M'sieur," he said. "No other person has ever done for Jeanne and I what you have done. We owe you more than we can ever repay. Yet if you insist upon an answer to that question you make me an enemy; if you breathe that name to Jeanne, you turn her away from me forever."

Without another word he left the tent. For many minutes Philip sat motionless where Pierre had left him. The earth seemed suddenly to have dropped from under his feet, leaving him in a horrible chaos of mind. Gregson had deserted him, with almost no word of explanation, and he would have staked his life upon Gregson's loyalty. Under other circumstances his unaccountable action would have been a serious blow. But now it was overshadowed by the mysterious change that had come over Jeanne. A few hours before she had been happy, laughing and singing as they drew nearer to Fort o' God; each hour had added to the brightness of her eyes, the gladness in her voice. The change had come with Pierre and at the bottom of it all was Lord Fitzhugh Lee. Pierre had warned him not to mention Lord Fitzhugh's name to Jeanne, and yet only a short time before he had spoken the name boldly before Jeanne, and she had betrayed no sign of recognition or of fear. More than that, she had assured him that she had never heard the name before, that it was not known at Fort o' God.

Philip bowed his head in his hands, and his fingers clutched in his hair. What did it all mean? He went back to the scene on the cliff, when Pierre had roused himself at the sound of the name; he thought of all that had happened since Gregson had come to Church Hill, and the result was a delirium of thought that made his temples throb. He was sure—now—of but few things. He loved Jeanne—loved her more than he had ever dreamed that he could love a woman, and he believed that it would be impossible for her to tell him a falsehood. He was confident, that she had never heard of Lord Fitzhugh until Pierre overtook them in their flight from Churchill. He could see but one thing to do, and that was to follow Pierre's advice, accepting his promise that in the end everything would come out right. He had faith in Pierre.

He rose to his feet and went to the tent flap. An embarrassing thought came to him, and he stopped, a flush of feverish color suddenly mounting into his pale cheeks. He had kissed Jeanne in the chasm, when death thundered in their faces. He had kissed her again and again, and in those kisses he had declared his love. He was glad, and yet sorry; the knowledge that she must know filled him with happiness, and yet with it there was the feeling that it would place a distance between him and Jeanne.

Jeanne was the first to see him when he came out of the tent. She was sitting beside a small balsam shelter, and Pierre was busy over a fire, with his back turned to them. For a moment the two looked at each other in silence, and then Jeanne came toward him, holding out one of her hands. He saw that she was making a strong effort to appear natural, but there was something in his own face that made her attempt a poor one. The hand that she gave him trembled. Her lips quivered. For the first time her eyes failed to meet his own in their limpid frankness.

"Pierre has told you what happened," she said. "It was a miracle, and I owe you my life. I have had punishment for being so careless." She tried to laugh at him now, and drew her hand away. "I wasn't beaten against the rocks, like you, but—" "It was terrible," interrupted Philip, remembering Pierre's words, and eager to put her at her ease. "You have stood up under it beautifully. I am afraid of after effects. You must not collapse under the strain now."

Pierre heard his last words and a smile flashed over his dark face as he encountered Philip's glance. "It is true, M'sieur," he said. "I know of no other woman who would have stood up under such a thing as Jeanne has done. You Dieu, when I found a part of the canoe wreckage far below I thought that both of you were dead."

Philip began to feel he had foolishly over-estimated his strength. There was a weakness in his limbs that surprised him, and a sudden chill replaced the fever in his blood. Jeanne placed her hand upon his arm and thrust him gently toward the tent.

"You must not exert yourself," she said, watching the pallor to his face. "You must be quiet, until after dinner."

He obeyed the pressure of her hand. Pierre followed into the tent, and for a moment he was compelled to lean heavily upon the half-breed.

"It is the reaction, M'sieur," said Pierre. "You are weak after the fever. If you could sleep—" "Can," murmured Philip, dizzily, drooping upon his balsam. "But, Pierre—" "Yes, M'sieur."

