Dominion Day in the City Parks

ANADA'S National Holiday, the anniversary of the Confederation of the Canadian Provinces, coming as it does on the 1st of July, affords Canadians from ocean to ocean splendid opportunities for enjoying their national festival in outdoor recreations and amusements. The pictures on this page are illustrative of the manner in which the day was spent by certain of the citizens of the commercial metropolis of the Dominion—a city that is fast taking its place among the great cities of the world. During recent years its growth has been a remarkable one, and it is considered highly probable that by the end of this decade its population will have reached the million mark.

Especially favored is Montreal in the number and size of its breathing spots. Mount Royal Park, in which thousands spent Dominion Day, is one of the largest in the world, as well as one of the most attractive. Its beauty has not been marred by attempts to unduly improve upon that which Nature has given the city. The Park still retains its natural glory, and its close proximity to all parts of the city renders it a favorite retreat for those who, tired of the incessant noise and bustle of the metropolis, wish to get away from the turmoil and distraction and spend a few hours either in recreation or in thought within its leafy precincts. At its summit one can always find a cool breeze even on the ground for the little tots who add a joy and gladness to the home, and on a public holiday, such as Dominion Day, it is alive with laughter and merriment and song. Beneath its eastern slope is Fletcher's Field, one of the city's great public playgrounds and picnic resorts. Here on every day in the week may be seen happy, mirthful groups enjoying the delightful change which affords from the stifling homes and sun-burned pavements of the city. Here, too, the children play at children's games, and the youths of the city indulge to their hearts' content in their favorite sports—baseball and lacrosse being the chief recreations. Here, too, the tired and worn-out workers may rest and—in the daytime—sleep. It is a charming and generously patronized retreat, a delight to young and old alike.

On the other side of the city is Montreal's second largest Park, which is also illustrated on this page. It bears the name of the great Lafontaine, who, with Robert Baldwin, was an apostle of responsible government in Canada. Unlike Mount Royal, its natural beauty has not been left alone. Landscape architects have converted it into a magnificent garden—full of trees and flowers and winding paths and water stretches and terraces. It is, perhaps, the most charming of all the "man-made" parks of Montreal, and its great size makes it a huge breathing spot for thousands who live within easy access of its borders. On Dominion Day it, too, contained a happy holiday crowd, and the waters of the lagoons echoed through the daylight and twilight hours with the laughter and the songs of those who rode upon its surface in the picturesque swan gondolas or in the more prosaic row-boats.

During the terrible and, in many instances, deadly hot spell which held Montreal in its grasp for several long and trying days during the last two hottest days in summer, and from behind the balustrades of its look-outs one can feast his eyes on a panorama such as few cities in the world can equal. At the base of the Mountain is the largest and wealthiest city in Canada, pulsating with a 20th century life and vitality and yet, in parts, wonderfully redolent of the centuries when the lily flag of France was the national banner of Canada. Beyond the residential and business sections of the city is the greatest and farthest inland seaport in the world, and the mighty river over which the commerce of almost every nation under the sun finds its way to the Canadian markets and Canadian products find their way to the markets of the Old World. Beyond the harbor front and its ever-enlarging fleet of sea and lake-going craft, is the historic isle on which the French troops under de Levis in 1760 made their last stand against the victorious British and burned their colors rather than allow them to fall next day into the hands of Amherst and his conquering army. To the west are the turbulent waters of the Lachine Rapids—the most dangerous of all the Rapids of the St. Lawrence River—and nearer the city, the far-famed Victoria Bridge, which at the time of its erection, in 1857-60, was looked upon as one of the wonders of the world, its entire length being one and three-quarter miles. In the distance is a landscape of mountains and valleys, woodland and farmland, beautiful to behold and full of historic interest, as it on more than one occasion was a theatre on which the armies of three great nations fought for supremacy. Such is the outlook as viewed from the Mountain discovered and cross-crown-

All Canada Rejoices in the Happy Restoration to Health of Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Connaught

HER ROYAL HIGHNESS THE DUCHESS OF CONNAUGHT, who has recovered from her recent serious illness and who this week enjoyed a cruise up the far-famed Saguenay. During her illness, Her Royal Highness was a patient in the Royal Victoria Hospital, Montreal. The above picture—a splendid likeness—shows Her Royal Highness in the robes she wore at the Coronation of King George and Queen Mary.

