WRITTEN QUESTIONS

Questions already placed on the Order Paper are published each Wednesday

- (92) Ms. Massé (Sainte-Marie–Saint-Jacques) – 12 December 2025
To the Minister of Employment

Recently, a well-established shop in the Village was denied a measure from Emploi-Québec (the Manpower Training measure), which would have facilitated access to relevant training for the company's development, a company which is responsible for significant economic benefits within the sector. The company intended to train employees on new Zoho technologies, which are deemed more efficient than the WooCommerce tools currently used by the company.

Following discussions with Emploi Québec, we were told that the company was not eligible for the measure because it sells products that may cause controversy in the public eye. Indeed, the company, Mistr Bear, sells products that are used for purposes of sexuality education, self-exploration, and pleasure.

I understand that access to subsidies is not a right, and that companies must be eligible to receive the measures offered. What I fail to understand is how, in 2025, there exists an eligibility and exclusion criterion based on the concept of "controversy". Furthermore, this concept stems from a perspective of disapproval, meant to be interpreted through a conservative lens, to say the least.

I think of certain social companies, whose calling includes sexuality education, that are denied this type of support because they use dildos. I think of Magaly Pirotte, founder of SEX-ED +, who appeared in the media to raise awareness on the lack of funding, all while she was addressing glaring needs in the field. Though genital organs are often hidden and under-represented and the first discoveries and comparisons are made through pornography, it is important to showcase the rainbow that is diversity to allow our youth to better identify, celebrate and love themselves. This is similar to the workshops organized by a Montréal ceramist, which allow both young and not-so-young adults to build their own sexual toys. That such tools are condemned and denied Emploi-Québec support is highly concerning for a society that, in 2025, claims to believe in sexuality education.

My question to the Minister of Employment is the following:

Does the Minister commit to reviewing the eligibility criteria of the Manpower Training measure to withdraw the concept of “controversy” and facilitate support for companies that promote objects that could be used for purposes of sexuality education?

(93) Mr. Leduc (Hochelaga-Maisonneuve) – 12 December 2025
To the Minister of Families

I would like to question the Minister on the situation regarding immigration files in Montréal and in Hochelaga-Maisonneuve’s childcare centres (CPEs), following the abolition of the Programme de l’expérience québécoise (PEQ – Québec experience program) without a grandfather clause for workers who are already established. Additionally, the current criteria for the Montréal area exclude the childcare sector.

As the Minister knows, the childcare sector is facing a labour shortage and several CPEs have fared relatively well thanks to immigration programs, through which they can hire high-quality staff.

However, over the next weeks, months and years, we will lose a number of good employees who will have no choice but to find another job in a sector that allows work permits, or be forced to leave the country. These employees will be replaced by staff from placement agencies, in the absence of candidates in Québec.

Also, it is possible to make a permit for non-profit organizations or for any worker whose hourly wage is equal to or greater than $34.62, which is not possible for CPE employees as their wages are regulated by MFA salary scales.

My question to the Minister is the following:

What concrete measures does the Government intend to take to prevent a disruption of services in Montréal’s CPEs?

(94) Mr. Leduc (Hochelaga-Maisonneuve) – 12 December 2025
To the Minister of Culture and Communications

The cultural and artistic community has been mobilizing for several months now. On 12 September 2025, the Théâtre du Nouveau Monde hosted a lecture on the social safety net for artists. On 26 November 2025, an international forum examined the issue of ensuring a decent future for artists by rethinking labour and social protection policies. The Grande manifestation pour les arts organized several days of mobilization across Québec to “weave the social net”. In addition, an advisory panel, coordinated by Compétence Culture, will soon be implemented.

On 28 October 2025, in his response to a written question from my colleague, the Member for Jean-Lesage, the Minister stated that he would continue to make representations to the federal government for an employment insurance reform that takes into account cultural realities.

Given the above, my questions to the Minister are the following:

- 1- What representations has the Minister made to the federal government to date?
- 2- What concrete actions have resulted from these representations?
- 3- With the appointment of the new federal Minister of Culture, Mr. Miller, who has not yet firmly committed to the social safety net issue as requested by the cultural sector, does the Minister intend to contact him promptly to ascertain his intentions?

(95) Mr. Leduc (Hochelaga-Maisonneuve) – 12 December 2025
To the Minister Responsible for Social Services

I am calling on the Minister with regard to the humanitarian crisis that is homelessness, that continues to worsen in my riding of Hochelaga-Maisonneuve, as well as elsewhere in Montréal and in the province of Québec.

On 1 December, Ville de Montréal announced the emergency opening of 500 new spaces in warming centres for the winter. While I welcome this announcement and applaud this first step taken by the city, it is not a sustainable solution to the current crisis.

Structural actions are needed, in particular with regard to increasing funding for organizations that support people experiencing homelessness and building new rooming houses.

My question to the Minister is the following:

Will the Minister commit to increasing funding for organizations that support people experiencing homelessness and to making that funding permanent?