"I have something—to say to you—no questions—" "Not now, M'sieur."

Philip heard the rustling of the case and Pierre was gone. He felt more comfortable lying down. Dizziness and nausea left him, and he slept. It was the deep, refreshing sleep that always follows the awakening from fever. When he awoke he felt like his old self, and a blanket was drawn across the front of the balsam shelter, and the half-breed nodded toward it in response to Philip's inquiring glance.

Philip ate lightly of the food which Pierre had ready for him. When he had finished he leaned close to him, and said: "You have warned me to ask no questions, and I am going to ask none. But you have not forbidden me to tell you things which I know, I am going to talk to you about Lord Fitzhugh Lee."

"Pierre's dark eyes flashed. "Listen!" demanded Philip. "I seek your confidence no further. But I shall tell you what I know of Lord Fitzhugh Lee, if it makes us fight. Do you understand? I insist upon this because you have as good as told me that this man is your enemy, and that he is at the bottom of Jeanne's trouble. He is also my enemy. And after I have told you why you may change your determination to keep me a stranger to our trouble. If not—well, you can hold your tongue then as well as now."

Quickly, without moving his eyes from Pierre's face, Philip told his own story of Lord Fitzhugh Lee. And as he continued a strange change came over the half-breed. When he came to the letters revealing the plot to turn the north-ers against his company, a low cry escaped Pierre's lips. His eyes seemed starting from his head. Drops of sweat burst out upon his face. His fingers worked convulsively, something rose in his throat and choked him. When Philip had done he buried his face in his hands. For a few moments he remained thus, and then he suddenly looked up. Livid spots burned in his cheeks, and he fairly hissed at Philip.

"M'sieur, if this is not the truth—if this is a lie—" He stopped. Something in Philip's eyes told him to go no further. He was fearful, and he saw more than fearfulness in Philip's face. Such men believe, when they come together.

"It is the truth," said Philip. "With a low, strained laugh Pierre held out his hand as a pledge of his faith. "I believe in you, M'sieur," he said, and it seemed an effort for him to speak. "Do you know what I would have thought, if you had told this to Jeanne before I came?"

"No." "I would have thought, M'sieur, that she had thrown herself purposely into the death of the Big Thunder rocks."

"My God, you mean—" "That is all, M'sieur. I can say no more. Ah, there is Jeanne!" he cried, more loudly. "Now we will take down the tent, and go."

Jeanne stood a dozen steps behind them when Philip turned. She greeted him with a smile, and hastened to assist Pierre in gathering up the things about the camp. Philip was not blind to her efforts. It was a relief to her when they were at last in Pierre's canoe, and headed up the river. They traveled till late in the evening, and set up Jeanne's tent by starlight. The journey was continued at dawn.

Late the following afternoon the Little Church swept through a low, wooded country, called the White Fox Barren. It was a narrow barren and across it lay the forest and the ridge mountains. Behind these mountains and the forest the sun was setting. Above all else there rose out of the gathering gloom of evening a single ridge, a towering mass of rock which caught the last glow of the sun, and blazed like a signal-fire.

The canoe stopped. Jeanne and Pierre both gazed toward the great rock. Then Jeanne, who was in the bow, turned her face to Philip, and the glow of the rock itself suffused her cheeks as she pointed over the barren.

"M'sieur Philip," she said, "there is Fort o' God!" CHAPTER XVI There was a low tremble in Jeanne's voice. The canoe swung broadside to the slow current, and Philip looked in astonishment at the change in Pierre. The tired half-breed had uncovered his head, and knelt with his face turned to that last crimson glow in the sky, like one in prayer. But his eyes were open, there was a smile on his lips, and he was breathing quickly. Pride and joy came where there was exhaustion. His shoulders were thrown back, his head erect, and had been the lines of grief and the fire of the distant rock reflected itself in his eyes. From him Philip turned, so that he could look into Jeanne's face. The girl, too, had changed. Again these two were the Pierre and Jeanne whom he had seen that first night on the moonlit cliff. Pierre seemed no longer the half-breed, but the prince of the rapier and broad cuffs, and Jeanne, smiling proudly at Philip, made him an exquisite little courtesy from her cramped seat in the bow, and said:

"M'sieur Philip, welcome to Fort o' God!"