As small as your note book and tells the story better

Vest Pocket KODAK

A miniature Kodak, so capable that it will convince the experienced amateur, so simple that it will appeal to the novice. So flat and smooth and small that it will go readily into a vest pocket, yes, and dainty enough for milady's hand bag.

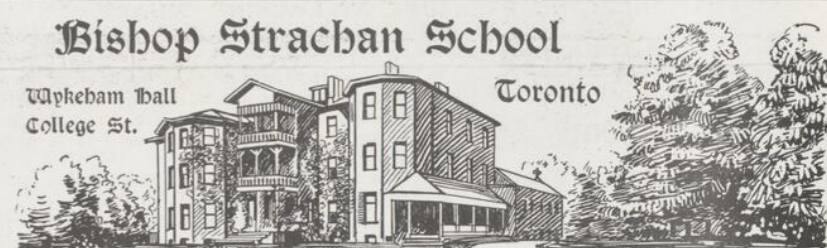

And the Vest Pocket Kodak is efficient. It is small, almost tiny, but the carefully selected meniscus achromatic lens insures good work; the Kodak Ball Bearing shutter with iris diaphragm stops and Auto-time Scale give it a scope and range not found except in the highest grade cameras. Loads in daylight with Kodak film cartridges for eight exposures. Having a fixed focus it is always ready for quick work. Has reversible brilliant finder. Made of metal with lustrous black finish. Right in every detail of design and construction. Pictures, 1 5/8 x 2 1/2 inches. Price $7.00.

An important feature is that the quality of the work is so fine, the definition of the lens so perfect that enlargements may be easily made to any reasonable size, and at small cost—to post card size (3 1/4 x 5 1/2) for instance, at 15 cents.

RECOVERY OF THE DUCHESS OF CONNAUGHT. The Duchess of Connaught, is again enjoying her customary good health. After leaving the Royal Victoria Hospital, Montreal, Her Royal Highness, accompanied by the Duke of Connaught and the Princess Patricia, sailed for Quebec on board the Lady Grey, where she and her husband and daughter subsequently took up their residence in the Governor-General's quarters in the historic Citadel. On Monday last Her Royal Highness embarked on board Mr. James Ross's palatial yacht, the Glencairn, for a trip down the St. Lawrence and up the Saguenay. On the previous day the Duke of Connaught and the Princess Patricia left Quebec for Winnipeg, where His Royal Highness opened the Selkirk Centennial Exhibition.

A MEMORIAL OF VICTORIA THE GOOD, WHEREIN H.R.H. THE DUCHESS OF CONNAUGHT WAS CARED FOR DURING HER RECENT SERIOUS ILLNESS—The Royal Victoria Hospital, Montreal, in which Her Royal Highness, the Duchess of Connaught, was a patient for several weeks. This splendid institution was built by Sir George Stephen (Lord Mount-Stephen) and Sir Donald Smith (Lord Strathcona) to commemorate the Golden Jubilee of Her Majesty, Queen Victoria. Since it was opened its accommodation has been very largely increased by the addition of new wings and isolation buildings, a Nurses' Home, etc., until to-day it is one of the most up-to-date and perfect institutions of its kind in the world. Millions of dollars have been spent on its erection, equipment, endowment and enlargement by its generous founders. A beautiful marble statue of Victoria the Good occupies a commanding position on the main staircase and attracts the attention of every visitor to the Hospital. During her sojourn in the hospital the Duchess of Connaught occupied a suite of rooms overlooking Mount Royal in the northern part of the western wing (the wing on the left of the above illustration).