"Thank you," he said, and stared toward the sun-capped rock. He could see nothing but the rock, the black forests and the desolate barren stretching between. Fort o' God, unless it was the rock itself, was still a mystery hidden in the gathering gloom. The canoe began moving slowly onward, and Jeanne turned so that her eyes searched the stream ahead. A thick wall of stunted forest shut out the barren from their view; the stream grew narrower, and on the opposite side a barren ridge, threatening them with torn and upheaved masses of rock, flung the heavy shadows of evening down upon them. No one spoke. Philip could hear Pierre breathing behind him; something in the intense quiet—in the awesome effect which their approach to Fort o' God had upon these two—sent strange little thrills shooting through his body. He listened, and heard nothing, not even the howl of a dog. The stillness was oppressive, and the darkness thickened about them. For half an hour they continued, and then Pierre headed the canoe into a narrow creek, thrusting it through a thick growth of wild rice and reeds. Balsam and cedar and swamp hazel shut them in. Overhead the tall cedars interlaced, and hid the pale light of the sky. Philip could just make out Jeanne ahead of him.

And then, suddenly, there came a wonderful change. They shot upon the darkness as if from a tunnel, but so quietly that one a dozen feet away could not have heard the ripple of Pierre's paddle. Almost in their faces rose a huge black bulk, and in that blackness three or four yellow lights gleamed like yellow stars. The canoe touched noiselessly upon sand, Pierre sprang out, still without sound. Jeanne followed, with a whispered word. Philip was last.

Pierre pulled the canoe up, and Jeanne came to Philip. She held out her two hands. Her face shone white in the gloom, and there was a look in her beautiful eyes, as she stood for a moment almost touching him, that set his heart jumping. She let her hands lie in his white she spoke.

"We have not even alarmed the dogs, M'sieur Philip," she whispered. "Is not that splendid? I am going to surprise father, and you will go with Pierre. I will see you a little later, and—" She rose on tiptoe, and her face was dangerously close to his own. "And you are very, very welcome to Fort o' God, M'sieur."

She slipped away into the darkness, and Pierre stood beside Philip. His white teeth were gleaming strangely, and he said in a soft voice:

"M'sieur, that is the first time that I have ever heard those words spoken at Fort o' God. We welcome no man here who has your blood and your civilization in his veins. You are greater than a King!"

With a sudden exclamation Philip turned upon Pierre. "And that is the reason for Jeanne's surprise?" he said. "She wishes to pave a way for me. I begin to understand!"

"It is true that you might not have received that welcome which you are coming to receive now from the master of Fort o' God," replied Pierre, frankly. "So we will go in quietly, and make no disturbance, while your way is being paved, as you call it."

He walked ahead, with Philip following so closely that he could have touched him. He made out more distinctly now the lines of the huge black edifice from which the lights shone. It was a massive structure of logs, two stories high, a half of it almost completely hidden in the ground, and the other half a great wall of rock. Philip's eyes traveled up this wall, and he was convinced that he stood under the rock upon whose towering crest he had seen the last reflection of the evening sun. About him there were no signs of life or of habitation. Pierre moved swiftly. They passed under a small lighted window that was a foot above Philip's head, and turned around the corner of the building. Here all was blackness.

Pierre went straight to a door, and uttered a low word of satisfaction when he found that it was not barred. He opened it, and reached out a guiding hand to Philip's arm. Philip entered, and the door closed softly behind him. He felt the flow of warm air in his face, and his unaccustomed feet trod upon something soft and velvety. Faintly, as though coming from a great distance, he heard a voice singing. It was a woman's voice, but he knew that it was not Jeanne's.

In spite of himself his heart was beating excitedly. The mystery of Fort o' God was about him, warm and subtle, like a strange spirit, sending through him the thrill of articulation, a hundred fancies, little fears. Pierre advanced, still guiding him; then he stopped, and chuckled softly in the darkness. The distant voice had stopped singing, and there came in place of it the loud barking of a dog, an unintelligible sound of a voice, and then quiet. Jeanne had sprung her surprise.

Pierre led the way to another room. "This is to be your room, M'sieur," he explained. "Make yourself comfortable. I have no doubt that the master of Fort o' God will wish to see you very soon."

He struck a match, as he spoke, and lighted a lamp. A moment more and he was gone. Philip looked about him. He was in a room fully twenty feet square, furnished in a manner that drew from him an audible gasp of astonishment. At one end of the room was a massive mahogany bed, screened by heavy curtains which were looped back by silken cords. Near the bed was an old-fashioned mahogany dresser, with a diamond-shaped mirror, and in front of it a straight-backed chair adorned with the grotesque carving of an ancient and long-dead fashion. About him, everywhere, were the evidences of luxury and of age. The big lamp, which gave a brilliant light, was of hammered brass, and in front of it a square pedestal was partly hidden in the rumple of a heavy damask spread which covered the table on which it rested. The table itself was old, spindle-legged, glowing with the patina of the years. The passing generations—a relic of the days when the originator of its fashion became the favorite of a capricious and beautiful queen. Soft rugs were upon the floor; from the walls, papered and hung with odd bits of tapestry, strange faces of heavy gilded frames; faces grim, pale, shadowed; men with platted ruffles and curls; women with powdered hair, who gazed down upon him haughtily, as if they wondered at his intrusion.

One picture was turned with its face to the wall. Philip sank into a huge arm-chair, cushioned with velvet, and searched the stream ahead. (To be continued.)

HUNTINGDON

A rather unusual crop which is reported to have failed has just been announced, and that is that the sand in the Trout River is exhausted at the spots where it has been dredged out of for decades. The old sandmen are now working the Chateaugay but live in hopes that the ice will bring down some bars next year so that a return to the old spot may be made.

A rather unusual accident happened to a horse this week. On Saturday the owner had driven it to town and had it shod. On returning home he turned it loose in the pasture, leaving the halter on. Some time during the night the animal tried to scratch its left eye and got the new shoe mixed up in the halter. When discovered in the morning the beast was all doubled up. The neck was swollen to double the size and so stretched that the beast wasn't able to lift its head for some days.

With the rapid approach of the summer holidays the boys are getting ready for the summer's sport. This week the local Scout Masters have received invitations from Montreal to attend the big Boy Scout demonstration in the city on the 10th. This is expected to be the most pretentious demonstration yet attempted in Montreal, and it is thought that some of the local boys will be in for it. From Hemmingford has come a challenge to the Boy Scouts. The Hemmingford troop, newly organized, is now getting into shape and to encourage the boys and give them experience those at the head would like to arrange for a field day with the Hemmingford scouts. This will probably be held some day this month.

Next week the examinations start in the Academy.

Road operators were placed in somewhat of a quandary last week when Mr. D. J. O'Connor of O'Connor Bros. returned from Quebec without definite information from the Department as to what the decision was on the tenders for road work here. A press despatch preceded him to the effect that the firm had been granted a large contract but some of this was work that had not been expected. Mr. O'Connor returned to Quebec and there learned that their tender for work in Huntingdon county had been accepted with the proviso that they undertake work in the other counties at the same price. This means that the firm not only gets the 24 miles of work in this county but also 27 miles in addition, with perhaps a little more yet to be added. This will mean a saving to the municipalities and the government of at least $35,000, being the amount O'Connor Bros' tender was lower than first tender. The contracts were taken up, and the organization of the gangs is being completed this week so that work may be started next week. In all the contracts exceed $400,000, the work to be completed within two years. This is the largest single contract ever given in this district and will mean a busy time for all connected with the operations.

Mr. W. F. Stephen returned from the Methodist Conference this week and reports that the stationing committee have directed that the Rev. Jacob Hughes of Stanstead be the minister for Huntingdon.

News comes from Malone that "Good Roads" Flanagan has gone to Victoria, B. C. for the Good Roads Convention. He will represent the New York State Conservation Commission, the Adirondack Association, and the New York State Hotel Association. If they have any anti good road men in B. C. they want to keep clear of Flanagan.

The music of the Melody Makers told one and all near the O'Connor Hall Friday night that a dance was in progress. It was under the auspices of the Knights of Columbus and was most successful. The rain, while making it disagreeable for those who travelled from a distance, made the air much cooler and agreeable in the hall. On Sunday Rev. Father Derome, who is strongly opposed to public dancing, expressed his disapproval of the K. of C. holding such functions.

Huntingdon is improving for the travelling troupes and paying audiences are now generally the rule. On Thursday night the old show "Uncle Tom's Cabin" was staged in O'Connor Hall and gave satisfaction to those who went.

The spring term of the Circuit Court was called for Thursday last. Fourteen cases were inscribed for hearing but four were set over until the 27th of June. This was on account of Mr. Brossit being counsel in them and Judge Mercier on account of family relationship to Mr. Brossit was unwilling to try them. Four other cases were set over until the fall sittings.

The case of Arthur Watson v Kenneth Deslogh was dismissed the plaintiff having the right to bring a fresh action. It was for rent and goods supplied. Armand Longtin for the Plaintiff, A. Plante for the Defendant.

Three cases for defamation of character were brought against Miss Annie Stewart, Rosaria Narrault, Joseph Narrault and Joseph Harte, each claiming $90 damages. Actions were all dismissed. Armand Longtin for Plaintiffs, J. G. Laurendeau, K. C. for Defendant.

The case of Gomeroff v Vallee was for goods supplied. The plea of the defendant was maintained. A. Longtin for plaintiff, R. Short for defendant.

The King's Birthday was not celebrated by many as a holiday, but the community was in a holiday spirit, for the much needed rain had arrived. The dry spell had lasted since the 21st of May and was baking the fields so that the hay was most unpromising. However that is now solved. The storekeepers reported that during the day time business was unusually dull, due partly to the country people believing that the day would be kept as a holiday in town. In the evening the temperance film

"Ten Nights in a Bar-room" was shown to a good crowd in O'Connor Hall. The story is so well known that many anticipated the picture while others less well read didn't pass up the opportunity, for local wits had renamed the show "Ten bar-rooms in a Night."

Owing to Sunday being Methodist Conference Sunday, no services were held in the Methodist Church.

The walls of the Huntingdon Motors' new garage are now up and show that their will be much more floor space to work in when completed.

In the report appearing in our last issue referring to a prosecution by the corporation for tampering with an automobile, the defendant was styled Wilfred Sweet. This should have read Clifford Sweet.

THE PLEA FOR PAP BY MALCONTENTS

Ottawa, June 5—"General" Riley's army of unemployed veterans—about 275 strong, including local adhesions—invaded Parliament Hill this morning.

The delegation was not at all impressive. They showed the effects of the two hundred mile trek from Toronto with grimy faces and dust-laden clothing.

Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King at the outset said he was glad to receive the delegation and said it contained a few whom he had met before.

"Major" Lawrie, Master of Transportation, presented the demands in brief, the principal being one dollar for each percentage of disability and $1.10 gratuity for each day of service.

"General" Riley ejaculated, "the G. A. U. V. has nothing to do with this. Neither has the G. W. V. A. The answer is not satisfactory."

Hon. H. S. Bland, Minister of the D. S. C. R., addressed the delegation at some length, alluding first to his own war service and to his natural sympathy with the men.

There were 65,000 pensioners, 123,000 patients treated, 42,000 vocationally trained, 27,000 settled on the land, 22,000 granted relief and 33,400 placed in employment.

It was unfair, the Minister said, to say that nothing had been done. If the men were disabled they were entitled to treatment and no veteran's family was allowed to want for food.

Riley answered that the Parliamentary Committee was a farce and the D. S. C. R. was a farce and that "the bureaucracy that represents the 500,000 returned men is a thing of the past."

went out to the porch to report to the rest of the crowd on the lawn. They reported that the answer was not satisfactory.

The General announced that the Government has promised to look into the grievances but, he said, "they gave us nothing specific, I propose that we stay here until the Premier comes out and tells us what he is going to do."

There was some cheering and some dissent and the "General" went back into the building. Shortly after he returned with the announcement that the Premier had declined to address the men further.

The proposal was then made that the men march back to Toronto in protest. Finally the 'army' formed into platoons and returned to billets where a council of war was held.

At one o'clock Monday Riley, after a consultation with the men, stated in a speech to them: "We will remain in Ottawa till bell freezes over, or until the bayonets of the police drive us from here, unless the Government gives us satisfaction."

J. S. Wodsworth, M. P. for Centre Winnipeg, then offered his services to the men in any capacity. Riley declared that as a result of the Government's treatment of the men his army will number 15,000 in three days.

DISTRIBUTION OF INCOMES

Report of the U. S. Government. Thanks to the monumental statistical labors of the National Bureau of Economic Research we now have information regarding personal incomes in the United States that is of great value.

There are two ways in which any group can advance its wage, or income. One is to take it from some other group; the other is to increase production and thus add to the total national income to be divided.

One third of the income earners of this country, according to figures of the National Bureau of Economic Research in its first volume on "Income in the United States," receive from $500 to $1,000 a year.

While I was in service I loaned a buddy in our company 100 francs, which at that time amounted to almost $20.

Baseball

All ball games on Saturday were postponed owing to the rain. Dates for the playing of the games scheduled for the Chateauguay Valley league games have not yet been decided on.

Bruneau in Wrong

The series between Valleyfield and Three Rivers last week did not attract so much attention from the class of ball played as it did on account of the umpires.

Baseball at Chateauguay

The Awkominn Club defeated All-Star baseball squad in the opening game at Chateauguay over the week end. Baseball has taken well in the summer resort.

Awkominn 000110720—11 12 ; All-Stars 121041000y—9 9 2 Batteries—McEwat, Clements and Smith; Ivan Hamilton, D. Hamilton and Brophy.

ed to as much as a United States Senator is paid—$10,000 a year—there would then be not as much as $200 to distribute to each one of those who now gets less than $2,000 a year.

A common fallacy in estimating what are "living" and "saving" wages is in falling to take into account the fact that certain periods of the workman-family's career there is more than one wage earner.

What is needed as much as anything is education and incentive for saving and safe investment during the higher periods of this cycle to provide for the succeeding depressions.

By saving $4,500 during their years of greatest prosperity and investing it in Treasury Savings Certificates, or some other safe security, all those whose income is less than $2,000 a year could add more to it than if they possessed all the income of those getting $10,000 or more.

The Perspective

Under this name the Commandant Soule de Ceac of the French Legion of Honor has designed a pince-nez, or eyeglass, which enables the wearer to see at the same time on all sides, and even belated. This is ingeniously effected by means of reflections.

Joyful Reunion

While I was in service I loaned a buddy in our company 100 francs, which at that time amounted to almost $20.

Forty-Three Years Clerk of Court. Forty-three years as clerk of the Surrogate and Supreme Courts in the County of Elgin, Ontario, make David McLaws, one of the oldest courthouse officials, so far as length of service is concerned, in the Province of Ontario.

In 1878, David McLaws successfully contested the riding of West Elgin for the provincial house. He had only one session at Queen's Park, however, accepting the following year the court clerk position which he still capably fills.

Recently as I was touring the loop buying Christmas presents we met. We hardly got through greeting each other when he handed me $25. This amount, he claimed, was due me, including interest.
